Cope says his trout company trying to be a good neighbor

By JANE ROBISON Times-News writer

BUHL — Larry Cope readily admits his business has an odor most foul.

But the president of Clear Springs Trout Company is equally as forceful about his company's responsiveness as a good neighbor.

"We try to be a positive factor in the community," Cope said. "We recognized from the beginning that the environment is a sensitive business, and you have to be responsible."

Hagerman Valley residents recently accused Clear Springs Trout Company and the Army Corps of Engineers of turning Crystal Springs Lake into a cesspool of fish waste.

Residents complained of the odor in the area and charged the private fish hatchery may not be meeting EPA standards, even though EPA gave Clear Springs Trout Company a clean bill of health in January.

Opponents also were angry with the Army Corps for building a new diversion area, taking the water away from the scenic beauty where people once fished and practiced scuba diving.

But on Friday, Cope gave a tour of his company and the area and said the problem is not with the discharge from the facility at Crystal Springs, which straddles the Snake River.

"People think we dewatered the lake, but the water level is a function of the river," the thin, balding Cope said.

In a water-short year called worse than the drought of 1977, the Snake River's flow is not backing up into the estuary at Crystal Springs, Cope said. While standing on dried mud on the river bed, he pointed to water marks on the rocks along the edge.

"For the last 18 years, the discharge from the Crystal Springs hatchery has been the same, 80 to 100 cubic feet per second, Cope said.

"As for the smell, the odor is coming from the settling ponds on the hatchery grounds, and not from the estuary, Cope said.

"It's definitely a problem we're trying to address, and frankly, we don't have an answer," Cope said. "But we're working on it."

Dave Erickson, a director of technical services for Clear Springs Trout Company, said the company cooperated with the Environmental

Hatchery settling ponds are responsible for the odor which some thought came from Crystal Springs Lake

Protection Agency to work out the amount of acceptable solids to be released into the estuary.

"The requirement is no more than 5 parts per million," Erickson said. "Basically, that means if you hold up a glass jar of water, you can see right through it."

Erickson also said it was in the company's best interest to keep the water as clear and clean as possible because trout are susceptible to disease. The company has spent $200,000 on treatment facilities and spends $200 a month on capturing fish waste solids, Cope said.

Clear Springs Trout Company is one of more than 30 commercial hatcheries in Idaho, a state that ranks

No. 1 in commercial fish production. And Clear Springs is the largest commercial hatchery, producing more than 14 million pounds of rainbow trout a year and employing 320 people, Cope said.

Although residents complained about Clear Springs' facility at Crystal Springs, the major fight is with one of Clear Springs' competitors, Rim View Trout Company owned by Earl Hardy.

Hardy is filing for more water at Niagara Springs, a sludge trap away from Crystal Springs. Opponents say Hardy's request would partially dry up Niagara Springs and

Keeping oil lane open may have high price

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Navy can back up President Reagan's promise to keep Persian Gulf oil lanes open, but the price could be more American military casualties.

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff said Friday.

Adm. William J. Crowe Jr. also told the Senate Armed Services Committee that the Pentagon would be faced with "difficult choices" if Iran decides to strike American ships or Kuwaiti tankers flying American flags.

Crowe, the nation's top uniformed officer, declined to say publicly what those choices might be but promised to talk about them in a closed-door meeting of the panel.

At the Pentagon, meantime, officials said one of many "contingency options" being studied is a pre-emptive strike against Silkworm anti-ship missiles purchased by Iran from China.

But the officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said officials "don't support it to pre-emptive strike and don't think it's viable."

Crowe's comments were his first public statements to Congress since Reagan pledged last month to use U.S. military force to keep open the gulf, through which passes much of the oil used by the Western world.

Reagan promised to put U.S. flags and explains aboard Kuwait tankers. Crowe, noting that Kuwait is an ally of Iraq in the 6½-year-old Iran-Iraq war, said the U.S. move will raise the stakes.

Congressional fears have been heightened in the wake of the Iraqi missile attack on the frigate USS Stark, which killed 37 sailors. Iraq said the strike was a mistake, and Crowe said Friday he agrees.

Crowe noted Reagan's promise to protect the Kuwaiti tankers and said the Joint Chiefs "believe that we can carry out this mission."

"Of course," he added, "there are no absolute guarantees that such an operation will be casualty-free, or that Iran will not escalate the sea war, which will present us with further difficult choices."

"On the other hand," he said, "we have the capability to keep the oil line to Kuwait open, to assure our Arab friends of our commitment, and to keep the risks low."

As for the possibility of Iranian attacks, Crowe said, "The Iranians have the same capabilities they did a month ago" before the Stark at tack raised U.S. awareness of the dangers in the area.

"Since the Stark attack, we have not as yet seen any change in Iranian conduct at sea," he said. "In fact, they appear to be even more cautious than previously. While this situation could change quickly, I would suggest that we base our judgments and actions on tangible

Manager won't give up profits

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Albert Hakim, who managed the shadowy bank accounts in the Iran-Contra affair, said Friday he is not prepared to turn over $8 million in remaining profits to the U.S. treasury, even though it might be the "heroic thing" to do.

"It's not a question of doing the heroic thing and passing an acid test," Hakim said on his third and final day of testimony before the joint House and Senate panels investigating the matter. "It's a business situation and it should be treated as such," he said.

Hakim showed visible distress near the end of his 17 hours as a witness when Sen. Daniel K. Inouye said it would be an understatement to characterize some of Hakim's most devastating testimony as stranger than fiction.

"Did it concern you... that something was drastically wrong?" asked Inouye, chairman of the Senate committee.

"When I look back, Mr. Chairman, I share your opinion," said Hakim, wiping his eyes. "At the time, it did not bother me."

Before he was dismissed, Hakim was ordered by the committees to return a top secret KL-43 encryption device, one of about a dozen White House aide Oliver L. North had distributed to his private network. This device is in an attorney's office in Geneva, Hakim's lawyer said.

During a day of testimony dominated by questions about profits, Hakim also disclosed that in their efforts to win freedom for Americans held in Lebanon, he and his partner, retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord, told an Iranian delegation last October that the United States was prepared to help topple the president of Iraq.

Secord also told the Iranians that the United States would fight Russians in Iran in case of an invasion, Hakim said.

Jobless rate holds at decade-low point

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nation's unemployment rate held at a decade-low 6.3 percent in May despite a massive increase in the labor force.

The report issued Friday suggested that more Americans are working longer hours to maintain their standard of living.

The civilian labor force last month grew by a probably somewhat exaggerated 638,000 people, of whom 612,000 found work, the Labor Department said, raising total employment to a record 112.4 million.

But the ranks of the unemployed also climbed slightly, by 46,000 to 7,546,000, as the proportion of Americans in the labor market — both those holding and those seeking jobs — rose from 55.8 percent to a record 56.1 percent. Meanwhile, hourly wages in May rose just 2 cents, or less than one-half of 1 percent, to a nationwide average of $8.92 per hour after having dipped slightly in April. But factory workers last month averaged 3.8 hours of overtime per week, the highest level since April 1978.

"There is something new and different going on in the labor market," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson-Lehman Bros., a New York brokerage company. "More of us are having to work longer hours and at more jobs than ever before to maintain our families' standard of living."

Get handle on bags, FAA orders airlines

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Federal Aviation Administration imposed regulations Friday requiring airlines to limit carry-on baggage and make certain that items are properly stored before a jetliner leaves the boarding gate.

The agency said "too much baggage is being taken aboard some flights (and) being stowed improperly, creating unsafe conditions" because airlines have become "lax in their compliance" to existing baggage requirements.

Each airline within six months must establish a specific limit on how much carry-on baggage will be allowed, and put in place a screening system before the passenger boards the aircraft, the agency said.

Flight attendants for years have complained that airlines allow too many bags and large items aboard aircraft, making it impossible to properly store them during flight and posing a safety hazard.

"We've seen a truck tire, Christmas trees, even a drive shaft from a BMW and other passengers just bringing four or five bags on board which is not only unsafe but inconvenient," said Matthew Finucane, safety director of the Association of Flight Attendants.

"Some passengers have evidently come to expect that they will be able to carry on almost anything," the FAA agreed.

While the new requirements do not establish specific limits on size and number of bags, they will allow on board the FAA said the airlines they must:

Remains of Polly Bemis returned to spot where she lived

ON THE SALMON RIVER — The remains of pioneer Polly Bemis, deemed by historians a significant figure in long-age Idaho, have been returned to the spot where she lived more than 30 years.

In ceremonies Friday, Gov. Cecil Andrus will only an occasional passing boating party providing a link to civilization. The log cabin where she lived will remain as a public museum, with some of her belongings on display. Other Bemis items are in a museum near Grangeville. The cabin has been nominated for a spot of Mrs. Bemis been moved from 1833 at the Grangeville, where she died in 1863 at the old mining town of Warren, on the Salmon River where she lived many years with her husband, Peter "Charlie" Bemis.

The Bemis couple carved out a life in a rugged wilderness for more than 30 years, and the cabin where she lived will remain as a public museum, with some of her belongings on display. Other Bemis items are in a museum near Grangeville. The cabin has been nominated for a spot at the National Register of Historic Places. The museum is about 20 miles north of the old mining town of Warren, on the Salmon River at its confluence with Crooked Creek. It's about 40 miles upstream from Grangeville.

Historian Curt Conley said returning her remains to the Salmon River in a small way makes up for the injustices suffered by Chinese immigrants in the United States in the latter part of the 19th Century. Historians estimate up to 15,000 Chinese worked in Idaho's mining camps, for the railroad and at other jobs during the period.

Conley said for example, it was impossible for Polly Bemis to become an American citizen, although she is recognized as a significant factor in the history of this area.

"Polly would be amused and amazed by the kind of attention we are giving her today," he said. "Everybody who knew her and all that has been written about her say she was hard-working, always cheerful and the epitome of the pioneer spirit."

"The history of Polly Bemis is a great part of the legacy of central Idaho. She is the foremost pioneer on the rugged Salmon River," said Andrus.

Two people touched by Mrs. Bemis during their lifetimes talked about her. John Carey, Riggins, said the most amazing thing he recalled about Mrs. Bemis was that she "learned the art of going without money."

She was able to survive because everyone liked her and everyone wanted to make sure she got along, said Carey. "Nothing you can say about Polly Bemis would be good enough," he said.

Bowen vows to protect rights of AIDS victims

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's top health official, reacting to protesters who stood throughout his speech at an international AIDS conference, personally pledged Friday to protect the rights and dignity of people with the deadly disease.

The address by Health and Human Services Secretary Otis B. Bowen concluded a three-day event at the Reagan Center in Washington. Bowen, a 6-foot, 200-pound man, was marked by widespread concern with politicians dictating the order of battle in the war against AIDS.

At Bowen's news conference, about 200 delegates stood in prearranged, silent protest.

A leaflet urging the action said, "The illness of AIDS as defined by the Reagan administration and the U.S. Congress shows ignorance and contempt. . . . This is your opportunity to send a clear message to the world that we need research, not forced testing; education, not legislation; and health care, not discrimination."

Reaction to Bowen's remarks was muted until loud laughter erupted when he said, "The problem of AIDS and the efforts at solution have the president's complete attention." That reaction came from a broader segment of the audience of several thousand.

Speaking extemporaneously in his closing remarks, Bowen said he did not object to his audience expressing its disagreement and added: "Let me pledge that I shall not turn my back on the problem. I shall not turn my back on AIDS nor the people who have it."

After being interrupted by sustained applause, Bowen continued: "We're going to see it through to ultimate success with proper protection, of civil rights and human dignity."

Handsfield said the data from his study may also apply to heterosexual men and women.

Schroeder considering race in 1988

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Patricia Schroeder of Colorado, the dean of women in Congress and co-chairman of Gary Hart's abortive White House campaign, said Friday she is pondering whether to make her own bid for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination.

She said there are "just an awful lot of things that I could contribute that aren't being said" by those in the already crowded field. If she runs, she would be the first woman

Contra

When the Iran-Contra story emerged in public last November, Hakim said, he expected the Reagan administration "to come out and say, 'Hey, fellows, you are on your own; for these reasons we cannot help — or will help you.'"

But, he said, "there was total silence, as if we didn't exist." Asked if he thought President Reagan should have said something in his behalf, the Iranian-born Hakim said, "I believe that if he could not do that, he should have arranged for us to be heard."

He denied he had tried to influence North, who was deeply involved in the Iranian and Nicaraguan projects, despite continuing suggestions from committee members that that might have been his intent in trying to set aside hundreds of thousands of dollars for North's family.

Schroeder considering race in 1988

In the 1988 race. The 46-year-old member of the House Armed Services Committee said she will be talking to many people in early states such as Iowa, as well as testing the waters on the question raising the several million dollars needed for a race.

"Absolutely not!" was her answer when asked if she would run just to demonstrate that a woman can seek the nation's highest office.

A Boston bank has been subpoenaed by the committee for questioning about an account reported North's name, a Boston TV station reported Friday. Station WCVB quoted an unidentified committee source as saying the State Street Bank has at least one account in North's name.

The first phase of the investigation, which has focused primarily on the Contra aid aspect of the story, will conclude next week. Monday's report will also appear before the Intelligence Oversight Board, which wrote legal opinions on the Boland amendment and on aid to Nicaragua

ALBERT HAKIM Rough day on stand that North cited as authorizing his activities; and Pawn Hall, North's former secretary.

Hakim said remaining profits from the Secord-Hakim enterprise's dealings are in two accounts. One, with Merrill Lynch in London, contains $6.7 million. The other, holding 0.4 million, is with a Swiss bank.

The testimony brought renewed demands from Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., vice chairman of the Senate panel to recall Secord for further questioning.

In his sworn testimony, Secord had told the panels that his motive in the venture was patriotism and that he had foregone any profits from his role in the sale of arms to Iran and a secret re-supply operation for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Springs

Crystal Springs. Cope said Clear Springs bought a fish hatchery with "substantially more water at a substantially less price" that was up for sale about the same time the Army Corps was looking in the early 1980s.

"I don't disagree with the project, but I think they could have done a better job with less money," Cope said. "I don't think anybody imagined their project would be this extensive."

Asked about Clear Springs' water right of 400 cfs at Crystal Springs, water that would have flowed naturally into Crystal Springs if there were no hatchery business, Cope said he had "no apologies for this resource industry."

"I think it's good for the Magic Valley community," he said.

Resident Bob Burke, who is opposing Henry's filing at Niagara Falls, was also unenthusiastic about Clear Springs.

"All you have to do is look at Crystal Falls. That tells you what kind of company they are," Burke said on Friday.

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Idaho Falls. Today and tonight, partly cloudy and a chance of showers or thundershowers. Gusty winds to 45 mph near thundershowers. Southwesterly winds today. Highs 85 to 90. Lows mid-50s. Sunday, mostly sunny but a chance of afternoon thundershowers. Highs in the upper 80s.

Utah — Mostly cloudy through Sunday with widely scattered thundershowers during the afternoon and early nighttime hours. Continued unseasonably warm. Strong gusty winds likely near thundershowers. Highs in the 80s and lows 45 to 55.

Nevada — Partly cloudy with slight chance of an afternoon or evening thundershower. Highs near 90. Lows 40 to 45. Sunday, mostly sunny except for a chance of afternoon thundershowers. Highs 80 to 85.

Summary: At 3 p.m., thundershowers were scattered mostly to the southern and central parts of Idaho. Precipitation was spotty but Salmon reported a brief heavy shower as a thundershower passed.

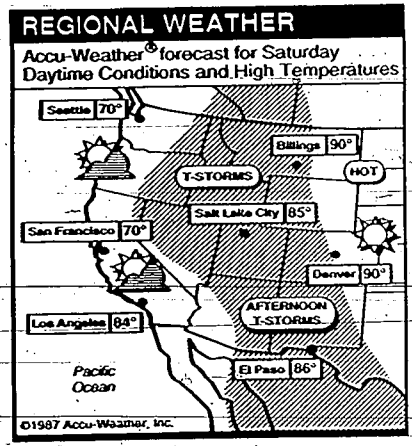

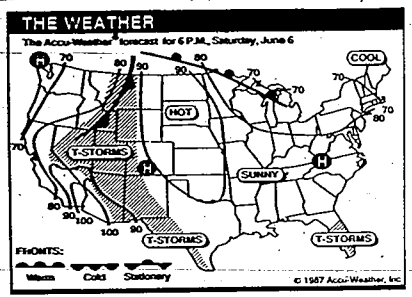

Winds were generally in the 10 to 15 mph range during the afternoon. The Healy field had wind gusts of 25 mph from a nearby thundershower. Mid-afternoon temperatures were in the 80s to low 90s over the state.

The highest temperature in Idaho Friday was 93 degrees at the Mountain Home Air Force Base, while Elk City reported the lowest reading of 33 degrees.

The pollen count in Twin Falls Friday was 10 to 15 particles per cubic meter of air.

For Southern Idaho shows conditions for field work and haying will be good. Scattered thundershowers and gusty winds could briefly delay outdoor activities. Localized rainfall totals up to .25 inch will be possible. Irrigation delays will continue to be above normal. Mean four-inch soil temperatures will show little change. Winds for spraying will be south to southwest 8 to 12 mph today and Sunday except near thundershowers.

Jobs

In the past year the overall unemployment rate has dropped almost 1/2 full percentage point, despite an average job loss rate of only 2 to 2.5 percent. Historically, Sinal said, growth has had an average 4 percent to get a drop of 1 percentage point in the jobless rate.

That's had a large effect on high-paying to lower-paying jobs; that's what's driving this jobs machine," he said. "Families are trying to maintain their consumption patterns as long as they can. More women are working, labor force participation is at a record and there's a greater willingness, partly because of the tax cuts, to work overtime or more than one job."

The large increase in the labor force in May was somewhat expected by economists after an effective change in March and April combined, compared with normal monthly growth of about 200,000. That July was the biggest factor in dropping the jobless rate from 6.7 percent in February to 6.6 percent in March and 6.4 percent in April.

In contrast, a separate survey of non-agricultural payrolls showed employment growth of only 123,000 in May, the lowest monthly increase since 1965.

The payroll gains were essentially limited to the service side of the economy. Employment in hospital and business services, such as data processing, accounted for more than one-third of the gains. Jobs in finance, insurance and real estate rose by about 15,000.

Manufacturing employment held steady at about 19 million but consumption employment "rose a little less than expected for this time of the year and, after seasonal adjustment, was down slightly from April," the Labor Department said.

An alternate government calculation that includes in the labor market the 1.7 million unformed members of the armed forces stationed in the United States showed unemployment at 6.4 percent in May, unchanged from April.

Among adult men age 20 or over, the May jobless rate was 5.5 percent, unchanged from April but down 0.5 percentage point since January. For adult women, the May unemployment rate was 5.4 percent, down from 5.5 percent in April and 5.9 percent in January.

The department gave these jobless rates in May for other population groups: Teen-agers, 17.7 percent, up from 17.4 percent in April but unchanged from January; black teen-age 17.7 percent, up from 36.5 percent in April but down from 42.2 percent in January.

evidence rather than conjecture.

"The gulf is not a no-man's land," Crowe said. "In fact, it is still a thriving and bustling commercial crossroads."

In the three years since Iran and Iraq targeted tankers, less than 1 percent of the ships moving through the long waterway have been attacked, Crowe said, and no large ships have been sunk.

"It's important to keep in mind the everyday environment in the gulf and not to be stampeded by overly dramatic accounts."

In public, Crowe did not mention the Navy's missiles, which could threaten ships moving through the Strait of Hormuz at the mouth of the gulf. The missiles have a range of about 50 miles, which is wider than the range of U.S. military officials have worried that the weapons could be used against Navy ships or refueled Kuwaiti tankers passing by.

After hearing Crowe behind closed doors, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the Armed Services Committee chairman, said, "The Silkwood military threat is one of the chief concerns we have."

"As for a pre-emptive strike, Nunn said, 'That's a matter we should not be declaring our intentions on one way or the other, which is wider than the threat to the region and to free transportation if they deploy those Silkwoods in the area of the Strait.'"

"The sinking of the Stark attack, Crowe was indirectly critical of the frigate's operation.

"In my view, the ship had the weapons systems and systems to put up a credible defense, but why they were not brought into play is a proper subject for a formal investigation," he said. "As you know, such an investigation is now in train."

erment-approved limit on the size and number of items that may be brought aboard, depending on how much space is available in various aircraft. An FAA inspector must approve the limits for each type of plane.

Scan each passenger's bags before boarding to assure that the limit is not exceeded. Passengers are urged to keep the aircraft at the gate and at least one cabin door open until flight attendants have confirmed that all baggage aboard the plane has been properly stored.

The FAA said it rejected recommendations from the Association of Flight Attendants that a single, federal limit be applied to all airlines because different aircraft can accommodate a widely different amount of carry-on items.

But it said a specific standard, establishing the number of bags and size of each item, was not needed so flight attendants are not forced to stow excess baggage in lavatories, galleys and other unauthorized areas.

Elizabeth Dole to visit Boise

BOISE (AP) — Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole will appear in Boise June 16 at a $25 per plate fundraising breakfast on behalf of her husband, Robert Dole.
Dole is among the candidates for the Republican presidential nomination.
Roy Eggen, who is in charge of the Dole visit, said she will appear at a breakfast at 7:30 a.m. at the Red Lion-Downtown, then please call 333-2222 for more information.
Eggen is chairman of Dole's exploratory committee in Idaho.

Drought claims another victim

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The dramatically low winter snow pack that has set the stage for the worst summer drought in Idaho in a decade has claimed another victim.
The Bogus Basin ski facility near Boise reported on Friday that this winter was one of its worst financially since the last bad drought in 1977.
Businessman Jane DeChambeau said a month-late opening due to no snow in December coupled with a one-third drop in skier visits left Bogus Basin with $50,000 to $100,000 in red ink. A normal season usually nets the facility $300,000 in profits, she said.
With the loss, Ms. DeChambeau said Bogus Basin has been forced to cancel all plans for capital expansion and will only be able to finance routine maintenance and safety work.

Order stops collection efforts

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Department of Finance says it has obtained a permanent injunction against an Idaho Falls man who was operating an unlicensed collection agency.
Seventh District Judge H. Reynold George signed the order as a result of a lawsuit filed by the department last November.
Director Berton J. Patty said the department alleged Henry Allen Watts operated an unlicensed collection agency; solicited and advertised his collection business; engaged in credit counseling; received funds for prorated distribution to creditors and collected unlawful fees for his services.
The agency said it was ordered to cease.
The department alleged that Watts charged a collection fee of more than $10 on bad checks; failed to maintain a separate trust account for creditor funds; failed to train employees involved in collection work; failed to keep adequate records and converted to his own use funds received from debtors for the payments of his debts.
The judgment permanently enjoins Watts from any violations of the Idaho Collection Agency Law, or from assisting others in such violations, Patty said.

Judge orders fresh evaluation

REXBURG (AP) — A 7th District Court judge has ordered further psychological evaluation of a Rexburg man convicted of brutally killing his 7-week-old son.
But Judge Grant Young said the results of that evaluation over the next six months will have no impact on the maximum 10-year prison term he has imposed on Timothy Allen Johnson, 29, for the New Year's Eve death of his son Jeffrey.
Young conceded that Johnson needed professional help and that the court must see he receives the rehabilitation needed so "this kind of nightmare never happens again."
But he said there was no excuse for Johnson's conduct, contending "it is difficult for the court to understand how you can argue this was not an intentional killing."
Authorities said Jeffrey died from massive head injuries that included two four-inch fractures on each side of his skull. An autopsy showed that he had also suffered a dozen separate rib fractures before he was a month old.

DRIGGS (AP) — Colleen Cooke celebrates her 10th birthday today, one week after she guided her critically injured father nearly five miles out of the mountainous terrain where they were riding horseback.
She will celebrate with her four-day-old sister and mother as they wait for her father, Teton County Sheriff Kim Cooke, to be released from Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center in Idaho Falls.
Cooke, 33, was kicked in the face by a horse May 30 and suffered severe injuries to his right eye and head. His wife, Jennifer, gave birth to their second child four days ago in the same Idaho Falls hospital.
The family lives outside Victor at the base of the Teton mountains. Cooke and his daughter were riding behind their home, "as near as we can tell, four or five miles back in the hills," Mrs. Cooke said.
After he was injured, the two walked back to their home. "Colleen said he held on to her shoulder. They tried to ride, but that didn't work," Mrs. Cookesaid.

Rezoning ban unfair, stands

POCATELLO (AP) — Sixth District Judge William Woodland has labeled a 1982 Blaine County ban on rezoning any agricultural land unfair, but he has refused to void the ban that has blocked construction of a $15 million recreational complex.
The nine-page decision cited a procedural flaw in rejecting the request of Salt Lake City developer Ron C. Mills and Associates to overturn denial of its petition to rezone the 2,480-acre Garden Creek Gap property from agricultural to recreational.
Woodland said the developer failed to appeal the county commission's denial of the rezoning petition, based on the 1982 ban, within the prescribed period of time.
But the judge said the developer was barred from contesting the denial by his "failure to seek review of the decision within the 60-day statutorily allotted time period."
Mills and Associates filed the court challenge in 1985 after the commission upheld the Planning and Zoning Commission's denial of its rezoning application. It claimed the decision was erroneous and illegal. The developer has also filed a $2 million civil suit, seeking compensation for its investment in the project on grounds that the flat rezoning ban violated its right to due process.

Lottery foes seek to broaden support

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Eastern Idaho organizers of a citizens' group vowed to defend a state lottery at the polls next year, hoping the effort can be based outside Idaho Falls so it will not be immediately linked with the Mormon Church.
"If it's based from this part of the state, people will view it as an LDS issue," said state Rep. Preston Brimhall, R-Idaho Falls, and Joe Groberg, who heads Citizens Opposed to the Lottery Amendment, said. "We don't want it to be an LDS issue, it's a Christian issue."
The Mormon Church has taken a firm stand against an Idaho state lottery, and in what amounted to a straw vote on the issue last November, the lottery was rejected in only those heavily Mormon eastern counties. In many instances, Mormon leaders have tried to avoid being in the forefront on issues for fear of an anti-Mormon backlash.

Overall, the 1986 proposal to create a state lottery was approved by voters in three quarters of the counties, capturing 60 percent of the statewide vote. But it was vetoed by the courts on technical grounds early this year, requiring the new proposition to be submitted in November 1988.

Groberg has said the campaign to defeat the proposed constitutional amendment to remove the current ban on a lottery will focus on issues other than the moral objections to a lottery, but he expected religious considerations to fuel those who became actively involved in the anti-lottery campaign.
"Most people won't vote strictly on moral grounds, but the people who will work hard will do so on moral grounds," he said.
Only one other state has defeated a lottery at the polls in recent years, and Groberg pointed out that rejection of a lottery in North Dakota came after many of that state's leaders publicly opposed it.

"With lotteries already in place in Montana, Washington and Oregon, Idaho supporters claim the state is losing significant amounts of money to those border states that it could recapture if it had its own game."
But critics, in addition to their moral objections, claim the state would make little if any money from a lottery because of its small population and that a lottery would only adversely affect those who can afford it the least — the poor hoping to hit the jackpot.

Boise visit by Laxalt on June 19

BOISE (AP) — Former Nevada governor and senator Paul Laxalt will be here June 19 as part of his campaign to determine whether he will run for the Republican presidential nomination.
Two top GOP leaders said Friday they hope he gets a good reception.
"He has demonstrated capabilities at the state and national levels," said Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho. "He has western roots and he understands our problems because he has worked with them all his life."
Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa, like Laxalt the child of Basque sheepherder immigrant parents, said, "He is the only true westerner running for president and he has high admiration in the West."
Craig and Cenarrusa are co-chairmen for the Laxalt exploratory committee.

Laxalt will visit Idaho during the annual Basque Festival, and will participate in a dedication of the new Basque Museum here. He also will attend a couple of private receptions and hold a news conference.
Cenarrusa said the nomination of the party's presidential candidate will come at the national convention next year, and Laxalt is very popular with Republican Party workers and officials.
Craig called Laxalt "the true conservative" Republican in — the presidential race. He said Vice President George Bush, slipping daily, and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., has already peaked.
Craig said former Senate majority leader Robert Dole is doing well in the race for the GOP nomination.
Both Republicans said they didn't feel any Democrat has emerged as a frontrunner for the presidential nomination.
Cenarrusa said he was proud of the fact that only in America could the son of penniless immigrants consider running for president.
"It took a lot of hard work and determination to succeed," he said, both of Laxalt's immigrant parents and his own.
Craig said the fleur d'Alene radio station pole in northern Idaho last month showed Laxalt the clear frontrunner among GOP candidates.

INEL radiation had little effect

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The Department of Energy says operations of the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, while producing some radiation, have had no radiological effect on the environment of eastern Idaho.
"Although some radioactive materials were discharged from INEL operations, concentrations and doses to site workers or offsite populations were of no health consequence," the government said in reporting on its air, soil and water monitoring program for 1986.
"Radioactivity from INEL site operations could not be distinguished from natural radioactivity and worldwide fallout in regions surrounding the site," the department said. "Site-contributed radioactivity continues to be far less than the state of Idaho and federal government health protection guidelines."

The only exception was detection of antimony-125 in the air at Atomic City, and the government said the concentration of that material was well below the guidelines for radiation protection of the public.
The government did say the sampling stations used to monitor INEL detected fallout from the Russian nuclear power plant disaster at Chernobyl last year, but even those concentrations were below Food and Drug Administration guidelines.
No detectable radiation was found in most well and surface water, the department said, and the concentrations that were discovered in some drinking water were below Environmental Protection Agency standards.

Court considers ruling on death sentence

BLACKFOOT (AP) — A district judge here has taken under advisement Randy McKinney's bid to overturn his conviction and death penalty sentence in a 1981 murder.
After a four-hour hearing on Friday, District Judge James Herndon called for briefs from the attorneys involved and said he would issue a ruling later.
McKinney, 25, has been trying to overturn his first-degree murder conviction for nearly five years.

McKinney was convicted in November 1981 and sentenced to death by Judge Arnold Beebe. Ms. Small, McKinney was convicted of the shooting-robbery death of County jury in May 1982, and sentenced by Beebe to life imprisonment.

The state contended during the trials that the pair conspired to murder Bishop for his car and credit cards.

Fired regional supervisor appeals decision

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A regional supervisor fired from the state Industrial Commission is appealing that decision, which he said was based on inaccurate allegations.

Jim Spooner, who serves in Twin Falls, contends that his status as a state employee meant he could be fired without reason. But he filed a grievance to get his job back and wipe accusations off his personnel record about his health and ability to work with others.

Industrial Commission Administrator Gary Silvers fired Spooner May 7, after discussions and trading letters during April and May. Spooner contends the allegations against him are unfounded.

Gary Arnold upheld the termination after a grievance hearing May 21. Silvers and Arnold are based in Boise. Spooner's second and final grievance hearing, before the three Industrial Commissioners who oversee the two administrators, is set for 11 a.m. Monday. The commissioners' decision on whether to reinstate Spooner is due within a week after the hearing.

Spooner's lawyer, Greg Goss, calls the termination "capricious and arbitrary," based on accusations that are wrong, inaccurate or untrue. And a state representative is observing Spooner's progress in appealing the termination.

"I'm still worried about the threat of a lawsuit against the state because of perhaps an inept administrator," said Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls, who attended the first grievance hearing.

Spooner won't raise religious bias issue

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Jim Spooner's religious affiliation has been raised in connection with his firing as regional supervisor for the state Industrial Commission.

Spooner, who serves in Twin Falls, does not plan to raise the issue of possible religious prejudice at his second and final grievance hearing Monday.

But statements Administrator Gary Silvers made after firing Spooner sparked concern about Spooner's religious affiliation. Spooner is a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

State officials said there was nothing to suggest Spooner was fired for being Mormon.

Silvers did not return phone calls Friday for questions about firing Spooner.

A state representative and an denes recommendations, written since he was fired, attesting to the quality of his work. These came from co-workers, lawyers representing businesses and workers, and health specialists.

Included are letters from both field consultants in Twin Falls, both consultants in Pocatello, one consultant in Idaho Falls and both specialists in Twin Falls.

Goss commended the letter writers submitting material while still working for the Industrial Commission, despite fear of possible retribution.

"Almost without fail they wrote that these points are wrong, inaccurate or untrue," Goss said.

In the April 28 letter, Silvers told Spooner to resign with two months severance pay or take two weeks paid leave to get a physical check-up and evaluate his health.

Spooner admitted being tired from overwork, took the vacation and got a check-up. He received a clean bill of health from Dr. Pat Desmond in Twin Falls.

"He was evaluated carefully with a stress electrocardiogram, physical examination and numerous laboratory studies, all of which proved to be within normal limits," wrote Desmond in a letter Spooner presented at the grievance hearing.

But Silvers called Desmond after the check-up and raised the unfounded specter of Spooner being mentally unstable.

"Mr. Silvers raised questions about his (Spooner's) mental stability," Desmond wrote.

Spooner denies having any mental problems. He said he has never seen a psychiatrist or been diagnosed as mentally unstable.

"Absolutely not," Spooner said. The worker with eight-and-a-half years experience at the Industrial Commission also denies he was offered a demotion.

Administrator Arnold, in upholding Spooner's termination, wrote that Silvers offered alternative work assignments at the same rate of pay.

Injection wells charged with dirtying aquifer

By TERRILL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — Waste water wells, monitored only by their owners, may be polluting domestic wells and, on a larger scale, the Snake River Plain Aquifer, say members of the Hagerman Valley Citizens' Alert.

John Beal of the Department of Water Resources, groundwater protection section, spoke to the group at its meeting Thursday and fielded questions about injection wells.

In Idaho there are about 1,200 shallow injection wells of 18 feet or less, and 500 known deep injection wells from 18 to 600 feet deep, he said.

A shallow well does not require a permit unless it has a suspected problem, Beal said. A deep well requires a permit from the state, issued once every 10 years.

The wells are for irrigation return water or spring run-off water, he said. No pesticides are allowed in the wells, and the amount of bacteria and turbidity, or silt, is limited according to the depth of the well. Wells dug closer to ground water have less dirt filter and so must have cleaner water flowing into them.

HVCA members said Environmental Protection Agency studies have shown that all injection wells pollute and that there is no reason for them.

In other statements and charges, some of the 18 members at the meeting said:

• Large perched lakes saturated with non-deteriorating pesticides are accumulated beneath farmland. When an injection well for run-off water is drilled through basalt layers, the perched lakes also drain and can drain into domestic wells and into the aquifer. Water can flow unfiltered through cracked rock.

• Self-monitoring of water quality going into the wells is equal to no monitoring. A coral being washed out or heavy spring run-off water is a threat to the region's drinking water.

• The Department of Water Resources lacks control of Citizens' Alert resumes campaign to protect aquifer

By TERRILL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — After waiting patiently for more than two years, members of the Hagerman Valley Citizens' Alert say they are once again taking up an active campaign to get the Snake River Plain Aquifer designated as a "sole-source" aquifer.

Chairman Ned Bowler says the federal designation will help protect this region's only drinking water from permanent pollution.

The HVCA, alarmed about contamination of the huge, fresh water, underground lake, first petitioned for the sole-source designation in September of 1992. After more than a year of cost-benefit analysis, the Environmental Protection Agency wrote a document of support in March of 1994, recommending the aquifer be designated as a sole source aquifer.

Bowler says hearings were held in the summer of 1994, and the proposed designation "got negative feedback from irrigators." Agricultural groups feared that additional federal regulation could tie up aquifer water needed for farming.

"Most of the water drawn from the aquifer is used for irrigation with some 1.5 million acre feet being withdrawn. While non-irrigation uses such as drinking water are only a small fraction of irrigation uses, the aquifer is the sole source of drinking water for 227,000 people — roughly one-fourth of the state's population."

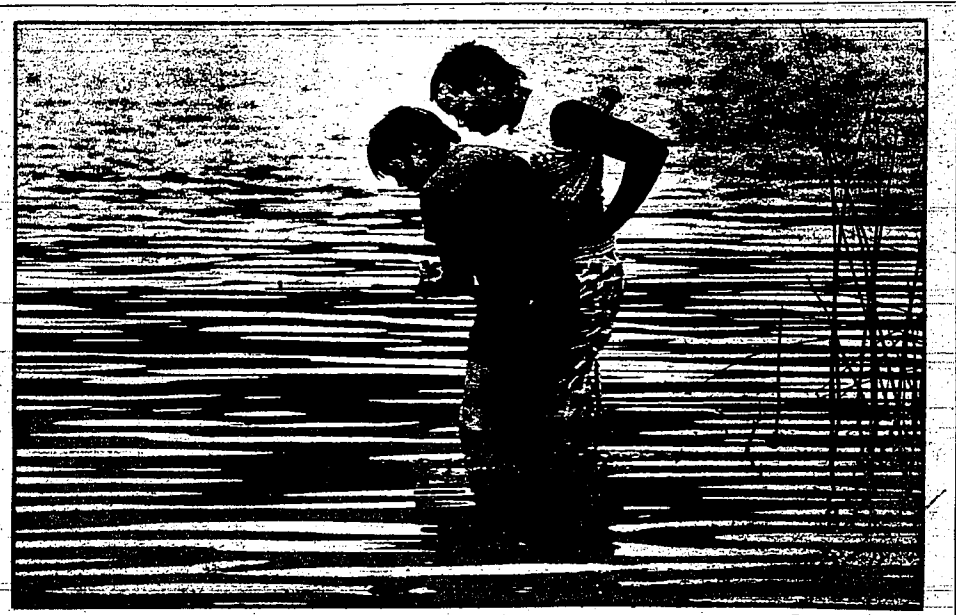

In early 1995, Gov. John Evans requested the designation be postponed to give the state time to make its own plan for management of the Snake River Plain Aquifer, says Bowler.

"But they haven't come up with an alternate plan," he said. Retired chemist Ed Shokal of Hagerman says the HVCA has been "getting the run-around" on its sole source petition.

"Business people don't want it because they would have to comply with higher standards," he says. Shokal says the EPA favors the sole-source designation, but the issue has become political, resulting in years of delay.

In reality, Shokal says, the aquifer is this region's main source of drinking water, and pollution of it would hurt the economy for everyone here.

Lawsuit postpones bond sale for new jail

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County Commissioners have decided to postpone the adoption of a resolution that would authorize the $3.8 million bond sale to finance the construction of a new jail.

The commissioners scheduled adoption for Monday. But, in the light of a recent lawsuit filed by former legislative candidate Arlo Kent charging the May 12 vote was invalid, the commissioners decided to postpone the resolution vote indefinitely, Commission Chairman Judy Felton said.

"We just want to have a chance to let our attorney become involved with us before we do anything," Felton said. "With something as major as the bond sale, we just wanted to make sure everything is cleared up before doing it."

Kent charged in his May 26 suit that the jail bond election was not valid because the county didn't register voters. Anyone who signed an oath swearing they were 18-years and older and residents of the county for more than 30 days were allowed to vote. The bond election procedure was conducted at the advice of the county's bond counsel, Chapman and Oeller of Salt Lake City.

Kent has not sought a new election in his lawsuit. He is asking for $53,000 in damages and named County Clerk Dick Pence and County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter as defendants.

The commissioners have hired Boise attorney Paul Penland to defend Pence and Baxter. Penland wouldn't comment on the suit.

At the May 12 election, 73 percent of those who voted over the conditions at the jail and led a court to order supported the bond issue to finance a new 90-bed jail.

Felton said it is possible the actual bond sale, which would provide the money to finance the construction of the jail, would be delayed. The resolution that the commissioners would vote on next week would only authorize the county to sell bonds.

"Bud Way, the bond consultant for the county, said he's proceeding with his work as if Kent's lawsuit didn't exist."

"I'm not basing my work on the suit," Way said. "I'm working as if there isn't an obstacle in the way." Way said he expects to have the bonds sold in August.

Meanwhile, attorneys and the judge in another lawsuit would review the county jail's conditions will meet Monday to discuss the status of the suit.

That lawsuit was filed two years ago by two inmates over the conditions at the jail and led a court to order supported the bond issue to finance a new 90-bed jail. • See JAIL on Page A5

Jobless rate remains stable

By the Associated Press and the Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley's unemployment rate remained locked in place at 5.7 percent during May. But, for the first time in almost three years, the monthly figure was higher than the statewide average.

The Idaho Department of Employment Friday said the Idaho unemployment rate fell .3 of a percentage point to 5.6 percent. That mark was its lowest point in seven years.

The "cross-over" in the rates below the 6 percent mark continued to signal good job prospects for many Idahoans, particularly in seasonal jobs where most improvements look place.

The seasonally adjusted rate for Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding counties was identical to the April figure, which originally was forecast at 5.3 percent but then revised to 5.7 percent.

"This (May-figure) continues a trend for the last four months at the same basic level," said Len McDonald, Twin Falls labor force analyst for the employment department. The local rate has been 5.7 percent since February, except for March's 5.5 percent.

Normally during May, employment is expanding

McClure, Symms bill designates City of Rocks a 'national reserve'

By BOB FREUND

TWIN FALLS — Idaho's two senators have moved to protect the scenic City of Rocks in Cassia County as one of the country's few "private landowners, who own about and put them in an area that is not a national reserve."

McClure and Symms said the law would be one of four in the nation. The law would allow the state and private landowners, who own about half of the area, to keep their land. designed to take them ... things But federal officials and local agencies would exert some controls on owners," said Todd Graeff, task force.

Senate urges ozone protection; Symms, McClure dissent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate overwhelmingly urged President Reagan on Friday to end the hickering within his administration by strongly endorsing a virtual worldwide ban on chemicals that destroy the Earth's ozone shield.

Jobless

Continued from Page 4A rapidly because of seasonal jobs in agriculture, tourism, retail and service sectors. Many of those jobs were filled early this year because of warm weather, but employers still are hiring.

One placement agency has been quite brisk. "McDonald's has been hiring a lot," said Mabel DeWeyer. While Magic Valley's job picture was holding at a healthy level, the state's was performing even better. Idaho's unemployment rate rivaled the Magic Valley's for the first time since July 1984.

The sudden drop in the statewide average bolstered prospects that the state's economy is on the mend. The latest Idaho rate at 14.4 percent was 0.5 percentage points below the national rate in February 1987. Just weeks before the national recession began battering the important timber sector of the economy. The improvement has been rapid. In the last six months, the state jobless rate has fallen 0.9 percent.

But one source said the request was turned down, and the council would continue to try to draw up a list of options for the president, including possible modifications to the current negotiating position.

"There is no safe or acceptable level of ozone depletion," the Senate said in a non-binding resolution approved by 80-2, with only one dissenting vote.

Symms acknowledged that "skin cancer could be very detrimental to people" but said the "scientific evidence really isn't very clear" about whether CFCs are depleting the ozone layer.

Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., said 1,600 from April. But, underscoring the labor-force concerns of department analysts was a drop of 500 in the numbers of workers holding jobs. Last month 407,000 Idaho people were on job rolls, compared to 411,000 in February.

In the Magic Valley, unadjusted figures pegged the three-county work force at 34,925. Of that, 1,822 were unemployed and 33,103 had jobs.

Most other regions estimated declines in joblessness. The weak spot in the state was the Idaho Falls area, which showed a 5 percentage point increase due to general job contraction.

May unemployment rates and the change from April were:

Pat Robertson lays off 470 employees

By The Associated Press

The Rev. Pat Robertson laid off nearly 500 employees Friday.

Robertson said he was laying off a sense of urgency which has become common among television ministers.

After the controversy of the Rev. Oliver Brown's "do or die" fundraising appeal, and Jim Bakker's fall from the PTL pulpit in a sexual and financial scandal, several of the biggest names in television religion have confessed problems in raising money.

The Rev. Jerry Falwell, the Rev. Jimmy Swaggart and the Rev. Bob Schieffelin have all felt the pinch, and Bakker complains from his Palm Springs home that money is his most pressing problem.

They haven't been shy about blaming each other.

Robertson, founder of the "700 Club" and a potential Republican candidate for president, announced Friday that he was laying off 470 of the more than 2,000 employees of his Christian Broadcasting Network.

Robertson said his network has lost $12 million through May and projected losses of $28 million for the year.

He blamed his problems on Bakker — "that scandal has hit the evangelical world like a bombshell" — and alluded to Bakker's much-publicized message that God would "call me home" if he didn't raise $8 million by the end of March.

Robertson has nothing to do with PTL. "We had nothing to do with those other statements. We had absolutely nothing to do with any of it," Robertson said. "Yet, it's costing me through this year $28 million."

PTL collects $8.5 million in May

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell said Friday that the PTL ministry had survived its "May Emergency" with $8.5 million in contributions, but he appealed to supporters to make an extra sacrifice in the coming months.

"We are not out of the woods," Falwell said on the "PTL Club" television program. "We are still in a precarious position."

Newcastle, PTL, faced the potentially grave crisis of losing its tax-exempt status. USA Today reported Friday that a confidential internal Business Service report concluded PTL was not entitled to an exemption, in part because of lavish salaries paid to founder Jim Bakker.

Falwell's plea came as another week of television evangelist and PTL. Republican presidential candidate, the Rev. Pat Robertson, announced 500 layoffs at his Christian Broadcasting Network and appealed for greater contributions to cover a projected $28 million deficit this year.

Falwell reported 200,000 families responded to the Fort Mill-based ministry's emergency appeal for at least $7 million, which he said was the minimum needed to keep PTL afloat.

"It may be sacrificial for you ... but I am asking every friend of this ministry to write a check for $50 — a special June gift," the fundamentalist Baptist minister said during a 15-minute appearance on the "PTL Club" television program.

Falwell, speaking from his office in Lynchburg, Va., said the ministry was to whittle down PTL debts to $70 million.

Methodist regional conference to be held in Boise June 15-19

By LORAYNE O. SMITH Times-News writer

BOISE — Nearly 1,000 United Methodists from southern Idaho and Oregon will gather in Boise June 15-19 for the annual business conference which climaxes with the ordination of nine men and seven women.

Rev. Dr. Richard W. Cain, president of the Oregon-Idaho annual conference, will preach at the opening communion and memorial service. Rev. Dr. Richard W. Cain, president of the School of Theology at Claremont, Calif., is the ordination preacher.

Reading of clergy appointments for the next year concludes the annual event.

Delegates from the nearly 250 local United Methodist churches in the two states will number about 1,000. Officials report with several more hundred visitors and non-voting members expected.

at the Boise State Pavilion and at University Christian Church.

An opening communion and memorial service, June 15 and closing ordination service, June 19 will both be held at First United Methodist Church, the "Cathedral of the Rockies," which is the host congregation.

Calvin D. McConnell, Portland, presiding bishop of the Oregon-Idaho annual conference, will preach at the opening communion and memorial service. Rev. Dr. Richard W. Cain, president of the School of Theology at Claremont, Calif., is the ordination preacher.

Reading of clergy appointments for the next year concludes the annual event.

Delegates from the nearly 250 local United Methodist churches in the two states will number about 1,000. Officials report with several more hundred visitors and non-voting members expected.

During the daily business sessions, delegates will consider some 70 requests for changes in rules or church policies during small group meetings and in the general plenary sessions. The church's several boards and commissions also will give reports during the week on a proposed $2.25 million budget, which will be considered, says Robin Grube, public relations official of the host church.

The annual conference also will elect delegates to both general and jurisdictional conferences, to be held in 1988.

Delegates to the Boise conference will register between noon and 5 p.m. June 15 in the BSU Student Union building. A picnic dinner is planned for 5 p.m. at BSU.

This is the first time the annual conference has been held in Idaho since 1974. The majority of the sessions are held at Willamette University in Salem, Ore., Grube said.

Defiant Biaggi 'absolutely not guilty' of Wedtech charges

NEW YORK (AP) — A defiant Rep. Mario Biaggi pleaded "absolutely not guilty" Friday to racketeering charges in the Wedtech Corp. corruption scandal.

Biaggi, 58, was named in a 58-count federal indictment Wednesday, charging him and six other men with a racketeering conspiracy that allegedly turned Wedtech into a vehicle for making illegal payments to public officials.

At his arraignment before U.S. District Judge John M. Cannella, Biaggi, 69, a former highly decorated police officer, waived one of the indictments, which charged him with extortion, accepting bribes, fraud, perjury and income tax evasion in dillon to racketeering.

When Cannella's clerk asked how he pleaded, Biaggi snapped: "Absolutely not guilty," stamping his white-handled cane on the floor.

Biaggi walks with a severe limp because of a police service-related injury.

"Now I've heard a fifth way to plead," said a smiling Cannella, noting the versions he was used to hearing were guilty, not guilty, standing mute and no contest. "Now, I have a fifth one: 'Absolutely not guilty.'"

"I'm sure the jury will concur with that one too, your honor," said Biaggi's lawyer, mail Barry Slotkin.

Also named in the indictment were Biaggi's eldest son, Richard, 38, of Fort Lee, N.J.; his former law partner, Bernard Ehrlich, 58, of Bedford; former Small Business Administration official Peter Neglia, 39, Armonk; Ronald DeLo, 39, Brooklyn, a retired city police officer and friend of Neglia's; former Bronx Borough President Stanley Simon, 57; and Wedtech founder John Marlotto, 57, of Scarsdale.

They and the eldest Biaggi all were charged with racketeering and conspiracy in the indictment, which superseded one last April that named only Simon. Both racketeering and racketeering conspiracy carry a maximum 20-year prison sentence upon conviction.

The seven were accused of helping unrelated case for allegedly accepting a Wedtech grow from a tiny South Bronx machine shop into a multimillion-dollar government contractor through a scheme that included fraud, extortion and bribery.

All but Ehrlich, whose arraignment was put off until Wednesday, pleaded innocent to the charges and were released on bond ranging from $250,000 to $100,000.

If convicted of all 21 counts and sentenced to consecutive terms, which is rare, Biaggi faces up to 181 years in prison and $8.9 million in fines.

Biaggi also was indicted March 16 in an

After processing by federal marshals and putting up his $250,000 bond, a tired-looking Biaggi noted: "It's another day. You just go through the process. What can you do?"

In a related development, two minor figures in the Wedtech investigation pleaded guilty to federal income tax evasion charges. Reynolds Berney and Mahmood Yashoua admitted they inflated invoices and paid kickbacks to Wedtech "principals."

Spanish war vet, 107, dies in Illinois

MARION, Ill. (AP) — The nation's oldest war veteran, a man described by his daughter as a straight-laced person who never smoked or drank, has died at the age of 107, the Veterans Administration said Friday.

Jasper Garrison, who served in the Spanish-American War, began in 1898, died Thursday at a VA hospital here, said Frances Gilliam, a hospital spokeswoman.

"Somebody asked him how he lived so long," Garrison's daughter, Lena Hoys said. "He said, 'God forgot about me.'"

Only three other veterans of the Spanish-American War are still alive. A spokesman here, Lucas said in confirming Garrison was the nation's oldest living veteran.

"He was a very straight-laced person," said Mrs. Hoys of nearby Christopher, who said that he never smoked. "He never drank, he never smoked."

He never had any fun doing anything, she joked. "He never went to a show in his life. My father led a clean life."

"He got so much adoration, people from all over came and they wanted to shake his hand," she said. "He kinda liked it, you know. He really basked in their affection."

Born May 1, 1870, in Wayne County, Garrison enlisted in the 4th Illinois Volunteer Regiment in June 1898. He arrived in Havana, Cuba, that August and spent nine months on the island during the Spanish-American War.

He returned to Illinois, where he and his wife, who died at age 83 in 1962, had four children. He lived with Mrs. Hoys until he moved into the VA nursing home in Marion in February 1956.

Panel balks at subpoena

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House subcommittee — that referred jury allegations against lobbyist Michael K. Deaver to an independent counsel is resisting subpoenas for documents in its files on the case.

The House Energy and Commerce investigations and oversight subcommittee on Thursday asked a federal judge to quash subpoenas served on the panel and its chairman, Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., for a wide range of documents compiled while it probed lobbying by the former presidential aide.

One of the subpoenas issued by Deaver's lawyers seeks statements about the case by Dingell.

Reagan chooses FAA head

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan announced Friday he plans to nominate T. Allan McArdor, an executive of Federal Express, as head of the Federal Aviation Administration, replacing Donald Engen, who will leave the agency at the end of the month.

McArdor has been rumored to be Engen's replacement for weeks and recently spent time at the Transportation Department and FAA to familiarize himself with the agency, according to government sources.

McArdor, 44, is senior vice president of telecommunications at Federal Express Corp., where he was in charge of the cargo airline's use of satellite communications. He played a key role in the courier service's unsuccessful "Zip Mail" campaign.

A graduate of the U.S. Air Force Academy, McArdor was a decorated combat pilot in Vietnam and for two years was a member of the Thunderbirds, the Air Force's precision flying team.

The shift in leadership at the FAA comes at a critical time.

Earlier this week it was announced that the FAA would have to begin hiring nearly 1,000 additional air traffic controllers and supervisors, beginning in the fall, to meet next year's traffic needs.

The agency also has been under almost daily attack from critics questioning whether enough is being done to maintain air safety through this summer's busy travel season. The FAA maintains that aircraft will be directed safely, but the National Transportation Safety Board has said it is concerned about an "erosion" of safety over the next few months.

"Mr. McArdor has a tremendous job ahead of him. He inherits a legacy of mismanagement and short-sighted policies. The FAA is an agency whose credibility is on the line," Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J. said Friday.

Reagan announced the planned nomination in Venice, Italy, as the

Panel balks at subpoena

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, asked by reporters Friday whether he is involved in extramarital love affairs, said he is not romantically involved with women other than his wife.

The Democratic presidential hopeful, asked at a meeting with reporters whether he had any past involvements with other women while he was married, answered at one point:

"I'm saying that that question is a matter of my conscience and my family and me. And that unless there is probable cause and all that goes with that, that issue should not be the centerpiece of my campaign or anybody's campaign," Jackson said.

Repeating Garrison as the country's oldest living veteran is 102-year-old S. Leroy Mendel, a Fort Worth, Texas, native now residing in Galva, Ill., Lucas said.

"There's a sadness to it," Mendel said of Garrison's death. "I hate to see other people die like that. I'm just gonna live on, that's all."

The other two living Spanish-American War veterans are 102-year-old John T. Fitzgerald of Toms River, N.J., and 101-year-old Nathan E. Cook, of Tempe, Ariz., Lucas said in a telephone interview from his Washington office.

Indiana's last Spanish-American War veteran, Jesse A. Jackson, died Tuesday at age 102.

In addition to his daughter, Garrison is survived by three sons.

Jackson's wife his only romantic involvement

The questions about Jackson's personal life were raised in the wake of the abrupt end of Gary Hart's campaign for the nomination amid questions about his relationship with other women.

As reporters pressed Jackson about any past involvements, he was asked: "You said... that it is not a problem currently but you declined to answer whether it was a problem in the past."

He called questions about a candidate's private life a Catch-22 situation: "However you answer it, you almost condemn yourself by impliation."

The Democratic hopeful, who has not formally announced his candidacy, said that "there has to be a line drawn" about reporters' questions on candidates' personal lives.

"If national interest is involved, if national security is involved, it is a legitimate question. Beyond that, it appears to be an issue of sensational inquiry rather than one that has a legitimate foundation," he said.

Navy picks contractor for prototype of blimp

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy on Friday selected a joint venture led by the Westinghouse Electric Co. to build a prototype of a new military blimp, setting the stage for the possible reintroduction of the giant airships into the Pentagon's arsenal.

The Navy said it had selected the venture of Westinghouse and Airship Industries of Cardington, England, to build a prototype of a new military blimp.

The blimp would carry a crew of at least 10, could be refueled at sea and would loiter for days above Navy battle groups to provide them with continuous, long-range radar protection.

"They're not as vulnerable as they look," Bill Phillips, the president of the Westinghouse Defense and Electronics Systems Co., said. "They don't pop like a balloon."

The Navy's decision was first announced Friday by Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, whose state would benefit from new jobs if Westinghouse-Airship ultimately wins a full-scale production contract.

The Navy later confirmed the award following the close of the stock markets, saying the contract included options for up to five additional airships that could be purchased for a total of $294.2 million.

The first flight of the prototype is to occur in 3 1/2 years, the Navy said.

The contract was a major victory for the joint venture, which managed to best the Lorain Corp. in bidding for the job.

The New York-based Lorain earlier this year acquired the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.'s aerospace operations and along with it, Goodyear's long-standing reputation for leadership in the construction and use of blimps.

"The Navy contract calls for construction of a giant airship that would dwarf the familiar Goodyear blimps in size. Following construction, the airship will undergo extensive flight testing to determine if blimps should be returned to military service."

If a decision is made to begin acquiring blimps, the Navy would presumably allow any interested company to bid for production contracts under its current policy of encouraging competition.

Pictures must show fitness

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adm. Carlisle A.H. Trost, the chief of operations and a stickler for physical fitness, has ordered his officers to start posing for full-length photos at promotion time.

Trost, in a message distributed to his command earlier this week, said he was scuttling the service's current reliance on head-and-shoulder pictures, effective Oct. 1.

He made it clear his goal was photographic proof of poor physical fitness. — If you've got a beer belly, you won't be able to hide it.

"Personal appearance is a key factor in individual pride, professionalism and personal excellence," Trost said in his one-page message.

To reinforce his intentions, Trost specified what type of uniform his officers must wear when they get their new picture taken. He wants summer khakis only.

Trost's decision leaves the Air Force as the only service that relies on head-and-shoulder photos of its officers. The Army and Marine Corps have long required their officers to maintain full-length ID photos in their service records.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today can be full of arguments and confrontations with others unless you make a conscientious effort to sidestep them and maintain harmony.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Use tact at your home—during the daytime and avoid a possible argument there. Get out for fun and recreation tonight.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Be cautious in motion of all kinds since much danger is lurking about. Thoughtless words could bring trouble.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You could have quite an argument over finances with good friends, but tonight all is well.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Do nothing that will disturb the harmony between you and kin today.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Be careful not to argue with a partner if you have a private worry. Do whatever will rid you of the anxiety.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): It is better to go out alone and not be with individuals who may be looking to pick a fight.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Don't get into an argument with another in public. The evening is good for making new friends.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): After an argument with a pal, be concerned with the romantic side of life. Show your gratitude to those who are loyal.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Try not to argue over some monetary affair that may be of little consequence.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Avoid a possible argument—between a higher-up and a partner. Plan your time well so you can keep promises.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): A co-worker and one from afar may be having an argument, so keep out of it or you could become the scapegoat.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You had better stay at home with your mate and avoid an argument with one who wants to come between you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he, or she, will be one of those charming young persons who will find it hard to deal between the mental and emotional, so teach this one to keep the two separate. Upon reaching maturity your progeny will gain the good will of others and be quite successful.

Reagan calls for an end to 'farms race'

VENICE, Italy (AP) — President Reagan, in a pre-summit television address beamed to Europe, denounced government agricultural subsidies Friday as a costly "farms race" and proposed they be eliminated worldwide by the year 2000.

Reagan said that improving economic cooperation among the seven summit nations — the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy — was high on the agenda for the Venice summit, which formally opens on Monday night.

"Agricultural subsidies, for instance, have been some of the worst culprits behind our growing trade frictions. Let's jointly defend this growing farms race by setting a goal of a subsidy-free world for the year 2000," he said.

Although Reagan has criticized farm subsidies before, it was the first time he had called for ending them by a specific date.

However, presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater immediately called Reagan's proposal more of a wish than a specific target date for abrogation of all agricultural subsidies.

During a briefing for reporters at the Hotel Excelsior, Fitzwater conceded that it was unrealistic "to expect other Western leaders to embrace the concept during the summit.

On the eve of Reagan's talks with Pope John Paul II at the Vatican, and as other leaders of industrialized nations prepared to travel here, security precautions were intensified both in Venice and in Rome.

But, said Fitzwater, "the challenge of the year 2000 is a starting point for conversations and should generate very good dialogue at this summit."

Farm subsidies are widely used by the United States and other summit nations to help promote agricultural exports. They enjoy considerable domestic political support, particularly in France and Germany.

In his address, broadcast by the United States Information Agency, Reagan also told Europeans that a U.S.-Soviet accord on a new treaty to eliminate hundreds of medium- and short-range nuclear missiles from Europe and Soviet Asia was close.

"We're not there yet, of course; some hard questions remain. But the prospects are good," Reagan said. His remarks further demonstrated the president's intentions to seek a summit end to the broad outlines of a potential superpower arms control agreement.

Reagan taped his television address at the isolated 17th Century country villa near Venice where he has been staying. It was sent by satellite back to Washington — and then broadcast throughout Europe. The speech was not broadcast in the United States.

Reagan's day trip to Rome today will feature the president's third meeting with the pontiff.

In Venice on Friday, a total of 7,000 troops fanned out to block access to the island of San Giorgio and the villa where Reagan is staying with his wife Nancy. Italian and American military launches rehearsed some of the routes that leaders will take during their three days in the lagoon city.

And in Rome, police reported that some 5,000 paramilitary and regular police officers were mobilized to seal off Ciampino military airport, where Reagan will arrive Saturday, and the Vatican area as well as the suburban presidential residence of Castelporziano.

Other leaders will begin arriving on Sunday to join Reagan and Italian Prime Minister Amintore Fanfani for the summit. The leaders will meet with each other individually before the summit formally opens on Monday night.

Seoul police bottle up 2,500 violent students

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Students yelling "Crush the military dictatorship" clashed Friday with riot police who used armored cars to drive them back, and masked dissidents attacked a government party office with firebombs.

About 2,500 students attempted to march off the campus of Korea University in Seoul to stage street demonstrations but were driven back by lines of riot police and armored cars firing scores of tear gas grenades.

"Down with the military dictatorship," the students shouted, thrusting their clenched fists into the air.

About 20 masked dissidents staged a firebomb attack on the Seoul chapter headquarters of the Democratic Justice Party earlier Friday. The attackers hurled firebombs and shattered windows with rocks, but police said no one was injured.

Thousands of other students took part in peaceful demonstrations in Seoul and other cities, demanding the government's fall and immediate elections. Police declined to give figures on the turnout at the protests.

Some students cut their fingers to paint anti-government slogans with blood as onlookers applauded, witnesses said. "Be emitted," a student leader wrote with his blood at Yonsei University in Seoul.

A hunger strike in the National Assembly by lawmakers of the Democratic Reform Party, the main opposition party, continued for a second day Friday. The 67 lawmakers, who are demanding the assembly probe the police torture killing of a student dissident, have said they will fast for three days.

Senior police officials said Friday they will deploy tens of thousands of riot police in Seoul next Wednesday to prevent opposition demonstrations. Opposition groups have called for massive protests to coincide with the ruling Democratic Justice Party's presidential convention.

The National Coalition for a Democratic Constitution, a newly formed alliance of political, religious and dissident groups, has called for massive nationwide protests to demand the fall of President Chun Doo-hwan's government and immediate popular elections.

Students taking part in demonstrations Friday denounced the president's selection of close ally Roh Tae-woo earlier this week to succeed him when his seven-year term ends next February.

Judge says laxity caused fire, spill

BASEL, Switzerland (AP) — An investigating judge said Friday that lax safety measures, not sabotage, probably led to the fire at a Swiss chemical warehouse last Nov. 1 that created a huge toxic spill into the Rhine River.

The disaster occurred outside Basel, the center of Switzerland's chemical industry, killing about 500,000 fish and endangering drinking supplies along Europe's busiest waterway.

Judge Toni Thuring said a criminal negligence investigation would be opened against Sandoz AG, a major chemical and pharmaceutical company and the warehouse owner following completion of the court's report.

Canada may build nuclear subs flotilla

OTTAWA (AP) — Canada's Conservative government unveiled an ambitious new defense policy Friday, calling for the nation's first nuclear-powered submarines and a three-ocean navy.

A white paper introduced in Parliament by Defense Minister Perrin Beatty announced plans for 10 to 12 nuclear subs with a total price tag of $3.75 billion, six new frigates, new sonar and under-ice surveillance systems and six new long-range patrol aircraft.

"We're a three-ocean country with a one-and-a-half-ocean navy on the verge of rust-out," said Beatty. The navy currently patrols in the Atlantic, sparsely in the Pacific and not at all in the Arctic.

Beatty said the 15-year blueprint would cost at least $136 billion, not including the nuclear subs and other capital programs.

He pledged a minimum real increase of 2 percent a year in defense spending to "re-establish Canada as a responsible and reliable partner" in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

NATO has called for 3 percent growth. Canada's current defense budget of $7.7 billion represents 2.3 percent of its gross domestic product, third lowest in NATO.

The 90-page document described the Soviet Union harshly as "an ideological, political and economic adversary whose explicit long-term aim is to mold the world in its own image."

It warned that Soviet subs could enter Canadian waters to launch cruise missile attacks on North America.

But it also stressed the need to assert Canadian sovereignty over the 1,000-mile Northwest Passage through the Arctic.

Stocks pull back on slow day

NEW YORK — Stock prices drifted lower Friday in the slowest trading in more than five months, pulling back after the rally of the two previous sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up nearly 59 points Wednesday and Thursday, fell 10.93 to 2,226.15. That left the average with a net gain of 34.58 for the week.

"Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 129.11 million shares, down from 140.30 million Thursday and the highest total since a 51.88 million-share day in the year's first trading session Jan. 2.

Analysts said traders were generally pleased with the market's recent progress in the face of an impending change of leadership at the Federal Reserve Board.

But they also noted some disappointment over the low levels of trading volume that accompanied the advance, which suggested that many market participants were sticking with a cautious approach.

Some are apparently reluctant to commit themselves to an advance of this week's economic summit meeting in Venice.

The Labor Department reported Friday morning that the civilian unemployment rate held steady at 6.3 percent last month, and that two previous passes, employment increased by 123,000.

"The gain in nonfarm payrolls was smaller than most analysts had expected. However, it reflected some annual revisions in the department's data, and thus was not regarded as a significant signal of any change in the course of the economy.

Several stocks gained ground on takeover rumors and speculation, including Federated Department Stores, up 2 1/2% to 50 1/2, and Harnischfeger, up 1 1/2% to 19.

Schlein Manufacturing dropped 1/4 to 15 1/2 in active trading. On Thursday the company estimated lower earnings for the fiscal quarter that ended Sunday.

Selected money-center bank stocks provided one of the few pockets of strength in the market.

Citicorp picked up 1 1/2% to 58 1/2; J.P. Morgan 1 1/4% to 45 1/2; Chemical New York 1 1/4% to 44; and Chase Manhattan Bank 1 1/4% to 39 1/2. However, Manufacturers Hanover slipped 1/4 to 43 and Bank America was down 1/4 at 10 1/2.

Losers among the blue-chip industrials included International Business Machines, down 1 1/2% to 160; DuPont, down 1 1/2% to 114; Eastman Kodak, down 1 1/2% to 78 1/2; Exxon, down 1 1/2% to 87 1/2; and General Motors, down 1/2 to 85 1/2.

Gottschalks dipped 1/2 to 14 1/2, as underwriters announced a public offering of 1 million shares at that price.

Declining issues outnumbered advancing ones, including trades in 714 up, 827 down and 415 unchanged. The exchange's composite index lost 57 to 165.49.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 154.19 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell 2.11 to 249.53, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 1.64 to 293.45.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market edged up 1/4 to 417.82. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 329.50, up 25.

Benefits along with Northwest Idaho's economy showing new life

BOISE (AP) — The sustained national economic expansion, now in its fifth year, is finally being felt in the resource-reliant Pacific Northwest as the president of the Federal Reserve Bank in San Francisco says.

The decline in the value of the dollar is easing America's trade deficit crisis and coupled with further inroads against the federal budget deficit, that expansion should continue at modest levels for the next 18 months, Robert Parry told civic leaders in Boise on Thursday.

Noticeable improvement has been seen in a few sectors of agriculture, particularly the cattle market, and in the forest products industry, both critical to Idaho, he said.

After several years of no life in the state's economy and deterioration in some sectors, Parry said there "is a general feeling the corner has been turned. There are some sectors of the economy that are showing some improvement."

But at the same time, the falling dollar has renewed prospects of inflation, and Parry said the Federal Reserve's policy actions must seek to maintain the economic expansion," he said, "there is good reason this year to emphasize concern about a renewed threat of inflation."

Even with that caution, Parry predicted inflation would run around 4 percent this year and next.

"If we are in a low inflation environment, some of those products such as agriculture and mining which benefitted from high rates of inflation in the past are going to continue to go through a very painful period of adjustment," Parry said.

With inflation running six times higher so far this year than it did in 1986 and the economy surging at a rate of nearly 4.5 percent, Parry suggested there was a serious threat that the economy could overheat. "If not held somewhat in check.

To avoid that, the Federal Reserve scaled back its monetary growth ranges and tightened its grip with increases in the discount rate. The result, Parry said, should be growth in the range of 3 percent in 1987 and 2.5 percent next year.

Contending America has nearly reached full employment at a national jobless rate of just over 6 percent, he said an annual growth rate in excess of 3 percent this far into a period of economic expansion would just send inflation spiraling.

Although the Federal Reserve's policy actions must seek to maintain the economic expansion," he said, "there is good reason this year to emphasize concern about a renewed threat of inflation."

Even with that caution, Parry predicted inflation would run around 4 percent this year and next.

Recovery ahead for mountain states

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Rocky Mountain region's sluggish economy, bogged down by the financial woes afflicting the mining industry for the past two years, is due for a modest recovery within the next 18 months, an economist predicts.

Paula Samis, chief economist for Mountain Bell in Denver, said that non-farm employment for the seven-state region is expected to increase by 2.4 percent in 1989.

"We're not talking about a boom in this forecast," Samis said in an address to the Utah Mid-year Economic Review this past Wednesday. She said the region's job growth would not match the 6 percent expansion pace of the late 1970s. And she warned that some industries will continue to struggle.

"We think we have another year of negatives in construction, to a very modest turnaround after that," she said.

Samis said statistics show 1986 non-farm employment for the region including Colorado, Utah, Arizona, Wyoming, Idaho, Montana and

New Mexico had mixed results. She said the region has added 50,000 new jobs in the past year, with Arizona having the highest annual job growth rate at 4.9 percent. Utah was second at 4.1 percent.

Meantime, Utah, with the exception of a lagging construction industry, has rebounded from a nearly year-long stall in its economic growth, said Dr. Thayne Robson, director of the University of Utah's Bureau of Business and Economic Research.

Robson predicted improvement in all other economic categories, but emphasized the state's growing defense industry is expected to lead the way the rest of this year and into 1988.

"I really do think the Utah economy took a turn for the better in April," he said. "After nine months of very low growth rates, springtime has brought improvement (and) I think the next six months will be better than the first nine."

He said he sees no significant construction projects planned after Kennecott completes its $400 million modernization in late 1987 and therefore cannot "predict a boom in construction anytime soon."

Highway construction is expected to remain steady, but not to expand, while water reclamation work will diminish, Robson said.

It's hard to find a lot of dramatically large projects. It's clear that the third unit will not be added to the Intermountain Power Project ... for at least another five years," he said.

It is in the area of defense spending that Utah can expect its strongest performance in the near future, Robson said.

However, in noting that defense-related spending rose 50 percent in 1986 and provided a $600 million a year payroll in Utah, Robson said he feared the state depended too much on the Pentagon and National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"Our number one problem is to worry about our dependence on defense and NASA," which Robson said directly and indirectly accounted for one third of the state's employment.

Takeovers often spur insider trading

"An insider trading scandal as big as Teapot Dome, if not Watergate, has blasted Wall Street. Why?

"It's the disposal of the conventional explanations. Morality in our society has declined. I say, bank! Morally bankrupt!"

We need tougher laws to control the problem: If the penalties were too wimpy-wimpy in 1985, they would have been in 1935 — or were people more honest during the Depression?

There is so much money flowing in and out of the stock market that it's just too tempting. Sure, but how about the big sums banded back and forth when Treasury bills are sold?

If those common reasons for the scandal are scrapped, what is left? Ask yourself, what is really different about today's market? One obvious point is that large institutional investors play a much bigger role than in 1933, 1935 or 1965, and are using your money in most cases — in the form of pension, IRA, mutual funds and other similar mediums actually contributed by the average citizen.

These institutional investors and some others as well are making big profits in certain cases from a particular source — takeovers.

If you know when Rockefeller is planning to try to buy Conglomerate, Inc., you can buy the stock and sell it at a profit. Or, possibly make a killing. Can you keep this information secret?

Answer: If people will risk jail to sell cocaine in the alley, why not info about Rockefeller's next target? Stockholders of Conglomerate may want to sell to pay a bill more or sell at a bit less, but the net effect is nil.

Something is lost, though. What is lost is the sacred image of the marketplace as a level playing field where you and Rockefeller have an equal chance to make money.

Most experts admit that insider trading is bad because somebody gets something the others haven't earned. Of course, that happens in the lottery, too, but the chances to win are supposedly equal. A test was done with very young children in which somebody would get extra chocolate bars and the rest would get some, but fewer. Or — the other option — nobody would get any. Most of those questioned preferred not to get any. Fairness was more important than chocolate.

If we were serious about doing away with the unfairness of insider advantages, we could bar some of the big takeovers which create the insider opportunities to begin with.

How would that be done? A lot of people and institutions like takeovers because stocks can zoom, and if they have that bang card they can

Key: Protein is crude protein level. ADF is acid detergent fiber, the basis for estimate of digestible dry matter shown in chart. Quality grade is based on following system used in California:

- Protein no more than 29.5 percent ADF, no less than 66 percent digestible dry matter.
- Good — no more than 32 percent ADF, no less than 64 percent digestible dry matter.
- Fair — no more than 35.8 percent ADF, no less than 61 percent digestible dry matter.
- Poor — more than 35.8 percent, less than 61 percent digestible dry matter.
