An eye on the brush

Todd Chestnut, 11, keeps an eye on the progress of a design being painted on his forehead by Brady Martin, 11. The two Twin Falls youths were participating in the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's Family Health Fair on Friday. Besides activities for youngsters, the fair screened hundreds of adults in a wide variety of health areas and offered health educational materials.

NATO allies endorse cuts in missiles

The Associated Press

REYKJAVIK, Iceland — The NATO allies endorsed a U.S.-Soviet missile reduction plan Friday, setting the stage for President Reagan's first nuclear arms accord and possibly a superpower summit meeting this year. Secretary of State George P. Shultz was pleased with the results at the spring meeting of the North Atlantic Council, but still cautious. He said the difficult problems remained of verifying the elimination of medium-range rockets in Europe and virtually all such Soviet rockets in Asia. "The negotiations are by no means over," Shultz told reporters before boarding his U.S. Air Force jet for a two-day tour of the Far East and Australia. "We are in to discussing things that have not been done before. So it's complicated."

But he said "there is a reasonable probability they can be resolved." He said that, based on his report, Reagan is in a position to respond to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's missile reduction proposal. The president plans to announce Monday night the U.S.-Soviet understanding which the NATO foreign ministers said in a windup communique would be "an important element in a coherent and comprehensive concept of arms control and disarmament."

In Moscow, Vladimir Chernyshev, military analyst for Tass news agency, said Friday that NATO acceptance of a Soviet proposal to eliminate nuclear missiles from Europe showed NATO had overcome its nervousness about arms cuts, but did not go as far as he said the comprehensive concept of arms control and disarmament.

Shultz said despite the "positive step" taken by NATO, no date has been set for Gorbachev to visit Washington to sign the treaty with Reagan. He is expected to work on a date and an agenda this summer with Soviet Foreign Minister-Edvard A. Shevardnadze.

'Tear down wall,' Reagan challenges

The Associated Press

BERLIN — Standing under iron bars, the Berlin Wall dividing East and West, President Reagan on Friday challenged Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev — if he truly seeks peace, prosperity and liberalization — to "come here to this gate... tear down this wall."

Reagan's emotional declaration that "there is only one Berlin," spoken in German, was greeted with cheers of approval from more than 20,000 flag-waving spectators, and was carried by loudspeakers to several hundred East Berliners trying to listen from beyond the Brandenburg Gate, on the other side of the concrete and barbed wire barricade. "This wall will fall," Reagan declared in the speech, broadcast to Eastern Europe as well as Western Europe and North America. "For it cannot withstand faith. It cannot withstand truth. The wall cannot withstand freedom."

The president and Nancy Reagan returned to the West Hotel at 7:45 p.m. MDT, where the family dog, Rex, scampered out the door to greet them. Mrs. Reagan scooped the spaniel up in her arms and carried him to the White House. "Nearing the end of a 10-day, 10,135-mile journey that took him to Venice for the annual economic summit of seven major industrial democracies, the president challenged Gorbachev to extend his liberalizing domestic policy of 'glasnost' to ending East-West divisions symbolized by the Berlin Wall. "We hear much from Moscow about a new policy of reform and liberalization," he said, citing the release of political prisoners, the end of jamming of some foreign news broadcasts and the start of economic ventures relatively free of state controls. "Are these the beginnings of profound changes in the Soviet state?" Reagan asked. "Or are they token gestures, intended to raise false hopes in the West or to strengthen the Soviet system without changing it?"

"We welcome change and openness. For we believe freedom and security go together, that the advance of human liberty can only strengthen the cause of world peace." Then Reagan declared: "There are 30 million Soviets can make that would be unmistakable, that would advance dramatically the cause of freedom and peace. "General Secretary Gorbachev, if you seek peace, if you seek prosperity for the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, if you seek liberalization: Come here, to this gate. • See WALL on Page A2

Counsel for county requests election challenge dismissal

By CRAIG LINCOLN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Boise attorney Friday requested the dismissal of a lawsuit against the May 12 jail bond election and asked that Twin Falls County be allowed to intervene in the case.

Boise attorney Paul Penland, who was retained by the county to defend County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter and County Clerk Dick Pence, filed an answer Friday to Arlo Kent's May 25 lawsuit charging the election was "null and void."

Kent asked for $53,000 in damages from Baxter and Pence. He did not name the county as a defendant or call for a new election. Penland asked for the suit's dismissal, saying the election was legal and, even if it wasn't, Kent has the duty to prove that the allegedly illegal votes cast in the election would have changed the result.

In addition, Kent's lawsuit should be dismissed because he did not post a bond as required by state law when an election is contested, Penland said.

Penland is asking Kent for $32,500 in bonds — $10,000 for the allegations against Baxter and $22,500 for the allegations against Pence.

Penland also moved for a separate trial, outside of determining whether either Pence or Baxter were liable for their actions, on whether the May 12 bond election was legal.

The first hearing on Kent's lawsuit is scheduled for July 6 and the trial date is set for July 15.

Kent, who ran for the Legislature last year as an independent candidate, has admitted to filing several suits, including a $1 million suit against the city of Twin Falls.

He claimed in the jail-election lawsuit that Pence failed to follow state laws because he didn't require pre-registration of voters. Because of that, Kent claimed, the tax levy to pay the bonds was wrongfully imposed.

Good news in reports on economy

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The U.S. trade deficit narrowed for the second consecutive month in April, dropping to $11.3 billion and providing fresh evidence, economists said Friday, that the worst of the country's trade problems are over.

Meanwhile, wholesale prices posted their smallest increase in three months, a 0.3 percent advance in May which eased fears about runaway inflation that had sent financial markets reeling just a month ago.

The dose of better-than-expected economic statistics was greeted enthusiastically by the Reagan administration and Wall Street, where the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks posted a 17.60 point gain the day.

The bond markets, a good barometer of investors' inflation fears, staged a big rally as well while the dollar climbed on foreign exchange markets based on a belief that the improving trade statistics will ease pressures that had been pushing the U.S. currency lower.

The administration, counting on an improved trade deficit to spur faster economic growth this year, seized on the new figures as proof of its strategy of driving the dollar lower to make American goods more competitive in working.

PTL cites mismanagement, files to seek Chapter 11 reorganization

The Associated Press

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The scandal-plagued PTL ministry filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code Friday, blaming the "chaotic mismanagement" of founder Jim Bakker for $72 million in debts.

"PTL is not bankrupt," ministry lawyer Norman Roy Grutman said at a news conference. "PTL possesses assets vastly in excess of whatever liabilities it has at the present time."

The court filing listed $73 million owed to 1,400 creditors. Assets were listed at $175 million.

The Rev. Jerry Falwell, who took over PTL when Bakker stepped down in March after admitting to an extramarital sexual encounter, said he had opposed the filing until lawyers and accountants persuaded the board about "the hopelessness of attempting with cash flow to stave off imminent lawsuits of $23 million in past due accounts."

Both Grutman and PTL chief executive officer Jerry Nims lashed out at Bakker on Friday, blaming him for the financial state of the ministry.

Grutman said the filing was necessitated by "chaotic mismanagement of the preceding administration," and Nims described PTL records as "atrocious."

"There were no internal checks and balances. There were no internal controls," Nims said. "We found major discrepancies in the ledger in terms of what we had purchased and what showed up here."

However, he predicted that "PTL will emerge more stable, more financially sound and a better place for the people who believe in it."

Grutman said the petition filed Friday afternoon in the federal bankruptcy court in Columbia would protect the PTL from creditors' lawsuits, but it would not inhibit the ministry from filing suits.

Grutman and Nims said that PTL would sue to regain its assets if necessary.

Falwell has said he would prefer not to file suit against another minister, including Bakker, but Grutman said Falwell would not ignore his responsibility to the organization.

State moves to plug leak in AIDS test report requirement

By BART JANSEN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — State health officials are working to plug a leak that allows Idahoans testing positive for AIDS antibodies to circumvent the state's reporting requirements.

State epidemiologist Dr. Charles Brokopp said in an interview Friday that he has spoken with lab officials in Utah, Oregon and Washington to cooperatively report people testing positive for AIDS.

The move comes after rumors circulated

Quell fears first — A4

that Idahoans were fleeing to adjacent states for blood testing because Idaho requires names to be confidentially reported to the state Department of Health and Welfare.

While not trying to prohibit people from testing out of state, Brokopp said if agreements are reached then Idaho residents could be monitored as accurately as testing within state.

The state requires name reporting so health workers can contact and counsel people about the diseases.

Brokopp said the cooperative agreements may be worked out in the next few weeks. He said these agreements would complement those already in place for reporting syphilis and other contagious diseases.

He added that the number of people taking the out-of-state route toward testing is small.

Defeating rumors that western Idahoans travel to Ontario, Ore., for testing, Brokopp said, "There's a few but not enough for us to be concerned with."

Meanwhile, testing in Idaho has soared in the last few days following national publicity and Idaho's continuing education efforts.

"In the last couple of days the state laboratory has received over 100 bloods each day to be tested for the infection of the AIDS virus," Brokopp told the Idaho Association of School Administrators Thursday, according to the Associated Press. "That's up from 100 bloods that they would receive in two or three months."

The Third International Conference on

AIDS, held in Washington, D.C., last week, attracted 6,000 specialists and national media attention. And Brokopp credited Idaho's education effort, funded entirely by grants from the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Georgia, with encouraging more people in high-risk groups to be tested.

Part of that local effort included Dr. Fritz Dixon, chief of the state Department of Health and Welfare's bureau of preventive medicine, who recommended May 9 in a contagious disease survey that all people at risk kept in his property.

 Kent also said Baxter was negligent because she didn't prosecute Pence last fall when Pence opened absentee ballots before the November election.
 The May 12 jail-bond election for a 90-day term passed with a 73 percent majority.
 Penland's response to the lawsuit said all acts and omissions of Pence and Baxter, if any, were performed "in good faith, without malice, and were fully justified and reasonable under the circumstances" and the two are immune from an award of damages.
 In addition, Kent failed to include Twin Falls County in the suit — an "imprescindible party defendant."
 Penland asked to include Twin Falls County in the action because Idaho law requires government entities holding an election that is bonded to be included in the lawsuit.
 The county's bond consultant, Bud W. Kent, said the county's bond bank filed an affidavit with Penland's response stating he has advised the county not to take any action on the bond issue until the trial court has ruled on the suit.
 "This action, if followed, may result in Twin Falls County being required to pay a higher rate of interest," on the bonds, the affidavit stated.
 Penland would not comment on the case and Kent couldn't be reached Friday.

Today's weather

More of the same: hot, mostly sunny

 Today and Sunday, mostly sunny and hot with light winds. Highs in the 90s. Lows in the 50s.
 Camas Prairie, Hatley and Lower Wood River Valley:
 Today and Sunday, mostly sunny and hot with light winds. Highs in the 90s. Lows in the 40s.
 Northern Utah and Nevada:
 Utah: Mostly sunny hot days and fair night nights. Lows mostly 55-65. Highs 95-100.
 Nevada: Mostly sunny and hot today with a few thunderstorms central and southern late in the day. Partly cloudy west and fair east tonight. Increasing cloudiness and gusty winds with a chance of afternoon showers west Sunday. Overnight lows in the 80s to 40s to near 60. Highs today upper 80s to around 100 cooling Sunday into the 80s to mid 90s.
 Summary:
 The National Weather Service says a ridge of high pressure is becoming more intense on Friday, resulting in sunny hot weather for most of the Gem State.
 The weather disturbance moving eastward through Canada brought clouds to the northern areas of the state with moisture lifting up from Nevada and Utah was increasing the chances of showers and thundershowers to the south central and southeast sections of the state.
 Mid-afternoon temperatures ranged from 75 at Coeur d'Alene to 93 at Mountain Home.
 The highest temperature in Idaho Friday was 97 degrees in Hagerman, while Elk City reported the lowest reading of 55 degrees.
 The pollen count in Twin Falls Friday was 48 particles per cubic meter of air.
 The agricultural forecast for Southern Idaho shows conditions for field work and haying will be excellent in most areas through Sunday. Isolated afternoon thundershowers will develop mainly in the southeast. A cold front Tuesday will bring cooler windy weather and scattered showers. Conditions for field work and haying will be fair or good Tuesday and Wednesday. Total precipitation will average less than 10 inch. Winds for spraying will be west or southwest 5 to 15 mph today and Sunday except for gusts to 40 mph near thundershowers.
 The tented outlook for Southern Idaho: Mostly fair except for isolated showers Monday and Tuesday. Highs in the 90s. Monday cooling into the 70s and low 80s Tuesday and Wednesday. Night-time lows in the 50s.

Texas in for floods

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Flash floods continued to threaten central and southeastern Texas on Friday after a month of record rainfall, and searchers pulled the bodies of two people from a fast-moving creek.
 Sun broke through the clouds in San Antonio and the Hill Country and the bad weather moved to southeastern Texas, where heavy rain flooded streets in Houston and surrounding counties.
 Heavy rain fell in the Houston-Beaumont-Port Arthur area, including 6.09 inches at Beaumont and 7.79 inches at Beryl Oaks, 10 miles northeast of Beaumont. An isolated thundershower dumped 4 inches of rain in three hours at Lake Houston. Luce Bayou had a 24-hour total of 9.49 inches and Sackheim, near Houston, had 8.78, the National Weather Service said.

 A storm system, moving from the north, was expected to bring in more rain to central and southern Texas on Saturday, said Cristy Mitchell, a forecaster with the National Weather Service in San Antonio.

Leak

 of exposure to AIDS since 1978 should be tested.
 AIDS is spread through sexual fluids and blood. Most commonly it is transferred between homosexual men, intravenous drug abusers sharing needles and the sexual partners of both.
 Blood testing reveals only whether a person has developed antibodies to the AIDS virus. It does not mean the person will necessarily develop AIDS or similar related conditions.
 About 400 Idahoans have been tested positive for AIDS antibodies and 10 people have been diagnosed here for developing the disease. There have been six known deaths from the disease, which is still incurable.
 Brokopp said the numbers of people testing antibody positive has not jumped significantly with the increased testing.

 Confidential name reporting may yet become common practice in all states, Brokopp predicts. He said having the names allows HAW and district health departments to counsel people testing positive for exposure to the AIDS virus and their contacts at risk of catching the AIDS virus.
 He added that he receives a couple of calls a day from states interested in Idaho's consent law.
 "Only about six states require the confidential name reporting."
 "I think that's going to be the way many other states go," Brokopp said.
 California AIDS specialists say name reporting would be infeasible there because of the high number of patients and the fear of names being distributed to the public.

Economy

 Malcolm Baldrige said that the success American manufacturers have enjoyed in regaining lost markets overseas would have a "sizeable effect on growth in output and employment this year."
 "We will see occasional monthly setbacks, but the improving trend will continue," Baldrige said in a prediction supported by many private analysts.
 Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said the "trade situation continues to muddle along, piling on more international debt, monetary growth, and it will continue to do so until we put an effective trade policy into place."
 The Labor Department said the 0.3 percent increase in wholesale prices in May was the smallest monthly increase since a 0.1 percent advance in February and was in sharp contrast to a 0.7 percent surge in April.
 The big April price jump had sent bond prices plummeting and interest rate investors began to demand more protection against the threat of higher inflation.
 Analysts said the unexpectedly small May inflation increase should ease fears about inflation and help to send interest rates lower.

 Analysts, however, cautioned against expecting a rapid improvement in the U.S. trade deficit, which swelled to a record $166.3 billion last year.
 In a third report Friday, the government said that business sales fell 0.3 percent in April, reversing a 0.4

percent March increase, while inventories of unsold products rose by 0.2 percent. Analysts said the combination of falling sales and rising inventories would likely depress economic growth in coming months until businesses are able to work off the high inventories.
 The Commerce Department said the April imbalance between imports and exports of $13.3 billion was down from a March deficit of $13.4 billion and was the lowest monthly total since January.
 Imports, which had surged to a record level of $34.7 billion in March, fell by 3.6 percent in April to $33.5 billion. While this was seen as good news, analysts were somewhat disappointed that exports fell as well, declining by 4.4 percent to $20.1 billion in April.
 The March export total had been a six-year high and even with the decline, exports were still well above the monthly average for all of 1986.
 Analysts gave credit for the export improvement to the decline in the value of the dollar over the past two years, which was engineered by the Reagan administration in an effort to make American goods more competitive on overseas markets.
 Imports of manufactured goods totaled $26.8 billion in April, 2.6 percent less than in March. The improvement in this category reflected declines in imports of iron and steel and office machinery, which offset gains in such categories as foreign cars.
 Imports of petroleum products totaled $3 billion, down 5.9 percent from March, reflecting a drop in volume which offset a rise in price. In all, $5.6 million barrels of oil duty free were imported during April while the price per barrel averaged $17.72, up 58 cents from March.
 The April trade figures reflected deficit balances of $4.9 billion with Japan, essentially unchanged from March; $2.3 billion with Western Europe and $1.6 billion with Taiwan.

Wall

 "Mr. Gorbachev, open this gate."
 "Mr. Gorbachev, tear down this wall."
 Barricades kept anti-American demonstrators from getting any closer than one mile from the speech site.
 But before Reagan arrived from Venice, thousands of protesters had marched through West Berlin chanting anti-American slogans, smashing windows, looting stores and battling with riot police. Fifty-nine demonstrators were arrested and 67 policemen were injured.
 In an impromptu reference to those who demonstrated against his Berlin appearance, Reagan said, "I wonder if they have ever asked themselves if they should have the kind of government they apparently seek, no one would ever be able to do what they're doing again."
 Accompanied by West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, Reagan stood behind a bulletproof glass shield on a raised platform and gazed over the wall at the Brandenburg Gate and the Reichstag, the former German parliament building. The two leaders stood directly opposite an East German guard tower.
 Asked by reporters if he thought Gorbachev would accept his challenge to tear down the wall, Reagan replied, "Well, Jericho didn't last forever."

 Two East German guards took photographs of the president and others watched with binoculars as he spoke. Later, asked if he was nervous, Reagan said, "I have great faith in our security."
 The wall behind the platform where Reagan spoke had been whitewashed during the night to remove graffiti reading, "Ronald Reagan Go Home." By the time he arrived Friday, the wall bore a fresh slogan, "Hello World, Welcome Reagan 1987," which was thought to have been painted by a few of the 250,000 U.S. Army troops stationed in West Germany.

Elsewhere in the nation, the high was 113 degrees recorded at Laughlin, Nev., and the low was 33 degrees at Lake Tahoe, Calif.

Leaking plutonium no health threat

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Scientists have found plutonium in sediment beds 110 feet and 230 feet below the Radioactive Waste Management Complex at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

But the extremely low levels of the radioactive material are not expected to reach the Snake River Plain Aquifer and do not pose a health threat, officials at the U.S. Department of Energy facility said.

Core sampling below the 88-acre waste burial ground is being done as a part of a 10-year study to see whether the more than 2 million cubic feet of plutonium-contaminated waste should be removed or altered in form to stabilize it.

The waste was buried at the site between 1952 and 1970 and mostly came from the Rocky Flats Plant in Colorado, where plutonium triggers for nuclear weapons are manufactured.

Scientists found plutonium in one of six core samples taken at 230 feet from holes drilled below the site in 1986, said Phil Hamric, Department of Energy-Idaho assistant manager for nuclear programs. A second hole was drilled early this month and plutonium was discovered in samples from sediment beds at 110 feet a week ago.

But samples done in the second hole came up negative at 230 feet, INEL officials said.

The Snake River Plain Aquifer lies 580 feet below the INEL, about 40 miles west of Idaho Falls. The two sediment layers, which lie between thick basalt layers, act as a filter and collector for radioactive elements that have leached out of the burial ground above.

The aquifer, which lies under 9,600 square miles in 13 Idaho counties, yields 6.5 million acre feet of water to the Snake River through springs from American Falls to Hagerman.

Wells drilled into the aquifer show no radioactive material has reached it from the burial ground, Hamric said.

Since 1970, the waste has been stored in drums above ground on concrete pads covered with soil. The newer waste is slated for removal to the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant in Carlsbad, N.M., beginning in late 1988.

Survey cites lack of service

POCATELLO (AP) — A city-financed survey shows high fares, schedules, the lack of service by major carriers and small planes are mainly responsible for declining use of the Pocatello airport.

"Basically, this study confirms what we have suspected all along — that people don't like the air fares and are looking for alternative travel methods," Airport Manager Len Nelson said.

The city spent only $80 to gather the information — the cost of printing has seen use of its airport drop by more than half as seven airlines, including Western, have discontinued service.

Southeast Idaho, mainly selected because they fly but do not use Pocatello as an origin. Only about 400 forms were returned.

While all but five percent said they received good service from airline workers, half of those responding cited fares, current about $143 round-trip to Salt Lake City, as the overriding reason for not using Pocatello.

In the past seven years, the city has seen use of its airport drop by more than half as seven airlines, including Western, have discontinued service.

Officials deny aid to nursing home patients

CALDWELL (AP) — The Canyon County Commission has denied requests for indigent medical assistance from four patients at a bankrupt Nampa nursing home.

"There is absolutely nothing personal about this," Commission Chairman Joyce Chase said of Wednesday's decision. "I love those people out there. I wish there were some other way, but we have to abide by the law."

Mrs. Chase said the Sunny Ridge Manor residents first must seek state certification to qualify the nursing home for aid from the Department of Health and Welfare. If that is denied, the county could step in, she said.

"It's incredible that they would deny them," said Harmon Johnson, court-appointed bankruptcy trustee for Sunny Ridge.

Johnson assumed control of the 160-resident nursing home from co-owners Max Durbina and Wanda Turner, who filed for financial reorganization this spring under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code. Durbina and Turner have admitted using Sunny Ridge funds for personal expenses.

Johnson said state officials have told him he could not apply for the certification and financial assistance Mrs. Chase said the county requires while Sunny Ridge is involved in bankruptcy proceedings.

Mrs. Chase said the four patients seeking indigent aid — Eva L. Pofratz, M. Louise Wesche, Lela Yoder and Bessie Hawkins — have the option of moving to state-certified nursing home.

But Johnson said that really was not an option for elderly people who lost their life savings when Sunny Ridge was forced into bankruptcy.

"Economically, it doesn't make sense," he said.

He said he was trying to get state and county officials together to solve the problem. "But in no shape or form do I want them to break any law or do anything unethical. That's been done too many times already at Sunny Ridge," Johnson said.

There are no plans to evict Sunny Ridge residents, but "sooner or later someone is going to have to pay the bills," he said.

There is still hope the facility can be sold to number of "viable buyers," including Mercy Medical Center in Nampa, Johnson said.

No trace of youth

AMERICAN FALLS (AP) — A 9-year-old Pocatello boy was presumed drowned after apparently slipping off an innertube into American Falls Reservoir Wednesday.

Searchers had found no sign of the body of Brad Raymond on Friday afternoon, a Power County sheriff's dispatcher said.

Rescue wins girl honors

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The 9-year-old daughter of Teton County Sheriff Kim Cooke has been honored for the nearly five hours she spent bringing her seriously injured father out of a mountain canyon for medical treatment.

Colleen Cooke was given a plaque from the Teton County Fire Department in ceremonies at her father's hospital room at the Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center.

Cooke was riding with his daughter two weeks ago when his horse either threw him or kicked him in the face. Colleen led him the several miles down the canyon, applying snow to his wounds on the way. They were picked up by Cooke's brother Casper at the road and taken to the center.

ST. CHARLES (AP) — A St. Charles woman was killed when her motorcycle hit a county road and struck a tree, Idaho State Police reported.

Dee Anne Stichel, 40, was five miles west of U.S. 89 on St. Charles Canyon Road when the accident occurred Thursday night. An ISP dispatcher said Ms. Stichel and another motorcyclist were sightseeing in the area.

Ms. Stichel was pronounced dead at Bear Lake Memorial Hospital in Montpelier. She was wearing a helmet at the time of the crash, the dispatcher said.

IPC, Cook power dispute triggers hearings

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A dispute between Idaho Power Co. and a Magic Valley company that wants to build a small hydroelectric plant at Magic Reservoir is triggering hearings before the state Public Utilities Commission on Thursday.

The hearings and other PUC activities will focus the commission's attention on problems co-generators and utilities are having negotiating contracts. At issue is the price utilities should pay to buy power from small producers and what provisions should be included in contracts.

IPC says there is a surplus of power in the Northwest and it is required to pay too much for the power output of small producers and this hurts ratepayers. IPC generally has a surplus of 250-300 megawatts in its system, according to the company. During periods of peak electrical demand IPC can generate 2,150 megawatts. Power purchased from co-generators accounts for about 90 megawatts, IPC said.

IPC and Cook have been unable to reach agreement on the terms of a power contract since February.

Cogenerators such as Warren Chapman of Twin Falls, who wants to build the Magic Project, says "they (IPC) can't beat us any other way" except through a contract like this.

IPC routinely opposes new licenses issued to cogenerators by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. It opposed Cook's says IPC spokesman Jim Taney.

IPC is required by federal law to buy power from small power producers licensed by FERC. The PUC sets the rates IPC will pay. The law was written during a period of energy shortages and seen as way of promoting alternative energy sources.

A PUC hearing is scheduled at 3 p.m. Thursday in Boise on the contract dispute between Cook and IPC. Cooks wants IPC to agree to buy the output of the proposed 9.9 megawatt plant.

A hearing is scheduled at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in Boise on the PUC's investigation into the security provisions of contracts between IPC and small power producers.

Typically, contracts between IPC and cogenerators run 35 years. Because of the length of the contract, IPC is concerned about receiving some security, the company says.

For instance, the Magic contract would require IPC to pay $15.3 million more than the power is worth for the first 21 years, says IPC.

The cogenerator gets the money up front while the ratepayer gets it at the end, says Joe Marshall, IPC's vice president planning resources and rates.

IPC is asking the commission to set up an escrow account to protect IPC in the event the cogenerator skips town when the most lucrative period of the contract is over. IPC wants escrow provisions in the Cook contract, says Marshall.

Since 1981, IPC signed about 58 contracts with cogenerators, says IPC. Asked how many have skipped town, Marshall says one cogenerator is in bankruptcy and some have not met requirements to generate the amount of electricity in their contracts.

UFF management confident of vote against unionizing

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Top executives of Universal Frozen Foods at Twin Falls said Friday they are confident employees will reject unionizing if the UFF work force when they vote later this month.

"We feel very, very confident that, if they'll get the facts, they're going to vote against the union," said Personnel Manager Gene Hoskins.

Local 280 of the International Union of Operating Engineers Thursday announced a representation ballot at the plant on June 25. About 675 production line, maintenance, sanitation, warehouse and quality control workers will decide whether to name the Richland, Wash., local as their bargaining agent.

Local 280 officials said Thursday they were asked to organize the plant by employees seeking job security.

However, Hoskins and Plant Superintendent Mike Johnston said Friday a union is not necessary at the large, frozen potato plant on the city's north side.

"Generally, we don't feel a union is needed to come between our employees and management,"

Hoskins said. "We don't think an outsider is going to be constructive to the communications process."

The UFF officials declined to comment on complaints of arbitrary firings and other events cited by union officials. Hoskins said it is company policy to address them with employees directly rather than through the newspaper.

Johnston did give statements by employees to union officials alleging intimidation of employees involved in organizing. "We've had a couple of instances in which employees were breaking no-solicitation rules (on the work floor), but they weren't threatened in any way," he said.

Hoskins said UFF managers are urging employees to "get all the facts" before making up their minds.

"We're encouraging them as strongly as we can to check things out," Hoskins said. "Also to check out what the union tells them."

Employees of Idaho Frozen Foods Corp., predecessor to UFF, turned down representation by the General Workers Warehousemen and Helpers Union in the plant's last organizing drive in 1978. The vote was 451-140, according to plant records.

Nancy Lewis said finding inner peace is achieved through developing one's own electromagnetic energy of the soul

Peace group stresses inner strength

By CLAUDE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - People without inner peace are probably absorbing negative energy from the world around them, said Nancy Lewis, a representative of the Inner Peace Movement, who spoke here Thursday night.

Speaking before a group of about 35 people at the Holiday Inn, Lewis, a Los Angeles resident, explained that finding inner peace is the goal of IPM members all over the world.

The organization was founded in 1964 by Francisco Coll in Washington, D.C., and has since grown to include members in Canada, Mexico, the Caribbean, Europe, Australia, New Zealand and the Far East, she said.

Lewis said she discovered IPM while working as a registered nurse with heart patients. She began to feel the symptoms of heart problems, but her doctors told her she was healthy, she said.

By joining an IPM Discovery Group, a local chapter of IPM members who meet weekly, she learned that her illness was due to the negative energy where she worked. "I was absorbing the energy of the patients," she said.

Each person has about four watts of electromagnetic energy which flows through the body and creates the aura, or soul, she explained.

Finding inner peace means developing one's own energy instead of absorbing the energy of others, she said.

"Ninety percent of what we think and feel isn't within us. It comes from our environment," she said.

According to IPM theory, each person has a "silver cord" which extends from the pineal gland in the brain to that person's soul. That gland is where the inflow and outflow of electromagnetic energy takes place, she said.

Finding inner peace is important because death is simply the breaking of the silver cord and the soul is separated from the body, she said.

Community School to aid fund-raising for Mountain building

By CLAUDE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY - The boards of trustees from the Community School and the Mountain School - two local, private schools - have joined forces to raise $1.81 million to build a 10,000-square-foot building for the Mountain School on Community School grounds.

Labor Day 1987 has been stated as the fund-raising cut-off, said Community School spokesperson Carrie Bashaw.

Currently located at the John Gardner Teaching Center, the Mountain School, for grades kindergarten through sixth, recently learned it would lose its lease in September 1988, Bashaw said.

The Community School, for grades seventh through 12, purchased land in 1986 and had vacant property available for a new Mountain School building. A six-member fundraising committee was formed, comprised of trustees and parents from both schools, she said.

The group formally announced its fundraising plan this week, but had $665,000 already pledged before the announcement was made. Committee Chairperson Valerie Dumke Fork said that the campaign has received "a truly exciting reception from both boards, from parents and from friends of both schools."

The initial pledge of $350,000 came from her father, Ed Dumke. "He's a founding father of the Community School 13 years ago and is now a grandparent of a Mountain School student, which makes the joint campaign a very natural move for both schools," she said.

The three-stage, five-year plan includes raising the necessary funds, overseeing the construction of the new building and planning the future campus addition of a multi-use building for athletics, assemblies, performing arts and community functions.

The Community School has an enrollment of approximately 72 girls and 71 boys and its proclaimed goal is to "foster a climate of respect for personal achievement, responsibility and human dignity." Most of the students come from the communities of the Wood River Valley.

The Mountain School, with an enrollment of 27 girls and 29 boys, aims at providing a "foundation toward becoming responsible, concerned citizens" for its students, according to its statement of philosophy.

The Community School campus is located near Trail Creek, southeast of Ketchum. The school shares its campus with the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities.

Jerome second graders score well above average

By CLAUDE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

JEROME - Second graders within the Jerome School District scored 29 points higher than the national average in standardized testing this year, but eighth graders fell below state and national averages in many areas, said Mike Brown, district school psychologist.

Brown, who gave testing results in a presentation before the Jerome School Board Tuesday night, said that second graders had a composite average of 79, in comparison to the national average of 50. The composite consists of reading, math and language arts tests.

First through seventh grades were tested with a national standardized exam from Science Research Associates. After third grade, the reading, math and language composite includes reference materials, social studies and science.

Brown said the results were consistent with previous years. "The average rises slightly every year," he said.

The reason for such success among second graders is due to the curriculum offered at that level, he said. "The experts say that our district's curriculum probably correlates closely with test questions," he said.

The testing, funded by the district, showed that students scored highest in math and lowest in language arts, which concerned School Board Chairman Edwin Chonacky. "Language is the basis for everything else," he said.

First graders at Washington

School had an average composite of 59 and those at Jefferson had a score of 53. Composite averages for other grades were third, 70; fourth, 57; fifth, 61; sixth, 57, and seventh, 65.

State averages on the SRA test were not available for comparison, but the national average is always 50, Brown said. No category averages for first through seventh grade test results were below 50.

The eighth-grade test results told a different story. In 14 out of 18 categories on the Iowa Test of Basic

Noonan: School AIDS policies should quell public fears

The Associated Press

BOISE - Public school policies on admitting children with acquired immune deficiency syndrome must focus on quelling public fears about AIDS almost more than on coping with the fatal disease itself, the head of Idaho's only district with an AIDS-infected student said Friday.

"AIDS is clearly an epidemic of fear," Blaine County School Superintendent Dave Noonan told the Idaho Association of School Administrators.

"We don't always deal with facts when we deal with AIDS. We deal with public perception," Noonan said. "You're dealing with the most basic fear of life and death. It's that sense of fear that has to be dealt with, and the only way to overcome that is through education."

With a general policy on the issue adopted last fall, Noonan said the extensive educational campaign the district undertook with the public, Heistaff and its students was largely responsible for the relatively smooth entry into Ketchum's Hemingway Elementary School this April of the 12-year-old boy, who had contracted AIDS from a blood transfusion obtained several years earlier in California. Experts were called in for a series of public meetings and employee workshops on the issue.

"We answered questions until we were blue in the face," he said, and quickly added, "Even if you have all your ducks in a row, it's the most difficult thing you'll ever deal with in the public schools."

The district policy, already sought by scores of school administrators from throughout the Northwest, called for an independent team of health, education and local officials along with parents of the child involved to evaluate each case and make a recommendation for or against admission to the school board. The recommendation is to be based on the characteristics of the child in question, the prospects for interaction with others and both the risks and benefits to the victim and others in the school.

"We had to proceed on this delicate issue in a very open and forthright manner," Noonan said. "That helped us a great deal. We tried to keep the people informed all along the way."

When the board announced it would admit the child, it delayed the effective date of the decision for two weeks "so we'd have an opportunity to work out the kinks, talk to the kids about it. . . . The community's got to have time to talk about it, to adjust to it."

Since then, the district has intensified its emphasis on hygiene to help ease any residual fears among employees and students, he said, contending the "real danger are the AIDS victims we don't know about, who don't know themselves they have the AIDS virus."

He said there has been no pressure in the county for any kind of testing program but predicted that emotionally charged issues would be the next ramification of the AIDS crisis to hit the educational system.

School officials have maintained the confidentiality of the student, but in a small rural community, Noonan said, "it would be very surprised if there are any students above the fourth grade who don't know who that child is."

School officials said the boy has been treated normally by the other students, and while the educational campaign might be credited in part, he said the community's make-up was the reason the situation has caused no major disruption.

"I think we have a progressive community in Blaine County, and the parents should be credited," he said.

In addition to the emphasis placed on the need for education about AIDS and for the school district to maintain a victim's confidentiality even if the information eventually becomes known from other sources, Noonan cited media coverage and the rapidly expanding amount of information on the disease as the major problems facing administrators forced to deal with the issue. Officials must have the most up-to-date information on AIDS to make informed decisions, he said.

Media attention this spring on the Blaine County case was intense, he recalled, and at times reporters had to be kept from disrupting classrooms.

"It could turn into a circus atmosphere," Noonan said. "You have to protect the child's obligation to protect that instructional process and keep education going."

"The world has changed," he said, "and we have to change to meet that challenge."

3 suspects held following chase through downtown Salt Lake City

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Two adults and a juvenile were being held Friday after a chase through downtown Salt Lake City in which shots were fired, two cars were damaged and a suspect attempting to flee on foot was hit by a police car.

The injured man was treated, released and taken into custody with two other occupants of the car after the chase Thursday. The three men were being investigated in a half dozen area robberies believed carried out by a Vietnamese gang.

Two adults are being held at the Salt Lake County Jail for investigation of aggravated robbery and attempted homicide and a juvenile was being held at the Salt Lake County Detention Center, said Salt Lake Police Lt. Nick Paloukos.

The chase was to be screened by the county attorney's office Friday. No charges had been filed and the names of the suspects, believed to be from California, were not released.

The chase began about 10:24 p.m. Thursday when Officer Robin Howell spotted a suspicious vehicle with California license plates parked in front of a westside residence.

Three men ran from the house and sped away in the car. As Howell began pursuit, word came that there had been a robbery at home in which one of the victims had been hit on the head with a gun.

When Howell tried to stop the car, one of the passengers leaned out the window and began firing a handgun at the pursuing police car, said Lt. Steve Diamond.

The chase wound through westside streets, weaving through traffic with Howell in pursuit and other patrol cars converging on the area.

Air Force tanker flew too low

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — The KC-135 tanker that crashed at Fairchild Air Force Base in mid-March was flying lower and slower than planned and was doomed when it hit the jet wash of its companion B-52, an Air Force investigation board concluded in a report released Friday.

"An almost vertical bank... precluded recovery to safe flight," the report's summary said.

Seven died when the $18 million plane went down near Fairchild's runway March 13. Six were aboard the plane; the seventh was on the ground, sitting in his car and watching his colleagues.

The Accident Investigation Board assigned to the crash also noted that a required day-before mission planning and briefing session for the entire crew wasn't done, and that mission planning for that day wasn't documented on required forms.

All the victims were members of a newly formed Strategic Air Command demonstration team designed to show off the KC-135 and B-52 at air shows. The planes were practicing their Thunderhawk routines when the crash occurred.

Hitting the jet wash made the KC-135 roll from its planned 45-degree bank to one of nearly 90 degrees, said the Air Force team assigned to investigate the facts of the crash.

The maneuver the planes were flying when the accident occurred was called "the snake," the report said. Capt. Frank Johnson was at the controls in the left pilot's seat.

There were three pilots aboard the flight and accident report was the first time the flight's commander had been identified.

Col. Thomas Harris, commander of the 92nd Bomb Wing at Fairchild and officer in charge of the Thunderhawks project, would not comment on the report, said Lt.

Terry Francisco of Fairchild's public affairs office.

Earlier, Harris said the new demonstration team had guidelines to fly no less than 20 percent above the lowest safety limit prescribed for the planes.

The Boeing-built KC-135 is a cousin to the Boeing 707. Critics, including engineers in Boeing's military division, have said the plane should never have been used for low-altitude, low-speed maneuvers such as the Thunderhawks entailed.

The planned demonstrations were "within the safe flight capabilities of both aircraft," the Accident Investigation Board concluded.

The tanker was supposed to be in a 45-degree bank when it rolled over, but to the point that its wings were perpendicular to the ground, witnesses said. A number of witnesses told the board that they noticed flames from the engines, indicating a stall from too slow an airspeed.

Skills. Jerome averages fell below those for the state. Nine categories showed averages under the national score of 50, which Brown called "an area of concern."

The ITBS includes questions on vocabulary, reading comprehension, language skills, work-study skills, math skills, social studies and science. The average composite score for Idaho was 56. For Jerome, the average was 52.

Problems at that level might be due to teacher-student ratios, said trustee Jim Cobble. "When you put in the same effort with 18 kids instead of with 28, you get better results," he said.

An eighth-grade writing assessment of the ITBS, which was graded on a pass/fail basis, showed that 83.1 percent of Jerome students had passing scores. On the state level, 82.3 percent of the students tested received passing scores.

Jerome eighth graders may not have scored below state averages, but their scores did improve in comparison to 1986 Jerome results.

Brown said. The complete ITBS composite in 1986 was 42, six points below this year's score, he said.

Eleventh-graders took the Test of Achievement and Proficiency and kept above national averages in all but one of the eight categories, worked in math. Students scored five points higher than the state average in social studies.

Jerome's complete composite score was 64, five points behind the state average of 69. On the writing assessment, 80.7 percent of the Jerome students passed, falling below the state average of 85.1, Brown said.

He added that this was the first year for a writing assessment on the 11th grade level, which might explain their distance behind the state average.

The complete composite for 11th graders jumped to 64 this year from 45 in 1986, an improvement which shows the commitment of teachers to help students improve their scores.

A strong effort was made this year by teachers at the high school to train students in standardized testing strategy and to prepare them for the testing, Brown said. Other scores showed dramatic improvement as well. The social studies average doubled from 36 in 1985 to 72 this year.

In other business, the School Board:

- approved Dick Jordan as Jerome's representative in the Idaho Teacher of the Year 1987 contest. Jordan was second runner-up last year. Candidates for Jerome Teacher of the Year 1987 were Keith Lane, Mike Pate, Madge Stephens, Kathy Samuels, and Sharon Ostermeier. The 1987 winner will go on to 1988 state competition.
- approved a 5 percent salary increase for classified personnel and an extended working period of 210 days for secretarial staff.
- accepted the resignations of high school counselor Roy Parson and sixth grade teacher Lynn K. Hunter.
- approved the hiring of Susan Lowe as a half-time teacher in the fifth grade for 1987-88.

Peace

"All we take with us when we pass on is our wisdom... That's why it's so important to develop our consciousness while we're alive," she said.

This concept of death leads to belief in reincarnation, Lewis said. A person's four-watt soul hooks up with another body after the silver cord is broken, she said.

Inner peace also involves the balance of a person's two different natures, she said. Each person has an intellectual nature and a feeling nature. Pre-occupation with either one is dangerous, she said.

"When we get too caught up in intellect or feeling, we don't get anything out of it. Both parts must work in harmony. You must have a balance between intellect and feeling for every thought," she said.

One of the first steps in achieving inner peace is to determine your life purpose, Lewis said.

"If you're without a channel is like a flood. Having goals and working toward your life purpose channels your energy and makes it constructive," she said that her life purpose is to travel as an IPM representative and meet people. "I have many people to meet in this lifetime and this is how I do it. If I don't meet people, I don't share with them, I get sick," she said.

Spiritual guides are also an important vehicle through which one can achieve inner peace, she said. The guides are beings of higher energy levels that watch over humans and suggest ways to make life better, she said.

"If you've ever felt chills for no reason... that's an indication that your spiritual guides are near you and trying to tell you something," she said.

When joining IPM, Lewis said she has consulted her spiritual guides many times. When she first moved to Los Angeles, she needed to buy a car and her guides helped her choose which one to buy.

There are four ways that people communicate, she said. Vision, prophecy, intuition and feeling are the four means of communication that IPM uses, she said.

People usually communicate most forcefully in one of the four ways, she said. Finding a balance among the four manners of communication is important and though one may be strongest, it should not dominate, she said.

IPM Discovery groups in Idaho are located in Boise and Pocatello. The meetings are held once a week and 4-10 people usually participate, she said.

Anyone interested in joining a local group may call Jack or Diane Adams in Jerome at 324-4854 evenings.

Run From Hunger slated

TWIN FALLS — The First Annual Run From Hunger will be held June 27, 9 a.m., on the College of Southern Idaho campus, said race director Dan Brizze.

The event will include a two-mile Fun Run and a 10-kilometer run on and off the campus, he said. Both will begin at the Taylor Administration Building.

The run is sponsored by Working Partners, a nationwide project started by the Reagan Administration to help organizations like the Salvation Army and other groups who aid the needy, Brizze said.

Participants are asked to pay a $10 entry fee and to donate one can of food. All proceeds will be given to the Salvation Army in Twin Falls. Participants are encouraged to make further donations to the cause, he added.

Refreshments and commemorative T-shirts will be provided for all participants. Brizze said race organizers are hoping to have 100-150 runners enter.

Power

The major exposure is 20 years out and there is an $80 million risk to the company, Marshall says.

Since the law requiring power purchases from cogenerators went into effect in 1978, how the rates should be set has been a hotly debated topic among cogeneration developers, utility executives and state and federal regulators.

During its investigation of rates, the PUC is allowing utilities to suspend the requirement that they sign long-term contracts with cogenerators.

IPC has been saying it will continue to negotiate contracts even though it isn't required to.

The hearings on cogeneration in Idaho follow a long period of utility industry hostility to cogeneration.

The utility industry fought the constitutionality of the 1978 Public Utility Regulatory Policy Act that required the purchases of electricity from small power producers but it was upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court, according to "Power Struggle" by Richard Kuldolph and Scott Ridley.

Recently IPC lobbied FERC to have the word "need" inserted in the act requiring power purchases from small producers, says Marshall.

FERC held hearings on the issue but Marshall says he has no estimate of when a decision might be forthcoming.

Marshall dismissed as "erroneous and wrong" the contention of some critics that the reason utilities oppose cogeneration is that they want to maintain control over the supply of electricity.

"We have to control a little bit (because we) have to have system reliability," Marshall says.

IPC's electrical rates are the lowest of any investor-owned utility in the United States and Marshall says controlling cogeneration costs are part of the strategy to maintain this situation.

Marshall says IPC is in competition with other energy sources such as natural gas and in Idaho it is competing with Bonneville Power Administration which is not required to buy power from cogenerators.

But Marshall acknowledges that other big utilities have to face the same challenges of buying power from cogenerators and that Bonneville has been forced to raise rates and reduce its budget in the face of declining sales to major customers in California and the Northwest.

Pope celebrates outdoor Mass in Solidarity's birthplace

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — A crowd of more than one million people chanted "Solidarity, Solidarity," as Pope John Paul II celebrated Mass amid a big show of police force in the city where the labor movement was born.

"He (the worker) has the right to self management, a manifestation of which are, among other things, trade unions independent and self governing," the Polish-born pontiff said from a 10-story platform shaped like the bow of a sailing ship.

The crowd at the outdoor Mass immediately broke into more than 50 seconds of wild chanting, yelling "Solidarity, Solidarity," as the pontiff looked down on them. A sea of red-and-white Solidarity banners they with their familiar flowing script fluttered in front of him.

The police presence in this Baltic seaport that gave birth to the outlawed labor union appeared to be the largest since the 19-month-long martial law was declared in December 1981.

Solidarity chief Lech Walesa, who led thousands of union supporters in attending the Mass, was to receive Holy Communion from the pope.

Walesa met with the pope Thursday at the bishop's residence in Gdansk.

Walesa and his wife Danusia sat in the first row of a VIP section directly in front of the pope, which held a replica of a sail and three white crosses arranged to resemble a mast.

"Long live the pope," the crowd of more than one million people chanted as John Paul arrived for the Mass in a field near the Zaspas housing project.

On his third pilgrimage to his Communist homeland since he became leader of the Roman

Riot police attack Solidarity marchers

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Hundreds of riot police swinging sticks and clubs charged into a crowd of marching Solidarity supporters after Pope John Paul II celebrated Mass Friday, injuring at least a dozen people, witnesses said.

Police attacked indiscriminately, hitting bystanders who were not among the more than 18,000 demonstrators who were chanting "There is no freedom without Solidarity," they said.

The witnesses, who included Associated Press reporters, said the group began marching at about 6:30 p.m. from a large field on the outskirts of the city where more than a million people listened to the Polish-born pontiff praise the outlawed Solidarity independent labor union but urge calm among its backers.

The crowd, carrying red-and-white Solidarity banners, marched for about an hour towards the center of the city before helmeted riot police penned them into a short railroad tunnel.

Many got down and said they would pray for police, offering a busload of plainclothes officers, then charged in twice with clubs and 5-foot-long sticks.

Thousands of police armed with clubs and backed by water cannon trucks blocked all the streets around the monument, turning back anyone trying to get near the site.

Nine people, including several Western news reporters, who got near the monument were detained by police and threatened with a loss of their accreditation if they carried

Evangelist to speak

JEROME — Dr. Al Lacy, evangelist, will speak in special services June 17-21 at the Jerome Bible Baptist Church.

Lacy founded the Denver Baptist Temple, Denver, Colo., and built it into one of the Super churches for children through 6th grade. He later entered full-time evangelism and has traveled throughout the United States and 39 foreign countries. He combines the traditional radio-style messages with old-fashioned preaching.

Services will begin at 7 p.m. at the church, 123 2nd Ave. East in Jerome. Nursery care is provided.

Corps drops spy charges against guard

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Marine Corps on Friday dismissed espionage charges against a second former guard at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, acknowledging its evidence wasn't legally sufficient to stand up in court.

Cpl. Arnold Bracy, 21, of Queens, N.Y., was freed from the brig at the Quantico, Va., Marine Base, where he had been held since March 24. He had been arrested four days earlier at the Marine base at Twentynine Palms, Calif.

"I'm feeling pretty good right now," Bracy said at a news conference shortly after his release. "I knew I didn't do it. But I didn't feel the government was going to just drop it. I was figuring they were going to push it as hard as they could to save face."

The unexpected dismissal came two days before Bracy's attorneys were scheduled to leave for Moscow on a fact-finding trip in hopes of buttressing the defense's case.

The dismissal of charges was the second major setback in the Pentagon's investigation of alleged espionage at the Moscow embassy. Last month, the corps was forced to drop the most serious charges against Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree.

CPL. ARNOLD BRACY
Says his confession forced the major figure in the case, although he still faces a court-martial on other counts next month.

Bracy and Lonetree, 25, served together in Moscow as embassy guards during an eight-month period in 1985 and 1986. The Marine Corps had accused them of escorting Soviet agents inside the embassy on numerous occasions last year after becoming sexually involved with Soviet women.

Lt. Col. Mike Powell, Bracy's chief military defense counsel, said he had been "convinced from the start that my client was innocent."

The Marine Corps, however, in its first direct confirmation of earlier press reports, said Bracy told investigators shortly before his arrest "that he had assisted Lonetree in allowing Soviets into secure areas of the U.S. Embassy."

"Cpl. Bracy confessed to a number of serious offenses against the Uniform Code of Military Justice, including espionage," the corps said in a statement.

The prosecution's case fell apart, however, when Bracy recanted that statement after his arrest, the corps acknowledged.

At the news conference at Quantico, Bracy again denied the charges and said that he had been forced into a confession because of threats by his Naval Investigative Service interrogators that he would lose his rights as an American citizen and as a member of the Marine Corps.

Bracy said he was approached by a woman who had formerly worked as a cook at the Moscow embassy in June 1986, and although she was not specific, he believed she was trying to recruit him as a spy. He said he immediately refused her and later reported that to his commander.

About three weeks later, he said, he went to a diplomat's house where the woman was then working to tell her that he was upset the Soviets even though he would be interested in being a spy. However, he did not report that encounter to his commander.

"I made my mistake when I tried to act on my own," Bracy said. "My advice to other Marines is just use your chain of command."

He denied that he had any sexual contact with the woman.

No decision has been made on Bracy's next assignment, the corps said.

The Marine Corps said the dismissal of charges against Bracy would have no effect on Lonetree's court-martial.

Goetz jury to continue work today

NEW YORK (AP) — The case of subway gunman Bernhard Goetz went to the jury Friday, nearly 2½ years after five shots in a train set off a worldwide debate over whether Goetz was an avenging angel or a villainous vigilante.

The jurors deliberated 5½ hours before stopping for the night. They were to resume this morning.

Abrams 'delighted with support' following appearance at hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elliott Abrams, the embattled assistant secretary of state, got a new vote of confidence from his boss on Friday, hours after declaring himself "delighted" with the support he "received after angry congressional accusations about false statements in the Iran-Contra affair."

"I have no plans to go anywhere," Abrams said when asked if he would resign in the wake of congressional suggestions he could no longer perform his job effectively in light of disclosures at the Iran-Contra hearings.

Some news accounts have said President Reagan gave Abrams only lukewarm support Thursday at a news conference in Venice, Italy, when he merely referred to Secretary of State George P. Shultz's statements rather than adding personal words of praise.

Shultz, however, in remarks to reporters flying back from the economic summit on Friday, said, "It's my statement that the president's support was lukewarm. The president told me he fully supports Elliott Abrams."

Asked whether Abrams has become a liability for the administration in its hopes of winning support in Congress for new Contra aid, Shultz said simply, "Insofar as congressional sentiment is concerned, there is a rebuilding job to do."

But he made it clear he expected Abrams to stay in his job.

Abrams, in his comments in Washington, declared that there is no alternative to the Reagan administration's Central America policy, which includes opposition to the leftist government in Nicaragua.

In remarks earlier Friday to the same group, Education Secretary William J. Bennett criticized what he called the "prosecutorial zeal" of some questioners at the hearings and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole said there wouldn't be such hearings if Congress had supported the rebels earlier.

In other developments: • Iran-Contra committee sources said retired Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord had been questioned this week, in private, in an effort to clear up discrepancies between his earlier testimony and that of other witnesses.

Private groups associated with activist Itzhak Nader filed lawsuits seeking to unseal secret transcripts involved in Lt. Col. Oliver North's legal skirmishing with Independent Counsel Lawrence E. Walsh.

A congressional source said U.S. District Judge Stanley Sporkin will be a likely witness before the Iran-Contra committee, to testify about his preparation of a presidential finding that authorized U.S. arms sales to Iran.

John Hult, a farmer in Costa Rica, said he had talked with people from Walsh's office in two "pre-hearings." But he said he was not called before the Iran-Contra grand jury.

Hult, who originally from Indiana, is a strong supporter of the Contras and has allowed them to use his land in northwest Costa Rica.

FBI nails drug money rings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI on Friday crushed three major money-laundering rings which service Colombian cocaine cartels, arresting 40 people and seizing $8 million to end a three-year, coast-to-coast undercover operation.

Seven Colombian leaders of the "laundering rings were among those arrested, with three of them taken into custody off the coast of Colombia after being lured onto a 48-foot sailboat crewed by FBI undercover agents. The U.S. Coast Guard intercepted the sailboat.

As many as 13 other arrests were expected on federal, state and local charges, including racketeering, conspiracy, drug trafficking and possession of narcotics, FBI officials said at a news conference.

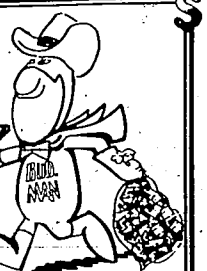

Since 1984, FBI agents participating in Operation Cashweb-Expressway have penetrated Colombian drug money networks and laundered $175 million "to gain credibility with the alleged leaders of the financial underground that serves as the bankers for" four Colombian cocaine cartels, said Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

The FBI opened or tapped into money-laundering operations in New York City, Newark, N.J., Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago, Detroit and New Haven, Conn.

Seahawks prepare for battle of wills

Bosworth says he won't sign as NFL club ignores warning and drafts him

SEATTLE (AP) — All-American linebacker Brian Bosworth of Oklahoma was picked by the Seahawks in the NFL supplemental draft Friday but said he would rather sit out the season than play for Seattle.

"We have him and we're going to make every effort to sign him," head Coach Chuck Knox said. "There's going to be a lot of posturing and rhetoric in the days coming up."

The Seahawks won the No. 1 pick in a lottery and picked Bosworth even though he had not listed them among the teams for which he would play. He reaffirmed his warning Friday at a New York news conference.

"Seattle doesn't fit the mold I want to put myself in," Bosworth said.

"He has the leverage of playing or not playing," Seattle President and General Manager Mike McCormack said. "He's the same as any other player. I think his ability is what gives him the leverage."

Both Knox and McCormack said they would try to sign Bosworth rather than trade his rights to one of the teams on the list he said would play for.

"We're not even going to speculate on the possibility of a trade," said McCormack. "We've got players on our football team, some of whom are starting, whose agents sent out similar letters."

He referred to a letter that Bosworth's agent, Gary Wichard, had mailed before the supplemental draft.

"We're not bluffing," he said out the year if he doesn't get one of the teams he wants," Wichard said at the news conference. Wichard said he told that to McCormack when he talked to him after the supplemental draft.

Bosworth on Friday revised his list of preferred teams to four — Tampa Bay, Philadelphia, the New York Jets and the Los Angeles Raiders. Bosworth said Tampa Bay was "number one" on his list because he wanted to play with quarterback Vinny Testaverde, No. 1 pick in the April 28 NFL draft, and liked new head coach Ray Perkins and owner Hugh Culbertson.

"I hope something can be worked out by one of my preferred teams," Bosworth said.

Originally, Bosworth also had included the Los Angeles Rams and the New York Giants, but Wichard said Friday the Rams were out of the Bosworth picture because they don't have a first round pick and the Giants were eliminated because "they wanted to use him as only as a backup or on special teams."

Knox and McCormack said the Seahawks had a lot of leverage, too.

"If he wants to play this year, he has to play with us," said McCormack. "If he goes back in the draft next year, he doesn't know who is going to draft him. Maybe it would be Buffalo. And if he sits out the year, I think his skills would really be diminished."

"We've got players on our football team, some of whom are starting, whose agents sent out similar letters."

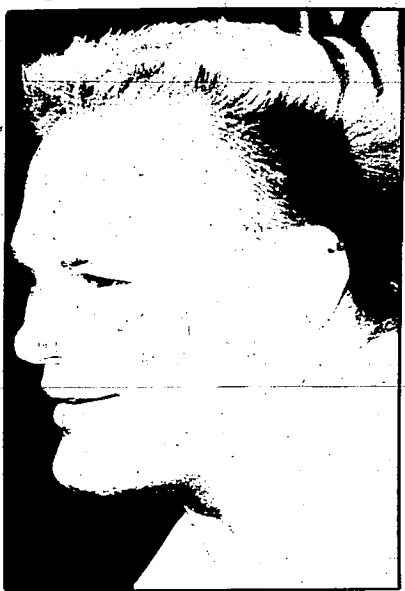

One of those players is Ken Easley, the former UCLA All-American who was Seattle's first-round draft choice in 1981. Easley's agent, Leigh Steinberg, told the Seahawks before the draft that Easley would not play for them. But Easley did sign with the Seahawks and has become one of the franchise's outstanding players. Easley was the NFL Defensive Player of the Year in 1984.

"If he doesn't play this year, he loses one year of earning power," Knox said of Bosworth. "He also has no assurances that he won't be picked by one of the teams he doesn't want to play for. So I think we're in a very, very good position."

Seattle won the first choice when the team's logo was picked from a drum containing the logos of all 28 NFL teams. The draft, for players not eligible for the regular draft, was weighted so that the teams with the poorer records had the most chances of getting the top pick.

None of the other five players eligible for the draft was chosen. They were running back Curtis Jeffries of Northwest Mississippi Junior College, kicker Jeff Valder of Arizona and defensive backs Rorey Perryman of Boston College, Titus Turner of Morris Brown and Gary Morris, who did not play college football.

After Seattle, the order of selection was Indianapolis, Kansas City,

AP Laserphoto.

Brian Bosworth says he won't be hypocritical and sign

Atlanta, Chicago, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, New Orleans, San Diego, St. Louis, Green Bay, Minnesota, Dallas, Detroit, Jets, Rams, Tampa Bay, Miami, Denver, Cincinnati, Washington, Houston, Raiders, San Francisco, New England and Giants.

Knox said he didn't expect any problems with the controversial, outspoken Bosworth. If the Seahawks could sign him,

"Everything I've heard about his character is fine," said Knox.

Bosworth was banned from playing for Oklahoma in the 1987 Orange Bowl when he tested positive for using steroids.

"There have been a number of players who have been on steroids," Knox said. "All the NFL teams will be testing for them."

Knox said he thought Bosworth would have been the second player picked in the NFL draft — behind Testaverde — in April if Bosworth would have been in the draft.

"He jumps out at you as a football player," he said. "He's a thumper."

The Seahawks won their last five games to finish with a 10-6 record last season, but missed making the playoffs for the second straight season.

Worthy and Scott happy to return to their home court

BOSTON (AP) — All the Los Angeles Lakers are happy to be going home after three games at Boston Garden, but none more than James Worthy and Byron Scott.

Worthy scored 56 points and Scott 44 as the Lakers easily won the first two games of the NBA finals at the Inglewood Forum.

On Friday, a week after leaving California in triumph, Worthy and Scott returned to Los Angeles thankful that the Lakers still lead the best-of-seven championship series 3-2 instead of trailing 3-2. Game 7 will be played Sunday, with Game 6, if necessary, in Inglewood Tuesday night.

"Going back to the Forum, on a scale of one to 10, rates a 10," said Worthy, whose 46 points in three games at Boston Garden were 10 fewer than his total in two games at the Forum. "I'm getting a lot of decent shots, but they just aren't falling. I picked a bad time to be in a shooting slump."

Worthy scored 12 points, 10 of them in the third quarter, and Scott had seven in Boston's 123-108 victory in Game 5 on Thursday night.

Scott, with a total of 19 points in the three games in Boston, saw his scoring pace drop even more drastically at Boston Garden than Worthy's.

"I'm glad to be getting back to L.A., an environment I'm familiar with," Scott said. "We play better at home. It's more comfortable at home. You're not in hotels where there are fire alarms in the middle of the night."

Worthy's last-of-9 from the field in the first half Thursday night and 6-for-10 for the game, and Scott was 6-for-10.

"It's difficult for our hallicour offense to be effective when Byron and James are off," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "We have to get consistency from both of them."

Riley said the Lakers lacked the intensity the Celtics had.

"Everybody was planning banquets and trophies and parades and I'm sure some of that filtered down to the players," Riley said. "We're going to have to battle to win this thing. Maybe getting back to the Forum will 'help our' players remember what it's like to play Laker basketball."

Worthy's 29 points, 12 assists and eight rebounds, is certain that the Lakers' return home will be decisive.

"We're still up 3-2 and that's what counts," Johnson said. "We've been playing well in L.A. On Sunday, we're going to win."

Scott agreed with Riley that the Celtics appeared to want to win Game 5 more than Los Angeles.

"It was in the back of our minds that if we lost, we could take care of it in L.A. I don't think they can beat us two more games, not in L.A."

The Celtics are the 19th team that has fallen behind 3-1 in a championship series, and none previously has overcome the deficit.

Danny Ainge, who hit five 3-point shots and had 21 points Thursday night as all five Boston starters scored at least that many, said the Celtics will have to hustle at the Forum the way they did for three games at Boston Garden.

"We have to pay the price on transition defense," Ainge said. "We didn't do it the first two games, but we did it the last three."

Kevin McHale, who had 22 points and 14 rebounds in Game 5, said the Celtics have "to rebound psychologically from losing their last six road games in the playoffs, all but one by at least 10 points."

"We haven't been a great road team this year," McHale said. "We have to regroup and make up our minds to win. I've said before than when this team sets its mind to it and gets that will to win, we're very tough to beat."

"We have to rebound, rebound, rebound and play aggressive. We can't let them run. We have to control the boards, play with intensity and slow them down."

"I'm less pride in my work, price in being a Boston Celtic. We have to go out there and give the best effort possible."

Larry Bird, who scored 18 of his 23 points in the first half as the Celtics grabbed a 63-48 halftime lead, said that home teams seem to get most of the lucky bounces, and Boston will have to fight that tendency.

"In the first two games, the Lakers got all the loose balls," Bird said. "We've got to be more aggressive. We're still the underdogs and until we go out there and beat the Lakers, we're not going to open anyone's eyes."

Bird said that the Celtics' state of mind would have been quite different if they hadn't blown two leads in Game 4 — a 16-point bulge in the third quarter and an eight-point edge with 3:30 left.

"Game 4 was there for us to win and we let it slip away," Bird said.

Spinks calls sport's inherent danger his only fear in boxing

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Michael Spinks is scared, but not of any man in the ring.

"I'm no chicken," said Spinks, who will fight big power-punching Gerry Cooney Monday night at the Atlantic City Convention Hall.

"I'm not scared of Gerry Cooney. I wasn't scared of Larry Holmes."

It's the unseen — opponent, "danger" that Spinks admits to fearing. Few fighters will talk about it publicly.

"It's life threatening. I'll tell you," Spinks said Friday of his profession. "It's terrifying at times."

"But I do it for a living. I'm wrapped up in boxing."

In Spinks' case "I do it for a living" must be underscored.

"I don't think I could fight knowing I never would be a champion," he said. "I couldn't do it just for the sport of it."

Spinks, who turned pro after winning a gold medal in the 1976 Olympics at Montreal, has won all 30 of his pro fights, 20 by knockout. He has earned probably between $10 million and $15 million, including a $4 million guarantee for Monday night's match.

Spinks became the first light-heavyweight champion to win a heavyweight title when he scored a close, but unanimous 15-round decision over Holmes for the International Boxing Federation championship Sept. 21, 1985.

In the rematch against Holmes, April 19, 1986, Spinks was hurt badly by a right hand to the temple in the 14th round. He didn't try to grab or fight back. He turned his body and moved quickly away from Holmes.

"I didn't run from Larry Holmes," Spinks said with a smile. "I tried to make it difficult for him to have his way."

"I never run from anybody," Spinks said. Then, grinning, he added, "Not that I won't. I'll run like Carl Lewis if I have to."

But Spinks returned to the starting blocks after his sprint away from Holmes. Before the round ended, Spinks rallied with a flurry of punches to the head.

Movement is the slingshot Spinks is going to have to use against Cooney, especially in the early rounds.

The 6-foot-7 Cooney, who has scored 24 knockouts in posting a 28-1 record, has advantages of 4 1/2 inches in height and five inches in reach over Spinks and probably will outweigh him by 30 to 35 pounds.

"Michael will have hope Gerry goes to the frustrator," said Holmes, who made Cooney tired and frustrated when he stopped him in the 13th round of a World Boxing Council title defense June 11, 1982.

It was Holmes who got tired and frustrated in his two fights against Spinks. He was hurt when Spinks came back to win his final round on two of the three official scorecards and win a split decision.

After he defended the title with a fourth-round-knockout-of-Stefan Tangstad last Sept. 6, the IBF withdrew championship recognition from Spinks because he refused to make a mandatory defense against Tony Tucker.

Promoter Butch Lewis is billing Monday night's fight as being for the heavyweight championship, but only the Florida and District of Columbia commissions are recognizing it as a title bout.

Tucker now is the IBF champion, while Mike Tyson is recognized as champion by the WBC and World Boxing Association.

Edwards to help minorities

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth said Friday that sociologist Harry Edwards will assist the major leagues in boosting minority employment on and off the field.

Ueberroth said Edwards will coordinate a project designed to locate and evaluate blacks and Hispanics who had relatively short, undistinguished playing careers but who might be interested in returning to the game to work in other capacities.

Ueberroth said Edwards, perhaps best known for organizing a protest by black athletes at the 1968 Summer Olympics in Mexico City, will not leave his job in California for baseball.

"Harry Edwards is a full-tenured professor at Berkeley and not coming to work directly for me," the commissioner said. "He's going to stay a professor at Berkeley, but he's going to help with a project we'd like to announce later."

At a press conference in Berkeley, Calif., Edwards said the move to bring more blacks into baseball has been going on since Ueberroth took office.

"This was very high on Peter Ueberroth's agenda," he said. "He's been discussing this with the owners since his initiation in that position. What Mr. Campanis did was speed up the process, to get it a kind of high profile that probably would have been impossible without that development."

"Harry's good at it. He's effective. He's done it before," said Ueberroth. "That's the general direction we're going. We have no agreement with Harry, but hope to have one."

Ballesteros has Westchester lead

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Seve Ballesteros birdied three of his last four holes for a 4-under-par 67 Friday that put him one stroke in front of the two rounds of the $600,000 Westchester Classic.

"The conditions were a little more tough today. The course played longer, and we played in the rain most of the day," said Ballesteros.

"It's a little more uncomfortable playing in the rain," added the globe-trotting Spaniard, who owns more than 50 international victories.

Ballesteros, a playoff loser at the Masters earlier this year, reached the halfway point in 133, 9 shots under par on the Westchester Country Club course, which was dampened by day-long showers.

Ballesteros, who started play from the 10th tee, dropped a 25-foot putt for birdie on the 18th and made the turn at 1-over for the day.

He made his big move late in the cool, cloudy day with wedge shots that gave him putts of less than five feet on both the sixth and seventh.

He closed it out with a 2-putt birdie-4 on the ninth.

Soft-spoken Mike Reid, who has collected more than $1 million in earnings but is still seeking his first victory in 11 years of PGA Tour activity, moved into second with a bogey-free 66.

He was one stroke back at 134 in the chase for a $108,000 first prize.

Doug Tewell, who had a second consecutive round of 68 on the relatively short, hilly course in suburban New York, was next at 135.

First-round leader Sandy Lyle of Scotland, Jay Haas and Loren Roberts followed at 137, four off the pace.

Lyle, who played a rain-soaked afternoon round, had a double-bogey and struggled to a 7-over 72. Roberts matched par with a 71 and Haas had a 69.

Jack Nicklaus, who won the first Westchester tournament in 1967 and holds a record 18 major professional titles, got an early start on his trip to San Francisco and next week's U.S. Open.

Nicklaus struggled to a 76 and failed to qualify for the final two rounds at 153, 9-over par.

Defending champion Bob Tway, the PGA title-holder, also missed the cut. His 72 gave him a 36-hole score of 147.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® BOBBY WOLFF

"When you ace at sea, keep clear of the land."
— Publilius Syrus.

South became preoccupied with the glitter of today's spades and diamonds. In the process, he lost his chance to use his earthly clubs.

Dummy's spade 10 was covered by East's queen, and South won the ace. A diamond was led to dummy's 10 and East's jack, and a spade return was won in dummy. Dummy's club king was offered but there were no takers. The second club lead was won by West's ace. Back came another spade to put the lead in dummy, and South was stuck. He was lucky to be able to develop dummy's fifth diamond to hold his losses to only one.

South managed a few choice words about his bad luck with diamonds, still overlooking the sure shot he had in the club suit.

To make the game, South must refuse the "free finesse" at trick one. Instead of finessing, he must rise with dummy's king to immediately switch to the king of clubs.

West ducks, but another club to South's nine succeeds in driving out the ace. South's clubs are established while his spade entry is still intact and instead of going one down, South can run off nine sure winners.
