Greenspan to follow Volcker at Fed

Major shifts in policy not likely despite jolt

By TOM RAUM
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Although news that Paul Volcker is stepping down as chairman of the nation's central bank shocked the financial and political communities, major policy changes at the Federal Reserve under economist Alan Greenspan seem unlikely.

Analysts predicted Greenspan would follow many of the same conservative policies championed by Volcker, who in his eight-year tenure earned an international reputation as an inflation fighter.

Volcker's departure will mean that all seven members of the monetary policy-setting board will be Reagan appointees.

But economists generally suggested that Greenspan, a Republican who was President Ford's chief economist, has no less of a history of bowing to political pressures than did the fiercely independent Volcker, a nominal Democrat.

"He is even less likely to gun the money supply or move to an easier policy for political purposes," said Washington economist Michael K. Evans. "In 1976, when he was chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, he refused to spur the economy even though Ford was running for president."

However, while Volcker took a keen interest in international financial issues, engineering a landmark 1982 financial rescue package for Mexico, Greenspan has focused almost entirely on domestic economies.

"The strengths of Volcker are not the strengths of Greenspan," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Bros. of New York. "Greenspan's strengths are more industrial economics and the U.S. economy and certainly not financial markets and international finance."

While Volcker focused on inflation as the nation's foremost economic concern, Greenspan has said reversing deficit spending "is the most important policy action that one could identify for the 1990s."

While Volcker ruled the Fed with almost an iron hand, a degree of control that had slipped of late as Reagan appointees became more numerous on the board, Greenspan "is much more deliberative, more methodical," Evans said. "I think he will draw people out and get a consensus."

Although financial markets at first reacted negatively to news of the Fed shakeup, the stock market almost as quickly began to recover.

Analysts said the first concern of

Alan Greenspan, left, Paul Volcker following announcement by president

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan announced Tuesday he is nominating economist Alan Greenspan as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board to succeed Paul Volcker, who guided the nation's economic fortunes for eight years.

Reagan made the startling announcement concerning what is often described as the second most powerful job in the nation in a brief statement he read as Volcker and Greenspan stood at his side.

Volcker, 59, a hard-money man who was named to head the central bank by President Carter in 1979, said he was leaving voluntarily when his second four-year term expires Aug. 6 and had informed Reagan of his decision at a meeting Monday.

"I had no feeling I was being pushed," Volcker said, refusing to answer directly a question of whether the president had asked him to stay.

Reagan said he was accepting Volcker's resignation with "great reluctance and regret."

The surprise announcement sent financial markets into a tailspin as prices tumbled on the bond market, a key barometer of inflation concerns, and the value of the dollar fell sharply on investor fears that Greenspan would not share Volcker's commitment to stabilize the dollar.

There had been a widespread belief the administration would seek to keep Volcker at the Fed given the turmoil in recent months caused by the unsettled Third World debt situation, rising inflation worries and a falling dollar.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 24 points within minutes of the announcement. Although it later rebounded somewhat as traders recovered from the initial shock, it still closed the day 10.01 points lower.

While surprised about Volcker's departure, many in financial markets and on Capitol Hill said the White House could have not selected a better person than Greenspan, who served from 1974 to 1977 as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Ford. Greenspan was expected to win easy Senate confirmation.

Greenspan, 61, who now runs an economic consulting firm in New York, won widespread praise for his chairmanship of the blue-ribbon commission appointed by Reagan in 1983 to recommend reforms to the financially

on risks in Persian Gulf

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to seek new details from President Reagan about the risks faced by U.S. military men who will enforce Reagan's pledge to keep open the Persian Gulf.

The 302-105 vote approved the bill and sent it to the Senate.

Although no Senate action is immediately likely, Democrats who control the Senate say that chamber is also likely to eventually pass the measure, despite congressional fears that Reagan's plan to provide U.S. protection for Kuwait tankers may involve the Navy in the Iran-Iraq war.

The vote on the bill became a test of the House Democratic leadership after the Foreign Affairs Committee rejected the measure earlier in the day on a voice vote.

Moments later, House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, promised "absolutely, we will pass it" despite the action by the committee. Wright was a co-sponsor of the bill, along with Rep. Bob Michel, R-Ill., the Republican leader.

Wright's lieutenants spent much of the afternoon lining up support. The measure needed a two-thirds margin to pass because House rules were being suspended.

The bill requires a detailed report from Reagan about the threat to U.S. servicemen because of Reagan's pledge to keep the Persian Gulf open in the face of threats to oil tankers stemming from the long Iran-Iraq war.

Majority Leader Tom Foley, D-Wash., told his colleagues that the bill doesn't commit the House to supporting Reagan's policies. "Suggestions that this is somehow an advance permission" for administration military action "are absolutely wrong and have no merit whatsoever," he said.

Earlier in the day, Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said the Senate would vote after the full House. Byrd said his chamber would also approve the measure.

But those plans were shelved after some Senate Democrats said the House measure wasn't strong enough because it doesn't require the administration report before any action is actually implemented. That requirement was part of a separate measure passed 91-5 by the Senate two weeks ago.

Byrd, in a statement, said the House vote means both chambers are "firmly on record expressing reservations about the course of administration policy in the Gulf."

Byrd said the chamber plans more study on the issue before deciding whether to pass the House

Abrams admits he misled
Congress on his 'worst day'

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Elliott Abrams conceded Tuesday that on "the worst day I had in six years" as the assistant secretary of state he purposely misled a congressional committee by not evaluating he had solicited $10 million from the government of Brunel for the Nicaraguan Contras.

"I lacked authority on that day to reveal the solicitation," Abrams testified as the congressional Iran-Contra hearings went into their fifth week. He said he had decided, when he testified on Nov. 25 to the Senate Intelligence Committee, "that he would not answer unless" the specific question was asked. "I wasn't."

"I consider this testimony to have been a great mistake; it was the worst day I had in six years as an assistant secretary," Abrams said. "And that is precisely why I went back to the committee to tell them about the solicitation and then apologize to the committee." He made the apology in a follow-up appearance at a closed meeting on Dec. 8.

If asked point blank about the contribution, Abrams said, "I would have said yes."

During 6½ hours of testimony on Tuesday, Abrams also:

- Denied the contents of a former U.S. ambassador that Abrams had led a three-man government group closely involved with Contra support at a time of official U.S. military aid was banned.
- Disclosed that after published reports said Oliver L. North, then a National Security Council aide, was involved in helping the Contras, Abrams was asked by Secretary of State George Shultz to "monitor Ollie" and his activities. Abrams said North told him he was doing nothing illegal and Abrams saw nothing to the contrary.
- Elsewhere in Washington, meanwhile, a spokesman said Independent Counsel Lawrence Walsh would ask the committee today not to grant North immunity, a request sure to raise speculation about eventual prosecution of the former White House aide.
- A court records indicated that North was trying to avoid being jailed for contempt of court last month when he appeared at sealed ruling by a federal judge on a subpoena by Iran-Contra grand jury. He has not been jailed. A public hearing on North's challenge to the law under which Walsh was appointed is scheduled for Wednesday.
- An ABC News-Washington Post poll, meanwhile, found that 51 percent of Americans believe President Reagan has "participated in an organized attempt to cover up the

Mini-series to use Sun Valley setting

STACY KEACH
"Hammer" to Hemingway

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — Some filming of "Hemingway," a six-hour mini-series on the life of Ernest Hemingway, will be done on location in the Sun Valley-Carey area, says Carl Wilgus, administrator with the Division of Travel Promotion for the Idaho Department of Commerce.

Linda Marmelstein, one of the product's producers, recently informed Wilgus of the decision.

Several other southern Idaho locations — including Stirling, Gooding, Jerome, Bellevue, Halley and Kelchum — were toured during April as possible filming sites. Marmelstein is currently with film crews in Europe and was not available for comment on why the Sun Valley-Carey area was chosen.

Wilgus said the filming would benefit the area. "To an aficionado, Hemingway's name is synonymous with the Sun Valley area, but I think many of his fans probably aren't familiar with the amount of time he actually spent here," he said.

Hemingway admirers who see the mini-series might be prompted to visit Idaho by the on-location filming, he added.

"Something of this magnitude will really help promote the area," he said.

Film crews will move into the area in August, he said. Their activities in Sun Valley have not been planned yet and won't be decided until seven to eight weeks before filming begins, Wilgus said.

Stacy Keach will star as Hemingway, the Nobel Prize winning author who became well-known for his work as a war correspondent, sportsman and writer of such critically acclaimed novels as "The Old Man and the Sea." "A Farewell to Arms," and "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

Hemingway's wives are being portrayed by Josephine Chaplin as his first wife, Hadley, Richardson, Marcha Bergman as his second wife, Pauline Pfeiffer; Lisa Banes as his third wife, Martha Gellhorn; and Pamela Reed as Mary Welsh.

Filming of the mini-series by Daniel Wilson Productions and Aleor Films began in the Swiss Alps in April. Other filming locations include Paris, Spain, Venice, the Austrian Alps and Africa.

Distributed by the Curran-Victor Company in San Francisco, the world premiere is expected to take place in April, 1988.

According to an Idaho Travel Council newsletter, a special network consisting of WPIC-TV New York, KOP-TV Los Angeles and WGN-TV Chicago has been created for the program.

Senate passes AIDS tests for immigrants

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted, 96-0, Tuesday to require AIDS tests for immigrants, in the first congressional endorsement of mandatory screening for the fatal disease.

The amendment, proposed by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., was added to a $9.7 billion fiscal 1987 supplemental appropriations bill that was approved Tuesday evening 71 to 23.

President Reagan announced Sunday his plans to order tests for immigrants and federal prisoners. In addition, he said the administration would examine whether Veterans Administration hospitals would also routinely make the test.

The Senate amendment would

require Reagan by Aug. 31 to order AIDS virus tests for all immigrants, including the 3 million illegal aliens expected to seek legal status under the migration reform bill passed last year.

Immigrants now are checked for contagious diseases such as syphilis, tuberculosis and gonorrhea by their native countries if they test positive. AIDS would be added to the list, under the Helms amendment.

"This does not duplicate what the president of the United States has already said he is going to do," said Helms.

Heat eases, heavy storms belt Midwest

By The Associated Press

A cold front and scattered thunderstorms eased temperatures Tuesday in the Northeast after an oppressive four-day heat wave, but heavy rain in the Midwest and Plains was blamed for the death of a motorist who drowned in a flooded underpass.

Newark, N.J., had a high of just 62, a day after a record-tying 94, but the humidity remained uncomfortably high with a dewpoint of 70. The high humidity created ideal conditions for rain and nearly a half-inch fell in 35 minutes at Port Jervis.

New York City had a comfortable high of 78 after four days in the 90s.

Temperatures remained high in the South, with a peak in South Carolina at the Greenville-Spartanburg airport, and on the West Coast, San Francisco had an uncharacteristic reading of 92.

On the other hand, Pendleton, Ore., had a record low of 37 degrees. Severe thunderstorms boiled up along a cold front stretching from the central Plains to the western Great Lakes and Ohio Valley.

...the government of Brunel had insisted an absolute and total confidentiality, Abrams said. "It's the only thing that ever happened in my bureau which no one else in the bureau knew but me."

At another point, Abrams was asked whether he was "careful not to ask North too many questions about what he was doing" after a plane carrying arms to the Contras was shot down in Nicaragua.

"I have told you all day that it was very clear to me Col. North was not violating the law," Abrams said when he was asked about the crash in which two Americans were killed and Eugene Hasentun was arrested.

"You were careful not to ask North too many questions about what he was doing," asked John Nields, chief counsel for the House committee.

"But you were careful not to ask about that subject," Nields persisted.

"True," said Abrams.

"We were all in a state of confusion after that press conference about what the hell had been going on in the U.S. government," Abrams said.

"He described on Tuesday how he arranged the Brunel contribution - which was legal - during a walk in London's Hyde Park with a representative of that government, supplying Swiss bank account numbers supplied by North."

"This one solicitation of Brunel was a diplomatic activity for which

U.S. firm takes Kuwaiti tankers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ownership of 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers that are being placed under the American flag has been transferred to a U.S. company at a cost of $7 million, a U.S. official said Tuesday.

The ships have been re-registered with a Delaware-based company called Chesapeake Shipping, which is recruiting American "captains" for the vessels, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The transfer of registration is required by U.S. Coast Guard rules regarding the flagging of foreign ships. Under the regulations, the ships must be U.S.-owned and must have American captains.

The reflagging was requested by Kuwait to protect its oil shipping from attack by Iranian missiles deployed along the Straits of Hormuz, the Reagan administration agreed to comply with the request, despite some congressional opposition, as part of its policy to protect the flow of oil through the Persian Gulf and in an effort to keep to a minimum the Soviet influence in the region.

The official said six or seven of the Kuwaiti vessels had already passed Coast Guard safety inspections and had been cleared save for minor corrections they were required to make.

The process of hiring the captains and completing the rest of the safety inspections would be completed shortly, he said. The crews would not be American and would be composed of British, Filipino and other seamen, he added.

The official said what remained to be done before the reflagging plan could go into effect was for President Reagan to approve the protection regime for the vessels and for Congress to be notified. The plan calls for U.S. Navy ships to protect the tankers as they sail from the Gulf.

The administration has said the escort program is expected to begin in several weeks.

Battle group to include replacement for Stark

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A carrier battle group scheduled to leave on a Mediterranean tour this weekend will include a replacement of the damaged USS Stark in the Persian Gulf, the Navy said Tuesday.

The 15-ship battle group, headed by the Mayport, Fla., based carrier Saratoga, will leave East Coast ports Friday and Saturday for the routine deployment, said Chief Petty Officer Joseph C. Mowery.

Three of the carrier's escort ships will replace Navy vessels in the Middle East, including the Stark. But Mowery said he did not know which ships would be sent to the Persian Gulf.

Two Iraqi missiles damaged the frigate May 18, killing 37 sailors on board. The Stark is undergoing repairs in Bahrain in preparation for its return home.

Along with the Saratoga, the guided missile frigate Flitely will leave Mayport this weekend.

Leaving from Norfolk will be the guided missile cruiser Virginia, destroyers Conolly and Kidd and guided missile destroyers Kidd and Prible, guided missile frigate Richard L. Page and fleet oiler Merrimack.

The guided missile destroyer William V. Pratt, guided missile frigates Klarkring and Hawes and frigates Joseph Hewes and Bowen will leave from Charleston, S.C. The ammunition ship Butte will depart from Erie, N.J.

Aboard the Saratoga will be Carrier Air Wing 17 from Cecil Field, Fla.

WHO official warns of AIDS upheaval

WASHINGTON (AP) — As many as 10 million people worldwide already are infected with the AIDS virus, and AIDS deaths could cause political and economic upheaval, severely affected countries, an international health official said Tuesday.

"This epidemic has just started," cautioned Dr. Jonathan Mann of the World Health Organization.

As of Monday, 51,535 AIDS cases had been reported in 113 countries, and Mann estimated the number of people infected with the virus could be hundreds of times higher, possibly as high as 10 million.

Unlike every other major health problem, AIDS strikes sexually active adults in their prime working years.

The selective involvement of young and middle-aged adults, including business and government people and members of other social, economic and political elites, leads to a potential for economic and political destabilization in areas of the developing world severely affected by HIV — the AIDS virus.

Mann said "what political system could withstand for long" the destabilizing influence of a 20 or 25 percent or higher HIV infection rate among young adults?

Mann, who is head of the health organization's AIDS program, spoke at the Third International Conference on AIDS.

In other developments at the conference:

- A French study of AIDS victims found that many kept their diagnosis secret because "refusing help and support and continuing a normal life symbolizes hope." However, the stress of suffering silently led to anxiety, insomnia, depression and memory problems; the researchers said.
- In the United States, Dr. James Curran, head of the AIDS program at the Centers for Disease Control, said the best estimate is that 1.5 million people are infected. This would mean that perhaps one in 20 men between the ages of 20 and 50 carry the virus.
- By 1991, he said AIDS is likely to be the second leading cause of premature death, after accidents, among American men.
- The number of people infected is extremely difficult to assess, since widespread antibody testing — the only practical way to spot infection — has not been done.

Workers found jamming train safety devices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Railroad workers have purposely jammed safety devices on trains at least 68 times since January's fatal Amtrak-Conrail collision near Baltimore, the head of the Federal Railroad Administration said Tuesday.

Federal inspectors have discovered instances of intentional disabling of warning whistles, electronic alerting devices and equipment that automatically stops trains, FRA Administrator John H. Riley told the Senate surface transportation subcommittee.

Riley said his agency's inspectors have found most of the tampering on Amtrak passenger trains, where they have conducted most of their examinations.

"I don't think this begins to measure what's happening on freight trains," he said.

Investigators have concluded that a whistle designed to blow when safe speeds are being exceeded had been carved over in one of the linked Conrail freight locomotives that smashed into an Amtrak commuter train in Chase, Md., on Jan. 4. Sixteen people were killed and 175 injured in the crash.

"Each of these was a chance accident waiting to happen," Riley told the senators.

"This is crazy," Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis., a member of the panel, said of Riley's testimony. "This is just absolutely nuts."

After his testimony, Riley told a reporter that none of the reported tampering incidents resulted in an accident. He said he believed the train workers were being jammed because train workers considered them to be a nuisance.

"I think we have people here who don't want any restrictions," he said. "I think we have a cowboy mentality out there among a few people."

Fire evacuees return to Pebble Beach ruins

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Residents returned Tuesday to smoldering remains of their homes in a coastal forest they had considered safe from fire, while officials blamed dryness, wind, wood-shingled roofs and vegetation for the quick spread of Sunday's blaze.

Some of the more than 200 evacuated residents of the Huckleberry Hill neighborhood of Del Monte forest said inadequate warning by fire agencies forced them to flee just ahead of the 160-acre fire that started Sunday afternoon and destroyed 32 expensive homes before being controlled late Monday.

"We had two seconds notice," Alan Turpen said, as he poked through the ashes of his house. "We really thought it was under control."

California Department of Forestry spokesman George Alex said a plea

Counsel: Hart ineligible for matching funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission's legal staff says former Sen. Gary Hart should not be eligible to receive federal matching funds for his aborted 1988 presidential campaign.

The Hart campaign is asked to be qualified for matching funds even though the Colorado Democrat is no longer a candidate. Hart wants to use his 1988 campaign money to pay his $1 million debt from his unsuccessful 1984 campaign, as well as pay remaining bills from his 1988 bid.

In an opinion released Tuesday for the commission's deliberation on Thursday, the FEC counsel stated Hart "cannot be considered eligible because he said May 18 he was dropping out of the race."

Hart campaign officials said they raised and spent some $2 million for the 1988 effort. Some of that money could be used to help qualify for matching funds from the federal Treasury if the FEC overrules its counsel's opinion.

Federal election rules provide that a candidate can qualify for matching funds if he or she raises $100,000 total in 29 states, in contributions of $250 or less.

Hart does not have FEC approval to transfer any of the money to the 1984 debt. The FEC has his request for that unusual transaction under study.

The report by FEC acting General Counsel Lawrence M. Noble centers on the official definition of the word "candidate."

Toxic cloud causes 2,000 to evacuate

CAMBRIDGE, Ohio (AP) — A tank truck carrying a hazardous chemical overturned Tuesday on a busy highway, forcing more than 2,000 people to evacuate, officials said.

Eight people, including six firefighters and three police officers, were treated, with one firefighter admitted, to Guernsey Memorial Hospital in fair condition with burning eyes and throat, nausea and symptoms of a rash, hospital spokesman Bill Coffey said.

The truck carrying phosphorus trichloride overturned and caught fire about 3:20 a.m., said Rhonda Hagan, a State Highway Patrol dispatcher. The fire was extinguished by 8 a.m. but fumes from the chemical continued to drift from the truck.

The fire involved the truck's fuel and not the chemical cargo, said Allan Franks of the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency.

Gorbachev will face resistance to change

No one ever promised Mikhail S. Gorbachev that reforming the Soviet Union would be easy. Opposition to his effort to establish joint ventures with foreign ownership indicates just how difficult his task is. The more far-reaching the change, the more determined the resistance becomes. At the same time, the further Gorbachev goes, the more those in favor of reform want him to go even further.

Evidently all this is beginning to wear on Gorbachev. He has begun to deny publicly that he has political opposition, instead, he suggests, some of the doubts about the ultimate success of his reforms are inventions of Western Sovietologists. Because it seemed like the fastest and cheapest way to transfer and keep abreast of advanced technology, Gorbachev decided to reverse almost 50 years of Soviet dogma and authorize the formation of joint ventures with capitalist corporations. In the past the Soviet Union purchased technology outright. But, more often than not, this costly technology was used poorly. Equally distressing, Soviet engineers found it difficult to upgrade their newly acquired technology so that it kept pace with advances in the outside world. To Gorbachev, it is also sense to allow foreigners to acquire up to 49 percent ownership interest in such projects. This way the foreigners, not the Soviets, would pay for the technology, and as concluding owners they would do all they could to ensure that it kept pace with technology in the West.

Unfortunately for Gorbachev, it is not enough just to issue a decree authorizing joint ventures, as he did in January. There are major issues to overcome before these joint ventures come into being. For example, before Western investors commit themselves, they must know that they will be able to have control over the key inputs, machinery and components, to select quality workers and components from within the Soviet Union at a reasonable cost and to repatriate their profits in Western currency.

Marshall Goldman

It turns out that the Soviet side has similar concerns, and they are expressed by those who oppose joint ventures because it seems to involve the reintroduction of capitalism to the Soviet Union — an ideological heresy — as well as by those who fear that the capitalists will take advantage of the Soviet Union and exploit it. As these officials see it, the capitalists are not interested in increasing Soviet exports; all they want is access to the Soviet domestic market and its cheap labor for their low technology. It is this that will result from joint ventures, these Soviet bureaucrats worry, some day they will be the ones ultimately held accountable, particularly if Gorbachev should change his mind about the benefits of joint ventures or even if Gorbachev should pass from the scene.

Just such concerns evidently explain why Yuri Bryzov, the newly appointed head of the Joint Venture Department in the Ministry of Foreign Trade, wrote an article in the English-language Moscow News that did all that it could to sabotage some of the most promising joint-venture initiatives. It was like discovering that the fire chief is an arsonist.

If Gorbachev is to succeed, he must win over his bureaucrats and induce them to show initiative. He knew that he would face opposition, and for months he spoke openly of it. But now he seems to sense that the opposition is more entrenched than he anticipated. This may explain why he has contradicted himself publicly, acknowledging there is resistance to his reform effort but denying that he has political opposition.

Idaho no dump site.

Sunday, The Idaho Statesman interviewed Robie G. Russell, a former assistant attorney general of Idaho and who is now regional administrator of the Federal Environmental Protection Agency. After reading this article very closely, let me state, what a revolting development this is. When Mr. Russell was asked what would be his number one priority he said and I quote, "The Bunker Hill facility in Kellogg." He also went on to state that this was the government we were dealing with and that it would take years before we would see any progress in this area and that he would consider this fast action in this area. Well what do you think about that? Further in the interview, he was asked about the Envirostate Waste site southeast of Boise and he replied that Envirostate has applied for a long-term operating permit. I wonder what questions and comments Mr. Russell asked Envirostate. As this has been the leading environmental issue in Idaho, a year or so ago Envirostate was rated by one New York firm as one of the worst in the nation.

One must wonder why this operation has stayed in business in business, could it be political contributions and under the table payoffs have kept this operation in business? I wonder.

Later in the interview Mr. Russell states that people have been dying from cancer for 10,000 years and that, and I quote, "even if we've made all the water pure and all the air pure, people are still going to die of cancer." This is a very serious problem. Mr. Russell is about the safety of the people, the water and the air of Idaho.

I suppose, Mr. Russell, you will wait until we can no longer eat the fish we catch, drink the water, or breathe the air from fear of catching cancer before you will publicly state that there is a problem. Mr. Russell also states that the biggest problem in hazardous waste disposal is people. He also states that 20 to 30 years ago or even 50 years ago, when people were putting these chemicals in landfills and those kind of things, people didn't really know better and it was an accepted practice. I would know better now and it is not an accepted practice now.

From all indications there seems to be a move to turn this site into a hazardous waste dump site. The only way this can be turned about is for the voting public to create and maintain pressure upon non-elected officials to correct this problem. I only hope that this comes about before it is too late. Many things can and must be done in the immediate future or it will be too late. Yes citizens, are you ready? This is a very serious problem. You don't put the cart before the horse, because in this case you may never be able to find the horse.

I've noticed that the two topics generating the most lively discussion among letters to the editor, loudmouth car salesmen and oversized flags, both involve Latham Motors. In fact, we know Latham's there. Whatever our feelings about the flag as a symbol of the nation we love, some of us would rather not be reminded just so ostentatiously.

Battle over water rights still needs valley-wide commitment

Can I refer to you people now as my people? I would like to believe we are all the same at our hearing and I appealed as hard as I could to have those applications heard. I had your letters, your petitions and your testimony — we were ready.

You recall the "what happened?" Mr. Hardy had never been faced with this. It was public interest and neither he, nor any other of the fish people in prior applications, had faced as many profilers.

When we saw the news items and when he and Idaho Power recognized the actual witnesses we had — they got spooked.

All right now I'm back and expect and beg you people to be with me and join me in what we are doing now and know what, she says now that the lawn's mowed and I fixed her washing machine and if I don't leave my telephone number so she and we have to answer it day and night — go for it Monday at the hearing totally were me out, I'm almost 70 and I hope you feel I represented you properly — Idaho Power and any financial help let me know. Well I've got enough pride to not write or call any individual and say send money but there are copying, photos and I guess the biggest are my phone bill, over 2 or 3 hundred more than usual.

I think we need an organization of some kind. This is getting too big for me to keep on trying to do alone. There are a lot of people call and write how to help, but they, you younger people, get involved and help carry some of this load and get us organized, the whole valley, well?

Everyone who has helped so far I want to say you've been great and thanks, but their ideas, let's cool it and they will say no.

Know what, I don't think we will. I think they've made the wrong decision.

Bob Burks, Wendell, was a formal professor to the proposed Niagara Springs fish farming application.

Alert citizens not only can save scenery, but can also save public money. Most unnecessary special interest expenditures slip by unnoticed. We would save 10 to 30 percent on county, city and school budgets if at least one person would monitor the meetings and get the word out each time some unnecessary and/or assinine expenditure was being considered.

Without somebody there to report, special interest proposals usually pass. A lesson in practical politics is an indifferent and/or uninformed public you can take care of the special interests or you find you don't get re-elected.

Belongs to Bob Burks and those who support his letters in person.

Keep springs issue going

Mr. Burks: I attended the hearing on Niagara Springs May 28th. Unfortunately my daughter had an accident and I had to take her for emergency treatment and I won't be able to get back to the 7 p.m. meeting. I hope you had a good turnout and results will be favorable.

My request is this. Would you please give me a call or let me know some way when the Rm. View hearing will be? I don't take the paper and I suppose I will hear about on radio or TV, but I just want to make sure I don't miss it.

I would like to commend you for bringing this issue before the public. I know how much time, effort and undoubtedly some hassling goes into this sort of project. I would like you to know that I for one, appreciate all your efforts.

I did not have the time during that besides I was out scout groups and their leaders, that most of the people attending were our older citizens. Where are all the young people? They are the ones that will benefit from your efforts yet they were sadly lacking. I wonder why that is? If you get a chance to speak to the public in the future, maybe you could target that group and emphasize the importance of their participating in this effort.

I hope I don't offend you with this suggestion — as I am sure that admiration for all your efforts. Thank you.

Acting for the public good

The recent hearings on Niagara Springs water is a fine example of what one person can accomplish for the public good. Very likely the fish man would have gotten the water if Bob Burks hadn't been alert and gotten the word out.

This is not a case of businessmen versus environmentalists. No jobs to be lost and plenty of other water available to expand

Honesty is needed in U.S. Nicaragua policy

It appears that the U.S. government is better at talking about "defending democracy" than it is at practicing those same ideals. It seems that the CIA has been behind a disinformation campaign in Central America.

According to the CIA in the Columbia Journalism Review, the CIA has been bribing journalists in Costa Rica and Honduras to produce stories critical of the Sandinistas and supportive of the Contras.

This is a tactic used in 1954 to oust the elected ruler of Guatemala, with whom the U.S. was not happy. Undermining the press in other countries is not consistent with our own democratic ideals.

Also, it is becoming more and more apparent that while the present administration says it supports a peaceful negotiated settlement to the conflict in Central America, it deliberately tries to sabotage that process.

If any Central American country supports either the Contradora Plan, or the Rios proposal, the U.S. either threatens or embarrasses those countries and/or their leaders. These tactics range from cutting off aid to Honduras and Panama to threatening to lobby on behalf of the conservative opposition party in Mexico. U.S. power is overpowering to small Central American countries desperate for economic aid and dependent on the U.S.

I would appreciate more honesty and integrity in the carrying out of foreign policy by our government.

speaking. The legislators seem to feel that law-breaking citizens should pay for the acts of law-breakers instead of the law-breakers themselves. Now, my logic says that the Legislature should enact statutes wherein the tenants pay their own rent.

In fact, those statutes should provide for the repayment of present bond elections. In short, the tenants owning going next door for the money to replace the place.

I refer to the assessment of fines by the courts and their distribution by the Legislature. And the fact that none of these fine monies are set aside for jail repair and replacement. Why? Because two prodigious lobbies already get that fine money, education and the district courts. I don't understand this. It is the courts that populate, through sentencing, the jails, and it is the failures in our educational system who are sentenced.

This is absurd that the county property taxpayers should be made to shoulder the indebtedness when the Legislature could, and should, simply allocate a small portion of these fine monies to said repair and replacement.

Of course, this is simply out cowtown logic.

Simply put, I have a problem with the last jail bond election... whether it was necessary, but why it was necessary?

Simply put, I'm asking parallelism in pondering this public question. Simply put, if the tenants in a place are paying the rent, and they wear the place out, why isn't that rent put towards a new place. This bond election puts me in mind of the tenant owners going next door for the money to replace the place.

Simply put, I have a problem with the last jail bond election... whether it was necessary, but why it was necessary?

Simply put, I'm asking parallelism in pondering this public question. Simply put, if the tenants in a place are paying the rent, and they wear the place out, why isn't that rent put towards a new place. This bond election puts me in mind of the tenant owners going next door for the money to replace the place.

I refer to the assessment of fines by the courts and their distribution by the Legislature. And the fact that none of these fine monies are set aside for jail repair and replacement. Why? Because two prodigious lobbies already get that fine money, education and the district courts. I don't understand this. It is the courts that populate, through sentencing, the jails, and it is the failures in our educational system who are sentenced.

This is absurd that the county property taxpayers should be made to shoulder the indebtedness when the Legislature could, and should, simply allocate a small portion of these fine monies to said repair and replacement.

Of course, this is simply out cowtown logic.

Choice for Fed chairman carries label of 'free-enterpriser'

ALAN GREENSPAN
Solid GOP background

NEW YORK (AP) — Alan Greenspan, chosen to replace Federal Reserve Chairman Paul A. Volcker this summer, has gained a reputation over the years as a "mainstream" Republican economist who strongly advocates minimal government intervention in the economy.

"Greenspan is free market oriented. Specifically, he favors financial deregulation," said fellow economist Henry Kaufman, a managing director of the investment firm Salomon Brothers Inc.

Many economists who knew Greenspan, a former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Gerald Ford, hailed his nomination by President Reagan Tuesday and predicted the Senate would confirm the selection of the 61-year-old economist. They said there would be few major changes under his leadership.

Volcker, who is leaving the Fed on Aug. 6 after eight years as chairman, expressed "happiness and delight" in the selection of Greenspan as his successor.

"Basically, he (Greenspan) will take the same type of policy," predicted Akira Tokutomi, executive vice president of Nikko Securities Co. International. "If (the change) should be no problem."

Donald P. Jacobs, dean of Northwestern University's Kellogg Graduate School of Management and a friend of Greenspan, said both Greenspan and Volcker "have reputations as inflation fighters and advocates of the free-enterprise system, although Volcker does not support deregulation of the financial system."

"They both have the same basic characteristic — and that is an open mind," Jacobs said.

Greenspan also has spoken out against U.S. trade protectionism and portions of the income tax overhaul, which he predicted could depress the economy. Like Volcker, he has pushed for strong measures to reduce the federal government's deficit.

Colleagues describe Greenspan as personable, hard-working and dedicated, with one economist calling him "sort of a data junkie" who "lives and breathes his profession."

Greenspan, who heads the private consulting firm Townsend-Greenspan & Co. in New York, has been an adviser to a long array of presidents and businesses over the years.

His career as an economist began in 1948, when he went to work for the Conference Board, a non-profit business-finance research group. He left that organization five years later to form a consulting firm with investment counselor William Townsend.

Greenspan first entered the political scene in 1967, when Richard Nixon recruited him to be one of his top economic aides during his presidential campaigns. After Nixon took office, he filled several advisory posts, although he refused to join the administration on a full-time basis.

As head of the Council of Economic Advisers from 1974 to 1977, Greenspan counseled Ford at a time when fighting inflation remained a top priority for that administration. Ford's ill-fated "Whip Inflation Now" campaign included the distribution of "WIN" buttons, which later became a symbol of his inability to deal with current economic problems.

Greenspan has served on the boards of several major companies, including Aluminum Company of America, Mobil Corp. and Capital Cities-ABC Inc., and on many professional associations.

Greenspan, who is unmarried, was born in New York City on March 6, 1926, the only child of broker Herbert Greenspan and the former Rose Goldsmith. He grew up in New York and graduated from George Washington High School two years after Henry Kissinger.

When Volcker told Reagan on Monday that he did not want to serve another term, the president immediately mentioned Greenspan. Asked how long it took him to accept the position, Greenspan told reporters: "Milliseconds." But he added, "Filling Paul Volcker's shoes will be a major challenge."

"The economy at the moment looks reasonably strong," and is likely to remain so for the "indefinite future," Greenspan said.

Asked about the chances of a U.S. recession, he said: "At the moment, I must say to you, I don't see any evidence of that."

Here's what the Federal Reserve system does

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve system is one of the least understood but most powerful institutions in the country.

Essentially, Fed policymakers decide how much money to add to the economy, and if these decisions that influence how fast or how slow ly the economy will expand.

The Fed tries to supply enough funds to the banking system to keep the economy expanding at a healthy rate that will reduce unemployment while guarding against providing so much money that it triggers renewed inflation.

It performs this tightrope act principally through what are known as the Fed's open-market operations. It can inject money into the system or drain it out.

If the Fed wants to add money to the economy, it simply buys government securities on the open market. This adds funds, known as reserves, to the account of the bank from which it purchases the securities. The bank is then able to lend out these reserves several times over, creating even more money. The process usually drives down interest rates as the supply of money grows.

When the Fed wants to tighten up on funds, it sells its government securities, taking cash away from

The central bank also exercises control over interest rates when it sets its discount rate — the rate it charges on loans to financial institutions. A change in the Fed's discount rate is the most dramatic signal the central bank can send that it intends to tighten or loosen credit conditions.

The discount rate decisions are made by the seven-member board of governors of the Federal Reserve, whose overall monetary policy is controlled by the seven board members plus five of 12 presidents of regional Federal Reserve banks, who serve on a rotating basis.

The chairman is considered first among equals, however, using the position to shape board decisions.

Disappointed senators laud Volcker's efforts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders expressed disappointment Tuesday that Paul A. Volcker will be leaving as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and gave a mixed reaction to President Reagan's selection of economist Alan Greenspan as his successor.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the Senate Banking Committee which votes on Federal Reserve nominations, did not mention Greenspan's name in a statement praising Volcker, who will end his eight-year tenure in August.

"I think it is a serious loss to this country," said Proxmire. "Mr. Volcker has been a superb chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. He has the confidence of the business community. He has the confidence of the Congress. He has the confidence of the country. And I thought he had the confidence of the administration."

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, former Banking Committee chairman and now the ranking Republican on the panel, said he was disappointed when Volcker called him Tuesday morning to tell him he would not seek reappointment to the board.

"Four years ago, I urged him to seek reappointment as chairman of the board, and I have been urging him to seek reappointment again," said Garn. "In fact, I have encouraged President Reagan to reappoint him. Chairman Volcker has enjoyed enormous respect and has served extremely well."

Garn said, however, that Greenspan was an excellent choice to succeed Volcker. "He is a respected, internationally recognized economist," he said. "I don't think the president could have found a better replacement."

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., called Greenspan a man of considerable knowledge and experience who "will need these skills as he and the Federal Reserve Board confront the daunting challenges ahead — keeping inflation under control, encourage growth and sustain confidence in our economy, both home and abroad."

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said, "While Paul Volcker's retirement is a real loss, this country is very fortunate to have a man of Alan Greenspan's caliber to take his place."

"Alan's knowledge of the economy, coupled with his experience at the top levels of government, means that his chairmanship of the Federal Reserve Board will be in good hands," said Dole. "Alan, literally, has some big shoes to fill. But I haven't any doubts he's more than equal to the task."

Speaking of Greenspan, House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, told reporters, "He would not have been my choice."

Grandson not sure what actor will tell Tucson graduates

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Tucson High School managed to sign up actor Anthony Quinn as its graduation speaker. Thanks to his grandson.

"I had asked him to give the senior class President Wade Colwell, 17, I called him on the phone and he said he would."

Colwell said he doesn't know what Quinn will say on Thursday to the class of 350 students.

"He may say something about his past, and why he thinks graduation is important. I'm pretty much leaving it up to him," Colwell said.

Seating was orderly, concert not restrained

DORTMUND, West Germany (AP) — Prince demanded that seating be assigned and alcoholic beverages be banned at a rock concert, but the performance in front of 15,000 fans was hardly restrained, concert reviewers said.

The rock-star, donning John Lennon-type glasses, whistled the audience at Westfalen Hall with his hits "Purple Rain," "Girls and Boys," and the title track of his latest album, "Sign O' the Times." The stage, lit by more than 400 computerized spotlights, was decorated Monday night to look like a red-light district. Prince has played in several cities as Germany climbs out of its European tour.

ELTON JOHN Chinese soccer needs help

Hurt, Vereen chosen for foundation honors

CHICAGO (AP) — William Hurt, who taught deaf people in "Children of a Lesser God," and Ben Vereen, who leads the cast of the "Zooloof Zoo," will be honored by the Dolores Kohl Education Foundation.

Hurt and Vereen will receive the foundation's media awards Sunday in recognition of their contributions to education. "Through his superb performance, Mr. Hurt focused national attention on education for the hearing-impaired," the foundation said Monday.

The foundation said television's "Zooloof Zoo" "appeals to youngsters' creativity, imagination and interest in the arts. The series stars Vereen and a cast of singers, dancers and actors.

Rock star says China soccer teams need aid

BEIJING (AP) — Rock star Elton John, accompanying his English soccer club on a tour of China, said Tuesday the Chinese players are good at passing but the linemen were "absolutely hopeless."

John, whose Watford team on Sunday captured the title in the eight-team Great Wall Cup tournament, also said he hoped to help Chinese soccer because "it's frustrating to see such skill go to waste." He did not say what kind of help; he did say the players need more foreign experience and training.

Watford did not give up one goal in four matches against Chinese squads in Nanjing and Shanghai.

John, wearing a conservative suit, red tie, fedora and carrying, also told a news conference he hoped to sing in China some day, although he has no immediate plans to do so. He is on one-year "sabbatical" after a throat operation several months ago.

He said he's not writing any songs, but an album will be out next month.

from his concert tour last December in Australia.

John, who has owned the Watford team for 10 years, said the trip to China "has re-established the fact that I really love this club." He said soccer was "equal to my musical career" as a source of enjoyment.

Newman sues to gain profits from 14 videos

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Academy Award-winning actor Paul Newman has filed a $3-million lawsuit against Universal Pictures and MCA Inc., contending he was shortchanged in profits from videocassettes of four of his films.

In the suit, filed Monday in Superior Court, Newman said he was to share profits from "The Sting," "Slapshot," "Winning" and "Sometimes a Great Notion" under contracts he signed with Universal on videocassettes.

The films have since been released on videocassettes. Newman contends Universal and MCA tallied the profits from the videocassettes in such a way that they diminish his share.

His attorney, Maxwell Blecher, said the bulk of the money from the videocassettes is being paid to their distributor, MCA Cassette Inc., and only 20 percent of the profits is being paid to Universal.

Blecher contended Newman is only entitled to a share of Universal's profits, not the profits paid to the distributor.

Newman, however, said he's entitled to a share of the total profits.

Blecher filed a similar federal lawsuit three years ago, but it was dismissed because the court said it wasn't a federal case.

Newman, 62, won a best actor Oscar last March for his role in "The Color of Money."

Prank prompts school to suspend valedictorian from commencement

HOUSTON (AP) — A high school valedictorian had to sit out Tuesday's graduation, barred from participating or delivering his speech because of a joke he made about a physics class.

"We are appalled by the whole thing, by his actions," Mrs. Breckenridge said. "Because with honor goes responsibility and Mike has not acted responsibly."

Woolsey met with his parents Tuesday. They declined comment, he said. "It's not Woolsey's first but with school regulations. He was cited earlier this year for violating the dress code when he appeared wearing an earring and sunglasses."

"I didn't think it was fair to be restricted from graduating... when you think of some of the kids who have been in trouble for drugs, for fighting and for weapons," Woolsey said Tuesday. "I think it was wrong to do it. I'm guilty as charged. I never tried to deny that."

Woolsey said he hadn't decided if the prank was worth it. "I'll have to wait and see on that one," he said. "If anyone gets hurt or if graduation is ruined, I'll be very sorry."

Some students at the school voiced support for Woolsey.

"I think they're going a little extreme," said Darren McLennan. "He worked so hard to be valedictorian, and now they won't let him walk."

"He's got the greatest sense of humor and is an all-American kind of guy," Jill White said. "I think it's pretty stupid for him to get suspended. Every year the seniors play a practical joke."

Woolsey has a Navy ROTC scholarship and said he plans to enroll at the University of Virginia in the fall and pursue a degree in engineering.

Singer plans shop

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music star Crystal Gayle plans to open a crystal and jewelry shop by September, her husband says.

"Crystal's Fox Fine Gifts & Jewelry" will specialize in crystal to porcelain, said Bill Galzimos, who also acts as his wife's personal manager.

The entertainer, who signed a lease for 7,500 square feet of space in a shopping center, began collecting crystal earlier being presented with a piece of Irish crystal on her first trip to the British Isles, Galzimos said.

Money for farmers gains Senate vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Tuesday to violate the budget for a nearly $10 billion spending bill that supporters said was urgently needed by farmers.

By 64-32, the Senate waived the fiscal 1987 budget. The waiver, which failed in two earlier votes, was needed because the supplemental appropriations bill would add to spending already beyond Congress' self-imposed limits.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, argued that the bill should be trimmed to eliminate spending items he said were not essential, such as aid for Poland, promotion of seafood, and a study of weeds.

"At least we can trim off some of the fat around the edges," said Gramm.

But Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said, "This is in fact an urgent, must-pass bill" especially for farmers.

Johnston said he had been assured by the Reagan administration that it supports the Senate's measure.

After the vote to waive the budget, the Senate continued working on proposed amendments to the bill.

Most of the money, $6.7 billion, would go to the Commodity Credit Corporation, which subsidizes agriculture. Prominent subsidy payments to farmers have been delayed while the bill awaits passage. The measure also contains more than $1.5 billion to cover pay and pension benefit increases for federal workers, $708 million for the military and $154 million in foreign aid.

A wide variety of domestic items make up the rest of the spending, including money for increased income tax enforcement, disaster relief, and veterans' compensation and pensions.

Spending is already above the levels envisioned in the fiscal 1987 budget, and the deficit is expected to soar at least $30 billion above the $144 billion limit Congress and the president promised in the Gramm-Itard budget-balancing law.

The Senate also has placed in its version of the bill various non-spending items, including a provision delaying until October any sanctions against employers who hire aliens in violation of the immigration law passed last year.

The House version of the bill contains arms control provisions and would block the administration's plan for drug testing of federal employees. The president's advisers say he would veto that version.

The House and Senate must settle their differences before a bill can go to Reagan's desk.

'Adequate force' need in gulf to be stressed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will underscore the need for an "adequate force" to protect Persian Gulf oil shipments at next week's allied economic summit in Venice, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Tuesday.

But, Shultz added, the president may not ask the allies to increase their military participation in a U.S.-led defense operation beyond the British and French naval forces already in the tense gulf region.

He told reporters a military buildup was not "necessarily, particularly" required.

"This seemed to conflict with assertions Monday by Reagan that he would press the allies at the economic talks next week in Venice to become involved in U.S. efforts to protect ship movements."

Shultz insisted "there isn't any daylight to be found between me and the president." He said the United States was not "alone in trying to deter attack on gulf shipping and we don't want to be alone."

"What is needed is an adequate force to deter the use of force against us," he said.

The British, with a longstanding naval presence in the area, contribute an even greater proportional share to gulf defenses than the United States, Shultz said.

"There is a unified view about this matter and people do the things they can do," he said. "Countries are positioned in different ways in terms of their capabilities, and so we have to recognize that...."

U.S. actions in the gulf are bound to dominate the non-economic agenda at the Venice summit June 8-10. President Reagan will meet there with the leaders of Britain, Canada, France, Italy, Japan and West Germany.

The president flies to Venice on Wednesday. His 10-day trip will also include talks in Rome with Pope John Paul II and a visit to Berlin for the divided German city's 750th anniversary celebration.

Shultz previewed the trip in a trans-Atlantic telecast sponsored by the U.S. Information Agency and at a news conference in the Executive Office Building across the street from the White House.

Reagan, outlining his goals in a speech Monday, said he would tell the other leaders they had an obligation to help the United States defend merchant ships from becoming targets in the Iran-Iraq war.

"The American people are aware that it is not our interests alone that are being protected," Reagan said in a White House address. "The dependence of our allies on the flow of oil from that area is no secret."

Task force claims progress in fighting terror 'excellent'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A task force headed by Vice President George Bush claimed Tuesday that "progress has been excellent" in the battle against terrorism and that U.S. credibility lost as a result of the Iran Contra affair has been renewed.

President Reagan called upon Bush and his task force for combat terrorism in March to conduct a review of U.S. policy in the area — a request made in the wake of the Tower commission report on the secret sales of arms to Iran.

"The United States will certainly continue to be a principal target of terrorism," Bush said in a letter to Reagan about the report.

"Because of the growing experience of the terrorists and the sophistication of their methods, human casualties and property losses to American citizens and U.S. interests reportedly will continue to occur," the letter added.

The vice president's office released the text of the unclassified cover letter from Bush to Reagan summarizing the classified report.

"The letter noted that in 1986-87, 42 Americans died around the world as the result of terrorist acts, compared to 38 in 1985."

The report noted that the U.S. position against terrorism was marred by the unveiling of the Reagan administration's secret dealings with Iran and shipments of arms to that country.

CSI gets grant to boost export trade in area

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho officials broke open champagne Tuesday on the bow of international trade by announcing a nearly $50,000 grant to expand Magic Valley's export market.

"We're very proud and we're looking forward to the next two years," said CSI President Gerald Meyerhoefer, referring to the grant's duration at a press conference.

The U.S. Department of Education grant is expected to help launch Magic Valley into international exporting tentatives now, plans to meet and discuss with the Business and International Education Program for DOE. The two-dozen grants totaling an estimated $1.4 million were chosen from 118 applications.

CSI's was one of 24 grants awarded this year by the Business and International Education Program for DOE. The two-dozen grants totaling an estimated $1.4 million were chosen from 118 applications.

CSI plans to match the $240 grant which still must be formally approved by DOE, with about $50,000 of its own commitment. The project task force of area education, business and government representatives now plans to meet and decide specifically where the money will be funneled, including through CSI curricula, and helping market exports abroad.

Project Coordinator Tony Mabbatt, who are goals of the grant.

"We see this as a regional grant for the good of the region," Meyerhoefer said.

"We're past the point of provincialization. CSI is one of 24 grants awarded this year by the Business and International Education Program for DOE. The two-dozen grants totaling an estimated $1.4 million were chosen from 118 applications.

CSI plans to match the $240 grant which still must be formally approved by DOE, with about $50,000 of its own commitment. The project task force of area education, business and government representatives now plans to meet and decide specifically where the money will be funneled, including through CSI curricula, and helping market exports abroad.

Project Coordinator Tony Mabbatt, who wrote most of the grant, said business people cooperating with the grant accepted "that business as usual wasn't really going to solve the problems of Idaho and the United States."

He suggested harvesting and irrigation equipment unique to Magic Valley's arid climate were areas ripe for international export.

"I don't know that anybody anywhere knows as much about dry-land irrigators as here," Mabbatt said.

Mabbatt, with 23 years of experience in foreign countries, including being a counsel for the U.S. Foreign Service, said Idaho provides "excellent tourist opportunities unavailable to Europeans."

"They have the funds, they just need to know how to get here," Mabbatt said, citing the state's mountains, open spaces and cowboys. "This is Mariboro country," he exclaimed.

Part of the research is aimed at overcoming uncertainty about breaking into the Egyptian potato market or selling unique seeds on the Pacific Rim.

"It's more than what you see on paper," said Kamal Hyder, president of Food Dynamics International. "They (small farmers) have desire, but it boggles the international trade specialist with the state Department of Commerce, described the uncertainty as similar to anxiously before traveling to a foreign country — not knowing where to go or what to do.

Which is not to say these business people are bashful.

"You know we're (Idaho farmers are) big in potatoes, but we haven't got the world market captured," Hyder said. "If you think there's no room to grow, you're wrong."

Project Director Mike Glenn, CSI assistant to the president, said the money for the next two years provides for merely beginning to developing exports.

"This is basically seed money," Glenn said.

University of Idaho also applied for a $200,000 grant under the program. Ron Curtis, UI director of international trade development, said he hasn't received word yet on whether UI received its grant.

Bonneville will pay fines, restore land at 3 hydro projects

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Bonneville Pacific Corp. of Salt Lake City will pay $30,000 in civil penalties and do $500,000 in restoration work in connection with construction of three hydroelectric projects in southern and eastern Utah, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency said Tuesday.

EPA charged that Bonneville violated the Clean Water Act when operating, road construction, damaged valuable wetlands in 1985 on Cedar Draw Creek near Buhl, Pigeon Cove on the Snake River north of Piler in 1984 and Badger Creek on Tejon River in June 1985.

Bonneville entered into a consent decree in U.S. District Court in Seattle to settle the complaint filed by the U.S. government, EPA said. The decree was filed Tuesday. EPA said.

Bonneville is admitting they were involved in certain actions which constitute a substantial portion of the violations, EPA said.

The decree was signed by representatives of Bonneville, EPA, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the Idaho Attorney General's office, EPA said.

Technically, Bonneville could have been fined $10,000 per day for unauthorized discharges into bodies of water. "That's why they entered the consent decree. They could have been fined a great deal of money," said Michelle Stevens, an environmental protection specialist with EPA in Boise.

The decree has been at least a year in the making and while negotiations were going on, the company began restoration work at Pigeon Cove and Cedar Draw. In mid-May the company planted vegetation at the two locations.

Hundreds of acres of canyon wall shrubland were disturbed by scouring and deposition of talus at Pigeon Cove, according to a report by Ecosystem Research Institute, a Bonneville consultant.

Even with the restoration work there will be a net loss of 14.2 acres at Pigeon Cove, according to the report. Bonneville spent about $250,000 to remove a rock jetty in the river which was created by blasting at Pigeon Cove, Stevens said.

At Cedar Draw approximately 2,000 cubic yards of rock and dirt fell into the creek at five locations, disturbing riparian habitat and filling one-half acre of wetlands, EPA said.

Damage at the Felk hydroelectric project on the Patuxent River near Potomac involved discharge of 1,000 linear feet of rock and soil into the river which completely blocked all fish passage in Badger Creek, EPA said.

Bonneville has completed much of the restoration work required by the decree, says Robie G. Russell, EPA's Northwest regional administrator in a press release.

The habitat is important environmentally because it traps the sediment, pesticides and other agricultural chemicals sent in irrigation runoff from going into the rivers, Stevens said.

At Crystal Springs on Cedar Draw the decree requires restoration of wetlands to their natural condition, EPA said. New wetlands will have to be created in those filled in by construction and nearby slopes will

Jerome approves override for schools

By The Times-News

JEROME — Jerome School District voters approved a $176,600 override levy by a 54 percent majority Tuesday.

Turnout was light with only 585 patrons casting ballots to pass the levy by a vote of 277.

"It will help us out immensely," Superintendent Richard Kugler said. "The money will be spent for classroom supplies and equipment, English books and materials, library books, operational costs, to build up a contingency reserve and to pay for such special programs as peer counseling and help for the vocationally handicapped."

This override was smaller than the $205,000 levy voters approved last year, but smaller than the $299,000 figure that school district officials began working with when they started considering a levy in April of this year.

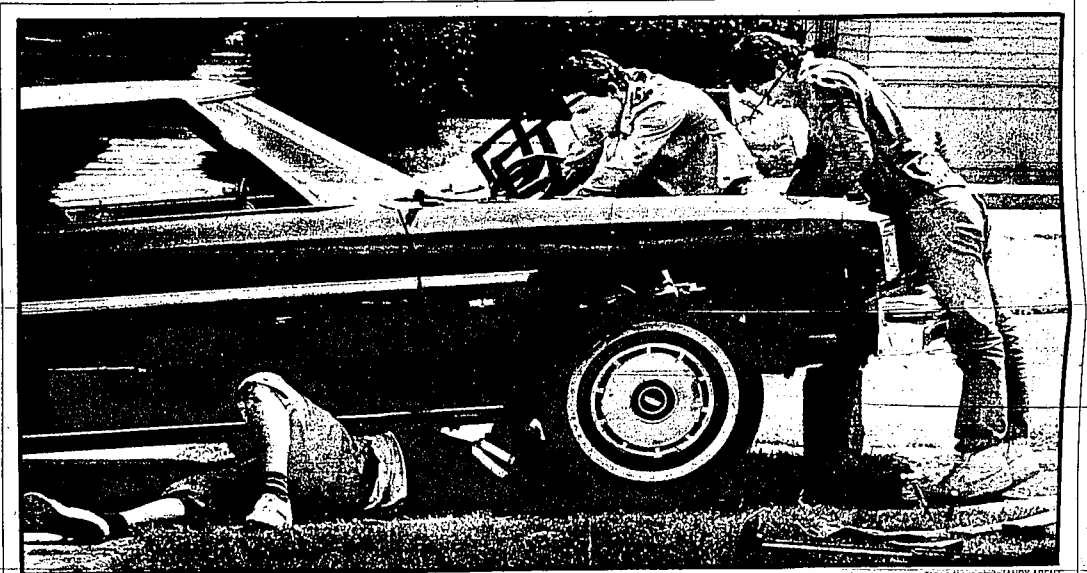

Basically the state did a little better job this year," Kugler said. The district expects a 5.9 percent increase in state funding next year, allowing officials to ask for less money from the voters, he said.

With the increased funding came a message from the Legislature that districts should begin working on cutting back on overrides, which the Jerome district did, Kugler said.

Last year 1,200 voters came out to support the supplemental levy, and passed it with a 62 percent majority. A portion of the override was to be used for the athletic program, including keeping the athletic director's job full-time.

Kugler alluded to last year's controversy in discussing the narrow margin of passage of the override for next year. He also said that "light times" and more money from the Legislature may have contributed to a closer vote Tuesday.

The levy passed Tuesday will raise property taxes for homeowners about $6.31 per $10,000 assessed property value.

11 communities to bid for U.S. West laboratory

By The Associated Press and The Times-News

BOISE — The State of Idaho and its major cities will join in a bidding for a $50 million research facility planned by U.S. West Inc., the "baby Bell" serving 14 states in the West and Midwest.

Gov. Cecil Andrus said Tuesday the state Department of Commerce and 11 communities, including Twin Falls and Burley, are preparing a proposal to bring U.S. West's Advanced Technologies laboratory to Idaho.

U.S. West, the corporate parent of Mountain Bell, last month announced plans to build the center. It will be set on 100 acres and eventually employ 1,500 workers.

The governors of each state served by U.S. West were encouraged to submit proposals.

"Idaho has a number of advantages for a research facility of this nature, and we intend to show the U.S. West site selection committee that Idaho has the people, facilities and programs that make it the best location for their new facility," Andrus said.

U.S. West sent out 10 pages of criteria, most of it in a detailed questionnaire. It describes the facility as a "clean" lab with no environmental effects and expresses a preference for ready access to major markets, research institutions and established residential areas.

In a letter to Andrus, U.S. West Chairman Jack MacAllister said the selection will hinge on five long-term factors: commitment to educational excellence; quality of life; convenient transportation for scientists and business people from throughout the world; access to technical businesses and institutions for research support; and a business climate which "will welcome us as a partner for the long term."

Immediate costs of land and construction will be important, but lesser factors.

The Department of Commerce is compiling a single proposal, which will include available sites from communities, said Wayne Hart, economic development specialist coordinating the project. Communities can also bid separately.

Executives for the Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce and the Burley Area Chamber of Commerce said Tuesday they plan to participate in the proposals. Both chambers are contacting business, educational and development

Judge orders Stigall to stand murder trial

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

GOODING — Ronald Stigall, 22, of Hagerman was ordered Tuesday morning to stand trial for the first degree murder of his stepfather, Wilbert Lora "Larry" Groves, 55, last April 23.

Magistrate Judge Melvin Edwards of Twin Falls bound Stigall over to 5th District Court immediately after closing arguments in a preliminary hearing Tuesday in Gooding. Judge Edwards found that evidence presented by Gooding County Prosecutor Lynn Nelson during the hearing Monday and Tuesday was adequate to show that Groves was murdered and that probable cause exists to indicate Stigall probably committed the crime.

The hearing began in Gooding Monday morning and resumed at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday when Nelson called Boise pathologist Dr. Delbert E. Scott to testify on the cause and time of Groves' death.

Edwards said evidence showing the killing was willful, unlawful and with malice and premeditation. He said Groves was killed from blows to the head with an iron weapon. He said at least some of the blows occurred in Gooding County.

Testimony from prosecution witnesses during the hearing indicated that Groves was first beaten in the mobile home where Stigall resided with his mother, Sandra Anderson Groves, and that he was then placed in the camper on a pickup truck B2

Fair Board puts new building in budget

By PAT MARCANFONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Budget-wise, the Twin Falls County Fair Board wants to remain status quo during the next fiscal year. But it did propose earmarking $100,000 of the budget to construct a new Produce Building sometime this fall after the fair.

The board meeting on Monday was also the last for Tom Shouse, who retired as fair manager after 23 years, and the first for new fair manager, Dan Peters.

In money matters, the fair board voted to recommend a proposed fair budget of $387,500 for the 1987-88 fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1. The proposed fair budget is the same as this year.

The board's proposed budget, along with proposals from other departments, will be worked into a larger county budget now being prepared by county budget officer and clerk, Dick Pence.

Although the fair board sought a budget of $387,500, it will adjust the operating budget to reflect the revenue from the fair, which is held in September.

Under the law, the fair board can't spend more than its budgets. But it isn't obligated to spend all the money budgeted. Although this fiscal year budget is $387,500, the board's operating on a revised budget of about $325,200, which is closer to the anticipated revenue from this year's fair.

Board members started to use the arrangement because the main part of the fair revenue arrives late in the fiscal year.

Part of the proposed fair budget for 1987-88 is an expected $100,000 appropriation from the county, Board Chairman Stan Snow said.

The board added a new line item of $100,000 in its proposed 1987-88 budget for the construction of a new Produce Building. The board had placed $15,000 from last year's budget in a dedicated fund for the building.

Depending on the revenue from this year's fair, the building might be constructed this fall, said Board member Don Kramer.

The board wants a new building because of roof problems with the current building, which is more than 20 years old. Last summer the building was found to be in violation of building codes. The board did order repairs to the building, which was opened during last year's fair.

Board members expect a new building can be constructed for about $100,000, which is the cost of the new Merchants Building next to the Produce Building.

In other business, the board bid farewell to Shouse and his wife Neoma, who had worked in the fair office for several years. His couple has been helping Peters in his transition to the job.

The board voted to send a letter of commendation to the couple for their years of service to the fair and county, and provide them with "got card" passes for free entry to the fair for the rest of their lives. Commissioner Judy Felton suggested the couple return during the fair for "appropriate public recognition."

"It's been a fun time for us. We've put our heart and soul in the fair," Shouse said. "It's been a fun time for us. We've put our heart and soul in the fair."

After the couple left the meeting, the board voted to offer Shouse $1,000 for a stove, dishwasher, wood stove and other items he had bought for the house on the fairgrounds he had resided in for many years. The house is fair property, but is provided free to the fair manager.

After the Shouses move, the house will be used by Peters.

Peters reported that many of the tools in the fair shop were also owned by Shouse, who would probably take them when he finished moving out in about one week.

The new manager added that he would also like to conduct a physical inventory of the property on the fairgrounds.

Grand jury meeting this week

TWIN FALLS — The federal grand jury convened this week in Boise. It is in the usual secrecy that surrounds grand jury procedure.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter said Tuesday that she could only confirm that the grand jury is in session in Twin Falls. She said she is prohibited from commenting on what cases may be scheduled to be heard by the jurors.

Male body still unidentified

TWIN FALLS — Efforts to identify a body found northwest of Buhl are still unfruitful, Twin Falls County Sheriff James Munns said Tuesday.

He added that his department is in the process of establishing some connections if the Federal Bureau of Investigation laboratory is able to obtain fingerprints.

"We have a feeling the tattoos that have been lifted from the victim's arms may be service related — in that they may have been done while the victim was in the military," Munns said. "If so, there would be fingerprints on record with the government."

The body of a white male about 30 to 40 years of age, was found May 21 in the vicinity of the abandoned road leading to the Magic Valley Project. An autopsy revealed the victim had died of blows to the head at least two weeks prior to the date the body was found. Munns said there have been no reports of missing persons received here as yet but he has had numerous calls. All have been checked out but none has shed light on the mystery body.

Train hits trailer; 2 hurt

HAZELTON — Two persons escaped with minor injuries when their four-wheel-drive vehicle, towing a small farm trailer loaded with aluminum pipe, collided with a train near Tuesday afternoon.

Idaho State Police and Jerome County officers who investigated said the accident occurred at about 4 p.m. on a private farm lane that crosses the railroad tracks, 2.5 miles east of Hazelton and just north of State Highway 25.

Clinton (Stan) Watson, 21, of Hazelton, and his mother, Becky Watson, 43, were both thrown into the windshield when the trailer was hit by the west-bound Union Pacific train. The impact whipped the towing vehicle around but it was not hit. ISP Trooper Bob Bingham said the two had been using their seat belts, both would have been unhurt. The train was traveling only about 40 miles per hour.

Bonneville has purchased and will protect wetlands in the vicinity of a hydro project at the Pigeon Cove site that will not support new growth.

Bonneville is required to remove rock from Badger Creek. The project has already done this, said Carl which Deputy Sheriff Todd Peterson said also saved the Watsons from serious injury.

Both were treated for minor facial injuries at St. Benedict's Family Medical Center in Jerome, and released. Damage to the train amounted to about $200. State officers cited Clinton Watson for inattention while driving.

Rosenbaum remains critical

TWIN FALLS — Officials at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise reported Rod Rosenbaum, 24, of Buhl remained in critical condition Tuesday night.

Officials said there has been no change in his condition since being admitted to the intensive care unit at the hospital Sunday night.

Rosenbaum suffered severe head injuries when he was thrown from a vehicle just north of the Nevada state line on U.S. Highway 93 about 5:30 p.m. Sunday.

Driver of the vehicle, James Bristol, 26, of Jackson, Wyo., is being treated in the intensive care unit at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls. His condition was listed as stable Tuesday night with some improvement.

Both men were thrown from the vehicle when it went out of control and rolled over. Idaho State police said neither was wearing a seat belt.

Wendell arts council forms

WENDELL — A new arts program will provide a backdrop and support for local talent, say organizers of the Wendell Community Arts Council.

Ramona Allen, one of about a dozen charter members, says the objective of the arts council is to broaden the scope and interest in art in the community.

Although, no programs have been selected, she said, the council is considering a production with a patriotic or constitutional theme in the last week of July.

The group is planning on using the Ace Theater in Wendell for performances. Theater owners Melvin and Vanna Jones said they want to make the theater available to the community.

Allen said the Wendell Community Arts Council is a representative of the Idaho Commission on the Arts. The second meeting will be Thursday at 8 p.m. at the Wendell Elementary School all-purpose room.

Anyone who is interested in any way is invited to come, Allen said. Those not interested in being in a production are needed to help with scenery, lights and other jobs.

Bonneville, which was founded in 1960, has 13 operating sites in the West, and has plans for another hydro project at Star Falls near Murtaugh. It is completing a project at Rock Creek in Twin Falls County and has projects on the lower portion of Hansen, Dietrich drop and the Latta in-bypass in Richfield, Peterson says.

reported that almost 50 people have applied for the grounds-keeper job left vacant by the resignation of Lynn Chandler, who worked for the fair.

Peters said that the board will be narrowing down the field to 10 finalists soon and wanted to thank those who applied.

Peters added that he will be meeting with the superintendents of each department. The board suggested he meet with the superintendents again after the fair for a critique of the event.

Another subject, Kramer reported that last month's truck pulling show earned the fair $5,792 "in cash." The show was well done and well attended, he said.

"It was skeptical at $12 a ticket," Kramer added.

With a success of the show, he urged the board to consider other events. Previously, the board had talked about inviting entertainers or shows similar to the truck pulling, but "had turned their backs" on the idea.

"Recent tractor show, however, did work," Kramer said.

"In other business, the board heard a report from Sheri Brown about plans for the Miss Rodeo Idaho Pageant in 1987.

The board agreed to help her find more financial support for the winner of the contest.

Snow said the county provides a saddle to the winner and pays her entrance fee to the Miss Rodeo America Contest.

"After that she's on her own," Snow said.

The fair budgets about $1,000 for the rodeo queen contest.

Brown, who is the volunteer coordinator, said contestants spend a lot of their own money on the contest.

Dr. Scott testified that other states have larger budgets for their rodeo queens.

The current Miss Rodeo America committee is seeking people or businesses to sponsor the rodeo queen contest.

Dr. Scott said conditions of the body shortly after it was located in the pickup camper in an apartment parking lot in Boise and autopsy indicated that Groves probably died early on April 23.

The body was first examined by Deputy Ada County Coroner Lynn Lawman at about 3 p.m. on that date. Dr. Scott said death occurred six to 12 hours prior to that time and that time of death was definitely prior to 11 a.m. on April 23.

In his final argument, Nelson said he had testified that the cause of the case is established by testimony indicating at least some of the wounds were administered in Hagerman. He said other preliminary hearing testimony by the defendant, Steve Stigal, as the murderer and shows premeditation in the crime.

Objections by Defense Attorney Steve Bolinger to admission of photographs of the body and the autopsy procedures were overruled. He argued that the prosecution had failed to prove probable cause for holding Stigal on the murder charge and asked for dismissal.

Judge Edwards returned Stigal to the custody of Gooding County Sheriff Robert Aja, and ordered him pending in the county jail without bonding district court retention in the case.

Laxalt to test Idaho waters

BOISE (AP) — Former Nevada governor and senator Paul Laxalt will come to Idaho this month to help determine whether he should run for the Republican presidential nomination, his Idaho co-chairman said Tuesday.

Plans for the Laxalt visit will be announced at a Boise news conference Friday, said Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa and Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho.

"We believe Paul Laxalt is an excellent candidate for president, especially from the Western perspective," said Craig. "As a Westerner himself, Mr. Laxalt understands us and our unique problems."

"Right now, we're attempting to determine if it's worth while to make the effort," said Cenarrusa. "We know it is worth ours."

Boise Water seeks rate cut

BOISE (AP) — Boise Water Corp. has asked the Idaho Public Utilities Commission to reduce its rates by more than 4 percent.

The company filed the request with the PUC on Monday to reflect the federal tax break it is receiving this year.

The requested reduction would lower water rates by 4.03 percent on all service rendered after Aug. 15, 1987. If the request is approved, said Ben Hepler, water corporation general manager.

He said the reduction would create a savings of about $8 annually on the average residential customer's bill of $200 a year.

It is the first time in memory that Boise Water has been able to file an application for reduced rates, Hepler said. The action is in response to the PUC request earlier this year that utilities file information about the impact of the new tax law on operations.

More than 2,000 acres burn

BOISE (AP) — More than 2,000 acres of public and private land near Boise burned over the weekend after a spark was thrown by a car's exhaust, Bureau of Land Management fire dispatcher Kim Christensen said.

The fire, the largest this year in southern Idaho, began five miles south of Boise about 4:30 p.m. Sunday and was extinguished by about 12:20 a.m. Monday, she said.

The blaze, started by an unknown car, consumed mostly cheat grass and some sagebrush. Of the 2,080 acres that burned, 1,980 are privately owned and the other 120 acres are owned by the BLM, Ms. Christensen said.

Two six-member BLM crews fought the fire. There was no property damage.

Baker overturns tax footnote

BOISE (AP) — A footnote to new federal tax laws, which Idaho officials said could have cost the state $2 million per year in investment income, has been placed on hold by Treasury Secretary James Baker.

State Treasurer Lydia Justice Edwards and Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, said Tuesday Baker has issued a ruling which in effect overturns the footnote. It directs state and local treasurers to rely on existing regulations until new ones are written.

"Our states are facing the end of their fiscal years," said Craig, "and are planning their investments. As it stood, the rules had been changed so drastically that treasurers didn't know what to do."

Final action on the regulation, which affects state tax anticipation notes, has been put off until new regulations are written, Mrs. Edwards said.

Bannock to keep county fair

DOWNEY (AP) — Bannock County officials have assured residents of this area that they have no intention of eliminating the county fair held in the southern part of the county.

"There is no way the South Fair is going to be eliminated," said Commissioner Tom Katsilometes. Some local residents have expressed concern that the community would lose its traditional summer fair.

Katsilometes made the statement after South Fair Superintendent Keith Anderson asked the fate of the annual event during a meeting of the County Fair Board at Downey on Monday.

This year the South Fair is slated from Aug. 10-16 and the North Fair will be Aug. 17-22. Traditionally, there have been two fairs because of the county's size and economic differences.

Court denies damages for scared horse injury

BOISE (AP) — The Court of Appeals has agreed with an insurance company that it did not have to cover a Bannock County man for damages he suffered when a passing vehicle frightened his horse and it fell on him.

The uninsured motorist policy purchased by Richard Miller from U.S. Fidelity and Guaranty Insurance Co. insured him from damages caused by an uninsured motorist who "hit" or "struck" Miller.

Miller's 6th District Court lawsuit alleged a truck, whose driver did not stop, passed very close to Miller and his horse, raising a cloud of dust and rocks that caused his horse to go out of control and fall on him.

The Court of Appeals on Tuesday unanimously agreed with 6th

District Judge Peter McDermott, who held that Miller was not "hit" or "struck" under terms of the policy.

In other decisions released Tuesday, the Court of Appeals upheld the drug conviction of Randy Dale Nab in a Minidoka County case. It rejected Nab's argument that he was improperly convicted at a second trial after the judge declared a mistrial at the first when a juror failed to show up. The court also rejected Nab's appeal arguments over testimony by his ex-wife.

The Supreme Court affirmed a jury finding against Mary and Jesus Luna's claim against Shockey Sheet Metal and Welding Co. The lawsuit was filed after Ms. Luna was burned while working at the Ore-Ida Foods, Inc., plant at Burley.

The Lunas argued it was wrong for the defense to present an argument to the jury that may have led the jury to think that it thought Ore-Ida was at fault, to rule that the sheet metal company was not. Ore-Ida was not a party to the lawsuit, because it paid Ms. Luna benefits under Idaho's workman compensation law. Justice Stephen Bistline dissented, saying he feared the jury was misled or confused or misled and confused by the jury instruction.

FCC eyeing winning of radio franchises

CROSSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission is investigating whether several cellular radio franchises — including one for Boise, Idaho — were improperly obtained by Crossville, Tenn., residents, an FCC official said Tuesday.

In a recent FCC national lottery involving 160,000 applications for car telephone franchises, 11 people with Crossville connections won — odds that are considered unlikely, said Kevin Kelley, chief of the mobile services division of the FCC.

"Our two main questions are, are they the real party of interest, and are they qualified," Kelley said.

He said about 5,000 applications were received from Crossville, and about 100 were associated with Crossville attorney Tom Looney.

Sanctions little felt

GARDEN CITY (AP) — Trade sanctions imposed by Congress against South Africa last year cut only one aspect of trade with that country and need not limit more extensive relations, a South African diplomat says.

"Ironically, we're in a better position than we were a year ago," Victor Zazera, Los Angeles consultant-general-designate for the South African government, said Monday night.

He spoke at a reception organized by South African representatives in Garden City.

Looney did not return a telephone call to his Crossville office Tuesday. He did not return a telephone call after a message was left with his answering machine at home.

The franchises in question are for Arebico, Puerto Rico; Fargo, N.D.; Moorhead, Minn.; Boise, Idaho; Lynchburg, Va.; St. Cloud, Minn.; Waterloo-Cedar Falls, Iowa; Anderson, Ind.; Steubenville, Ohio; Weirton, W. Va.; Jackson, Mich.; Eau Claire, Wis.; Alexandria, La.; and Benton Harbor, Mich.

The FCC offers the franchises through lotteries for applicants who have proven that they are financially qualified, have access to necessary technical know-how and are not seeking the franchise for someone else, Kelley said.

I'm in love with a wonderful girl

"I can tell she likes me, too. She's so good to me. She's always there in my moments of need. I hate to admit it but right now there are some things I can't do by myself. I won't go into details but you can figure them out for yourself. This wonderful girl is so warm and tender—the ideal helpmate. There's only one thing I would change about her, (although she's made a lot of changes on me). She's always dressed in white." When we get married, I'm going to buy her some fancy clothes. By the way, do you think I'm too young to get married?"

Currie thinks Ada County may offer candidate

MOSCOW (AP) — Unsuccessful 1986 Democratic congressional challenger William Currie, originally looking for a campaign as a test run for 1988, has begun reassessing the prospects for a second assault on incumbent Republican Congressman Larry Craig.

"I don't think someone from the north is going to be able to pull it off," the Bonners Ferry businessman said. "Larry Craig has to be unseated, absolutely, and we need to find the best person to do it. I'm beginning to think we need someone from Ada County."

Currie, who stepped into the 1986 race in late spring after likely Democratic nominee Pete Busch was killed in an airplane crash, captured less than a third of the vote in a woefully underfinanced campaign against the four-term lawmaker. He claimed only a quarter of the vote in Ada County, the state's most populous.

"I'm beginning to think because of my lack of fund raising in the southern part of the state and the low number of votes that there may be a stronger candidate," Currie said.

"I was a pinch-hitter last time," he said. "I was hoping to be successful enough to have momentum going into the '88 race. When I look at the results in Ada County where we worked so hard, I thought, 'Wait a minute. I may not be the strongest candidate.'"

"It's going to take someone who knows where the money is, and that's Ada and Canyon counties," Currie said.

A likely prospect to take on Craig, Currie said, is Boise stockbroker Larry LaRocco, who unsuccessfully challenged Craig in 1982 and then lost a bid last fall to unseat GOP state Senate President Pro Tem James Risch in what became the most expensive legislative race in state history.

But LaRocco has indicated a preference for sitting out next year's campaign in favor of another congressional bid in 1990, a year when some political observers believe senior Republican U.S. Sen. Jimmie McClure might retire and Craig will make a bid for that seat. McClure has made no formal announcement about his political future yet.

"I tend to agree with Bill that I could give (Craig) a very good run for his money, and I've had a number of people encourage me to do it," LaRocco said. "But I think the answer is, 'No.'"

Currie has not ruled out a 1988 campaign against Craig, and at times he talks like he is on the stump.

"The bottom line is we cannot have a man with a rightwing voting record get into that Senate in 1990," he said. "He doesn't belong here. He belongs in southern Oklahoma, way back in the late 1940s."

Financial woes grip hospital

AMERICAN FALLS (AP) — Administrator Frank McNamara says the Harms Memorial Hospital is losing money and may have to close.

McNamara told members of the hospital's board last week there has been a two-thirds decline in the number of patients served by the hospital since 1983. The hospital, which has 21 beds and a 20-bed nursing home, had 2,100 patient-days in 1983 but just 700 last year. It averaged just 1.5 patients per day in November and December of last year and April of this year.

The hospital needs at least three patients per day to break even, he said.

McNamara said there has been an increase in the number of Medicare-Medicaid patients cut in the reimbursement for those patients. He said the hospital billed Medicare $163,700 for one patient but received only $86,482 reimbursement.

Power County voters last year authorized formation of a hospital district, which can levy property taxes. But income from the tax won't be collected until late this year and money from that source won't be available until December of January.

The hospital borrowed $240,000 through tax anticipation notes in April.

McNamara said a bright spot is the nursing home, which is running at 95 percent of capacity. Income from the nursing home has increased to 28 percent of total hospital income and is paying many of the bills.

McNamara and board members Keith Stockings and Jerry Hubbs met recently with officials of Banrock Regional Medical Center, Pocatello, to discuss a possible alliance.

AIDS paper now available

BOISE (AP) — A mass-produced brochure on Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome will be distributed on request to private employers in Idaho, a state health official says.

Dr. Fritz Dixon, chief of the Bureau of Preventive Medicine in the Department of Health and Welfare, said about 32,000 brochures have been printed so far. Some of them were included with state employee pay checks last week.

The brochure covers basic facts about the deadly disease AIDS, including what it is and how it is contracted, said State Epidemiologist Dr. Charles Brokopp and state health educator Laurie Fitzpatrick, who wrote the text.

"We've had mostly favorable reaction. I'm not aware of any unfavorable comments," Dixon said.

Man's body found in Payette River

HOHSESHOE BEND (AP) — The body of a Horseshoe Bend man was found in the Payette River on Monday about five miles downstream from where his car was discovered in the river earlier in the day.

Melvin R. Francis, 62, was found by searchers from Boise and Gem counties at 2:48 p.m., Boise County Sheriff's Deputy Chuck Richards said.

Francis' car was discovered in the river below Idaho Highway 55, about one mile north of Horseshoe Bend, according to the Idaho State Police, which is investigating the accident.

Butler due in court today

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — The head of north Idaho's Aryan Nations church is scheduled to appear before a U.S. magistrate today to be arraigned on a federal sedition charge, authorities said.

Richard Butler, 63, of Hayden Lake, Idaho, has been free on $100,000 bond since he was released from jail on May 19.

He had been in custody since surrendering on April 24, two days after the indictments were handed down against him and 14 other white supremacists nationwide.

Butler suffered a heart attack while in jail in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. He later was hospitalized and underwent two heart-related surgeries, including a quadruple bypass on May 1. He was released from the hospital on May 18.

Butler has refused to talk with reporters since his arrest. He heads the group formally known as the Church of Jesus Christ Christian (Aryan Nations).

U.S. Attorney Michael Fitzhugh said Monday that the government will ask that Butler's bond remain at $100,000, pending trial.

Butler and the others indicted in April now are scheduled to stand trial beginning July 6 on charges that they conspired to overthrow the U.S. government. The trial is expected to be postponed at least a few months.

Christians, Moslems join in strike to protest assassination

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christians and Moslems, displaying rare unity in a nation shattered by 12 years of sectarian violence, joined in a strike Tuesday to protest the assassination of Prime Minister Rashid Karami.

The 65-year-old Karami, serving his 10th term as prime minister, was killed Monday when a bomb exploded aboard a Lebanese army helicopter flying him from north Lebanon to Beirut.

Interior Minister Abdullah Rassi, who was traveling with Karami in the helicopter, disputed army officers' accounts that the bomb was concealed in Karami's suitcase case. Rassi claimed the device was planted before the French-built Puma took off from the Adma military base in the Christian heartland to pick up Karami, a Sunni Moslem, at a north Lebanon base.

Army officers said a time-bomb or a pressure bomb ripped through the helicopter's left side about 10 minutes after it left the Kubbeh army base. Coroner Joseph Sada said he believed "the bomb was planted behind the prime minister's seat." The army officers, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the explosives were placed in the prime minister's attaché case which was lying in his lap.

Kassi, who was sitting near my knee. He was dead," Rassi said, his voice choking with emotion. Asked who might have been behind the assassination, he added: "Israel is the only beneficiary. The crime is aimed at undermining Lebanese unity and efforts to reunify the country."

Rassi, a member of the Greek Orthodox Church, is pro-Syrian and is allied with Moslem politicians against the right-wing, Christian Lebanese Forces.

Vote counting in Philippines mired in assorted challenges

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Three weeks after an election President Corazon Aquino called the cleanest in Philippine history, vote counting is mired in a flood of complaints and pro-fraud from both opposition and pro-Aquino candidates.

The center-right Grand Alliance for Democracy has asked the Supreme Court to reverse consideration of its petition that the election be thrown out because of alleged fraud by Mrs. Aquino's "People Power" coalition. Juan Ponce Enrile, whom the president fired as defense minister last November, leads the Alliance. The court rejected its petition last week.

possible "irregularities" in some districts. After talking over from Ferdinand E. Marcos, last February, she promised a new style of politics free of vote-buying and intimidation that marked his administration and those of his predecessors. Charges of fraud in the Feb. 7, 1986, election in which Mrs. Aquino ousted Marcos were a major spur to the popular uprising that forced him into exile less than three weeks later after two decades as president.

Cake, sherry highlights of 114th birthday fete

SWANSEA, Wales (AP) — Anna Eliza Williams, listed as the world's oldest person, celebrated her 114th birthday Tuesday with a slice of cake and her annual glass of sherry. Mrs. Williams, frail and unable to talk at length but otherwise in good health, marked the day with a party at the Tudor Old People's Home, where she lives. "She does realize she is a very special person," Dianne Evans, Swansea's head nurse, told The Associated Press. "But she's not one for great excitement. She just takes everything quietly."

Swansea, a southern Wales town, also is the hometown of Britain's oldest man, former miner John Evans who will be 110 on Aug. 19. Last year, Evans received a heart pacemaker and missed the hospital staff by returning home three days after surgery. According to the Guinness Book of World Records, Mrs. Williams became the oldest living person when Mamie Keith of Liver-

Britain considers reprisals

LONDON (AP) — The government said Tuesday it is losing patience with Iran's failure to apologize for the beating of a British diplomat and is reported considering reprisals in such fields as travel and trade. "We'll stand no messing around with our diplomats," Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe told reporters while campaigning in Liverpool for the July 11 general election. "Our patience is not unlimited and we are looking for an early reply."

The Foreign Office said Tuesday night that Britain's charge d'affaires in Tehran, Christopher Macfie, could not arrange a meeting with Foreign Minister Ali-Akbar Velayati. Iranian Charge d'Affaires Mohammad Akhondzadeh Basti was summoned to the Foreign Office, but did not provide an apology or explanation for the diplomat's treatment. Chaplin was abducted last Thursday in Tehran, held 24 hours and beaten. He now faces serious charges that have not been disclosed.

Tamil guerrillas ambush bus then slay 30 Buddhist monks

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — More than 50 Tamil guerrillas, dressed as soldiers and armed with machine guns, ambushed a bus, dragged off Buddhist monks and massacred 30 monks and three other passengers, the government said Tuesday.

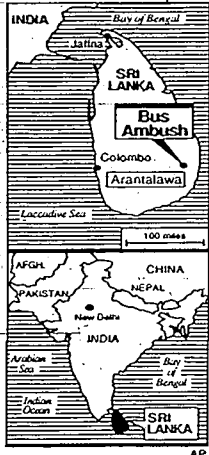

A report by the United News of India news agency said 35 people, including 33 monks, were killed.

The Sri Lankan government said about 10 other people were wounded in the Monday night attack at an eastern tea plantation near Arantalawa village in Ampara district.

Prime Minister Ranasinghe Premadasa told Parliament that among those killed was the district's chief priest, Hegoda Indrasara, 58, who was taking 45 monks for a special consecration ceremony in the central tea-growing capital of Kandy. A Buddhist temple there claims it has a tooth relic of Buddha.

It was one of the worst incidents of sectarian killing blamed on Tamil extremists in the four-year ethnic strife, which has claimed about 6,000 lives on this island nation.

Tamils, who are mostly Hindus, say they are discriminated against by the Sinhalese Buddhists on Sri Lanka. Tamil militants demand their own homeland in the east and north of this island country, which lies just off southern India.

Tamil guerrillas ambushed a government-owned bus, ordered it driven slightly less than a mile off the main road to Kandy into a tea plantation, ordered the monks and five other non-Tamils to get off and opened fire.

Premadasa described the killing as the work of the most "brutal by any terrorists anywhere in the world."

There was no claim of responsibility. The government and Tamil secessionists blamed each other.

The killings occurred eight days after the army launched a major offensive and wiped out key Tamil insurgent hideouts in the north. News of the massacre spread rapidly in this predominantly Buddhist country, where monks are known for piety and their simple way of life. There were reports of tension as officials tried to soften the news and prevent a backlash by Sinhalese against Tamils.

Premadasa told lawmakers the killing was "a deliberate act to provoke violence by the Sinhalese Buddhist majority against the Tamil Hindu minority."

Premadasa urged the Sinhalese to stay calm and non-violent in keeping with Buddha's teachings.

The Buddhist clergy has become increasingly militant and opposed to the administration of President Junius R. Jayewardene. They complain his government cannot protect Sri Lanka's 16 million people, both Sinhalese and Tamils.

India set to send aid to rebel units

RAMESWARAM, India (AP) — India said Tuesday it will send fishing boats loaded with food and medicine for Sri Lanka's Tamils despite Sri Lankan threats to blow the relief armada out of the water.

Sri Lanka accuses the aid, which India said might start arriving today, is not needed.

Officials said the government will supply any relief needed in the north here and is dominated by the Tamil minority, where the Sri Lankan military has conducted an eight-day offensive against rebel groups.

Diplomats were said to be meeting in an attempt to resolve the crisis between the island formerly called Ceylon and its huge northern neighbor, whose own Tamil minority is more than three times Sri Lanka's total population.

Tamil rebel groups, all with exile headquarters in southern India, have urged Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi to intervene to halt the Sri Lankan military offensive.

India says its planned shipments of food, medicine and fuel from this small southern port to the peninsula are "humanitarian aid" for civilians trapped in the warfare.

Sri Lankan officials say India, which often serves as a mediator in the Tamil-Sinhalese conflict, seeks political confrontation.

Foreign Minister Shahuk Hameed said Tuesday that landing Indian aid without approval would be "a violation of the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Sri Lanka."

Prime Minister Ranasinghe Premadasa asked Gandhi to cancel the operation and told Parliament that President Junius R. Jayewardene had ordered the armed forces to defend Sri Lanka's territorial waters.

Premadasa said serious trouble could result if Indian boats were fired on accidentally or Sri Lankan civilians thought India was invading.

"There could be a backlash against innocent Tamils," he said. "If that happens, India should take responsibility."

Thousands of Cambodian political prisoners tortured, group charges

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thousands of political prisoners in Cambodia have been subjected to torture that includes confinement in coffin-like cells and underground chambers, Amnesty International said Wednesday.

Torture methods also include beatings with unwhipped wooden staves and iron bars, whippings with chains and rubber hoses, electric shock, burning with hot irons and near-suffocation with plastic bags, the London-based human rights organization said in a report.

It said people were detained and tortured at centers throughout the country by both Cambodian and Vietnamese personnel.

Vietnam invaded Cambodia in December 1978, ousted the Khmer Rouge government of Pol Pot, ending a four-year reign of terror in which many as 2.5 million people died. In January 1979, Vietnam installed a new government in Cambodia.

An alliance of the Khmer Rouge and two other groups has been fighting a guerrilla war since against the Cambodian army and an estimated 150,000 Vietnamese occupation troops.

Amnesty's report quoted a former prison interrogator as saying: "Any activity felt to be subversive can be reason to arrest, imprison and torture someone."

It said other former officials reported following the maxim: "It is OK to arrest someone by mistake as long as no one is released by mistake."

In an interview with The Associated Press last week, Premier Hun Sen of Cambodia said his government held rather a small number of political prisoners. He called allegations by Amnesty International "an exaggeration."

Hun Sen may have been referring to charges in the Amnesty report issued Wednesday. A spokesman for the group said several copies were sent to the premier in advance.

The spokesman, who asked that his name not be used, estimated the number of political prisoners in Cambodia at about 5,000. He said

Amnesty had monitored the human rights situation there for years and a "consistent picture" had been assembled.

A summary statement attached to the 89-page report said: "The guilt or innocence of the vast majority appears to have been arbitrarily decided by (the) arresting or interrogating authorities. Only one political trial has been made public since 1983."

In London, Amnesty spokesman

Sean Stiles told AP: "Many of the people (detained) have had nothing to do with the armed conflict with guerrillas. He said 'several thousand' political prisoners had suffered a wide variety of tortures."

According to Amnesty International, torture was used to extract "confessions" or get information on other people suspected of opposing the regime.

LA runs Celtics into the hardwood

By BILL BARNARD
The Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — The Los Angeles Lakers' racehorse instincts weren't dulled a bit by an eight-day layoff.

The Lakers, running the fast break at every opportunity Tuesday night, took advantage of the leg-weary Boston Celtics for a 126-113 victory in the opener of the NBA championship series. It was the first game since May 25 for Los Angeles, which swept Seattle in four games in the Western Conference finals.

"It was apparent that we had a lot of energy," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "Our running game was sharp especially in the beginning. I was concerned about timing, but it obviously didn't take long to get it down."

The No. 1 speedburners for the Lakers were James Worthy and

Magic Johnson. "It was crucial for us to control the tempo," said Worthy, who had 33 points, 10 assists and nine rebounds and finished 16-for-23 from the field. "It's hard to completely control the game against the Celtics because they keep coming at you."

"But we were able to control the tempo and intensity." "Because of our quickness, we got some easy baskets, no doubt about it," said Johnson, who added 29 points, eight rebounds and 13 assists while not committing a turnover.

"But when you're in the game, it's hard to tell if the difference is that dramatic."

The Lakers, who had an NBA-best 65-17 regular-season record and have won 12 of 13 playoff games, hit 55.6 percent of their shots for the game and 60.4 percent in the first half.

They will be looking for a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series Thursday night at the Forum. Riley said the Lakers will need a cautious approach despite their first-game success.

"We have to keep in mind that all we did was light a fire in the Celtics," Riley said. "Hey, they're the defending champions. They'll come back stronger."

The Celtics, who struggled to seven-game victories over Detroit and Milwaukee in the Eastern Conference playoffs, never caught up after Los Angeles scored the first nine points of the game.

"Their running game was totally spectacular," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "Neither one of us scored in the first minute or so and I guess Magic and Worthy said, 'Enough of that, let's run.' They did just that and after that it was a romp."

Celtics forward-Larry Bird, who scored 32 points, said the Lakers' speed may have been deceiving. "You always look fast when you're shooting layups," Bird said. "Everyone looks fast on the fast break. They had four or five good runs and that's too many to give them."

The Celtics are trying to become the first team to repeat as champions since Boston won two straight titles in 1969 and 1970.

Worthy, who averaged 30.5 points against the SuperSonics and was hitting 63 percent of his field goal attempts in the playoffs, hit 13 of his first 15 shots in the game as the Lakers raced to an 81-60 lead with 7:47 left in the third period.

Byron Scott had 20 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 21 points and 10 rebounds. Robert Parish had 16 points and Kevin McHale 15 for Boston.

Bird hit 11 consecutive shots during one stretch of the second and third periods and he and Danny Ainge led a short-lived Boston rally after Worthy hit two baskets in an 8-0 streak that gave the Lakers their 81-60 lead.

Bird was 7-for-7 in the third quarter and missed only three 3-point goals as the Celtics cut the 21-point deficit to 95-83 with 1:59 left in the third quarter. But Worthy hit two baskets as the Lakers scored six of the final eight points of the period for a 101-85 advantage.

A 9-0 Los Angeles sport early in the fourth quarter clinched the first game of the series, the third meeting in the finals between the two NBA titans since 1984.

The teams split their first two meetings in 1984 and 1985, and both have three titles in the 1990s.

Worthy scored the first seven points of a 12-0 spurty early in the second quarter, giving the Lakers a 51-30 lead with 7:52 remaining in the first half.

High reach

Two years into college career, Welty jumps to NCAA finals

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

POCATELLO — Two weeks ago Friday, Idaho State University sophomore Amber Welty started across the artificial turf stadium toward the Brenco Stadium high jump pit, 10 yards away. The bar was set at 6 feet, 1/4 inch. After having already run in seven events in 48 hours at the Mountain West Athletic Conference Track and Field Championships, for Welty it might as well have been at 16-11.

"I was really tired," said Welty, a 1985, Twin Falls High School graduate who still holds the Idaho Class A-I record in the girls high jump. "I just finished running a PR (personal record) in the 100 (meters) in the final event of the MWAC heptathlon, which is my least-favorite event, the day before. I knew if I was going to do it, it was going to be all on technique."

Welty, who had broken the 6-foot barrier 48 hours before on the first day of the MWAC heptathlon after never gone higher than 5-11 1/2, in a six-year-old high jumping career, did it again flawlessly on her first attempt. For the second time in two days, she beat the qualifying standard for this week's NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships in Baton Rouge, La.

"I wasn't conscious about what the height meant until I got out of the (high jump) pit and looked at the board, where they had the (NCAA) qualifying height listed," said Welty, who broke the MWAC record with her 6-0 jump in the heptathlon. "Then it hit me."

"There was no pressure except to score as many points as I could," she explained. "It was just me and the (high jump) bar."

According to Welty's coaches, that pretty much sums up why she has gone from a 5-7 1/2 high school high jumper to one of the best 12 collegiate jumpers in the country in two years.

"She's the kind of individual who doesn't seem to let things get to her," said Twin Falls High Coach Duane Stands, who coached Welty during her senior season. "She is a very determined athlete. She has a lot of self-confidence — she's never afraid."

Welty, who will compete in the NCAA high jump preliminaries Thursday in Baton Rouge, has been a bonus recruit for Dave Nielsen, the ISU head men's and women's track coach who two years ago saw Welty more as a potential heptathlete than as a high jumper.

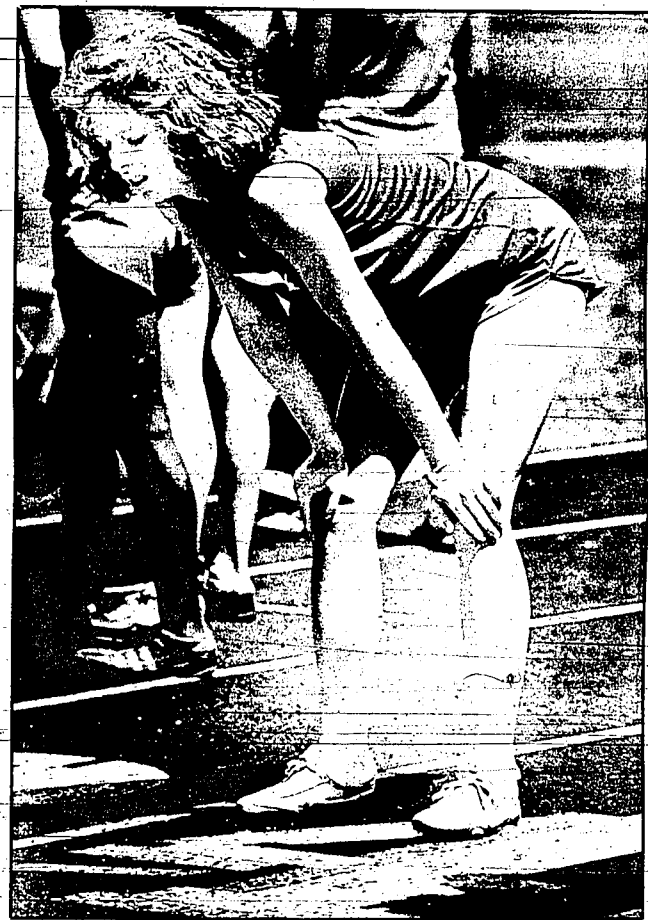

"I don't know that I saw in her the potential of a 6-foot high jumper," said Nielsen, "when she came into the program, she did some things very different technically than the way I coach. The way she came into the bar was more characteristic of a weaker type of jumper."

Nielsen changed several things about Welty's approach to the bar, but some things he didn't try to change. "Technique is important for a high jumper, but you can very easily coach a 6-foot high jumper down to a 5-6 high jumper," he said. "The thing about Amber is that she remembers what she's learned once she's learned it, and she's a hard worker."

"Amber still had a lot to learn about her approach when she came here," said Stands. "But she didn't have trouble over the bar."

Welty came to Twin Falls High as a two-time state high school high jump champion from the Theroux (population 1,100), N.M., where she attended a high school the size of Buhl's.

"The coach down there got me into the high jump and taught me the basics," she said. "I think I learned the most from him, but I think going to Twin Falls helped me a lot too. They have a rubberized track and much better facilities than I've been used to."

Welty was a state-class hurdler and long jumper at TFHS as well.

Leonard helps save kidnaped toddler

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Washington, D.C. man who had talked to the toddler only once before was arraigned Tuesday in D.C. Superior Court on charges of kidnaping.

Tony Spaulding was arraigned before D.C. Superior Court Commissioner Paul Bauxbaum and was held on $5,000 bond.

District police said they were making no progress in the case Monday — until one officer noticed the suspect was wearing a T-shirt with Leonard's picture on it.

Police said an officer told Spaulding that Leonard would want Spaulding to tell them where the missing 18-month-old child was located.

Police said Spaulding then told them the only person he would talk to was Leonard.

Police called the recently retired world middleweight champion and warned him they thought the suspect was under the influence of drugs. Still, Leonard agreed to come.

"It was a strange situation," Leonard said in an interview on the NBC Today Show. "I felt uncomfortable talking to someone I didn't know."

Whenever I'm called upon, especially for a kid or youngster, I will try to accommodate."

Given a police escort from his nearby Potomac, Md., home, Leonard arrived at Spaulding's southeast Washington apartment just after 10 p.m. Monday.

After talking privately with Spaulding for several moments, Spaulding and Leonard came out of the apartment.

Spaulding then led authorities to a wooded area in southeast Washington, where the child — Alicia Washington — was found tied to a tree, but otherwise unharmed.

Leonard said he was apprehensive as the officers approached the tree where the baby was bound. "They said they saw the baby, but they didn't know if the baby was alive. It was a strange feeling, because I have a younger kid too," Leonard told the Today show. "I hope I never have to experience that again," said Leonard, who is the father of two boys, ages 3 and 13.

Leonard said he never did learn why the man had taken the child. "It was inexplicable," he said. "I

Star N. Carolina back arrested for murder

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Derrick Fenner, a college running back who broke Atlantic Coast Conference records, surrendered to authorities Tuesday to face a first-degree murder charge stemming from what police have described as a "drug-related shooting spree."

Fenner, 20, left summer school classes at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill to answer a warrant issued Monday by Hyattsville, Md., police. He was arraigned in the May 23 shooting of Marcellus Leach, 19, who died of a gunshot wound to the head. Fenner was sent without bond to the Prince George's County Department of Corrections, police said.

Tuesday's proceeding was the second time since April 1984 the football star, known for a flamboyant style on and off the field, faced criminal charges, according to Prince George's County court records.

Fenner, who led the Atlantic Coast Conference in rushing with 1,239 yards last season, was declared academically ineligible for the spring semester and had returned for summer school in hopes of regaining his eligibility.

Fenner, who was suspended from the university last fall for academic problems, was arrested April 9 in Clinton, Md., after police stopped and searched a truck he was driving. Police found a .38-caliber revolver and ammunition under the seat, and 25 vials of a white substance in Fenner's jacket pocket, records show.

In that case, Fenner was charged with cocaine possession

Younger Griffey No. 1 pick in draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Ken Griffey Jr. became the first son of a major league player to be the No. 1 choice in baseball's free agent amateur draft when the Seattle Mariners picked the high school outfielder Tuesday and signed him less than 20 minutes later.

The 17-year-old Griffey was waiting at home in West Chester, Ohio, with his father, an Atlanta Braves outfielder, during the draft which was conducted in a conference call from the commissioner's office.

Contract terms were not disclosed, but Griffey said Monday that he wanted a $100,000 signing bonus. A baseball source said that was an "accurate ballpark figure" for what Moeller High School star will receive.

Dick Balderson, the Mariners vice president for baseball operations, said Seattle took Griffey because of his physical talent without thinking about how long it would take for him to reach the major leagues.

Griffey said he expects to get there in three to four years.

"We think he's a complete player," Balderson said. "He's an above-average runner, an above-average hitter, has above-average power. You can polish a few stones but you can't make a guy hit 30 home runs if he's only capable of hitting two."

KEN GRIFFEY JR. A lot like dad

Balderson said he projected that Griffey could be capable of hitting 25 home runs a season and consistently batting .300 when he reached the majors.

Griffey will begin his professional career on Monday when he joins the American League team in Seattle for three days of workouts. He will report to the Mariners rookie club at Bellingham of the Northwest League on June 11. Balderson said Griffey would remain at Bellingham for the entire season.

Griffey batted .478 with seven home runs, 26 runs batted in and 13 stolen bases in 13 tries this season in 24 games.

The teen-ager said he saw himself as a copy of his father.

"We do basically everything the same. We hit, run and throw the same," he said.

His father disagreed.

"I'm not to throw power than I will ever have. He hits it a lot harder. At his age now, he's a lot faster than I was," Griffey Sr. said.

The younger Griffey said he learned from his father, but added that having a father as a major-league player had good and bad points.

"The advantage is that he could

NL: Reds top Cards in battle of frontrunners

CINCINNATI (AP) — Nick Esasky nudged to laugh about his game-winning single, a soft liner to center field that he described as an appropriate outcome for a good pitch.

Esasky lined a solo homer to ignite Cincinnati's comeback from a two-run deficit Tuesday night, then hit a weak single to center to snap a six-inning tie and give the Reds a 3-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Esasky's hit was the first in five games this season against the Cardinals. Cincinnati was 7-5 against St. Louis last season.

Esasky is hitting .579 with nine RBI in his last five games.

Baseball
"He's hot," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said. "He hit a pretty good pitch on Tunnell for that blooper."

The Cardinals took a 2-0 lead after four innings against starter Tom Browning before Esasky started the Reds' comeback.

Ozzie Smith walked, stole second and scored on Tony Pendleton's single in the first inning. Tony Eason singled with one out in the fourth, stole his third base and came around on Tunnell's two-out single.

The Cardinals didn't get the maximum from their early opportunities, however. They were caught stealing twice and stranded four runners in scoring position during Browning's five innings.

Esasky's hit was the first in five games this season against the Cardinals. Cincinnati was 7-5 against St. Louis last season.

Esasky is hitting .579 with nine RBI in his last five games.

Esasky broke Tunnell's shutout with a solo homer leading off the fifth, his second in two nights.

The Reds edged ahead in the sixth when Tunnell walked Eric Davis and sent him to second on his second bat of the game. Parker doubled Deane Davis and scored the winning run on Esasky's two-out single.

Esasky's hit was the first in five games this season against the Cardinals. Cincinnati was 7-5 against St. Louis last season.

Esasky is hitting .579 with nine RBI in his last five games.

AL: Struggling Milwaukee discovers how to handle Royals

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Glenn Braggs and his Milwaukee Brewers teammates broke loose Tuesday night, ripping 15 hits in a 14-3 rout over the Kansas City Royals that was their fourth straight victory.

"Everybody contributed in one way or the other. It's the first time we were playing good. It's good we're starting to play a little better ball now that we're playing a couple of first place teams.

Maybe this will be a little tuneup for us when we get to the Yankees," Bragg said.

The Brewers, four games back of New York in the American League East, began a four-game series with the Kansas City Royals. Milwaukee has had separate streaks of 13 victories and 12 losses this season.

Lendl, Evert sweep into French Open semis

By ANDREW WARSJAW
The Associated Press

PARIS — Defending champions Ivan Lendl and Chris Evert swept into the semifinals of the French Open Tuesday, along with women's top seed Martina Navratilova, who reached top form after a winless start to the year.

The victories by Evert and Navratilova set up the 72nd meeting between the two powerhouses of women's tennis but their first in a tournament semifinal since the U.S. Open in 1981.

Lendl came from behind to beat Ecuador's Andres Gomez 5-7, 6-4, 6-1, 6-1, losing just three of the last five games, while Evert overpowered Rafaela Best of Italy 6-2, 6-2.

Tennis

the past," said Lendl, who has won only one Grand Prix event this year. "On the other hand, I feel more stronger physically than I ever have."

In Thursday's semifinals, Evert faces Navratilova, who scored a 6-1, 6-2 victory over West Germany's Claudia Kohde-Kilsch.

The other semifinal will be between 17-year-old Steve Graf and Gabriela Sabatini, both going for their first major title.

They will continue at the start of Wednesday's play and will be followed by the other two men's quarter-final matches, Yannick Noah against Mats Wilander, and Jimmy Connors, the American, in the men's draw against two-time defending Wimbledon titlist, Boris Becker.

Lendl, who was taken to five sets in his previous match, had early problems against Gomez, whom he was meeting for the third time in the French Open quarterfinals.

He had 11 break-points in 1984 and last year, he faded badly in the latter part of the match.

"He can be like a madman at the start, but the chances are he's the one who'll let out," Lendl said after beating the No. 10 seed for the 13th successive time. "Today was a carbon copy of our previous matches here."

Gomez said he had as good a forward and backward as Lendl, a strong serve and probably a better volley. But he said he was inferior in one way to the world's top-ranked player.

"He is in better shape. He's an athlete, and I'm not," the Ecuadorian said. "He's fitter and he's more adapted to the situation. This is the hardest tournament to win because fitness counts as much as tennis."

Evert, the No. 3 seed, used only eight "patents" against 14th-seeded Reggi after the Italian had won the first two games of the second set.

Reggi, in a Grand Slam quarter-final for the first time, clenched her fist and shouted encouragement to herself whenever she won a big point. But she was blown away by Evert's superior groundstroke.

The match opened the day on center court and Evert said of her opponent: "She's hyper at 10 o'clock in the morning, that's for sure ..."

She was jumping up and down and was very eager."

Evert and Navratilova have met only four times in the semifinals of a Grand Slam tournament. Most of their clashes have been in the final.

Navratilova took only 65 minutes to whip eighth-seeded Kohde-Kilsch, taking a 4-0 lead in both sets and dropping her serve just once.

The tall West German several times led 30-0 on serve but could not finish off the games as Navratilova pressured her into errors.

"I can't believe my match with Chris is in the semi," Navratilova said. "It will be harder for both of us. One has to win and play another game and one has to lose."

Morr, who has not dropped a set in the tournament, gained a crucial break against Novacek—before a steady breeze—end play unshushie.

More showers were predicted for Wednesday.

Bad shoulder ends Anderson's 16-year career

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Bengals quarterback Ken Anderson announced his retirement Tuesday after a record-setting 16-year career in the National Football League.

Anderson, 38, said a medical examination during the team's minicamp three weeks ago disclosed that his right shoulder had deteriorated in the last year.

"There comes a point where enough is enough. We've come to that point," Anderson said during a news conference in the Bengals' offices at Riverfront Stadium.

His retirement leaves second-year player Doug Gandy as the leading candidate to back up starter Boomer Esiason. Gandy, a fourth-round draft choice last year from California State-Long Beach, appeared in one game in 1986.

The Bengals also have free agent quarterbacks Tom Ehrhardt of Rhode Island and Steve Samways of Western Ontario under contract.

Illinois when the Bengals took him in the third round of the 1971 draft. He completed 72 of 131 passes that season for 777 yards.

He won the starting job the next year and held it until the third game of the 1985 season, when he was moved to a backup role. He has played sparingly since then.

"It's funny when you come from Augusta, you don't prepare to play professional football," Anderson said. "I said, 'If I just could play five years. Then if I can play 10 years, that would be great. Sixteen years is kind of beyond what I ever expected. Except for winning the final game, everything's gone well.'"

His finest season was 1981, when he led the Bengals to the Super Bowl, which Cincinnati lost to San Francisco. He won one of his four NFL passing titles that year.

His honors also included four selections to the Pro Bowl.

"I think of him as a legitimate All-Pro for a number of years, and a future Hall of Famer," Wyche said.

Paul Brown, the team's general manager and founder, ranks Anderson among the best quarterbacks he's seen.

Seven-time Pro Bowl punter Guy hangs it up

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Punter Ray Guy of the Los Angeles Raiders, who was selected to the Pro Bowl seven times during his NFL career, retired Tuesday.

The 37-year-old native of Swainsboro, Ga., said in a release issued by the Raiders that an accumulation of injuries in recent years prompted him making the decision to retire at this time.

Selected to the Pro Bowl in each of his first six seasons (1973-78) and in 1980, Guy punted 1,049 times for 44,493 yards during his 14-year career. The fourth- and third-highest totals, respectively, in NFL history.

In his career, Guy played in 22 postseason games, including Raider victories in Super Bowls XI, XV and XVIII. His 111 punts in the playoffs is a league record.

times (1974, 1975 and 1977) and averaged more than 40 yards per punt in each of his 14 years in the NFL, except one — in 1982 when he kicked for 29.1 yards.

His best year was his rookie season in 1973 when he averaged 53.3 yards on 69 punts. Last season, Guy averaged 40.2 yards on 39 punts.

Guy also holds the record for most punts in a Pro Bowl (33) and highest-punting average in a Pro Bowl (49.4).

Guy was the first punter ever selected in the first round of the NFL college draft in 1973 after leading the nation in punting as a senior at Southern Mississippi in 1972.

He retired with a streak of having executed 61 punts without having one blocked, the second-longest string of its type in league history.

NBA: Robinson's fate likely up to arbitrator

By The Times-News

NEW YORK (AP) — NBA officials said Tuesday that it probably will be up to a judge or arbitrator to decide David Robinson's pro basketball status. He did not sign with the San Antonio Spurs or another NBA team within the next year.

Robinson, the 7-foot-center from Navy, is expected to be the first pick in the 1987 draft by the Spurs, who won the first pick in the draft lottery. However, under a ruling issued by Navy Secretary James Webb, he will not be able to sign for any other team that drafts him until his limited naval service expires after the 1988-89 season.

Pro basketball

name of general counsel Gary Bettman, notes two clear areas and one area in dispute with the league's players association.

In the first clear case, the league said, the current collective bargaining agreement with the players association gives the league the right to draft Robinson a year in sign him whether he plays or not. The Navy does not object to that and the Spurs have said they hope to draft Robinson and sign him to a futures contract. Also clear is the league by-law that would make Robinson a free agent if he has not signed with two teams that drafts him within two years.

Bettman said, "San Antonio's position is certainly within the spirit of the draft rules."

But he said, "If San Antonio dies draft Robinson but cannot sign him, a judge or an arbitrator would have to resolve the dispute between the club and the player over whether the draft rights could continue beyond one year."

Razorbacks to carry favorite's role at NCAA outdoor championships

By BERT ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

BATON ROUGE, La. — Arkansas will be trying for its second track and field "Triple Crown" in the NCAA Outdoor Championships beginning Wednesday at Louisiana State, but Coach John McDonnell knows it won't be easy.

The Razorbacks' winner of the NCAA cross-country title last fall and the NCAA indoor championship in March do not go into the outdoor season as favorites in the situation.

"It's not what we're doing," McDonnell said about the possibility of a sweep. "It will be tough. If things fall into place, we could do it, but we don't have the numbers."

Arkansas' numbers were diminished by two recently, when defending 800-meter runner George Mason, and Pascoe broke his left index finger in two places during practice and distance runner Ian Cherry, the runner-up in the 1985 NCAA Cross Country Championships, was felled by mononucleosis.

Still, the Razorbacks might have enough to win. They are counting heavily on Roddie Haley, the 1985 NCAA 400-meter champion and 1986 runner-up; Joe Falcon in the 5,000 and 10,000-meter races; Lonzo Brown, and 1,500-meter runner Gary Taylor. Matt Taylor, Doug Consiglio and Ruben Reina.

College track

Brown and Haley also will run the last two legs on the 1,500-meter relay team.

"It would be fantastic if we could do it again — sweep all three titles," McDonnell said. "The last time we did it, under Mike Conley — and he was a one-man show."

"For us to do it this year, which I considered a rebuilding year, would be great."

"I don't want to be English, but we'll take it," McDonnell quipped. "Only one other school — Texas-E Paso — has won all three national titles in the same season. The Miners did it in 1974-75, 1979-80, 1981-82 and 1981-82."

Haley will be one of three men trying to reclaim NCAA titles. The others, both from George Mason, are 1,500-meter runner Albi Bile and 400-meter runner Rob Muzzio. Bile won in 1985 and Muzzio in 1984 and 1985.

There also will be several defending champions, including Lee McKee of Pittsburgh in the 100, Floyd Harty of Texas A&M in the 200, Keith Talley of Alabama in the 100-meter hurdles, Kenny Harrison of Kansas State in the triple jump, and high jumper James Lott, long jumper Eric Metcalf and javelin thrower Dag Weimund, all from Texas.

Texas Christian's 400-meter relay team and Southern Methodist's 1,600-meter relay team, winners last year, also qualified for this year's fourth meet at newly renovated Bernie Moore Stadium.

Tribble won't testify; defense says

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — Brian Tribble, accused of supplying the cocaine that killed former Maryland star LeRoy Lee Roy Brown, testified in his own behalf Tuesday and the defense rested after calling only three witnesses.

The jury was expected to get the case under way in a lengthy argument in Prince George's County Circuit Court.

Judge James M. Rea asked Tribble if he wanted to take the stand, but the defendant refused.

Tribble, 21, is charged with distribution of cocaine, conspiracy to distribute cocaine, possession with intent to distribute cocaine and possession of the drug. If convicted, he could receive a 20-year prison term and a $25,000 fine.

Defense attorney Thomas Morrow planned to call more than three witnesses, but changed his mind after a discussion with court prosecutor Robert Bonshil in court Monday.

A problem apparently arose when James Wiseman, an investigator for the state's attorney's office, was about to take the stand for the defense. Morrow asked for a recess. Moments later, court was adjourned after ten told jurors the defense had run out of witnesses for the day.

On Tuesday, Morrow asked for a mistrial, saying testimony by 17-year-old Terrence Moore, who said he dealt drugs for Tribble, was "not related to Bias' death on June 19, 1986."

Morrow also said testimony by former Maryland basketball coach Letty Driesel was inconsistent with prior testimony and "intended to inflame the jury."

Driesel testified that he had seen Tribble with basketball players in the room with Bias when he died, told him Tribble supplied "the drug," but David Long and Terry Long said they didn't know where the drug came from.

Bonshil said Driesel's reference to the drug was "not relevant to Bias' death on June 19, 1986."

Beverly Hills Hotel duels for the suite life

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Marvin Davis, admittedly, is having the time of his life.

It is not just because he can hold court at Table No. 503 in the Polo Lounge at breakfast, lunch, and sometimes dinner. Or stand in the lobby and greet friends with a warm "Good morning!" and a playful slap on the back.

It is because he can finally say that the famed pink pleasure palace on Sunset Boulevard is his. Totally his. "I've found it's a great pride and joy to own something like this," exults the tycoon about his newest toy, the Beverly Hills Hotel, which he bought six months ago for $135 million.

One mile to the west, Caroline Hunt Schoellkopf, to a lesser but still significant degree, also has been putting her personal stamp on the equally prestigious Hotel Bel-Air. Hunt purchased the Bel-Air in 1982, said before that I consider myself a figurehead," the Dallas heiress maintains. "If I serve any purpose at all, it is to be a personality for the hotel, not only for the public but for the employees."

Both big-league multimillionaires, both oil barons, both out-of-lowers, both desperately shy of personal publicity, Davis and Schoellkopf have a lot in common, even if they have only met once. They also are in the enviable position of owning two competing Southern California landmarks.

As a result, they have acquired instant status in this status-conscious town on a par with owning a major movie studio, heading a television network or producing an Oscar-winning film.

But owning a hotel is a lot less worrisome — and a lot more fun — than now conducting a better time to own either property.

In April, the 92-room Hotel Bel-Air, which completed its $12 million refurbishment and expansion in 1985, was chosen as the "Great Hotels in the World" by Travel & Leisure magazine.

The 268-room Beverly Hills Hotel celebrated its 75th anniversary in 1986 in the midst of a $40 million freshening and modernization.

While there has not been a formal declaration of war between them, the two hotels and their owners are furiously competing for the same entertainment and corporate moguls and their money. Further complicating the financial situation is the opening of the Four Seasons and new ownership at the Beverly Wilshire by the Regent Hotel International. Nevertheless, based on tradition and trendiness as well as personalities, the Plink Ladies are in a class by themselves.

Marvin Davis had his checkbook out when feuding sisters Seema Boesky, wife of convicted Wall Street insider trader Ivan Boesky, and Muriel Stalkin put the Beverly Hills Hotel up for auction last winter.

The reason he wanted it so badly, Davis said in a rare interview, is that the Beverly Hills "has been part of my life for years." He and his wife Barbara, stayed there on their honeymoon. He and his family lived in Bungalow No. 1 for 4½ years until they bought their Beverly Hills homestead from Kenny Rogers in 1984. "And my father died at the hotel not too long ago," Davis added. "It also meant that he could continue to maintain a high profile in the area by selling out his 50 percent stake in 20th Century Fox Film Corp. to Rupert Murdoch in 1985 for $325 million."

He has already been the owner of The Lodge at Pebble Beach, thinks his new property is "a one-of-a-kind, it's a meeting place for people. It's a place for every business I've ever been in."

And, most of all, he said, "It's a hotel that's just full of action," which he eagerly soaks up daily, especially from the vantage point of his Polo Lounge table directly opposite the door.

He has surprised many staff, strangers and even his friends by the obvious delight he takes in his new property. "People like to say hello to you and I like to say hello to people," he explained. "Unfortunately, I'm in so many other ventures that my time is limited. But a few hours I spend on breakfasts and lunches give me a pretty good feel for what's right and wrong about the hotel."

"If employees seem to be jumping more than usual, it's because Davis placed all the staff on a probationary period soon after he bought the hotel. Reports have been circulating about a few fired members who are threatening to write "tell-all" books about celebrity guests past and present.

O'Brien dismisses such talk as the grumbling of "one or two disgruntled people whose feelings have been hurt. There are no labor problems."

While Davis believes in hands-on management, Schoellkopf has decidedly hands-off philosophy regarding the Bel-Air. "I'm not involved in the running of any of my hotels," she said candidly. "They're professionally managed and professionally run. So somebody else has to take all the credit — and all the blame."

The daughter of H.L. Hunt who is known as the wealthiest woman in America and the wealthiest Hunt, at present had stayed at the Bel-Air only once, "but in 1967," 36 years before her Caroline Hunt Trust Estate bought the hotel for $22.7 million, outbidding Ivan Boesky by less than $8,000.

Owning the Bel-Air was really the dream of Robert Zimmer, president of Schoellkopf's Rosewood Hotels. "It had a great tradition as one of the best hotels in the world," he explained over a Bel-Air breakfast omelet of caviar, smoked salmon and sour cream. "And I knew without a shadow of a doubt that I wanted it."

At first, Schoellkopf and her children partners, whom Zimmer refers to affectionately as "The Family," didn't want to buy a property outside Texas. "But I told them that the Bel-Air was just like Rosewood Hotels the high profile that it needed and I had."

Even though she's not on the premises, Schoellkopf is content she gets her "obsession of life" across to the staff. And just because the Bel-Air is a status symbol, she doesn't want the hotel's staff to put on airs. "I don't like fake snobbery," she says matter-of-factly.

"Which hotel is better?"

To the guests and to the community, it is like trying to compare apples and oranges. Or London's Connaught Hotel and Claridge's.

Celebrities like Kathleen Turner, Mel Gibson, John Denver and Paul Hogan prefer the Bel-Air. R.J. Wagner's mother lives there full time. And actors William Hurt and Marlee Matlin holed up there during the week of the Academy Awards.

"At the Beverly Hills, it was actors Diana West and Seymour Weaver and "A Room With a View" creators Ismail Merchant and James Ivory who made it their home on Oscar night. Other celebrities regularly include Sir Richard Attenborough, Diana Ross, Luza Minelli and Meryl Streep. And Elizabeth Taylor, who has stayed in Bungalow No. 3 with all her husbands, books it whenever the whim strikes.

Schoellkopf maintains — that "there's room for both" hotels. And Davis says "Some people like a very quiet, situated atmosphere."

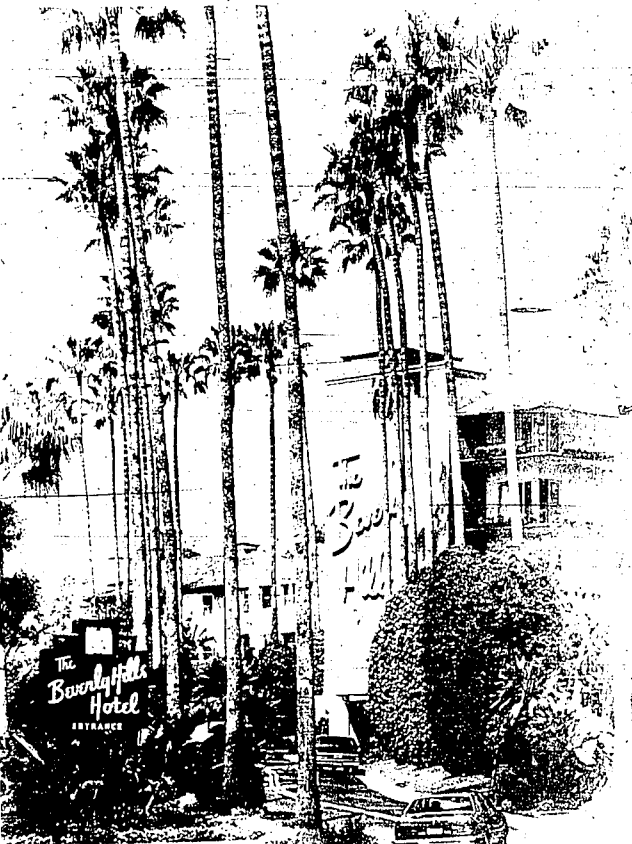

Except for a brief stay at the Playboy Mansion, actor Tony Curtis has called the Bel-Air home for the past year ever since he kicked out his first dependency and sold his homes. "The recovery program told me to change to a less-stressful environment," Curtis said. "And my residence now and forever will be the Bel-Air."

First introduced in 1952, Curtis lovingly describes it as the "best wife" he's ever had. "If I had, I'd be married to her today," he said. "She doesn't ask me where I've been all night. She doesn't mind if I bring a girl home. She makes my bed every day, feeds me regularly, puts my laundry in those little boxes tied up with ribbon."

The hotel has even given him artistic inspiration. He estimates he has painted about 50 canvases on the terrace of his $285-a-night one-bedroom suite, using as subjects every inch of his surroundings, from the landscaping to the furniture to the windows.

Besides having a place to bang his

especially treasures the "friendly privacy" that the Bel-Air cultivates among clients. But if Curtis had to pinpoint one thing to sum up the hotel's special brand of gentility, he said, "It's the fact that no one ever gets upset when I've forgotten my room key."

Actor Christopher Plummer lives with his family in Weston, Conn. But his home-away-from-home for nearly three decades has been the Beverly Hills Hotel.

Interviewed over breakfast in the Polo Lounge, Plummer finds the appeal is its non-stop activity. "I think it's great fun," he enthused. "You just feel you're on the inside of lots of little dramas. I mean, there is always an interesting group of semi-famous film producers who love to hang out at the pool with pretty girls."

Plummer usually stays in a $50 suite in the main hotel overlooking the pool. "But if I'm very bored, I walk past the bungalows just to make people think that I'm actually coming home to me."

Legion picks 20 Twin Falls High students for Boys' State

By CLAUDE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twenty juniors from Twin Falls High School have been selected by the American Legion, Post No. 7, to attend Boys' State 1987 next week in Boise.

Boys' State lasts for a week and will begin Monday at the Idaho Boys' State coordinator at the high school, said that the program is an opportunity for the students to learn "everything there is to know about government."

The Twin Falls delegates will join students from all over Idaho to learn about their state's system of government. The boys will own jobs, elections, selecting officers to represent every Idaho governmental position, Glanders said. They will choose parties and campaign for the various offices, he said.

There are 48 applicants for 15 delegate positions, but the American Legion was so impressed with the candidates that they decided to take 20 instead of the usual 15, Glanders said. The legion raised $2,700 for the boys, according to a newsletter.

Krahn, son of Mort and Louh Krahn, plays football and basketball, writes for the Bruin News, and has been playing the violin for 12 years. His sponsor is the Sawtooth Dental Group.

Chugg, son of Duard and Gerry Chugg, enjoys coin collecting, tennis playing and has won 23 awards for superior science ability from the United States Achievement Academy and for National Service and Leadership. His sponsor is the Twin Falls County Republican Central Committee.

McNeese, son of John and Lenore McNeese, enjoys journalism, plays varsity tennis and football, and is the student body activity director. His sponsor is the Idaho State Police Association.

Doherty, son of Charles and Carol Doherty, enjoys hunting, fishing and archery and is a member of the debate team and varsity club. His sponsor is Rotary Club of Twin Falls.

Newton, son of Roger and Diane Newton, is the student body president, enjoys swimming and weightlifting and was captain of the Twin Falls High School. His sponsors are Mr. and Mrs. James S. Kinney.

Cliff, son of John and Vickie Cliff, participated in all-state chess, was president of the TFHS Orchestra and enjoys wrestling, skiing and golf. His sponsor is The Nutrition Store.

Tolman, son of Steven and Gerri

Tolman, was junior class vice-president and saphrumnath class president, was a National Council of Teachers of English writing competition finalist and enjoys football and tennis. His sponsor is the Twin Falls Elks Club.

Starkey, son of Grant and Sharon Starkey, is student body vice-president, enjoys music and art and will be going to Germany this summer as an exchange student. His sponsor is Hamilton Insurance.

Allen, son of Ittek and Barbara Allen, is student body president, works for the Bruin News, and enjoys tennis and skiing. His sponsor is the Twin Falls Kiwanis Club.

Olson, son of Jim and Janet Olson, is an Eagle Scout, won the Future Farmers of America top swine award and was DeMolay junior and senior master equine. His sponsor is Dr. Steve Johnson, D.D.S.

Adams, son of Dallas and Shirlee Adams, participated in student government, was a member of the

French, son of JoAnn Larsen, enjoys playing the piano and fishing and was a member of the debate and Spanish clubs. His sponsor is McDonald-Berg Insurance.

Kyle, son of William and Donna Kyle, enjoys building and flying remote control airplanes, swimming and golf and is a member of Boy Scouts and DeMolay. His sponsor is McDonald's.

Brockway, son of Charles and Carol Brockway, was a member of the student council, president of Nazarene Youth International, and writes for the Bruin News. His sponsors are King Videocolor Co. and Ernst.

Crawford, son of Dennis and Laurel Crawford, plays the clarinet, writes for the Bruin News and is an Eagle Scout. His sponsor is Magic Way Physicians.

Improvements are underway at Wendell school play area

WENDELL — New chains and fixtures for swings are part of a major playground improvement project at the Wendell Elementary School.
Melody Finley, organizer of the volunteer project, says she recently toured the two elementary playgrounds with Principal Jerry Hope and became alarmed at the dangers there.
So Finley's family business, R & M Specialties, donated $750 and she school put in another $750 to make safety improvements on the playgrounds.
Dirt fill under swings, removal of a cement ridge under the "spider dome," grass planting and equipment repair are all underway. A fence along the south side of the eastern playground is planned so children will not continue to kick their soccer balls across the goal line and into the street.
Soccer nets are being made for both playgrounds and lines are being painted for basketball and tetherball games.

Neighborhood not in tune with chimes

DEAR ABBY: In reference to "Hates Ding-a-Lings" — the lady who hates wind chimes — I would like to swap places with her.
I live within 150 feet of a church with a P.A. system that broadcasts hymns twice a day — at noon and again at 6 p.m. These are lovely and enjoyable. However, once in a while something goes "wrong" with the "minor" and the machine throws the program off schedule. Like last night, the chimes were released at 2 a.m. This is not unusual.

One I asked a neighbor if she had heard the chimes in the middle of the night and she said yes, but she was afraid to mention it for fear people would think she was "techie" in the head if she said she had heard hymns playing at 2 a.m.

— JOE H. CROOKS, RICHMOND
DEAR JOE: The wind chimes letter rang a bell for many readers

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

both pro and con — mostly con. Read on for a letter from a reader who researched the subject:

DEAR ABBY: After losing too many hours of sleep because of a neighbor's wind-chimes, I did some research on the subject of sound.

The results of several studies indicate two points that pertain to wind chime problems:

1. If a person knows that he/she can control the sound, that sound is less likely to cause irritation, frustration and the loss of sleep.
2. Annoyance from sounds increases if those sounds are unpredictable and uncontrollable — especially ly those of high frequency and pitch. I feel that no one should hang wind chimes outside without first obtaining the approval of all neighbors within hearing distance.

— ALSO HATES DING-A-LINGS, DES MOINES, WASH.
DEAR ABBY: I have an aunt, 77 years old, who "lost" an heirloom quilt her mother made for her. Her mother made one for each of her five daughters. (I inherited my mother's.)

I live next door to this aunt. I've never had a key to her house, yet she has told everyone who will listen to her that I stole her quilt! I thought she would stop her lying once she realized how ridiculous it would be for me to steal her quilt.

In the first place, I'm 67 years old with no children to leave the quilt to. Second, I have plenty of money and if I wanted a quilt, I would buy a new one — I wouldn't steal a 50-year-old quilt that might disintegrate any minute.

Shall I see my attorney about suing her for slander and defamation of character? Or should I see her minister and ask him to tell her that a person can go to hell for lying, same as stealing?
Have you any suggestions as to how to stop a liar, short of punching her out?

— C.A. PAULS VALLEY, OKLA.
DEAR C.A.: Trying to "stop" a liar is like trying to put toothpaste back in the tube. The poor woman could be disturbed, so I advise you to do nothing. People who know her — and you — will consider the source and pay no attention.

CSI has full schedule of summer offerings

Engine repair

TWIN FALLS — A small engine repair course offered by the College of Southern Idaho has been rescheduled to begin Tuesday, June 15. John Struthers, who teaches the course, said the small engine program at the college will teach the class from 7 to 10 p.m. Tuesdays. He will cover basic instruction in operation, construction, rebuilding and servicing of four-stroke engines. Fee for the class is $83, and anyone wanting more information can call 336-5551, Ext. 364. Students can preregister through the Taylor Administration Building.

Music classes

TWIN FALLS — Enrollment is still open in the summer music classes at the College of Southern Idaho. The classes started Monday and run for three weeks, to June 19, says Larry Curtis, instructor. Fundamentals of Music, 2 credits, 8:30 to 10 a.m. Monday through Friday; Music Appreciation, 3 credits, 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Monday through Friday; History, 2 credits, 5 to 7:30 p.m. Monday and Wednesday; Song Writing, 2 credits, 8 to 10 p.m. Monday and Wednesday; conducting, 2 credits, 5 to 7 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday; and Applied Music, 1 credit, time to be announced.

Calligraphy

HAGERMAN — The North Side Outreach Center of the College of Southern Idaho will offer a one-day calligraphy workshop from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. June 13 at Hagerman City Hall. Brenda Larsen, Twin Falls, will instruct the class in basic principles of formation of the Italic and Roman capital alphabets. Students will also learn about choosing pens, inks and papers. Preregistration is required for the workshop and the fee is $20. To register or obtain more information on the workshop and supplies needed, call Elaine Bryant at the CSI North Side Outreach Center, 536-2500.

Kollege for Kids

WENDELL — Classes in sign language, Jukido and computers will begin in June through the Kollege for Kids program — College of Southern Idaho summer classes for children — through the CSI North Side Outreach Center. "Talkin' Hands," a beginning sign language class for students in grades four through eight from 10:30 a.m. to noon Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays for two weeks beginning June 15. The course will run again on the same weekdays and times starting July 6 at Wendell High School. Fee is $11. "Jukido," a class in the Kokondo self-defense system for children ages 5 and up, will meet from 6 to 7 p.m. Mondays at the State School gym in Gooding beginning June 15; 6 to 7 p.m. Tuesdays at Wendell Elementary School beginning June 16; and 6 to 7 p.m. Wednesdays at the State School gym starting June 17 and the fee is $25. "Introduction to Computers" for grades four and five meets from 8:30

Come See How We Got To Be 100

You're invited to a very special celebration — First Interstate Bank of Idaho's Centennial open house and exhibition. In addition to refreshments, we've prepared a unique pictorial and graphic exhibition tracing a 100-year heritage of customer service to Idahoans.

Open House Celebration

Letters of thanks

Local peace committee expresses its gratitude

When the International Year of Peace came to an end in October 1986, the Magic Valley Peace Committee sent the United Nations a report of all the activities in which the citizens of our area had participated supporting the Year of Peace. We also sent them a Magic Peace certificate and 100 peace neckties, one for each U.N. member-state, made by youth throughout the valley.

This month we received a reply from Krzysztof Ostrowski, Chief, Peace Studies Unit, Department of Political and Security Council Affairs of the United Nations, which our committee wishes to share with the people of the Magic Valley.

The Magic Valley Peace Committee also wishes to express our gratitude to all those who have made a contribution to the Magic Peace

Project. HARRY MASSOTH (Buhl)

Renaissance Academy sponsors 'great night'

Sponsored by the Renaissance Academy, members of several Magic Valley Theater groups combined to put on a great variety show at the Turf Club May 22 and 23, bringing great enjoyment to a packed house. I was particularly delighted to have Mary Walker once again lending her professional talent to a local amateur production. Bits from "Bye Bye Birdie" and "Chorus Line" were delightfully performed by the teen-agers of The Jump Company. Aileen Weir's Shim-Sham Dancers tapped out "Putting on the Ritz" with great style. Members of the Maple Valley Dilettantes gave excellent reprisals of past performances. From the Northside Theater, we were treated to a preview of their forthcoming production, "Guys and Dolls."

In summary, a great night was had by all. MARY COOK (Twin Falls)

Idaho City Outlaws enjoyed their time here

We wish to extend our thanks to your reporters and photographers who covered the Outlaws and the shoot-outs. We felt a good deal of cooperation among the news media, police department and local organizations. It was great to be in Twin Falls for Western Days. KEN ROSS (Idaho City Outlaws)

The Times-News welcomes letters of thanks of fewer than 100 words, which will be published as space permits. Send to "Letters of Thanks," The Times-News, Box 546, Twin Falls, Idaho 83301.

Hydroelectric tour

TWIN FALLS — The "Hydroelectric Power and the Snake River" tour from the "Exploring Magic Valley" series at the College of Southern Idaho will be held June 6.

Four groups will see first-hand how hydroelectric power and the Snake River affected this area. The eight-hour van tour will include a visit to Shoshone Falls Park, lower Salmon Dam and the power plant at Salmon Falls. Discussion will outline the historical record of the development of hydroelectric power on the Snake River.

Roxie Simcoe and Don Siplon will lead our tour. The fee is $20 which includes a picnic lunch. Those interested can preregister in the Taylor Administration Building or call 733-9554, Ext. 363 for more information.

Retail selling

TWIN FALLS — A new class on retail selling techniques will be held Monday through July 3 at the College of Southern Idaho.

The three-part course will teach selling by use of product knowledge, meeting customer objections, greeting the customer, customer service, converting features to benefits, qualifying the customer and closing the sale.

The retail selling portion of the class will last three weeks, then the one-week segment on cashiering begins. This portion will not only give the student some practice on a cash register, but will also cover such areas as customer relations, store hazard, shoplifters, checking in vendors, cashing checks, and credit card usage.

The class meets from 9 a.m. to noon Monday through Friday in Room 202 of the Canyon Vocational Building. John Byrne and Jim Willis will be the instructors. For more information call 733-9554, Ext. 293 or 290.

TWIN FALLS — Some 1,200 Magic Valley area students have pledged to say "no" to drug use, as a result of a nine-day anti-drug campaign held at Twin Falls and Buhl shopping malls.

From May 15-23 youths signed pledges to live drug free, and flyers and other information about drug use were distributed throughout the shopping centers. The public service program was part of a nationwide campaign with an estimated 4,000 shopping centers and retail stores participating.

Buhl, Filer, Valley and Twin Falls junior and senior high schools were key in making a successful campaign, according to Jason Houser, Twin Falls High School student body president-elect and local, co-chairman of Kids Say Know, the name of a national campaign of which First Lady Nancy Reagan is honorary chairman. Schools showing the greatest percentage of participation were Paul Elementary, Robert Stuart Junior High and Filer High School. Each of these schools will receive a $10 grand prize from the three malls.

11 major groups seek action to aid children facing failure

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The leaders of 11 major education organizations issued a call to action Monday on behalf of the millions of school children growing up in poverty and facing the prospect of failed lives.

The education leaders warned that the school reform movement, which has led to stiffer graduation and promotion standards in many states, has not tackled the problems of poverty, delinquency and drugs that plague the lives of disadvantaged children.

The Forum said minority children are "disproportionately represented among the poor" — an enrolled in schools that "have been, and continue to be, least successful."

Booming economy causes lifeguard shortage in Northeast

By DAVID PYLE
The Associated Press

The lifeguard profession is finding itself in need of resuscitation as a booming economy and a change in the job's image cuts down on the number of applicants for the "East coast's watchkeepers."

Michael Angell, director of health safety and youth services for Rhode Island's Red Cross chapter, said several municipal pools had to cut their seasons short last year when young lifeguards returned to school.

A shortage in Rhode Island this year prompted the Red Cross to warn swimmers on the eve of Memorial Day weekend the situation might jeopardize safety.

Gene Bergman, aquatics operations supervisor for the Fort Lauderdale Beach Patrol, called it a "tedious, tough, hard job. The lifeguard has to be ever alert."

"We provide a service year-round," said Lt. Carl Bohm, a Los Angeles County lifeguard.

3M acquires Control Data hospital unit

MAPLEWOOD, Minn. (AP) — The 3M Co. said Tuesday it has acquired a computerized hospital information systems business from Control Data Corp.

Terms of the agreement were not disclosed. Control Data is based in Bloomington, Minn.

This segment of Control Data's health-care services business, based in Salt Lake City, Utah, with 145 employees, is a supplier of computers and software for hospital information systems. The business will be integrated into a 3M hospital software business, also located in Salt Lake City, 3M said in a news release.

Control Data's Hospital Information Systems business was founded in 1970 as Mediac Computer Services, Inc., a privately owned company, and was acquired by Control Data in 1975.

The acquisition gives 3M a stronger presence in the $1.5 billion turnkey hospital information systems market, says Al Egebert, manager for the combined businesses, which will be called 3M Health Information Systems.

Basque chef plans authentic feast for Boise museum

TWIN FALLS — When Jesus Alcealy cooks a Basque dinner, you can figure that it is an authentic one. The 36-year-old executive chef of the Red Lion-Downowner in Boise was born in Onate in the Basque Country.

Alcealy is donating his time and expertise to cook a Basque dinner on June 20 at the historic Bishop's House in Boise. Proceeds will benefit the new Basque Museum and Cultural Center, the first Basque museum to be established in the United States.

"I've been able to find authentic ingredients so that this is real ethnic food," says Alcealy. On the menu for the dinner, to be served Basque boarding house-style, are dishes like Garbanzo and Chorizo Soup, Halibut Koskera (garnished with peas, clams, mussels, and asparagus), Pork Chops with Pimientos ("People think of the Basque Country when they eat this," says Alcealy), Paella, and Flana with Carrot Sauce.

Alcealy will round out the menu with other dishes and a glass of red wine.

There will be two seatings for the dinner, one at 6 p.m. and another at 8 p.m. Reservations are necessary and can be made by calling Eloise Bieter, 343-6933, or Ruby Basque, 939-6912. The dinner will cost $15 per person.

On June 21, desserts and coffee will be served at the Bishops' House by the Basque Museum volunteers. The price is $2.75.

The Bishops' House is located near the Old Penitentiary, off Warm Springs Avenue. The old pen will be the site for Jalaldi '87, the international Basque festival, to be held June 20-21. Admission charges for Jalaldi vary.

Here are some authentic Basque recipes from Jesus Alcealy, executive chef of the Red Lion-Downowner in Boise, who will prepare the Basque dinner on June 20.

CROQUETAS (Appetizers)

- 1 small onion
 - 1/2 cups chicken breast
 - 3 eggs
 - 1/2 cup flour
 - 2 1/2 tablespoons butter
 - 1 cup bread crumbs
 - 1/2 milk
 - Pinch of nutmeg, salt and white pepper
 - 1 pint oil
- Cook onion then dice chicken breast. Put butter in a pan and saute with the onion; add the flour. Add the milk and stir constantly. Add nutmeg, salt, white pepper, and chicken. Cook for 15 minutes on low heat.

heat. Put the mixture on a plate and cool it. Form the mixture into walnut-sized balls. Bread these in flour, egg and bread crumbs. Then fry in oil to a golden color. Makes 10 servings for appetizers.

PAELLA

- 3 clams
 - 2 mussels
 - 1 ounce diced halibut
 - 3 cooked shrimp
 - 1 ounce pork meat
 - 1 ounce chorizo
 - 1 ounce boneless chicken meat
 - 1 tablespoon of green peas
 - 1 tablespoon of dried red pimientos
 - 3 or 4 threads of saffron (see note below)
 - 1/2 cup uncooked rice
- Saute the chicken, pork and chorizo; then add the chopped garlic. Add tomato chunks and simmer. Add 1/2 cup uncooked rice (or 1 cup cooked rice). Add the desired amount of water. If the rice is uncooked, 2 1/2 times the volume of rice. Add the saffron, clams, mussels, shrimp and halibut. Put in the oven at 350 degrees for 20 minutes. Serve with a slice of lemon.

(Note: Saffron is an expensive spice, sometimes available at specialty shops. Turmeric could be substituted for color.)

RICE PUDDING

- 1 quart milk
 - 1 whole cinnamon stick
 - 3 ounces 1/2 cup rice
 - 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
 - Sugar and cinnamon mix
- Bring milk to a boil with cinnamon stick. When milk boils, add rice. Let simmer slowly for 1 1/2 hours. After 1 1/2 hours, add sugar. Put in individual glasses or in a bowl; sprinkle with the sugar and cinnamon mix. Serves 15 people.

FLANA

- 4 egg yolks
 - 4 whole eggs
 - 1/2 cup sugar
 - 3 cups milk
 - 1 cinnamon stick
- Bring the milk to a boil with the cinnamon stick and vanilla. In the meantime, mix the eggs and sugar. Prepare the milk with the Caramel Sauce (recipe follows). Pour the milk into the egg/sugar mixture and pour into the mold. Place in oven in bainmarie that water bath for 35 minutes or until a toothpick will come out clean. Bake at 325 degrees. Refrigerate to cool completely.

Place a plate on top of mold and turn upside down until the Flana drops onto the plate.

Cheese it! It's Dairy Month

It's June — time for eating outdoors, enjoying sunshine and trying a new cheese recipe in honor of Dairy Month.

Cheese from the familiar Cheddar to a brick or colby, offers a definite nutrition advantage. Everyone needs calcium for strong bones and muscles, and dairy products are considered a primary source of dietary calcium. Cheese is one of the best sources of this mineral with hard cheeses providing about 200 milligrams or one fourth of the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA). Look for protein, riboflavin and vitamin A in cheeses, as well as the same nutrients found in milk.

With the celebration of June Dairy Month now in its 51st year, enjoy these dairy-rich recipes from Wisconsin Dairy Country. Recipes, a cookbook from the Wisconsin Milk Marketing Board. The recipes are favorites gathered from

The menu here is designed for lunching in the countryside or at a favorite park. Organize a picnic and begin the festivities with Cheese Packets. Enhanced with the flavors of mozzarella and Parmesan cheeses, these savory cheese-and-meat "filled" packets can be made with refrigerated biscuits for a short-cut version.

Two colorful salads dress up this dairy-delightful spread. The Tabouleh-Cheese Salad contains feta and Swiss (or brick) for a fiber-rich meal. The Hearty Vegetable Salad, with its fresh greens and vegetables, can easily become a main course with the addition of flavorful cheeses such as provolone or Gouda.

- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup warm milk (115 to 120 degrees)
- 2 1/2 tablespoons cooking oil
- 1 1/2 cups (6 oz.) shredded mozzarella cheese
- 6 oz. salami, chopped
- 1 small tomato, peeled, seeded and chopped
- 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 1 1/2 teaspoons dried sage, crushed
- 1 egg
- 1 teaspoon water

In large bowl, combine 2 cup flour, yeast and salt. Add milk and oil. Blend thoroughly. Stir in enough flour to make soft dough. On a floured surface, knead until dough is smooth and elastic, about 4 minutes. Place dough in a greased bowl; turn once. Cover, let rise in a warm place until double, about 45-55 minutes. Meanwhile, make filling. In small bowl, com-

The Southern Gentleman: Cajun food with love

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

BELLEVUE — Cajun chef Jerry McLain says he doesn't mind sharing a few of his cooking secrets and favorite recipes because no one can duplicate the love and care he puts in every serving.

"Really, the secret of good cooking is the love you have for it," he says. "I pretend I'm sending each dish out to my mother, in honor of her."

At The Southern Gentleman, his dinner house in Bellevue, McLain serves gourmet-style, French-African cuisine from Louisiana, encouraging his customers to relax and take their time. Patrons may bring their own wine or beer, there is no smoking, and, with a flaming dessert order, the chef can be persuaded to serenade a table with his mellow voice.

At age 14, McLain was working in restaurants in New Orleans, feeling lucky to have on-the-job training from some of the top chefs of the area. Here, he learned to always use the freshest food, never buy pre-breaded or instant foods, change deep-fry oil daily, keep the individual taste of each food distinct and work hard to keep the kitchen ultra-clean.

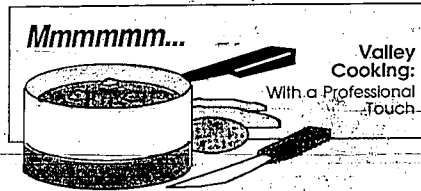

"But as far as cooking, really putting love into it, that's from my mother," he says. "That's what she taught me."

McLain attended UCLA in California, was chief chef at the training camp of the San Francisco Giants baseball team for six years and then joined a Beverly Hills catering agency in Hollywood.

After being the requested chef of an impressive list of stars, McLain eventually became the personal chef of Lucille Ball for 12 years.

When Ball brought her chef along on a vacation to Sun Valley, the southern gentleman got his first look at Idaho and always remembered it as a place he would like to live.

About three years ago, he opened a restaurant in Hagerman, moved to Oregon a year later and, last November, moved to Bellevue and leased a restaurant and motel on Highway 75.

Cajun cooking, McLain says, originated when poor Arcadians (eventually called Cajuns) migrated to Louisiana. Without refrigeration, a one-pot meal was commonly kept hot on the stove, simmering seafood, chicken, sausages, garden vegetables, and herbs together. In time, the Cajuns learned to balance their flavors and developed their famous thick soups called gumbo.

Herbs and spices are "the real key" to successful Cajun cooking, McLain says. Among his hints:

- "Thyme and garlic on beef is great. It's just like a set of twins that go together."
- "Sweet basil and garlic is not a good combination on beef. Sweet basil is good on any vegetable. It really enhances the flavor, but it's not meant to be with beef."
- "Cayenne pepper is probably the most important thing in Cajun food simply because it is a driving ingredient. It makes other ingredients work better."
- "Herbs sprinkled on top of hot water will just sit there, but once you sprinkle the cayenne on them, they become active."
- "In true Cajun style, you would let it (the food) sit in cayenne all-day. But here, we just make it hot at the customer's request. . . . It's the area, a lot of people are not familiar with the hot sauce," he says.

One seasoning McLain uses is called file gumbo, a powdered mixture of okra, and sassafras ordered from a specialty company in Washington. This flavors the gumbo and, just about anything you put it on," he says. "It really excites the taste buds." McLain says he will sell this to individuals on request.

"Too much seasoning, he warns, can easily ruin a good dish and, in time, can eventually spoil the sensitivity of the taste buds.

The Southern Gentleman menu features catfish fillets (from Hagerman), grilled halibut, prawns, scallops, grilled oysters, Louisiana gumbo and barbecued ribs. Seafood bisque, Miss Ball's favorite, is sautéed scallop baked in a creamy cream chowder. Oysters Rockefeller is . . . grilled oysters, served with spinach in cream sauce and shrimp Creole is shrimp sautéed with fresh garlic and onions then simmered in a multi-ingredient tomato sauce. "Southern style" beef tenderloin is grilled in batter and covered with a mushroom and wine sauce.

To roast ribs, McLain puts an inch of water and 1/2 cup thyme in the bottom of his covered, roasting pan. After cooking them 2 1/2 hours at 350 degrees, he coats the ribs in hickory sauce and roasts them 10 minutes at 400 degrees. "And that's perfect ribs," he promises.

"When asked for a delicious yet easy to prepare main-dish recipe, McLain smiles without hesitation and knowingly says "Jambalaya." A short cooking time, he notes, keeps seafoods tender, and keeps other ingredients tasting fresh. Cooks should

Critics rip nutrition slant in fast-food ads

The Washington Post

Talk about Big Mac advertising: McDonald's aggressive adverting campaign—to woo customers—with promises of good nutrition has left a bad taste in the mouths of three state attorneys general, The California, Texas and New York officials charge that the giant fast-food chain is being "deceptive."

A spokeswoman for McDonald's said the ads were effective and asked that the ads be discontinued and threatened McDonald's with legal action if they are not. As a result, the 3,400-unit chain, which feeds 17 million Americans a day, has been caught in a sticky situation: Keep running the ads and risk being sued; stop the ads and guarantee embarrassment.

A spokeswoman for New York Attorney General Robert Abrams says the issue "was resolved for the moment" last week, when McDonald's said no further ads had been scheduled.

"We are not moving to do anything legally at this point," says spokeswoman Lanie Ackles. "These ads are not being pulled now..." At the moment, she says.

McDonald's, however, denies it is stopping anything. "We have simply said McDonald's will not make any new commitment to any of the eight advertisements prior to our meeting... We are not agreeing to terminate the campaign," says spokeswoman Stephanie Skrzydlo. The company says it will use the same ads with the states to convince them the ads are "truthful and straightforward."

One of the ads has a picture of a bowl of milk, a glossy brown potato and a container of freshly ground beef. The accompanying slogan: "What we're all about." Other ads praise the quality of the food. McDonald's beef, the "extra calcium" in the hamburger buns, and the "less than a pinch" of salt in the french fries.

The problem, said Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox in a sharply worded letter to the company, is that "McDonald's food is, as a whole, not nutritious. The company is running a deceptive campaign to induce consumers into believing the opposite. Fast food customers often choose to go to McDonald's because it is inexpensive and convenient. They do not get fooled into eating there because you have told them it is also nutritious."

These ads have been seen by a lot of people. In just the last few months, they've run in Woman's Day, TV Guide, Newswatch, McCall's and Edies' Home Journal: But then, not only McDonald's the country's largest fast-food chain, it's one of the most visible corporations of any type. It says it has employed 20 percent of the American workforce at one time or another. In the course of a year, more than 95 percent of American consumers will eat at least one meal there.

The company is now defending the estimated $20 million campaign—which consists of eight double-page ads that started running in January—sent a letter to the Texas attorney general asking for a meeting. That meeting has yet to be scheduled; California's attorney general is scheduled to meet with the company later this month.

"There's nothing much to meet about," says Texas Assistant Attorney General Stephen Gardner. "We told them to pull the ads or face a lawsuit. They wanted to meet with them if they want to discuss it further, but we're not going to change our minds or reverse our position, and we're not going to rewrite their ads for them."

The decision to pursue the issue was the result of an ad-hoc, informal effort among the three states. It was prompted by complaints from the Washington-based Center for Science in the Public Interest, a consumer group. All three states sent roughly the same letter to McDonald's.

The specific problems listed by the attorneys general:

— The ad discussing salt says, "Our sodium is down across the menu." But the same ad lists four products (regular fries, regular cheeseburgers, 6-piece McNuggets, and vanilla milkshake) as "none of which have had their sodium content lowered in the past year."

— One ad promotes the milkshakes as "combinations of wholesome milk, natural sweeteners, a fluid ounce of flavoring, and stabilizers for consistency. And that's all." The letters say: "McDonald's own ingredient booklet shows that this milkshake actually contains artificial flavor, sodium benzoate and sodium hexametaphosphate, two chemical preservatives. This ad doesn't tell the whole story."

— The ad on shortening emphasizes the relatively low cholesterol level of the chain's hamburger, but doesn't even mention the saturated fat content, much more relevant to these cases with cause for concern about heart disease.

basically life is a do-it-yourself project.

"We're also proud because you know a 'zillion' ways to have fun that don't come out of a bottle or can. We think it's great that you aren't preoccupied with just having fun, but with your looks or interests or religions or ages."

It's going to be soooooo quiet without you who talked constantly about how to have fun, the happy shouts of your older siblings and had friends who called frequently in person or by phone.

Now you know you'll have a happy, productive life because you're a happy, productive person.

Here's to all the parents out there who are having their youngest step into the June of a great month for us to have our own commencement. We won't have the Pomp and Circumstance played for us but we can "get on keeping on."

So, in writing statistics I read the other day predicted many of us would live to 100. So, just because your youngest (or oldest) child graduates from high school doesn't mean life is completed in more than one way. You can keep on learning and doing.

It's a big world out there and so many things to do. What was the name of that bird that just flew by? How can I take a picture of a sunset? Maybe I could get some language tapes and learn a language or even plan a trip to that corner of the globe that has always fascinated me? If I'm going to live another 50 or 60 years—just think of all the things I could do.

Right now, I'm going to work on cooking for two. The first cookbook I ever bought was a little one by Betty Crocker called "Dinner For Two."

What a full-time student bride need.

I hadn't looked at it for years. Pages 7-17 and 51 were stuck in the back and sometime over the last 25 years a crayon scribbler had added color to the sketches. It was interesting because here I found my roots. It was for 3 servings but I later built into "real" cuisine.

This book is into it's third printing and still on the market. You can also find lots of cookbooks for way under $15 if you want to expand your collection of recipes for one or two people. Look for the HIP and Sunset bookstands and also check the myriad of cookbooks. There are lots of them for one or two people.

Not only are these good for those of us who are learning not to buy the giant economy size if it goes out of date before we've finished half of it but for those June brides and graduates.

Here's one recipe from that original book I remember well. It said it was for 3 servings but I can remember adding this and that until it grew as we grew into a family.

— TEXAS HASH
2 medium onions, sliced
1 small green pepper, finely chopped
1/2 tablespoon oil
1/2 pound ground beef
1 cup cooked or canned tomatoes
1/2 cup washed uncooked rice or 1 cup uncooked noodles
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon salt (I'd use less now)
Dash of pepper

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Sauté onions and green pepper in hot oil until yellow (10 min). Add ground beef and fry until mixture falls apart. Stir in remaining ingredients. Pour into greased 1/2 quart baking dish. Cover and bake 1 hour. Uncover the last 15 minutes. Serve hot with vegetable and salad.

Boy! does that bring back memories! Enjoy!

JAMBALAYA
4 tablespoons of oil or shortening
2 tablespoons sweet basil
1/2 pound chopped green onion
1 bunch (about 6 or 8) green onions, chopped
1/2 pound polish sausage, cut into small pieces
1/2 lb. a chicken, boned and cut in pieces
1 pound seafood of your choice, cut in pieces
Cayenne pepper to taste
2 cups of cooked rice
Heat oil and add everything except the rice. Sauté on medium heat about four minutes, stirring constantly. Cook and simmer on low for about five minutes. Serve over rice. Serves four.

Optional: At start of simmering time, add 1/2 cup of Burgundy wine.

To delectry fresh zucchini, mushrooms, onion rings and green beans, as well as his seafood, McLain makes a delicate batter with a touch of vanilla as the special "secret" ingredient.

"Vanilla really goes well with what we serve," he says. "It just makes the world of difference. It's really good. Really good. I can't say it enough. It's really good."

This southern batter is different from batter of other restaurants, the chef comments. "It's really light and thin."

CAJUN BATTER
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 teaspoons dilute weed
6 eggs
2 quarts milk
1 quart flour (add more to thicken batter to taste)
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 cup butter (add more if deep-fry until golden brown. (McLain says he can tell when a batch is done just by listening to it.)

In large bowl, combine spinach, garbanzo beans, tomatoes, cauliflower, mushrooms, cucumber, onion rings and walnuts; cover and chill.

For dressing, in blender container or food processor bowl, combine avocado, yogurt, 1/4 cup milk, honey and garlic salt. Process until smooth. If necessary, stir in additional milk until of desired consistency; cover and chill.

Just before serving, pour dressing over vegetable mixture; toss gently to coat. Makes 4 main-dish servings or 8 side-dish servings.

TAHOULE-CHEESE SALAD
2 cups warm water
1 cup bulgur wheat
1 package (10 oz.) frozen peas, thawed
4 oz. feta cheese, crumbled
1/2 cup Swiss or brick cheese, cut into julienne strips
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon dried dillweed
1 teaspoon salt
Lettuce leaves
1 medium tomato, cut into thin wedges

Pour warm water over bulgur in medium mixing bowl; let stand 1 hour. Drain bulgur, well, pressing out excess water.

Stir in peas, feta cheese and Swiss or brick cheese. For dressing, in sieve, stir combine salad of lemon juice, dillweed and salt; cover and shake well. Pour dressing over Carmel Sauce: Put 1 cup of sugar and let it melt until the sugar is golden. Very carefully pour it into the mold, being sure the sugar covers the entire inside of the mold. Let cool in refrigerator.

FRIED MILK
1/2 cup sugar
2 1/2 cups milk
1 pint milk
1 whole cinnamon stick
Walnut-sized butter ball
Flour and egg for breading
Cinnamon butter for frying
Sugar and cinnamon mix

Put 4 egg yolks in a saucuppan with sugar and flour. Mix very well. Roll in flour with whole cinnamon stick. Mix the milk with the egg mixture and put on the stove with the ball of butter; bring to a boil. Let simmer for 10 minutes.

Put the mixture in a 1-inch deep tray and spread 1/2-inch thick. Put the tray in the refrigerator until completely cold. With a knife, cut 1/2-inch (1 inch by 2 inches). Dip each square into flour and fry in clarified butter until golden. Transfer to a tray lined with a napkin. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Serve, warm, or cold. Serves 6 to 8 people.

1/2 cup fresh mint (or 1/4 cup dried mint)
Mix well and serve chilled.

Dessert specialties at The Southern Gentleman are bananas Foster and cherries jubilee, both served with flaming sauces and soft vanilla ice cream. But the house specialty is that old southern standby, pecan pie.

The 1982 World's Fair in New Orleans gave Cajun cooking a boost in popularity, McLain says, noting that the city is most famous for its good cooking and Dixieland jazz and blues.

Blackening sauce, he used at a fair booth, was introduced to the world, he says, although folks of the Bayou country probably knew of it years ago.

Beef is dipped in the sauce and pan fried. Seafood is dipped in batter, then flour, in the blackening sauce and then grilled.

"In 90 percent of our seafood orders," they request it to be blackened," McLain says. Shrimp in the black sauce, followed closely by prime-rib and catfish, are the Southern Gentleman's most popular orders.

BLACKENING SAUCE:
1/2 cup fig gumbo (available from the restaurant or may substitute fig sweet potato pie mixture)
1/2 cup dil weed
1 cup Worcestershire sauce
1 cup Burgundy wine
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 clove of garlic

Mix all ingredients together. Seafood and beef dipped in this sauce are grilled on medium heat about four minutes on each side.

McLain's wife Elaine prepares a colorful bar of salads using broccoli, carrots, zucchini, kale, turnip roots and green peas with fresh herbs, unusual but tasty combinations. Like her husband's cooking, no artificial or instant ingredients are ever used.

Elaine's colelaw recipe is rich and alive with flavor. Lemon and honey counteract each other, cayenne pepper is cooled by the fresh mint, and the mint is warmed by the pepper for a dramatic balance. She prefers sea salt because it is more natural and not processed as much as other salt.

Southern Pecan Pie

SOUTHERN PECAN PIE
(makes 8 3-inch pies)
7 eggs, slightly beaten
4 cups maple syrup
1/2 cup Karo syrup
5 tablespoons melted butter
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 teaspoon senal
1 teaspoon cinnamon
4 cups pecans, coarsely chopped
Beat eggs and syrup together. Add other ingredients and mix well. Stir pecans last.

Pour into graham cracker crusts. Bake at 300 degrees 40 to 70 minutes until center is firm.

Graham cracker crust:
3 cups graham cracker crumbs
1/2 cup butter
3 1/2 tablespoons brown sugar
2 teaspoons cinnamon
Mix all ingredients well. Divide into three equal pie pans. Press tight and even with the bottom of another pie pan.

Decaf coffee on rise

The Washington Post

Concerns about the health effects of coffee have boosted the popularity of decaffeinated coffee in recent years. More than 17 percent of U.S. coffee drinkers were regularly choosing the decaffeinated variety in 1986, compared with only 4 percent in 1962, according to industry surveys.

Frozen breakfasts: fast, but nutritious?

The fastest growing item in the frozen food business, frozen breakfasts often pack a lot of saturated fat and calories

By EVETTE M. HACKMAN, Ph.D., R.D., Los Angeles Times

Despite the increase in fast-food breakfasts (it seems every hamburger chain in the country is trying to lure us in for breakfast), the vast majority of us — 84 percent, according to advertising Age magazine — still eat breakfast at home.

Unfortunately, the business of bringing home the bacon often leaves no time for frying it up. But there is a solution for fast and nutritious at-home breakfasts: Frozen pancakes, waffles, breakfast sandwiches and breakfast entrees await your thaw in the freezer section of your local supermarket.

Breakfasts are now the fastest growing item in the frozen food business. The most nutritious in an otherwise unpromising category goes to Kellogg for its Eggo Nutri-Grain waffle. Thirty-five percent of the calories are from fat, a bit high, and the waffle contains white flour. Otherwise, it's a cut above others in that it contains soy oil rather than saturated palm fat, has no added sugars, flavors or colorings and contains extra fiber in the form of wheat bran, whole wheat flour and whole wheat. Eggs Nutri-Grain is also fortified with Vitamin A, riboflavin, niacin and iron.

At the opposite extreme are two of Swanson's Great Starts frozen breakfasts. Both top the scale for salt and fat content and are prime candidates for permanent cold storage. The sausage, egg, cheese and biscuit sandwich weighs in at a whopping 520 calories, contains 1,640 milligrams of sodium (4/5 of a teaspoon of salt) and 55 percent of its calories comes from fat. The other booby prize goes to Swanson's scrambled egg, sausage and hash browns breakfast entree, which contains 410 calories (72 percent in fat) and 790 milligrams of sodium. Neither package lists the amount of cholesterol, but I suspect it would be high.

Because waffles typically contain more fat than pancakes, plan to eat your waffle without added butter or margarine. For instance, if you top a Nutri-Grain waffle with half a cup of nonfat yogurt and a teaspoon of honey, you'll have a 220-calorie meal that contains 10 grams of protein, 30 grams of carbohydrate and only 5 grams of fat, or 20 percent of the total calories. If you make your pancakes and waffles from scratch, you can decrease the fat level by reducing the amount of oil you add to the recipe and using pan spray rather than oil to grease the griddle.

Data on the chart has been converted to 80-gram portions — or roughly two waffles, pancakes, slices of French toast — for ease in comparison. Check the package for the manufacturer's recommended serving size which may vary.

TOPPING TIPS

Pancakes and waffles — high in carbohydrates but low in fat — are perfect for supplying that get-up-and-go feeling you want in the morning. But top those waffles or pancakes with the wrong stuff and you've turned a breakfast dream into a gastrointestinal nightmare. Start your day off right by trying a few of these low-fat, low-sugar, topping tips:

- Use honey instead of pancake syrup. It has the same amount of calories and sugar, but you'll tend to use less.
- Experiment with low-calorie pancake syrups. You may find one that agrees with your taste buds.
- Skip the butter or margarine or use half as much as usual. Use soft spreads — they're easier to spread thin.
- Top your pancakes or waffles with a mixture of nonfat yogurt, skim ricotta cheese, fresh blueberries or strawberries for a nutritious sunrise start-up.
- Turn your pancake into a crepe and roll low-calorie foods inside, such as skim ricotta cheese and applesauce or 95 percent fat-free, reduced-salt ham and applesauce. (Reduce the salt on ham by rinsing it with water before you eat it. Don't rinse before storing, or it may spoil faster.)

'Bird-by-bird' chicken inspection backed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ending bird-by-bird inspection in slaughtering plants would send chickens to market with "cancers or lesions or pus sacs," a farm-lawmaker told a House Agriculture panel Tuesday.

"Don't adopt anything but bird-by-bird inspection," Rep. Neal Smith, D-Iowa, told the House subcommittee on live stock, dairy and poultry.

Scientists testifying as the subcommittee reviewed the Agriculture Department's inspection program said, however, that the bird-by-bird system does not safeguard the health of consumers.

"They said salmonella and other bacteria that are the major prob-

Roo stew debuts at San Francisco eatery

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Kangaroo stew has made a splash with diners at Wallaby's restaurant on Pier 33.

"They like it, mate," Australian chef Dennis Clews said Monday. "We're running out of stew and the lunch crowd is still coming."

Dark and slightly sweet, looking a little like venison and tasting vaguely like beef, the roo in the stew was the first feature in Wallaby's new Kangaroo cuisine.

Kangaroo tail soup, at $12.95 a serving, has made its debut. Braised kangaroo toes on the menu next week, if the 200 pounds of rare kangaroo meat last that long.

The meat was among the first shipments into the country under relaxed Australian kangaroo export laws, said Gerald Proffman of Night Bird Game and Poultry Co.

"If I didn't know it was kangaroo, I couldn't guess what it was," said diner Marcia Michael. "It was a bit sweeter than beef, it sure wasn't lamb and it wasn't boring like rabbit."

Presentation on couponing should start with mass clipping

By MARTIN SLOANE
Universal Feature Syndicate

Dear Martin — The women's fellowship group of our church is planning a meeting in July with the theme "Recipes for Abundant Living." One of the topics we will be presenting is couponing.

The first insert from Value has had $12.55 worth of coupons, $6 in refund offers, plus offers for free potatoes and lettuce from Kraft, free saucen relish and free Glad trash bags. The third coupon insert from Product Movers had $8.10 worth of coupons, $2.50 worth of refunds from Land O'Lakes and Armour Hot Dogs, plus free-product offers for Slice 2-liter soda and Wyler's Lemonade. The three inserts gave smart shoppers more than $50 worth of money-saving opportunities.

Start the presentation with a swap session. Members should bring their envelopes of unwanted coupons to the meeting. Then the envelopes should be passed around, and everyone can take the coupons they can use from each envelope. The left-over coupons could be donated to a senior-citizens group or they could be used to start a coupon exchange box that would be kept at the church.

Now that you have everyone's attention, you can explain how they can save even more. First, show them how to file their coupons. Next, tell them how to get friends and relatives to save the unwanted coupons for them. And be sure to explain how to match the coupons in their files against advertised specials for double savings.

In a recent column, readers learned that demonstrating products in supermarkets isn't as simple as it may seem. But one reason why demonstrations are increasing was indicated in a talk given by Tom Brewer of the H.E. Butt Grocery Co., San Antonio, Texas, at the recent Food Marketing Institute convention in Chicago.

Brewer estimated that a good demonstration can increase the sales of a product by as much as 50 percent during the demonstration period. Brewer's research showed that if consumers like the product they sample, their subsequent purchases can double the sales of a product. As evidence of the growing popularity of demonstrations, some larger super stores have as many as 12 demonstrators working on weekends. That certainly makes it more fun to shop!

The Saving Power of Coupons: The money-saving power of coupons and refunds was obvious on recent Sunday when most families across the country received two or three coupon inserts along with their home-delivered newspapers.

Complaints trigger meat warning

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Buying meat in bulk amounts not only can pose problems of storage, but may not be the bargain shoppers think it is, warns the Utah Department of Agriculture.

Department compliance officer Dale Yamnik, in a statement prompted by complaints received by agriculture officials, said people often end up paying more for meat bought in bulk than they would by carefully comparing individually packaged portions.

"Too often, people wind up with cuts of meat they can't use or that are difficult to cook. If you want to buy a side of beef, for instance, shop around for the best price, and make sure you and your family like all the cuts of meat that can be obtained from a large piece of bulk meat," Yamnik said.

Yamnik also suggested that consumers ask for references from bulk meat-dealing companies.

Utah law requires that a company selling bulk meat supply the consumer at the time of delivery with a statement listing such information as the name and address of the seller, the date of sale, the name and address of the purchaser, the price per pound before cutting and wrapping, the total price of the sale and, the total new weight of the meat before cutting and processing.

The listing also must show the total net weight of the cut and processed meat delivered to the purchaser, a list by name of all cuts delivered and an itemized list of any charges over and above the original sale price of the meat, Yamnik said.

He advised consumers to determine how much they want to spend before shopping, and to check local retail markets to determine how much they would normally expect to pay for meat products.

"Only your most expensive cuts will sell for more than $4 a pound and seldom more than $4 a pound," Yamnik said. "When buying bulk beef or other meats, ask the salesman how much cutting loss there will be because this will affect the final cost per pound, and ask if there will be any additional charges, such as a cutting charge."

Further, he suggested asking what kinds of cuts they will receive and the approximate percentages of each cut.

Supermarket shopper

The first, from Quad Marketing, had a whopping $15.50 worth of coupons and $4 in refund offers, plus an offer for a free bottle of Gatorade. The second insert from Value had $12.55 worth of coupons, $6 in refund offers, plus offers for free potatoes and lettuce from Kraft, free saucen relish and free Glad trash bags. The third coupon insert from Product Movers had $8.10 worth of coupons, $2.50 worth of refunds from Land O'Lakes and Armour Hot Dogs, plus free-product offers for Slice 2-liter soda and Wyler's Lemonade. The three inserts gave smart shoppers more than $50 worth of money-saving opportunities.

Grow herbs to please the eye and palate, protect health, home

Newsday

Marjorie Kern always tells her students that the first recorded herb was from China — dated 3,703 B.C.

"So, remember, herbs are easy to grow. They've learned to adapt to all kinds of situations," she says, plucking a bit of bloodroot from the ground.

She dabbed the newly broken stem on her wrist, dotting her skin with orange-red sap. "This is Sanguinaria, named for its bloody color, and it's a native American plant. The Indians used it for dye, and it was growing here when John Adams built the house."

Bloodroot's big, light-green leaves look great rambling among the blue scilla and narcissus that border the Olympic-size pool. There are magnolias here as well, which will bloom in June, and dwarf apple and peach trees to reward swimmers after a little exercise.

The mix reflects Kern's love of the good old plants that please the eye and the palate, and the mind with their interesting histories.

Kern grew up in Kings Point, N.Y., and followed her grandfather's horticultural lead. She says she planted seeds and tended the azaleas that had been brought from Europe years before on sailing ships. The 150-year-old house has a high promontory that pokes out into the sea like a great old ship, Mahasset Bay to starboard and Long Island Sound to port.

Kern is an expert on herbs, and her knowledge is reflected in her individual traits is contagious. You can't leave Marjorie Kern's garden without grazing through her patches of sage, basil, and sweet marjoram, and clutching a few choice cuttings in your greedy garden's hand.

"Here, tuck this sweet woodruff in your shirt," she says. "The English call it sweet hay, because the next day it smells like a new-mown hay." In the old days, before people and houses were cleaned so frequently, it was valued for its fresh fragrance.

And it's also a crucial ingredient in May-wine. Sweet woodruff's spiky, light-green leaves and tiny, star-like white flowers also make it an excellent ground cover. Kern's patch perfectly coexists with that invasive biennial, horseradish.

She plucked a dark-green leaf and ordered her visitors to sample it. It had a spicy flavor, with a kick that came from a little cayenne and learned. "Horseradish leaves are good in salads," she said. "And in the fall, of course, you pull up the root and grate it for fresh horseradish."

At a little distance, Kern learned that its tangy leaves are a good substitute for celery. We rubbed our fingers over a plethora of different thymes, oreganos, lemon verbena, sweet marjoram and rose geraniums growing out of pots and tubs by Kern's greenhouse and cold frames.

She picked a bit of lady's mantle and spread the fan-like leaf before our eyes. "See how it's like a lady's cloak, or mantle?" she said. "Its Latin name is Alchemilla because the alchemists hoped it would make gold for them. This tuz on the leaf takes on a golden sheen when it's wet."

Through the centuries, herbs have been valued for three different reasons: They enhance the flavors of food, they smell good and they have healing properties.

If you're unfamiliar with growing herbs, start off with a kitchen garden, suggests Kern, who teaches her favorite subject to her beginners and experts at the New York Botanical Garden.

"Herbs are unique because they're to be utilized," she says. "Most plants are just ornamental, but herbs love to be used. The more you pinch them back, the bushier and sturdier they get."

But they need three basic ingredients for good health: a minimum of five to six hours of sun, porous soil and good drainage.

Plant them close to your kitchen, to encourage easy and frequent use. A simple circle makes a nice design.

If you can find an old wagon wheel, plant a different herb in each section formed by the spokes. If you can't find a wheel, plant "spokes" of rue, which has a blue-gray foliage excellent for accenting the different herb beds.

Thyme or lavender are other possibilities, and all three can be clipped into low borders when they get too tall.

As for what to grow, start out with herbs that you like to eat: different types of basil, oregano, thyme, marjoram, chives, garlic, parsley, dill, coriander.

Many herbs have lemon-scented varieties that are good in fish dishes, drinks, fruit and vegetable salads. Bay and rosemary are tender perennials which are best planted in pots, sunk in the ground for the summer and then lifted and brought into the house when temperatures fall.

Don't forget sage, whose gray-green leaf is also a good contrast to other herbs.

If you would be of an age, use sage," quips Kern. "Remember the definition of a sage? A very old person who was very wise, who still had all his marbles. Well, sage is supposed to restore the memory and sustain it — they're doing research on this now. And there are over 750 varieties of this herb."

"Once you've started down the herb-garden-path, there's rarely any turning back." That first kitchen garden is likely to expand into all corners of your property — as it has over Kern's 18 acres.

Roses, for example, are crucial to a good herb garden. "Their fragrance draws the bees and birds to pollinate the plants and keep down the insects," says Kern. "The petals are used in potpourri and the rose hips are an important source of vitamin C."

Kern doesn't spray her roses, because she doesn't want pesticides on her food or in her soil. So she grows the old-fashioned varieties and the damask roses, which are more disease-resistant. The salt breezes also help, no doubt. Roses look lovely next to the gray-greens.

Look for southernwood (a good moth repellent), wormwood and dusty miller. Foxglove, the source of digitalis, is another flower that seems a natural in the herb garden.

Bergamot is a tall, floppy grower with drooping purple flowers. Its young leaves have a cucumber taste, delicious in salads. Bergamot, or bee balm, is another one to consider — for its spiky, deep-red flowers so beloved by the bees.

Kern adds that bergamot makes an interesting tea, something the Indians taught the colonists, so they'd have a substitute for English Breakfast after the Boston Tea Party.

As we walked by the masses of daylilies that will be blooming in June, Kern reminded us that these, too, are delicious to eat. Simply dip them in a light batter and deep-fat fry them as a tempura. Her beds of ferns provide fiddleheads — better than asparagus — in the spring. She stuffs her nasturtium flowers with cottage cheese and chives as an elegant appetizer. There is no end to edible landscaping once you let your imagination marry your palate and your eye.

And don't forget garlic, which keeps colds and vampires from the door.

Gardening

Finding one's Eden in the garden at home

By HENRY MITCHELL
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — It is not important for a garden to be beautiful. It is extremely important for the gardener to think it a fair substitute for Eden.

I received a garden I used to see this time of year in which the specialty was irises and roses — there was nothing else, so it was dull much of the year.

Furthermore, the roses were pruned to 2 inches above the graft every winter and therefore were not fine, large bushes, and the irises were all outmoded and superseded varieties.

But the gardener, a professor, was enchanted with it, and as the years went by, I began to understand better what he saw in it. Finally, I thought it beautiful, too.

In the past week, in my own garden, I have been rather content and do not envy anybody. Out the kitchen door I first come to a 7-foot plant of the purplish red rose "Roseraie de l'Hay" and then a 6-foot bush of "Mrs. Anthony Waterer," followed by a large shrub of "Hansa."

These are all in tones of red and purple, then a tall columnar yew. Back of these roses, peering around the side of the yew, is an 8-foot shrub of the rose "Sarah Van Fleet."

Just at "Hansa" there is an arch, with a young plant of the rambler "Sea Gull" to the right, rising from a little thicket of the old Siberian iris "Perry's Blue" (there are vastly

Chemicals and mulch combat those weeds

It doesn't take much weed pulling and hoeing this time of year to interest people in easier weed control methods. The main reason for reducing weed problems are chemicals and mulch.

Weed-preventing chemicals can be applied around trees, shrubs, flowers and vegetables. Most of these garden weed preventers kill the seeds as they start to germinate. Existing weeds have to be removed before applying them. Those which contain Casoron are widely used around trees and shrubs.

Casoron is not recommended for flowers and vegetables. Dacthal is the most common ingredient in garden weed preventers which can be used safely around flowers and vegetables as well as woody plants. It can be applied right after transplanting flowers or vegetable plants. Seeded vegetables must be up and the first crop of weeds removed before applying Dacthal.

Two types of mulch can be used around plants to greatly reduce or almost completely eliminate weeds. Organic mulches such as bark are the most attractive and popular. Sheet mulch materials such as black plastic and woven fabrics are the most effective in preventing weeds. Sometimes both types are used together to combine effectiveness with an attractive appearance.

Woven fabric mulches are very useful around trees and shrubs. The black color shades out weeds completely. Because they are porous, water and air can flow through freely, resulting in normal root growth. Woody plants tend to become shallow rooted under black plastic. Black plastic is excellent ground warm weather vegetables like tomatoes, peppers, squash, melons and cucumbers. The plastic not only prevents weeds but warms the soil underneath, which speeds growth and maturity.

Allen Wilson Intermountain gardening

My favorite mulching material is grass clippings. Every time I mow my lawn I spread the clippings around shrubs, flowers and vegetables. A one-inch layer settles down to a half inch or less after a couple of weeks, when another layer can be applied. Shallow rooted plants such as flowers and vegetables can only tolerate a depth of about 1 1/2 inches. Two or three inches is okay for trees and shrubs.

The dark brown color of bark is more appealing than the light tan of grass clippings to some people. Coarser grades of bark are used around trees and shrubs, but the finer material is preferable for flowers and vegetables.

'Little' stirs big boom in cooking helpers

Los Angeles Times

The name of the game is "little." The market is being played by tiny ovens, microwaves, irons, food processors, coffee makers. You name it, the compact counterpart is there. "Your little" category is expected to be getting bigger and bigger. Another small thing from the class of big and bulky has just arrived.

Welcome, Little Pal. It may have missed its cue for Memorial Day, the onset of the barbecue and picnic season, but this charming, bright red-orange barbecue grill for use at your service for Father's Day, Labor Day and many more picnics or camping trips to come. Or anytime, of course, in your backyard or patio.

A favored picnic mainstay in the Southwestern states since it was introduced a few years ago, Little Pal is made in America. "It's totally handmade and we've been very proud of it," said its inventor, Don McNeil (McNeil Enterprises Inc., Alvarado, Texas), who also invented products like the hand-held calculator and the vibrating pillow. "Your little" category is expected to be getting bigger and bigger. Another small thing from the class of big and bulky has just arrived.

Available completely assembled, the 16-pound portable grill comes close to fitting into the hold Art Deco mode. The hood is rounded and hinged for easy opening and locking; there is a small chimney stack in the back and a swinging long handle for carrying. Little Pal's grills are sturdy and well-balanced; they do not fold up like other portable grills but instead, they are welded onto the body so the unit does not tip over.

"You'll be surprised that it uses fewer charcoal briquettes than any other grill," said McNeil, who likes to cook quail and pheasant in it. The barbecue requires about 12 to 16 briquettes to cook for 2 1/2 hours at about 350-degrees or at medium heat. We found that this compact grill also cooks faster. When the charcoal is hot, a turn of the handle is created so that heat is well circulated and flavors stay in.

Little Pal is designed for charcoal cooking ($39) or for use with propane ($79) and comes complete with lava-rock. The throw-away propane bottle (14.1-ounce), which usually lasts about four hours, fits securely in a bracket on the legs under the grill.

Exit Little Pal, meet L'il Drip. Wear-Ever Proctor-Silex calls its product the world's first all-in-one drip coffee maker. It is self-contained and made in bulk and nobody has to worry about handling or replacing a glass pot. Proctor-Silex's L'il Drip contains everything in its compact form: water reservoir, heating unit, carafe and filter basket.

For those who dislike figuring out lengthy instructions, preparing the pot for an initial cup of coffee may seem complicated at first. The package glances through the book of directions. But it turns out to be easy. You will find it similar to any other automatic drip coffee maker. What is unusual is that you do not have to remove the filter and grounds before pouring out the coffee. The filter basket is designed with an extended lip to prevent the grounds from spilling out during the pouring.

The manufacturer's main emphasis is that L'il Drip makes extra hot coffee and keeps it hot for 45 minutes, unplugged, when you're gone. It is particularly ideal this summer for people who want to dine outdoors and have coffee in their patio. How does the coffee maker retain heat? Proctor-Silex developed a thermal action design featuring a double wall construction. Also, the water reservoir acts as an insulator for the carafe because it actually surrounds it.

L'il Drip ($57.95) comes in white with a black phenolic base, stands 10 inches high and the width measures 11 1/2 inches from spout to handle. A safety power light indicates that it is plugged in.

One might easily say that the space under the cabinets has been abused. Think of all the gadgets and appliances that can fit into this precious space.
Yet manufacturers bet there is room for more as they continue to squeeze new goods into the area. A Canadian company is utilizing the wall between the countertop and the bottom of the kitchen cabinets. Called "Match 1," this new modular storage system is being distributed by Desco Marketing Corp. in Los Angeles.

"It's very high-tech, a fun thing in plastic that's going very well for us," said Mitch Challice, the company's marketing director. "Because of its flexibility, it allows you to change and rearrange spices, mugs, towel holders and storage boxes around to create a new design to your kitchen."

The system was designed by internationally renowned Canadian designer Andre Morin. The company calls Match 1 a gift collection is a set of six spice containers, which comes because parts or matched sets can be purchased individually, and each is attractively packaged. All the materials are made with high-gloss, super-resistant acrylic.

The basis for all the accessories is the modular panel ($9.95), which can be mounted on the wall with anchors and screws. Measuring about 11 1/2 inches tall, 16 inches wide and three-quarters of an inch thick, the panel has six horizontal bars, which can be used with every product of the collection. For instance, the paper towel holder, which is made of polycarbonate for extra strength, has hooks in the back so it can easily slide into one of the bars in the panel.

Another optional accessory is a tall utility kitchen canister for storing tea, coffee, flour or rice, beans or pasta. Four of these can fit in a one modular panel. There is a foil or wax paper holder with a cutting edge on the hinged cover.

One accessory that is useful as an extra drawer in the kitchen is the covered box for tools, bread, cookies, pasta or whatever. There is a set of six spice containers, which comes with 20 self-adhesive labels. (Eighteen spice containers could be mounted on each modular panel.)

The remaining options include a utility shelf, cork display panels, a battery-operated clock and a set of six utility hooks. The hooks hold odds and ends such as kitchen tools, utensils, paper pads, keys, cloth towels, coffee mugs.
Miniature modules ($7.95 with six hooks) that feature one horizontal bar are also available. The Match 1 system comes in red, white, almond and cobalt blue. Yellow, which was originally available, was phased out of the line because it was too strong in most kitchens.

"We've done well with cobalt blue, especially because it's a strong color, you couldn't have a lot of it around."

Another product dealing with kitchen storage and organization that was just introduced is the Blade Holder box from Cuisinart ($20).
Made of high-impact plastic with a smooth surface and a see-through cover that can be locked, the Cuisinart blade holder is designed to store the metal blade, the dough blade and detachable stem. Aside from safety and convenience—the blade holder was developed because the manufacturer has always insisted—its instruction booklets that the blade or disc should never be stored on the motor shaft unless the processor is in use. Sometimes, in humid climates, the shaft can expand, making it difficult to get out the blade if it is left on for long periods.

Previously introduced, the Cuisinart Disc Holder ($15) can store seven discs securely with the cutting edges protected behind a plastic barrier. The discs can slide in and out, and self-adhesive labels are provided for disc identification.

On the left, growing on wires on the arch-it-wires are black they are invisible) and tangling a bit with the purple. It is a plant of the wilding-smallish climatic "Venosa Viola", which is "purple with a white-center or white with a purple edge."
You go up a step and encounter an old red hybrid perpetual of unknown name, possibly "General Jacquemont", and it certainly smells like it. Here you have a fine patch of hardy ones that the siler for some reason have ignored this year.
There are other arches with roses too young to need mentioning as they do not yet cut in the picture, but one of them is blooming with the pink "Blairli No. 2," a Bourbon rose of 1845 that an old gardener (I have read) used to call "Old Bleary Eye."
