Bonn opens path to arms deal, even summit

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — West Germany's conditional acceptance could clear the way for a U.S.-Soviet deal to remove hundreds of nuclear missiles from Europe and a summit meeting between President Reagan and General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev in the fall.

L. Adelman said. "It moves the ball back into the Soviet court, with the alliance saying in unison 'Let's get on with the arms control show.'"

"I think this is good news," another U.S. official said. "I am getting out my summit dancing shoes for October."

The only major condition set in Bonn was that 72 Pershing IA missiles provided by the United States for West Germany's defense be allowed to remain there.

"That's our position, too," the official said.

"If that's the case, that puts West Germany in line with the U.S. position."

He predicted the Soviets would drop their demand for dismantling the missiles. The official spoke to a reporter only on condition he not be notified.

"I don't think the Pershing IA is a big thing to the Soviets," he said. "The conventional wisdom is that when the timing is right, they'll give it up."

Adelman, meanwhile, cautioned that a deal could fall apart if the Soviets did not agree to restrict or eliminate their shorter-range nuclear missile launchers in Asia.

He said the United States wants either all the launchers dismantled, or the right to retain a matching number in Western Europe if the Soviets insist on keeping some in Asia.

Otherwise, he said, the only major issue still in the path of a U.S.-Soviet treaty is deciding on ways to monitor the dismantling of missiles and production facilities.

The State Department, meanwhile, had no formal reaction to the Bonn development. Spokesman Charles E. Redman said simply that consultation would continue within the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The United States provided the Pershing IA missiles to West Germany for the country's defense. The warheads remain under U.S. control.

The missiles have a range of about 435 miles, and might be able to reach the periphery of Soviet territory. The weapons could be fired only with U.S. permission.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz reached virtual agreement with Gorbachev and Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze in April to dismantle 108 Pershing II and 206 cruise missiles now in Western Europe and 270 Soviet SS-20 and 112 SS-4 missile launchers targeted on the NATO countries.

The Soviets would retain 33 of the missiles. See MISSILES on Page A2

Court ducks interment ruling review

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court sidestepped review of one of the most widely criticized decisions in its history Monday.

The justices ruled unanimously that a lawsuit brought by Japanese-Americans interned in World War II relocation camps should be considered first by a lower federal court.

In another ruling Monday, the court, in a move that could indicate its views on drug testing of federal employees, allowed the Customs Service to reinstate a mandatory drug-testing program similar to one ordered last September by President Reagan for an estimated 1 million federal workers.

The opinion involving the Japanese-American internees was largely confined to a technical legal issue. The high court said the case should not have been heard by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

That court had said victims of the forced evacuation could sue the government for losses incurred when they were removed from their homes shortly after the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., writing for the court in U.S. v. Hohri, reversed that, saying the claims should have been reviewed by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. That court was created in 1982 specifically to review patent appeals and claims against the government. Powell threw out the original appeals court ruling ordering a trial on the claims.

Benjamin Zelenko, an attorney for the Japanese-Americans, said he is disappointed the court did not reach the merits of his clients' claims that the normal six-year statute of limitations on such suits did not apply because the federal government concealed information from the Supreme Court when it upheld the interment in Korematsu v. U.S. in 1944.

Zelenko said, "but this means we are not going to get a trial" for some time. The court's action, he said, "just postpones it further for people who have waited so long for justice."

The court, with Justice William J. Brennan Jr. in lone dissent, issued a one-sentence order saying it would not hold the drug testing program while an employee union appeals a federal appeals court ruling allowing the tests.

The action is the court's first in a case involving random testing of See COURT on Page A2

Young pilot instant hero in Germany

The Associated Press

FRANKFURT, West Germany — Mathias Rust's daring flight across Russia to the Kremlin is making the 19-year-old pilot a national hero, a West German David who outwitted the Red Goliath.

A radio station asked whether he could be nominated for the country's highest civilian decoration, a senior Defense Ministry official said. West German air force pilots could learn from his deft low-level flight to Moscow.

The government — formally condemned Rust's exploit and said Monday it hopes the Soviets, who now have him in prison, will be lenient with the young man.

Since he buzzed Lenin's tomb and landed on the cobblestones outside St. Basil's cathedral Thursday evening, Rust's adventure has dominated news in West Germany.

The pilot from Wodda, near Hamburg, got his license a year ago and had logged about 25 hours. He left Helsinki, supposedly for Stockholm, but changed course and flew his rented single-engine Cessna unimpeded through 400 miles of Soviet air defenses to Red Square.

Many newspaper commentaries have centered on the subsequent firing of the chief of Soviet air defenses and the forced retirement of the Soviet Union's 75-year-old See PLANE on Page A2

Former CIA operative admits Congress misled

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Suspended CIA station chief Joe Fernandez, in secret sworn testimony made public Monday, said the CIA's covert operations chief misled Congress last fall when he testified the spy agency never facilitated private efforts to resupply Nicaragua's Contra rebels, even indirectly.

Fernandez said that in fact his CIA superiors knew he was using a sophisticated KL-43 encryption device supplied by Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North to pass intelligence information to Contra leaders and private U.S. citizens to assist air drops of weapons and other supplies.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., a member of the Senate Iran-Contra committee, declared that Fernandez's testimony "sets up a prima facie case that Congress was misled."

And another committee member, Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, said it was clear Fernandez had been reporting back to superiors who did not let him to stop his activities, "as it was sanctioned by higher officials."

Both senators, in a joint news conference, said they will recommend that congressional intelligence committees undertake a thorough examination of CIA involvement in the resupply by network and the device to which Congress was deliberately misled.

Fernandez's testimony was delivered on Friday before a closed session of the House and Senate Iran-Contra hearings. CIA censors worked over the weekend to delete portions of the 240-page transcript. In one instance covering an entire page with black ink leaving only the words "Top Secret" at top and bottom, before the remainder of the transcript was possible military risks.

And he had transmitted to Contra leaders the expected time for the drop, the date and the number of supply bundles exchanged, and Cohen, saying he read Fernandez's testimony as supporting the CIA's position that its senior officers did not know of or support activities by field officers in support of the Contras.

He repeated the CIA's position that CIA field officers were ordered to "keep their distance" from Contra support. He said Fernandez would not comment.

Fernandez, testifying under a grant of limited immunity from prosecution, said he had provided a group of private beneficiaries, referred to by the initials "P.B.," with flight information, the coordinates of the drop zone, the amount of time the insurgents were expected to remain in control of the area and the career intelligence agent, who was suspended from duty after press accounts of his activities, told the committees he never felt comfortable in his role as a middleman or facilitator in the resupply operation.

But he said he was surprised when Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs Elliott Abrams, who will testify publicly on Tuesday, asked him "out of

Doctor says new AIDS virus, herpes links found

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A new AIDS virus that appears to be somewhat less dangerous than the original has been found in the blood of 10 Nigerian AIDS victims, a researcher announced Monday.

Dr. Robert Gallo, one of the discoverers of the original AIDS virus, also reported that certain common herpes viruses can directly activate AIDS infection in people carrying latent forms of the virus.

Gallo, who made his remarks in the opening scientific session of the Third International Conference on AIDS, said that enough similarity exists between all the AIDS viruses, including the Nigerian virus, that it may still be possible to develop a single test to identify all of the AIDS viruses.

Such similarities also suggest that a vaccine might one day be developed to protect against all varieties of the AIDS virus, Gallo said.

"It was in response to contagious diseases that are transmissible. AIDS has the spotlight right now — but we're concerned over communicable diseases," said Assistant Chief Isaac Fulwood.

District of Columbia police spokesman Joe Gentile said 64 people were arrested and all would be charged with loitering, or blocking the street, or disorderly conduct.

Heat continues in Northeast

Utilities asked customers to cut their use of electricity Monday as air conditioners strained against the fourth day of a Northeast heat wave that closed schools and sent thousands to beaches in search of relief.

Texas got a respite from nearly a week of flood-causing thunderstorms and flash flood watches were canceled. But waves of thunderstorms broke out from the upper Mississippi Valley across the Midwest to the Southeast. Half as big as baseballs fell near Lafayette, Ind. A tornado touched down near Danville, Ill., a funnel cloud was spotted near Clark Hill and about 3 inches of rain fell at Asheville, N.C., the National Weather Service reported.

Thunderstorms with heavy rain moved through Michigan, flooding some roads south of Detroit and prompting the evacuation of 12,000 people in suburbs just south of the city.

Residents of flooded communities in Iowa and Oklahoma, meanwhile, sought to raise their homes and pumped water from basements.

Temperatures in the Northeast soared Monday, with a record-tying 84 at Portland, Maine, a record-tying 84 in Trenton, N.J., and a record-tying 83 at Baltimore-Washington International Airport.

New York City reached 93 degrees and the humidity rose to a muggy level, a point of 64. The normal temperature in New York City at this time of year is 76.

Federal employees and union officials. Customs can resume testing anyone seeking a job or promotion in certain "key" drug-enforcement positions.

The drug-testing case began when the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU), which represents the Customs Service's 9,000 employees, asked the high court to halt the tests at least until the justices decided whether to hear union arguments.

The union contends that random testing — that not based on a suspicion of drug use in an individual case — violates Fourth Amendment rights against unreasonable searches.

The NTEU has also filed suit, pending in U.S. District Court in New Orleans, against the more extensive program, which calls for random drug-testing of federal workers in "sensitive" jobs.

A Justice Department spokesman said most federal agencies are devising plans for testing under that program, announced in an executive order last September.

They SS-20s they have in Asia, aimed at China and Japan, while the United States would keep an equal number of medium-range warheads in reserve, possibly in Asia.

On shorter-range missiles, the Soviets offered to remove some 40 SS-12 and SS-23 rockets now in East Germany and Czechoslovakia. But Gorbachev and Shevardnadze were vague about removing similar weapons from the Soviet Union.

The United States, meanwhile, would abandon the right to install missiles in the 450-600 mile category in Western Europe.

Shultz withheld a formal reply until the allies were consulted.

The Soviets subsequently insisted on removal of the 72 Pershing IA missiles in West Germany.

The allies are expected to consult this week in Brussels. Shultz then will meet with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization foreign ministers in Reykjavik, Iceland, next week, after attending the Venice economic summit meeting with Reagan.

Apart from West Germany, all the allies privately had expressed a willingness to go along with a missile reduction accord, although France was said to be somewhat skeptical of the arrangement.

Fernandez quoted North as telling a meeting of CIA station chiefs that President Reagan was interested in John Hull, a northern Costa Rican ranch owner who was helping rebuild the Contras. It was not made clear how much, if anything, Reagan knew about Hull's activities, but Fernandez said CIA Director William Casey asked him about Hull the following day.

He said "Contra" leader "Edu Hinojosa," who has been characterized as untrustworthy, nearly killed two U.S. senators, Cohen and Gary Hart, D-Colo., by sending "a small aircraft with a bomb" to strike a secret facility at Managua that was occupied by a foreign power. "The pilot dive-bombed an airliner at Sardinia airport, where Hart and Cohen happened to be at the time, and "lost his life doing so, because the shock wave of the bomb caused the plane" to hit the tower over the terminal, Fernandez said.

At the U.S. Courthouse in Washington, Navy Cndr. Paul B. Thompson, counsel and military assistant to former National Security Adviser John Poindexter, appeared in private before the federal grand jury looking into the Contra affair. It was Thompson's second appearance before the panel.

Fernandez, in his testimony, told the committee he had been untruthful in his initial responses to questioning by both the Tower commission and the inspector general of the CIA about his communications with North and about the airstrip built in Costa Rica to aid in the resupply effort.

Stanford radio wondered whether Rust could receive "The Cross of Service," West Germany's highest civilian decoration.

Peter Kurt Wuerzbach, a Defense Ministry official, said: "I wouldn't do that far, but he showed how to do things that are taught theoretically."

He said "West German air force training should stress flying at low altitudes because Rust's hedgehopping trip to the Soviet capital had underscored its importance.

Reporters asked government spokesman Friedrich Ortner at a news conference whether the air force might buy Cessnas instead of advanced Tornado fighter jets. Ortner, normally of serious mien, chuckled in response.

Most West Germans greeted the event as a prank an audacious youth. The shakeup of the Soviet defense establishment made clear, however, that those in the Kremlin were not amused when an intruding aircraft landed just outside the door.

"The Foreign Ministry said Monday it disapproved of the foolish violation of Soviet airspace."

Despite his "flying performance," the ministry added, Rust's act could have created "most unfortunate consequences and political complications."

It expressed the hope that Soviet authorities would go easy with him and warned other pilots not to emulate the feat.

Officials of Rust's flying club in Hamburg praised his flying ability, but also have taken a less benevolent attitude. They say they intend to lose his license and may have to pay damages, if the Soviets, confiscate the four-seat Cessna.

Buhl man critical after car overturn

BUILH — Rod Rick Rosenbaum, 24, of Buhl, remained in critical condition Monday night at St. Alphonsus Medical Center in Boise where he is being treated for injuries suffered Sunday afternoon in a traffic accident.

Rosenbaum, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Rosenbaum of Buhl, suffered severe head injuries when thrown from a car when it left U.S. Highway 93 just north of the Nevada state line, and rolled over.

Turn in extra licenses, U.S. orders truckers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Transportation Department, saying too many truckers are hiding traffic violations behind a "wallet full" of driver's licenses, ordered operators Monday to surrender their extra permits within 30 days or face stiff fines.

Secretary Elizabeth Dole said she expects many drivers to turn in the extra licenses voluntarily. But she conceded the government's ability to find truckers with more than one license will be hindered until a computerized central clearing house — established that keeps track of what licenses a driver has. Until then, "obviously we will not have the perfect enforcement mechanism in place," she said.

The department plans to have such a clearinghouse by early 1989 and states will be required to participate in it by October 1993 or risk losing some federal highway funds. Mrs. Dole told a news conference that the only reason a professional driver has more than one license in most cases is "so he can hide accident and conviction records" from authorities.

The single-license requirement is the first of a series of actions the federal government plans to take over the next few years in a crackdown against drivers of large trucks as well as commercial bus drivers who continue to operate despite piles of traffic violations.

"It is unconscionable that a truck or bus driver today can obtain several driver's licenses from different states, then hide bad driving records by distributing traffic violations among them," Mrs. Dole said.

The regulation announced Monday, which goes into effect July 1, allows for penalties of up to $5,000 against both the driver and employer and a possible jail 90-day jail sentence for a driver found holding more than one operator's license.

Meese appears before grand jury probing Wedtech links

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III was questioned Monday by a federal grand jury investigating his involvement with Wedtech Corp., a defense contractor that is the focus of influence-peddling probes.

Meese's attorney, Nathan Lewin, disclosed in a statement that the attorney general had also testified in March before the same grand jury impeached by independent counsel James McKay.

Much of the questioning of the attorney general Monday centered around government contracts involving Fairchild Industries Inc., a Chantilly, Va. defense contractor, said a source close to the investigation, speaking of condition of House political director Lynn Nofziger and others. Fairchild successfully persuaded the Air Force to extend contacts for the A-10 aircraft. The lobbying activities of Nofziger on behalf of Wedtech and Fairchild are under criminal investigation by McKay. Meese is a witness in the Fairchild matter and is not under criminal investigation. The Wall Street Journal has reported that the independent counsel is interested in memos Meese wrote senior Defense Department officials or others in the Reagan administration supporting Fairchild's position.

After Year of the Bimbo, will we take women seriously?

BOSTON — It is 1988 and suddenly the media are facing a critical shortage. Not a shortage of ink or videotape. It is far more serious than that. We have run out of bimbo.

What to do? What to do?

The last 12 months, 1987, were, after all, The Year of the Bimbo. A bumper crop of gals with short names and long hair dominated the covers and cover stories. The PTL scandal had Jessica Hahn. The Franco-Canada mess had Fawn Hall. The Hart-Debrale had Donna Rice. And the best-seller list had Vanna White.

Even the most conservative newspapers found a news hook on which to display some skin. It was a big day, an entire field year for photographers. The lifestyle sections, developed a new specialty, the bimbo beat. The watchdog for investigative teams all over the nation was: Cherchez La Bimbo.

In the media also believed that we were serving a larger social good. In post-feminist America, what new opportunities were there for women? Hadn't we blazed a route to the top of the news?

Here at last was a position for which no woman in the country was overqualified. Were you a Phi Beta Kappa? Not to worry. Sit on the lap of a presidential candidate and you could be a Bimbi bimbo. Were you a second-generation career secretary in the National Security Council? Take dictation from Olite North and bind it. A bimbo beat even a KGB spy could make it. In the American (cp) press as long as she was bimbo-sized.

By June, when Vanna White's autobiography was on the best-seller list, bimbos had become major role models for young girls everywhere. Girls who once might have dreamed of becoming an astronaut or candidate for Vice President began to look beyond these limited horizons. Suddenly every girl wanted to grow up to be a professional letter turner!

"Tens of thousands of Americans bought 'Vanna Speaks,' sneaking inspiration from the Wheel of Fortune teller who found her way to '60 Minutes' and 'People Magazine.'" They memorized the secrets of her success: "My beauty philosophy is to do a little something for yourself every single day. Again, this means getting into good habits like pushing back all your cuticles (fingers and toes) in the shower each morning."

They learned that Vanna's road to fame was not just perfect attendance in grammar school or washing her clothes in cold water, but actual talent: "I was chosen because Mervyn turned the letters better than anyone else."

If only we had been paying attention, we would have noticed the something in the late wilding summer months, there were the first intimations of a bimbo shortage. The bimbo turned out to be a perishable commodity with a brief shelf life. The media kept needing new ones.

At first we tried expanding the pool of potential candidates. An article appeared in Glamour asking the question, "Can You Be a Bimbo If You Are Flat-Chested?" and "Can You Be a Bimbo With a Few (ash)da's and don't's." Another appeared in Harper's Bazaar entitled: "Can You Be a Bimbo Over 30? Breaking the Barrier!"

Ms. magazine chimed in with a think piece entitled: "The Maternal Roots of Bimbohood." By Thanksgiving there was a spate of articles by academic researchers about the dilemmas of professional bimbos facing the biological clock. The cover in Newsweek read: "Bimbo or Bambino? Choices Women Face Today!"

Despite our recruiting, it turns out that there were only so many women who could take themselves frivolously for so long. The sheer discipline it required to have absolutely no thoughts in your head was finally daunting. How many could push their cuticles back every single morning — fingers and toes — including Sundays?

Around Christmas there were reports in Variety of "Bimbo Bie Bombing." Now the very same media moguls who found the bimbo such a handy way to meet their female quota have decided to meet together in urgent sessions to deal with the shortage. What to do? What to do?

Will the media have to — gasp! — take women seriously?

Book publishing sinks to a low point

WASHINGTON — The book publishers have gone home, clearing the Washington Convention Center for the next dog-and-pony show and leaving in their wake a not entirely agreeable odor.

The 1987 American Booksellers Association convention may have been a smash hit in commercial terms, but in artistic ones it left a great deal to be desired; the primary impression the ABA imparted was of an industry so helter-skelter on profit, so cynically intent on milking the lowest common denominator for every available dollar, that it has abandoned all but the pretense of serving the literary and cultural good.

To be sure, as any veteran of ABA conventions knows, they have always been occasions when the less exalted side of book publishing moves to center stage. The ABA is a time for the book business to go glitzy: for lavish, if not ludicrous, displays on the convention floor; for extravagant parties thrown to honor books and authors of otherwise dubious literary credentials; for autograph sessions by "authors" who may never have laid eyes on the original manuscripts of their own books. No one pretends that the ABA is a "literary" event; it is the book industry's annual extravaganza in flamboyance, and everyone accepts it as such.

It has always been understood, though, that the flamboyance is a brief and aberrant departure from the industry's norm.

In the past there was some evidence of this. Major publishers may have emphasized their glossiest fall books at the ABA, but one could always find, in their catalogues and in private conversations with editors and publishers, much to indicate that they were basically publishing — serious writing: fiction, nonfiction and poetry that might or might not sell but that fulfilled publishing's traditional role as guardian and promoter of the literary and intellectual life. The commercial books were seen as embarrassments, as moneymakers that would help underwrite the rest of a publisher's list but that were not really in character with what his house industrial color" by Ted Solotaroff, a senior editor at Harper & Row and former editor of New American Review; the distinguished paperback literary journal.

What Solotaroff describes is "the subversion of publishing planning; and practice by the corporate megalith," a process that has occurred in one form or another since they sold their houses — and, it now seems, their souls — to conglomerates, thus unwittingly abetting and hastening "the transformation of publishing from partly a profession to a business."

Crave and greed lead one to think big. Solotaroff writes: "Respect and care lead one to think small." Therefore he calls for a recommitment of major houses to so-called "mid-list" books, and he recommends small presses and university presses as the source of serious publishing in the future. But these suggestions do not strike me as especially realistic. The big publishers are unlikely to change course unless they are forced to do so by the market. "Procurement executives"; the university presses have thus far shown an eagerness to publish serious fiction that is exceeded only by their ignorance of what constitutes such fiction; and the small presses, some of which indeed do excellent work, tend to be underfinanced and poorly distributed.

To say all of this is not to say that book publishing in the United States has suddenly gone into an irreversible decline. Most serious and important work still gets into print, and as older publishers lapse into complacency and greed, new ones are born to assume the responsibilities they have forfeited; the outlook is probably neither as gloomy as Solotaroff portrays it nor as bleak as it looked on the floor of the ABA.

It is an age inherently inhospitable to seriousness, and therefore one in which responsible publishing will become ever more difficult, even more rare.

Jonathan Yardley

regarded as its true nature.

At the 1987 ABA, though, one had to look long and hard among the major New York and Boston publishers to find catalogues that fit this description or publishers' representatives who were able to talk with any real enthusiasm of connection about the noncommercial aspects of those catalogues.

No doubt readers and reviewers will be able to find, as the fall season progresses, works of interest and distinction in the catalogues of some major publishers, but two decades of experience in examining these catalogues tell me that there are fewer such books than ever before and that publishers' commitments to these books are, with the rarest of exceptions, weaker than they used to be. Doubtless, Harper & Row, Putnam's, Morrow, Random House, Viking, Simon & Schuster — these and most other high-visibility publishers have assembled lists for the fall of 1987 that a decade ago many, if not all, would have dismissed as beneath them.

There is of course always the possibility that what we have here is not a trend but a fluke, publishing is an unpredictable business in which good lists can follow bad in no apparent pattern and through no apparent design, and no one laments this unpredictability more than publishers themselves. But this time around doesn't look like a fluke. In the first place, the sheer ubiquity of the commercial and the literary is too obvious to be dismissed: Everybody's doing it. In the second, the book business has changed in fundamental ways that can only intensify the race for instant profits and discourage dedication to long-profit, long-term investment in serious literature.

The 1987 ABA took place, as it happens, simultaneously with the publication in The New Republic of a withering analysis of "The Literary,

Congress ignoring the human issues

As the joke says, there's good news and bad news about the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986.

The good news is that the Immigration and Naturalization Service is implementing the first phase of the complex legislation, a legalization program for illegal immigrants. The program, which began three weeks ago and will run for a year, has gone smoothly so far.

The bad news is that, slowly but surely, Congress seems to be falling back into its cynical habit of ignoring the human issues raised by our immigration policy and focusing on the economics instead.

Ms. magazine chimed in with a think piece entitled: "The Maternal Roots of Bimbohood." By Thanksgiving there was a spate of articles by academic researchers about the dilemmas of professional bimbos facing

Frank del Olmo

We must hope so, but the best way to ensure fair treatment for everyone would be for Congress to amend the new law, making it clear that keeping families intact is a priority. The House must correct the problems raised when Congress was debating the new law, but it was put aside because restrictions, including the bill's primary author, Sen. Dan Rostenkowski, feared that immigrants would use family unification as a "loophole" to bring close relatives into the country. Now a few members of Congress are trying to amend the law to make it more specific on family unification, but their colleagues don't want to reopen the matter.

Contrast that with how quickly the Senate voted to put off implementation of the second major provision of the new law — sanctions that are supposed to discourage employers from hiring illegal immigrants. The original law called for sanctions starting June 1, but the Senate voted a three-month delay in order for that delay to be effective. The House must correct the INS officials have already announced that they will delay sanctions for at least 30 days, until July 1, to give employers more time to understand the law.

That sounds reasonable — until you remember how easy it always seems to be for the government to write loopholes for business. In this case, an employer who wants a cheap, malleable labor force. A classic example took place the last time Congress revised our immigration law in the early 1960s. When a bill passed making it a felony to "import or harbor" illegal immigrants, Congress specifically excluded employment from that definition. The move was so transparent that the amendment was dubbed "the Texas proviso," in a backhanded tribute to congressmen from that state who had pushed for the law in the early 1950s.

I'm not suggesting that any new Texas provisos are about to be enacted, but it might be a good idea for the public to keep a sharp eye on any changes in the law. If we have proposed delays in employer sanctions, if our shiny new immigration law is changed, it must be done in ways that help everyone involved, workers and their families as well as employers.

Letters/ Award to outstanding athlete becomes one based on popularity

It's no longer an honor

After attending the Athletic Award Banquet at Kimberly High School, I think every present and future athlete at Kimberly should be aware of the fact that the Outstanding Athletic Award is nothing more than a popularity award.

This award was started to honor the athlete with the best stats during their high school years. This is no longer true. The award is popularity and whether the coaches like or dislike you. Check the stats this year and see for yourself.

The girls award was presented to four girls (every senior girl who participated in three sports), when it was clear to everyone that the award belonged to one girl.

The boys award was given to two boys when only one really deserved it. The other boy had no better or not as good of stats as other senior boys who participated in three sports. The stats of the athletes weren't even considered.

The athletic staff at Kimberly High School has really taken the honor out of the award. Congratulations Cindy and Doug on a job well done.

to wash from its hands due to its wanton and scaldous disregard of the rights of common people, both Americans and Nicaraguans. Benjamin Linder was in Nicaragua helping to build a hydroelectric project to bring electricity to villages without it. Look how this compares to what the current administration has built: bombs, missiles, and other weapons of destruction. The Contras are CIA-created mercenaries without popular support from their own country. They will dole out to exist without millions of our tax dollars supporting them.

It defies belief and common decency that this administration can so callously condemn people to terrorism and death at the hands of the Contras. What right does Washington have to wage an unjust war against the Nicaraguans?

Until the people of this country protest these activities and the use of our tax money to support them, each of us can feel responsible for these atrocities. We must demand that our government put a stop to the attacks against innocent people.

Do you stay up late at night, wondering what kind of jobs your children are going to have. I can assure you that whatever their skills, they will be working for "The Company."

They will get up in the morning, read The Newspaper, jump into The Car, get on The Plane and stay at The Hotel — each one a division of The Company.

Oh, they may call it something else, like Allegris, Alys Rent-A-Car and Westin hotels, but not worry.

By the time Junior is trying his first dose of Maalox, Allegris and Esmark and TRW, MCI, ICM, and all the other letters that go to "The Company."

It will make life simple, there will be no competition, all we have to remember is: "The Company."

Reggie told us the other day that we have to protect the shipments of oil those countries ship out through the Persian Gulf. That is absolute hog wash. Who are we protecting that route for? Not anyone in the Western World. The United States is shipping (in Japanese ships) North shore oil from Alaska the coast of Canada to the Gulf of Mexico to Japan. There it is refined and sold back to the United States. We don't really need oil from the other side of the world.

I am not an isolationist, but I cannot see sticking our nose into areas of danger when we don't have to do so. Oh sure, I forgot we must sell war weapons to all those countries so that we can keep our balance of trade in the black. I can be sure that we will go to the Netherlands this time. I live the blame on your table, And it thinks. What is the next step that the great White House actor has in mind? Another Grenada? Another Grenada? Nancy would feed him his plumb and warm milk, put him to bed, tuck him in and then call the cabinet together and launch a new campaign to automatically place all unemployed in the unemployment lines of the United States of America. Unless of course, they are registered Democrats and won't listen to reason. This would give us something to laugh about and would not hurt the country. I have no idea how this is going to meddle in the affairs of nations we have no ties with.

Campfire spreads, burns 37 homes in Pebble Beach area

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A campfire that got out of control was blamed Monday for a wind-fanned blaze that hopped from roof to roof in this exclusive area, burning 37 homes, causing $16 million damage and forcing more than 200 people to flee.

"It's awful," groaned Tom Oliver, president of Pebble Beach Co., which owns roads and other facilities in the area. Surveying the charred landscape beneath the smoke-tinged orange sky, he added: "Isn't it just terrible? Last night it looked like Dante's inferno."

George Alex, a spokesman for the California Department of Forestry, said investigators found a campfire and "evidence that leads them to believe there was a party by juveniles" before the blaze started Sunday afternoon.

The fast-moving flames quickly hopped through homes nestled in about 140 acres of brush and woods. Nine people, including eight firefighters, suffered minor injuries. The fire was fully contained and 75 percent controlled at 8 p.m. Monday, said Forestry Department information officer Bill Bruno. Residents were expected to be allowed back into the neighborhood Monday night.

The first wisps of smoke were spotted near 17-Mile Drive, a private road that attracts about 1.5 million tourists annually for a look at the exclusive residences, the craggy Pacific coastline and several famous golf courses. The area in the immediate vicinity of the drive was spared from the fire.

"It could have been much worse if we didn't have the type of coordinated response we got from all the agencies involved," said Mark Verbonich, vice president for property services at Pebble Beach Co.

Verbonich had said earlier that 56 homes were damaged or destroyed, but he later said that figure was wrong. The number was revised to 31 homes destroyed and six others damaged.

He estimated the damage to the houses at $16 million. Verbonich said the houses destroyed were worth an average of $500,000, with some as expensive as $750,000 to $800,000.

Jess Mullen and her husband, Frank, were walking through the area where the fire started moments before the flames erupted.

After smelling smoke, Mrs. Mullen said, they "walked toward our house about a half-mile away and it was only 15 minutes but the wind blew and blew and suddenly there were flames and smoke everywhere. I've never seen anything like it."

Their house survived the flames after they soaked it with hoses for four hours.

Eight firefighters and one resident suffered minor injuries battling the blaze, which closed Highway 68 between Highway 1 and Pacific Grove and spread heavy smoke and ash throughout the area.

PTL ministry raised 7 million despite detractors and IRS

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The PTL ministry raised at least $7 million in two weeks during its "May Emergency" campaign, despite detractors and IRS scrutiny, the Rev. Jerry Falwell said Monday.

"I'm happy to tell you the May Emergency was indeed a May miracle," Falwell said.

Falwell said on Monday's "PTL

Club" program that employees had not finished counting the 33,000 pieces of mail that came in during the weekend.

The ministry had raised $1.5 million from May 1 to May 17, Falwell said, adding that it may wind up with as much as $10 million in contributions for May.

Falwell became chairman of the television ministry on March 19 after founder Jim Bakker resigned because of an extramarital sexual encounter.

PTL is estimated to be $70 million in debt. It recently lost "about 20, 22 stations" that broadcast its programs, "and we're trying hard not to lose 40 more," Falwell said.

Reagan asks help from allies

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, facing reluctance from European allies to help provide military protection in the Persian Gulf, said Monday that Western democracies share common security interests in the tense region and that "free men should not cower" or be expected to stand alone.

"In a speech outlining his agenda for the seven-nation economic summit in Venice, Italy, next week, Reagan made clear that he will press the allies for assistance in guaranteeing free passage for oil tankers sailing through the tense gulf waters.

Reagan said the deaths of 37 American sailors on the guided missile frigate Stark — which was hit by an Iraqi missile — demonstrated America's willingness to protect its vital interests.

"Yet, the American people are aware that it is not our interests alone that are being protected," Reagan said. "The dependence of our allies on the flow of oil from that area is no secret."

Reagan said the summit leaders who will meet in Venice June 4-10 will review the common security interests shared by Western democracies in the gulf.

"The future belongs to the brave,"

Reagan said. "Free men should not cower before such challenges and they should not expect to stand alone."

Reagan's speech demonstrated anew that the annual meetings, though billed as economic summits, frequently are overtaken by political events, such as the gulf problem.

While not offering an unconditional endorsement, Reagan spoke warmly of the Soviet Union's proposal for the elimination of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe — another issue that has divided the allies.

The president's speech, in the East Room of the White House, celebrated the 40th anniversary of the Marshall Plan that helped rebuild a ravaged Europe after World War II.

"Today, we have known 40 or more years of peace, and one-time enemies are the closest of friends and allies as a result of the Marshall Plan," Reagan said.

"Today, we face challenges comparable to those that confronted struggling democracies four decades ago," he added. "We sought to achieve prosperity, now we seek to preserve it and ensure that our standard of living continues to improve."

Acknowledging differences among allies, Reagan said, "let us admit the recognizable friction among the great democracies about trade and economic policy."

Temporary 'new GI bill' permanent

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Monday signed into permanent law the temporary "new GI Bill" enacted by Congress three years ago to provide educational benefits for service personnel, veterans and reservists.

"One of the great success stories of our time, I think, was the first GI Bill passed at the end of World War II," Reagan said at a signing ceremony in the White House Rose Garden. "No investment our government has ever made returned better dividends."

Before an audience of members of Congress and others, the president signed a bill removing the Dec. 31, 1989, expiration date from the latest GI Bill, enacted in 1984.

That bill provided a program of educational benefits not only for service personnel and veterans, but also for reservists.

In a statement issued by the White House, the president said more than 18 million veterans and service personnel have received educational assistance under three prior GI Bills, beginning in June 1944.

LOST AT SEA

Sailors of old weren't so mindful of "death by drowning" as of "lost at sea." Wasn't much talk about it. But historical footnotes suggest a common dread: Of being washed ashore, cold and naked, with nothing to identify their remains. Without really admitting why school sailors started getting tattoos.

Inmates to fight Gem fires

BOISE (AP) — The state of Idaho plans to make more use of inmate firefighting teams this year. The state Land Board on Monday gave preliminary approval to an agreement allowing the Department of Lands to train and equip inmate firefighting teams. Firefighters will be paid $4.45 per hour, with the Department of Corrections to keep all but $1.25 per hour. The board approved a memorandum of understanding, subject to negotiating a final contract between the two state agencies. The agreement calls for 20-member inmate fire teams, on a volunteer basis only, to receive fire training and fire equipment. Once the original equipment is used up or is lost, replacement would be up to the Department of Corrections, the board said.

Hopper control funds okayed

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's Department of Agriculture will have $20,000 for grasshopper control this year, although Director Richard Rush says it isn't clear yet whether that much money will be needed. The Board of Examiners on Monday approved $20,000 for the department to use controlling grasshoppers on state lands. Rush said so far this spring, reports have been mixed whether the state faces a serious grasshopper problem. Last year, the state spent $100,000 on grasshopper control. The year before, the bill was more than $600,000 for a major grasshopper infestation that resulted in a massive federal-state spraying program in southern Idaho.

Pocatello land trade stalls

POCATELLO (AP) — Questions about the ownership of two parcels of land may delay Pocatello's plans to use the parcels to obtain the late YMCA building downtown. But the questions are not serious enough to jeopardize the transaction between the city and Idaho Bank and Trust Co., says Mayor Dick Finlayson. "We'll just have to go back to the drawing board and identify another parcel of land for the trade," Finlayson said. The parcels apparently are owned by the Idaho Department of Highways. The land was purchased in the mid-1970s with Federal Highway Administration funds.

Jaguar pelt nets Idahoan fine

POCATELLO (AP) — Richard Hayes of Idaho Falls was sentenced to 36 months probation and fined $4,000 Monday for illegally importing an endangered species, jaguar, into this country. Hayes appeared in U.S. District Court here and pleaded guilty to bringing a jaguar pelt from Paraguay into the United States. A second count was dismissed when he pleaded guilty to the first. U.S. Magistrate Craig Jorgensen also gave 30 days suspended jail time and ordered the Idaho Falls farmer to perform 100 hours community service.

ISU college in line for review

POCATELLO (AP) — Idaho State University's College of Engineering will be one of about 300 engineering programs to be reviewed this year by national accreditors. But several months before the visit, the college's dean says he'd be "shocked and enraged" if ISU loses accreditation. "We are doing extremely well," Dean Varada Charlyuk said. "I don't want to sound arrogant, but I am extremely confident." ISU first received accreditation for its general engineering program in 1985. The decision will come up for review in the summer of 1988. The review will include a visit by national accreditors in October or November.

Andrus warns rifle group of retribution

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus has warned the National Rifle Association there will be "retribution" over the association's effort to defeat him in the last Idaho gubernatorial election. Andrus, in a speech Monday to Ada County Democrats, said he has not forgotten that the NRA backed his opponent, Republican David Leroy, who what Andrus called "political distortions and ads" implying that Andrus was soft on gun control. "I've been a hunter and gun owner in this state for more than 30 years. I have a record on sportsman's issues that is well-known to the people of Idaho. But in the 11th hour of the last election campaign, the political leadership of the NRA tried to tell the Idaho voter that somehow I was soft on control," Andrus said.

It will not be out of spite, the governor said, but the rank-and-file members of the NRA who pay the dues should be making the policy decisions, not what he termed the "three-piece suit boys" from San Francisco and Washington, D.C. Idaho Rep. Larry Craig is on the NRA Board of Directors, and in a recent television interview, Andrus ridiculed Craig and the "gun nuts" of the NRA for some of their proposals, including turning the Sawtooth National Recreation Area into a park — thus banning hunting and building roads through wilderness areas. But in a letter to Andrus dated last Thursday, NRA Executive Director Wayne LaPierre defended Craig, and called the governor's comments "an insult beneath the dignity of the office you presently hold."

LaPierre said that he and his associates deserve an apology for their firearms as "gun nuts of the world's unwarranted remarks." LaPierre said, "Your scurrilous characterization of the National Rifle Association and all who own and use firearms as 'gun nuts of the world's unwarranted remarks' has little purpose except to highlight for all to see your own pre-judgment."

Priest Lake leasing rates win approval

BOISE (AP) — After two years of talking about it, the Idaho Land Board has taken "final" action on the cost of leases of state land at Priest Lake — but the rates still are subject to negotiation. "After an executive session, with the public excluded, the Land Board voted Monday to adopt a Department of Lands recommendation on rates to be charged for state lots at Priest Lake, a popular northern Idaho recreation area." But board members said there could be more negotiations through September on the rates, which are scheduled to take a big jump next year. Appraisals at Priest Lake showed most of the lakelot land is worth $65,000 to $95,000 per lot. Based on those valuations, the board on Monday adopted a policy that lots valued at over $48,000 would rent for a minimum of $1,200 per year, compared with the $790 now charged.

Carter thinks U.S. may end up in war

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Carter said Monday the Reagan administration has given a clear signal that it is siding with Iraq in the Persian Gulf war, and the United States is in danger of being drawn into the conflict.

"After our ridiculous sale of arms to Iran and the worldwide uproar because of that — embarrassing mistakes, I think we have tended to shift now toward Iraq," Carter said in an interview.

"Kuwait is aligned with Iraq. We are making Kuwaiti ships part of the American merchant fleet, and I think this is a clear signal to the combatants that we have chosen sides," he said.

amid controversy over its decision to put U.S. flags on 12 Kuwaiti tankers and have U.S. warships escort them, the administration has clung to its stated position of neutrality in the six-year-old war, saying it seeks victory for neither side.

Asked whether the United States was in danger of being drawn into war in the Gulf, Carter said, "Yes, I think we are."

I think President Reagan was about to launch a massive American presence there with no pre-planning to accommodate uncertain circumstances," he said. "I think he will go ahead with it, but after working out an arrangement with members of Congress that will be acceptable as a way to protect our forces."

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, were interviewed as part of a promotional tour for their new book, "Everything to Gain," which recounts their experiences since leaving the White House in 1981 and counsels other retirees to live active lives.

The interview, however, ranged over a number of controversial subjects as well.

Carter said he knows of no cases of AIDS so far in his hometown of Plains, Ga., but believes the disease will develop into a plague of unprecedented proportions, and should be dealt with by experimental mandatory testing.

"I think that some kind of testing ought to be required," he said. "There is going to have to be some experimentation on how best to control it, and one of those ways to search out the best approach would be to have some mandatory testing for high-risk groups, and even though it might encroach to some degree on privacy, I think that's a sacrifice that's not too great to pay."

President Reagan and Vice President George Bush were booed by AIDS research supporters Sunday and Monday in outlining the administration's plans for expanded testing. Critics of mandatory testing say it would drive the disease underground by making people in high-risk groups reluctant to seek treatment.

The Carters, interviewed in an eighth-floor hotel suite with a view across Lafayette Park to the White House, said the former president has no plans to run again for the presidency.

"I would like for him to, but he won't do it," the former first lady said. "In the first place, I don't think I could get elected," said Carter. "Secondly, we have a very challenging and exciting life carved out for ourselves now, and third, I think the Democrats have some fine prospective candidates to put forward."

"I think we have a good chance to win in 1988," he said.

"We need a ticket that will appeal to the South," he added. "Obviously a Southerner on the ticket is the best approach, but there might be another combination that would have high appeal in the South."

He said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., whom he has urged to run, "will make a decision one way or another before the end of the summer" and "if he decides to run, I don't think it will be too late for him."

The former president said, as he has before, that he does not think former Colorado Sen. Gary Hart was unfairly treated by news stories about his personal life that caused him to withdraw from the race for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Mrs. Carter said: "I think everybody in public life has to just assume that people are going to know everything they do, and act accordingly."

Witness ties Groves death to family troubles

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

GOODING — A man who led Boise police to the body of murder victim Wilbert Lorn "Larry" Groves, 55, of Hagerman last April, testified in a preliminary hearing Monday that he heard Robert Stigall admit killing Groves because of family problems.

The preliminary hearing for Stigall, 22, of Bliss, who is charged with first degree murder in the beating death of Groves, is scheduled to resume at 9:30 a.m. today in the 5th District Magistrate Court in Gooding.

Max Edwards, of Twin Falls, is being heard on the testimony and will decide if Stigall is to be held for trial in district court.

Stigall is currently housed in the Gooding County jail without bond.

He was arrested in Boise April 23 when he returned to a pickup truck and camper that contained the body of Groves. Police were alerted to the crime by Mark Rundle and were watching the vehicle when Stigall left the apartment building and entered the pickup truck.

Rundle told the court Monday that he was in an apartment on Protest Street in Boise April 23, with someone he knew only as "Max" when Stigall arrived. During the conversation, Rundle said, Stigall was asked by Max who "he did it." The witness said Stigall responded that it was because Groves, his stepfather, was trying to sell his mother's home.

Rundle testified that Stigall explained Groves had been killed with a "trailer jack." He added that Stigall said Groves had been beaten first in Hagerman then placed in the camper and taken to Boise. He said the suspect described further beatings along the way when the victim "woke up."

Gooding County Prosecutor Lynn Nelson called several witnesses in an effort to establish that Groves had first been beaten at the home of his estranged wife, Sandra Anderson-Groves, mother-of-the-defendant, and then placed in the back of the pickup camper and driven to Boise with additional beatings occurring "a couple of times down enroute to Boise."

Rundle said after he observed the body and the blood in the camper, he went home and tried to call Crime Stoppers and make a report. When he got no answer, he said, he went to the Boise police department where he talked with detectives and then helped them identify Stigall when he returned to the camper.

Rundle, who admitted he had been arrested on a felony of manufacture of a controlled substance, told defense attorney Steve Botmer that he went to the police for moral reasons. He explained that he did not believe in murder or unjustified death, especially when there was no remorse shown.

Sandra Anderson Groves told the court that she and the victim had been married six years but were separated for several months at the time of his death.

She said her son had been residing with her two to three weeks before Groves' death.

Boise Detectives, Lance Anderson, Tony Wallace, and Dave Smith described being informed by Rundle about the body in the camper at the Boise apartment parking lot and subsequent events leading to the arrest of Stigall. Both said there was an unusually large amount of blood in the camper, on the body and on a trailer-jack-found-near the body in the camper. The officers also testified to seeing blood on Stigall's clothing and shoes and on the rear bumper of the Change settles long feud

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The almost decade-long feud between Scott's Refrigeration, now the Scott-Polar Corp., and its neighbors may have come to an end Monday with a zone change granted by Twin Falls City Council.

The zone change may also mean an end to a lawsuit filed by Scott's against the city.

In other business, the council adopted a new set of zoning standards and established a new building-advisory board. But it didn't touch building-permit fees.

The council members approved unanimously a request by the Scott-Polar Corp. to change the zoning of its four-acre site at 502 Madrona St. from residential to manufacturing with a planned-unit development.

For years the neighbors had complained of noise, traffic and unsightly conditions at the business.

Scott's, which wanted to expand within the site, had sued the city over its rejection of a manufacturing-zone designation.

The conflict began heading toward a resolution when the neighbors and Scott's met in a series of private attorneys met and discussed their differences. The result were terms that both parties said they could live with.

The terms and recommendations of the Planning and Zoning Commission, which reflect the wishes of the neighbors and Scott's, will be incorporated in a zoning agreement between Scott's and the city.

The Planning and Zoning Commission recommended the corporation build a screening barrier entirely around the site. The agreement also allows the building permit to be dependent on the barrier completion.

Scott-Polar attorney, Mark Stuebs, said the corporation will remove several old buildings and consolidate operations in one building, which should eliminate the cause of the noise complaints from equipment being moved between different buildings. The used equipment at the site will be removed by the end of the year by a new company that will restore the equipment.

The council approved the zone change contingent on a PUD agreement that would call for the dismissal of the lawsuit. Stuebs said the foundation of Scott's lawsuit will be eliminated with the zone change.

The council lauded the efforts of the neighbors and the business to solve their conflict.

Attorney Rob Paine, who represented the neighbors, said the resolution was achieved without court action between the business and Scott's.

Councilman Erik Andersen said his cooperation should be used as a model for coexistence between industry and residential areas as the city grows.

Scott's neighbor, said the conflict between the business and the neighborhood had gone on for almost 10 years.

"When asked if the agreement will remedy the concerns," Mrs. Nichols replied, "we're hoping."

Stallings praises quality of Class of '87

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "Few people remember who spoke at their graduation. Few people even remember what they said ten minutes after it's over. Maybe that's why congressmen feel they're good for the job," said Congressman Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, as he addressed Twin Falls High School graduates Monday night.

Speaking before a group of 400 graduates in the class of 1987 and about 3,000 relatives, teachers and friends, Stallings said he was "honored to associate with people of this quality."

According to statistics provided by Twin Falls School District Superintendent Carl Snow, 63 percent of the graduates are going on to higher education, seven percent are entering vocational training, 20 percent are immediately joining the work force, seven percent are going into the military and one percent are immediately getting married.

The class deserves special recognition, he added, because as a whole, they have been awarded $600,000 worth of scholarships.

The crowd that showed up for Commencement Exercises last night filled the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium and laughed along with Stallings as he compared the class of 1987 to characters in an amusing anecdote.

Stallings told of a man who lived near the Grand Canyon in Arizona and had purchased a horse who obeyed the commands "Praise the Lord" to run and "Amen" to stop.

The man, while riding the horse one day, forgot the command to stop and was reaching the canyon edge. Ending a prayer, he said "Amen," and the horse stopped just in time. Relieved, he then said "Praise the Lord,"

"Tonight, we're giving you diplomats, and men we're saying 'Praise the Lord,'" he said.

Stallings had these words of advice for the class of 1987. First, he said, it is important not only to work hard but to work smart. "If everyone that worked hard were successful, more people would be rich. It's the people that use their brains and work hard that are successful," he said.

Two special recognition awards were presented by Senior Class Vice President Kristin Barton and Senior Class Secretary Karen King. Gene Champlin, chairman of the Twin Falls School Board, received a first prize. Joe Ross, head janitor at the high school, received the second.

Recording dispute stalls Hansen teacher talks

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

HANSEN — Teacher contract negotiations at Hansen School District broke down Monday for the second time in a dispute over how the talks should be recorded.

Both sides agree the district should keep accurate record of the meetings. But the Hansen Education Association distrusts the district's note taker and wants a tape recorder or a neutral party, such as a court reporter, HEA chief negotiator Bret Morris recorded several minutes of talks Monday before district negotiators refused to begin talks and left the room.

Unfair labor practice if one party rejects it. Morris said Idaho's position is hypocritical because another Gato's district he represents, Meridian, tapes their negotiations.

"The district then brings a tape recorder, and there's never been a complaint," Morris said.

The talks are not about salary or other compensation issues. These initial talks center around procedural aspects of the master contract with HEA.

But the talks ended Monday the same way as April 20 — making no headway and with no schedule for resuming the meetings.

The district first contacted HEA about negotiations, so they became responsible for setting the first material for talks. The district offered changes in the contract's procedural agreement, such as what may be negotiated.

Smith said the procedural agreement had to be negotiated first, because the rest of the master contract is predicated on it.

HEA has not replied to those proposals — the talks collapsed in April after it failed to offer a counter-proposal.

The dispute marks tensions still high at the district where Superintendent Richard Smith has been under fire for the past year.

Later Monday at the bi-monthly school board meeting, a dozen district patrons attended to ask for an update on a request that Smith resign.

Parent Carol Davidson, who circulated a petition with 126 names demanding Smith be removed, asked what the board has done to meet that request. She also asked to see a petition Smith circulated which he said contained 200 names supporting him and the board.

However, Board Chairman Bill Allen refused to speak about the complaints from earlier meetings because the topics were not on the evening's agenda. Smith also refused to release the petition, saying it was not a public document.

HCA move may have no impact

By the Associated Press and the Times-News

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Hospital — Corporation of America's plan to sell more than 100 smaller hospitals to an employee-owned company will allow the firm to consolidate its larger acute care hospitals in the Southeast.

The plan will apparently not affect two Magic Valley facilities associated with HCA's management and psychiatric companies. But two Idaho hospitals outside Magic Valley that are owned or partially owned by HCA may be affected.

Thomas F. Frist Jr. said the Nashville-based firm plans to sell its holdings in about 10 states and remain in 10 states, allowing the firm to ease management demands.

"The plan will apparently not affect Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, which is managed by HCA Management Services Co., and Gooding's Walker A&C Center, which is owned by HCA Psychiatric Co."

HCA will retain sole ownership of the two Idaho hospitals. • See HCA on Page B2

Stallings thinks history will be judge of Reagan's policies

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — History will judge President Ronald Reagan much more harshly on his Central American policies than contemporary opinion, said Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, on Monday.

Stallings, former Richards College history professor, says Richard Nixon went down during Watergate because his support was much shallower than Reagan's.

"Reagan is the most popular president in this century. He is going to survive the last 18 months of his presidency," Stallings said in a wide-ranging interview at the Times-News.

Stallings voted against $100 million in aid to support the Contra rebels trying to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist government.

Stallings also discussed his role with Gov. Cecil Andrus' administration on the Idaho policies issue. He touched on federal policies towards AIDS victims, AIDS education, the stalled Swan Falls water rights agreement and government tariff policies towards foreign silver producers.

Stallings was critical of a number of the witnesses at the Iran-Contra hearings in vestigating the diversion of money from the U.S. government's arms sales to Iran. The profit was put into foreign bank accounts which were purportedly set up to aid the Contras.

"The Americanism and flag waving flow- ing from their mouths is overshadowed by their bank accounts," Stallings said.

Retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord may have been patriotic but he was concerned about keeping himself prosperous in pursuit of his patriotism, Stallings said.

Stallings says he doesn't think it will ever be known how the money in foreign bank accounts was spent.

"Once the patriotic cloak is stripped away, we see them for what they are — mercenaries," he said.

Stallings says Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North showed cynicism and a lust for power in the way he handled government institutions.

"It is because of North that Reagan is in serious trouble," Stallings says.

On the Idaho wilderness issue, Stallings says Gov. Cecil Andrus is taking the lead.

"It's easier for him than for me," says Stallings. And the (Republican) senators felt he got burned last time," says Stallings, referring to the 1984 breakdown in negotiations between Sen. James McClure and the conservationists.

Stallings says Andrus will probably present the outlines of a bill to the state's Congressional delegation.

Stallings' staff has talked with Andrus' staff about wilderness but Stallings says he has yet to have substantive discussions with Andrus. Such a meeting is planned, he says.

Stallings says a wilderness bill is possible but whatever is proposed will need McClure's blessing. Based on the discussion at the staff level, Stallings says McClure is interested in getting a wilderness bill.

Stallings offered few specifics on the areas he would like to see protected and declined to name a final acreage figure.

"I don't know how many acres to be included in the package," he says. However, he cautioned environmental groups that if they ask for all 9 million acres of roadless areas in the state to be wilderness, there won't be a wilderness bill.

It would be difficult to pass a wilderness bill without environmental group support, he says.

Regarding the state's efforts to attract the superconducting supercollider project, Stallings says Idaho has a good chance of making the short list of proposed sites.

But he says Idaho will find making the ship of the HCA Management Co., which manages more than 225 hospitals, and HCA Psychiatric Co., which owns and manages more than 50 such facilities. The corporation also will continue to own or manage more than 40 facilities in six other nations.

"As far as I know, it won't change anything in the management company," said MVRMC Administrator John Bingham.

Bingham and Assistant Administrator for Finance Ken Fry are the only two HCA employees at MVRMC. Both serve under a management contract with Twin Falls County for the county-owned hospital.

HCA Psychiatric Co. bought Walker Center April 1. Program Director Gail Ater, now a HCA employee, could not be reached for comment Monday.

HCA plans to sell 104 hospitals, including 10 in Texas, 16 in Tennessee, 11 in Florida and seven in California, corporate officials said during a morning news conference.

Council

 In other business, the council adopted the 1985 edition of the Uniform Building Code, a nationally recognized building standard. The city now operates under the 1982 edition.

With some exceptions and modifications, the entire 1985 UBC version was adopted. The big exception was the exclusion of the permit fee schedule in the 1985 UBC edition that proposed fees almost 50 percent higher than present fees.

Some council members, however, had disagreed whether the proposed fee increases were necessary.

City staff recommended no change at all. Revenues had supported the budget deficit of between $75,000 to $80,000 next year, Courtney added.

The revenues should be monitored and a fee increase imposed if the revenue doesn't keep pace with expenses, he said.

Hearing

 pickup truck. They said when Stigall returned to the vehicle, he was seen using a cloth to wipe off the dash and a bloody cloth was later found in the truck.

Smith, who questioned Stigall following his arrest, read a statement into the record that he said was made willingly by Stigall following an interview with the officers.

The officers testified—at length regarding the search warrant issued for inspection of the camper and to giving the suspect his rights at the time of the arrest.

Wallace said when he looked at the body he determined the man was dead and had been for some time since rigor mortis had developed and there were no vital signs. He said the body appeared to have several deep wounds on the top and side of the head. He also testified that there was blood and hair on one corner of the trailer jack.

Wallace said the camper interior "was a mess" and blood was mixed with litter and items spilled from the camper.

Clark Seap, Gooding County Deputy Sheriff, told of processing the mobile home of Sandra Groves at 270 East South St., Hagerman, where he said he found blood on the cushions by the couch. He said they had been turned over and the blood was on the undersides. Blood spots were also found on the sidewalk leading from the home, he said.

Testimony from neighbors, including an 11-year-old boy, placed Stigall at the Groves home early on the morning of April 23.

Deputy Ada County Coroner Lynn Bowerman, who attended an autopsy and examined the body of the victim, told the court Groves was dead and had been dead for some time when he first saw the body.

Testimony to have Bowerman testify as an expert on the cause and time of death were blocked by objections by Botmer.

Magistrate Judge Mel Edwards of Twin Falls, who is hearing the case, ruled that Bowerman did not qualify as a specialist, Nelson said he will bring Dr. Delbert Scott, the pathologist, who performed the autopsy to Gooding for such testimony today.

Botmer indicated he does not plan to call witnesses in the preliminary hearing and Nelson said he has only one additional witness for today.

Jerome levy vote today

JEROME — School district patrons will cast their ballots today for or against the proposed Jerome School District 1987-88 levy.

If passed, the $176,600 levy will be used for classroom supplies, curriculum updates, vocational and handicapped programs, and special programs, including the peer counseling program, among other planned uses.

Superintendent Richard Kugler said the levy would be for one year.

If passed, it would cost home owners about $6.31 per $10,000 assessed property value.

Eighty percent of the voters must approve the levy in order for it to pass.

Patrons are not required to be registered to vote in this election, because a new law requiring registration in school district elections does not become law until July 1.

Voters may cast their ballots from noon until 5 p.m. at the Jerome Junior High School. Gooding County residents in the Jerome School District may vote at the Bill Emerson residence.

Stallings

 final hurdle though because of the political pressure and spending other, larger, more urban states will bring to bear to attract the $4.5 billion, atom smasher.

Stallings says there is some question whether the project will be built at all. The Administration has not set aside funds and this will become a difficulty if the project continues.

"What they are doing so far is taking funding from existing accounts," says Stallings. He says he hopes the funding for the SSC won't come by pitting one project against another.

For instance, he said if California gets the SSC at the price of closing Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, he would not support the SSC.

Stallings says he supports Reagan's order to require AIDS testing for prisoners.

But the congressman says he is opposed to television advertising of condoms because "it is distasteful to me."

Stallings says abstinence and education are two ways to deal with the epidemic. "If you really want to turn this thing back the family way where education has to take place," he says.

Stallings says he had the votes to get the Swan Falls water rights agreement passed, despite environmental objections. However, he says he wanted to incorporate into the law the support of the environmentalists.

Stallings says he would like to see Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., join the race although Stallings acknowledges Nunn might carry the liability of being perceived as another smart Georgian such as Jimmy Carter.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., has views that are too liberal for the West, Stallings says.

Stallings sees Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., and former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt as two candidates that could capture the public imagination.

 May 28: Senate votes to delay employers' sanctions by a vote of 47-43. The Senate approved a four-month delay in the enforcement of sanctions against employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens. The employers' penalties were part of a sweeping immigration reform package enacted last year. The delay will postpone enforcement until Oct. 1, giving INS more time to educate employers about the new law.

'Single' lover is leading a double life

DEAR ABBY: I am a 26-year-old woman who recently fell in love with a 25-year-old guy. We met at work and discovered a strong mutual attraction on both our parts.

Abby, I was never so happy in my life when he told me he loved me and wanted me to be his wife. After spending almost every night together for three months, I got a phone call from his wife who is pregnant and has a 3-year-old daughter by this man.

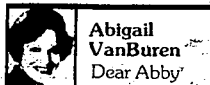

I don't have to tell you that I was in shock. Now the question, Abby: How does a single girl know for sure if a man is lying or telling the truth when he says he is not married?

— USED IN AUSTIN
DEAR USED: A single man will introduce you to some of his friends and relatives. A married man will not. A single man will probably invite you to see his house or apartment. A married man will not. A single man will give you his home telephone number and address. A married man will not.

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago I bought my mother a beautiful jewelry box. Yesterday I visited my niece to see her new bedroom set when lo and behold, what do you think I saw on her dressing table?

My jewelry box! I asked "Betsy" where she got it and she said it was a birthday present from Grandma (my mother)! When I asked Mother where the jewelry box I had given her was, she lied and said it was in her closet. I asked her how it could be in her closet when I saw it on Betsy's dresser. Then she admitted that Betsy had admired it, so she gave it to her.

When Mother saw how hurt I was, all she said was, "I'm sorry. I didn't think you'd mind."

I haven't spoken to my mother since. I'm through giving her gifts; she'll be lucky to get a card from me in the future.

Am I wrong to feel this way?

— HURTING IN BROOKLYN
DEAR HURTING: I can understand your feelings, but please let go of your resentment. Once a gift is given, it's the property of the recipient to do with what he/she pleases.

DEAR ABBY: Are pantyhose considered undergarments? I work for a company that requires its female employees to wear pantyhose under their dresses. Abby, does an employer have the right to insist on it? I personally think it's degrading for a woman to be told what to wear under her dress. Your opinion, please.

— ARIZONA WOMAN
DEAR WOMAN: I would say that pantyhose qualify as undergarments. And I think an employer has the right to require the female employees to wear hosiery as opposed to appearing bare-legged. But the employer wouldn't have a leg to stand on to insist on pantyhose specifically.

Mismatch brewing in the Forum?

By GORDON EDELS
Los Angeles Times

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Short series? "I don't think we'll win in four, no."

On the eve of Los Angeles Lakers-Boston Celtics X, back by popular demand for the National Basketball Association (finals), that prediction was uttered by:

A. Michael Cooper.
B. Michael Thompson.
C. Michael Jackson.
D. Larry Joe Bird.

Hint: He's the only one of the four who has ever been called an over-rated white player.

Hint No. 2: His answer was a flip response to the popular view — held nearly everywhere west of the Connecticut River — that the Celtics have about as much chance of beating the Lakers in this series as a broken-down Zamboni machine has in a race against Carl Lewis.

The answer, of course, is Larry Bird, who's no doubt mindful that stranger things have happened — Frank Selvy's missed jumper in 1952, Don Nelson's lucky bounce shot in '69, James Worthy's pass in '84. And it probably hasn't escaped him that no matter how prohibitive a favorite the Lakers may be, the record in these series still has a decided Boston bent: Celtics 8, Lakers 1.

Do you think Bird cares that, given the shape they're in, the Celtics would probably be better cast in Hollywood as patients on St. Elsewhere than in Ingledwood as NBA finalists?

"I'm not conceding anything," said the only Celtic big man, outside of Greg Kite, who can stand on his own two feet without at least one foot threatening to quit on him.

"I'll take them as far as I can take them . . . We felt last year that nobody could beat us. This year, I'm sure the Lakers feel the same way. . . . That's a great way to feel, let me tell you."

The Lakers have grounds to feel as if they're in a no-win situation. If they beat the Celtics, especially if they crush the Celtics, it will be said that it wasn't a fair test; that the Celtics' battered bodies could take no more.

And should the Lakers lose, they will be accused of being even more over-rated than Bird was.

"It is tough, no question," said

Magic Johnson, responding to that scenario. "They're using injuries and the whole thing."

"But we know they're going to be ready. There's no way they're not going to be ready" for the world championship.

They shoot horses, don't they; but they obviously don't shoot Celtics, no matter how crippled. The Milwaukee Bucks couldn't do it. Neither could the Detroit Pistons, even though both the Bucks and Pistons extended Boston to seven games each.

Boston center Robert Parish may take a fall every time he goes up for a rebound, but he has yet to take a dive, despite a severely sprained ankle. Celtic forward, Kevin McHale will spend his summer with his right foot in a cast, but the plaster will have to defer to the parquet of the Boston Garden floor.

Bill Walton's condition, has deteriorated from day-to-day to step-to-step, but as long as he keeps putting on a uniform, there's always a chance he will play something other than a 7-foot red-headed cheerleader.

"They're tough and they're gutsy"

Too small

Raft River back Fredrickson has seen a lot of words eaten

Editor's note: The 10th annual Magic Valley East-West Shrine All-Star Football Game will be played Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Twin Falls' Bruin Stadium.

By MICHAEL VANAUDELN
Times-News writer

Magic Valley All-Stars Game

BURLEY — There was a time, way back before the Raft River Trojans won the Idaho Class A-4 high school football championship, that running back Steve Fredrickson knew his team was headed that championship season.

It happened in Kimberly, home of the Hornets. Both opponents were A-3 schools and the chances of tiny Raft River knocking off either one of them were slim.

— But it turned out to be easy. In the opening game of the season, the Trojans blew out the Bulldogs 25-6 in Kimberly.

"That was a big game," said Fredrickson, taking a break from the East squad's practice for the 10th annual Magic Valley East-West Shrine Football Game. "We were starting to wonder then just how good we might be."

Fredrickson scored a touchdown that day, and along with backfield mate Wayne Anderson, Raft River produced a running game that the Bulldogs couldn't defend.

The next week, Raft River took its ground attack to Declo and stung the Hornets 29-6.

Beginning the season with two victories over the larger schools signaled numerous things to future Trojan opponents. Oakley High School football coach Dan Tompkins said, "These two wins made us look very seriously at Raft River. Beating Kimberly and Declo on the road is something that would wake anybody up."

But for Fredrickson, the Idaho Statesman's Class A-4 player of the year, those wins meant one thing — "that we could go all the way."

Before the season started, "he said we were all a little unsure of what kind of team we had and how we'd do. But beating Kimberly and Declo really inspired us. It was then that we knew we could win the state championship."

The only blemish on their otherwise clean season was a 13-12 loss to Mackay, but it set up the power and determination that led the Trojans to the state championship. And in the first game of that championship drive, Raft River's soul came from Fredrickson.

Going into that game, against the Trojans, he knew they would be without quarterback Rob Hill, leaving the chores to their top rusher — Fredrickson.

"I didn't like it (playing QB)," he said. "I felt a lot of pressure. And I wasn't sure how I'd do. I will never do that again."

And that's good news for anyone trying to defend a Fredrickson quarterback team. The senior combined for 163 yards (67 passing, 96 rushing) to lead Raft River to a 17-0 win. And even though he was playing out of position, Fredrickson might have just played in the biggest game of his life.

He did a good job when we needed him," said Raft River's Coach Tom Harrison. "He had only three days of practice as a quarterback. He didn't know a lot of what he was doing but he did the job very, very, very well."

Part of the key to Fredrickson's success that day came because Harrison changed his offense from a balanced attack to a running attack built around the veer. It worked, although, Fredrickson to this day doesn't feel running from the QB position is an advantage.

"There's no chance to build up any speed," he said. "You're right there and you just have to belly out. I didn't like it."

Sklavos put his title on the line in rematch

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Carl Sklavos, world flyweight king of the International Sports Karate Federation, departed his Twin Falls home Monday morning en route for his first title defense as champion.

The 23-year-old Twin Falls warehouseman will be facing Jerry Clarke from Palm Harbor, Fla. in a 12-round world championship bout at Harrah's Club in South Lake Tahoe, Nev. Sklavos won the title on a 12-round unanimous decision over Clarke in March at the bout held at the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium.

Plans for a non-title match to highlight a return card at CSI on June 6 fell through when Sklavos' manager, Kyrin Turner of Denver, signed a contract with ESPN for the Nevada location.

That same turn of events may have influenced Clarke's decision to remain in the flyweight division rather than climb back into what, for him, is the more natural lightweight division. According to Sklavos' trainer Gene Starr that decision could be a mistake.

"Clarke fought his hardest last time against Carl," Starr said. "He didn't want to lose the title. Carl is in the best shape of his career while Jerry has to keep off those extra 12 pounds. A guy not only loses water weight but muscle mass under those conditions."

"This fight should be similar to the first," Starr continued. "But the altitude difference between Florida and Tahoe is even more pronounced. That it was for Clarke here. With his strength and fighting ability, Carl should have the edge all the way in defending his title."

The fight, one of two championship battles on the card, should begin around 10 p.m. M.T. ESPN will telecast the fight at a later date.

Niekros become winningest brace of brothers in major league history

CLEVELAND (AP) — Some records belong in the record books. This one belongs in the family album.

"It's helping make the history of the Niekros family. This was important for Niekros everywhere, all my relatives," Phil Niekro said Monday night after he pitched the Cleveland Indians' first home win of the season, 9-6, giving Niekro and his brother Joe a major-league record 50 combined career victories.

The Niekros had shared the record at 49 with Gaylord and Jim Perry since May 23, when Joe pitched the New York Yankees past California 3-0.

"Joe was pitching with me, and my father was out there pitching with me," Niekro said. "And I know my mother was thinking of all the times Joe and I were out in the back yard playing catch with our dad, learning the knuckleball."

Niekro, who won despite nearly blowing a 7-1 lead and despite being lifted during the sixth inning, was greeted afterward on the field by his brother. "My father's health prevented him from making the three-hour trip from Lansing, Ohio, where the Niekros grew up."

"I thought my mother was home holding hands with my dad, listening to the game," said Niekro, 48. "I had no idea she was in the stands."

Niekro, 35, beat Detroit despite nearly blowing a 7-1 lead. He allowed six runs, five of them earned, on nine hits in 5½ innings and left the game ahead 7-6. It was his first victory since May 1, ending a string of five straight losses.

Niekro was making his second try at setting the record. He lost Wednesday night to Boston 1-0 despite pitching a four-hitter. Joe lost Saturday night to Oakland in his only attempt at breaking the mark.

Phil Niekro's victory was his 311th, tying him with Gaylord Perry for 11th place on the all-time list. Joe Niekro, with 216 victories, is one ahead of Jim Perry.

Joe and Phil each attended the other's first attempt at breaking the record, but Joe was not at Monday's game because it was his day to throw-in-between starts.

"We did something we hope will stand for a while. If you can go out there and get guys out, it doesn't matter if you're 40 or 25," said Joe, 42.

When the Cleveland game ended, a note of congratulations to the Niekros was posted on the scoreboard at Yankee Stadium. Joe Niekro came out of the dugout and acknowledged the cheers.

Foot injury deprives Hailey's Bernhagen of shot at NCAA outdoor high jump record

By The Times-News

STANFORD, Calif. — Hailey Bernhagen qualified for this week's NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships almost three weeks ago, but won't be competing in the meet in Baton Rouge, La., this week.

The Stanford University junior, who won the NCAA indoor women's high jump title last winter with a NCAA record leap of 6 feet, 5½ inches, twisted her foot in a meet in Modesto, Calif., two weeks ago and won't be able to compete for a couple of more weeks.

Bernhagen had jumped 6-2½ earlier this spring in qualify for the outdoor nationals, a mark which would have been at or near the top of the qualifying marks for the NCAA outdoor finals.

LISA BERNHAGEN Set indoor record

Stanford Sports Information Director Bob Vesper said Monday doctors had advised Bernhagen to stay off her foot for a couple of weeks. She is expected to be ready to compete in the TAC (The Athletic Congress) nationals in San Jose, Calif., in mid-June.

Unless someone does better at the NCAA outdoor meet this week, Bernhagen will go into TAC meet with the best jump. Coincidentally, recent College of Southern Idaho graduate Jerry Johnson, who like Bernhagen is the U.S. junior record holder in the high jump, will be the favorite in the men's event at the TAC national meet. Johnson, from San Pedro, Calif., is bound for Arizona State University next year on a basketball scholarship.

Bernhagen is a 1994 graduate of Wood River High School.

Gooden will go for Mets Friday

OLD ORCHARD BEACH, Maine (AP) — The evidence was in: six innings pitched, no runs, one base hit. The verdict of the peers was unanimous: Dwight Gooden was ready.

The New York Mets ace right-hander, scheduled to make his first major league start of the year against Pittsburgh Friday night at Shea Stadium, struck out 10 and walked three in his final tuneup with the Tidewater Tides.

The same Maine Guides who had hit Gooden hard May 21 failed to advance a runner past second base in Sunday's 10-inning International League rematch. After a brief spell of wildness in the second inning, Gooden was dominant, striking out five of the next seven batters and retiring nine straight.

"Last Thursday, I knew he wasn't going to return to the mound, but I'm sure I think he's definitely ready to pitch," Guides third baseman Greg Jelks said. "I've seen him go on TV."

NL: Cards whip Reds, go 3 up on Cubs

CINCINNATI (AP) — St. Louis second baseman Tom Herr relished the opportunity to hit with the game on the line.

With runners on second and third and two outs in the 10th inning, Cincinnati chose to pitch to Herr instead of walk him and load the bases for Jose Oquendo.

"I've been a pretty good hitter with men on base in my career," Herr said after he hit a two-run double Monday to give the St. Louis Cardinals an 8-6 victory over the Cincinnati Reds. "I drove in 10 runs one year (1985). I hope more than I want to mess with that, and he'd go after the other guy. When he didn't I thought, 'Good. Make it happen right there.'"

Herr was surprised that Reds Manager Pete Rose chose to pitch to him instead of giving an intentional walk to set up a force at first base.

"If we continue to face the more than Oquendo," Rose said, "I didn't want the bases loaded."

Herr pulled the first pitch from Franco down the third baseline for a home run, but he only walked the third and fourth runs allowed this season by the left-handed reliever.

It was an improbable ending to a stunning St. Louis comeback. The Reds had a chance at a 6-5 victory slip away in the ninth when shortstop Barry Larkin muffed a potential game-ending grounder to let Herr score and send the game to the tenth inning.

"We really shouldn't have won this game," Herr said.

The Cardinals started their winning rally with Ozzie Smith's lead-off single against reliever Tom Herr. Son, 1-2 Smith took second on Robinson's errant pickoff throw, and Jack Clark drove a one-out walk. Both runners advanced on Willie McGee's ground out, bringing in Herr. McGee's first pitch was a breaking ball.

"He left it up a little bit," Herr said. "I wasn't particularly looking for that pitch, just trying to be aggressive and make contact."

The victory increased St. Louis' ground out to three games in the National League East.

Todd Worrell, 1-2, gave up one hit over the last two innings to get the win.

The Cardinals tied it in the ninth when Herr singled off Robinson, moved up on a sacrifice and a ground out, and scored on Larkin's error on a grounder by Curt Ford.

The Reds had taken a 6-5 lead after wiping out the Cardinals' early four-run lead on the strength of Nick Escey's triple and two-run homer. Tracy Jones led off the Reds' seventh with a solo homer, 1-8 sixth, off reliever Rick Horton for the 6-5 advantage.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Althea Sanchez, the San Francisco left-hander who sat out last season to recover from shoulder surgery, pitched two-hit ball for seven innings and was supported by five home runs as the San Francisco Giants beat the Philadelphia Phillies 9-1 Monday night.

Chris Speier hit two solo homers, fifth and sixth of the season. Speier, who had been out of the lineup, homered off starter Don Carson, 3-4.

Speier and Chili Davis homered in the seventh off Tom Hume. Davis' three-run shot was his eighth homer of the year. All the Giants' runs came on homers.

Hammaker, 3-1, held the Phillies scoreless until the sixth when Steve Lita allowed Jeff Stone to score with two outs.

Cruz's homer, his fifth, came on a 1-0 pitch of Frank DiPino, 1-1, and sailed into the first row of the left-field bleachers. Jerry Anderson, 4-3, got the final three outs for his ninth save.

Houston starter Danny Darwin took a lead and a foul batter from the class AAA Iowa on Monday, led off with a single for his first major league hit. After Darwin ran the bases, he was replaced by Julio Solano.

Solano got Matthews to fly out, but allowed single to Dave Martinez and walked Manny Trillo to load the bases. On a 1-1 count, Dawson homered to center field. It was Darwin's 18th homer and second grand slam of the season.

Kevin Bass gave the Astros a 2-1 lead with a run-scoring single in the third and hit a three-run homer in the seventh.

Only Hatcher opened Houston's seventh by drawing a walk and stole second as Bill Doran struck out. After Phil Garner struck out, Glenn Davis ran the count to 2-0 before he followed with his homer.

The Astros took a 1-0 lead in the first when Hatcher doubled, went to third on a sacrifice by Don Heston, and scored on Garner's sacrifice fly. Dawson tied the score in the bottom of first with his 15th homer.

Seaver could follow soon after

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets, whose pitching staff has been decimated by injuries, are talking to Tom Seaver about returning to the mound for the third time.

"Obviously, there's some substance to it. But we have no comment," Seaver's agent, Matt Merola, said Monday. "See if the Mets have anything to say."

The Mets also declined comment, but did not deny the two sides have talked.

Seaver, 42, became a free agent when he did not re-sign with the Boston Red Sox after last year. The three-time Cy Young winner has a 311-205 record and 2.85 earned-run average for 23 major-league seasons. He has 3,640 lifetime strikeouts.

Seaver began last year with the Chicago White Sox and was traded to Boston on June 29. He had a 7-13 record overall, including 5-7 with a 3.80 ERA for the Red Sox. Seaver did not pitch in the American League playoffs or the World Series loss to the Mets because of a knee injury.

AL: Seattle extends streak to 4, closes to 1 1/2 games of KC

TORONTO (AP) — Scott Bankhead was glad to see the end of May. It's a new month and he's back on the mound.

"Yeah, it's June — a new month," Bankhead said Monday night with a smile after holding Toronto in check on four hits through seven innings as the Seattle Mariners blanked the Blue Jays 2-0 on a pair of unearned runs.

Bill Wilkinson pitched two perfect innings to help him win his second win, ending Toronto's three-game winning streak.

"I had a good fastball tonight and you got to have a good fastball to make all the other pitches work," said Bankhead, who stumbled through a 1-2 May after starting out in April winning four of five decisions. He improved his record to 6-3 with the victory.

Part of Bankhead's problems last month was a health problem — an infected rectum.

When we get that kind of pitching we're going to win some ballgames."

The Mariners — a pickering on American League East clubs this season on the road, Seattle now 5-1 on its current road trip, with a four-game winning streak. The Mariners are 11-3 on the road against AL opponents, 18-13 overall. Seattle moved to within 1 1/2 games of the pace-setting Kansas City Royals in the AL West.

"If we continue to get good pitching, you know we're going to win some games because we've got the bats," said Bankhead.

Bankhead walked one, struck out four and retired 11 straight batters at one stretch. His walk to Manny Lee with one out in the sixth was the first by a Seattle pitcher in 28 1/2 innings.

Seattle hit its sixth home run Monday night, helping Bill Wegman and Mike Laker Braves to a 2-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Suevm's 400-foot solo homer to left field in the fifth made it 3-0 against Charlie Leibrandt, who had pitched one hit against the Brewers on May 16. Leibrandt, 6-4, gave up nine hits and two earned runs in 6 1/2 innings.

Milwaukee won its third straight game and first in four meetings with the Royals this season.

Wegman, 4-5, allowed two runs on seven hits in 7 1/2 innings. He struck out five and walked one. Dan Plesac pitched the final 1 1/2 innings for his 12th save.

and they will walk on Dan Plesac make excuses," said Mychal Thompson, who made his Laker debut against the Celtics in a win at the Forum in February, when he started in the second half of a two-game, regular-season sweep of Boston.

"Every time they talk about their injuries, it's because the press brings it up. They don't walk around with that kind of talk. I'm hurt on their chests."

The Lakers, however, are looking to unload that chip on their shoulder. They have carried that chip since last spring, when Houston took them out in five games in the Western Conference finals.

There is no one who they would rather hit against than Boston.

"I love to play Boston — I want 'em," Magic Johnson said.

"Last year when I went to the playoffs, I had a sore left knee, and people in Boston kept coming up to me and saying, 'We wish you all was here. It's not the same.'"

Oakland scored twice in the eighth and broke a 6-6 tie. Davis led off with single against Ken Dixon, 3-4, and moved to third on a single by Luis Polonia, who extended his hitting streak to 17 games.

Phillips' RBI groundout put the Athletics ahead and another run scored on shortstop Cal Ripken's error.

Minnesota 9 Boston 5

BOSTON (AP) — Tom Brunansky (two homers) and Dan Gladden and Gary Gaetti (one apiece Monday night) as the Minnesota Twins scored six runs in the seventh inning for a 9-5 victory over Roger Clemens and the Boston Red Sox.

With one out in the seventh, Gladden snapped a 3-1 tie with his second home run, a fly ball just inside the right-field foul pole.

Clemens, who entered the game 8-0 lifetime against Minnesota, then struck out Gary Gagne, but Kirby Puckett tripped and Kent Hrbek followed with a run-scoring single. Gaetti then hit his 13th homer, knocking Clemens out of the game.

and another reason was Coach Harrison.

"He really taught us how to work hard," said Fredrickson of the second-year coach, who came to Raft River from an A-3 school, Ririe.

One of the moves Harrison made in his first year was to move Fredrickson from flanker to running back. That move paid off in bunches. By season's end, Fredrickson had rushed for over 1,000 yards and the Trojans had one of the best ground attacks in the state.

At the Ballpark expanded

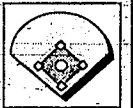

Editor's note: At the Ballpark, The Times-News' three-year-old weekly summer page covering adult softball and youth baseball and softball in the Magic Valley, will be just part of the story this summer.

The feature will be expanded this year to include a separate weekly report on adult softball, published every Tuesday, and a second weekly page on youth softball and baseball. That will be published every Friday, beginning June 12.

In addition to weekly reports on games, highlights and statistics, At the Ballpark and its new cousin, The Kids' Game, will include features and profiles of good individual players and outstanding performances.

Coaches and league secretaries who wish to include statistics in each week's pages should contact Ron Gates at 733-0936. Deadline for At the Ballpark is 8 p.m. Monday; deadline for The Kids' Game is 9 p.m. Thursday.

Critics to the contrary, Rawlings says it makes balls just like it used to

By R.B. FALLSTROM
The Associated Press

No one can argue that because once again, batters are on a home-run binge this season.

ST. LOUIS — He's not quite Galileo, mind you, and the Gateway Arch is not the Leaning Tower of Pisa, but Whitey Herzog figures he can prove that not all baseballs are equal.

Through last Sunday's games, major league batters had 998 homers, an increase of 178 — or 18 percent — over the same period last season. But Smith insists the baseball is not soiled up.

The St. Louis Cardinals manager takes the cores from two baseballs, one made last year and one made this year, and drops them from eye level.

Smith said the baseballs made by Rawlings have not changed since 1977, when the St. Louis-based company began supplying balls to the major leagues.

The one made this year bounces at least a foot higher.

"If it bounces that much higher in a five-foot drop, how about when a guy hits it hard?" Herzog said. "It's like a super ball. I've done it 100 times, and every time it's the same thing. It's arizing."

Smith said the baseballs made by Rawlings have not changed since 1977, when the St. Louis-based company began supplying balls to the major leagues.

Amazing is not the word Rawlings Sports Goods Co. would use to describe it, Rawlings spokesman M. Scott Smith says. Herzog's experiments are "pretty unscientific" and his findings premature, even though the Cardinals are well ahead of last year's home-run rate.

Smith said each baseball undergoes more than 100 tests before it is deemed fit for play. One of the principal tests consists of shooting the balls out of an air cannon at 85 feet per second against a surface made of white ash, the wood from which bats are manufactured.

"I think it happened last year when Wally Joyner hit something like 15 home runs in April, Joyner actually hit his eighth home run on May 8. He was a rookie and everybody said, 'Wow, the ball must be lively.'"

"There's always somebody hitting more home runs."

Pat Labrum of the Twin Falls Department of Parks and Recreation schedules games, sites for the new league

Teens' co-ed league planned

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A new slowpitch softball league for high-school age youth from throughout the Magic Valley is being organized by the Twin Falls Department of Parks and Recreation.

"After discussing the number of 15- to 18-year-olds involved in other programs, we felt we should offer a new program for young adults," said Pat Labrum of Parks and Rec.

"The minimum age to play in either the men's or co-ed leagues is 18 and a girl must be at least 15 to compete in the women's leagues. These rules eliminate two possibilities for young women and, unless they compete at the Legion level of baseball, all for the young men."

"The minimum age to play in either the men's or co-ed leagues is 18 and a girl must be at least 15 to compete in the women's leagues. These rules eliminate two possibilities for young women and, unless they compete at the Legion level of baseball, all for the young men."

Labrum, who acts as president for the four-division Twin Falls Co-ed Slowpitch Softball League and personally competes in both that and the women's association, went on to explain that the American Legion program only involves approximately 40 boys with a like number of young women in that same age bracket playing for various local women's teams.

"With co-ed softball we can reach both sexes and offer them a program," she said. "We're not trying to take anything away from the women's or any other league. We just want to offer something for people in that particular age range."

Competition in the new division, an Amateur Softball Association-sanctioned subdivision of the Twin Falls adult program, has been scheduled to begin June 19 with three games a night to be played each Friday for approximately nine weeks. Games will be scheduled on Diamond No. 3 at Harmon Park every hour beginning at 6:45 p.m. and, if a larger-than-anticipated league should develop, can be expanded to include the playing fields at South Park.

Entry is open to youngsters from all areas of the Magic Valley and, while several teams are presently forming in Twin Falls, the first delegation to officially join the fold represents Kimberly Parks and Rec hopes to have a minimum of six teams entered by time for the season opens.

A nominal sponsor fee of $75 will be charged and player participation fees have been set at $20. Application can be made or further information obtained in person or by calling Pat at Parks and Rec, 733-0880, extensions 265 or 266, or 734-5369.

Lendl narrowly avoids upset by Nystrom at French Open

PARIS (AP) — Ivan Lendl woke up from his nightmare just in time Monday.

Write the defending champion finished off Jaan-Lennert Nystrom in front of the quarterfinals of the French Open, half of the women's semifinal draw was filled, with Stefli Graf and Gabriela Sabatini winning to set up a meeting of 17-year-olds.

Leading 4-0 in the fourth set when the match resumed after being halted by darkness Sunday night, the world's No. 1 player completed a 2-6, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4, 6-2 victory that could have been achieved in four sets but instead lasted five.

"I dreamed about it last night," said Lendl, who had 11 set points in the third set against Nystrom on Sunday but missed them all.

"When I woke up, I said, 'Gee, what a nightmare.'—Then I realized the dream was true and it really was a nightmare."

Lendl meets Andres Gomez, who did not play Monday, in the last eight.

Also gaining the quarterfinals of the men's event were two-time Wimbledon champion Boris Becker of West Germany, Mats Wilander of Sweden, Jimmy Connors and Yannick Noah of France.

West Germany's Graf, unbeaten for six months, charged into the semifinals with a 6-6, 6-1 success over No. 6 Manuela Maleeva for her victory in a row.

Graf, the No. 2 seed, plays the other teen-age star of women's tennis, No. 7 Sabatini of Argentina. She ended the run of Spain's unseeded 15-year-old Arantxa Sanchez, the youngest player in the main draw, 6-4, 6-0.

Becker, the No. 2 men's seed and seeking his first clay-court title, rallied to beat unseeded Jimmy Arias, 5-7, 6-3, 6-2, 6-0, gaining revenge for a defeat by the American in April at Monte Carlo.

Wilander, seeded fourth, knocked out France's Tarik Benhabib, 5-7, 6-1, 6-3, but Noah kept the French flag flying.

Higher oil prices

Long disruption of Persian Gulf flow would have that effect

By JOHN C. GIVEN
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Western Europe and Japan are more dependent on Persian Gulf oil than the United States, but a prolonged disruption of shipments from the tense region would drive prices up for all, industry analysts say.

They doubt such a blockade is likely to result from the war between Iran and Iraq, at least in the near term. They note the producing nations need the oil revenue to keep their own economies afloat, and cite the strong interest the United States and Soviet Union both have in ensuring that the "flow" continues unabated.

One sign of that attitude was the mild reaction shown by oil markets in the wake of the recent missile attack on the USS Stark. Prices have ranged between $19 and $20 per 42-gallon barrel for nearly a month; about $1 higher than they were in April.

Still, as the decline of crude reserves outside the Persian Gulf and the possibility of a Persian Gulf disruption cannot be ruled out.

"People think that if we drew on the Strategic Petroleum Reserve and cranked up our production, it would be no big deal," said Paul Mikot, who watches oil companies for the Salomon Brothers Inc. securities firm.

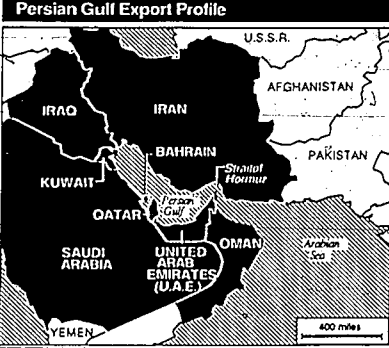

"But the world markets don't work that way. There's only one pool of oil, and if there's a shortage, all consumer countries will be bidding against us — and up goes the price of oil," he said Friday.

The Strategic Petroleum Reserve is a supply of crude in Texas and Louisiana that is reserved to supply the nation in the event of future import interruptions. Started in 1977 in reaction to the 1973 oil embargo, the stockpile contained 524.5 million barrels as of Thursday, or more than 100 days' supply, federal officials said. The eventual goal is a reserve of 750 million barrels.

While the buffer it offers is small, Western Europe and Japan are far more dependent on the eight Persian Gulf producers for their petroleum needs.

In 1986, Japan relied on those shipments for 53.9 percent of its total oil needs, while Western Europe got 26.6 percent of its oil. The American Petroleum Institute says the United States is not as dependent on the gulf for just 5.7 percent of its oil, the Washington-based trade association says.

Market shows caution; signs turn upward

By CHET CURRIER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market showed no clear trend Monday in a cautious response to new signs of a stabilizing dollar and falling interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 10 points at its best level of the day, closed with a 3.34-point gain at 2,288.23.

"Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 149.24 million shares, against 153.50 million in the previous session.

Analysts said the currency and credit markets have generally steadied in the market's favor lately.

However, investors said, the White House as chairman of the Federal Reserve after his current term expires in August, provided that he wants to continue in the job.

But the dollar having steadied against leading foreign currencies of late, interest rates have turned downward, halting a rise that began in early spring.

On Monday prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, managed some modest gains.

Another apparent plus for the markets was a Wall Street Journal report that Paul Volcker is likely to be appointed as chairman of the Federal Reserve after his current term expires in August, provided that he wants to continue in the job.

Volcker in high regard, and fear that a change of leadership at the central bank might lead to at least a short period of turbulence in the markets.

Analysts also noted that volume of stock trading has been sluggish lately, suggesting a persistent mood of uncertainty among market participants.

Losers among the blue chips included DuPont, down 1 1/2 at 111 1/2; Eastman Kodak, down 1 1/2 at 78 1/2; International Business Machines, down 3 1/2 at 159 1/2; and General Electric, 5/8 lower at 51 1/2.

Uceel, which agreed to be acquired by Computer Associates in an exchange of stock, jumped 1 1/2 to 23 1/2. The company approved a plan to sell more than 100 general hospitals to an employee group.

Circus Circus Enterprises picked up 1 1/2 to 26 1/2. The company reported that it had approved a plan to sell more than 100 general hospitals to an employee group.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 9 to 8 on the NYSE, with 810 up, 729 down and 417 unchanged. The exchange's composite index closed at 153.48, unchanged from Friday.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 173.88 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell .39 to 336.35, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 27.29 to 1,415.01.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market lost 1.53 to 415.01. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 326.32, down .07.

past two decades have helped preserve some degree of independence from Persian Gulf sources.

But experts agree that the balance will soon shift in the direction of OPEC, whose members include the eight Persian Gulf producers except Oman and who account for four out of every five barrel of total reserves, according to the U.S. Energy Information Administration.

In a recently published long-term forecast of energy markets, the agency outlined a hypothetical six-month disruption of the Strait of Hormuz, beginning Jan. 1, 1995 — when, under normal conditions, it is predicting prices to be around $35 a barrel.

Under the scenario — which it said was considered highly unlikely — the United States responds by drawing down the Strategic Petroleum Reserve at maximum levels while other non-Communist, non-OPEC countries do likewise with their own stocks.

The projected result: a net disruption of a million-to-9 million barrels per day that could increase oil prices to between $55 and $90 per barrel, depending on how markets respond.

But would it happen?

John H. Lichtblau, president of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, said he believed the Persian Gulf nations have learned it is not in their interests to disrupt supplies.

"If oil sales were not available, the Middle East economies would fall apart," he said. "As for Iran and Iraq, if they couldn't export their oil the war would probably end next week because they wouldn't have the money to pay for it."

But if, for example, something happened to stop production in Saudi Arabia — which holds 25 percent of the world's reserves — "we'd have to do something," he said.

Round-the-clock, blanket surveillance of major railroad yards is required to prevent any disruption of the largest rail yard in its system between North Platte, Neb., and Portland, Ore.

Since the unexpected inspection, Union Pacific has put nine employees previously laid off back to work in a car repair shop and nine back in a locomotive facility here, according to Dick Tincher, UPRR spokesman in Salt Lake City.

and are more serious than minor defects, Walsh said. However, most of the defects found were minor, he said. They inspected 1,088 cars and 120 locomotives in three days.

"No fines were immediately levied. We called a lot of our concerns to the attention of Union Pacific Railroad. We talked to some of the top officers," Walsh said. "We have assured us they would take whatever action is necessary to improve conditions in Pocatello."

Humana obtains IMC in $40 million buyout

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Humana Inc. Monday paid $40 million for most of the assets of insolvent International Medical Centers Inc., the nation's largest Medicare-certified health maintenance organization.

Wayne T. Smith, executive vice president for Humana, said the ownership change would not interrupt service and Humana automatically would assume the contracts of IMC's 170,000 commercial and Medicare subscribers.

Circuit Judge William Gary late Sunday night approved the buyout by the Louisville, Ky.-based national hospital chain.

The judge two weeks ago appointed the Florida Insurance Department's receiver for Miami-based IMC following an audit indicating IMC had lost $18 million last year and a grand jury indictment of its former president.

Miguel C. Recreer Jr., 49, was in custody on charges of bribery, distribution of false and conspiracy with intent to defraud. He obtained a contract to provide health services to a hotel and restaurant employees union.

The insurance Department recommended acceptance of Humana's proposal, one of its subsidiaries. Because it was the only one that could assure the Health Care Financing Administration.

Ted Weinberg, director of prepaid health care compliance for the HCFR, told the judge at a hearing last Friday that the agency would reverse its plans to cancel IMC's $30 million Medicare contract on July 1 if the Humana deal was approved.

While the court is not overly impressed with the proposal of Humana, the proposal is the only viable plan available to meet the present needs of the enrollees and to establish a fund to address the claims of the numerous creditors," Gary wrote.

Federal inspectors find rail car, engine defects

POCATELLO (AP) — Federal Railroad Administration inspectors found safety defects in 214 freight cars and 92 locomotives in Union Pacific's railroad yards here in inspection at the end of April, officials said.

"Six of those locomotives were removed from service until they were repaired," Joseph Walsh, associate safety administrator with the FRA in Washington, said. "While we were there, we filed 10 violations on equipment and cars, and 26 violations on locomotives."

Violations are major infractions that could mean fines for violators.

Walsh said that care not members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, oil discoveries in the North Sea, Mexico, Alaska and elsewhere over the had noticed instances where railroad cars throughout the Union Pacific system hadn't been inspected properly and traced the problem back to Pocatello, Idaho, Division headquarters for UPR.

However, he said the inspection wasn't done because of any specific incident.

Walsh said railroad mergers and dramatic changes in operations prompted his agency to initiate surprise, blanket inspections to better identify defects.

Simpson a month ago said that Union Pacific has one of the best safety records in the industry.

Check out with extreme care the withdrawal and refund policy. What if your daughter decides to go to a trade school? Or not attend college at all? Some plans reimburse just the face value of your investment, others return some interest minus service charges.

Decide whether or not you want to lock your child into one school or a set of institutions. Although it may make you feel more secure, how can you choose a college for your newborn? What are the provisions if your child opts for a different college?

Understand what you are getting. If the plan covers only tuition, realize that in many cases room, board and books can actually exceed the price of tuition. Do not be lured into a false sense of security. Realistically you may have to save for a larger amount than your investment in the plan.

Check whether the interest earned is taxable. This is an important point to consider. The Michigan plan, for example, is waiting for IRS approval granting tax-exempt status.

Perhaps most important: Can you earn more on your money elsewhere without locking yourself into a situation that may not be right for your future needs? State legislatures are beginning to look into other vehicles, such as savings bonds for college or family education accounts similar to IRAs for education. In the meantime, explore the possibilities on your own.

Bottom line: Saving now to pay for education is essential. As institutions of higher learning and state governments look into alternatives, you, too, must explore your alternatives and your growing options with caution.

You can pay for college, then attend

In addition to their diplomas, many members of the Class of 1987 will leave college with huge loans to repay.

Escalating costs of higher education are deeply disturbing many parents. Some distasteful projections estimate the price of a four-year stay at an independent institution by the year 2000 (less than 15 years away), at more than $100,000.

If the prospect of affording education in the future causes you to wonder, you may find comfort in the variety of creative proposals being offered by state legislatures and public and private institutions.

Alternative financing solutions are the growing trend, and proposals range from amendments to the terms of the plan. But intriguing as many of these programs are, be cautious before deciding a particular plan is right for you and your child.

Some of these plans: Pay a predetermined amount of money today, and a school or group of institutions will guarantee your tuition paid in full by the time your child reaches college age.

The result: You hedge your bets against inflation by guaranteeing the price of your child's education today. You would have to incur by the year 2000, 15 years from now.

Many states are exploring these plans, also known as "tuition futures." Legislation has been proposed in 30 states, but only three states (Michigan, Wyoming and Tennessee) have enacted prepaid tuition plans. None of these programs is in operation yet, reports the Education Commission of the States (ECS).

A pioneering state program, the Michigan Education Trust (MET), enables parents to prepay four years' of undergraduate tuition for a child at any of the public colleges or universities as well as 29 community colleges in the state.

Based on today's cost for four years of tuition at a Michigan school, the current estimated one-time payment for a newborn would be about $6,800 to $4,500. Participants may also opt for periodic payments.

A trust would be established to pool the parents' contributions and make investments. This trust would then pay for the child's tuition once he or she reaches college age and is accepted at a Michigan school.

Several private colleges also have adopted prepayment plans. Duquesne University, the first school to offer such a program in the spring of 1985, has had 582 families sign up so far, says Lois Felino, the school's associate director of alumni relations. Potential students range from newborns to high school sophomores, she notes.

Making a one-time payment to ensure your child's future certainly sounds appealing, but it may not always be the simplest.

Since the increase to the cost of tuition has outdistanced the rise in inflation in the 1980s and '90s, federal assistance has declined in real terms. These programs have gained attention, notes William Hoffman of the College Board.

Before you sign up, consider the following: Typically, these programs do not ensure your child's admission to the school. "The hope is that parents are being guaranteed a service, but what if your child is not admitted?" warns Alma McGuinness of ECS.

Lebanon prime minister killed by bomb in his attache case

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A bomb planted in Prime Minister Rashid Karami's attache case blew up during a helicopter flight Monday, killing the veteran Moslem politician.

Mourners carry coffin of Prime Minister Rashid Karami.

The co-pilot took the controls from the wounded pilot and landed the shattered aircraft.

Thirteen people — Karami, aides and crew — were aboard the French-built Puma. Interior Minister Abdullah Rassi was among the four wounded, all of whom were released after treatment.

The assassination of the Syrian-backed Karami, 65, Lebanon's longest-serving prime minister, further dimmed prospects for an early end to the sectarian violence that has battered this nation for 12 years.

A statement from the presidential palace said President Amin Gemayel chose Salim Hoss, the 59-year-old education and social affairs minister, as acting premier. It said Hoss, a Sunni Moslem like Karami, had accepted the appointment.

A man identifying himself only as Capt. Hammoud claimed responsibility for Karami's assassination on behalf of the hitherto unknown "Lebanese Secret Army." But police said the telephone call appeared to be a hoax.

"Who is not going to spare any Lebanese politician who betrays his country and people," said the caller in Arabic.

The civil war has destroyed most of the central government's authority, and only last month Karami sought to resign from a job that retained little power. But the politicians have clung to the forms of a constitutional government in an effort to avert total anarchy.

Karami, a Sunni Moslem, was prime minister 10 times in 32 years.

and was backed by Syria, the main power broker in Lebanon.

He boarded the helicopter at Kubeh army base in Tripoli, his hometown in north Lebanon, at 9:30 a.m. after a Friday reception at his summer residence in Bqaa Sefrine.

Senior army officers said the attache case was lying on his lap when the bomb exploded 10 minutes after takeoff.

One officer, close to an investigation launched on President Amin Gemayel's orders, said the explosion tore through Karami's abdomen and chest. "Death was instantaneous," he said.

The officers insisted on anonymity. An officer at army command called it a "premeditated assassination by a timebomb, or possibly a pressure bomb."

A military explosives expert, Warrant Officer Yousef Bitar, said the bomb weighed 300 grams (10½ ounces).

The blast tore a hole in the helicopter's left side. Maj. Antoine Bustani, the pilot, was wounded, and Maj. William Al-Jawad, co-pilot, landed the aircraft at Halat military airbase in the Christian heartland, the officers said.

The victims were rushed to St. Martin Hospital in Byblos, 19 miles north of Beirut, where Karami was pronounced dead.

An Army Commander, Gen. Michel Aoun placed the military on "maximum alert on all Lebanese territory." Army spokesmen said all leaves were canceled.

Karami 6th leader to be assassinated

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Prime Minister Rashid Karami on Monday became the sixth leading Lebanese politician to be assassinated since Lebanon's 1943 independence from France.

Killed were three Sunni Moslems, two Maronite Catholics and one Druse.

Prime Minister Riad Solh, 51, a Sunni, was shot to death by three assassins while visiting Amman, Jordan, in 1951.

Maarouf Saad, 46, a Sunni former Parliament member from Sidon, was killed by a gunman while leading a fishermen's demonstration Feb. 26, 1975. His assassination, which was blamed on Christians, was among the causes of the civil war that broke out April 13, 1975.

Kamal Jumblati, 62, a leader of the Druse community, was killed March 19, 1977, by unidentified gunmen who attacked his car in the Druse-controlled Chouf mountains. He was leader of the Nationalist Movement, an alliance of Palestinian, leftist and Moslem groups.

Tony Franjeh, 34, oldest son of former President

Suleiman Franjeh, a Maronite-Catholic, was slaughtered at his home in the Cedar Mountain resort of Ehden with his wife, their 7-year-old daughter, and 30 aides, on the Ehden Massacre, which became known as the Christian Phalange Party, which had been fighting the Franjehs' militia for supremacy in the Christian community.

President-elect Bashir Gemayel, 34, was killed by a bomb that demolished Phalange Party headquarters in east Beirut Sept. 14, 1982, three weeks after his election. Gemayel, a Maronite, was said to have been the mastermind behind Tony Franjeh's killing. Christian militiamen then massacred hundreds of Palestinians in west Beirut's Sabra and Shatila refugee camps Sept. 15-17, 1982.

Prime Minister-Rashid Karami, 65, was killed June 1 in an explosion aboard an army helicopter en route from north Lebanon to Beirut. A Sunni, Karami was serving as a prime minister for 10th time in 32 years. He had been a member of Parliament since 1951 and served as a minister in several Cabinets.

No explanation was given, but the move reflected fears the assassination would push Lebanon into further turmoil.

A short presidential statement said Gemayel, a Maronite Catholic, declared a week of mourning.

Karami's body was taken in an ambulance to Tripoli. About 15,000 people were waiting at the city's southern entrance to pay final respects to the man who had represented them in Parliament since 1951.

The mourners stopped the ambulance, brought out the coffin and carried it on their shoulders to his home, about 3 miles away.

"Allah akbar, Allah akbar!... God is great!" they chanted as the coffin was brought into his sixth-floor apartment in the Minna neighborhood near the Mediterranean sea.

The funeral was set for noon Tuesday, relatives said. Karami will be buried near his father, Abdul-Hamid Karami, Lebanon's prime minister in 1945.

Karami was the most prominent Lebanese official assassinated since a 1982 bombing killed President-elect Bashir Gemayel — brother of President Amin Gemayel.

Karami was prime minister when civil war broke out in 1975. Since then, 125,000 people have been killed. He said last month he was resigning because of the failure of his half-Christian, half-Moslem Cabinet to deal with the economic crisis arising from the war.

Daredevil youthful flight tests Soviet openness

By JOHN THOR DAHLBURG The Associated Press

MOSCOW — When a West German teen-age pilot landed his plane in Red Square and triggered a shock-up in the Soviet military, he provided an intriguing test of how the Kremlin's policy of openness really works.

In covering the story the Soviet media showed few signs of Mikhail S. Gorbachev's campaign for franker reporting but gave unmistakable indications of the tight restraints under which the Soviet press still works.

Handling of the story showed that despite the policy of "glasnost," or openness, state-run newspapers and television did not make the repeated statements issued by the nation's leadership.

Also, when faced with an unexpected event with international implications that might embarrass the Kremlin, as during the Chernobyl nuclear disaster last year, Soviet media still appear slow or unwilling to react.

Here is a chronology of the event and what the nation's press and television told the Soviet people.

About 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Matthias Rust, 19, arrived in his Cessna 172b over Red Square in the heart of Moscow after penetrating Soviet air defenses and flying more than 400 miles over Soviet territory from Finland.

News of his flight was reported by foreign media within hours. The Soviet media remained mum.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman told The Associated Press, "Unfortunately, we have no information about this."

By then, Rust's landing, which was witnessed by hundreds of people on Red Square, was a topic of conversation among clerks in Moscow stores and among maids working in housing complexes for foreigners.

After 8 p.m. Friday, more than 24 hours after Rust touched down, the official Tass news agency issued the first Soviet report on the incident.

"The flight of the plane above Soviet territory was not cut short,"

Females in crew sent to repair Stark

WASHINGTON (AP) — A destroyer tender sent to Bahrain to repair the USS Stark after an Iraqi missile attack has about 240 female sailors among its crew, but officials denied Monday the Navy was violating a law against sending women into combat areas.

The USS Acadia arrived in Bahrain on Monday under a special escort from a guided-missile cruiser temporarily detailed from the battle group supporting the aircraft carrier Constellation to make sure the tender arrived without incident.

The Navy declined comment when asked about the propriety of sending female sailors into the troubled Gulf region. But a ranking officer who requested anonymity denied the service was ignoring prohibitions against women serving in combat-related jobs.

"This is not a combat zone and the Acadia is not a combat ship," said the officer. "And she is not going to be steaming around the Gulf. She is going to be tied up in port in Bahrain working on the Stark."

The approximately 240 female officers and enlisted personnel, part of a crew of 1,300, the tender is expected to remain in Bahrain for at least six weeks repairing the Stark so that it can sail home.

Questions about the composition of the Acadia's crew arose Monday

Senators move to Kuwait

KUWAIT (AP) — Sens. John Glenn and John Warner came to Kuwait on Monday from Saudi Arabia, where they were reportedly told that the kingdom would prefer to see the Persian Gulf free of any superpower military intervention.

Glenn, D-Ohio, and Warner, R-Va., are on a country-a-day tour exploring U.S.-Arab action to protect Gulf shipping against hazards of the Iraq-Iran war. They are to visit Iraq today.

In Riyadh, the capital of Saudi Arabia, they held talks with Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Saud al-Faisal, U.S. diplomats in Kuwait said.

Arab diplomatic sources said Saud was presenting the thinking of King Fahd in expressing reluctance to see superpower muscle-flexing in the Gulf, though about 20 percent of the non-communist world's oil passes.

Western diplomats in Riyadh, with the revelation that a cruiser had been detailed to accompany the ship through the lower Gulf to Manama, Bahrain, where the Stark has been tied up since shortly after May 17 attack by an Iraqi jet fighter, which killed 37 sailors.

The use of such a large warship to escort a tender was unexpected, since smaller frigates and destroyers are used in the Gulf.

In the Iraqi missile attack, a 15-foot hole was ripped in the Stark's hull and several large forward compartments, including sleeping areas, were devastated by fire.

In related developments Monday: Sources said military investigators had begun asking questions about the failure of the Stark's officers to order certain precautionary maneuvers as the Iraqi warplane approached the ship.

The captain and three other Stark officers have been named subjects of the inquiry and assigned legal counsel, the sources said.

A ranking military officer said it now appeared the Navy might not begin providing escorts to Kuwaiti tankers flying the American flag until July. President Reagan has vowed to provide protection for oil tankers to safeguard the world's oil supplies.

Several other officials said they didn't expect decisions on how best to augment U.S. naval forces in the Gulf for several days.

Sources said the carrier Constellation, which would leave the Indian Ocean island of Diego Garcia in mid-week to sail for the northern Arabian Sea.

The carrier will not move into the Persian Gulf theater, but it will take up station not far away and maintain its jet fighters in a high state of readiness to support operations in the Gulf, the sources said.

Iranian charges denied

LONDON (AP) — Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe on Monday said Iranian charges against a British diplomat in Tehran that Britain will not withdraw its forces will not be indefinitely for an apology.

Pope's visit inspires Poles

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The presence of the Holy Father will strengthen Polish aspirations, will make Polish expectations more real.

The statement was prepared Sunday in a Roman Catholic church in Warsaw at a five-hour meeting organized by Wlodek and attended by about 50 Solidarity activists, Catholic lay people, cultural-figures and intellectuals.

Janusz Onyszkiewicz, Solidarity spokesman and one of the signers, gave the statement to Western reporters.

"It's our deep wish that the June pilgrimage of Pope John Paul II becomes an impulse for the resolution of the most difficult Polish problems in the name of the common good," said the statement signed by Walesa, and 62 leading intellectuals and activists.
