Iranian embassy denies hostages taken to Tehran

By RIMA SALAMEH
The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Iran denied Sunday reports that Terry Waite and some of the Americans kidnapped in Lebanon were taken to Iran. A London newspaper said, meanwhile, that Waite's captors believe he was involved in the U.S.-Iran arms-for-hostages deal.

The Church of England has denied that Waite, the personal emissary of the archbishop of Canterbury, was in any way involved in the arms sale to Iran.

In Washington, White House spokesman Dan Howard called the London Sunday Telegraph report "baldheaded."

The newspaper said there was little chance Waite might soon be released because he "has fallen victim to the widespread belief in the United States" in his efforts to free Americans and other foreigners held in this country.

Church of England spokeswoman Eve Keatley had no comment in London Sunday on the report. She said the church received many reports from Beirut, the capital of Lebanon, concerning Waite and they "are often conflicting."

The Sunday Telegraph based its assessment of Waite's status largely on interviews with militia officials and pro-Iranian sources in Moslem west Beirut — specifically on an Iranian, chief Middle East correspondent for the Progressive Socialist Party, whose Druse militia guarded Waite until he disappeared Jan. 20.

Waite vanished in Beirut while trying to secure the release of hostages held by the pro-Iranian Islamic Jihad, or Holy War.

The Sunday Telegraph said Waite was mainly seeking freedom for Americans Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for the Associated Press, and Thomas Sutherland, acting dean of agriculture at the American University in Beirut.

It said Islamic Jihad first accepted Waite's assurances that he was acting solely as a representative of the church.

But later the kidnappers decided he was a U.S. agent after learning that Waite had meetings in Washington with former White House aide Lt. Col. Oliver North.

North was dismissed after last November's revelation that U.S. arms were sold to Iran without congressional authorization.

In May 1986, North and former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane went to Tehran with a plane load of arms and spare parts in hopes of freeing hostages. A planned second plane load was not delivered because no hostages were released.

Democrats fear gulf policy puts U.S. at odds with Iran

By TIM AHERN
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration's decision to protect Kuwaiti oil tankers signals a tilt toward Iraq in the Persian Gulf war and could lead to a potentially disastrous conflict with Iran, two senior Democratic senators said Sunday.

"The Kuwaiti flagging is a symbol of the absence of policy," said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Another key senator, Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said that "Iran is likely to see assistance tendered to Iraq's ally as pro-veillance."

"In devising a response to the gulf crisis, the administration should focus on ending the Iran-Iraq war and not on a course that risks an American-Iranian clash," Pell wrote in a commentary appearing in the Sunday's editions of The New York Times.

Nunn, interviewed on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," said the decision to fly the Stars and Stripes from 11 of Kuwait's 22 oil tankers, and to offer them U.S. Navy protection in the gulf, signals "that we have basically taken a strong tilt towards Iraq."

Such a shift from the official neutrality Washington has observed since the war began in September 1980 "ought to be debated on its own merits and not on the illusion that we are really protecting the free flow of oil," Nunn said.

Pell and Nunn urged joint action with Moscow to stop the fighting between Iran and Iraq, which has claimed an estimated 1 million casualties and spilled over into the so-called "Tanker War" in the gulf.

"Working with the Soviet Union is likely to contain the war and constrain the Soviet presence in the gulf," Pell said. "By contrast, a United States-Iranian military clash could bring the Soviet Union in for the Soviet Union and the region."

Nunn said that while "the United States and the Soviet Union may have a convergence ICL asks for a big helping of wilderness:

Boulders focus of wilderness, says ICL

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — As politicians and interest groups wrestle over areas to be included in an Idaho wilderness bill, it is clear some part of the Boulder-White Clounds northeast of Ketchum is a likely choice, says a spokesman for the Idaho Conservation League.

"The question is how much and what drainages are included," says Pat Ford, ICL's new public lands coordinator. Ford replaces Rick Johnson, who took a similar position with the Sierra Club in Seattle.

Castle Peak, an 11,200-foot peak, is the Boulder-White Clounds and during the last go-around on the wilderness issue Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, supported including the White Clounds in the wilderness bill. When negotiations between the Congressional delegation and the conservationists broke down, the two sides were more than 500,000 acres apart.

If ICL gets its way, some 453,000 acres of the Boulder-White Clounds would be included in a wilderness bill. McClure isn't talking about specific areas this time but is waiting to discuss the wilderness situation with Gov. Cecil Andrus, says McClure spokesman.

"Any negotiation will be area by area. We may be looking at the White Clounds. Time will tell," says the spokesman.

The Boulder-White Clounds area is a triangle bounded by Stanley to the west, Clayton to the east and Highway 75 near Galena Summit to the south. Most of the White Clounds is in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area but not much of the Boulders, says Ford.

The acreage is nearly all roadless and, under the wilderness classification, mechanized vehicles would be banned. However, hunting and fishing could continue, says ICL.

ICL is seeking a total of 3.9 million acres of wilderness. Their proposal includes 130,000 acres in the Smoky area, southwest of the Boulder-White Clounds and 182,000 acres in the Pioneer Mountains east of Ketchum.

The Pioneers offer spectacular mountain scenery. The Smoky area is noted for its elk hunting and fishing.

The Boulder-White Clounds would represent the largest potential addition to the national wilderness system of the lower 48 states, according to ICL. The White Clounds get their name by the way the mountain tops resemble clouds when illuminated by the late afternoon light.

"The scenic value is immense. We are supporting it not just because of that. Jobs depend on the continued recreational character of the area," Ford says. There is a lot of hiking and fishing on East Fork of the Salmon and in mountain lakes. The tourists visiting the Boulder-White Clounds help Stanley in the summer, he says.

The east side of the area contains important salmon and steelhead habitat and should be part of the wilderness designation, says ICL.

The University of Idaho is studying the area.

Growing numbers of illegal aliens seek citizenship

By TAD BARTIMUS
The Associated Press

Illegal immigrants are overcoming distrust of the government's unprecedented amnesty program and are applying in increasing numbers to become citizens, say social services and immigration officials in the West.

"They are realizing this amnesty program isn't a big sting operation," said Chyna Coultice, assistant director for legalization in the Immigration and Naturalization Service's western district office in Los Angeles.

On May 5, the day the program began, we fed 122 applications into the computer," said Ms. Coultice. "One month later we fed 3,555 into the computer in one day. That shows you the difference. We are now starting to go into an overtime mode to cope with the applications!" Under the Immigration Reform and Control Act passed last November, an estimated 3 million to 4-million illegal aliens are expected to apply for the one-time, one-year citizenship offer. They must have entered the United States before Jan. 1, 1982, to qualify.

As of June 3, only 62,431 people had applied, most of them in the South and West. Of those, 51,034 illegal aliens were issued temporary work authorization cards.

However, the INS says it has given out about 900,000 amnesty applications. Therefore, it appears that thousands of illegal immigrants, rather than going directly to INS offices, have chosen to use intermediary services to help them fill out the applications.

"As of June 5, 325,000 people have registered with Catholic Charities of Los Angeles," said Linea Dahlstrom, director of communications for the agency. "We were flooded with people who came to us, and I believe the program is a success."

"There's still a little bit of fear and we have to reassure them, but the applicants are coming in astronomical numbers. The logistics for getting such a program up and running are huge."

The U.S. Catholic Conference, along with about 200 other religious, civic and community groups, offers counseling services to help aliens fill out the INS forms.

Ms. Dahlstrom said Catholic Charities asks for a $55 donation per application, "but nobody is turned away." Volunteer case workers help illegal immigrants gather documents needed to prove they qualify for citizenship, such as pay stubs, rent receipts, utility bills or school records that show they have lived continuously in this country, with only brief absences.

The counseling service also helps arrange for health examinations, fingerprints and photographs, and then delivers the documents to INS offices.

"Our case workers receive a receipt for the documents, a temporary work permit for the applicant, and arrange a date for the client's interview with the INS," said Ms. Dahlstrom.

As of June 5, said Ms. Coultice, the INS's western region, encompassing California, Arizona, Nevada, Hawaii and Guam, had received 23,624.

Bakkers silent on Chapter 11

TEGA CAY, S.C. (AP) — Former PTL leader Jim Bakker and his wife Tammy, remained silent about their next move Sunday, while some PTL supporters and their families gathered at the television ministry.

The Bakkers, who have been ordered to vacate the PTL-owned Tega Cay home, have been in seclusion there until Sunday afternoon, then drove off to an undisclosed location.

Since they returned to the house Wednesday night, they have said they expect to be on television within 30 days but have not said where.

Bakker admitted to a sexual encounter with a church secretary and resigned in March from the ministry he founded. The Rev. Jerry Falwell, Independent Baptist and Moral Majority founder, took over the financially troubled PTL operation.

Last Friday, PTL filed for protection from creditors while reorganizing under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code. The Bakkers have had no comment on the filing.

The Chapter 11 petition filed in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Columbia showed 1,400 creditors are owed $72 million, with assets at $179 million. Falwell blames Bakker and his associates for the money crisis.

Falwell said from Lynchburg, Va., on Sunday that PTL had no other choice.

"Certainly it is not ideal and nobody down there thinks it is. It just right now, happens to be the only alternative to dissolution and the disappearance of the ministry," he said.

Falwell said that since Bakker's resignation he has seen so many examples of financial and sexual improprieties that he would never allow Bakker to return as its leader.

PTL faces criminal investigations by the Justice Department, the Internal Revenue Service and the Postal Service.

Don Hardister, the Bakkers' bodyguard, said the Bakkers planned to spend about a week packing the contents of the Tega Cay house before returning to their home in Palm Springs, Calif.

The Sunday Telegraph based its assessment of Waite's status largely on interviews with militia officials in Beirut. The militia officials said Waite was in Beirut — specifically on an inquiry by the Progressive Socialist Party, whose Druse militia guarded Waite's residence in Beirut.

Waite vanished in Beirut while trying to secure the release of hostages held by the pro-Iranian Islamic Jihad, or Holy Army.

Richard P. Taylor, a spokesman for the American Embassy in Beirut, said Waite was mainly seeking freedom for Americans Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of the Sunday Press, and Thomas Sutherland, acting dean of agriculture at the American University in Beirut.

Islamic Jihad first accepted Waite's assurances that he was acting solely as a representative of the church.

But after the kidnapers decided that Waite had meetings in Washington with former White House aide Lt. Col. Oliver North, they were released after last November's revelation that U.S. arms were sold to Iran without congressional authorization.

North, President and former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane went to Tehran with a plane load of arms and spare parts in hopes of greater hostages.

Anderson and Sutherland, a plane load of arms was not delivered because no hostages were released.

The fate of Terry Waite and why he was arrested.

The official daily Al-Itihaad of Abu Dhabi said Saturday that Waite was taken to Tehran for talks with Iranian officials, and was close to freedom until Iranian leaders broke off contacts with him.

The Iranian Embassy in Beirut on Sunday denied the Al-Itihaad report and a story in Saturday's Ash-Shiraa saying some of the eight missing hostages have been taken to Iran, where a powerful anti-American faction wants to put them on trial.

"None of the hostages is in Tehran. The Iranian Islamic Republic has nothing to do with the hostages, whoever they are," said a spokesman for the embassy's press section.

Ash-Shiraa said a more moderate Iranian group favors a trade of the hostages for frozen Iranian assets in the United States and U.S. weapons bought by pre-revolution Iran and never shipped.

Mystery has shrouded Waite's disappearance. No group has claimed responsibility.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Pete Martinez said Saturday the United States had no information to substantiate Ash-Shiraa's report.

Ash-Shiraa said Hussein Ali Montazeri, leader of a radical Iranian faction, "demands" that the American hostages in particular be brought to trial, especially since some of them have already been taken to Iran.

Montazeri is the designated successor of Iran's supreme ruler, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Ash-Shiraa attributed its information to "sources close to Montazeri's office" in the holy city of Qom.

Groups believed made up of Shiite Muslims loyal to Khomeini have claimed the kidnappings of seven of the American hostages as education and feared kidnaped in Lebanon since March 1985 — six Frenchmen, two Britons, two West Germans, an Italian, an Irishman, a South Korean, an Indian and two unidentified foreigners.

Besides Anderson and Sutherland, the American hostages are Joseph James Cleppio, acting comptroller at the university; Frank Herbert Reed, American director of the Lebanese International School; Edward Austin Tracy, a writer; and Beirut University College education Robert Pothill, Alann Steen, and Jesse Jonathan Turner.

U.S. soldier shot while on patrol in Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — A U.S. soldier was shot to death Saturday night while on patrol at a U.S. air base, a base spokesman said.

The U.S. and Honduran officials are treating the killing as a homicide, not as terrorism, Capt. Ron Eschmann, military press officer for Palmerola Air Base, 100 miles north of Tegucigalpa.

Army Staff Sgt. Randall J. Harris, 31, of Wilmington, Ohio, was shot at about 10 p.m. while on duty as a military patrol supervisor near the front gate inside the base, said Eschmann, contacted in Tegucigalpa.

He said the sergeant received three gunshot wounds and was pronounced dead 30 minutes later at Palmerola Army Hospital.

Eschmann said no one else was wounded in the shooting. It was not known if another American soldier or a Honduran was responsible, he said.

"There is no suspect at this time and the U.S. and Honduran officials are pursuing every available source," he said.

"At the present time, there isn't any evidence of a specific threat to U.S. forces in Honduras," and the base did not go on alert, he said.

Harris was with the 78th Military Police Company out of Fort Bliss, Texas, which is stationed at Palmerola Air Base for a four month tour duty.

He is survived by his wife, Cheryl, and three children, Eschmann said.

The United States and Honduras have conducted nearly continuous joint exercises here since 1983.

Today's weather

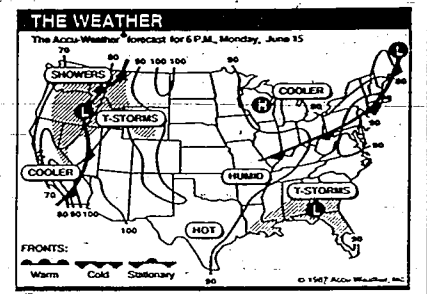

Cooling trend sets in, chance of rain

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding:

Today and Tuesday, cooling trend with a chance of more afternoon and evening thunderstorms. Highs 70 today, cooling into the 70s Tuesday. Lows in the 50s tonight.

Camas Prairie, Hailey and Lower Wood River Valley:

The newspaper quoted Hassan Sabra, who edits the Beirut weekly magazine Ash-Shiraa, which broke the story of the arms sale to Iran, as saying Iran ordered Waite kidnapped.

Sabra believes Waite was acting on behalf of the U.S. government, according to a Persian official who led an inquiry into Waite's disappearance, as saying the kidnapers "knew something that only Terry Waite knew and we didn't, it was about Iran."

legalization applications and "the denial rate is under 1 percent."

"That statistic points out that we really are looking to admit people and not deny the citizenship," said Ms. Cochrane, "just been recently that word is getting out and that people realize we are working rapidly to legalize them."

Los Angeles is believed to have the largest number of illegal aliens of any U.S. city.

In Denver, the pattern is the same, said Jim Mack, director of the Denver Immigration Services.

"We're one month into the program and I already have 2,000 applications in the pipeline, said Mack. He estimates that the total will be 8,000 applications during the entire year. I think we're right on target."

Michael Rouse, deputy director of the Denver INS office, said there were 13 applicants on May 5, and "we got 21 people in the door on June 5."

"We haven't been stamped, but the numbers are increasing steadily and we're proud of our statistics," said Rouse.

Applications with preliminary approval are sent to one of four regional INS processing centers where a security check is completed.

As of June 5, estimates that no applications have reached the final step, which is temporary residency. An INS spokesman estimated it will be another month or two before the first permanent resident card is issued under the program.

ing whether the Boulder-White Clouds would be suitable for a national park. The idea was proposed by Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, as a way to preserve the area and boost Idaho's tourism. Reaction to Craig's proposal among conservationists was mixed and what impact Craig's idea will have on the wilderness debate is a question mark at this point.

Ford says the Boulder-White Clouds are among the four or five areas that have the strongest support for wilderness designation.

But the Blue Ribbon Coalition, a coalition of conservationists and sportsmen, says there are trails for motorized vehicles in the Boulder-White Clouds and the coalition wants some of them preserved, says Gline, ribbon executive director. Last spring the coalition tried to negotiate boundaries between wilderness and non-wilderness areas, but the Blue Ribbon Coalition is not willing to do so, he says. The coalition is still willing to negotiate, Collins says.

Other environmental organizations such as the Sierra Club and the Wilderness Society are supporting wilderness for the Boulder-White Clouds. "We're not sure if the State Auditor and Society chapters and the Idaho Sportsmen's Coalition support it, he says.

The Idaho Wildlife Federation, an affiliate of the National Wildlife Federation, is looking at including the Boulder-White Clouds in its wilderness proposal. "We haven't done an acre acreage figure, but we are looking at each area," says Kent Henderson, Idaho Wildlife Federation executive director. Wilderness designations should be settled on an area by area basis, he says.

Copies of all the textbooks used in Idaho kept in library

By DAVE FIELDS
The Associated Press

BOISE — Occupying two full rooms on the second floor of the Len B. Jordan Office Building are copies of each textbook found in Idaho public school classrooms.

It is estimated that the Idaho Department of Education-administered library contains 1,500-2,000 volumes. Guarantees are that up to 300 of them will be replaced by this time next year.

Every year, the state Textbook Adoption Committee reviews books for at least two subjects, and recommends replacing all textbooks every five years. Not all districts can keep up with the expense.

Idaho is one of 23 states that approves textbooks at the state level. In other states, it's left up to school districts.

Idaho's system of textbook adoption has been used for as long as any Education Department official can remember. But while it may be time-tested, it still draws complaints from some school officials.

Some districts cannot afford a new batch of books every year. Most textbooks for elementary students cost from $10 to $18. Secondary textbooks cost from $15 to $20.

Some district officials say the cost is so exorbitant that they have not replaced some textbooks for years.

Daniel Geery is a third-grade teacher at Shelley's Deere Woods Elementary School. The only science texts at his disposal are 24 years old, he said.

While these books are still in reasonably good shape, he said, information unavailable in newer texts, "there are not enough of them to provide teachers with the foundation for a science program, he said.

There are only 30 books for the school's 210 third-graders. In the end, the children are the ones who suffer, Geery said.

"I think they're being hurt quite dramatically," he said.

While other schools may not wait 24 years before adopting a text, they have not been able to stay current with Idaho's five-year cycle.

Bonneville School District 93 missed the cycle five years ago when social studies textbooks were adopted. The reason was lack of funding.

While the district has not missed the cycle since, Lynn Olsen, assistant superintendent for academic affairs, said he would prefer a five-year cycle.

Olsen said some subjects, such as math and English, do not change much over the years. Buying books in these areas every five years is not always warranted.

But an Education Department official counters that books can only last so long after being tossed into school lockers and passed down from student to student.

"After five years, that book's use is limited," said Orville Reddington, executive secretary of the state Textbook and Improvement of Education Committee.

Jean Burtenshaw, Idaho Falls School District curriculum director, disagrees. She said elementary books last longer than those used by older students because they do not receive as much abuse.

District 91 waited one year past the state's adoption date before it purchased speech and English books. The texts the district already had on these subjects were not outdated and were still in good condition for another year's use, she said.

Burtenshaw suggests that a seven-to-eight-year cycle be used for these books. But the rapidly changing social studies texts should be reviewed on the current cycle.

Reddington said the committee has considered the suggestion but hasn't gone along because it probably would prove just as costly in the long run.

After five years, school officials still will have to replace up to 80 percent of their books, he said. Replacing them would cost almost as much as a new adoption, while also leaving them with obsolete books.

Nonetheless, state education officials are sympathetic to the needs of schools and acknowledge that the five-year cycle is beyond the range of a real problem.

"That's a real problem for us, because I don't think there are many schools that can be on the five-year adoption cycle and that's because of a lack of funds," Reddington said.

He said schools have more freedom than you might expect to choose texts.

Idaho's contract with publishers guarantees that the cost of an adopted textbook will remain constant for the length of the cycle, a stipulation that gives districts up to five years to purchase a book before a price change.

While educators disagree on the length of the adoption cycle, most agree that they are given a sufficient choice of texts.

The textbook adoption committee approves more than one textbook choice for each subject area.

Shelley residents concerned about proposed power plant

SHELLEY (AP) — People who live along the Snake River here have a lot of questions, but not many answers, about a proposed 10-megawatt power plant.

The city of Idaho Falls plans to build it on the river, just over the dividing line into Bingham County.

Local residents say they are sure why the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) advertised the proposal in the Aberdeen Times instead of the Shelley Pioneer or the county's official publication, the Blackfoot Morning News.

Residents along the river have been told the project would raise the water table. No one is saying how that will impact their water and sewage systems — or the basements that will then be below the water level.

If the plant is built as planned, a portion of the free-flowing water will be cut back to still water. Residents say they are concerned about the water stagnating and creating a health problem.

These questions are being pursued by a group of more than 70 concerned area residents. They have formed a group called Save Our Snake (SOS) to seek answers and alternatives to the proposed plant.

"We organized to have more clout," said Shirleen Long. "Now, we are just waiting for answers to all the questions that keep coming up."

FERC advertised the proposed hydro project in the Aberdeen Times because information provided to the organization stated that was the closest newspaper to the project. Idaho Congressman Richard Stallings' office was not contacted and project manager in Washington D.C. did not provide any information.

Dispute hot over management of employees' pension monies

POCATELLO (AP) — The chairman of the Tacoma, Wash., company now selecting money managers for the controversial Idaho Employees Pension Fund says the fund is finally receiving "state of the art" management.

But the head of the trust department of an Idaho bank that lost control or custody of $270 million from the fund says this bank was never given a fair chance to either manage the money or serve as custodian of the fund.

Control of the about $1.2 billion in assets in the pension fund has been a hot topic in the state recently. Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus has vowed to replace every member of the pension fund board until he has enough votes to return control of the fund to Idaho.

Board Chairman Maria Eschen, however, said the trustees are mandated by law to get the best return on the fund for its investment. As a result, the board voted last fall to remove control of much of the fund from four Idaho banks and to hire the Frank Russell Co. of Tacoma to serve as "master trustee" of 90 percent of the fund.

George Russell, chairman of the Russell company, said the Idaho pension fund wasn't getting the best return for its investment because it was using an outmoded management approach known as the "balanced bank" approach.

Under that method, four Idaho banks were charged with investing, or deciding who would invest, almost half of the pension fund assets. The result, say pension fund board members, is that Idaho's pension fund was ranked in the bottom third of 900 similar pension funds on rate of return.

The Russell company, meanwhile, advises pension fund trustees on what kind of investment mix they should use and which specific money managers to hire to handle each of those investments.

"We asked ourselves if any of the Idaho banks — and, for that matter any of the Oregon, Wyoming or Washington banks — were sufficiently staffed, experienced and recognized as first-rate candidates to manage large pools of capital," said Russell. "After our 18 years of manager research, we said, 'No, they're not on our list.'"

Russell quickly added that Idaho banks are "probably the most capable" to handle certain assets, such as Idaho mortgages, and for that reason, the four banks are still managing these assets.

But the vast majority of the pension fund has been transferred to Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh, the new "custodian" bank, and is being managed by a wide variety of money managers spread around the country.

Board members have been quoted as saying the Idaho banks simply didn't measure up in managing the pension fund assets and that the Idaho banks were warned over a three-year period they would lose the funds if they didn't perform better.

Bar president and Soviet forge courts agreement

BOISE (AP) — American Bar Association President Eugene Thomas of Boise says that he and his Soviet counterpart have agreed to arrange for Soviet and American lawyers to watch court proceedings in each other's countries.

Thomas said Saturday that he and Alexander Sukharev, president of the Association of Soviet Lawyers, will seek free and open observations of trials and other judicial proceedings.

Sukharev also is minister of justice of the Russian Soviet Federative Socialist Republic, Thomas said.

He acknowledged that member lawyers of both organizations would have to agree to the project and that governmental cooperation would be necessary.

Thomas said the agreement was reached in Boise last week during a six-city U.S. tour by Sukharev and other Soviet lawyers.

"This is an example of solid achievement in the advancement of human rights and improvement of justice," Thomas said.

"Critics and skeptics of our dialogue with the ASL have long urged me to pursue a national observer program between our nations," he said. "In fact, I have been working on this with Mr. Sukharev for a very long time, pre-dating those suggestions from others, but public announcement would have been premature without a solid understanding. Now I have that."

"In our final conference in Boise, we settled upon our commitment as the presidents of the Association of Soviet Lawyers, and in a detailed discussion, we left no ambiguity and concluded with a handshake."

Showers' bounty not end to drought

What a difference a few weeks makes. A short time back, this space was devoted to a speculative examination of whether all signs of relief fall in dry weather. In the intervening time, the unusually warm, dry period of early spring has been succeeded by more moderate temperatures and a spell of unsettled conditions which have brewed up thunderheads almost every afternoon — and, perhaps more importantly, some accompanying showers.

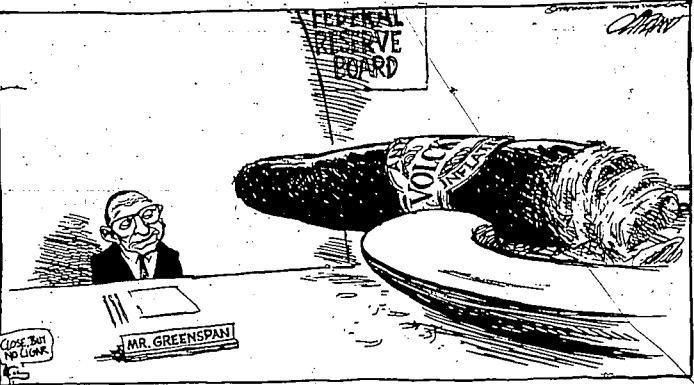

This trend apparently climaxed last Sunday afternoon when a series of fast moving storms drenched a wide strip of Magic Valley. The most spectacular of these deluges touched off mud slides in the Thousand Springs vicinity and created surface flooding of fields, homes and streets in and around Twin Falls. Along with providing some natural refreshment for the dry ground, the development of such storms was, to a degree, reassuring in that they showed it can still happen.

While this spell of milder temperatures and periodic showers has been welcomed across southern Idaho, it should be remembered that a few drops of rain do not the end of a drought make. The underlying conditions which caused declarations of emergencies in several counties of Idaho still exist — low irrigation water supplies, prospects for reduced crops, the potential for extremely dangerous fire conditions on both range and forest lands.

Only a long term change in the weather patterns, one extending into and through a winter season to provide ample snowpack to recharge reservoirs and ground water supplies will break a drought. Most Magic Valley residents are currently hoping fervently that is what the future holds — for the alternative is extremely grim and not at all pleasant to contemplate.

At the same time, most people are enjoying the respite from extreme temperatures and are appreciative of the moisture — scattered and limited though it may be — which has fallen over the past few weeks.

And as for the signs, well, sometimes they do point to a change, although it may be somewhere down the road.

The hyperbolic rhetoric used to describe the role of Paul A. Volcker at the Federal Reserve Board — Czar of the American Money Supply, The Man Who Cured Inflation — should not be confused with reality.

Being chairman of the Fed "ain't" what it used to be, and "what it used to be" was never the way it often is portrayed in the financial press. Legally, the Federal Reserve is in charge of determining the American money supply. But with the development of a world capital market, "the American money supply" has ceased to exist. The reality is a world money supply of which the dollar is only one part.

One can do business in the United States using German marks, Japanese yen or any other convertible currency. One can borrow Eurodollars in London that are not subject to the controls of the Fed. You and I can do a deal in the Bahamas without either of us being there. Real interest rates are more affected by Japanese decisions about whether to lend in American capital markets than they are by the actions of the Federal Reserve chairman.

Rather than being the czar of the American money supply, the Fed chairman is at best a leader of a team of central bankers who determine the world's money supply. But the chairman of the Fed is not at all best.

With the U.S. having become the world's largest net debtor nation, it is not at all clear that the Fed chairman is first among equals. The first among equals, if he chooses to be, is the central banker who represents the nation that is the world's largest net lender and that is Japan. As all of us have learned in our own personal dealings, borrowers always hold a subsidiary position to lenders.

Moreover, given a little-known quirk in American banking regulations, the Fed chairman is not even the leader of the American team in determining the world's money supply. By law, the U.S. Treasury determines all American decisions to manage the money supply by buying and selling currencies. The Fed is merely the operating arm of the Treasury when it comes to international maneuvers.

The Treasury also conducts all international financial negotiations. Internationally, the Fed has no independent powers of action. It must follow the instructions of the Treasury and ultimately the policies of the president.

Yet the power to buy or sell currencies is the power to control the number of dollars issued by the Fed. If the Treasury orders the Fed to sell dollars, the world's supply of dollars increases. If the Treasury orders the Fed to buy dollars, the world's supply of dollars contracts.

Because of the importance of international capital markets, the Fed essentially has lost its importance. It retains the legal ability to control the domestic money supply, but there is no domestic money supply that can be isolated from the international money supply. The regulations remain, but what is to be regulated has disappeared.

Even in the past, the Fed's independent powers were limited. The Fed has preserved its legal independence from the executive arm of the president by never using its independence when an incumbent administration knew what it wanted and was determined to get what it wanted.

The Fed's only independence comes when the administration doesn't know what it wants. When the Carter administration wanted restrictions on credit cards in 1980, it got them even though the Fed did not agree with the action.

Occasionally, the president and the Fed chairman have played out an elaborate charade where the president pretends to be opposed to some Federal Reserve policy so that it can take the political blame for what the president knows must be done (President Johnson played out such charades several times during the Vietnam War), but I am aware of no instance in post-World War II history where the Fed chairman ever defied a determined president. If they ever did, they wouldn't long have their jobs and the Fed wouldn't long be independent.

Despite the rhetoric and praise, Volcker did not cure inflation. The rate of inflation fell because the prices of energy and farm products started to fall and because the Reagan administration was willing to tolerate a very severe recession in 1981-82 that forced labor to accept much lower wage gains.

In 1980, the price of energy rose 31 percent in the consumer price index; in 1986 it fell 13 percent. In 1980, the price of food rose 12 percent; in 1986 it fell 5 percent. None of this was caused by anything done at the Federal Reserve. Put a 31 percent increase in energy prices and a 12 percent increase in food prices back into the economy and no one doubts that inflation would be back to double-digit levels.

It is not clear whether Volcker jumped or was pushed off the bridge of the Fed, but to go down in history as the man that "cured" inflation, there never was a better time to jump.

With a falling dollar and a stagnant world economy, the United States can cure its balance of payments problems only by having inflation. The price of imports must go up to the point that Americans cease buying $70 billion of imports. Toys are more expensive than Mercedes and Mercedes must be priced like MX missiles.

The best that the Fed can hope to do is to keep import prices from spreading to domestic wages or prices. Expected inflation rates for 1987 are more than double those measured in 1986, and 1988 is expected to be still worse. When it comes to curbing inflation, Volcker has been more lucky than smart, but then there is nothing quite so good as good luck to make one look like a genius.

NRA attack displays governor's true colors

Cecil Andrus has finally shown his true colors in his emotional attack on the National Rifle Association: his flag looks more like Ed Kennedy's than it does like one from an Idahoan. That means gun control.

Every Idahoan should be grateful that Andrus "blew his cool" because we can now look behind the pancake make-up of Andrus the self-proclaimed sportsman to see the real man hiding beneath — Andrus the anti-gunner.

For those who still want to believe that Cecil is the sportsman's friend — especially some of the news media — consider this:

1. As Jimmy Carter's secretary of interior, Cecil signed an order closing to all hunting 20 million acres of prime hunting land in Alaska under the National Monument Lands Act. This is not opinion, it is fact, check it out. Would the "sportsman's friend" do that?
2. Cecil has served on the board of directors of such anti-hunting organizations as the Sierra Club — which advocate closing or restricting access to hunting.

3. Andrus has personally advocated additional wilderness lands in Idaho which would further restrict hunting access in state. Would the "sportsman's friend" do that?

4. The NRA reported last year that Andrus answered their questionnaire by saying he favored "waiting periods" for some gun purchases. Would the friend of gun owners do that?

It looks like Cecil spent too many years in Washington. He begins to sound more like a Kennedy clone than an Idahoan.

Oil supplies flowing steadily from gulf

VENICE — The only thing that has been flowing more rapidly than the Reagan administration's cries of alarm about the Persian Gulf in recent weeks has been the supply of oil being shipped from that region.

Production and exports from gulf countries are up. Prices are holding steady at $18 a barrel and OPEC is due to meet in two weeks to consider nothing upward its 15.8 million barrel a day ceiling on total production.

When the gap between the rhetoric of alarm about oil supplies and their abundance in the market place gets this wide, it is time to start looking for a hidden agenda. The administration acts as if it has seized upon a passing moment of tension to accomplish long-held goals that it cannot articulate openly.

My sense is that behind the smokescreen over Iran's Chinese Silkworm missiles lies a tangle of regional and global objectives that this administration will not be able to integrate into a successful policy in its twilight days.

More to the point, that is the sense of our most important allies, who were puzzled by the Reagan team's dramatic presentation of the stakes of the gulf conflict in public in the days before the Venice economic summit and that same team's diffident presentation of the issue in private here.

Three elements of the White House's true agenda seem clear. One is a campaign of coercive diplomacy aimed at getting Iran to stop attacking Iraq and to withdraw from Iraqi territory. Laudable, the goal of ending the gulf war is also probably unattainable by this lame-duck administration.

Secondly, the driving force behind the Silkworm campaign almost certainly comes from the Pentagon, which has long dreamed of getting basting rights at Dhahran in Saudi Arabia.

Saudi Arabia's royal family has always resisted this demand, fearing the political burden of an open military alliance with Israel's closest friend.

Finally, modest Soviet gains with Arab states have enabled Middle East experts in Washington to wrap their regional goals into a broader formulation about halting the Russian push into the Middle East.

Again, the result has been the opposite of what is intended. The administration's declarations on the gulf have underscored the reactive, me-too nature of its regional policy and the lack of sustainable independent American goals.

The administration in fact presents itself as being slow to apprehend that the oil trade has become surprisingly resilient in operating under war conditions.

Moreover, significant changes are already occurring in the patterns of the Persian Gulf oil trade. Iraq last month exported 2 million barrels of oil a day via pipelines and trucks that bypass the gulf. Iraq plans a new oil pipeline that will free it from depending on gulf shipping for oil exports.

International Energy Agency figures show that OPEC's production of oil has prevailed since December in the second quarter of this year, 600,000 barrels more than the quota the cartel adopted in December.

The failure of these increases to depress the $12 a barrel price that has prevailed since December suggests two immediate conclusions:

1. OPEC's oil ministers can in their meeting on June 25 easily increase the production ceiling to 16.5 million barrels a day for the next six months.
2. There is an undercurrent of stability in oil supplies that undermines Washington's outcries. The gap between rhetoric and reality should be narrowed as the basis for a policy that can command the support of the American public and America's Arab allies at the same time.

British election of '87 as important to U.S. as '88 will be LONDON — With a hint of insouciance, a quality not often ascribed to her, Margaret Thatcher began her quest for a third term by saying she might seek a fourth.

That was rash because humans are the only creatures neurologically complicated enough to become bored, and boredom makes voters volatile. However, she has watched content from her country and earned the gratitude of ours.

The British election of 1987 may have been as important to Americans as the American elections of 1988 will be. Thatcher defeated a man whose ascension to power would have begun the dissolution of NATO, the neutralization of Europe and the rise of American isolationism.

When in 1983 Neil Kinnock, the Labor Party leader, was asked whether the Soviet Union was a greater threat than the United States, he said, "There is an almost miserable equality of threat." Last month Kinnock, who favors unilateral nuclear disarmament for Britain, spoke of defending — if that is the word — Britain by "using the resources that you've got to make any portion of the Labor Party and is disproportionate in influence. Labor is far to the left of any socialist party that has ever governed in France or Germany; it is committed to unilateralism, a command economy and a controlled society. And it received about 32 percent of the vote. (The high tide of the French Communist Party was 28.6 percent in 1946.)

Had Labor won, Britain would have undergone a wrenching change far more radical than even that of 1945. Then Churchill, an anti-communist internationalist party will come to power. The question is: Will it be Labor and, if so, will it still be habitable to those who want Britain to succeed to the West?

George F. Will writes for Newsweek.

saying, and it often is more important to understand what he is being careful not to say.

Labor's barely spoken socialism is the same old stuff — high spending, paid for by being beastly to the Duke of Westminster, and taxing the "very rich," meaning anyone earning more than $40,000. Labor speaks for those who are wards of government, but even more for government as an interest group. Labor exemplifies what has been called "producer socialism," meaning the administration of the state for the benefit of those who administer social services.

Labor cannot comprehend this fact: Thatcher gains not primarily to those with a job, but to those with a modest amount who have much to lose from the probable consequences of Labor's program — increased taxation and inflation.

Labor's intellectual cupboard is bare which is a sign of change in times. George Orwell was only slightly exaggerating when he said, two generations ago, that Britain's last right-wing intellectual was T. E. Lawrence (Lawrence of Arabia). However, in Britain today, as in America, the direction of most ideological conversions is from left to right.

Socialism is about equality. Since Thatcher came to power in 1979, inequality has increased. This is central to her program. Thatcherism is, aggressively, a meritocratic antidote to decades of egalitarianism. Labor has no vocabulary for celebrating individual success and has always regarded prosperity as a political problem.

Americans in their sentimental anglophilia think of Britain as a temperate society in which politics partakes of the general civility. Not true. Politics here is constantly and increasingly more bitter than American politics has been in this century. Politics become bitter when the stakes become unhealthily high.

In 1983, Churchill said the differences between the parties were differences of emphasis, not of goals. But on Thursday, voters were choosing, as Americans have not had to do since the eve of the Civil War, between starkly different destinies.

Haig's political journey starts down in the dirt of a pig farm

By MIKE GLOVER
The Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — Confronted by a group of tiny feeder pigs, Alexander M. Haig, former secretary of state and presidential chief of staff, did what Iowans expect their politicians to do.

He stepped up a pig and cuddled it in the "Midwest version of kissing babies."

"This is a new experience for me, this politics," says Haig, a candidate for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination.

aware and former Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada each had one percent, while 8 percent were undecided in the survey of 347 Republicans. The poll had a margin of error of 5.3 percent.

Once the self-proclaimed "vicar" of American foreign policy, Haig, 62, is working to parlay a lifetime of working for others in the highest military and political circles into the Republican presidential nomination.

One of the first steps in that process is Iowa, where party activists who will participate in next February's precinct caucuses prefer to get to know the candidates on a one-on-one basis.

But Haig and his backers insist that electoral politics is the only thing new to the retired general, and they say a rich lode of experience and exposure to the American people will sell well in Iowa, where Haig faces a crucial early test next February.

"I've got to make a major effort in Iowa," said Steve Roberts, a Des Moines lawyer and GOP activist who backs Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas. "The Iowa jury is still out on Haig."

Backers concede that voters are reluctant to support a career military officer. There is also the image problem, perhaps best summed up by Haig's statement that he was in charge following the 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan.

Roberts said Haig must master the campaign style of local politicians.

"If you want to win Iowa, you've got to run like you're running for governor or senator," Roberts said.

Haig formally joined the GOP presidential field in March, and he's begun building the nucleus of a political organization.

"We are still in those first stumbling organizational days," said Ms. Blake, head of the Polk County Republican Party, an organization that includes Des Moines and roughly 10 percent of the state's registered Republicans.

"I put my hat in the ring at the end of March," Haig said. "George Bush has been running for 12 years. (New York Rep. Jack) Kemp and (Kansas Sen. Bob) Dole for eight years, respectively."

Darkie Blake, a consultant to the Haig campaign, notes that while many party professionals voice concern about Haig, "they sure do flock around when he's here."

"You don't achieve the kind of leadership positions he has if you don't pay attention to the people," Ms. Blake said. "I don't care what arena you're in."

Haig himself says face-to-face meetings with voters allows him to overcome the perceptions. "The in-charge kind of an image is now becoming less of an albatross," Haig said.

"His theme is competence, and he vows to take that message to the lunch counters and farms of Iowa. His crowds are good, a sign aides say means voters know him and want to see him, regardless of their views."

"There are not too many people who are right in the middle about him," said Jay Genard, who runs his Iowa campaign. "They are either one way or the other about him, but they're willing to come shake his hand, just to see this man they have an opinion about."

Some political activists see Haig taking savvy steps, like telephoning Republican farm activists and scheduling a private meeting during a recent Iowa swing.

"I'm impressed," said Graydon Anderson, retired head of the state's Agricultural "Stabilization and Conservation Service." "I like what I see."

"Let there be no doubt he has a lot of work to do," said Oman. "His name identification is relatively high. People know who he is but people have checked opinions of him."

Haig is not concerned by the fact that this is his first stab at elective office. Voters are ready for something new, he says, and he doesn't mind summing up the image of Dwight Eisenhower, the last military officer to win the presidency.

"I think the American people are going to be looking for something very different," Haig said. "Since I don't know of a single Republican candidate who doesn't essentially support the Reagan revolution... I think 1988 is largely going to focus on the qualifications and the character of the man."

On the campaign trail, Haig espouses the traditional Republican conservative message but never strays far from his lifetime experience in foreign policy.

Police pin a man on a car hood after he threw eggs at KKK marcher in Chapel Hill, N.C.

12 jailed as Klan stages marches

The Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — Ku Klux Klansmen marched Sunday in Durham and Chapel Hill, and 12 people, including at least three Klansmen, were arrested on charges ranging from weapons possession to drugs, authorities said.

About 63 people took part in the 20-minute march and membership rally in Durham, Virgil Griffin, imperial wizard of the Christian Knights.

About 150 police officers dressed in riot gear maintained order along the 2½-mile parade route on the street and from rooftops, said police Lt. Alana Steele.

Fifteen rifles, a stun baton and several knives were taken from Klansmen, who were prohibited by a parade permit from carrying weapons during the parade, said police Lt. Alana Steele.

Three Klansmen were arrested, two on charges of weapons violations, police said. A third Klansman was charged with an alcohol-related offense, Ms. Steele said.

The six others arrested faced charges of carrying a concealed weapon, disorderly conduct, disturbing the peace, failure to obey the command of an officer and possession of marijuana.

About 40 Klansmen moved to Chapel Hill, where an estimated 2,000 people lined the parade route and heckled the marchers. It was the first time the KKK had marched in Chapel Hill since 1963.

Three people were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct, said Chapel Hill Police Capt. Ralph Pendergraph. Other people may be charged, he said.

One person hit a Klansman with an egg, Pendergraph said, but he did not know if that incident was related to the arrest.

About 100 law enforcement officers from local agencies were at the march, along with the State Bureau of Investigation, which assisted with crowd control, Pendergraph said.

Record temperatures, storms beleaguer much of the nation

By The Associated Press

Temperatures broke records as far north as the Great Lakes, climbing to 100 degrees in several cities, while heavy thunderstorms and tornadoes pounded the Gulf Coast from flood-weary Texas to Alabama.

Milwaukee boiled over the record barrier at 11:02 a.m. with a reading of 92 and continued on to 101, the first time the city has hit the century mark in 32 years.

Minneapolis hit a record 98; Alpena, Mich., on the shore of cool Lake Huron, tied its record of 94, while Marquette, Mich., on the shore of decidedly chilly Lake Superior reached a record 88.

That kind of heat is not unusual in Minnesota, but it's a month early, said Lyle Schaller of the National Weather Service in Minneapolis.

Temperatures also were in triple digits in Iowa on Sunday, with readings of 102 in Ames, 101 in Burlington and 100 in Des Moines and Mason City. The weather service said it was the first reading of 100 or higher in Des Moines since June 8, 1985. The Iowa State Patrol reported several highways buckled because of the heat.

Peoria, Ill., hit 99, erasing a record that had stood since 1897. Cities including Champaign and Moline reported readings of 101. In Springfield the mercury hit 100 degrees, breaking the 93-year-old record of 96, and Chicago's swelling 99 degrees broke a 33-year-old record of 95 and the sun and water worshippers to Lake Michigan's shores.

"It's amazing. We had a truck that sat for three weeks full of (air conditioners) and now they're all sold, every last one," said Rob Hodson, air conditioning sales clerk for Sears, Roebuck and Co. in Peoria.

"I'm having a hard time keeping fans in stock," said Rick DeBartolo, manager of a Zayre Department Store on Chicago's North Side. He said he sold 400 to 500 fans within two weeks, about 10 percent more than last year.

Mercury list compiled by weather service

Pontiff leads a procession; lectures Communist leaders

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Sunday ended a week-long pilgrimage to his homeland with a triumphant Roman Catholic march through Warsaw and a stern lecture about human rights to Poland's Communist leader.

Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, in his own strongly worded farewell remarks, reminded the pontiff that while the pope would take memories of the visit back to the Vatican, Poland would seek a solution to its own problems.

John Paul and his entourage arrived in Rome at 9:25 a.m., where an Italian military helicopter took them on to the Vatican.

During his visit, the pontiff repeatedly praised the outlawed Solidarity movement, while police detained scores of backers of the only independent labor federation ever recognized in the Soviet bloc.

The Polish-born pope and Jaruzelski held a hastily scheduled one-hour private meeting at Warsaw's military airport before John Paul and his entourage departed in a LOT Polish Airlines Soviet-made

TU-154M.

There was no immediate word on what Jaruzelski and the pope discussed.

In bidding him farewell, the Communist leader reminded John Paul that while the pontiff would take memories of his homeland back to Rome, "you can't take its real problems... We have our own path."

As the general spoke, the white-robed pope stood behind him on a small platform along the runway, frequently lifting and tugging on the gold chain around his neck that holds the papal crucifix.

Jaruzelski, clad in a dark suit, called for the truth about Poland to be told, saying that: "In recent days, I (the truth) has been the victim of foreign manipulations."

Poland's state-run news media complained that the Western press was biased in its coverage of the visit, John Paul's third to his homeland since his 1978 elevation to the papacy.

"Let the word solidarily flow from our Polish soil — with all those people who still suffer racism, neo-colonialism, exploitation, unemployment, persecution and intolerance," a grim-faced Jaruzelski added.

The pontiff had frequently praised Solidarity — the banned labor federation.

The pope harkened back to the theme of greater respect for human rights during his nationally broadcast farewell address.

"Our homeland must strive so that human life in Poland becomes more and more humane and worthy than," he said.

He listed "four fundamental human rights" for which Poland must aim to achieve true peace: "the right to truth, to freedom, to justice and to love."

Several hundred people at the airport interrupted the pope's address with applause. Jaruzelski's speech was coolly received. Earlier, the pope led a massive procession through downtown Warsaw, kneeling before the Holy Eucharist on a specially equipped mobile platform.

Nearby, a line of police rushed toward a separate crowd of 2,000 Solidarity supporters.

Great War vets honored in France

MARNES-LA-COQUETTE, France (AP) — Seven decades after America entered World War I, a group of U.S. veterans gathered Sunday in a mist-shrouded park southwest of Paris to be honored for defending France in one of the bloodiest wars in history.

Col. Herbert Houston, wounded in 1918 while serving on the Western Front with the 4th Marine Brigade, was among 18 World War I veterans invited by the French government to participate in ceremonies commemorating the war.

Seated on velvet-cushioned chairs before a war memorial Sunday, the veterans were honored in a three-hour ceremony that included the awarding of medals, flyovers by vintage biplanes, and renditions of the Star Spangled Banner and the Marseillaise, the French national anthem.

Soviet TV interviews Shultz about arms control

MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz told Soviet television in an interview broadcast Sunday that last week's Venice summit indicated there was a good chance for a U.S.-Soviet arms agreement.

But in the interview, Soviet television commentator Valentin Zorin said the United States was displaying "ostentatious and exaggerated optimism" about the prospects for an agreement on the elimination of medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe.

The official Tass news agency, in its report on the interview carried by the television program "International Panorama," said the interview was conducted after the Venice summit that ended Wednesday, but it did not say exactly when.

Shultz, in the interview, said that in addition to the issue of medium-range missiles in Europe, there also were good chances to reach agreements on short-range and tactical missiles in Europe.

The report said Shultz added that he thought America's North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies were at a stage where they could give a response to Soviet arms control proposals that the Soviets could accept.

Following the Venice summit of the seven major democratic industrial nations, NATO foreign ministers meeting in Reykjavik, Iceland, backed a proposal by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to remove from Europe the (medium-range) nuclear missiles with a range of 300 to 1,000 miles.

Panama explodes into protest after years of political tension

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Manuel Antonio Noriega on Sunday blamed violent protests against his leadership on foreigners who he said do not want Panama to gain control of the Panama Canal from the United States.

"Traditional enemies of Panama that believe the Panama Canal is a colony... are manipulating, stirring up the destabilization in Panama," Noriega, commander of the defense forces and the power behind the civilian government, said in an interview broadcast Sunday on state-run National Radio.

The Roman Catholic church, which has taken a leading role against Panama's military leaders, called for the restoration of civil liberties lifted when a state of emergency was imposed Thursday.

Riots erupted Tuesday after Noriega's former deputy, Col. Roberto Diaz Herrera made allegations against the general.

Diaz Herrera, 49, accused Noriega of involvement in the 1981 plane crash death of Gen. Omar Torrijos, who seized power in a 1968 coup. On Friday, Diaz Herrera called Torrijos' death a CIA plot, involving a bomb planted aboard the plane, and claimed the Reagan administration also was involved.

Diaz Herrera, the recently retired defense forces chief of staff, also said that Noriega, with the assistance of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency, was involved in drug sales.

The U.S. State Department denied the allegations.

Opposition leader Ricardo Arias Calderon of the Christian Democratic party said reports he received from nurses and doctors during the past week indicated 14 people were killed and dozens of others were injured in the violence. Residents of the city's shantytowns opened fire during a peak of the anti-government demonstration Friday.

Government hospitals have refused to give out any numbers on casualties.

Arias Calderon also said as many as 1,000 people may have been detained by authorities.

Italian voters show little enthusiasm in going to polls for national election

ROME (AP) — Newspapers and broadcasters appealed to voters to cast ballots Sunday in the first day of a two-day parliamentary election that has aroused little interest among many Italians.

"A call to the polls: It's a duty," headlined the Milanese daily Il Giornale.

The polls were open from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Sunday and were to be open from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday. First results are expected to be broadcast by state-run RAI radio after 3 p.m. (9 a.m. EDT) Monday.

Preliminary voter turnout figures indicated even fewer Italians were going to the polls than on the first of two days of voting in the last parliamentary elections in 1983. Only 88 percent of eligible citizens voted in that election, setting a post-World War II low.

The Interior Ministry reported that 36.2 percent of eligible voters had cast ballots by 5 p.m., 10 hours after the polls opened in hot, humid weather. The figure was down from 36.7 percent at the same time in 1983.

Province-by-province figures showed the voter turnout was down a few percentage points in the south of Italy, while slightly higher numbers of voters had gone to the polls in regions north of Rome.

No problems were reported at the 84,577 polling booths across the country. Specially trained police dogs sniffed around for explosives in the election offices at the Interior Ministry.

Up for election are the 630 seats in the Chamber of Deputies and 315 in the Senate.

U.S. firms resent playing role of rent collector

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — U.S. and "local" business leaders are warning of more unrest and disinvestment if the government forces employers to act as rent collectors to halt a rent boycott by blacks.

Meanwhile, South African Foreign Minister R.F. Botha was quoted Sunday as saying his white-led government eventually wanted to share power with blacks, but that a state of emergency would continue until stability was restored.

A bill introduced in Parliament last week by President P.W. Botha's

National Party would empower local black officials to require employers to deduct unpaid rent and utility bills from the salaries of blacks participating in the widespread boycott.

The boycott has cost local authorities an estimated $135 million since it was launched by anti-apartheid activists two years ago. It has spread to more than 50 towns where a law and custom, apartheid establishes a racially segregated society in which the 23 million blacks have no vote in national affairs. The 5 million whites control the economy and maintain separate districts, schools and health services.

Vincent Brett, manpower secretary of South Africa's Association of Chambers of Commerce, was quoted by the Star as saying the rent-collection measure "is a recipe for widespread industrial unrest, with employers made to suffer for an issue that is basically none of their business."

Actress Geraldine Page dies of heart attack at 62

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Geraldine Page, best known for her portrayal of neurotic, tortured heroines in the plays of Tennessee Williams and winner of a 1986 Academy Award for her role in the film "A Trip to Bountiful," has died of a heart attack at the age of 62.

Miss Page died Saturday in her New York townhouse, according to her city medical examiner's office.

She had been appearing on Broadway as the madcap medium in a revival of "Blithe Spirit," with Richard Chamberlain, Blythe Danner and Judith Ivey. Miss Page missed both performances Saturday, according to Josh Ellis, a spokesman for the show and her husband, Patricia Conolly, went on.

"Gerry's death is a devastating loss to the theater and film community," said the play's producers, Karl Alston, Douglas Urbanski and Sandra Moss, in a statement. "We have lost a dear member of the 'Blithe Spirit' company and we will miss her gentle manner, sweet disposition and her delicious sense of humor."

The Noel Coward comedy, which opened in March, will continue its run, Ellis said. The play is scheduled to close July 19.

"It will leave a terrible, distressing hole in the play," said Chamberlain, who called Page's death "a terrible loss to us, to the play, to the world of theater."

"She could be deeply touching, hilariously funny — she could do anything," he said. "She was a sweet person, childlike."

"It's a shock to us to have lost one of the greatest actresses the world has ever known," Miss Danner said.

"I'm so stunned. She was so wonderful to me," said her husband, Miss Conolly. "I'm going to miss her dreadfully."

GERALDINE PAGE Shown with Oscar

Director Brian Murray announced Miss Page's death to the audience before Sunday's performance. "Geraldine would probably be saying something like, 'Get on with it — get on with the show,'" he said.

Scalia kids graduates, talks about education at ceremony

The Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — U.S. Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia told 921 graduates that they weren't experts at anything, but that there was hope for their future.

"The bad news is that you're not experts at anything," he said Saturday in a short, humorous speech at the Santa Clara University commencement. "The good news is that if you understand the bad news, you're an educated person."

"Education makes man aware of the immensity of human knowledge and the immensity of things unknown... Educated people are not know-it-alls," said Scalia. Besides the graduates, more than 7,000 people attended the ceremony.

JOHN DENVER Convenes symposium

Hometown boys pair up with Oak Ridge Boys

FORT PAYNE, Ala. — The Oak Ridge Boys and Alabama performed together for the first time, entertaining an estimated crowd of 60,000.

The two groups sang together Saturday night at the sixth annual June Jam in the hometown of Alabama, a four-piece vocal band.

Alabama played backup while the Oak Ridge Boys sang their million-selling hit "Elvira." The four Oak Ridge Boys joined in singing "Mountain Music," an Alabama hit.

"It's an historical moment and a great moment for the Oak Ridge Boys," lead singer Joe Bonsal told the crowd. "They (Alabama) are the greatest act that has ever been in our business."

Visions futures define John Denver's weekend

SNOWMASS, Colo. — Comedian-activist Dick Gregory, astronaut Edgar Mitchell and corporate leader J. Peter Grace were among 12 speakers who addressed a symposium convened over the weekend by singer John Denver.

Denver's "Choices for the Future" symposium on the global and spiritual issues of the time drew about 500 participants.

Each speaker at the event, which opened Sunday, offered a different version of a visionary future.

Irish tenor Dennis Day scraps L.A. appearance

LOS ANGELES — Singer Dennis Day was forced to scrap an appearance at the Irish Fair in Burbank because of back and leg problems, Day's publicist said.

"We don't know what's the matter," Kitty Davis said Saturday. "But we're all very worried."

The 71-year-old singer developed pain in his legs and back during a recent vacation in Hawaii with his wife, Peg, Ms. Davis said.

Day gained a reputation as an Irish tenor when he made regular appearances 30 years ago on the Jack Benny radio and television programs.

Wallace Stegner says wilderness is essential

BOZEMAN, Mont. — Pulitzer Prize-winning author Wallace Stegner says wilderness is essential to modern man's survival.

"Wilderness is important to the human spirit, to the gene bank — the body of life," the 67-year-old author said. "There are a dozen different reasons for wilderness, all of them good."

Stegner, who has written both fiction and non-fiction books about the West, said Westerners have tried to ignore the lessons that the land has been trying to teach them for generations. The West, he said, is too dry and is overpopulated.

Stegner, who won the Pulitzer Prize for fiction in 1972 for the novel "Angle of Repose," received an honorary doctorate Saturday from Montana State University.

Tape brings Sakharov to American graduates

NEW YORK (AP) — The Soviet Union should withdraw from Afghanistan, release hundreds of prisoners of conscience and agree with the U.S. to cut strategic nuclear weapons by half, dissident Andrei Sakharov told U.S. college graduates Sunday.

"I am aware that you expect me to be more than just polite," the physicist and Nobel laureate said in a message broadcast to graduating seniors at the College of Staten Island.

The statement was shown by the Cable News Network, which videotaped it earlier this month in Moscow.

"The uncommonly cruel and distressing Afghan war has been going on for over seven years now," he said. "The immediate withdrawal of Soviet troops is required so that the Afghan people can solve their own domestic problems."

United Nations troops "should control this withdrawal process to prevent bloodshed and chaos," he added.

Reforms promoted by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev "are important and necessary," Sakharov said. "But what has been done so far is just the very beginning and has scarcely affected the monolith of Soviet society."

Although about 160 "prisoners of conscience" have been released, "we could not have even hoped for this before," he acknowledged — the situation "is far from satisfactory," the physicist complained.

"We know of at least 500 prisoners by name. But perhaps there are several hundred others; we do not know," he said.

Political prisoners confined to special camps or psychiatric hospitals also should be released, he said.

Sakharov repeated his appeal to the United States and the Soviet Union to agree to cut strategic nuclear arms in half, regardless of their negotiations over the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative. Sakharov has said he opposed development of the "Star Wars" initiative.

Teachers get 5 percent under new Gooding district budget

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Schools in the Gooding district will operate next year on a $2.2 million general fund budget that includes a 5 percent raise for teachers.

The new spending plan, which takes effect July 1, was adopted by the School Board last week and represents a $200,000 increase over last year.

Superintendent Lester Diehl told the board the increase comes from an increase in state support and a 5 percent increase in local taxes. He said that at least half the increase is allotted to pay the district's increased share of employee Social Security withholding, as now required by the state.

District employees, both certified teachers and classified support staff, will receive a 5 percent wage increase, and Diehl said the district's share of group health insurance costs has also risen. Gooding teachers did not receive a raise last year.

Diehl said the increase puts the district's starting salary at $14,122. The district has an agreement with the Gooding Education Association to reopener the salary schedule if the state mandates the $15,000 base salary suggested by legislative resolution this spring.

Diehl said the new budget is based on Gooding having 83 classroom units next year. A classroom unit is a state funding designation, based on the number of students attending school in the district and determines how much money the district gets from the state.

Gooding has lost two funding units because of declining student enrollment in the past year, representing a loss of approximately $60,000 in state support funds. Diehl said it is possible districtwide enrollment could decline by another half unit by fall, which would have some effect on the actual amount of money received from the state next year.

In other business at last week's meeting, the board agreed to increase the cost of hot lunches in the district. Elementary students will pay 75 cents per meal, up from 70 cents last year. Students at the junior high and high school will pay 95 cents beginning in August, up from 85 cents last year, and the price of an adult meal will be $1.35.

Diehl said the increase is necessary because of increased personnel costs in the hot lunch program. The board also adopted a job description for the district's counselors and amended the district's eligibility policy for students participating in sports and extracurricular activities.

The counselor policy was developed by an advisory committee in response to a 1986-87 district improvement goal. The policy will serve as a "guideline for the professional responsibility of counselors at the high school and junior high school," committee member Jim Cobble told the board.

Cobble, who is the principal of Gibbons Elementary School, said the committee defined the counselors' responsibilities in several areas including effort for those students whose academic ability does not allow them to maintain the C grade.

Gooding's extra activity eligibility rule has required a 2.0 or C average every nine-week term for students wishing to participate in sports or other activities. Diehl said there have been situations in which a student falls below the standard in one class for a nine-week period, but meets the standard in his semester average.

"It is the semester average that goes on the permanent record, and if the student is meeting the state C average graduation requirement, he should be eligible to participate," Diehl said.

The board agreed to require a 2.0 average each semester instead of every nine weeks in a policy change that Diehl says will be "fairer to everyone — the student and the team." The board will also appoint a School, said the committee to develop an eligibility policy based on total parent and community orientation and public relations, not allow them to maintain the C grade.

Council to discuss use of grant money

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Expansion of the senior citizens center and solving inadequate storm drainage will be the topics of discussion at Monday's Twin Falls City Council meeting.

The city is nearing the end of the application process for $700,000 in grants. The money would help pay for $650,000 in improvements to storm sewers between Filer and Addison Avenues. The council is also hoping to spend $100,000 on expansion of parking and a 1,800-square-foot dining room at the Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center at 616 Eastland Drive.

A public hearing on the applications for an Idaho Community Development Block Grant is scheduled for 6 p.m. at tonight's City Council meeting.

Also at the meeting, the council will consider a request from a Montana company to rezone a 200,000-square-foot parcel of land near Ace Hansen Chevrolet to allow the company to build warehouse storage facilities and office complexes.

The council members will also consider bids on two airport-improvement projects.

The proposed storm-sewer work would extend close to 5,000 feet of storm sewer pipe and reconstruct 11 street intersections to alleviate complaints from area residents about flooded basements and lawns.

The city is asking for $600,000 from the block grant program and will donate about $50,000 in administrative and engineering costs.

The Senior Citizens center proposal would include the center's parking lot, add curbs, gutters and sidewalks.

The senior citizens center would donate $20,000 to the project, $60,000 would come from the city's street fund and $20,000 would be donated by the city for engineering and writing the grant. The grant itself would be for $100,000.

At its last meeting, the council accepted bids from Gordon Paving of Twin Falls for seal-coating the airport runway and White-Volvo of Portland for a new snowblower. The council will now vote on whether to accept a grant offering by the Federal Aviation Administration for the project. The FAA has offered a $205,000 grant for the project and the city will provide $23,000.

The council will also consider bids on perimeter fencing around the east end of the airport.

Also at the meeting, the council will consider a rezoning request from Meldeo Inc. that the city Planning and Zoning Commission defeated with 7-2 vote.

The recommendation from the commission came on the company's request to rezone from agriculture to commercial a lot near Ace Hansen Chevrolet and just south of the United Parcel Service Building.

Several of the zoning commission members who voted against Meldeo's requests said they would have voted for a planned commercial development.

Grass roots project successful, airport facelift almost done

By CAROLYN DILWORTH

GLENN'S FERRY — When Mayor Dayle Messery signed grant papers at the last City Council meeting, it proved that there's no limit to what a little town can do if you just get out and do it yourself," says Curly Schamber, chairman of the Glenn's Ferry Airport Board.

The papers signed by Messery finalized a state grant that will provide $10,000 worth of asphalt for a runway to be laid at the local airport this week.

The community has been working on the project since March 2, 1986, when some concerned residents met to discuss the poor condition of the local airport and what could be done about it.

On March 6, the group asked the City Council to appoint an airport board. By March 9, Don Cluningham, airport manager, along with John Shrum, Rocky Sellars, Larry Rose, Pam Knox and Bill Mumore, had all been appointed to the board with Schamber elected to serve as chairman and JoAnn Lanham as secretary.

According to Schamber the first year's work went rather slowly, with Shrum approaching many people to get financing and generally "beating the bushes" trying to find something to get a hold on.

While the search for financing the runway was going on, Schamber, Bob Ulmore and many other local residents spent time digging holes and burying tires to finish the official, black and white airport marker. Next they built a tetrahedron wind device.

Both the marker and tetrahedron were built by mate-

Hotel symbolized permanence of town

The Hotel Perrine's lights marked another long step in the progress of Twin Falls — the Twin Falls News, 1905

How do you prove to the world that the wide spot in the sagbrush, with one building and some stakes on it, is really a town that is here to stay? You build a big, showplace hotel!

That's what the developers of the irrigation projects in the Magic Valley did in many of their company towns. The first of those hotels was in Twin Falls.

The history of Twin Falls' showplace hotel, built by the Twin Falls Investment Company, began in September 1904, when stakes were placed at the center of the new town. First named the Hotel Kimberly, it received its permanent name, Hotel Perrine, before the grand opening in December 1905.

The basement of the 50-by-114-foot hotel was dug by horse-drawn scrapers in November 1904 at what is today the southwest corner of the Main Avenue and Shoshone Street intersection.

Joe Dietrich began construction of the $70,000

Virginia Ricketts Then and Now

hotel the following spring after the arrival of a special machine to make concrete blocks. The brick machine, equipped with special dies for moulding various designs and two train carloads of Portland cement, as well as all other supplies, were freighted from the railroad at Shoshone, across the desert and then ferried to Twin Falls.

Contractor Dietrich had a temporary setback when he sent his bookkeeper, John McKenna, with $1,500 to open the set of books for the construction project. McKenna disappeared with the money, making it necessary to obtain temporary funds until a replacement could be sent from Salt Lake City.

Twin Falls residents watched with much interest the rapid progress of the hotel under the supervision of Twin Falls architect James H. Richardson.

A generating plant was installed at the rear of the hotel to supply electricity for the building until the Shoshone Falls power plant could begin operation. When furnishings were ordered from Marshall and Fields in Chicago, the builders boasted that while the Perrine was "as large as the Idaho in Boise or the Dewey Palace in Nampa, its furnishings were more luxurious and the appointments were more up-to-date than either.

The grand opening was held on December 13, 1905, when the first meal was served in the dining room. The formal table settings, complete to finger bowls, were marked contrast to the

Cassia County studies crowd control policy

BURLEY — Cassia County officials have proposed tough requirements on large public gatherings in unincorporated areas of the county following an inquiry about holding a "party" that organizers hoped would draw up to 10,000 people.

The proposed ordinance was being reviewed by a county commission mindful of the local airport and a neighboring Twin Falls County a decade ago when thousands of people converged on the Snake River to witness daredevil Evel Knievel's ill-fated attempt to jump the canyon in his Skycycle.

That event left the Twin Falls County with thousands of dollars in expenses, and Cassia officials say they want to take steps to protect their county from similar problems.

"This is an effort to protect the county's taxpayers from the liabilities that could come along with that kind of event," Sheriff Bill Crisland said.

Sparking the proposition, however, was an inquiry from a local resident who was considering organizing a "party" at an unspecified location in the county. He planned several dance bands and beer concessions for the event that he hoped would draw between 5,000 and 10,000 participants.

Under the proposed 12-page ordinance, drafted by Prosecutor Steve Hearing set for impact zone

By JANENE BUCKWAY

GOODING — Negotiations for an enlarged Gooding city impact area will continue with a public hearing July 15.

Gooding County Board of Commissioners set the hearing date following a recommendation from County Planning and Zoning Administrator Joyce Scanlon. Scanlon said the planning commission has had a great deal of public input and concern on the issue since the first city hearing was held last October.

"Because of the extent of the controversy," Scanlon said the planning commission is recommending enlarging the city impact area only on the north edge of town to take in proposed industrial park sites and the city's waste water treatment plant. She said the city has agreed to the plan and needs the issue referred to the planning commission for development grant for which the city has applied.

Scanlon also told the commission that recent legal guidance received from the state planning commission indicates the city has a right to participate in land-use regulations within a mile of the city limits, regardless of whether an impact area is in effect. She said in many instances the city impact zone would be more beneficial for the landowner than county laws would be, and the commission should consider the whole issue.

Commission Chairman Robert Thackeray said he felt the city impact area should be "squared up," and that the commission will hold

More money available for education of handicapped kids

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley will see increased services for handicapped children under age 5 in the coming year due to a program signed by President Ronald Reagan last October.

The Education of the Handicapped reauthorization law, with the President's approval, will make money available for extended services to handicapped preschoolers and infants.

Programs for children within the 5 1/2 age group will be handled by the Department of Education. Infants and toddlers from birth to age 2 will be under the supervision of the Department of Health and Welfare, said Andy Crane, supervisor of the Adult and Child Development Center in Twin Falls.

Federal appropriations for the program authorize $50 million for handicapped infants and toddlers and a maximum of $200 per child for the 3- to 5-year-olds in fiscal year 1987.

To be eligible for the infant and toddler money, states must establish interagency coordinating councils to expand services and coordinate funding for the program from federal, state, local and private sources, said Paul Swatsenberg, chief of the Bureau of Developmental Disabilities for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

The new law amends current law by increasing incentive grants to states for the education of 3- to 5-year-olds and mandating that states serve all handicapped children in that age group by 1990 or forfeit incentive grant funding, according to a federal report on the program.

The law changes the Education of the Handicapped Act (EHA), which required that services to handicapped children begin at age 3. The EHA is the principal federal legislation for providing such assistance to state and local agencies.

Idaho is one of the 10 states that mandates the provision of special education to handicapped children at age 6. Other states, such as Oregon and New Jersey, mandate such services at birth, according to the federal report.

"The purpose of the program is to stimulate effort to find out what needs to be done to improve services," Swatsenberg said. "Interagency cooperation is emphasized by the law and a group of representative agencies from various Magic Valley agencies will be formed this summer to research local need.

Hearings to gather local public input will be held June 16, from 2-4 p.m., at 803 Harrison Street.

"The hearings will let the public tell how they would like to see Idaho participate in the program," Swatsenberg said. "The Twin Falls interagency group has not yet been formed, but will probably include representatives of the Adult and Child Development Center, Head Start and private care for handicapped infants and toddlers, he said.

"We want to put together a broad-based group. It's pretty nebulous at this point," he said.

Money for infants and toddlers will be used to prevent "developmental delay," Cransfield said. Children in that category may be behind expected performance levels for their age, but should not really be considered "mentally retarded," Cransfield said.

"Developmental delay" refers to kids in the gray area," he added. The group will identify the local private care of handicapped infants and toddlers and will submit an application which outlines their findings by Oct. 1, 1987, Swatsenberg said.

To keep federal dollars flowing in further years, states must demonstrate they have a plan to institute a statewide system to serve that population and insure the system will be established by the fourth year of funding.

The amount of money per child will increase by $100 per year next 1990, when all states should have mandated special education for handicapped children at age 3. The amount per child will then be $1,000, according to a federal report.

The Adult and Child Development Center, which will be working with both age groups, might be able to stop charging money for care of handicapped children age 3 under the new law, Crane said.

From kitchen tap to supermarket

The Associated Press

CAREY — It crurps from underground springs at nearly 1.3 million gallons a day with a temperature of 130 degrees.

It looks and tastes like ordinary tap water with a little extra something: 30 or more minerals, evenably by the faint smell of sulphur.

"Some people say, 'We will do without groceries before we do without hot water,'" said Maurice Ellsworth, a rancher who in March 1986 began producing Craters of the Moon mineral water, named after the national monument located 20 miles from the ranch.

Years ago, Ellsworth used the hot water for showering and washing dishes. Friends sometimes would swim in the nearby springs. But Ellsworth considered building a hot springs resort on the site. But his cold-water well ran dry and he started "chilling the flow from the springs to replace it."

He found the water what he tasted, and so did his family. "We started giving the water to other people, to friends, to the relatives; and the response was so positive that we decided that this would be good drinking water," said Spence Ellsworth, Maurice's son and partner.

The family started bottling operations a couple of months later on the water. The water now commands up to $20 a case in the Southwest.

The Boise-based Albertson's grocery chain has agreed to stock Craters water, said the elder Ellsworth, who regards the step as a breakthrough to bigger things.

In April, Spence Ellsworth flew to Seattle with samples of the water, slightly "spiked" with lime, for distribution at the National Food and Drug Administration sponsored by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and several states.

He and the water got a good reception. Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus said he would slip and place phone calls to encourage in-state distribution.

Spence Ellsworth said he also got good response from Japan, Taiwan and Singapore.

"To have a good market for bottled water—and this is not just bottled water, but heated mineral water—you need a hot climate, you need a large population, and you need bad water, and Idaho doesn't meet any of those categories, really," he said. "So this is perhaps not the best market area for us."

donated by community business, including three from the Big O store and the Salfier Creek. Don Carnahan donated pipe, with Tom Lazon providing a backbone to get the wind sock put in place.

A lot of people have contributed bits and pieces in time, labor, equipment and materials. There's no way we could have accomplished what we did if we'd had to pay for it all," Schamber says.

The project reached a turning point in February 1987, when Harry Knud pledged $1,000 from the Idaho State Bank and Magic West, a Glenns Ferry potato processing plant, pledged $10,000 in labor and materials contingent on the state paying for the asphalt for the runway.

With the donations promised, Wilston Steen and Carnahan went to Boise to lobby for a state grant. Funding for the runway was made this spring, and by March 31, Magic West began hauling the gravel for the runway base.

Magic West agreed to help because the airport will benefit both the company and the community, says Bill Schow, manager of the Glenns Ferry plant. He says his crew should be through laying the base in time for the state crews to begin asphalt work Wednesday.

Bywater, any event likely to draw 300 or more people would have to be licensed 60 days ahead of time if it was to be held outside what were labeled organized areas of the county.

The license fee would be $300 for each day of the event, and $600 for all night events. In addition, however, organizers would have to post a series of bonds totaling $70,000 to cover legal liability, medical costs and any damage to surrounding property.

The would have to furnish adequate water and restroom facilities, garbage disposal, utility and medical services, security and parking. Exempted from the proposed requirements would be county fairs and events within municipalities or events held at established places like schools or stadiums and events within a quarter-mile of the Snake River. That would include the upcoming Burley Speedboat Regatta that draws over 10,000 spectators each July.

roof shoots brilliant rays far across the plains and marks another long step in the progress of Twin Falls."

The story continued, "The building was brilliantly lighted throughout with electric lights and it cheered up the city amazingly. People stood in knots on the street admiring the big electric sign which shone as a beacon of progress far across the desert. It was the first illumination of any kind on the tract and it meant something to the people of Twin Falls. There are baths galore, individual telephones in the rooms, steam heat in abundance and the furniture is the best manufactured."

Lakers win in fast lane

L.A. runs over Celts, claims fifth NBA title

By BILL BARNAHD
The Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — The Los Angeles Lakers and Magic Johnson won it all because they had it all.

"It's great to be a champion again," Johnson said after a 16-point, 19-assist performance in the Lakers' 106-93 victory over the Boston Celtics Sunday. The victory gave the Lakers the NBA championship series, four games to two.

"This was the sweetest of them all," said Johnson, the regular season MVP. "This is the best team I ever played on. This championship means the most to me."

The Lakers won their fourth NBA title and Johnson his third playoff Most Valuable Player award — since 1980.

"This is the greatest one because of what we did in the regular season (an NBA best record of 65-17) and the playoffs," Johnson said.

"This is the greatest team I've ever played on. This team can run, shoot, rebound, hit from outside, can do it all.

And a lot was done in Game 6

Celtics' Bill Walton pressures L.A.'s Kareem Abdul-Jabbar

Sunday by center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

"We worked real hard for this," said Abdul-Jabbar, who scored 32 points in the final game. "The most satisfying part is that no one even picked us to win our division."

Abdul-Jabbar, who is considering a contract extension that would have him playing another two years, added, "We'll be back next year. I have no commitment beyond that."

The Celtics, 10-point underdogs after giving up an average of 133 points in the first two games of the series on the Lakers' court, led 56-51 at halftime before the Lakers rallied.

The 6-foot-9 Johnson, the unanimous playoff MVP selection, scored 12 points in the third quarter, when the Lakers outscored Boston 20-12 for an 81-63 lead. The Celtics moved no closer than 12 in the final period.

"We started in October with the attitude that we would not be denied," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "If we had let this one get away, it would have been the longest summer they ever spent. This is the best Laker team I've ever coached."

James Worthy, who had 56 points in two easy victories at the Forum in Games 1 and 2 only to slump to 46 as the Lakers lost two of three at Boston Garden, had 22 points. He said the return home helped him and the team.

"The series started very positive for me," Worthy said. "Coming home really helped us mentally. Our defense dictated our offense."

Johnson, who led the Lakers in scoring, rebounding and assists in the finals, also was playoff MVP when the Lakers won NBA titles in his rookie season of 1980 and in 1982.

The Lakers also won the NBA title in 1985 with Abdul-Jabbar the MVP, beating the Celtics for the first time in nine title meetings between the teams.

Johnson had six points and three assists as Los Angeles began the second half with an 18-2 spurt. Boston finished the period with only five baskets in 19 shots.

"Boston was tough and we were too ready at the beginning," Johnson said of the the Lakers' first-half problems. "We never got our fast break going in Boston. We finally got it going today. In the second half, we forced the Celtics out so they got only one shot. Our plan was not to let them get into the low post."

"In the first half, we were anxious," Riley said. "We played beyond ourselves and I felt fortunate to be only five down at the half. In the third quarter, we gathered and worked together."

The Lakers, who won all 10 of their home games in the playoffs, continued their dominance at the Forum over the Celtics, who lost their last seven postseason games on the road.

Dennis Johnson led Boston with 32 points on 11-of-20 shooting. Larry Bird, a three-time regular-season MVP and twice the playoff MVP, was held to 16. He missed nine of his first 12 shots from the field. Danny Ainge, the hero of Boston's Game 5 victory, was 1-for-9 from the field.

The defeat was only third in 19 finals appearances for the Celtics, who became the 18th consecutive NBA champion to fail in an attempt to repeat. The last team to do so was Boston in 1963.

'If we had let this one get away, it would have been the longest summer they ever spent. This is the best Laker team I've ever coached.'

Celtics caught under wheels of Lakers' fast break

By TIM LIOTTA
The Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — They would never admit, but somehow the Boston Celtics knew this wasn't going to be their year.

But, after becoming the 18th consecutive NBA champion to fail to defend its title, the Celtics had plenty of reasons to be proud of their 1986-87 season.

"No question I'm proud of this team and the effort it gave out there on the court," Boston guard Dennis Johnson said after the Los Angeles Lakers defeated the Celtics 106-93 to win the NBA Finals in six games.

"We went out and played hard and gave it a great effort," added Johnson, who led Boston with 33 points Sunday. "A lot of teams would have folded after what we went through. We just happened to run into a greater team."

In spite of injuries that sidelined reserves Scott Wedman and Bill Walton for almost the entire season, and injuries that slowed starters Robert Parish and Kevin McHale to a limp, the Celtics became only the fifth defending champion to reach the finals the next year.

"I think this team did a great job getting to the sixth game of the NBA Finals after what happened to us since the beginning of the season," said Boston Coach K.C. Jones, who went on to list the injuries that dogged the Celtics this year.

"I liked the courage our guys show, the hustle and determination to get into it."

In the first half of Game 6, the Celtics looked as if they were going to force the best-of-seven series to its limit.

But after opening a 56-51 halftime lead, the Celtics found themselves unable to control the Lakers' fast break.

"We had a good rhythm in the first half," said McHale, who finished with 20 points Sunday. "But in the third quarter we started missing shots and we started forcing them. They were taking our misses and running with them. The thing we couldn't afford to let happen happened."

The Lakers ran and ran and ran as they reeled off an 18-2 spurt over the first part of the third quarter. The Celtics were outscored 30-12 and never recovered.

"The Celtics are the kind of team that plays well when everything is working," said Larry Bird, who came into the game averaging more than 25 points in the playoffs and scored just 16. "When we have a breakdown, it's a major breakdown."

Bird made just six of 16 shots in the game and was not an offensive factor in the second half.

"We were just trying to concentrate on our assignments," he said. "We were trying to do the things we did in Boston, but they didn't work."

Bird said the Celtics should have gotten more out of their well-played first half.

"We played very well in the first half, but we should've had a bigger lead than just five points," Bird said.

The fact that the Celtics came within two victories of repeating as NBA champions was a point of pride for Jones.

"Our guys have no reason to hang their heads," Jones said. "They can be proud of themselves. They did a fantastic job of representing the league as its defending champions."

From the Celtic perspective, here is how it went:

Still ahead 50-51, Bird misses 20-footer. Ahead 56-53, with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar having gone to the bench with four fouls, Dennis Johnson misses from 17.

Still ahead 56-53, Bird misses medium-range jumper. Kevin McHale gets rebound, misses on an awkward lunge to the basket. Robert Parish gets rebound and misses 6-foot jumper.

Twin Falls' Nicholson decides to put school before archery — at least for the time being

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TEMPE, Ariz. — Priorities and interests change with time.

Consider the current status of probably Twin Falls' all-time best archer, Rob Nicholson.

Four years ago, as a high school junior, Nicholson was trying to force-feed his talent sufficiently to make the 1980 U.S. Olympic archery team. He missed it by two spots in qualifying as an 18-year-old and a high school senior.

Today, with one national collegiate individual championship in hand, making the Olympic team remains a desire of the youngster. But the demands of a pre-medical discipline at Arizona State University is getting more than equal time.

"It is not a situation that frustrates Rob much. But it is one that brings questions to the mind of his father, Dr. Julian Nicholson of Twin Falls, who says 'he's in pre-med and has a 3.76 (grade-point) average for his first two years. He's just working hard to get grades so he can go on to medical school. He currently is taking a required physics course this summer. If he gets that out of the way, he can take his medical entrance exams this fall."

"If he passes and is accepted, that could give him a chance to stay out of school this year and work on his archery," the elder Nicholson commented. "I feel that unless he does that, he has little chance of making the team. While he apparently has the natural talent, you have to be able to afford the time to put into it to remain world class. So far he hasn't wanted to neglect his class work to the benefit of his shooting."

The young Nicholson didn't have the banner year this past season that he enjoyed as a college freshman when he won the national collegiate individual title. But he was third this year in defense of his title and helped Arizona State win the national team crown for the second straight year.

"His score last year would have won it again," said his father. Nicholson tried to qualify for the U.S. team that will compete in the World Archery Championships this summer but finished seventh. Only four archers made the team.

His next major bid will come June 28-29 when he stays on the home course in an effort to secure a berth on the U.S. Pan-American team that will compete in Indiana.

But anything beyond that will be contingent on how his summer physics class goes and then the medical school exams early this fall.

"It was always a dream of mine to be on a national team but I never had the talent and never had to make that decision," Dr. Nicholson said. "I guess the only way to explain it is Rob is at a crossroads and has to decide what he wants to do."

"There seems to be an urgency here that transcends the situation and the elder Nicholson is aware of it."

"I know that archery is a lifetime sport, that Rob can concentrate totally on his studies and come back to archery when he's out of school and perhaps be in world class for a long time," he said.

But the time element is always there, too — get it while you can, because next year may be too late.

Walker signs 8; waits for 4 more

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Stopped one game short of a seventh visit to the National Junior College Athletic Association World Series, College of Southern Idaho baseball Coach Jim Walker has begun putting the pieces together for next year.

Walker has signed eight players — including three transfers — and is awaiting word from four more players, three of whom are considered top-line pitchers.

"We feel that this has been a very good recruiting season to this point and if we could get the other four we've been talking to, it might be as good as we've ever had," the coach said. "I think that our paper at least the pitching would be the strongest we've ever had."

"But one thing that clouds all that, Walker hurries to clarify, is that two of the pitchers were drafted in the recent baseball June lottery.

"Warren was Mesa College's do-everything guy — hit, field, lead, everything," Walker said. "Hooper is a switch hitter who can play second base — with about anyone."

The two transfers are Eric Smith of Billings, Mont., from Trinidad State College, and Brad Brooks, a Meridian High School graduate who attended DeAnza Community College in California last year.

Close CSI followers should remember the name Eric Smith as he belted three homers in the three-game series that kept the Golden Eagles out of nationals.

"Smith is a friend of (recently graduated CSI pitcher Jason) Adkins (also from Billings) and he told Adkins at the district finals he didn't want to return to Trinidad and wanted to come here if he could," Walker said. "I told him I couldn't talk to him unless he (Smith) called me first. He did and he proved to me in the district finals he has the kind of bat we're

NL: Cards sweep Cubs, top East by 6 games

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Danny Cox says he's not trying to assume the role of pitching ace for the St. Louis Cardinals — that's just the way it's worked out.

"Somebody has to get 'em out; fortunately it's me," Cox said after holding off the Chicago Cubs for 8½ innings Sunday in a 3-2 victory. "I think he's made contributions from everybody; that's the most important thing."

Cox, who has emerged as the No. 1 starter in place of injured John Tudor, held Chicago to five hits before leaving in a bid that simmered near the 100-degree level.

"He threw 120 pitches; that's a lot," Cardinals manager Whitey Herzog said. "He started to get tired along about the sixth inning."

St. Louis extended its lead in the National League East to six games with a largest margin since winning the World Series in 1982.

"I wish we had five (games) to go. How many have we got left?" Herzog said. "The last week our pitchers' been pretty good."

The Cardinals won their fourth straight game and the Cubs lost their fourth in a row. Chicago Manager Gene Michael was not around at the end.

Baseball

"I don't think it was fair. I didn't even say that much," Michael said of his first-inning ejection, which came after he argued with home plate umpire Jerry Crawford in the first inning about a pitch. "We didn't play very well in this series, and the Cardinals are on a roll."

Cox, 73, beat Chicago for the fourth time this season. He struck out six and walked three. Cox left in the ninth after a leadoff single by Jerry Murrephy and a one-out walk to Leon Durham.

Todd Worrell relieved Cox and ended a many Tim Lincecum's single before getting his major league-leading 16th save.

Cox retired 12 straight batters while holding Chicago to one hit through six innings. He ended the sixth inning by getting Andre Dawson to pop up with runners on second and third.

San Diego 4 San Francisco 1

San Francisco 1 — Left-hander Dave Dravecky pitched a five-hitter and Carmelo Martinez knocked in a pair of runs with a double and a homer in the San Diego Padres' 4-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants Sunday.

By winning the final three games of a four-game series, the Padres won three in a row for the first time since Aug. 19-21, 1986.

The Padres, who outscored the Giants 20-1 in the series, jumped on left-hander Mark Davis, 35, for two runs in the first inning. Stan Jefferson, just off the disabled list, led off with a walk, went to second on a wild pitch and reached third following a flyout.

Two fly outs, Martinez hit a run-scoring double to right-center and scored on a single by Shane Mack.

Kevin Mitchell's double, Dravecky's two-out infield single, and an error by third baseman Chris Speier gave the Padres an unearned run in the second.

Martinez' two-out homer in the third concluded the Padres' scoring. It was his fifth of the season and first since May 22.

Dravecky, 26, who blanked the Giants until the sixth, struck out six and walked two. Pinch-hitter Will Clark's leadoff single, a groundout, and Robby Thompson's run-scoring single spoiled the shutout bid.

Houston 4 Los Angeles 1

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Danny Darwin held Los Angeles hitless for the final 8½ innings and finished with a two-hitter Sunday as the Houston Astros beat the Dodgers 4-1.

Darwin, 44, allowed only one baserunner after giving up Pedro Martinez' 15th home run and a single by Mike Marshall in the first inning. Darwin struck out six, walked one and retired the final 10 Los Angeles batters in his first complete game.

Philadelphia 11 Montreal 6

MONTREAL (AP) — Mike Schmidt hit three homers, drove in six runs and collected his 2,000th career hit Sunday, powering the Philadelphia Phillies past the Montreal Expos 11-6.

Schmidt tied Med Ott for 13th place on the all-time home run list with 511. He tied his single-game career-high with six RBI. Schmidt has hit three home runs in a game two times and once homered four times in an extra-inning game.

New York 7 Pittsburgh 3

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Darryl Strawberry hit a two-run home run. Keith Hernandez added a solo homer and a run-scoring double and Doug Sisk pitched 4½ innings of scoreless relief as the New York Mets defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-3 Sunday.

Strawberry was ejected from the game after hitting a pitch from Bob Kipper in the second inning. The Mets' bench-clearing brawl.

Apparently because of that incident, home plate umpire Dutch Renner warned both Pittsburgh starter Brian Fisher and New York starter Steve Carlton after Fisher hit Tim Teufel with a first-inning pitch. The warning led to the ejections of Mitchell and Mets Manager Dave Johnson in the third when Mitchell struck Fisher with a heel pitch.

Rafael Santana had a two-run triple during New York's four-run ninth inning as the Mets beat the Pirates for the ninth time in 12 games this season. The Mets are 2-4 against Pittsburgh the last two seasons.

Sik, 21, the Mets' third pitcher, earned the victory by checking the Pirates on two hits after replacing the Mets who hit a sacrifice fly in the fourth inning. Jesse Orosco pitched the ninth inning for the Mets.

AL: Niekro wins again; Twins extend West lead to 2 games

CHICAGO (AP) — Joe Niekro, traded to Minnesota from the New York Yankees June 6, said Sunday he's glad he is finally with a team where he can relax and enjoy himself.

"I haven't had that much fun in the last couple years. There was more pressure in New York," Niekro said after he and Juan Berenguer combined on a five-hitter as the Twins beat the Chicago White Sox 6-3.

Tim Laudner, battling only 180, hit a grand slam to give the Twins a 4-0 lead in the second inning off Jose DeLeon. 4-6.

"I wanted to hit it in the outfield somewhere," said Laudner. "It was a fabulous right out."

Chicago Manager Jim Fregosi said DeLeon, who lasted only 1½-innings, "got behind, he got the ball up and he walked too many people."

Minnesota Manager Tom Kelly said he took Niekro out after the sixth because "I didn't think he had a good knuckleball. And putting Berenguer in then made his pitching look even faster after Joe's knuckleball."

Niekro, 54, gave up three runs and five hits in six innings for his 218th career win.

It was the eighth victory in the last nine games for American League West-leader Minnesota, which holds a 2-game lead over second-place Oakland.

Baltimore 8 Toronto 5

Toronto 5 — Ray Knight, Cal Ripken Jr. and Jim Dwyer hit five-game winning streak.

Hough, 62, allowed only one unearned run. He struck out fourth, walked one and pitched his eighth, 10th and 11th.

Eric Plunk, 13, took the loss despite a career-high 11 strikeouts in six innings. He gave up five runs on five hits.

Gene Petrali went 3-for-3 with a double, scored twice and drove in two runs.

Seattle 4 Cleveland 3

SEATTLE (AP) — Jim Presley hit a leadoff home run in the bottom of the 10th inning Sunday night, giving the Seattle Mariners a 4-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Garber in the eighth inning scored Barry Larkin with the winning run in the Cincinnati Reds' 4-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves Sunday.

The victory, combined with San Francisco's loss to San Diego, gave the Reds a 2-game lead in the National League West.

Buddy Bell drew a leadoff walk from Garber, 84, and Larkin came as a pinch runner. He moved to second on Nick Esasky's sacrifice bunt and scored on Concepcion's single left centerfield.

Rob Murphy, 42, pitched one perfect inning to earn the victory. John Franco, the fourth Cincinnati pitcher, closed the game for his 13th save.

Cincinnati stole six bases in six innings against starter Zane Smith, using three of them set up runs.

Friday night. It was the 10th game of this season in which the Royals failed to score, the most in the American League.

Milwaukee 6 New York 4

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Schroeder, who went 4-for-4, and Dale Sveum hit home runs in the eighth inning Sunday to give the Milwaukee Brewers a 6-4 come-from-behind victory over the New York Yankees.

The Brewers, trailing 4-3 after New York's four-run eighth, scored three runs in the ninth off reliever Dave Righetti, 43. Sveum, who entered the game at shortstop in the seventh, started the rally with a one-out homer, his seventh of the season, and Schroeder followed Glenn Braggs' single with his third home run.

Detroit 1 Boston 1

DETROIT (AP) — Mike Heath singled the tiebreaking run in the eighth inning and Jack Morris struck out three in the ninth to give his eighth straight decision Sunday as the Detroit Tigers beat the Boston Red Sox 2-1 and swept their three-game series.

With the score tied 1-1, Alan Trammell drew a two-out walk from Bruce Hurst, 75. Larry Herndon singled Trammell to second and Keith Hernandez hit a sacrifice fly in the seventh, lined an 0-2 pitch up the middle for an RBI single.

Morris, 92, allowed six hits and struck out 10. His winning streak in the American League dates back to 1980, a span of six straight losses.

Hurst, who left after Heath's single, has not won in Tiger Stadium since April 26, 1980, a span of six straight losses.

With one out in the Boston seventh, Mike Greenwell broke a scoreless tie by hitting a 2-1 pitch from Morris over the left-field fence for his seventh homer.

But the Tigers led it in the bottom of the seventh. Trammell hit a leadoff single, extending his hitting streak to 19 games. The season's major league high by Terry Pendleton of St. Louis. Trammell went to third on Herndon's single and scored on a sacrifice fly to center field.

Boston's Wade Boggs, who trails Trammell by only a few points in the AL batting race, extended his hitting streak to 16 games with a first-inning triple.

Meridian hands Cowboys first losses of season

Meridian — The Twin Falls Cowboys absorbed their first losses of the American Legion season here Sunday, dropping a non-league doubleheader to Meridian, 6-1 and 8-4.

No details of the game were available at press time.

Minico wins, loses in Poky

Pocatello — Minico finished the Cowboy Oil Invitational American Legion baseball tournament with a 3-2 record by splitting its two games on Sunday.

The Sage beat Cody, Wyo., 12-3, and then lost to host Pocatello, 2-3.

On Saturday, Minico dropped a single game to Bingham, Utah, 6-2.

Against Cody, the Sage hammered out 10 hits, backing the four-hit, 18-strikeout pitching of 16-year-old right-hander Eric Miller. Kevin Miller sparked a five-run Minico rally in the second inning with a two-run homer and finished the game 2-for-3 with four runs batted in. Kent Schow was 2-for-4 at the plate with two RBIs and Craig Anderson was 2-for-4.

Against Pocatello, the Sage's only runs came on Kevin Condie's two-run homer in the sixth. Right-hander Jim Haganman limited Minico to six hits, two by Condie and two by Kevin Miller, who finished the day with a grand slam to give the Twins a 4-0 lead in the second inning off Jose DeLeon. 4-6.

"I wanted to hit it in the outfield somewhere," said Laudner. "It was a fabulous right out."

Chicago Manager Jim Fregosi said DeLeon, who lasted only 1½-innings, "got behind, he got the ball up and he walked too many people."

Minnesota Manager Tom Kelly said he took Niekro out after the sixth because "I didn't think he had a good knuckleball. And putting Berenguer in then made his pitching look even faster after Joe's knuckleball."

Niekro, 54, gave up three runs and the opener, which counts in the regional standings, 6-5 when Clay Sanders doubled home Phil Clark with the winning run in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Sanders, a 17-year-old shortstop, had three of Wood River's six hits off Jerome right-hander Lance Cole. Wolverine right-hander Lex Levy gave up only four hits, but one of those was a grand-slam home run by Jerome's Jim Bos in the first inning.

In the second game, the Elks pushed across six runs in the top of the second to take an 8-3 lead, helped by five walks. Jeff Turner had two of Jerome's seven hits, while Tom Ferries had two of Wood River's eight hits.

The split left the Wolverines at 3-3 for the season and 2-1 in region, while Jerome fell to 2-3 and 1-2.

Wood River 6, Jerome 5

American Legion "B" doubleheader. The Indians run-ruled the Rangers 13-3 in the opener before dropping the nightcap 10-5.

Buhl put the game away in the first 4-0-0.

Derrick Brinkman led off with a single. Casey Boyer walked, Mike Brady singled and Brinkman scored on a single Cornelio Hernandez.

Brinkman came up and hit his second homer, both in the last four games, giving the Indians a 5-0 advantage.

Buhl put the game away in the fifth inning courtesy of a Meridian error, two walks, singles by Brian Hansen and Boyer and a double by Shane Wiggins.

Boyer had the big difference in the second contest as the Rangers capitalized on five Indian errors for the victory.

Boyer had two singles in that contest making him 4-for-6 for the afternoon.

The Indians, now 6-4 for the season, will see action on Tuesday in a game with a non-conference twin-bill with the Power Rams at 3 p.m.

Buhl 13, Meridian 3

Meridian 10, Buhl 5

Meridian 10, Buhl 5 — Meridian won its first game of the season Sunday, 10-5, over Buhl in a non-league game.

Briefly in Sports

Rosholt, Davis win at BLCC

TWIN FALLS — John Rosholt and Cio Davis of Twin Falls won the men's and women's club championships at the Blue Lakes Country Club Sunday.

Rosholt shot a two-round total of 143, beating runnerup Jim Purves by seven strokes. Davis had a two-day total of 173, four shots better than second-place finisher Winnie Standley.

Rosholt and Davis also won the net honors in the championship flights with scores of 135 and 135, respectively.

Among the men, Pat Donnelly was second in net with a 143, followed by Bruce Meacham at 145. Purves, Dave Driscoll and Mike Beer tied for fourth place with a 146.

In the net-only first flight, Ace Hansen was the winner with a 137, followed by Roy Koch and Mary Oenchain at 141. Jackie Anderson was fifth at 144.

There were 35 golfers participating in the two-day event.

Snead beats Seve in OT

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — J.C. Snead needed only a par 4 on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff Sunday to defeat scrambling Seve Ballesteros for the title in the Westchester Classic.

Ballesteros, the dashing Spaniard who forced the playoff with a birdie on the 72nd hole, charged up the playoff hole after diving deep into the rough. He required four shots to reach the green and never did hole out.

The victory was the eighth of a 20-year career for Snead, a 45-year-old nephew-of-Hall-of-Famer-Sam-Snead, and his first since 1981.

Snead and Ballesteros completed the regulation 72 holes over the Westchester Country Club course in 276, eight under par.

Snead had a closing 70, one under par. Ballesteros, twice a Masters winner and holder of two British Open titles, struggled to a 72.

Walker wins first LPGA title

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Colleen Walker birdied the last two holes Sunday to win the $350,000 Mayflower Classic golf tournament by one shot for her first LPGA triumph.

Walker, 30, had a 3-under-par 69 in the final round to finish at 10 under 270. She just missed an eagle putt on the final hole, leaving the shot inches away from a hole-in-one.

Patti Rizzo, who held or shared the lead until Walker tapped in on 18, tied for second with Bonnie Lauer, Patti Sheehan and Sally Quinlan, all at 279. They each earned $23,313. Rizzo had a 72, Lauer and Sheehan 70s and Quinlan a 68.

Becker gains Queens Club final

LONDON (AP) — Boris Becker, finding his touch in a high-quality final set, rallied to beat the United States 4-6, 7-6, 6-4 Sunday and reach the final of the $300,000 Stella Artois grass court championships at Queens Club.

In the championship match Monday, set back 24 hours because of rain that had plagued this Wimbledon tuneup event, Becker will play another American, Jimmy Connors.

Spinks, Cooney fight tonight

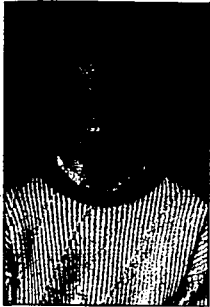

ATLANTA CITY, N.J. (AP) — Michael Spinks and Gerry Cooney will square off here tonight in a heavyweight fight that may be the winner a shot at champion Mike Tyson.

The 15-round bout is scheduled for about 9:15 p.m. EDT at the Atlantic City Convention Center.

It can be seen via closed circuit television at the Blue Lagoon Country Club in Twin Falls and at Cactus Pete's in Idaho Falls. The preliminary fights are scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. EDT.

Kimberly, Pocatello youth are elected

BOISE (AP) — A Pocatello teen-ager became the first third-party candidate to be elected governor of the Idaho American Legion's annual Boys' State mock government conference in Boise, held all last week.

The conference also saw a Kimberly delegate, Jim Bower, elected to office.

Mike Martin of Pocatello, who defected with five of his friends from the traditional Gold Party, was elected governor Wednesday by the 335 high school seniors who are delegates to Boys' State from throughout Idaho.

Martin, who ran under the Bronze Party banner, defeated Gold Party candidate Joel Weaver of Blackfoot and Silver Party candidate Douglas Strand of Challis.

It's the first time a third-party candidate has been elected governor in the history of Idaho's Boys' State, said former governor and current Dean of Election Study, Steve Judd.

Martin said he and his friends split from the Gold Party because they felt they did not have a strong voice in that group.

"This just shows how great our country is, because anybody can be president, or governor or anything they want, and this guy did," Strand said after the election.

Martin said the other delegates did not take him seriously at first, thinking he was trying to make fun of the political process. But he convinced them otherwise during the pre-election speeches.

"When he first got up, everyone was booing, and by the time he finished, he probably had more people cheering for him than anyone else," said delegate Corey Hays of Filer. "It was just amazing."

Other Boys' State officers elected were: David Duncan, Boise, lieutenant governor; Pat Bird, Fruitland, secretary of state; Doug Blum, Troy, treasurer; Steve Schussberger, Pocatello, attorney general; Kevin Odum, Challis, auditor; and Bower, Kimberly, superintendent of public instruction.

Baby-sitters who do more than sit should be paid for laundry, dishes

DEAR ABBY: Last night, my husband and I went out and left our two children with a baby sitter who arrived as I was dishing up dinner.

We returned to find leftover food still on the stove and dirty dishes on the table. I didn't say anything because the girl did perform the job she was paid to do — baby-sit the children.

We've had some sitters who take advantage of the quiet hours after the children are in bed to do the dishes, or at least clear the table and tidy up the toy room. I always thank them and pay them a little extra.

It seems to me that these jobs are an opportunity to develop the good work habits that will carry throughout a career. Rather than just fulfilling the minimum requirements, some young people really make an extra effort.

Am I wrong to expect more from sitters? I feel it's not my place to suggest that they do more than just sit, but it would be great if their parents would! Your comments, please.

—SUE

DEAR SUE: A sitter should not be expected to do anything more than just "sit." Further, the sitter who cleans up—the kitchen, folds the laundry or does anything besides "sit" should be paid accordingly.

When a sitter is engaged, the ground rules should be established. Some guidelines: What precisely are the sitter's responsibilities? Feed the children? Bathe them, put them to bed? Is the sitter allowed to have company? If so, how many friends? Is the sitter allowed to eat and drink whatever she finds in the fridge, or do you set out "the snack"? May the sitter pass the phone talking on the telephone after the children are asleep? If so, how much time? Do you leave a number where you can be reached in case of an emergency? (And does the sitter have the name of your physician or someone to call in case you can't be reached in an emergency?)

Also, do you tell the sitter what time you will be home? And are you as good as your word?

DEAR ABBY: I have never smoked, and I am very sensitive to cigarette smoke. Many of my friends are smokers, but I don't allow anyone to smoke in my car or house.

I'm planning a party in my home for about 20 people. It will be winter, and I do not have a separate room that could be set aside for smoking. Abby, I cannot bear the thought of my house, draperies, rugs and furniture smelling of smoke for days afterward!

Some of my friends have indicated that they would not attend my party, if they weren't permitted to smoke. Is it unreasonable of me to maintain my long-standing no-smoking rule?

— RED-EYED IN INDIANA

DEAR RED-EYED: No, it's unreasonable of them to refuse to attend unless they are permitted to smoke. Your objections are valid. Accept their regrets and tell them you'll miss them.

DEAR ABBY: Please print this because we've asked several people and nobody seems to have the answer. In a traditional church wedding, when the clergyman asks, "If there is anyone present who sees just cause why this couple should not wed, speak now, or forever hold your peace," what would happen if someone spoke up?

And has this ever happened out-side of the movies?

— CONCERNED COUPLE

DEAR CONCERNED: If someone claimed to know why the couple should not marry, the clergyman would stop the ceremony, confer privately with that person, then depending on the clergyman's decision, the wedding would either proceed or be delayed. I was informed that one wedding was stopped when a guest claimed that the bridegroom was already married to another.

NL: Cards sweep Cubs, top East by 6 games

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Danny Cox says he's not trying to do the role of pitching ace for the St. Louis Cardinals — that's just the way it's working out.

"Somebody has to get 'em out, fortunately it's me," Cox said after leading off the Chicago Cubs for 8½ innings Sunday in a 3-2 victory. "I think we need contributions from the whole body; that's the most important thing."

Cox, who has emerged as the No. 1 starter in place of injured John Tudor, held Chicago to five hits in four innings, leaving Cox simmered near the 100-degree level. "He threw 120 pitches; that's quite a bit," Cardinals Manager Stanley Herzog said. "He started to get tired along about the sixth inning."

St. Louis extended its lead in the National League East to six games — its largest margin since winning the series in 1982. "I wish we had five (games) to go. How many have we got left?" Herzog said. "The last week our pitching's been pretty good."

The Cardinals won their fourth straight game and the Cubs lost their fourth in a row. Chicago Manager Gene Michael was not around at the end.

"I don't think it was fair. I didn't even say that much," Michael said of his first-inning ejection, which came after he argued with home plate umpire Jerry Crawford in the first inning about a pitch. "We didn't play very well in this series, and the Cardinals are on a roll."

Cox, 7-3, beat Chicago for the fourth time this season. He struck out six and walked three. Cox left in the ninth after leadoff single by Jerry Murphy and a one-out walk to Leonard Durham.

Todd Worrell relieved Cox and gave up Manny Trillo's two-run homer before getting his major-league-leading 16th save. Cox retired 12 straight batters while holding Chicago to one hit through 4½ innings. Cox ended the sixth inning by getting Andre Dawson to pop up with runners on second and third.

Cincinnati 4 Atlanta 3
CINCINNATI (AP) — Dave Concannon's two-out single off Gene Garber in the eighth inning scored Barry Larkin with the winning run in the Cincinnati Reds' 4-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves Sunday.

The victory, combined with San Francisco's loss to San Diego, gave the Reds a 2-game lead in the National League West. Buddy Bell drew a leadoff walk from Garber, 8-4, and Larkin came on as a pinch runner. He moved to second on Nick Esasky's sacrifice bunt and scored on Concepcion's single in the centerfield.

Rob Murphy, 4-2, pitched one perfect inning to earn the victory. John Franco, the fourth Cincinnati pitcher, closed the game for his 13th save. Cincinnati stole six bases in six innings against starter Zane Smith, using three of them set up runs.

San Diego 4 San Francisco 1
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Left-hander Dave Dravecky pitched a five-hitter and Carmelo Martinez knocked in a pair of runs with a double and a homer in the San Diego Padres' victory over the San Francisco Giants Sunday.

By winning the final three games of a four-game series, the Padres won three in a row for the first time since Aug. 19-21, 1985. The Padres' victory over the Giants, jumped on left-hander Mark Davis, 4-5, for two runs in the first inning. Stan Jefferson hit the decisive lead off with a walk, went to second on a wild pitch and reached third following a flyout.

With two outs, Martinez hit a run-scoring double to right-center and scored on a single by Shane Mack. Kevin Mitchell's double, Dravecky's two-out infield single, and an error by third baseman Chris Speier gave the Padres an unearned run in the second.

Los Angeles 1 Houston 4
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Danny Darwin held Los Angeles hitless for the final 8½ innings and finished with a two-hitter Sunday as the Houston Astros beat the Dodgers 4-1.

Darwin, 4-4, allowed only one baserunner after giving up Pedro Guerrero's 15th home run and a single by Mike Marshall in the first inning. Darwin struck out six, walked one and retired the final 16 Los Angeles batters in his first complete game.

Philadelphia 11 Montreal 6
MONTREAL (AP) — Mike Schmidt hit three homers, drove in six runs and collected his 2,000th career hit Sunday, powering the Philadelphia Phillies past the Montreal Expos 11-6. Schmidt tied Ted Ott for 13th place on the all-time home run list with 511. He tied his single-game career-high with six RBI. Schmidt has hit three home runs in a game two times and once homered four times in an extra-inning game.

New York 7 Pittsburgh 3
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Darrel Strawberry hit a two-run home run, Keith Hernandez added a solo homer and a run-scoring fly to help the Mets' Sisk pitched 4½ innings of scoreless relief as the New York Mets defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-3 Sunday.

Strawberry was ejected from the game Saturday night when he charged the mound after being hit by pitch from Bob Kipper in the second-inning. The incident drew a brief, bench-clearing brawl.

Apparently because that incident home plate umpire Dutch Renner warned both Pittsburgh starter Brian Fisher and New York starter John Mitchell after Fisher hit Tim Teufel with a first-inning pitch. The warning led to the ejections of Mitchell and Mets Manager Dave Johnson in the third when Mitchell brushed back Fisher with a new pitch.

Rafael Santana had a two-run triple during New York's four-run ninth inning as the Mets beat the Pirates for the ninth time in 12 games this season. The Mets are 27-4 against Pittsburgh the last two seasons.

Sisk, 2-1, the Mets' third pitcher, earned the victory by checking the Pirates on two hits after replacing Jeff King on the mound in the fourth inning. Jesse Orosco pitched the ninth inning for the Mets.

AL: Niekro wins again; Twins extend West lead to 2 games

CHICAGO (AP) — Joe Niekro, traded to Minnesota from the New York Yankees June 6, said Sunday he's glad he is finally with a team where he can relax and enjoy himself.

"I haven't had that much fun in the last couple years. There was more pressure in New York," Niekro said after he and Jim Benguerer completed an eight-inning game with the Twins beat the Chicago White Sox 6-3.

Tim Laudner, batting only 180, hit a grand slam to give the Twins a 4-0 advantage in the second inning off Jose DeLeon, 4-6. "I wanted to hit it in the outfield somewhere," said Laudner. "It was a fastball right over."

Chicago Manager Jim Fregosi said DeLeon, who lasted only 1½ innings, "got behind, he got the ball up and he walked too many people." Chicago Manager Jim Fregosi said DeLeon, who lasted only 1½ innings, "got behind, he got the ball up and he walked too many people."

Niekro, 5-4, gave up three runs and five hits in six innings for his 218th career win. It was the eighth victory in the last nine games for American League West-leading Minnesota, which holds a 2-game lead over Baltimore 8 Toronto 5

BALTIMORE (AP) — Ray Knight, Cal Ripken Jr. and Jim Dwyer hit five-game runs Sunday and the Baltimore Orioles broke a 10-game losing streak by beating Toronto 8-5, snapping the Blue Jays' club-record 11-game winning streak.

Baltimore's drought was the four-longest in team history. Toronto ended a 6-1 road trip, the best in club history, in which it outscored Baltimore and New York 51-24. Dave Schmidt, 7-1, won in only his seventh start in his last 197 major league appearances. He allowed Jesse Barfield's 17th homer leading off the second inning and was chased during a three-run eighth that pulled Toronto within 2-4.

Knight's two-run homer snapped a 1-1 tie in the sixth. Knight connected for his seventh home run off reliever Mark Eichhorn, 8-3, after a single by Ed Murray. Baker's 1-2 walk and a two-run shot, chased Eichhorn to the seventh.

Texas 5 Oakland 1
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Charlie Hough pitched a three-hitter and Pete O'Brien homered Sunday to lead the Texas Rangers to a 5-1 victory over Oakland 5-1, ending the Athletics' five-game winning streak.

Hough, 6-2, allowed only an unearned run. He struck out eight, walked one and pitched his fourth complete game. Eric Plunk, 1-3, took the loss despite a career-high 11 strikeouts in six innings. He gave up five runs on five hits.

Seattle 4 Cleveland 3
SEATTLE (AP) — Jim Presley hit a leadoff home run in the bottom of the 10th inning Sunday night, giving the Seattle Mariners a 4-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Presley hit his 14th home run of the season on the right-field fence against Rich Yett, 1-5, the fourth Cleveland pitcher. The Mariners ended their four-game losing streak.

Kansas City 10 Detroit 2
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Dick Schofield hit a grand slam, George Hendrick hit four runs and Don Sutton pitched seven scoreless innings Sunday as the California Angels routed the Kansas City Royals 10-2 Sunday.

In losing two of three weekend games with the Angels, Kansas City scored one run — and made it stand up for Bret Saberhagen's 1-0 victory Friday night. It was the 10th game this season in which the Royals failed to score, the most in the American League.

Milwaukee 6 New York 4
NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Schroeder, who went 4-for-4, and Dale Sveum hit double homers in the ninth inning Sunday to give the Milwaukee Brewers a 6-4 come-from-behind victory over the New York Yankees.

The Brewers, trailing 4-3 after New York's four-run eighth, scored three runs in the ninth off reliever Dave Righetti, 4-2. Sveum, who entered the game at shortstop in the seventh, started the rally with a one-out homer, his seventh of the season, and Schroeder followed Glenn Briggs' single with his third home run.

Boston 1 Detroit 1
DETROIT (AP) — Mike Heath singled home the tiebreaking run in the eighth inning and Jack Morris won his eighth straight decision Sunday as the Detroit Tigers beat the Boston Red Sox 1-0 and swept their three-game series.

With the score tied 1-1, Alan Trammell drew a two-out walk from Bruce Hurst, 7-5. Larry Herndon singled, Trammell hit a sacrifice fly to the second, lined an 0-2 pitch up the middle for an RBI single.

Morris, 9-2, allowed six hits and struck out six. His winning streak is the longest in the American League this season.

Hurst, who lost to Heath's single, has not won in Tiger Stadium since April 26, 1980, a span of six straight losses.

With one out in the Boston seventh, Mike Greenwell broke a scoreless tie by hitting a 2-1 pitch from Morris over the left-field fence for his seventh homer.

But the Tigers tied it in the bottom of the seventh. Trammell hit a leadoff single, extending his hitting streak to 19 games, tying Jim Stoen's major league mark with Terry Pendleton of St. Louis. Trammell went to third on Herndon's single and scored on a sacrifice fly to center by Heath.

Boston's Wade Boggs, who trails Trammell by only a few points in the batting race, had his eighth hitting streak to 16 games with a first-inning triple.

Meridian hands Cowboys first losses of season

By The Times-News
MERIDIAN — The Twin Falls Cowboys absorbed their first losses of the American Legion 8-0 Sunday, dropping a non-league doubleheader to Meridian, 6-1 and 8-4.

No details of the game were available at press time. Minico wins, loses in Poky
POCATELLO — Minico finished the Cowboy-Oil Invitational American Legion baseball tournament with a 3-2 record by splitting its two games on Sunday.

The Sage beat Cody, Wyo., 12-3, and then lost to host Pocatello, 5-2. On Saturday, Minico dropped a single game to Bingham, Utah, 6-2. Against Cody, the Sage hammered out 10 hits, backing the four-hit, 10-strikeout pitching of 16-year-old right-hander Eric Miller. Kevin Mer sparked a five-run Minico rally in the second inning with a two-run homer and finished the game 2-for-3 with four runs batted in. Kent Schoen was 2-for-4 at the plate with two RBIs and Craig Anderson was 2-for-3.

Against Pocatello, the Sage's only runs came on Kevin Condie's two-run homer in the sixth and Rebel right-hander Jim Hallinan limited Minico to six hits, two by Condie and two by Kevin Miller, who finished the day

Legion baseball
4-for-6. Eric Miller also started the second game, pitching five innings and striking out eight.

The weekend's action left Minico at 5-5 pending a Southern Region "A" contest against Twin Falls Tuesday at 5 p.m. in Rupert. Sunday's games

Wood River 6-7 Jerome 5-10
KETCHUM — Jerome took advantage of 10 walks by Wood River pitchers here Saturday to beat the Wolves 10-7 in the second game and gain a split of the team Southern Region, "B" American Legion doubleheader.

The Wolverines won the opener, which counts in the regional standings, 6-5 when Clay Sanders doubled home Phil "Butch" with the winning run in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Sanders, a 17-year-old shortstop, had three of Wood River's six hits off Jerome right-hander Lance Cole. Volvone, right-hander Lex Levy gave up just four hits, but one of those was a grand-slam home run by Jerome's Jim Bus in the first inning.

In the second game, the Elks pushed across six runs in the top of the second to take an 8-3 lead, helped by five walks. Left Turner had two of Jerome's seven hits, while Tom Ferguson had two of Wood River's eight hits.

The split left the Wolverines at 3-3 for the season and 2-1 in region, while Jerome fell to 2-2. Jerome 10, Wood River 7
Buhl 13-5 Meridian 3-10
BUHL — Kelly Atkinson's grand slam home run in the first game helped Buhl gain a split over Meridian Saturday in a non-league

American Legion "B" doubleheader. The Indians routed the Rangers 13-3 in the opener before dropping the nightcap 10-5.

The game away in the first inning taking an 8-0 lead. Derrick Brinkman led off with a single, Casey Boyer walked, Mike Brady singled and Brinkman scored.

Errors were the big difference in the second contest as the Rangers capitalized on five fielding errors for the Indians.

Kimberly, Pocatello youth are elected

BOISE (AP) — A Pocatello teenager became the first third-party candidate to be elected governor of the Idaho American Legion's annual Boys' State mock government conference in Boise, held all last week.

The conference also saw a Kimberly delegate, Jim Bower, elected to office.

Mike Martin of Pocatello, who defected with five of his friends from the traditional Gold Party, was elected governor Wednesday by the 335 high school seniors who are delegates to Boys' State from throughout Idaho.

Martin, who ran under the Bronze Party banner, defeated Gold Party candidate Joel Weaver of Blackfoot and Silver Party candidate Douglas Strand of Challis.

It's the first time a third-party candidate has been elected governor in the history of Idaho's Boys' State, said former-governor and current Dean of Election Steve Judy. Martin said he and his friends split from the Gold Party because they felt they did not have a strong voice in that group.

"This just shows how great our country is, because anybody can be president or governor or anything they want, and this guy did," Strand said after the election.

Martin said the other delegates did not take him seriously at first, thinking he was trying to make fun of the political process. But he convinced them otherwise during the pre-election speeches.

"When he first got up, everyone was booing, and by the time he finished, he probably had more people cheering for him than anyone else," said delegate Corey Hays of Filer. "It was just amazing."

Other Boys' State officers elected were: David Duncan, Boise, lieutenant governor; Pat Bird, Fruitland, secretary of state; Doug Blum, Troy, treasurer; Steve Schussberger, Pocatello, attorney general; Kevin Odum, Challis, auditor; and Bower, Kimberly, superintendent of public instruction.

Baby-sitters who do more than sit should be paid for laundry, dishes

DEAR ABBY: Last night, my husband and I went out and left our two children with a baby sitter who arrived as I was dishes up dinner.

We returned to find leftover food still on the stove and dirty dishes on the table—I didn't say anything because the girl did perform the job she was paid to do — baby-sit the children.

We've had some sitters who take advantage of the quiet hours after the children are in bed to do the dishes, or at least clear the table and tidy up the toy room. I always thank them and pay them a little extra.

It seems to me that these jobs are an opportunity to develop the good work habits that will carry throughout a career. Rather than just fulfilling the minimum requirements, some young people really make an extra effort.

Am I wrong to expect more from sitters? I feel it's not my place to suggest that they do more than just sit, but it would be great if their parents would! Your comments, please.

DEAR ABBY: I have never smoked, and I am very sensitive to cigarette smoke. Many of my friends are smokers, but I don't allow anyone to smoke in my car or house.

I'm planning a party in my home for about 20 people. It will be winter-like, and I do not have a separate room that could be set aside for smoking. Abby, I cannot bear the thought of my house, draperies, rugs and furniture smelling of smoke for days afterward!

Some of my friends have indicated that they won't attend my party if they weren't permitted to smoke. Is it unreasonable of me to maintain my long-standing no-smoking

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

rule? — RED-EYED IN INDIANA

DEAR RED-EYED: No, it's unreasonable of them to refuse to attend unless they are permitted to smoke. Your objections are valid. Accept their regrets and tell them you'll miss them.

DEAR ABBY: Please print this because we've asked several people and nobody seems to have the answer. In a traditional church wedding, when the clergyman asks, "If there is anyone present who sees just cause why this couple should not wed, speak now, or forever hold your peace," what would happen if someone spoke up?

And has this ever happened outside of the movies? — CONCERNED COUPLE

DEAR CONCERNED: If someone claimed to know why the couple should not marry, the clergyman would stop the ceremony, confer privately with that person, then depending on the clergyman's decision, the wedding would either proceed or be delayed. I was informed that one wedding was stopped when a guest chimed that the bridegroom was already married — to her.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
 Notice is hereby given by the Planning and Zoning Commission of the City of Twin Falls, Idaho, that a public hearing will be held at the Courthouse, 7:00 o'clock, P.M., on Thursday, June 18, 1987, a Tuesday, in the Council Chambers, City Hall located at 21 Fourth Avenue East, Twin Falls, Idaho, upon the application of Arlene and Maria Tramer for a SPECIAL USE PERMIT in order that the applicant may operate a young adults center on property located 1223 Lynwood Mall, Twin Falls and legally described as:

The SW 1/4 NW 1/4 Section 10, Township 10 South and Range 17 East of the Boise Meridian, Twin Falls, Idaho, EXCEPT THE N 1/2 NW 1/4 NW 1/4 thereof. Said exception portion being also described as: Beginning at the Northeast corner of said SW 1/4 NW 1/4, Section 10, Township 10 South and Range 17 East of the Boise Meridian, and extending East 40 rods; THENCE North 20 rods to the Point of Beginning; AND ALSO EXCEPTING a strip of land being the West 40 feet of SW 1/4 SW 1/4 NW 1/4 and 1/2 NW 1/4 NW 1/4 of Section 10, Township 10 South, Range 17 EBM and an additional strip beginning at a point, which is 897.6 feet East and 40 feet West of the West quarter corner of said Section 10, Township 10 South, Range 17 EBM; THENCE South 54 feet to the Point of Beginning; AND ALSO EXCEPTING the South 25 feet thereof; AND ALSO EXCEPTING that portion of said SW 1/4 SW 1/4 NW 1/4 and East of the Perkins Coulee, consisting of 15 acres, more or less; AND SUBJECT to existing highway rights of way, telephone, power rights of way or electrically, canal rights of way and lateral easements and sewer rights of way. Any and all persons desiring to comment may appear and be heard at the appointed time and place.

The decision of the Commission shall be final unless within fifteen days of the Commission's action an appeal is filed with the City Council. On Appeal, a Public Hearing shall be scheduled before the City Council.
 DATED THIS 10th day of June, 1987.
 Irl Joan Brawley, Chairman
 PUBLISH: Monday, June 15, 1987.

NOTICE OF INTENTION AND HEARING
 NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Council and Mayor of the City of Twin Falls, Idaho, have justly adopted and approved Resolution No. 1417 on the 10th day of June, 1987, which, among other things, established a Public Hearing for the following:

NOTICE OF HEARING: At its Council meeting to be held on the 25th day of June, 1987, at 6:00 o'clock p.m., or as soon thereafter, all objections and protests may be heard, at the Council Chambers in City Hall, 321 Second Avenue East, Twin Falls, Idaho. The Council shall hold a hearing to consider all protests and objections filed in writing for the creation of Local Improvement District No. 91, or the street improvements proposed to be constructed and installed in said Local Improvement District. The Council reserves the right to adjourn the hearing from time to time at a fixed future time and place until all protests and objections have been heard. Owners of property to be assessed and situated within the boundaries of the proposed Local Improvement District hereinafter described have up to and including the hour of 5:00 o'clock p.m. on the 24th day of June, 1987, to file with the City Clerk of the City of Twin Falls, City Hall, Twin Falls, Idaho, written protests and objections to the creation of the said Local Improvement District, or to the making of the improvements proposed to be constructed and installed within the said Local Improvement District, or making any other protests to create said Local Improvement District No. 91.

BOUNDARIES OF DISTRICT: A description of the boundaries of the proposed Local Improvement District No. 91 to be created and the property within said District to be assessed for a portion of the total costs and expenses of the aforesaid improvements are described as follows:

(a) District Boundaries: The City limits which consist of the boundaries of the real property as set forth on Exhibit "A" attached hereto and as depicted on the map attached hereto as Exhibit "B" incorporated by this reference.

(b) Property to be Assessed: All real property within said Local Improvement District which abuts or fronts on Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

DESCRIPTION OF IMPROVEMENTS: Those portions of Blue Lakes Boulevard North which have not been widened to 32 feet on each side of the center line of such street on each side of the center line of such street. In connection therewith a center turn approach will be provided and curb, gutter, driveway aprons and sidewalk will be installed. Where necessary, irrigation facilities will be relocated and reconstructed and other improvements made. Reference is made to detailed plans and drawings available for inspection at the office of the City Engineer.

ESTIMATE COST: The probable cost and expenses of the above construction, engineering, etc. are estimated to be $138,000, which will be paid from assessments on property within the Local Improvement District.

METHOD OF ASSESSMENT: The method of assessment as each parcel within the said Local Improvement District will be by the lineal front foot method and for driveway approaches the benefits derived method. Under the lineal front foot method the total amount to be assessed, except for the cost of driveway approaches, will be divided by the total number of lineal front foot of each lot or parcel of property within the Local Improvement District fronting on Blue Lakes Boulevard North and then multiplying this value times the front footage of each parcel to be assessed. The cost of driveway approaches shall be divided among these lots (lots or parcels) within the Local Improvement District upon which such driveway approaches are located according to the benefits derived by each such parcel.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION: Anyone desiring further information pertinent to said intent to create said District may examine, or receive a copy of, Resolution No. 1417 on file in the office of the City Clerk, City Hall, Twin Falls, Idaho. Dated this 9th day of June, 1987.
 Jewel Chandler, City Clerk

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

"He that makes himself an ass must not take it ill if men ride him." - Thomas Fuller

The clues of an impending disaster were there for any prudent declarer to see.

East won's rub ace and wisely shifted to the 7rd deuce instead of giving West's obvious club ruff.

East reasoned correctly that he would need a spade ruff in addition to a club ruff to get one down.

Dummy's spade 10 won and South led a sleepy trump from dummy.

East's shift to spades at trick two was an orn that South should not have ignored.

ANSWER: Spade try. Any one of three cards in partner's hand will help spades (A, K, J). Only ace or queen will help in hearts.

Counselors wield hypnosis as self-help tool

People don't go under hypnosis, as if under someone's control, but into hypnosis as a different state of consciousness.

By KRISTIN TUCKER
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Total relaxation of the mind and body is the key to hypnotherapy, unlocking the subconscious mind to the power of positive suggestions and opening the door for relief from pain, stress, anxiety, bad habits and other problems.

Hypnosis was a tool Twin Falls counselor Connie Feldhusen used to prepare for the comprehensive exams for her master's degree. Feldhusen says hypnosis helped her maintain a confident, positive attitude and gave her mental access to thousands of details she had studied.

Two local hypnotherapists explain that hypnosis temporarily removes the barrier between the conscious and subconscious mind. In hypnosis, a person has access to memories, feelings, perceptions and solutions that are normally submerged.

But hypnosis doesn't put you under the control of another person or make you do anything against your moral code. Nor can people be hypnotized against their will. And after hypnosis, a person remembers everything that happened during hypnosis.

"In hypnosis, people are not going to do anything that is inappropriate, or that they would not choose to do," says Twin Falls counselor and hypnotherapist Jackie Hendricks. People don't go "under" hypnosis, as if under someone's control, but "into" hypnosis as a different state of consciousness.

"Hypnosis is re-educating the mind," adds hypnotherapist Don Spencer, who recently moved to Twin Falls from Southern California. "It's the oldest form of self-help we have."

The word "hypnosis" is Latin for "sleep," but hypnosis is far different than regular sleep. Hypnosis is more like the pre-sleep stage in which people are totally relaxed but completely aware of what is happening.

To induce hypnosis, Hendricks has her client recline in a comfortable chair and close his eyes. Hendricks' soft voice and about five minutes of gentle instruction gradually bring the client into hypnosis.

"A wave of relaxation covers you like a nice, warm blanket," Hendricks says quietly. "A wave of relaxation through your whole body."

After physical relaxation, Hendricks has her client slowly count backward from 100 and envision the numbers slowly disappearing from view. Often before reaching 50, the client says all the numbers have disappeared.

In hypnosis, a person has mental access to the usually hidden reaches of the subconscious, where nothing is impossible and everything is accepted literally. Since the subconscious mind doesn't think critically, a hypnotist's suggestions are perceived as reality, and the hypnotized person accepts a "suggestion" that a hand is numb or that a river is running through the room. That person will also readily accept suggestions to stop smoking, lose weight, pass an exam or cope with stress.

The hypnotist acts as teacher or facilitator. With some instruction, practice and perhaps the use of a taped message, a person can learn self-hypnosis.

Age regression is one of the most dramatic applications of hypnotherapy: through hypnosis, a person can go back in time to relive previous events, even those that are not a part of the conscious memory. The subconscious mind allows the hypnotized person complete recall of the event as if it were happening again, giving a new perspective on the past and enabling change. It's a process that can release people from mental blocks, phobias, impotence, stuttering and numerous other problems.

Spencer uses age regression and other techniques to de-program people who have been "brainwashed" by cults such as Peoples Temple. When his hypnosis clients are entering a traumatic situation, Spencer sometimes uses techniques that enable clients to view their lives such as "time travel," providing them more detachment from the actual event. He also can suggest that they return to pleasurable experiences. Later, all those revisited experiences will be part of the person's conscious memory.

Feldhusen uses self-hypnosis to relieve stress and enhance learning. Spencer says he uses self-hypnosis after reading; while sleeping he reviews the books he has read.

Hypnosis is also used for anesthesia. A suggestion to block pain can allow surgery or dental work to be performed without other anesthetics. Persons with chronic pain may respond to suggestions that block them from that discomfort. But blocking pain has its risks.

"Pain always has a reason," says Spencer. "That reason may be a need for attention. But pain is in direct relation to relaxation."

In the Magic Valley, hypnosis is most commonly used by those who want to stop smoking or control their weight. Spencer uses a group approach for those purposes; Hendricks works with individuals. Both claim that hypnosis leads to quick results.

In her no-smoking program, "one session usually does it," says Hendricks, and on two occasions the clients have stopped smoking after attending just the free introductory session.

For weight control, Hendricks uses a "comprehensive approach" that she insists is not a diet. "The idea is to change people's relationship to food," she explains. Hypnosis is a tool that helps people learn to eat only for nourishment and for enjoyment. "Eat when hungry," she advises. "Savor and enjoy each bite — then stop."

Hendricks recently received her master's degree in counseling from the College of Idaho, and integrates hypnotherapy with other counseling skills. A year ago she began training with Boise counselor and hypnotherapist Rick Hayes, and plans to continue to develop her skills as a hypnotherapist.

"Hypnosis is not counseling," she says. "It's a tool that can be used to get to the issues."

Hypnosis can unveil troubles that would take years of the "talk therapy" traditionally used in counseling, agree Hendricks and Spencer. "Psychanalysis is slow, like 'peeling the layers off an onion,'" says Hendricks, whereas hypnotherapy can "get immediately to the core of the problem. Counseling skills enhance her ability to prepare clients for hypnosis, to make appropriate suggestions during hypnosis, and to "process" the experience later.

Unlike Hendricks, Spencer's training focused on hypnosis, not counseling, with study at two Southern California institutes of hypnosis. An interest in metaphysics flavors his work, and his holistic approach to therapy involves mental, physical and spiritual dimensions. When one of the three dimensions is "out of kilter," there is imbalance, he says, which can be regained through hypnosis.

As hypnotherapists, both view their work as teacher more than healer. "I don't prescribe, diagnose or treat," says Spencer. "I help people to help themselves."

AIDS scare: More storing own blood

The Associated Press

BOISE — Merua Silvia of Boise underwent her fourth spinal fusion operation this spring. But for the first time, the blood she used was her own.

"It's safer and more compatible than someone else's blood," she said. "I used to think it was incredible."

The bag holding the blood spilled onto Silvia's reason, in large red letters: "This product may transmit infectious agents."

Red Cross officers show that 2 percent of cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome stem from blood transfusions. When blood is screened carefully, only one AIDS-infected unit will get into the blood supply for every 100,000 donors, said Joan Bloom, a public health professor at the University of California at Berkeley.

But in the minds of patients, she said, it still amounts to Russian roulette with a blood bag.

For an increasing number of patients, the answer is transfusions of their own blood, or autologous transfusions. In 1984, 46 patients in Boise hospitals had their own blood for surgery; last year, the figure was 226, and the current rate will be more than doubled this year.

"Patients can arrange with their doctors to use their own blood when surgery is scheduled," said Mike Workman, head of the blood bank at

Red Cross calls for 'rare' blood types

BOISE — "I've been told I have rare blood and should donate only when called."

This is a reason for not donating often heard by staff and volunteers at the Snake River Regional Red Cross Blood Service.

What is rare blood and should you continue to "save" yours if you do indeed have rare blood?

In technical terms, rare blood is a type occurring in less than 1 in every 1,000 individuals. While there are eight basic blood types — A, B, O, and AB, each either Rh-negative or Rh-positive — there are at least 400 other factors on red blood cells. It is these other factors that determine whether or not a person has "rare" blood. Every human being will have one of the eight basic types. Even AB negative blood, the least common, is not considered a rare type. "We are now encouraging people with rare blood to donate on a regular basis," explained Dr. Ted Walters, medical director for Red Cross Blood Services. The Red Cross can now freeze rare blood types and have them on hand for anyone around the world who may need that type. Walters encouraged anyone who has been told they have a rare type to begin donating again. "The only really rare type is the one we don't have on the shelf when a patient needs it," Walters said.

Any healthy adult between the ages of 17 and 66, weighing at least 110 pounds, is eligible to donate blood. This regional Red Cross Blood Service must collect 160 units of blood every day to provide the blood needs of patients in 49 hospitals in 47 counties in Idaho, eastern Oregon and eastern Washington.

St. Luke's Regional Medical Center.

Up to four units of blood are drawn and stored during the five weeks before the operation, he said. "That's almost always enough for surgery, and post-operative care." Any additional blood is drawn from the general blood supply.

Despite the rarity of infection through transfusion, and the medical profession's promise of careful screening, other findings make the public more wary than ever of accepting someone else's blood, Bloom said.

For example, the Red Cross estimates that 1 million to 1.5 million Americans have been infected by the AIDS virus. "Many of them show no signs of illness and do not know they carry the virus," a Red Cross pamphlet says.

Dr. Tom Jewell, a specialist in abdominal surgery for 15 years, opted for an autologous transfusion in March, when he found out he needed abdominal surgery. The main reason: fear of AIDS.

"Doctors are all concerned 'now about body fluids' and protecting themselves," he said. "Getting a patient's blood or saliva on you makes you nervous, where five years ago, it was something that happened every day." Jewell has seen a change in patients' attitudes as well. "In the past, it was very rare for patients to want to know if you think they'll need blood," he said. But now they do.

"The scary thing is that at one time AIDS was a disease that primarily belonged to what was considered by many to be an undesirable portion of society: homosexuals and drug users," Jewell says. "But that's not the case. It's totally random and unpredictable."

"Although there have only been a

Cholesterol drug promising

CHICAGO (AP) — A drug tested in Tokyo reduces levels of cholesterol in the blood by up to 30 percent in patients with high levels of the artery-clogging substance, researchers say.

The drug, called CS-514, inhibits an enzyme key to the production of cholesterol. It is produced in the breakdown of a substance called compactin, which comes from fermentation of a fungus related to the one used to make penicillin, said doctors at Tokai University Tokyo Hospital.

CS-514 was given to 41 patients with high blood cholesterol levels in a four-week study, with subjects receiving daily doses of 5, 20 or 40 milligrams, the doctors said in Friday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

The decline began as early as one week after the patients began taking the medication and reached its maximum after three to four weeks, the researchers reported. Side effects "were not serious and were fully acceptable when compared with the benefits," the researchers said.

Tampon rating system in works

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration will propose a new absorbency rating system for sanitary tampons later this year, agency officials said Tuesday.

The FDA decided to develop the system after industry and trade groups were unable to agree on a rating system, said Les Weinstein of FDA.

He said a notice of proposed rulemaking is expected to be issued sometime this fall, proposing a system of absorbency ratings using a range of numbers on the label.

Tampon absorbency has been an issue since the late 1970s when the illness toxic shock syndrome began occurring and was later associated with use of some super absorbent tampons.

France OKs heart attack drug

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. (AP) — A synthetic drug that has been called the "penicillin of heart attacks" has been approved for sale in France for use in dissolving blood clots in heart-attack patients, it was announced Thursday.

"We're pretty excited about this since it's the first European country to give approval," said Debra C. Bannister, spokeswoman for Genentech Inc.

Tissue Plasminogen Activator, which is marketed outside of North America under the trade mark Actilyse, has been tested in clinical trials since early 1984. The drug is a synthetically created version of an human enzyme found naturally in the body.

Actilyse has been approved for use in the Philippines and New Zealand and approval is pending in 20 other nations. In France, it will be distributed by Boehringer Ingelheim International.

In the United States, the drug was tested last year at hospitals in Cincinnati and Columbus, Ohio, where it proved highly successful in reducing blood clots in heart attack victims, researchers say.

Genentech is seeking approval from the Food and Drug Administration for general use in the United States. Doctors involved in the trials said they hope it will be available later this year.

Kids will wear what they eat this fall

By ANN NOWAK
Newsewy

This fall, fashion-conscious kids will be able to wear what they eat.

Taking the cue from M&M's International — the company that put the Coca-Cola symbol on clothing and then persuaded the public to buy $250 million worth of it by the end of last year — apparel manufacturers have scrambled to scoop up licenses for everything from Jello to Lifesavers to Mayer McCheese for their fall children's-wear lines.

Leading the pack is Sears-Roebuck & Co., which last week introduced McKids — a line of colorful, casual clothing produced under a licensing agreement with McDonald's. A spokeswoman for Sears said the company plans to devote up to 70 percent of its children's-wear floor-space to McKids, with small boutique-like areas, colorful graphics, and McDonaldland characters. The collection of separates, accessories, shoes and pajamas is moderately priced, ranging from $5 for a toddler T-shirt to $17 for washed-cotton pants. And fear not that your kids will look like walking billboards when wearing the stuff: only 10 to 15 percent of the items will have any visible tie-in to the golden arches.

Sears plans to spend $10 million on television and print advertising to promote McKids, beginning July 26. The apparel, designed for Couples in conflict can take 2 paths: to protect or to learn

Maybe the conflict starts over differing desires or needs, say, with one partner wanting to make love and the other not in the mood... again. Or the conflict starts with a difference of opinion, maybe over disciplining the children or who should do a certain chore.

Once into the conflict, the couple may become hopelessly enmeshed in yelling, verbal assaults and blame—with both partners looking to the other as the cause of the problem.

Even after the conflict is over, both partners may harbor anger and resentment for hours, or even days or years.

This is the manner in which inevitable conflict plays out in many marriages, say Jordan and Margaret Paul, authors of "Do I have to Give Up Me to Be Loved by You?" But couples do have another choice.

All of the many varieties of responses couples can make to a conflict stem from only two intents: protect or to learn by the Pauls. If partners take the path of protection, they will defend against any threats of emotional pain—real or imagined. If they take the path of learning, they become willing to be vulnerable and open, to discover each other's feelings, and to feel each each is feeling and behaving as he or she is.

Most people protect themselves when they are upset, becoming closed, hard, unavailable and cold, say the Pauls. These protective responses, learned in childhood, are automatic and instantaneous, and serve to let people avoid personal responsibility for their own feelings, behaviors and any resulting consequences.

According to these authors, protectiveness falls into three categories:

COMPLIANCE: Avoiding conflict by denying one's own feelings or needs and going along with what the other wants because of fear of rejection.

CONTROL: Trying to change the other's mind or behavior by making that person feel guilty or afraid, or approval (in the form of anger, criticism, tears, threats, lectures) tells the other: "You are wrong!"

"I won't love you until you do things my way."

INDIFFERENCE: Ignoring the conflict, withdrawing into separate preoccupations (TV, work, drugs, sports). This implies, "I'm not affected by you, and you can't hurt or control me."

When both partners protect, they create what the Pauls call a protective circle: "When both run from conflict, there is a distant peace. Attempts to get the other to change bring on power struggles, each person bent on winning—or at least not losing. Giving oneself up may eliminate power struggles, but the submission itself becomes part of the problem."

Protective circles, point out the Pauls, bring on all of the gnawing difficulties in most ongoing relationships—boring or infrequent sex; poor communication; emotional distance; a lack of fun; bitter struggles over money, in-laws or child-rearing, and any number of other problems.

The only responses to a conflict that are not protective are those motivated by an intent to learn from the conflict. Couples who choose instead to learn as their approach to conflict open the door to intimacy.

To adopt this approach, couples must become non-defensive—open, soft, curious, warm, available. Partners give up blaming each other and assume personal responsibility for their own feelings, behavior, and any resulting consequences. Both focus on their own feelings to help them discover more about themselves and why they have behaved as they did in the conflict.

Couples who choose intent to learn as their approach to conflict open the door to intimacy.

Partners in a learning mode ask questions like these, observe the Pauls:

- Why am I upset?
- What are my fears?
- Why am I afraid?
- What do I hope to gain from feeling or acting this way?
- What are my unmet expectations?
- Why do I get angry when I'm hurt or disappointed?
- What is the purpose of my anger?

- Why is it so important for me to get my way, to be right and not be wrong?
- What are my fears of not being in control?
- What part am I playing in creating this present problem?
- How is my partner's behavior affecting me?
- How does it affect me the way it does?
- How do I respond to this behavior?
- What are the consequences of the way I respond?
- How does my behavior affect my partner? What happens between us?

Partners also ask the same questions each other: What are your fears? Why are you afraid? Why do you see things the way you do? What are your unmet expectations? Why do you get angry when you're hurt or disappointed?

Couples thus engage in a process of mutual exploration that helps each partner to express feelings and to understand him or herself on a deeper level. The focus of the exploration is not a search for solutions or a commitment for change. Rather, it is to open the door to understanding, respect, and personal change, out of which may emerge mutually satisfying resolutions to conflict.

TRAVEL TIPS

TRAVEL AGENTS

Travel is a subject which interests most people whether they are frequent or occasional travelers. I'm going to offer these Travel Tips columns on a regular basis to keep you informed on every aspect of travel. I hope you'll find them interesting and informative.

This one will deal briefly with the functions of a travel agent and explain how our service is the least expensive in today's economy. It's strange how many travelers don't know that travel agents' services are usually free or how valuable they are. You don't pay any more to book your travel than you do when you go to a travel agent. Airlines, steamship companies, tour operators, hotels and rental companies with whom we do business, inasmuch as we represent all companies, we're able to make the best arrangements for you in what might be considered "one stop shopping." In the case of custom itineraries or services for which we don't earn a commission, it might sometimes be necessary to make a small service charge, but this will always be spelled out in advance and these charges never apply on normal reservations.

We travel frequently ourselves to gain first hand knowledge and every client rates our attention. We'll book your one-way air ticket with us as much as your Round-the-World ticket. We'll give you the fares and schedules for all carriers and your tickets will be issued right in our office. You may even charge them on a credit card if you wish.

Your business is important to us, but your total satisfaction is of even greater concern. Let us book your next trip and see that in our Round-the-World itinerary, there's still a place where service counts and the customer is king.

Weigh facts first on Omega-3 bait

By the Los Angeles Times

Last year, calcium hit it big. This time it's fish. And now, fish oil has bobbed to the surface. That's right, fish oil, like the cod-forsaken liver oil forced into Spanky's and Alfalfa's mouths.

More than half a dozen companies are putting fish oils in gel-like capsules that look like Vitamin E supplements. They're selling them at about 20 cents a cap, and catching consumers with the promise that fish oils may reduce your risk of heart attack.

Here are some facts to weigh before deciding to take the bait.

The link between fish oil and reduced heart disease was first noted by Danish scientists, who discovered that the Eskimos of Greenland virtually never die of heart disease. After investigating, the scientists deduced that a high fish diet was the Eskimos' chief weapon.

The link has since been strengthened by other population studies and clinical studies, who show that fish oil can reduce blood fat and platelet aggregation—two risk factors for atherosclerosis (hardening of the arteries) and heart attacks.

Researchers speculate that the fatty acids in fish oils—and narlicularly a class of fatty acids known as Omega-3—do this good work. In fact, they say, Omega-3 could prove to be beneficial for everything from asthma and cancer to psoriasis and rheumatoid arthritis.

"It has been proven that (fish oil) has an impact on inflammatory bowel disease, arthritis, asthma and other diseases," says Donald Pagan, M.D., director of the University of California at San Francisco. "But it's pointing in the right direction."

Indeed, the results of most preliminary clinical studies are promising. Fifteen migraine patients, for instance, reported relief after taking Omega-3. Those with rheumatoid arthritis who were fed fish oil suffered fewer tender joints. And psoriasis sufferers—on high-fish-oil-diets showed improvement.

Still, no one is ready to call fish oil a miraculous cure-all. "I don't think this will be," "Take fish oil and your asthma will go away," explains Elliott Israel, M.D., at Harvard Medical School in Boston, who is studying the effect of fish oil on asthmatics. "I'm hopeful that it will be," "Take fish oil and your asthma will be better."

Retarded could be emotionally fit if treated better, researchers say

CHICAGO (AP) — Most emotional problems suffered by mentally retarded people probably are caused by society's ridicule and disregard, not their limited intelligence, a researcher said Tuesday in reporting on a new study.

The study found 45 percent of retarded people living in community-based group homes had problems with social adjustment that range from asking for help too much to withdrawing and giving up.

Many have developed emotional disturbances not because they're mentally retarded, but because they're rejected and stigmatized, said the researcher, psychology professor Steven Reiss of the University of Illinois at Chicago.

"The psychological problems mentally handicapped people have are the same problems that average people would face if they were treated with the same insensitivity," Reiss said.

"Mentally retarded people are aware of how they're treated to a greater degree than most people realize," he said, adding that inappropriate treatment ranges from ridicule to disregard to being "killed with kindness."

The retarded need to be taught the social skills required to adjust to their situation, said Reiss, director of the university-based Mental Health Clinic of the Institute for the Study of Developmental Disabilities.

"We may need to rethink special education in the United States and focus much more on teaching social-behavioral skills and not focus so exclusively on academic skills," he said.

Reiss collected data on 205 mentally retarded people in community-based group homes in the Chicago area.

The study found that 37 percent had anxiety severe enough to interfere with their functioning, and 27 percent had problems handling their own feelings of aggression.

couple of transfusion-transmitted AIDS cases in Idaho, there is no reason to take a risk," Jewell said. "If there is time, I always recommend that my patients use their own blood."

Hospital officials said the sharp rise in autologous transfusions began when AIDS became linked to transfusions.

"As short a time as two years ago, we would experience no more than five autologous transfusions a year," Bob Hieronymus of St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center said. "It's safe to say we're scheduling just about five a week now."

For 10 years, St. Luke's has offered to store autologous blood for patients, Wortman said. "But it's been the AIDS crisis that's really made people aware," he said.

For the same reason, the American Red Cross recorded a 300 percent jump between 1985 and 1986 in autologous transfusions from 5,800 to 18,000. Figures for 1987 are unavailable, but are considered to be at least as high as last year.

Connie Seales, director of the Red Cross in Idaho and eastern Oregon, said that before 1985, there were very few autologous donors. In the last six months, there have been 20 to 25 a month, twice as many per month as last year, she said.

Some patients are unable to have their own blood drawn and used. "If they (patients) are anemic already, and can't afford to lose any more blood," autologous blood would not be used," Wortman said.

Emergency patients whose lives depend upon immediate surgery also would have to take their chances and use other transfusion blood, he said.

Vitamin A can reduce child deaths

WASHINGTON (AP) — New research shows that providing children in developing nations with vitamin A treatments may reduce child death rates by as much as 70 percent to 80 percent, scientists and lawmakers said Thursday.

The research was conducted by Alfred Sommer of Johns Hopkins University and is included in the June edition of the journal Journal of Clinical Nutrition. It is based on the reanalysis of a study conducted on the distribution of vitamin A to children in Indonesia.

Sommer said the analysis demonstrates that the children who actually received the vitamin A "probably have a reduction in their mortality rates to 70 to 80 percent."

"That's an astounding, astounding figure," said Rep. Tony Hall, D-Ohio. Hall said vitamin A deficiency contributes to measles, respiratory disease, diarrhea and other illnesses that can be fatal in developing nations.

Vitamin A is found in liver, eggs, squash, carrots and spinach, while milk and margarine are routinely fortified with vitamin. However, many children in developing countries are not given these foods and can easily become deficient in vitamin A.

The World Health Organization estimates that vitamin A deficiency results in the blindness of 500,000 children every year. It is considered the most serious of 13 countries and territories and is most severe in Asia, Africa and parts of South and Central America.

Hall said a megadose of vitamin A can be administered to a child orally for less than 2 cents in the form of a "golden bullet," a small jellybean-like capsule.

"It's easy to administer," said Hall. "It's really inexpensive. It lasts six months. It's the miracle vitamin, as far as I'm concerned, of this century. When you can take 1,000 of these capsules and save 50 to 60 lives, that's exciting."

However, Hall said the Reagan administration has proposed spending only $300,000 for overseas children through age 7, also will be featured in a 24-page section of the Sears fall-winter catalog, to be released later this month.

Retail analysts predict, McKids will bring in more than $100 million in sales during its first year, an amount equal to last year's sales of Sears' popular Winnie-the-Pooh clothing, which it has licensed from Walt Disney since 1965. McKids is the first major children's brand that Sears has introduced since Winnie-the-Pooh.

David Stewart, Sears vice president in charge of men's and children's wear, said the company does not intend to abandon the dressier, more traditional Winnie-the-Pooh line in favor of the trendier, sportier McKids. "They are intended to complement each other," he said.

But McDonald's and Sears will not be alone in their quest to capture the fancies of kids and pocketbooks of parents. Burger King has a line of kids' clothing in the works; General Foods has sold the licensing rights for Jell-O. And Nabisco Brands has completed licensing agreements with Double Originals, a division of West Point Pepperell, to introduce a fall line of children's clothing with logos of products that include the Baby Ruth candy bar, Bubble Yum bubblegum, Barnum's Animals, the 85-year-old cracker, and Oreo, the 76-year-old cookie. Peter Knitzer, manager of licensing ventures for Nabisco Brands USA, said the arrangement would help to "enhance equity in our brand names."

The Burger King clothes, sized toddler to 16, are priced at $12.99 to $15.99. Some of the sweatshirts will say "Burger King Kids" or "Have It Your Way" on the front, while other fleece and jersey separates will bear a small replica of the company's hamburger-shaped emblem.

The Jell-O clothes, for children through age 8, will be sold at J.C. Penney beginning next month. According to Paul Heullitt, a spokeswoman for General Foods, some of the clothes will bear the words "Breakin' the Mold"; all will be brightly colored, "reminiscent of our product line," she said.

But for all this new competition in the licensing of consumables to children's apparel, the company that started it all says it is not concerned. "The wonderful thing about Coca-Cola is that there is 100 years of positive lifestyle imagery associated with it," said Carol Fox, a spokeswoman for Murjani. "We did a bunch of research and found that Coca-Cola has nothing but positive images: values, honesty, energy, youth." Coca-Cola stands for something; that's something very few other brands could claim.

AP/Lanephoto

McKids sleepwear has a Ronald McDonald motif or, right, features a caped Hamburglar

She added that since 1985 when the line of Coca-Cola clothing was launched, Murjani has received "tons of phone calls from companies who would like us to do for their brands what we did for Coke. And our feeling is certainly one of pride because we were the first to do it."

Fox said the idea to launch a line of Coca-Cola clothes came from lawyers looking for a way to protect the company's trademark. Meanwhile, those who follow licensing say they are not surprised by the new rush to cash in on the children's-wear market.

Arnold Bolka, publisher of the Licensing Letter, a Scottsdale, Ariz., newsletter, said sales of licensed products have soared from $4.9 billion in 1977 to $54.3 billion in 1986, and are expected to reach $90 billion by the early 1990s. Children's and accessories, including children's lines, are the most lucrative category — with annual sales of licensed items reaching $18.7 billion for 1986.

Says Bolka, the field is "hot and it's still growing." Murjani expects sales of Coca-Cola clothes to reach $500 million for 1987. This includes both children's and adults' lines, encompassing everything from sportswear, swimwear, and sleepwear, to maternity-wear, shoulderpads, sunglasses, socks and watches.

Although neither McKids nor Burger King clothing will be sold in adult sizes, some of the Nabisco items will be. Mayfair Industries is expected to sell Life Savers and Oreo Cookies apparel in August. Mayfair is also coming out with adult sweat shirts featuring Hershey Bars and Reese's Pieces, under a licensing agreement with Hershey Foods Corp.

LIGHT METER BATTERIES

If your camera has a light meter battery in it, be sure and change it periodically. Batteries have a knack for giving out at the worst times. You should change your battery at least once a year. Make it a ritual, perhaps on your birthday or the 4th of July. Also check your battery every now and then for corrosion. If a cell corrodes in its compartment, it can cause serious damage to your camera.

Plastic guns may pose risk to kids — doctors

CHICAGO (AP) — Plastic handguns are still on the drawing board, but they may reach the market long even more like toys than metal guns, increasing the risk of fatal shooting accidents among children, researchers say.

They found that 36 percent of youngsters who killed others with guns told investigators they did not know the weapons were loaded, or thought they were toys.

"Within the year, handguns made largely of plastic may be widely available at relatively low cost," said the study, published in Friday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Because of their composition and light weight, these firearms may resemble toys even more closely than do those now on the market," said the study.

"Before they are introduced, their unique potential for aggravating the problem we have described should be considered."

Gun industry representatives and gun control opponents disputed the assertion that such weapons would be widely available, saying guns made largely of plastic would probably be sold only to police and the military for the foreseeable future.

"But the study contended, 'Children are likely to encounter these handguns, which are promoted by the manufacturer as 'dishwasher safe' and by others as particularly attractive for women to use as a self-defense weapon."

The study was quoting 1986 testimony before a U.S. House subcommittee considering legislation to ban plastic firearms and explosives, chiefly for airport security purposes. The Journal did not cite the prospective manufacturer's name.

The study examined all 88 unintentional firearm deaths reported in California from 1977 through 1983 in which both shooter and victim were 14 years old or younger.

Forty-eight percent of the deaths occurred when a child was playing with a gun that was loaded and stored in an unlocked place in the home, said the researchers, led by Dr. Green J. Wintmuth of the Department of Family Practice at the University of California at Davis.

"Easy accessibility of guns, the resemblance of guns to toys and gun manufacturers were all contributing factors," said the researchers. "Handguns, particularly those of .22 caliber, were frequently involved."

The two-sided coffee bean: Useful but irritating stimulant

By LISA M. BECKELY, R.D.
Shape Magazine

Whether you enjoy espresso or cappuccino, diet cola or tea, be aware that too much caffeine can make your head pound, leave you tossing and turning in your bed all night and snapping at the first victim to wander by.

For most of us there's nothing wrong with a cup or two of coffee or tea a day. Caffeine can help you stay alert, think clearly and react more quickly. It's useful on occasion in emergencies when you can't afford to drift into sleep. In fact, a trained athlete can use a caffeinated drink before workouts to maximize the release of fat into the bloodstream for more energy and aerobic performance.

But the coffee bean is two-sided. The same mobilization of fat that speeds athletes around can deposit fatty acids in the heart and arteries of the sedentary person. Coffee also acts as a vasodilator of the brain, opening blood vessels and sometimes relieving headaches caused by constricted blood vessels. At the same time, caffeine constricts the blood vessels in the heart, raising blood pressure.

Caffeine, a stimulant chemical much like amphetamine, causes a "wired" feeling that makes relaxation difficult. The withdrawal, or rebound, effect of caffeine promotes fatigue and irritability, making exercise easier to resist. Excessive caffeine can throw you off balance.

Just how much is too much depends on individual differences in weight, sex, age, metabolic/medical idiosyncrasies and exercise level. If you drink about six cups of coffee or other caffeinated drinks per day and feel irritable, get headaches and have trouble sleeping, you may well be abusing this drug. The physical discomfort and change indicate that the body is developing a tolerance to the excessive stimulant. Nine or ten cups a day is a strong sign of "caffeineism"; the body now requires caffeine to continue seemingly normal functioning. When this condition develops, the addict can drink caffeine into all hours of the night and still fall asleep. This immediate withdrawal into sleep signals adrenaline burnout and indicates that the body's energy is regulated mostly by caffeine.

Often coffee addicts who primarily associate coffee drinking with work find themselves suffering from weekend headaches, away from the office coffee pot. They experience withdrawal symptoms of irritability, rebound sleep and fatigue. Other symptoms would be an upset stomach or ulcer, high blood pressure, fluid retention and constipation.

If you think coffee or other caffeinated foods may be running your life, it's best to cut down gradually over a month to avoid withdrawal. In the first week cut your caffeine consumption in half. Cut it in half again the following week, or by one cup a day every week to avoid unnecessary headaches.

Interestingly, the less caffeine you consume, the greater its stimulating effect, peaking at 45 minutes and lasting possibly eight hours. If you want the greatest boost from caffeine, drink only one or two cups only when you feel you really need it.
