Reagan denies 'smoking gun'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan declared Tuesday "there ain't no smoking gun" showing he knew about the diversion of Iranian arms-sale money to Nicaraguan rebels, and he said Americans are getting bored with the Iran-Contra hearings in Congress.

Trying to focus attention on budget problems and the federal deficit, Reagan was confronted again by reporters' questions about the Iran-Contra affair.

"I think that spotlight (on the hearings) has been going so dim in recent days that when you get a mile and a half away from the Potomac River there are an awful lot of people that have gone back to their favorite television shows. And I don't blame them," Reagan said.

Reagan made his comments in a question-and-answer session with out-of-town economic reporters in the auditorium of the Old Executive Office Building next to the White House.

Pena remains Denver's mayor

DENVER (AP) — Federico Pena, the city's first Hispanic mayor, narrowly won re-election Tuesday over corporate attorney Don Bain in a runoff race marred by verbal jousts over both candidates' advertisements.

Of the 496 precincts reporting, Pena had 79,674 votes or 51 percent. Bain was close behind with 76,648 votes, or 49 percent.

Denver Election Commission officials said the voter turnout was about 53 percent, with 156,621 of the city's 291,539 eligible voters.

Pena finished 5 percentage points behind Bain in the May 19 election, where Bain had 42 percent of the vote to Pena's 37 percent in a field of eight candidates. Immediately after the primary, polls showed Pena trailing by as much as 20 percentage points. But on Monday, a media poll showed him leading by 6 points.

mistake, an explanation accepted by the United States.

A day after making a nationally televised defense of his Persian Gulf policy, the president traveled to Capitol Hill on Tuesday for a luncheon meeting with Senate Republicans. But Dole and other senators said U.S. plans in the oil-rich area are not on the agenda.

Meanwhile, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Adm. William Crowe Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, met behind closed doors with the House Foreign Affairs Committee to discuss the policy.

Weinberger made public a declassified version of an administrative study sent to Congress in answer to Capitol Hill demands for an assessment of specific military threats to U.S. forces.

The report made many of the same reassuring points Weinberger and Crowe have repeated in their meetings with legislators the past two weeks.

The risks to U.S. naval forces in the Persian Gulf, the report said, are the lowest they have ever had the pleasure of having before.

Assistant District Attorney Gregory Waples, who prosecuted the case, refused to comment on the verdict, saying only: "My thoughts on the case are my own and I don't care to share them."

District Attorney Robert Morgan said the case involved "complex and tragic circumstances, but our system of justice is based upon the belief that no man can escape answering for his actions."

New York Mayor Edward I. Koch, in Nashville, Tenn., for a meeting of mayors, said he accepted the verdict but added:

"Perhaps some will take this as a signal vigilance is acceptable... We're saying now to those who are concerned, we will never permit that to happen."

Sen. Frank G. Lautenberg, who criticized vigilante action at the time of the shootings, said only: "The law is the law."

Ray J. Linn, executive director of the Congress of Racial Equality and a Goetz supporter from the outset, said, "I couldn't believe the good people of this city would convict a man who was doing what was natural and what was necessary and what anybody else would have done."

think the verdict was fantastic; justice prevailed."

Shortly before reaching his verdict, the jurors had reread the testimony of witnesses Christopher Boucher, a 30-year-old window display designer from San Francisco who was on the subway when Goetz shot the teen-agers after one of them asked for $5.

Boucher testified that he watched Goetz shoot three and then walk over to Gabey and shoot him while Gabey was seated. Goetz maintained that he shot the young men, all 19 at the time, because they had surrounded him and were about to beat and rob him.

Boucher was the only witness to testify that he heard a pause be-between Goetz's fourth and fifth shot. The defense maintained that Goetz fired the shots in "rapid succession," indicating that he acted as quickly as he could and did not have time to reflect on what he was doing.

From the start, Goetz freely admitted the shootings. The key question was whether or he acted as a reasonable man when he shot the four, who said they were panhandling on the subway.

Goetz never took the stand at his trial, but told police the young men were trying to rob him and, in a videotaped confession his lawyers later tried to repudiate, he said, "My intention was to murder them, to hurt them, to make them suffer as much as possible."

out of business.

They also contend that the project would take prime agricultural land out of production and of local tax rolls, would consume scarce water and encourage industrialization of surrounding prime agricultural land.

In an effort to ameliorate those concerns, and perhaps save the thousands of new jobs and hundreds of millions of new state tax dollars that a collider would create in California, state Sen. John Cavendish, a Stockton Democrat, offered his compromise Tuesday in an appearance before the commission.

Among other things, it would require that the SSC project disturb the least amount of agricultural land necessary, force the state to mitigate unavoidable negative impacts and assure farmers that they would not have to sell property to the state at the current depressed property values.

week. She said she has agreed on a payment plan with Churchill, who took over the case last month.

Dallas' original attorney, William Maulkorb, said he demanded $15,000 to handle the case, she said.

Mauk convinced a Canyon County judge that Dallas was guilty of the lesser charge of voluntary manslaughter in the two slayings at Dallas' remote Owyhee County trapping camp.

Ray J. Linn, charged with first-degree murder, but the defense argued that second shots fired into each man's head were intended to stop their suffering. Pogue and Elms had a gun in the camp as part of an investigation of poaching in the area.

Dallas was captured in April 1982 after a nationwide manhunt and a shootout with law enforcement officers in northern Nevada.

the SSC.

"That was a $6 million to $7 million study, and we are allowed to provide any information to states developing bids," Dirksen said.

Otter cited the $6 million INEL study as an example of how Idaho has received an estimated $12 million in outside help to attract the SSC.

He said the $200,000 appropriated by Idaho's Legislature this year in was a compromise. The $1 billion appropriated by states such as Texas, for example.

"Our $200,000 wouldn't pay for the states tax in other states," Otter said.

Aside from the money, Otter said the biggest boost to Idaho in attracting the SSC may be a recent Supreme Court decision on zoning and land use.

The Supreme Court decision last week said that property owners must be paid compensation if zoning boards or other agencies impose rules that prevent or drastically restrict them from developing their land.

In effect, Oter said the decision will add millions and millions of dollars to the budgets of other states that don't already have the necessary land, which Idaho has.

Gov. Cecil Andrus, who has been holding great promise for the SSC and Idaho, Oter said, "There's not enough money in Fort Knox to pay for all the lawyers to go out and get the necessary land mass in other states."

ecting U.S.-flagged vessels are moderate."

The report said that Navy warships will fully man battle stations while traveling through the Strait of Hormuz at the mouth of the Gulf, where they are within range of the Silksworm anti-ship missiles in Iranian hands.

Before the escort operations begin, the Navy will move the aircraft carrier Constellation into the northern Arabian Sea, placing its aircraft within range of the Gulf.

The United States is also seeking permission from Oman, on the southeastern coast of the Arabian peninsula, for U.S. flights through that country's airspace, administration sources told The Washington Post.

Three more Navy ships will be added to the gulf task force to help out, the report said.

It warned that "there are some risks, particularly from unconventional threats, such as Iranian terrorism or sabotage."

But it was clear that while the administration has talked about protecting shipping in the gulf and keeping the waterway open, the Kuwaiti protection plan is more limited.

"It's the same old stuff. There's nothing substantial," said farmer John Eilers as he rejected the offer. Eilers heads the Coalition Against the SSC, which during the meeting presented Deukmejian with 2,400 signatures of people opposed to the project.

Stockton-area civic leaders countered by displaying newspaper advertisements signed by 3,000 people supporting the collider project.

Secord assistants describe shredding

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two assistants to retired Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord followed Senate investigators to the shredder, records last December after public exposure of the Iran-Contra affair, according to depositions released Tuesday.

But one of the men later changed her testimony, telling the congressional Iran-Contra committees in a sworn affidavit that the shredding more likely took place in November.

The two employees' original testimony, given under oath in private on April 10, appeared to conflict with Secord's sworn testimony in public hearings last month.

Secord, the operational chief of the Iran-arms shipments and the private effort to resupply Nicaragua's Contra rebels after Congress banned official U.S. government assistance, contended the documents had been destroyed in November. That was before the Iran-Contra connection publicly disclosed.

Investigators suggest the dates of the shredding are important because any destruction of documents after the launching of an official Department of Justice investigation might constitute obstruction of justice.

Secord was asked last month if he had in any way persuaded Shirley Napier, his administrative assistant, to change her account of the shredding. He denied doing that, and she said his only instruction to her was to tell the truth.

Jacques Corbin, a secretary for Secord's firm, Stanford Technology Trading Group International, said shredding occurred on several days in early December.

According to the transcript of her deposition, the documents destroyed included "telexes and shorthand notebooks and old phone book message pages and just a couple of Rolodex cards."

Ms. Napier said the Rolodex cards were those concerning fired White House aide Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, a Marine lieutenant colonel; Rafael Quintero, a former CIA operative who helped in the supply operation's activities in Central America, and David Walker, a British demolitionist.

Ms. Corbin said she wasn't told why the documents were to be destroyed.

"I think it was after the news broke on television and the newspapers, is the only reason ... I knew of," she said.

Later in December the two women carried two boxes of documents out of the office and Ms. Napier said she drove them to Secord's room at a suburban Virginia hotel.

She said North's attorney, Thomas Green, and North's attorney, Brendan Sullivan, were in the room when she delivered the telephone records, telexes, travel receipts and copies of invoices.

The boxes of papers later were returned to the office, she said.

The two Secord employees testified under a grant of limited immunity from prosecution.

Ms. Napier said in her later affidavit that she believed the shredding had occurred in the period Nov. 19-21, and that her recollection had been helped by seeing a receipt for the hotel room where she had delivered the boxes of documents to Secord.

The receipt is dated Nov. 26, 1986, and she said it is the one she signed when reserving and paying for the room. If the shredding took place earlier, it must have been during the week of Nov. 17, she concluded.

In another development Tuesday,

The Wall Street Journal reported that a man who formerly worked with North has quoted North as saying he was told by the Justice Department's decision to investigate White House involvement in the Iran-Contra affair by Attorney General Edwin Meese III within hours after the decision to investigate was made on Nov. 21.

Lt. Col. Robert Earl, who was assigned with North to the staff of the National Security Council, told congressional investigators that "North said Meese told him" about the probe, the newspaper's story said. It also said Earl's private testimony indicates Meese discussed with North whether he should retain a lawyer.

The timing of when North knew of the inquiry could be important regarding the issue of whether North can be charged with obstruction of justice for destroying and altering White House documents dealing with the affair.

Patrick Korten, a Justice Department spokesman, declined to comment on the newspaper story. Korten said that "in the appropriate time and in the appropriate place, Mr. Meese will respond."

PTL changes format of flagship program

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — PTL has reshaped the format of its flagship program, the "PTL Club," and the head of its television operation said Tuesday the ministry doesn't need a celebrity preacher to survive its financial woes.

"Mainly what we are doing is going back to the original roots of the 'PTL Club,'" said Warren Marcus, acting chief operating officer for television.

"We are trying to keep the pace moving," he said in a corner of the studio where the program was being fed live via satellite to about 160 affiliates and 1,700 cable systems across the nation.

"It had been wall-to-wall fundraising, which nobody liked, particularly the employees. They are so much happier now."

The pitch for money is still there, but it is more low-key and less hysterical than in previous years.

Jim and Tammy Bakker, the deposed founders of the PTL empire that includes the Heritage USA complex, used the program to market their records, books and tapes and would not book competing authors and singers, Marcus said.

"Nobody felt it was truly representative of Christian television," said Marcus, who assumed his job 10 weeks ago at the request of the Rev. Jerry Falwell, chairman of PTL.

"A lot of stars did not appear on it the past six years because of the way it was structured. They wouldn't refuse. They'd just say they were busy," he said.

Bakker emerged briefly from the couple's Tega Cay lakefront home to walk along the driveway, and his wife spoke with reporters after a shopping trip.

"Are you guys waiting for a present?" she asked reporters. "It was just K mart, though. What did I get at K mart? I got some hair spray and a fraying kit to do my hair with."

She refused to answer any questions about how long the Bakkers planned to stay in the house.

The "PTL Club" has been redesigned to move at a faster pace, include more music with popular Christian performers and return to brief interviews with authors and people who have testimonies to give, Marcus said.

"It's important the host should never become the central attraction," said Marcus, a charismatic who converted from Judaism and was once a $175,000-a-year New York advertising executive. "The featured performers should be the guest stars and authors."

Independent counsels fall under attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department on Tuesday criticized the independent counsels in the Iran-Contra scandal and the Michael Deaver perjury case, saying it would recommend that President Reagan veto legislation to keep intact the law under which they are appointed.

Assistant Attorney General John Bolton also attacked an independent counsel who has been conducting a criminal investigation of a former Justice Department official for the past 14 months.

Independent counsels, who are appointed by courts under the 1978 Ethics Government Act, are "utterly without supervision; nothing is too trivial for these people to investigate," Bolton said at a news conference.

Iran-Contra counsel Lawrence Walsh has one of the highest government office space rental rates in Washington.

The Department has a choice under the law but to pay the bill, complained Bolton, head of the Justice Department's office of legislative affairs.

The government is paying for office space for Walsh in Oklahoma City where he lives, in New York City where Walsh used to be a Wall Street lawyer and for two offices in Washington, Bolton said at a news conference.

"Mr. Walsh was a member of a very prominent and prestigious Wall Street law firm," Bolton said. "Having been a member of a prominent Wall Street law firm, I know the lifestyles of New York law firms and I think it's open to question whether that lifestyle is appropriate for an independent counsel."

Walsh spokesman Dennis Feldman said the independent counsel has only one Washington office. Bolton said Walsh's rental rate was $36 per square foot for the contract, which was negotiated by the General Services Administration, gives the rate as $32 per square foot, about average for commercial office space in downtown Washington.

After the news conference, Justice

Department spokesman Patrick Korten acknowledged that Bolton had been in error and that Walsh has one Washington office and that the rental rate is indeed $32 a square foot, for 11,000 square feet of office space.

The Justice Department "would have us return to the days of Watergate and Nixon's Saturday night massacre; we don't want to go to the brick again," said Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., Levin is chairman of the Senate subcommittee on oversight of government management and sponsor of legislation that would reauthorize the independent counsel law for one year.

Levin said the rental rate and other objections are being used by the Justice Department as "smokescreens" to get rid of the independent counsel law under which Bolton's boss, Attorney General Edwin Meese III, is under criminal investigation.

Bolton also complained about the conduct of independent counsel Whitney North Seymour Jr. for trying to subpoena the Canadian ambassador to testify at the upcoming perjury trial of former White House deputy chief of staff Deaver.

In a letter to Levin, Bolton said that the subpoenas for Canadian ambassador Allan E. Gullibe and his wife were "in defiance of the most basic principles of diplomatic immunity and over the protests of the State Department." An FBI agent was turned away in the embassy lobby when he tried to deliver the subpoenas.

Bolton's letter also accused independent counsel Alexia Morrison of engaging in "unconscionable delays" in her investigation of former Justice Department official Theodore Olson.

Since April 1986, Morrison has been examining allegations that Olson gave false testimony to Congress in a dispute over access to Environmental Protection Agency documents in 1983.

Pilot sets out for Moscow

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 60-year-old retired educator from upstate New York took off in a single-engine plane Tuesday on what he calls a "friendship flight" to Moscow. He hopes to help improve U.S.-U.S.S.R. relations between the two countries and set an aviation record.

Philip Millard Harmon displayed his official Soviet visa at a news conference and said he had no plans to land in Red Square, unlike West German teen-ager Mathias Rust.

"I've been going to the Soviet Union for 20 years," said Harmon, of Delmar, N.Y., whose first visit was in 1958. "I think they know me well enough to know I'm not up to mischief."

Harmon took off shortly after noon from Washington National Airport aboard a 1969 single-engine Beechcraft 36. He was accompanied by the navigator Stephen Honeybill, 32, of Galway, N.Y.

Nicaraguan Contras defend Linder killing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicaraguan rebels asserted in a Sunday newspaper that in self-defense after the American and his Sandinista colleagues ignored an order to surrender and instead opened fire, the State Department said Tuesday.

Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said the Contra unit involved in the encounter provided that the explanation of Linder's death in the April 28 shooting when questioned recently by American officials.

She said there were many conflicting accounts of the incident and that they probably will never be reconciled.

The death of Linder, a 27-year-old mechanical engineer from Portland, Ore., has become a rallying cry for opponents of U.S. aid to the Contras. Linder, a Sandinista supporter, was killed near the village of Camaleona where he had been working on a hydroelectric project.

"Nicaragua's leftist government and Linder's family have maintained that the Contras killed Linder from point-blank range after wounding him," Oakley said.

U.S. officials the following account of the incident: "The Contra unit was aware that the intent of the Sandinistas believed to include one Cuban and another foreigner was constructing a dam and hydroelectric project in the area."

The Contras set up an ambush of the team. At the opening of the attack, the unit leader called for the team to halt and to surrender. The team responded by appointing fire and the Contras returned fire.

The five lead members of the team were hit and believed killed by the initial rifle fire. Although the resistance combatants recovered weapons and documents, they did not check to determine if all of the fallen men were actually dead out of fear that Sandinista reinforcements were nearby.

Besides Linder, four of the remaining Sandinistas were wounded and one escaped injury. The resistance unit was not aware that an American had been killed in this action until a day later. The resistance members indicated that all members of the team were armed and wearing the same type of military style uniform.

Heart attack kills economist Heller

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Economist Walter Heller, who advised Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson and crafted the unprecedented 1964 tax cut that stimulated a lagging economy, has died of a heart attack. He was 71.

Heller was visiting relatives in Silverdale, Wash., about 20 miles west of Seattle, when he collapsed and died Monday night, said Kaaren Davis, his daughter.

A professor emeritus of economics at the University of Minnesota, Heller was chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers from 1961-64. He continued as a consultant to Johnson until 1968.

School test claims almost meaningless

Despite sweeping claims by the School District that Twin Falls students are well above average on national tests, it is apparent from an analysis of the scores that the claims are close to meaningless.

A week ago, district testing supervisor Larry Watson told the board that Twin Falls students were "all above the average performance level in the state and nation."

But the generalizations masked sharp differences among elementary schools in Twin Falls, and hid some appalling results in basic skills at the junior high school level.

Furthermore, a closer look at the scores suggests that the district, in our view, has been remiss in gathering data consistently, thereby making impossible valid comparisons upon which Watson's claims for progress might be based.

Except at Morningside Elementary — which has funded complete testing out of parent-teacher organization money and has taken the necessary steps to measure individual students' progress — the district apparently hasn't thought testing was worth paying for consistently.

The result is a honeycomb of results which do not support the district's claims for progress. Yet, not one member of the board at the meeting last week asked what the tests do and don't measure.

With the board basking in the warm, furry platitudes about how much "progress" the district had made, the tough questions and pockets of poor performance weren't explored. Consider these examples:

There are large differences between the composite scores of Twin Falls elementary schools. Sawtooth Elementary, at every grade level, ranks some 15 to 20 percentile points above the lowest school. Why?

In the 8th grade, Robert Stuart Junior High students scored an abysmal composite, ranking in the 36th percentile. In math and language, the scores were worse, in the 28th and 30th percentiles. Why?

Are these scores due, as administration claims, to what it calls "demographic differences," a code phrase which some administrators use way too loosely for race, national origin and income levels?

Could it be that an inconsistent school curriculum and, just perhaps, some weak teaching, play a role in these variations?

The bottom line is that the district has not measured enough, or consistently enough, to draw conclusions of any kind about how Twin Falls students are doing, or why. Incredulously, some previous test scores, which might have made comparisons possible, have been thrown away.

Simply put, parents cannot use current data to measure school performance. In effect, there is no accountability. And that appears to be how the district has wanted it.

The Times-News has sought test scores by school, and has been denied in the past. Among the reasons given was that release of such information would highlight school differences and thereby create community dissension.

But what it comes down to, in our view, is a lack of trust and faith in the ability of people to use information.

By keeping scores secret, the district has said that, in effect, people cannot understand what they mean. Nonsense.

Which brings us to another point: the right of the people to know public information.

It was not until The Times-News wrote a formal request for the scores — citing public records law and sending a copy of the letter to our attorney — that the district released them.

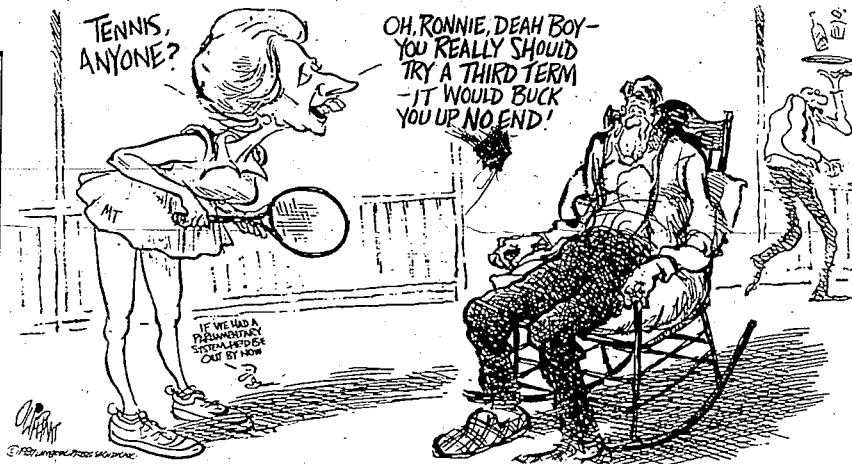

We intend to make more such requests, and not only of the Twin Falls School District. In the past several years, a number of government agencies in the Magic Valley have at times kept public information secret and violated the both the letter and spirit of the state's open records and open meetings laws.

In the past, it has been our practice to attempt to work out such access problems informally. But we have learned that our efforts at cooperation have not been always met in kind. The secrecy over public information has continued. We intend, therefore, to turn the heat up.

When government meetings are closed in violation of statutes and court rulings, we will tell you. And we will exert more pressure to get them opened.

When records are being withheld in violation of law, we will seek them more assertively.

British socialism big loser in election

LONDON — The morning after Margaret Thatcher won another lease of up to five years on the Downing Street house she has inhabited for eight years, a wit wondered, "After 13 years in No. 10, does she get the right to buy?"

That is a resonant question about the lady who, as the scourge of socialism, has required local authorities to sell municipal housing to occupants.

As she dust settles from her most recent dustup with the Labor Party, the electoral result stands revealed as a large event in the history of a large development in the late 20th century: the death of socialism.

In 1983, Labor failed to unseat a Conservative government that had presided over an economic contraction sharper than that of 1929. In 1983, and now again, Labor has failed to translate three million unemployed into a winning issue. Thatcher does well with skilled workers, the Alliance (Liberals and Social Democrats) does well with the intelligentsia (known here, delightfully, as the chattering classes).

In London this year, Labor did even worse than in 1983 when Thatcher had the Falklands factor and Labor was saddled with the inexpressibly unconvincing leadership of Michael Foot. This month Labor lost three working-class seats in London, including the seat held years ago by Clement Attlee, father of the post-war Labor government. That is what happens when you raise property taxes 62 percent to hire an army of homosexual-rights and race-relations bureaucrats.

When a party plunges into steep decline, even its victories injure it. About one-quarter of the seats Labor won June 11 are now held by freshman MPs, many of them from the hard left. Already their voices are raised to blame the party's strouching on insufficient commitment to "real" socialism. The Tories must be tempted to permit the televising of Parliament, the better to give the hard left ample exposure.

Some British socialists say socialism should not be judged by its works but by the purity of its ideals. But the central ideal is as implausible as the works have been disappointing.

Socialism is, as the saying goes, "about equality." It carries the heavy baggage of having to believe that wealth and opportunity should be allocated somewhat coercively, to minimize the influence of talent. Socialism's implausible ideal is matched by failures of practice. The collective purchase of "key goods," such as housing, and public ownership of the "commanding heights" of the economy have lost whatever allure they once had.

In the 1950s and 1960s, British socialism tried to turn itself inside out by becoming more merciful than capitalism. It stressed "planning," which meant: Economic decision-making should be concentrated in a government composed of the best and brightest, so that reason could replace inefficient motives ("greed") in animating the economy. But the lesson of planning is that the risk-averse bureaucracies are unsatisfactory surrogates of economic dynamism.

Elsewhere in Europe, there has been an "Americanization of the left," the identification of the left with middle-class, often non-economic, issues such as environmentalism, racial and sexual discrimination, and opposition to nuclear weapons and power. But in Britain, the left, once an example of merely arrested development, has been regressing.

George Watson of St. John's College, Cambridge, notes that for the first time in this century it is trendy to be Tory. As for socialism, "It has come down in the world, and top people have deserted it. It now belongs, if anywhere, to a world of the semi-literate and the semi-educated: to South American priests dedicated to new-fangled liberal theology, to tribal oligarchies in black Africa, and in Europe to the drooplets of higher education—a sort of Lumpen-proletariat of bedstritter Trotskyites to whom mid-Victorian concepts of class and consciousness still look like the latest thing."

For the first time since Disraeli, Watson says, British conservatism is ideologically fervid, confident not just that conservatism is good for the stock market but that it is true. The embodiment of this confidence is the woman who, if her current government runs a full five years, at the next election would be younger than Churchill was when he became prime minister.

The day after her third victory, she was asked if she would be prime minister in the year 2000, when she will be 75. "You never know," she said. "I might be here; I might be twanging a harp." As long as there are socialists to defeat, heaven can wait.

Fossil beds deserve attention

Did you know that the world-renowned Hagerman Horse Fossil Beds, like Niagara Springs, National Natural Landmark? That they are being damaged, just like Niagara Springs, Crystal Springs, Box Canyon, 1000 Springs, Billingsley Creek?

Those in charge of the fossil beds say that if we want them protected and developed, we'll need a groundswell of voices from the public.

It's about time that this world-renowned site was brought out of oblivion and given the attention that it deserves.

To see a little of what you are missing, the Hagerman Valley Historical Society Museum has a replica of the Hagerman Horse Fossil, as well as numerous other fossil bones on view. The museum averages 10 to 50 people per day with many schools taking tours.

Ted Weasman of the IRLM, in The Times-News May 8, mentions that there is a potential of up to 500,000 tourists a year as shown by a National Parks Service study of 1974, and he said that, "that would bring a lot of money to the local economy."

He also said that, "the Landmark would be developed if public support was strong enough and the Congress would agree to finance the project."

With the recognition of the problem of Niagara

Springs through the efforts of Bob Burks, I hope you can see the necessity of efforts to make the Hagerman Horse Fossil Beds a viable project before it is too late.

If you would like to help and this should include young people like the students who tour the museum, I drop a card or letter to the following and urge their support. This will be of benefit to all concerned.

No justice for the innocent

Is there any justice in this society today? Personally, I don't see any justice of any kind unless you are a no-good citizen, a person with no respect for other people or laws, or a criminal.

Those are the kind of people who seem to have more rights today than we innocent people trying to abide by the laws and trying to make a living.

We are definitely the ones paying for the uninsured criminals on our streets today.

Well, beware Magic Valley! Another one of these ungaring drivers is back on the streets again. Yes, he was involved in a very serious hit and run accident last September resulting in very critical injuries to his victim.

The Judge gave him six months in jail with no fines whatsoever — he wasn't even fined at the time of the accident for no insurance — and you guessed it — he's out of jail. It has only been about 300 days or so.

It's too bad we can't take a key and unlock the cell door on your victim, whom you struck and left lying in the weeds. You are definitely not the one who has been serving time in prison.

Your victim is still serving his time and it's now been 8½ months. He still has time to go, but not you. You're free to do whatever you would like to do.

I only hope that you can live with yourself, I also hope everyone watches out for you because I know that you don't have any compassion or concern for your fellow man.

What kind of game was Hall playing?

BOSTON — It will be ironic if Fawn Hall, the secretary who "type," goes down in history for a $10 million typo.

It will be equally ironic if the leading female role in the Iran-contra scandal is cut to a bit part: one night of shredding bills and a transcript number on a Swiss bank account.

Hall's two days in the limelight turned out to be more than a photo opportunity. Articulate and poised, she embarrassed those who had lumped her in the bimbo brigade. Young, pretty and crucial, she unsettled the men who interrogated her.

For two days, contradictions and psychologically mixed messages flew around the hearing room. "I believe in Cal, North and what he was doing. I had no right to question him," she insisted. If she was told to alter documents, "It was not my policy to ask questions." If she was told to shred papers, "I was purely just doing my job."

And yet Hall also described herself, felt herself, as "part of the team." As a member of the team she worked 12 hours a day, five days a week without complaint. As team player, she sneaked documents out of the office past the FBI, hidden in her shirt and her boots.

None of the men questioning Hall seemed to notice the contradiction. A team player and unquestioning subservient? What kind of a game is that?

They accepted as normal the fact that Hall stood silently beside and behind her man. That she had both protected and obeyed him. Perhaps they were even envious. By the end of the testimony, I had the sense that this young woman was testifying under a second sort of immunity: secretarial immunity.

The men in that room—lawyers and legislators—had one thing in common: a secretary. Fawn Hall may have entered the hearing room as a sexual fantasy. But she left it as a secretarial fantasy.

Loyal and smart, loyal and skilled, loyal and articulate, loyal and beautiful, loyal and loyal and loyal. Hall was no oppressed typist waiting for a so-called, no mother anxious about her child care, no ambitious woman waiting for the next opening.

She took, in more ways than one, dictation. She shared the ideology of her boss without expecting the details. She considered herself a team player without having to be brought into the decision-making huddle.

Isn't this everyman's fantasy secretary? Everyman's fantasy wife? The fantasy secretary is hardworking out of devotion, not ambition.

The fantasy secretary doesn't see the flaws, even the traveler's check. The notion may be clearly not to ask questions. The fantasy secretary believes.

For every interrogator who criticized Hall's disloyalty to the law there was another who breathed heavily over her loyalty to the man.

Fawn Hall was 23 when she came to the National Security Council and 27 when she left, stuffing documents into her clothes. It's heady stuff to be close to power, to action, to the colonels and generals of the world. Ready to type words that may change history.

But eventually this particular secretary was doused with reality. The boss with the ideals was also, it appears, the boss with the bugs.

Traveller's check. The notion may have also been a proleffer. The boss who walked her protectively to her car late at night lived her in a shredding party.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

Battleship group may handle escort duty in Persian Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States expects to begin escorting Kuwait oil tankers in the Persian Gulf using eight warships in early July, but may soon replace that force with a combat group headed by a battleship, Pentagon sources said Tuesday.

Such a move, coming perhaps as early as August, would represent a massive increase in U.S. firepower in the gulf and provide the clearest indication yet of President Reagan's commitment to protect oil supplies flowing through the gulf.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, in a report to Congress made public Tuesday, asserted the eight warships that will soon begin the escort work "will be sufficient to do the job and minimize risks."

In that same report, however, Weinberger briefly mentioned the possibility of using a battleship, saying: "A detailed review of the advisability of battleship battle group operations in the area is being conducted."

Defense officials, asked about the reference, disclosed the Pentagon's Joint Chiefs of Staff had already concluded a battleship force should be sent to the gulf.

It was unclear whether the chiefs

Classified report on Stark attack ready

WASHINGTON (AP) — The final report of a military board of inquiry investigating the attack on the USS Stark has been submitted to the general who heads the U.S. Central Command, Pentagon sources said Tuesday.

The classified report, prepared by Rear Adm. Grant Sharp, was submitted to Gen. George Crist over the weekend, the sources said. Crist heads all U.S. forces in the Mideast, including the Persian Gulf where the Stark was attacked.

The officials, who agreed to discuss the matter only if not identified, said they could not predict when Crist would forward the report and any recommendations to the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

They also declined to speculate on whether Sharp had recommended court-martial proceedings against the Stark's skipper or other ranking officers.

The skipper of the Stark, Capt. Glen Brindell, had been scheduled to leave the ship this month in a normal rotation of duty assignments. The sources said Brindell would definitely be returning to a shore assignment, but said it was unclear when that would occur.

They explained that no decision had been made as to whether Brindell, or some other Navy officer, would take the responsibility of sailing the Stark back to its home port of Mayport, Fla., outside Jacksonville.

The Stark is currently tied up in Bahrain for temporary repairs, but is now scheduled to sail for home during the first week of July.

During an earlier phase of the military inquiry, Brindell and three of his officers were assigned legal counsel, indicating they had become special subjects of the investigation.

That inquiry was ordered to ascertain why the ship didn't take defensive measures as the Iraqi plane approached. Brindell has told congressional investigators he was in his stateroom at the time of the attack and was never notified by his crew that the Iraqi plane was approaching at such close range.

The Navy currently has three heavily armored, World War II-era battleships that have been returned to active duty after being extensively refurbished and modernized. Two of the three — the New Jersey and Missouri — are based in Long Beach, Calif., while the Iowa is based in Norfolk, Va.

Based on current deployment plans, either the New Jersey or Missouri is most likely to be used, the sources said.

Weinberger, in the unclassified version of his report to Congress, said the Navy would "augment our current Middle East Task Force presence with three additional combatants, configured to meet potential sea-, air- and land-based missile threats." "These forces will be sufficient to do the job and minimize risks. The risks to U.S. naval forces in the gulf from these threats are low. The risks involved in protecting U.S.-flagged vessels are moderate."

The Pentagon sources said the Navy would have a force of three large cruisers, one destroyer and four guided-missile frigates on station in the Persian Gulf by the first week of July in addition to the command ship LaSalle.

Those vessels — with the exception of one cruiser already there — will replace all of the ships currently on station in the gulf, the sources continued. Those include three destroyers and two frigates.

have formally ordered a battleship prepared for gulf duty.

One official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the assignment of a battleship offered several advantages, particularly in the event of orders to retaliate against Iran for any attacks on American shipping.

The battleship's huge 16-inch guns have the range to strike Iranian missile batteries on the shoreline without endangering the lives of any pilots, the source explained.

And it can take a hit without any problem, mines won't hurt it and it's one hell of a show of force," he added.

Tankers to receive American flags, names too

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kuwaiti tankers refueled under American colors will also get new names, officials said Tuesday, with maritime menors including Surf City, Ocean City and Sea Isle City — all borrowed from resort towns in New Jersey.

The plan to rechristen the Persian Gulf ships with the seashore names prompted one Garden State congressman, Democrat William J. Hughes, to tell colleagues, "All of a sudden, the Kuwaiti fleet reads like a real map of southern New Jersey."

The Reagan administration has proposed reflagging 11 oil tankers to protect them from attack in the Iran-Iraq war. The policy, which may also include U.S. Navy escorts, has drawn sharp congressional criticism.

Under the plan, four of the reflagged tankers will get New Jersey names, according to a House report. They'll shift from Arabic names like Al Rekkah and Casbah to Surf City, Ocean City, Sea Isle City and Bridgeton.

Others of the tankers are proposed to become the Chesapeake City, Middleton, Townsend, Gas Queen, Gas Princess, Gas King and Gas Prince.

According to the report by the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, ownership of the tankers — originally held in Kuwait — would be transferred to a

U.S. law requires any ship under the American flag to be owned by Americans, said Coast Guard spokesman Nicholas Sandifer. He said the Coast Guard is awaiting bills of sale to prove the Kuwaiti vessels have been transferred from ownership.

The House Merchant Marine Committee, which prepared an interval report on the proposal, has scheduled hearings for Thursday to study the impact of the proposed Persian Gulf policy.

So far, how the new names were chosen remains a mystery. Gene Miller, the Washington-based lawyer for Chesapeake shipping, said he is unsure who proposed the names.

Gray new commandant of Marines

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has selected Lt. Gen. Alfred M. Gray Jr. to become the next commandant of the Marine Corps, the White House said Tuesday.

Gray, who turns 59 next Monday, is a tobacco-chewing, blunt-talking field commander who is looked upon as a "real warrior" and leader, Pentagon officials said. He is a former enlisted man who came up through the ranks.

Pentagon sources had disclosed earlier this month that Gray was the hand-picked choice of Navy Secretary James H. Webb and that Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger had endorsed his nomination.

Gray would replace Gen. P.X. Kelley, who was served as the Marines' top officer since 1983 and who is required by law to step down on June 30.

25 die when ferry sinks

SEoul, South Korea (AP) — A boat packed with tourists sank off the South Korean coast on Tuesday and 25 people were killed, navy officials said.

Thirteen others were missing. Forty-seven people, including 29 who were injured, were rescued, the officials said. Most of the dead were women, they added.

A major rescue operation involving frogmen, navy boats and a helicopter continued searching through the night for more survivors. The navy officials, who did not want to be named in keeping with official practice, said the operation would continue into Wednesday.

The boat sank near an island, but many people on the Kukkong-ho pleasure boat could not swim, officials said.

The 25-ton boat went down off Koje, a city 225 miles southwest of Seoul. The boat sank after a fire started in the engine room of the vessel as it was returning from a scenic island near Koje with 83 tourists and two crew members.

clashes and anti-government demonstrations in Seoul, Pusan, Kwangju, Chinha, Chonan, Chonju, Wonju, Taejon and Taegu.

About 6,000 protesters cheered by onlookers battled riot squads in the southern part of Pusan, burned a police bus and set up barricades.

Mobs assaulted four police stations in the central city of Chinha. A fire started by gasoline bombs heavily damaged one of them.

Crowds again gathered in front of Seoul's Myeongdong Roman Catholic cathedral demanding the ouster of Chun's government. Those assembled at the cathedral have included prosperous families and elderly people, some of whom kneel and pray as others shout "We want democracy!"

Riot police used tear gas grenades to disperse the crowds when some people tried to march to the city hall, but downtown Seoul was free of major street battles for the first time in a week.

Anti-government protests began last Wednesday, prompted by a new coalition of opposition political, religious and human rights leaders. The nationwide campaign was limited to coincide with a convention of the ruling Democratic Justice Party that endorsed Chun's choice of fellow ex-general Roh Tae-woo to succeed him as president in February.

Leaders of the coalition demand democratic elections and vowed when it was formed to rally the "power of the masses" against military-backed regime.

Newspapers said the ruling party was seeking talks to end the worst violence since Chun assumed power after President Park Chung-hee was assassinated in 1979, but the opposition demanded the release of thousands of people arrested in the past week.

In their first report of figures, police said Tuesday that more than 7,000 people had been detained.

U.S. offers formal proposal on missiles

GENEVA (AP) — The United States formally proposed the elimination of all shorter-range intermediate nuclear forces in arms talks with the Soviet Union on Tuesday, a U.S. statement said.

The U.S. delegation called on the Soviets to join also agreeing to a global scrapping of longer-range, intermediate nuclear missiles, the statement said.

The proposals were put forth at a meeting of the negotiating group dealing with intermediate-range nuclear forces.

President Reagan announced the initiatives Monday night in a national broadcast from Washington.

His announcement came after the West European allies endorsed U.S. arms control proposals at a NATO meeting in Reykjavik, Iceland, last week. NATO foreign ministers approved the elimination of so-called longer- and shorter-range missiles from Europe.

The United States has said it will pull out its 316 longer-range cruise and Pershing II missiles.

Moscow would destroy all of its 441 SS-20 missiles but has said it would keep 33 launchers in Asia aimed at China and Japan.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev told Secretary of State George P. Shultz in April the Soviet Union also would scrap about 40 SS-12 and SS-23 shorter-range missiles in East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

Gorbachev also offered to negotiate the elimination of 100 shorter-range rockets based in the Soviet Union.

The United States has no such weapons in Europe. West Germany has 72 aging Pershing IA shorter-range missiles whose nuclear warheads are under U.S. control.

The shorter-range missiles have a range of 200 to 600 miles. The longer-range variety are effective from 600 to 3,000 miles.

Both are considered intermediate-range nuclear forces in the U.S.-Soviet arms talks, which also deal with strategic nuclear weapons — those with which the superpowers can strike each other directly — and space and defense issues.

The U.S. mission's press release on the meeting said the U.S. position "calls for the global elimination of all intermediate and Soviet shorter-range INF (intermediate nuclear forces) missile systems."

SEoul, South Korea (AP) — Waves of students beating drums and shouting "Revolution!" pelted riot police with bricks and firebombs in Seoul and other cities Tuesday, the seventh day of violent anti-government protest.

Growing numbers of people showed support for the protesters, joining the outnumbered police and sometimes joining in the attacks.

Officers with helmets and shields fired thousands of tear gas grenades in Seoul and at least eight other cities. They used multiple tear gas launchers set up in streets to drive back charging crowds of students and their supporters.

Chants of "People's revolution!" and "Destroy the military dictatorship!" accompanied gasoline bombs that exploded in bursts of flame among police sent into the streets by President Chun Doo-hwan's government.

Students stormed at least four police stations and set police vehicles afire. They forced officers out of the streets around at least two universities in Seoul.

The news agency Yonhap reported

Drug traffickers ambush Venezuelan military force

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Drug traffickers using grenades and mortars attacked a camp of sleeping National Guardsmen and killed 16 of them in a predawn raid Tuesday near the Colombian border, the Defense Ministry said.

Guardsmen fought back and may have killed about 25 of their attackers, according to local radio and television stations.

The ministry said about 100 drug runners attacked the camp at 4:25 a.m. when the unit, charged with patrolling the border, was resting on the banks of the Agodaburi River in the mountainous region.

The house was 9 miles from the border and about 435 miles from Caracas.

President Jaime Lusinchi said that four guardsmen eluded the ambushers and brought the news to the National Guard post in the area. Three guardsmen were wounded in the attack.

Lusinchi said the government had started taking measures to "defeat this criminal aggression against our soldiers," adding:

"We are moved by this criminal attack against our armed forces that were carrying out a task benefiting society, destroying drug plantations on the border. We will punish — without mercy — these assassins or those behind them."

Lusinchi said the guardsmen were attacked by "a band of between 80 to 100 narco-traffickers."

Shultz says U.S. bases not for making money

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz told those who seek rent or high levels of aid for military facilities that U.S. bases are deterrents to aggression, not money-making properties.

"It isn't a matter of finance. It's a matter of security and mutual benefits, and that's the way we should think of it," he said at a news conference Tuesday after talks with President Corazon Aquino and other officials.

Several participants said he was even more blunt in a private session with newly elected members of Congress.

"According to Sen. Ramon Mitra, Secretary Shultz said — and I think this is one of the strongest statements he has made — that when the day comes that you don't want us here but you are willing to rent this area as bases, then we don't want to be here."

Negotiations are to begin next year on new agreements for Clark Air Base and Subic Naval Base, two of the largest and most strategic American installations abroad.

Mrs. Aquino's attitude was a primary U.S. concern when she assumed power after Ferdinand E. Marcos, who had been in power 20 years, fled the country in February 1986.

She says the current agreement will be honored until it expires in 1991, but she has made no commitment beyond that.

In a 1983 review of the pact, the Reagan administration pledged to see at least $200 million in economic and military aid for the Philippines in 1985-89. Shultz said that was being done and, at one meeting Tuesday, signed agreements providing $175 million in economic support and food aid.

He rejected suggestions, however, that the United States accept a rental agreement.

Soweto shuts down, marks riot date

SOWETO, South Africa (AP) — The 2.5 million blacks in this huge township closed it down Tuesday without violence to mark the day 11 years ago when police fired on marching children and set off bloody nationwide riots.

Police and blacks here and in other townships showed restraint on the anniversary. Officers patrolled outside a few rowdy political meetings, but they did not interfere.

Political children were killed June 16, 1976, but violence that raged through the country in the ensuing year claimed at least 576 lives by official count.

Previous anniversaries have been marked by massive stayaways from work, political rallies disrupted by authorities and violent confrontations between blacks and police.

Many businesses acceded to black wishes this year and made June 16 a paid holiday.

Hundreds of thousands declared their own holiday and stayed home, chatting in the streets, cleaning up their houses and yards, attending rallies or church prayer services.

Nearly everything stopped in Soweto. Stores and municipal offices closed. Trains carried about 5 percent of their normal commuter load. Buses and taxis did not run at all in the township.

Reports, from townships around the country, which is controlled by 5 million whites who grant no national voice to the 24 million blacks, said there were increased patrols in armored personnel carriers and trucks but little disruption of meetings and few arrests.

Blacks generally heeded a call from the United Democratic Front, the largest coalition against apartheid, to observe the anniversary "with maximum discipline and unity."

There were no street barricades in Soweto or gangs of militant youths intimidating people going to jobs, but in the evening some black workers walking home were attacked with stones and chased by youths wielding whips.

Police said no major disturbances were reported by evening, but some buses were stoned in Durban.

At commemorative services in two Soweto churches, speakers urged black political groups to stop fighting each other so they can combat apartheid more effectively.

After both services, there were reports of police action against youths in the street but none of injuries or arrests. Under restrictions imposed by the state of emergency in effect since June 12, 1986, neither the police actions nor those of the youths can be described.

At the Evangelical Lutheran Church, Hago Mokekane, a leader of the June 1976 protest who now heads the South African Youth Congress, roused more than 200 blacks to cheers for the outlawed African National Congress, South African Communist Party and United Democratic Front.

Parents visit jailed pilot

MOSCOW (AP) — The parents of a West German teen-ager jailed for flying a plane onto Red Square spent three hours at Lefortovo prison Tuesday, visiting their son for the first time since his May 23 arrest and talking with Soviet investigators.

In a prepared statement issued by Karl-Heinz and Monika Rust later in the day, the couple said their son, Mathias, "is feeling well, and according to his words he also is being treated well."

The Rusts said their conversation with Mathias was "agreeable" but they declined to answer any questions about the meeting, saying "in accordance with our son's request we are not going to give any further statements during our stay in Moscow."

About 15 minutes before the 10 a.m. meeting, the Rusts brushed past reporters without responding to questions.

Joint force idea fails in Paris

PARIS (AP) — Foreign Minister Jean-Bernard Raimond on Tuesday rejected the idea of forming a multinational naval force to protect merchant shipping in the Persian Gulf.

Raimond's statement during a debate before the National Assembly was the first official French response to President Reagan's plan to protect oil shipping in the gulf.

Raimond called the Iran-Iraq war "the most devastating conflict our world has known since World War II and one that gravely and directly menaces the security and stability of the gulf region."

But, he said, France should avoid anything that upsets the status quo, especially any action that might be construed by the belligerents as foreign intervention.

Raimond said it "would be particularly dangerous to convey the feeling that we are forming a multinational naval force to protect merchant vessels."

Such an action could "create a chain reaction making the gulf a place of confrontation between foreign powers," he said.

Raimond said it "would be particularly dangerous to convey the feeling that we are forming a multinational naval force to protect merchant vessels."

Following the economic summit in Venice last week, the leaders of seven industrialized nations, including the United States and France, expressed support for keeping open the sea lanes in the gulf and for the United Nations effort to seek a negotiated settlement to the war.

Plane crash hurts Contra air leader

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The chief of the Contra guerrilla air force was seriously wounded in the crash of a rebel aircraft that was hit by army ground fire, a Defense Ministry spokeswoman said Tuesday.

Capt. Rosa Pasos said Juan Gomez, chief of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force's tiny air force, and two other Contras were seriously injured when the twin-engine Beechcraft Baron crashed and burned after being hit Monday in northern Nicaragua.

She said the others aboard were Gomez's son Juan Jr., the copilot, and Alvaro Carrasco, the gunner. Capt. Pasos said the information came from "intelligence sources" she did not identify.

The Nicaraguan Democratic Force — known as the FDN, its initials in Spanish — is the main fighting force of the U.S.-backed rebels.

Ms. Pasos said the plane fired a rocket at a Sandinista army command post 4 miles north of Murra, 108 miles north of Managua, before it was hit. She said the rocket missed.

She said the aircraft limped across the Honduran border, 15 miles from the command post, and crashed about 4 miles inside Honduras. Sandinista soldiers at a hilltop border observation post could see smoke and flames coming from the crash site.

Michael Jackson doubles offer for 'Elephant Man' skeleton

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pop superstar Michael Jackson on Tuesday doubled to $1 million his offer to London Hospital Medical College for the grotesquely deformed skeleton of John Merrick, the "Elephant Man," his manager said.

Jackson, who has a penchant for the curious and the exotic, made his first offer for the skeleton a few weeks ago, but the hospital denied his request.

In a statement released in Los Angeles, Jackson's manager, Frank Dileo, said the new offer is meant to show the seriousness of his intent to buy Merrick's remains.

"It would be his privilege and an honor he would not take lightly," Dileo said.

MICHAEL JACKSON Says interest is serious

He said Jackson's interest in Merrick's remains is based on his awareness of the ethical, medical and historical significance of the "Elephant Man."

Jackson has read all the material about the Elephant Man and has visited the hospital in London twice to view Merrick's remains with great curiosity, he said.

Jackson, winner of 11 music industry Grammy awards, keeps a menagerie of animals at his Encino home, including a deer, a llama, chimpanzees and a boar constrictor. He recently dropped a plan to add a giraffe to the compound after neighbors protested.

Videotapes rather than drugs, Boy George says

LONDON (AP) — Pop star Boy George said Tuesday his new drug-free lifestyle has him in bed by 10 p.m. watching videotapes.

"I lead a clean life," the gender-bending singer told BBC television.

"I am in bed by 10 o'clock every night. I watch videos. I just try to lead a healthy lifestyle."

George said he got rid of his heroin habit after his friend Mark Golding died of an overdose last December.

"I realized that it was only a matter of time before it was my turn," he said.

George said he was avoiding society haunts where he might use offered drugs.

"It is easier to take drugs than to stop taking them," he said. "That is a problem all people have. I would suggest to anybody who is thinking of starting not to bother because it can take you up to a year to feel normal again."

Blanchards to divorce after 21 years together

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Gov. James J. Blanchard and his wife, Haula, announced Tuesday they have filed for divorce after nearly 21 years of marriage.

In a brief statement, the Blanchards said they regretted the action but believed that long-standing, irreconcilable differences compelled it.

The initial filing in Ingham County Circuit Court called for joint custody of their 16-year-old son, Jay, and for Blanchard to make a biweekly payment of $1,653 for her support and maintenance.

Mayor Cisneros says he will curtail schedule

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Mayor Henry Cisneros says he will curtail his busy schedule to focus on his family and sick newborn child.

"I'm going to try to simplify my life," Cisneros said Monday. "The most troubling thing for me is, it's a heavy schedule. I can readily push that aside."

For the first time since his son, John Paul Anthony, was born on June 10, Cisneros spent most of the afternoon at City Hall on Monday.

The boy was born with a congenital heart defect and the mayor has spent most of his time at Methodist Hospital, where his wife, Mary Alice, and child remain.

Mrs. Cisneros and the child are expected to return home by Sunday, Cisneros said.

The mayor, who is paid just $4,000 annually, said he will continue to make speeches for homeowners because that accounts for most of his income.

He said he has not made a decision about his future in politics.

Indianapolis mayor fine after heart treatment

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mayor William Hudnut was reported doing well after undergoing an outpatient medical procedure Tuesday to correct an irregular heart rhythm, St. Vincent Hospital spokesman May Vincent said.

In the procedure, called electrical cardioversion, an electrical shock is delivered to try to make the heart-beat more regular.

The mayor's cardiologist, Dr. Clifford Hallam, said the heartbeat adjustment could help prevent possible problems, such as blood clots.

Hudnut said Monday the procedure was scheduled because medication prescribed since early May had not corrected the problem.

Authorities confuse identities after crash

HASTINGS, Neb. (AP) — Relatives of a 17-year-old boy killed in a traffic accident spent two days by the hospital in an effort to add youth or authorities confused the teen-agers' identities, a family member said Tuesday.

Authorities reversed the identities of Jay Stones and another 17-year-old, Scott Sell, who was injured in the wreck early Sunday. Sell was reported killed but actually was in the hospital bed that the Stones family visited.

"Stones' brother Brett, 23, said Sell had plenty of company — "all my aunts and uncles and all of my brother's friends and everything," he said. Only one person suspected the error, Brett said.

"Yesterday morning one cousin did. He said something and his dad told him to quit horsing around. So he never said anything else about it," he added.

Sell was in critical condition Tuesday at Mary Lanning Hospital.

Adams County Attorney Gary Anderberg said police and the Sell family discovered the erroneous identifications independently Monday afternoon, more than 36 hours after the mistake was made.

Anderberg said the discovery by police was prompted by conflicting information about what the boys were wearing and which one was driving their motorcycle, which collided with a car.

The Sell family discovered the error when they went to a funeral home to view the body of the boy killed, Anderberg said.

The identifications were reversed in hospital and police records, Anderberg said.

The error was made at the hospital around the time Stones died, Anderberg said.

"If I could pinpoint who was responsible, I certainly would. But I can't," Anderberg said at a news conference Tuesday. Family members and at least 12 friends of those involved in the accident were at the hospital when the wrong identifications were made, he said.

Anderberg said police should have determined the identity of the deceased boy independently. The investigation will continue, he said.

Hospital officials would not comment on the mistake.

The traffic accident occurred at 12:25 a.m. Sunday. Sell was pronounced dead at 1:10 a.m.

Asked if the condition of the victims made identification difficult, Anderberg said they had suffered "substantial" injuries.

"Our reports ... indicate that ... the motorcycle was going between 60 and 80 mph," Anderberg said.

BID files claims to collect delinquent fees

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — After four years of gentle persuasion, the Twin Falls Business Improvement District now has gone to court to collect overdue assessments from balking businesses.

The BID is seeking more than $3,650 in fees from one former and 10 current businesses in the city's downtown core, where a special improvement district has existed for 4½ years.

The district maintains the open-air mall and generally provides business downtown. Under its terms, businesses pay quarterly assessments, which vary according to floor space and the type of business they conduct.

The city-sponsored BID recently filed complaints in 5th District Small Claims Court at Twin Falls. Court hearings are set for August 14.

Some fees have been delinquent since just after the BID was organized in 1982, according to city records. The overdue bills range from $22.55 for Telenavser of Twin Falls for a small phone answering service, to $768.14 for Ketchum Dry Goods, a trendy clothing store.

"The majority pay and it's not fair for the rest of them to not pay," said Sue Ann Jones, BID coordinator, who filed the charges. "If they hadn't paid their electric bill, they hadn't paid their water bill or something, they certainly wouldn't have been in trouble long before this."

The BID has a $64,000 budget this year. It takes in 155 downtown stores and offices.

The current action marks the first time the BID has gone to court to recoup back fees. For years, the district's directors, all downtown business people, have shied away from collecting in court. In past months, the BID has gotten tough, warning recalcitrant owners through letters, a personal visit by a BID agent and finally a hand-served court summons, Jones said.

However, the BID is likely to face opposition in court from some owners refusing to pay the claims.

"I want to resist it because they are not doing anything that helps my business," said John Stedford, owner of Telenavser of Twin Falls, "and I don't want them to." He and others being sued are forming a group to explore their legal alternatives, he said.

His eight-year-old business is located a half-block off Main Avenue, the location of the downtown mall. "I don't want to fight these people," he said. "I just want them to leave me alone."

Several shops at the western end of the downtown along Main Avenue also have resisted, saying they generally are ignored. "I have not even met the new director (BID coordinator)," said Lynn Ricks, owner of The Men's Room, a hair salon.

The businesses are not included in BID promotions, and their customers do not get the benefits of the downtown mall, such as shade trees, a wide walkway and maintenance, he said.

Many of the owners being pursued operate service businesses, which do not rely primarily on walk-in traffic for sales.

However, the practical benefits of the BID may have little to do with the legal question of the bills. In a legal opinion on a related matter last September, Twin Falls City Atty. Shane Bangoche reinforced the right of the BID to demand assessments from businesses leasing or owning property within district boundaries.

Further, his opinion argued the BID could legally assess owners of buildings if a business has left or refuses to pay. The BID has not gone that far, though, preferring to secure stronger legal ground in the next session of the Idaho Legislature.

The BID has issued complaints against: Don Dee's Diner, R.S. Garner Enterprises, Belmore Hearing Aid Center, Uptown Beauty Nook, Lloyd J. Walker P.A., Telenavser of Twin Falls, Matt's Service Station, The Men's Room, Ketchum Dry Goods, Bernina Sewing Center and Smokey's Hobbyland.

No suspects yet in murder case, officials report

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

MOUNTAIN HOME — Law enforcement officers from Idaho and Oregon met in Mountain Home Tuesday, along with the family of a 22-year-old Twin Falls woman who was murdered last week, and reviewed all aspects of the case and their investigation procedure.

The investigation into the death of Lia Sabbert began when her nude body was found Saturday evening near LaGrande, Ore. along Interstate Highway 84.

She had been missing since Tuesday about 4 p.m. when her car broke down on I-84 near Mountain Home.

But authorities said following their meeting that they have no new information to reveal and no information on possible suspects.

Personnel in the office of Russell West, Union County district attorney in LaGrande who has asked that all information on the case be released through his office, said some news reports in recent days indicating officers have suspects are exaggerated.

Kathy Calvey of the district attorney's office said her office has heard of news reports from Boise indicating there are specific suspects in the case.

She said there are a number of leads and angles being checked out but there is no suspect that officers are pointing to or arrests have been made.

A formal release issued following the Mountain Home gathering said:

"There are no new developments in the investigation of the murder of Lia Sabbert. Mountain Home police hosted a joint meeting (Tuesday) attended by members of the family and friends (of the victim), the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Oregon state authorities, Twin Falls Police, Mountain Home and Elmore County sheriff's department.

"Information was exchanged between authorities and all possible leads are being pursued. If any change in the status of the investigation occurs, another release will be made."

Calvey also said the cause of death, other than that it is a homicide, is still being withheld and homicide is still being withheld during the investigation.

The victim's mother, Mary Pat Sabbert of Twin Falls, said following the Mountain Home meeting that she believed officers are doing all that they can and that she is anxious that they proceed with the investigation.

Lia Sabbert disappeared about 4 p.m. last Tuesday after her vehicle broke down on I-84 near Mountain Home. She apparently was driving a nearby Geer Janner truck stop and telephoned friends in Boise. Officers believe that she was murdered a short time later, and her body left near LaGrande.

Officers said the body was discovered by a motorist and was located north of the Stockhoff interchange at the site of an embankment. The area is about seven miles east of LaGrande.

Touring historic Oakley homes

John C. Clark residence debuts

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

OAKLEY — The intriguing old homes of Oakley's elite citizens during the early days, many of Victorian style, will be on display Saturday in the annual tour of homes by the Oakley Valley Improvement Group.

This year the John C. Clark home will be shown for the first time. Kent Hale, a co-chairman of the annual event, says while the Clark home is not one of the largest and most elaborate, it is one of the community's most charming old homes.

Now owned by Garth and Clady Greenwell, it has been refurbished during the past year. The tour will also illustrate popular architectural designs of the farm community at the turn of the century.

Hale said the owners have been able to create comfortable living and yet retain most of the early day features of the homes.

As usual, a highlight of the tour will be a visit into the "Howell's Castle." Once the home of Judge Benjamin Howell, the three-story home gets its name from the turret or circular tower on one corner of the building and the skittily refurbished gingerbread-trim of balconies and porches.

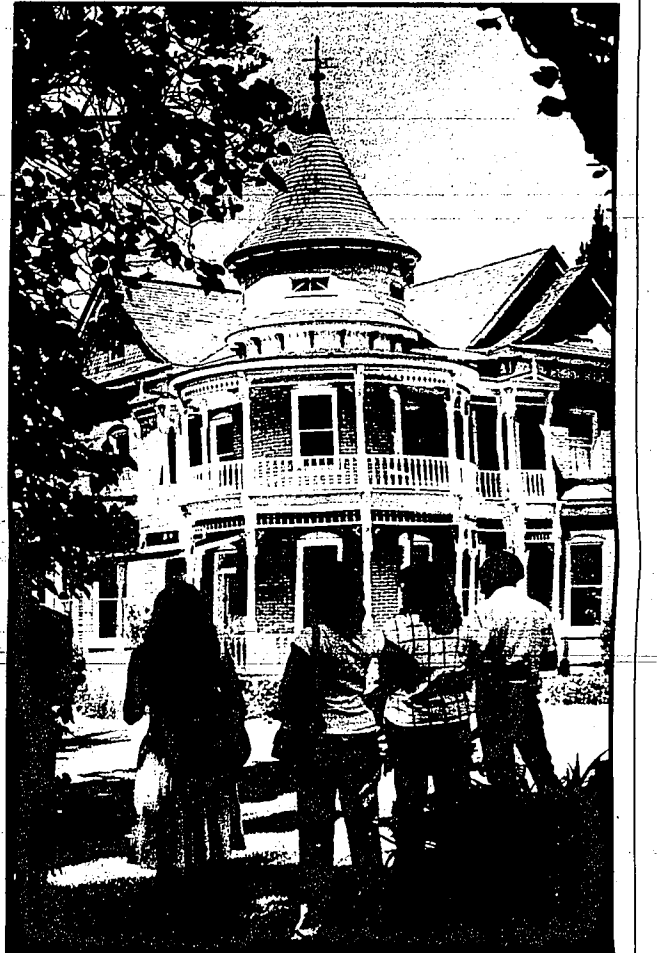

Gary Mullard has been responsible for saving the old building and restoring it into the true showplace that it was when built about 1895.

Those who make the tour will spend about two hours going back into history. There is a slide show at the Howell's theater to explain architectural designs that were popular in Oakley in the late 1800s and early 1900s. Then tour participants spend the next hour or more walking past the old homes and touring the interiors of several of the most unusual.

In addition to the Greenwell and Mullard homes, Idaho tours will include the Marcus Funk home now owned by Jay and Worene Goringe and the Cutler Worthington home, now the home of John Harpdy and his family. Harpdy and Becky Clark will also open their home, once the Charles C. Halgait home, to the public.

Tours begin each 30 minutes from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. except during a lunch break from 12 noon to 12:30 p.m.

Each tour group will have as their tour guide an Oakley resident

Participants view the three-story 'Howell Castle' during an earlier tour of homes who is familiar with the town's history and the stories of the old homes and several businesses that are included in the day's program.

The antique log cabin at the Rita Layton residence, restored and furnished with antiques to show the typical small 1800s home of the community, is also open to the tour members.

Price for the tours is $3 per person and they begin at the theater, also known as the Oakley Opera House on Blaine Street.

The sponsoring organization is dedicated to continuing the restoration of early community homes and other historic buildings. Proceeds from the tour are used to further this goal. In the past, much of the money has been used to rebuild the opera house for community theater productions and other civic events.

Driving alone? Take care and be prepared

By PAT MARGANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "If there is anything good that can possibly come from something like this, it is to let other young women know that these things can happen, and that they must be careful."

Those were the words of Mary Pat Sabbert of Twin Falls on the murder of her 22-year-old daughter, Lia, whose body was found along an Oregon highway on Saturday. Lia had been reported missing after her car had broken down on Interstate 84 near Mountain Home.

Cautious and preparation are the advice of law enforcement officials to those male and female driving alone on Idaho roads and highways.

The State Department of Law Enforcement keeps no statistics on how many murders in Idaho are highway related. But when a road trip ends in rape, robbery or murder, even one is too much for the victim or their family.

Rick Owens of the Idaho State Police advises drivers to remain with their cars if the vehicle breaks down "in the middle of nowhere."

If drivers can't fix the problem, they should raise the trunk and hood of the vehicle or ignite flashers as distress signals, he says. When someone arrives, remain in the car, check the engine and ask them to call a wrecker or police. The Idaho State Police has a toll-free number, 1-800-233-1212, to summon highway assistance as well as report drunken drivers.

Hitchhiking to a town to find help after a breakdown is not a good idea, Owens said. "Hitchhiking is inherently dangerous," he says. "I'm not saying you're going to meet up with a criminal, but you can get in a great fix." Hitchhikers are fairly easy prey. We don't endorse hitchhiking at all.

SNRA superintendent resigns for Nevada slot

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — The superintendent for the Sawtooth National Recreation Area for 10 years is leaving to take a position in the Toiyabe National Forest in Nevada.

At Ashton says effective July 20 he will be staff director for recreation, lands and minerals in the western Nevada forest between Reno and Las Vegas.

Ashton called the change a lateral move and said the U.S. Forest Service hasn't received an offer to replace him yet.

But Roland Stoleson, Sawtooth National Forest supervisor, says the Toiyabe position is a much bigger job than running the SNRA. The Toiyabe has more camping and recreational uses than the entire Sawtooth National Forest, he says.

Ashton says the job became available when the director had to take a another position. He said he was offered the position but didn't apply for it.

Pat Ford, new public lands coordinator for the Idaho Conservation League, said he was surprised to learn Ashton was leaving. Rick Johnson, a former ICL public lands coordinator during Ashton's tenure, could not be reached for comment.

However, during the debate earlier this year on Rep. Larry Craig's proposal to buy the Boulder-White Clouds National Park, Johnson pointed to the SNRA as an example good land manager.

The SNRA was created by Congress on Aug. 22, 1972 to preserve a 754,000-acre expanse of mountains, peaks, ridges, summer homes and rivers northeast of Ketchum.

Ashton says his major accomplishment was in advancing anadromous fishery and protecting scenic values on private lands.

Court backs ruling vs. potato shippers

By The Associated Press

BOISE — A lawsuit over the failure of a potato shipping company to meet its contract to purchase potatoes was a contract dispute, not a matter of property damage, the Idaho Supreme Court says.

As a result, an insurance company and an insurance broker have no liability to cover a judgment of nearly $400,000 against the shipping company. The insurance policy specifically excluded contract disputes, the court ruled unanimously on Tuesday.

The Supreme Court upheld a ruling by 5th District Judge J. William Hart against Magic Valley Potato Shippers. The company filed a lawsuit against its insurance carrier, Continental Insurance, and Merrill Paslay Agency, which sold the policy.

The Idaho Supreme Court has upheld a district judge's order denying a small airline's request for a new trial over a 1983 plane crash that yielded a $1.5 million personal injury award to two victims.

The Supreme Court decided unanimously on Monday that 5th District Judge Douglas Kramer, now retired, was justified in rejecting the request from Sierra Pacific Airlines Inc.

Harper alleged that it lost its equity in a farm because it was unable to meet a note and the property was foreclosed because of losses it suffered in the Magic Valley Shippers contract.

Harper eventually won a judgment of $220,000 in compensatory damages, $130,000 in punitive damages, $48,000 in attorney fees and costs. Magic Valley Potato Shippers tried to get Continental to cover the loss, arguing part of the loss was property damage.

But the Supreme Court unanimously ruled against the claim, saying the Harper lawsuit was based on breach of contract.

In other decisions released Tuesday: The court upheld a decision in favor of First Security Bank in Ada County lawsuit over a contract for the sale of several pieces of heavy equipment. Defendants were Mountain View Equipment Co. Inc., Carl and Patricia Nicholson; Thomas and Diane Nicholson and request of early community homes and other historic buildings. Proceeds from the tour are used to further this goal. In the past, much of the money has been used to rebuild the opera house for community theater productions and other civic events.

Both parties suffered severe pain, fear and panic during the ordeal. They both believed they were about to be incinerated. They also suffered extensive physical injuries which have altered their lives," the judge said. "It does not appear that the jury was influenced by passion or prejudice. Instead, the jury acted quite reasonably, responsibly and conservatively."

The Supreme Court said Kramer did not abuse his discretion and it would not second-guess his decision.

The high court earlier sustained a jury's finding that Sierra Pacific was liable for the Feb. 15, 1983, accident in Blaine County that injured Cherie Sorja and Bernie Ryan.

But the high court returned the case to Kramer for consideration of whether punitive damages of $1 million awarded to Sorja and $500,000 to Ryan were excessive.

Kramer ruled that "if anything... (he) would have awarded both Ryan and Sorja at least what the jury did."

The Supreme Court said Kramer did not abuse his discretion and it would not second-guess his decision.

Fire crews gain advantage as winds across state die down

By The Associated Press

Fire crews gained ground on Tuesday against major range fires that have already blackened 125,000 acres in southwestern Idaho, taking advantage of the cool, moist aftermath of the thunderstorm system that originally spawned the blazes.

Officials hoped to declare the last of the 26 fires out by no later than today.

"There's still fire out there, but it's no where near as severe as it was," BLM fire management officer Bill Casey said. "It's much cooler. We've got more humidity, a lot less wind, and it's looking pretty good."

The early opening of the fire season on the heels of two straight summers of severe fire damage has also left the government well short of the seed — it needs, for re-planting burned-out areas, officials said.

North of the dry desert range, National Forest Service crews had dozens of generally small fires in hand, and bosses began releasing firefighters from the Nezperce National Forest above the Salmon River. Manpower there was less than half of the nearly 200 men on the lines Monday.

"A lot of the fires are either in the mop-up stage or out," Nezperce spokeswoman Mary Zabinski said. "We got lightning but also lots of rain last night and this morning and there were no fires."

Boise National Forest spokesman Greg Spangenberg said crews had also generally checked the spread of the five most serious blazes in that forest.

Still, more than 300 firefighters were scattered throughout the southwestern and west central parts of the state following the Sunday and Monday storms that sent showers of lightning bolts into dry brush and timber.

No structures have been threatened and no injuries have been reported, officials said. The fires had generally been in check until Monday evening when a new storm with winds over 50 miles an hour fanned some out of control again.

About half the manpower was committed to the fires still burning on the desert range south of Mountain Home. The two largest of those fires have already charred 50,000 acres in the Brown's Creek area and 40,000 acres around Indian Tub. Six smaller fires had consumed another 8,000 acres. In all the area is bigger than the city of Philadelphia.

"The problem will be maintaining these lines," BLM spokesman Fred Corey said. "We're covering a lot of area."

Meanwhile, BLM State Director

Delmar Vail announced the agency has purchased 142,000 pounds of crested wheatgrass seed from commercial suppliers and will harvest another 100,000 pounds of seed from public range in Owyhee County to begin rebuilding depleted stockpiles for range fire rehabilitation.

"At the same time, wildfires in 1985 and 1986 dramatically increased the need for crested wheatgrass seed to rehabilitate critical burn areas in Idaho as well as California, Nevada and Oregon."

Rhoades off hook in case at Rexburg

REXBURG (AP) — Accused slayer Paul Ezra Rhoades won't be charged by the Rexburg Police Department in a rape, robbery and kidnapping case under investigation here, police say.

One of the reasons for closing the case is that the victim, a 19-year-old Utah woman, has been advised by her doctor to stop cooperating with authorities because of the emotional stress it has caused her, Chief Blair Sheriff said Tuesday.

But the Madison County sheriff's office will continue to investigate the rape, which occurred in the Rexburg city limits, Sheriff Edward Koon said. Officials have said in the past that Rhoades was a suspect in the case.

Koon said he hopes that the woman's psychological condition will improve so she will provide a blood sample, a key element needed for the sheriff's office to complete its investigation.

The woman, a Ricks College student at the time, told police on March 3 she was forced at gunpoint to withdraw money from her account through a bank automatic teller machine, and then was forced to drive her car east of the city where she was raped, she said.

Rhoades, 30, of Idaho Falls, has pleaded innocent to charges, including first-degree murder, in the March deaths of Idaho Falls school teacher Susan Michelbacher and store clerk Nolan Haddon. His trial on those two charges is set for Oct. 6.

On July 15, Rhoades will face preliminary hearings in Magistrate Court Blackfoot in a separate first-degree murder charge, the death of Stacy Baldwin of Blackfoot in February.

Engineer tells PUC ratepayers bear risk

BOISE (AP) — Utility ratepayers bear significant risk because of the payment plan granted to cogenerators and small power producers in Idaho by Public Utilities Commission engineers say.

Testimony by engineer Tom Faulk was prefilled with the commission on Tuesday as it opens hearings on payments for power generated by cogenerators and small power producers.

The hearings could continue all week. The PUC is not expected to make an immediate ruling on what changes it will order, if any.

Under federal law, utilities are required to purchase electricity from cogenerators, who usually generate electricity as a byproduct. In Idaho, cogenerators often use sawmill waste to fire boilers running electrical generators.

The rates also cover small power producers, commonly small hydroelectric projects.

The PUC earlier this year ordered an investigation into whether the payment plan for that power is fair both to the producers and the ratepayers who ultimately pay for it.

benefits of the payment schedule go to the cogenerators and small power producers, they should be responsible for some sort of security arrangement to make certain the 35-year contract is carried out.

Faulk evaluated nine methods of providing security and said none could be universally applied to all producers.

They included insurance, performance bonds, escrow accounts, guaranteed lines of credit, non-levelized payments, risk-sharing, pooling, joint, lien rights and corporate net worth.

At the present time, Faulk said, acceptable methods for overpayment protection should be limited to insurance, performance bonds, escrow, guaranteed lines of credit, non-levelized rates and utility risk-sharing.

Relying on lien rights or corporate net worth would require the PUC to make financial evaluations best left to the financial community, he said.

Rescue team puts off searching for climber

CHALLIS (AP) — Rescuers on Tuesday postponed until later this week their search for a Boise architect who disappeared during a weekend climbing trip on Mount Borah, Idaho's tallest peak.

"We're waiting probably until tomorrow or the next day. We want to let that area air out for a few days," search-team leader Gale Lords said. "It's pretty risky up there for searching."

The search for David Probst, 38, who disappeared Saturday evening, was called off Monday about noon because of high winds and poor snow conditions.

Probst, a member of the Idaho Mountain Rescue team out of Boise, disappeared after he lost his footing on a snow chute at 10,000 feet Saturday and slid from the view of the rest of the party as it was descending the 12,662-foot peak, Sheriff Doug Leaton said.

Companions Jennifer Smith and Linda Clowerton, Borah, and Ben Chidlow, Ketchum, hunted for him until nightfall, and then Lords and his team, aided by a Mountain Home Air Force Base helicopter, took up the search until weather forced them to come off the mountain.

"We've pretty much got him located," Lords said. "We just want to let the area clear out so we can get our dog in there. That will save us a lot of time. But we still don't want people up in that area so their search won't get in there and cover it up for the dog."

Probst, an experienced climber wearing a backpack estimated to weigh around 30 pounds, had been descending down a snow chute on his buttocks when he began sliding out of control, Lords said.

Although he reportedly had an ice ax with him, Probst apparently did not use it and attempted to halt his fall with rocks, Lords said.

Probst slid out of sight of Miss Smith, who was above him and had been descending on a rocky outcropping rather than down the snow chute, Lords said his fall set off a snow slide which buried him.

Lords estimated that Probst fell about 700 feet and was buried in 10 to 15 feet of snow.

Chidlow and Miss Clayborne were about 1,000 feet below Probst and Miss Smith when they saw the snowslide estimated at 300 feet by 150 feet, come over a waterfall near them in Rock Creek canyon, Lords said.

Mormon crickets seen near Dubois

DUBOIS (AP) — Mormon crickets, which insect experts say are the most destructive member of the grasshopper family, have been spotted in this northeastern Idaho area.

County extension agent Steve Peebles said a small group of crickets was spotted east of Dubois by landowner Larry Lee in mid-May. The insects seemed to disappear with the onset of rain and wet weather but were reported again June 5 on the Dubois-Kilgore highway, said Peebles.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture agency in charge of insect abatement, the Animal Health and Inspection Service (APHIS) sent an investigator, Peebles said. Officials are awaiting word from the Bureau of Land Management on how to proceed, he said.

Christian Scientists Gather For Annual Meeting

Boston

Speakers at the 92nd annual meeting of Christian Scientists Monday focused on several topics, including Christian healing, new broadcasting efforts, and "a spiritual urgency" as mankind stands at "the crossroads."

The denomination's Mother Church was filled to capacity with members from around the world as the chairman of the church's Board of Directors, other church officers, and adherents from a number of countries addressed the congregation.

Highlights of the meeting included:

"Reports from the field," a traditional aspect of each annual meeting, which this year included accounts of spiritual healing from Kansas, India, Florida, and Cameroon, as well as accounts of Sunday School and church progress from Ohio and Portugal.

Portions of the meeting focused on ways in which the Christian Science Publishing Society's new broadcasting efforts were furthering the church's healing mission.

Publishing Society manager John H. Hoagland Jr., referring recently to the church's flagship publication, The Christian Science Monitor in both its print and broadcast forms, noted: "The Monitor's role in the last of this century has to be defined globally." The sharing of news and religious programming with listeners in Europe, the western Soviet Union, the middle East, and most of Africa has been made possible by the recently completed construction of a shortwave transmitting site in Mainz.

A transmitter in Saipan is expected to cover much of Asia, the South Pacific, and eastern Africa. A third transmitter in the southern United States will serve the Western Hemisphere.

Reports from Christian Scientists outside Boston ranged broadly — from a Florida adherent who first began studying Christian Science in 1910 to a 17-year-old boy from India who was healed through prayer of a serious liver ailment that had not responded to conventional treatment.

The clerk of the Mother Church, Virginia S. Harris, announced two new programs for young people: "Sharing Seminars," a forum for Christian Science College Organizations to share insights with teenagers at local Sunday schools; and a 15-minute video for teens, by teens speaking about how their understanding of God relates to issues uppermost in their lives.

Church treasurer Donald C. Bowser noted that even after increased cost in 1986-87, including $25 million for broadcasting activities and facilities, the church's overall working funds were up nearly 9 percent. Increased expenses, he noted, "were investments that have been made directly to enhance our ability to reach all mankind — to reach the hungry heart — more effectively."

Nathan A. Talbot, manager of the Committee on Publication said of Mary Baker Eddy, the interest is varied — while sometimes balanced, at other times tending to either "tear down or build up her personality." His office has made a focused effort over the past year, to offer historically accurate information to newspapers, encyclopedias, and theological journals, among others.

Each individual church member has a role to play in meeting the needs of one's fellowman, Mrs. Jenks noted. "Now let one be tempted to think that the problems of the world loom so large that one's own ability seems so feeble that he'd rather stand on the sidelines, remember the biblical account of Jesus' sending out his 70 disciples: 'What is needed today, she said, 'is the same willingness to be counted as a disciple and to be truly witness to the power and presence of the Christ.'"

Jones concerned with inmates filing lawsuits

BOISE (AP) — Attorney General Jim Jones said he is concerned about the possibility of inmates at the Idaho State Penitentiary filing lawsuits against the state over the threat of contracting AIDS from other prisoners.

Jones said at a Monday press conference that the state Department of Corrections has asked for a legal opinion on whether it can conduct AIDS testing at the penitentiary, even though the department's medical director recommended against widespread testing only last week.

The attorney general said it was good that Corrections officials have begun considering the implications of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, including what they can do to stop its spread and protect the state from liability.

"I think it's something that we're going to have to get right on," Jones said. "The state needs to turn some attention to this issue."

Dr. Kelly Mutch told the Idaho Board of Corrections last week that one inmate in the state's prison system is known to be infected with the virus linked to AIDS, which weakens the body's immune system and makes it vulnerable to a variety of so-called "opportunistic" diseases.

Still, Mutch said he doubted the AIDS virus would spread far within the prison system, and recommended against mass blood screening as expensive and of little use.

Jones said he gained some insight into the issue from discussions at last week's summer meeting of the National Association of Attorneys General in Coeur d'Alene.

He said among his concerns is how to ensure the civil rights of those infected with the AIDS virus faced with the pressure to confine them away from other inmates, and how to deal with those who purposely seek to spread the deadly disease.

Right-to-work chief topic

Labor unions open state convention

POCATELLO (AP) — The leader of Idaho's labor unions says the state's new right-to-work law has caused 27,000 Idaho residents to leave the state permanently.

Right-to-work, approved overwhelmingly by Idaho voters last November, was the chief topic of discussion as the Idaho AFL-CIO organization opened its state convention here. Sessions continue through Wednesday with resolutions and the election of officers.

Right-to-work bans compulsory union membership or the payment of union dues as a condition of employment. Idaho became the 21st state with a right-to-work law but the first state to pass such a law since Louisiana in 1976. Missouri defeated a right-to-work referendum in 1978.

About 100 union delegates were on hand for sessions expected to include the re-election of Jim Kerns as AFL-CIO president.

Kerns said the delegates are "ready to do what is necessary to repeal and modify" right-to-work. He said the problems predicted if the law were retained already have started.

"Since right-to-work went into effect Jan. 1, 1985, over 27,000 people have left the state — permanently," said Kerns. "They're leaving because they don't want to work for Taiwanese wages anymore."

Labor leaders are asking delegates to approach chambers of commerce, farm leaders and legislators "and ask them if they're better off now than before (RTW became law)," said Kerns.

He admitted Idaho's labor movement suffered a severe blow as a result of RTW. Affiliated unions have lost about 7,000 members since the law went into effect, he said. That's more than one-fifth of total union membership, which now numbers about 25,000.

In addition, employers are demanding more concessions in contract negotiations, he said. Kerns said the National Institute of Business held a seminar in Boise earlier this year at which businessmen were told to "take advantage of right-to-work and extract as many give-backs as you can, while you can, because one day the labor movement is going to wake up."

John Carlson, business representative of Machinists Union Local 1933 in Pocatello and a member of the AFL-CIO's most local contract negotiations since RTW's passage "have been efforts for give-backs."

Carlson said the union came within two votes recently of striking a local machine shop, which demanded concessions and give-backs.

Aside from the effects of the right-to-work law, the union delegates are also occupied with other issues, including trade legislation. Republican Stalling's D-Idaho, explained Monday why he voted against the Gephardt Amendment to the trade bill. That amendment would require the U.S. to limit imports from countries that have large trade surpluses with the U.S. over a five-year period.

Union members were not sympathetic, however, to Stalling's claims that the amendment would hurt Idaho's farmers.

"The Gephardt Amendment is simply an effort to develop a trade policy in cutting the U.S. trade deficit," said Kerns. "The U.S. is the only industrialized country in the world without a trade policy."

"It's only that insurance company that calls itself a farmer's group (the National Farm Bureau Federation) that opposed it," said Kerns. "I'm not happy with his (Stalling's) vote and I've told him that."

Among the resolutions to be considered are one calling on the Idaho Public Employees Retirement System to be managed for the highest rate of return, even if that means retaining an out-of-state "master trustee."

Holiday Inn subject of national porn protest

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — About 25 people carrying signs with messages such as "Stamp Out Porn!" and "Holiday Inn Brings Pornography In!" paced in front of the hotel.

The demonstration was part of a planned nationwide protest Monday to get Holiday Inns management to stop showing adult movies through Satellite Cinema.

Burr Miller, manager of the 600 South Holiday Inn, wouldn't comment on the day's protest, but he handed out a statement from company headquarters that said:

"Satellite Cinema only shows movies that receive a rating of G, PG-13 or R. Films of mature subject matter are only shown at night, and a computer-controlled 'lock out' box is offered, so movies can't be seen in any individual room. All a guest has to do is contact the front desk if they don't want Satellite Cinema."

"What's wrong with 'Benji'?" said Maurine Brimhall, lifting her "Fight AIDS, Promote Cleanliness" sign above her shoulders and waving it at rush-hour commuters.

"What's wrong with 'Benji' or 'The Sound of Music' that is so popular for entertainment at the Holiday Inn. Instead, they have sleazy sex acts," said Mrs. Brimhall, a long-time leader of the anti-porn movement in Utah.

A group of five businessmen from Oklahoma pulled slowly into the entrance of the Holiday Inn and shook their heads. "Only in Utah," muttered one. "What will they think of picket next?" said another.

"Holiday Inn advertises as a family inn, and I feel that they should cater to family entertainment," said picket Callie McMurdie. "Instead, they're the biggest distributor of porn in the United States. Just look at this." She pulled out a list of some of the movies Satellite Cinema has shown: "The Sinful Bed," "The Princess and the Call Girl," "Lonely Wives," and "Between the Covers."

"We want it stopped," she said. "Why should the children of America be subjected to this?"

"I've never tuned into one of these movies, but I must say, now I'm kind of curious," said hotel guest Frank Vanlandingham, in town on business from Fort Wayne, Ind. "I don't see why this is such a big deal. What happened to freedom of choice? That's why television sets are equipped with dials and knobs. If you don't want to watch a show, just don't turn the knob."

1-vehicle accident kills Utah woman

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A Salt Lake woman has died following a one-vehicle accident on Interstate 15, about eight miles south of Idaho Falls, the Idaho State Police report.

The victim is identified as Jorjanna Meeks, 66. Police said Mrs. Meeks was driving southbound on the highway Monday night when she apparently was distracted taking her eyes off the road. The vehicle veered off the interstate and then back onto the pavement before rolling, authorities said.

Her husband, William Meeks, 64, a passenger in the car, was treated for injuries at a local hospital and released.

Censor nets inmate's suit

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A state prison inmate contends his constitutional rights were violated when a penitentiary official cut out three pages of a sexually explicit magazine to which the inmate had subscribed.

Wayne L. Spain testified in Spokane Monday that while he was not allowed to receive Hustler magazine, similar sexually explicit material was broadcast on a closed-circuit television at the Washington State Penitentiary in Walla Walla.

U.S. District Court Judge Justin L. Queenbush is hearing the preliminary trial of the lawsuit, in which Spain is seeking $50,000 in damages.

Spain, who is serving a 10-year sentence on a 1981 indirect liberties conviction in King County, testified Monday he paid $39.95 for a year's subscription to Hustler in 1983 after he was told in writing by the prison mailroom that he could receive such literature.

But when his subscription arrived in the mail, portions were ripped and cut out from the magazines by a prison counselor, who said, "Oh, this has got to go." Spain told the judge.

County offers to settle harassment suit

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Salt Lake County has offered Shauna Clark $26,500 to settle her $1.2 million federal-court suit that alleges former County Attorney Ted Cannon sexually harassed her.

"It puts them in the position of having to make a decision," County Attorney David Yocom said Monday. "If they reject our offer, and the final judgment is less than what we offered, not only does she have to pay her attorney and court costs out of the award, we could ask the judge to let us repay our legal costs."

He said the offer was similar to the Utah Attorney General's offering Amy Schaefer a $10,000 settlement to drop her $600,000 suit alleging she was assaulted by former Utah Highway Patrolman Ernest Brent Wilcock. Ms. Schaefer has turned down the offer.

Ms. Clark, 26, filed the suit May 12, naming the county, Cannon and County Attorney Investigations Chief Sam Dawson as defendants.

"Several factors led to our decision to offer the settlement," Yocom said. "First of all, there is the cost to defend the action. Besides the time and efforts required of our own attorneys to defend the county and Mr. Dawson, we are also obligated to defend Mr. Cannon, and we would have to hire outside counsel to do that, because of the potential conflict of interest involved."

Yocom said a potential conflict existed because the county would argue in its own defense that Cannon was acting as an independent agent, and that the county was not responsible for his actions.

"It would be difficult for us to defend Mr. Cannon while at the same time making those kinds of arguments," he said.

Another factor for the offer, said Yocom, "is to stop the plaintiff's cost from accumulating. We also want to end the litigation, to save our office from the time and trouble and turmoil this case has caused us."

Yocom said his office has already received a $16,000 bill from Ms. Clark's attorney, L. Zane Gill. Because the county's offer would include attorney's fees and court costs, Ms. Clark would personally receive about $10,000, "assuming Mr. Gill's bill is still around $16,000."

"Shauna and I will meet within the next few days and give this offer serious consideration," Gill said. "I haven't seen the details of the offer, so I can't comment on it specifically."

Ms. Clark said she would have to sit down with her attorney "and see how it works out on paper" before she could comment.

She is still a secretary in the County Attorney's Office, although she was transferred out of the Investigations Division after she made the sexual harassment allegations.

The suit also alleges that Dawson, as Ms. Clark's immediate supervisor, knew about the sexual harassment and did nothing to stop it.

Dog theft nets sentence

POMONA, Calif. (AP) — The owner of a guard-dog company has been sentenced to three years and eight months in prison for stealing a competitor's truck full of attack-trained dogs and setting it afire.

John Daniels, 31, of Inglewood, was sentenced Monday for his conviction on charges of grand theft auto, grand theft of property and arson, said Deputy District Attorney Margaret Hay.

Daniels, who operated K-9 Security and Military K-9, was convicted last month of stealing a truck belonging to C&C Sealing Dogs International of Gardena on Sept. 5, 1986. The vehicle contained 37 guard dogs.

Two dogs died in the fire and the rest escaped to a residential neighborhood. At least two were killed by cars before authorities rounded up the survivors, said Deputy District Attorney Paul Sergejan.

Attorney requests new judge

BLACKFOOT (AP) — The attorney for Tyrone Edmo says he wants a new judge for Edmo's first-degree murder trial, and may ask to have it moved elsewhere.

Defense attorney William Mauk has filed motions before 7th District Judge James Herndon. Jury selection in Edmo's murder trial was scheduled to open today and the trial itself on June 23.

Edmo is one of two men charged with killing Delbert Clinton McCoy, 16, one year ago. The second defendant, Lester Eagle, pleaded guilty and last week was sentenced by Herndon to an indeterminate life sentence. Mauk filed a motion seeking to disqualify Herndon.

Mauk said the sentence, coming a week before the trial, may make it impossible for Edmo to select an unbiased jury in Blackfoot.

According to testimony at Eagle's sentencing, McCoy was hitchhiking when the two men gave him a ride and later stabbed him to death near Blackfoot. The man's body was found in a concrete-lined spillway May 16.

Mauk said at the start of the case he intended to seek a change of venue for Edmo but so far hasn't done so. He said Tuesday he hasn't decided whether he will seek to have the trial moved but doesn't feel that he should have to ask.

"They created this situation by sentencing Eagle a week before Tyrone's trial was scheduled to begin," Mauk said. "The fact there is now a problem doesn't have anything to do with me or him."

Santa Cruz rides named landmarks

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — The Santa Cruz Boardwalk's carousel and Giant Dipper roller coaster have been designated National Historic Landmarks.

"Historical landmarks generally make you think of famous people and battles, but that's not all that makes up the fabric of our country," Dave Cherry, associate regional director of the National Park Service, said at Monday's ceremony. "All work and no play makes Johnny a dull boy."

The carousel, built in 1911 by Danish woodcarver Charles I.D. Looff, features hand-carved horses with fancy jeweled harness and tails of real hair. Music comes from a 342-pipe, German-made organ built in 1854.

Old memento seeker dies

SUPERIOR, Wyo. (AP) — A woman has died of injuries suffered when she was struck by a loosened concrete slab while pulling a souvenir brick from an old high school.

Sweetwater County Coroner Michael Vase said Superior resident Donna Elder, 53, died Sunday at the Sweetwater County Memorial Hospital.

Vase said Elder and a friend were examining the site of the old Superior High School in an abandoned section of the one-time mining boomtown Sunday.

A brick that Elder pulled from the structure apparently was supporting a concrete slab above her, and the brick's removal allowed the slab to fall on her, causing chest injuries.

Strawberries make into sweet treats for dad's day

You're sure to please Dad this Sunday if you make him a strawberry dessert for Father's Day.

The fresh strawberries featured in these recipes are available nearly year round, with peak supplies in markets now. To make the desserts fast and fool-proof, the recipes call for refrigerated biscuits and pie crusts.

Chocolate-dipped strawberries take the spotlight in Strawberries and Cream Tart. The berries sit atop a creamy, white filling with just a hint of almond flavor. For a showy presentation, bake the crust in a tart pan with a removable bottom. The refrigerated all ready pie crust requires no mixing or rolling, so it's a snap to prepare this tender, flaky crust in just a few minutes.

Another spectacular dessert, Strawberry Shortcake Supreme, is a delicious alternative to traditional strawberry shortcake. The flaky, tender shortcake ring goes together in just a few minutes with refrigerated flaky biscuits. The recipe calls for orange peel and orange-flavored liqueur to give the dessert a refreshing citrus flavor that complements the sweet berries.

Strawberries also pair well with a variety of other fruits for marvelous-tasting desserts. A combination of fresh, juicy strawberries and plump blueberries is baked under a ring of refrigerated flaky biscuits to make Strawberry-Blueberry Cobbler. The biscuits are rolled in cinnamon and sugar before baking to give them flavor.

Sweet strawberries and tart rhubarb make the filling in Fresh Strawberry-Rhubarb Pie. Be sure to make slits in the top pie crust for steam to escape during baking. To add a decorative touch, use small cookie or canape cutters to cut out the steam vents.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE SUPREME
Shortcake
2 (10 oz.) cans refrigerated flaky biscuits
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 cup margarine or butter, melted
1/2 cup sugar

1 tablespoon grated orange peel
1/4 cup margarine or butter, melted
1 cup whipping cream
1 tablespoon powdered sugar
1/2 teaspoon almond extract
1/4 cup orange-flavored liqueur or orange juice
2 tablespoons sugar
2 pint baskets fresh strawberries, washed, stemmed and halved
Heat oven to 375 degrees. Grease 9 1/2-cup ring mold or 12-cup fluted tube pan. Separate dough into 20 biscuits. Pour 1/4 cup margarine in bottom of prepared mold. Combine 1/4 cup sugar and orange peel. Dip each biscuit in 1/4 cup melted margarine; roll in sugar mixture. Place on edge in prepared mold, overlapping edges slightly. Bake at 375 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes or until golden brown. Remove from mold immediately. Cool 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, in small bowl, beat whipping cream until soft peaks form. Add powdered sugar and almond extract; beat until stiff peaks form. In another small bowl, combine liqueur and sugar. Spoon half of strawberries into center and on top of biscuit ring. Pour liqueur mixture over biscuits and strawberries. Spoon half of whipped cream over strawberries. Top with remaining strawberries and whipped cream. 10 to 12 servings.

TIPS: *If using 12-cup fluted tube pan, serve remaining half of strawberries and whipped cream with each serving.

If desired, melt 1/2 cup semi-sweet chocolate chips in small saucepan over low heat. Drizzle in this streamer shortcake. Place whole strawberry on top for garnish.

Idaho Beef Cookoff winner: shredded top sirloin in salad

It was a tough job, but somebody had to do it. Right?

Sampling the best of 10 of Idaho's great cooks — what could be easier? But to judge them, you, was the Idaho State Beef Cookoff, and it's big time. Cowbellies are a professional group, and the way they ran this state contest gives an insight into the tremendous amount of preparation happening right now for the National Beef Cookoff to be held here in Idaho in September.

In fact, for that event there has already been one lot of dress rehearsal so any kinks were worked out long before 500 people arrive for the big event.

For the state contest, the Cowbellies brought us in the back way. We could smell the cooking but we weren't allowed to see petizing and appropriate color. Then we were shown what a normal portion of the dish would look like served to an individual.

Finally, we were given a taste. On this phase we were allowed 40 points to judge whether the beef was tender, juicy, flavorful, neither overcooked nor underdone, appropriately seasoned, neither too hot nor too cold, and a pleasing combination of textures and flavors.

Then we were given copies of the recipes. Basically the second half of the judging was also worth 40 points. Thirty of these points were on the ease of preparation and practicality. Was the recipe easily understood? Could the recipe be easily prepared with average skills? Were the ingredients readily available? Would it appeal to consumers?

Originally counted for 20 points. This year the contest for the first time included all cuts of beef except variety meats, with each serving containing at least 3 ounces of cooked beef.

All of the contestants had been taken to the same supermarket the night before to purchase the beef, ensuring that it would be basically of the same quality. Before this year only the tougher cuts of beef were allowed.

The winning recipe used beef in an unusual way by presenting it in a salad. If the recipe has a drawback, it is that it calls for three ingredients that may not be readily available. However, if you can't find them, your grocer may be able to order the greens called for in the recipe. And the dish is excellent, making it worth the time to hunt out the ingredients.

Pizza, Chicago-style

Transplanted Texan introduced city's deep-dish trademark

From MIDWEST LIVING
A Meredith Magazine

Back in 1940, a transplanted Texan named Ike Sewell dreamed about operating a fine Mexican restaurant in Chicago. That plan fizzled, so he teamed with restaurateur Ric Riccardo and opened Pizzeria Uno, the first Chicago-style pizzeria, instead.

The rest is culinary history. Today, the passion for world-famous Chicago-style pizza runs as high as the Sears Tower, as true as the city's love for the Cubs, Bears and Sox, and as deep as the pan the pizza is baked in.

Midwest Living magazine describes Chicago-style pizza as a solid, stick-to-your-ribs meal that's unlike the deep-dish pizza-

Item that made the trip east was his well-worn pan for making stuffed pizza, a recipe for which the Capitol Hill resident has become justifiably renowned among friends and neighbors and anyone who has had a slice of the savory pie.

Why pizza? "I don't make ribs," offers the cook, in acknowledgment of Chicago's many food traditions.

Father of 2 sets of twins, boy, girl will do barbecue honors Sunday

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — On Father's Day, Debbie Martens will have a barbecue in honor of her husband, Tim — the first such celebration since he became the father of a second set of twins.

Ten months ago, Aftin and Ashley were born, joining 4 1/2-year-old twins, Brook and Garrett, 6-year-old Nikki and 9-year-old Adam.

Caring for the second set of twins is easier, she says.

"But the exhaustion really can get to you. You've got to have help," she says.

And, this she has. Both sets of grandparents lend a hand, and Tim does his share, as well.

"He's just been a real big help," she says. "He comes in with the idea of — not, 'I'm hungry, what's to eat?' It's, 'I know you're tired, what can I make for supper?'"

But, because he is a farmer, it's not always possible for him to help with the cooking during the busy season. She says Adam and Nikki are eager to assist with meal preparation, "but when the younger ones see them doing it, they want to be right in there, too — and it has a tendency to become total chaos."

On Sunday, out of the refrigerator will come potato salad, a green salad and the meat that Dad himself will grill. Because of the variety of palates he has to please, he will be cooking hamburger, hot dogs and steak. Pickles and chips and a special raspberry dessert will round off the meal.

Afterward, everyone will play volleyball or other ball games.

"As busy as he is, he tries to be involved with them as much as he can," she says. "He's a real kiddier, and so he likes to play and be silly and tease and all that kind of stuff. So they all think Dad is pretty-

If the weather precludes a barbecue on Sunday, she will fix curried chicken, which she says is both fast and well liked by her family.

Strawberries make into sweet treats for dad's day

You're sure to please Dad this Sunday if you make him a strawberry dessert for Father's Day.

The fresh strawberries featured in these recipes are available nearly year round, with peak supplies in markets now. To make the desserts fast and fool-proof, the recipes call for refrigerated biscuits and pie crusts.

Chocolate-dipped strawberries take the spotlight in Strawberry and Cream Tart. The berries sit atop a creamy, white filling with just a hint of almond flavor. For a showy presentation, bake the crust in a tart pan with a removable bottom. The refrigerated all ready pie crust requires no mixing or rolling, so it's a snap to prepare this tender, flaky crust in just a few minutes.

Another spectacular dessert, Strawberry Shortcake Supreme, is a delicious alternative to traditional strawberry shortcake. The flaky, tender shortcake ring goes together in just a few minutes with refrigerated flaky biscuits. The recipe calls for orange peel and orange-flavored liqueur to give the dessert a refreshing citrus flavor that complements the sweet berries.

Strawberries also pair well with a variety of other fruits for marvelous-tasting desserts. A combination of fresh, juicy strawberries and plump blueberries is baked under a ring of refrigerated flaky biscuits to make Strawberry-Blueberry Cobbler. The biscuits are rolled in cinnamon and sugar before baking to give them flavor. Sweet strawberries and tart rhubarb make the filling in Fresh Strawberry-Rhubarb Pie. Be sure to make slits in the top pie crust for steam to escape during baking. To add a decorative touch, use small cookie or canopé cutters to cut out the steam vents.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE SUPREME
 2 (10 oz.) cans refrigerated flaky biscuits
 1/4 cup margarine or butter, melted
 1/4 cup sugar

1 tablespoon grated orange peel
 1/2 cup margarine or butter, melted
 Topping
 1 cup whipping cream
 1 tablespoon powdered sugar
 1/2 teaspoon almond extract
 1/4 cup orange-flavored liqueur or orange juice
 2 tablespoons sugar
 2 pint baskets fresh strawberries, washed, stemmed and halved
 Heat oven to 375 degrees. Grease 6 1/2-cup ring mold or 12-cup fluted tube pan. Separate dough into 20 biscuits. Pour 1/4 cup margarine in bottom of prepared mold. Combine 1/4 cup sugar and orange peel. Dip each biscuit in 1/2 cup melted margarine; roll in sugar mixture. Place on edge in prepared mold, overlapping edges slightly. Bake at 375 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes or until golden brown. Remove from mold immediately. Cool 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, in small bowl, beat whipping cream until soft peaks form. Add powdered sugar and almond extract; beat until stiff peaks form. In another small bowl, combine liqueur and sugar. Spoon half of strawberries into center and on top of biscuit ring. Pour liqueur mixture over biscuits and strawberries. Spoon half of whipped cream over strawberries. Top with remaining strawberries and whipped cream. 10 to 12 servings.

TIPS: If using 12-cup fluted tube pan, serve remaining half of strawberries and whipped cream with each serving.
 If desired, melt 1/2 cup semi-sweet chocolate chips in small saucepan over low heat. Drizzle in thin stream over shortcake. Place whole strawberry on top for garnish.

STRAWBERRY-BLUEBERRY COBBLER
 1/2 cup sugar
 1/4 cup cornstarch
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 3 pint baskets fresh strawberries, washed, stemmed and halved
 1 cup fresh or frozen blueberries (not thawed)
 1/2 cup sugar

1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
 10 oz. can refrigerated flaky biscuits
 1/4 cup margarine or butter, melted
 Heat oven to 400 degrees. In large saucepan, combine sugar, cornstarch and salt. Stir in strawberries and blueberries. Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until hot, bubbly and slightly thickened. Pour into 12x8 (2 quart) baking dish.
 Combine sugar and cinnamon. Separately, dough into 10 biscuits; cut each in half. Dip each biscuit half in melted margarine; roll in sugar mixture. Arrange biscuits on hot fruit mixture around edge of baking dish.

 Bake at 400 degrees for 18 to 25 minutes or until biscuits are deep golden brown. Let stand 10 minutes before serving. If desired, serve with whipped cream or ice cream. 8 servings.

FRESH STRAWBERRY-RHUBARB PIE
 15 oz. pkg. all ready pie crusts
 1 teaspoon flour

FILLING
 1 pint basket fresh strawberries, washed and stemmed 3 cups chopped fresh rhubarb*
 1 cup sugar
 1/4 cup cornstarch
 Prepare pie crust, according to package directions for two-crust pie using 9-inch pie pan. Heat oven to 400 degrees.
 In large bowl, combine all filling ingredients; mix lightly. Spoon into pie.

Idaho Beef Cookoff winner: shredded top sirloin in salad

It was a tough job, but somebody had to do it. Right?
 Sampling the best of 10 of Idaho's great cooks — what could be easier? But to judge them, boy, was that hard.
 The event was the Idaho State Beef Cookoff, and it's big time. Cowbells are a professional group, and the way they ran this state contest gives an insight into the tremendous amount of preparation happening right now for the National Beef Cookoff to be held here in Idaho in September.
 In fact, that event there has already been one total dress rehearsal so any kinks will be ironed out long before 500 people arrive for the big event.
 For the state contest, the Cowbells brought us in the back way. We could smell the cooking but we weren't allowed to see the cookers, just in case we should be subconsciousely prejudiced during judging.

 We three judges were seated around a table with white cloth, silver flatware, and a beautiful fresh floral arrangement. The water and bread were to cleanse our palates between tastings.
 The helpers first brought in the whole dish for us to inspect. Appearance counted for 10 points, and we looked for things such as appetizing and appropriate color.

 Then we were shown what a normal portion of the dish would look like served to an individual.
 Finally, we were given a taste. On this phase we were allowed 40 points to judge whether the beef was tender, juicy, flavorful, neither overcooked nor underdone, appropriately seasoned, neither too hot nor too cold, and a pleasing combination of textures and flavors.
 Then we were given copies of the recipes. Basically the second half of the judging was also worth 50 points. Thirty of these points were on the ease of preparation and practicality. Was the recipe easily understood? Could the recipe be easily prepared with average skills? Were the ingredients readily available? Would it appeal to consumers?

Originally counted for 20 points. This year the contest for the first time included all cuts of beef except variety meats, with each serving containing at least 3 ounces of cooked beef.
 All of the contestants had been taken to the same supermarket the night before to purchase the beef, ensuring that it would be basically of the same quality. Before this year only the tougher cuts of beef were allowed.
 The winning recipe used beef in an unusual way by presenting it in a salad. If the recipe has a drawback, it is that it calls for three ingredients that may not be readily available. However, if you can't find them, your grocer may be able to order the greens is easier, she says.
 And the dish is excellent, making it worth the time to hunt out the ingredients.

Pizza, Chicago-style

Transplanted Texan introduced city's deep-dish trademark
 From MIDWEST LIVING
 A Meredith Magazine
 The rest is culinary history. Today, the passion for world-famous Chicago-style pizza runs as high as the Sears Tower, as true as the city's love for the Cubs, Bears and Sox, and as deep as the pan the pizza is baked in.
 Midwest Living magazine describes Chicago-style pizza as a solid, stick-to-your-rib meal that's unlike the deep-dish pizza served anywhere else. Layered in a special deep baking pan are an oval of piping-hot cheese, meat, and tomato topping, smothering a soft, chewy, breadlike crust.
 First comes the cheese — top-quality, thick-sliced or hand-shredded mozzarella — followed by a more-than-ample portion of mildly seasoned sausage.

 well as topping for spaghetti, according to Sadowski.
 While not exactly a last-minute idea — the preparation and cooking time require an investment of at least several hours — the effort is well worth the result.
 Sadowski, a frequent dinner host, calls the stuffed pizza his favorite casual meal. And due to its filling and varied composition, it makes for an ideal single-dish meal.

Over the years, Sadowski has improved upon its original recipe, which he adapted from that of a favorite Chicago pizza parlor.

All you'll need to have on hand to prepare Sadowski's stuffed pizza are sugar, oil (preferably olive oil), flour and salt.

Sadowski says his pizza is "better with tons and tons of stuffing," although the pepperoni and olives are optional ingredients.
 Express-lane list: yeast, tomatoes, tomato sauce, basil, oregano, parmesan cheese, garlic, mozzarella cheese, mushrooms, pepperoni (optional), olives (optional).

SCOTT SADOWSKI'S STUFFED PIZZA
 (Makes one 14-inch pizza)

FOR THE DOUGH:
 3 teaspoons sugar
 1 1/4 cups very warm water (105 to 115 degrees)
 2 (1-ounce) envelopes active dry yeast
 4 tablespoons oil, preferably olive oil
 3 1/2 cups flour (bleached)
 1 teaspoon salt

FOR THE SAUCE:
 2 (5-ounce) cans Italian peeled tomatoes
 1 (2-ounce) can tomato sauce
 4 tablespoons oil, preferably olive oil
 1 tablespoon basil
 2 teaspoons oregano
 1/2 cup grated parmesan cheese
 5 cloves garlic

Pizza

 On top go fresh tomatoes, lightly stewed, then chopped — or crushed by hand, if the pizza is truly Chicago style.
 Heaping spoonful of freshly grated parmesan cheese and herbs, such as basil and oregano, create the final layer. Extra layers of fresh green peppers, onions, anchovies or mushrooms are optional.

Before Sewell and his partner introduced this dish, pizza, for the most part, was a flat piece of dough generally topped with vegetables. "Pizza wasn't a meal," he says. "It was more of an appetizer."
 Pizzeria Uno almost gave away pizza in the beginning. "No one except (Gino) who had been in Italy ever knew what the word pizza meant," Sewell recalls. Then a newspaper reporter's story touted the pizza as better than any he had tasted in Italy. Almost overnight, lines outside the restaurant began forming. Sewell's pizza fame.

Around the Windy City, restaurants serve variations galore of the original Chicago-style pizza. Most of these pizzerias, Giordano's for example, have their own secret recipes and loyal followings.

gelatin
 1 cup boiling water
 One 10-ounce package frozen raspberries, thawed
 Two 3-ounce packages cream cheese, softened
 1 cup dairy sour cream
 Pour boiling water on gelatin in a bowl, and stir until it's dissolved. In a separate bowl, mix cream cheese and sour cream. When it's mixed, gradually add gelatin mixture to it, and beat as you add. Fold in the raspberries. Pour into an 8x8-inch pan. Either freeze or refrigerate.
 This can be served on salad greens, or as a dessert. More raspberries may be spooned over the top.
 "It lasts one eating," she says, "and that's it. They really like that one."
 Martens says she used to have dinner parties with six or seven until transparent in sesame oil in a small skillet over medium heat. Stir in honey, vinegar, mustard and salt. Heat to boiling and boil 1 minute.

 In a large salad bowl, tear vegetables into bite-size pieces. Add cheese strips. Pour dressing over greens and gently toss to coat well. Tuck eggs into salad. Drain broth from beef and discard. Pile shredded beef on greens. Serve at once. Serves six.

This next recipe would be very easy for most cooks in our valley to prepare, as it features a stuffing for baked potatoes.

BEEF STUFFED BAKED POTATOES
 1 lb. top round steak, 3/4 inch thick, partially frozen for slicing
 4 large russet potatoes
 2 medium white onions, thinly sliced and divided into rings
 1/2 lb. fresh mushrooms, thinly sliced
 1/2 to 1 cup 2-percent milk
 4 tablespoons butter courses, "and that's kind of gone out the window, until they're a little older."

 "So it's kind of like now, 'What can I make in 10 minutes?'"
 The next recipe takes a little longer than that, but it is not difficult to prepare.

PORK CHOP SUPREME
 Brown desired amount of pork chops on both sides, in a small amount of oil. Then add about 6-8 sliced carrots, 3-4 pared and quartered potatoes and about 1 cup whole mushrooms. Pour a can of golden mushroom soup, mixed with a can of milk, over top. Sprinkle in 1/2 teaspoon whole rosemary leaves, and simmer about 45 minutes.

"All I really have to do with that is add a green salad, and everything else is there," she says.
 The following snack she makes for the children, she says.

Salt
 White pepper
 1/2 cup mozzarella cheese grated
Marinade:
 1/2 cup dry sherry
 3 tablespoons water
 3 tablespoons soy sauce
 1 tablespoon sesame oil
 1 teaspoon fresh ginger root, grated
 2 cloves garlic minced
 Slice steak into very thin strips, 1/4 inch wide and about 2 inches long.
 Mix marinade ingredients together. Add steak slices to marinade and marinate overnight or not less than 4-6 hours in refrigerator.
 Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Scrub potatoes, pierce and bake for one hour or until fork tender.
 Preheat wok over high heat. Add marinade and beef all at once. Cook quickly until done about 2-3 minutes. Remove meat and stir-fry onions and mushrooms in remaining juices. Return meat to wok and reduce heat to low to just keep warm.
 Cool potatoes slightly. Cut in half

FROSTED RICE BARS
 Bring to a boil 1 cup corn syrup and 1 cup sugar, just until the sugar dissolves. Then add 1 cup peanut butter, either creamy or chunky. Stir together until it's well blended. Then stir in about 7/8 cups rice, kripshies, until they're all well coated. Press into a 9x13-inch greased pan. Melt 1 cup milk chocolate chips and 1 cup butterscotch chips together. (She does this in her microwave). Stir that together, and frost. Let stand a few minutes, and cut into squares.

Next is a dessert she says everybody raves about. It's easy, although there are several steps, and there is not much preparation time involved.

CREAM CHEESE PUDDING DESSERT
 For the crust, blend:
 1 1/4 cups flour
 1/2 cup softened margarine and scoop out, saving the skin. Whip the potato with milk and butter and add salt and pepper to taste.

 Divide the meat mixture among the potato skins, top with whipped potato and cheese. Add a dash of paprika and broil 4-6 inches from broiler until cheese bubbles.
 Serve immediately. Serves four.
 These would be good ones to try on Father's Day this Sunday, as the industry has traditionally promoted beef on this special day.
 This program has proved so popular that recently the Department of Agriculture called Father's Day "a traditional day on which to recognize the beef industry for its contribution to our way of life."
 As usual the father of the first baby born on Father's Day in most Magic Valley hospitals will be given a $10 beef certificate.
 Enjoy the holiday.

Roach motels and filet mignon first in cart of shopping spree winner

NEW YORK (AP) — In the first 60 seconds of her five-minute, all-expenses-paid dash through a supermarket Friday, Pilar Garcia threw three filet mignons and 25 roach motels into her shopping cart.

"I know what I want," she had said before starting out.

The 77-year-old widow managed to heap $296.51 worth of goods into her basket as family and friends cheered her on in the supermarket contest, which she won in a radio station giveaway.

"Go for the gourmet," yelled Mrs. Garcia's daughter-in-law, Jackie.

But the pragmatic Mrs. Garcia had her own strategy.

"I charted my course already," she said in Spanish before the starting whistle blew at 11 a.m. "I know what I want. And I'll get those things."

So Mrs. Garcia headed straight for the housewares aisle. She swept boxes of plastic garbage bags, tin-foil and wax paper into her cart. That was followed by six family-sized jugs of laundry detergent and roach motels of all shapes and sizes.

The determined senior citizen then rolled on toward the meat bin, where she grabbed the filet mignon and hoisted a 15-pound turkey into the baby seat.

Soon the cart was piled with three jumbo jars of instant coffee, two packs of bar soap, lots of cans of tuna and salmon, two jars of honey and a fistful of spice boxes.

As the clock ticked on, Mrs. Garcia made one last excursion to the meat department. She picked up a ham hock, several packets of sliced ham, two sides of bacon, two Cornish game hens and three frozen sausages.

Other winners were given two minutes, but organizers of the event gave Mrs. Garcia some extra time because of her age.

Mrs. Garcia, a native of Madrid, Spain, has lived in New York for 35 years. She said she goes home to Spain twice a year.

"I came here with my husband. He came from Spain but was an American citizen. I have always preferred to cook Spanish cuisine," said Mrs. Garcia, who doesn't speak English.

Mrs. Garcia says that she spends about $400 a month on groceries and household items. She says her rent isn't bad, because she lives in subsidized housing for senior citizens.

"But my husband's pension comes to $440 per month, so my two boys help me with money and things," Mrs. Garcia said.

One of Mrs. Garcia's sons, Antonio, 33, was given permission to help his mother push the cart and reach items that were too high for her.

"It's hard enough for my mother to get around normally," Garcia said before the spree. "But she's pretty jumpy for her age. I think she'll alright."

Puffing slightly after the five-minute scramble, Mrs. Garcia said, "I'm very, very, very happy."

"It will take me a year to use all of these things. I'm glad Tonio bought me a big freezer," Mrs. Garcia said.

Pilar Garcia, 77, netted $296.51 worth of goods in her 5-minute dash

Chocoholics let craving run wild

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Think it? These buyers let loose through tables of chocolate desserts, paper plate and plastic spoon in hand, for the price of a $10 ticket.

It was a temptation 300 people couldn't resist, despite the warning on the door: "Nonprofit Resources assumes no responsibility for upset tummies or excess avoirdupois (weight) acquired as a result of this event."

They browsed through tables of chocolate cakes, brownies, mousses, cookies and pastries donated by about 20 restaurants and food distributors, plus several individuals, for the second Chocolate Sunday and Great Chocolate Cook-Off.

The proceeds benefited Nonprofit Resources, which provides management support services to more than 100 non-profit agencies in Arkansas.

"It's delicious," said Glenn Phelps of Booneville. "Everything's delicious." He drove 120 miles for the chocolate feast. "My wife's a chocoholic," he explained, polishing off a piece of cake himself.

There were 37 entries in six categories: Cool and Creamy Creations, Positively Perfect Pies, Cooking by Kids, Luscious Lunchbox Bites, Indescribable Indulgences and Incredible Cakes.

Each category had two judges who selected a winner and runner-up in the preliminary round. Gold medallions went to the winners; wooden spoons to the runners-up.

"It's a tough job, but somebody's got to do it," said Marian Boyd, one of the preliminary judges.

A new panel of three judges tasted the six finalists and, for the second year, Penni Jacobs of Little Rock won top honors with a chocolate and cream cheesecake. She was given a free trip for two to the Hershey Hotel at Corpus Christi, Texas.

Paul Smith and Katie Wallace, chefs at La Scala restaurant, prepared cannoli shells filled with chocolate mocha zabaglione, a custard flavored with dark rum.

As the two chefs were talking about the shells, a woman slipped up and said, "I want just a small one. I'm going to take this back to my friends."

Ms. Wallace smiled and said, "That's what they all say."

Swiss among top chocolate eaters

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — The Swiss are among the world's top consumers of chocolate, according to a seven-country survey published Tuesday by the Swiss Industry Promotion Agency.

Per-capita consumption of chocolate in Switzerland averaged 23 pounds during 1980-81, compared with 18 pounds in Britain, 17 pounds in Norway, 16 pounds in Austria and 14 pounds in West Germany.

Consumption in the United States averaged 10 pounds, while it was 3 pounds in Italy, according to the survey.

'San Francisco Encore': Tour of N. California wines, new food trends

By BARBARA HANSEN
Los Angeles Times

San Francisco's long association with good food and wine inspires special interest in any cookbook from that city. In the case of "San Francisco Encore" published for $19.95, 432 pages compiled by the Junior League of San Francisco, the book merits even more attention because, it is a successor to the league's highly successful "San Francisco à la Carte."

Published in 1979, the prior book has sold more than 250,000 copies. "Encore," which came out in October 1986, pays less attention to such regional classics as clippings, Palace Court salad and fried cream, which were covered in the former book. The time interval between the two has seen the development of new tastes, and "Encore" responds with recipes for homemade flavored pastas, pita sandwiches, goat cheese salad, Cajun shrimp, beurre blanc sauce, and so forth. Both are big books with many recipes. Each starts the recipe chapters with capsule descriptions of attractions of the area. "A la Carte" promoted the city's points of interest. "Encore" focuses on the Northern California wine districts.

Many of the dishes in "Encore" seem oriented toward sophisticated entertaining. Samples of these are cream of chestnut soup, asparagus torte, caviar soufflé roll, Sonoma stuffed leg of lamb, salmon trout with black caviar and beurre blanc, Sonoma Melba torte and zabaglione with strawberries and Champagne.

The following menu compiled from "Encore" showcases some of the easier recipes and would be appropriate for a casual party. Italian in theme, the menu brings to mind North Beach, which is San Francisco's Little Italy.

The main course is hearty Chicken Parmigiana, a rich casserole of breaded boneless chicken breasts, tomato sauce, mozzarella and Parmesan cheeses. For the salad, any combination of greens and fresh vegetables could be tossed with the Creamy Garlic Vinaigrette dressing. Try mixing romaine or other leaf lettuce with a few radicchio leaves, sliced red onion, black olives and green or sweet red pepper.

- CHICKEN PARMIGIANA
- 6 chicken breast halves, skinned and boned
  - 2 eggs, lightly beaten
  - Salt, pepper
  - 1/2 cup fine dry bread crumbs
  - 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
  - 1 1/2 x 1/2" cup oil
  - 1 clove garlic, minced
  - 2 cups tomato sauce
  - 1/4 teaspoon dried basil
  - 1 tablespoon butter
  - 8 ounces mozzarella cheese, sliced
- Pound chicken breasts to thickness of 1/4 inch. Combine eggs, 1/4 teaspoon salt and 1/4 teaspoon pepper. Mix bread crumbs with 1/2 cup Parmesan cheese. Dip chicken into eggs, then into bread crumbs. Heat oil in heavy skillet. Add chicken and quickly brown on both sides. Remove to shallow baking dish.
- Four off any oil remaining in pan. Add garlic and saute briefly. Stir in tomato sauce, basil and season to taste with salt and pepper. Bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer 10 minutes. Stir in butter. Spoon sauce over chicken. Sprinkle with remaining Parmesan cheese. Cover and bake at 325 degrees 30 minutes. Arrange mozzarella slices over chicken. Bake, uncovered, until cheese melts. Makes 6 servings.
- CREAMY GARLIC VINAIGRETTE
- 4 cloves garlic
  - 2 green onions
  - 1 teaspoon chopped parsley
  - 2 1/2 tablespoons lemon juice
  - 2 1/2 tablespoons raspberry vinegar
  - 1 1/2 teaspoons Dijon mustard
  - 1/2 teaspoon sugar
  - 2 dashes freshly ground black pepper
  - 1/2 cup vegetable oil
- Combine garlic, green onions, parsley, lemon juice, vinegar, mustard, sugar and pepper in food processor. Process until well-blended. With machine running, slowly add oil. Cover and store in refrigerator. Makes about 1 1/2 cups.

Letters may have double meaning for careful reader

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — A professor here says beware of letters of recommendation as they are becoming increasingly unreliable for evaluating candidates for jobs.

In all but the rarest of cases, he says, a letter is apt to be favorable — even when the writer knows the candidate is mediocre or unqualified.

He says he has ways to convey unfavorable information in a fashion the candidate might not notice.

For example, he said, "For an inept person, you could say, 'I most enthusiastically recommend this candidate with no qualifications whatsoever.'"

To describe an unproductive person, he said, "I can assure you no person would be better for the job."

Sage overhauls Cowboys 11-10 with eight-run last inning

Three dropped flies doom TF

 By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The Minico Sage found an unexpected ally Tuesday night to post an 11-10 come-from-behind decision over the suddenly inept Twin Falls Cowboys.

It wasn't just one fly ball that made a winner of Minico. It was three as Twin Falls' outfield flat dropped three of four loopers and the infield threw in another miscue. That allowed Minico to score seven runs in the bottom of the ninth inning on just three base hits.

It wasn't that Minico didn't deserve something along that line. Just a week ago the Sage presented Twin Falls with 11 walks and seven errors in losing the first meeting of the season, making those two games classic examples of why high school and Legion teams shouldn't play nine innings since they are emotionally, physically and mentally conditioned to seven.

The bottom of the ninth inning had to be an embarrassment to Coach Mike Federico, who absorbed it stoically.

It started when pitcher Shayn Wallace erred a comebacker to open the inning. After Kent Schrow drew a walk, Kevin Miller lofted a fly to right field where Tom Prater dropped it, loading the bases. Kevin Condie then was given a hit when his hot spot bounced off the third baseman's glove and plated two runs. James Frost followed with a high fly to left field that bounced off Eric Ochsner to tie in three more runs. Dan Poulton's fly to centerfield was caught but scored another run before Twin Falls got a second out.

Scott Condie kept things alive with a single and Brett Bott drew a walk. Miller then lofted a fly toward right center which Prater caught up to but dropped as the tying and decisive runs rolled home.

"They came up with a couple of bobbles in the outfield and kinda gave it to us," Minico Coach Corcy Bridges said. "I couldn't believe Prater got to that ball. I thought it definitely was going in between the outfielders. But he got there in plenty of time to make the play but just didn't."

"That's pretty much Leglon baseball," he said with a smile and a shrug. "We gave them a lot of runs last week. This week they gave them back."

Bridges said he worried about his team's early concentration, noting "we didn't do anything the first five innings" when righthander John Hayes was blanking the Sage on three hits. But three runs in the fifth, scoring on singles by Kevin Miller and Kevin Condie got the Sage on the scoreboard.

Twin Falls looked like a winner early when Mike Buster doubled in two runs in the first and a wild pitch let Prater score in the second. Twin Falls picked up three more in the fifth on a walked to Boomer Walker and singles from Berry Williams, Kevin Ames and Shance Clark.

Pitching witness gave Twin Falls two runs in the eighth and singles by Matt Hasmussen, Williams and Buster plus an Ames sacrifice fly appeared to have pushed the Cowboys out of reach at 10-3 going into the bottom of the ninth.

Twin Falls pounded out 17 hits with Williams going four-for-five and Clark four-for-six. Walker, Ames and Hasmussen enjoyed two-hit nights.

Condie accounted for three of Twin Falls' 10 hits.

Twin Falls' Barry Williams drops the ball while the Sage's Kevin Miller dashes safely to home plate in the 5th inning.

Jackson says Korea may be coerced by Olympic removal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1988 Olympics should be moved out of South Korea if political conditions in that country do not improve, the Rev. Jesse Jackson said Tuesday.

Jackson made the comment after a meeting with the South Korean ambassador at which he urged open elections in the strife-torn country.

Jackson said he was not asking for the immediate transfer of the 1988 Olympics from Seoul to another site.

"It's premature to make that judgment this day, but that is a matter of serious discussion, it is high up on the agenda," Jackson said after a 20-minute meeting with Ambassador Kyung-Wan Kim.

"Certainly we cannot sit idly by and support the Olympic Games taking place in the context of this environment," Jackson said.

Jackson on Monday said the United States should lead a worldwide boycott of the Seoul Games unless there is "measurable improvements" in human rights.

Speaking to reporters Tuesday on the steps of the South Korean embassy, Jackson said the United States should not withdraw its troops but ought to consider other means of pressuring South Korea into making political changes.

"Our role there militarily is to stop communism from coming from the north. It's not to stop democracy from developing from within," Jackson said. "There is evidence that democratic ideals are not being honored, open, fair and free elections are not being honored."

Jackson, who has not announced his candidacy but leads in polls for the Democratic presidential nomination, said he called for open elections to pick a successor to President Chun Doo-hwan, and asked for the release of political opposition leader Kim Dae Jung, who is under house arrest.

Jackson said "the ambassador agreed to convey his views to Chun."

Thousands of South Korean students in a half-dozen cities rioted Tuesday in protests that began last week when Chun's Democratic Justice Party endorsed Roh Tae-woo, a former general, to succeed him when he steps down next February.

"The very spirit of the Olympic Games will be jeopardized in this arrangement," Jackson said. "We hope that something will happen soon that political prisoners will be granted their freedom, be allowed to participate in the formation of a new government."

Kwang Eun, an assistant press attaché at an embassy, said there was no immediate comment on Jackson's remarks.

George Miller, executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee, when asked whether the unrest will threaten the security of American athletes at the Games, said "There is nothing we can do but watch closely and see how developments unfold."

Of Jackson's call for a boycott, Miller said: "History has proven that Olympic boycotts have little effect on the outcome of international political events. The only ones who suffer from a boycott are the athletes of the boycotting nation."

North Korea was reported to be building facilities to be ready if the political situation in South Korea does not improve.

Norman ready to just play golf

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Greg Norman has attempted to analyze his position as the victim of golf's most famous one-two punch.

"I've asked myself: 'What am I doing wrong?'"

"And the answer is: 'Nothing,'" Norman said before a practice round for the 87th United States Open golf championship, which begins Thursday at the Olympic Club's Lake course.

"That's golf."

"I cannot control what someone else does. I can only control what I do. I can only play the best I can," said Norman.

And that, most of the game's leading figures agree, is the best there is.

"I don't think there's any question that Greg is the best player in the world right now," said Jack Nicklaus, the aging Golden Bear who held that No. 1 position for so many years.

"To me, it's obvious. Greg has been superior to any other player in the game over the last year," said Ray Floyd, the defending American national champion.

But, in most cases, his story has been a saga of what might have been. The swash-buckling Australian led through 54 holes of all of golf's major championships last year — the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and the PGA.

He won one of them, the British Open.

He lost by a shot to Nicklaus in the Masters. He was the victim of Bob Tway's last-hole sand shot in the PGA.

And that was followed by Larry Mize's minor-miracle of a pitch-in-playoff birdie at Augusta earlier this season, "the most difficult defeat I've ever had," he said.

He has talked about those shots at length — Tway from the sand, Mize from the 40 yards away. He has talked about them repeatedly, and about all he really wants to do.

"That's history."

"It's done."

"It's behind me."

Andrew Graham, 12, watches dad, David, prepare for Open.

Undhjem rules as favorite in Magic Valley tournament

TWIN FALLS — Virginia Undhjem, who has won this title more than any person in its history, appears the favorite again Thursday and Friday when the Times-News Magic Valley Women's Amateur Golf Tournament renews at Canyon Springs Golf Course.

Undhjem, who has taken the title 14 times, will be seeing very familiar competition when the tournament returns to the southside Canyon for the second time. The site is shifted among the various Magic Valley golf courses that want to host the competition.

A full field of 72 women will open play Thursday morning with tee times and pairings assigned: The field will be re-paired for Friday's concluding round, which will include a shotgun start that will allow the women to enjoy the awards presentation luncheon at the same time.

Most of Undhjem's competition apparently will come from Twin Falls or Burley municipal golf courses.

Burley will be sending former champion Doris Ellingsham, along with Terri Simpson and longtime favorite Sergene Sorenson.

Twin Falls municipal sends Shanna Robinson after Undhjem. These two have been competing for several years now. This might also be the season that Twin Falls' Cheri Webster makes a move toward the area's golf hierarchy.

Jerome's Julie Rediker will bring the best handicap of the field into play — a seven. She will be with Undhjem and Sorenson in the final group leaving the tee Thursday morning.

Undhjem seems to be favored by the fact she usually is consistently the longer hitter among the championship fighters. And length is more a demand on Canyon Springs than several of the courses where the meet has been contested recently.

Length and putting could prove the major points of the competition. The course has undulating greens that reward local knowledge. But currently, the host course doesn't appear to have a championship challenger.

Pairings for Thursday first round include:

8:30 a.m., K. Nelson, V. Hoeker, B. Ferwick and G. Harper, 8:30, H. Huston, D. Mays, P. Moore and B. Sherwood, 9:45, G. Tolman, C. Adams, K. Bacon and B. Carney, 8:54, M. Werner, L. Fernier, A. ## N.Y. pioneers 'no beer' areas

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A bill to segregate beer drinkers at sporting events in New York state moved a step closer to a vote in the State Assembly Tuesday.

The bill is the first legislation in the country to require non-drinking sections at ballparks and stadiums, according to Assemblyman Richard Brodsky, D-Westchester, the measure's chief Assembly sponsor.

The legislation also applies at public gatherings at facilities with more than 1,000 seats where beer is sold, including concerts and college games at places such as the Carrier Dome in Syracuse.

It would require that teams set aside 25 percent of a facility's seating for non-drinking fans and public gatherings at the teams for failing to enforce the restrictions.

"It won't stop anyone from drinking at the ballpark," Brodsky said. "It will provide a place for people who don't want to be around rowdy fans."

The Assembly Code Committee approved the bill 15-4 Tuesday. Brodsky said he'd bring the measure to a vote on the Assembly floor as soon as he met with the New York Yankees to discuss the legislation.

"I promised the Yankees I'd meet with them and explain it," he said.

Professional sports teams, such as the Yankees and Mets, oppose the legislation, arguing that the measure goes against the tradition of having a beer and hot dog at the ballpark.

In addition, the teams say they are adequately controlling unruly fans already.

"The number of reportable incidents has declined by almost 10 percent," said Harvey Greene, Yankee spokesman. "Our own efforts are paying off."

The Yankees have promoted sales of low-alcohol beer, discontinued alcohol sales in the late innings of ball games and tightened security at Yankee Stadium in the Bronx, Greene said.

Brodsky has criticized the two New York baseball teams for not doing enough. Between the Yankees and the Mets, who play at Shea Stadium in Queens, the two major league clubs draw some 5 million fans a year.

"People have a right not to be vomited on," he said.

The prospects for the bill are thought to be better than in previous years when it did not make it out of committee, Brodsky said there is a growing feeling in the Legislature that sporting events are becoming more and more unruly.

Texas' Guzman loses no-hitter in seventh but beats Cal 5-4

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Jose Guzman held California hitless for 7 1/3 innings Tuesday night before giving up three straight hits as the Texas Rangers held on to beat the Angels 5-4.

Guzman's no-hit bid was broken up on a double to right field by Denis DeClinces, who then scored on a single by Jack Howell. When Dick Schofield followed with another single, Guzman, 5-5, gave way to left-hander Mitch Williams.

Dale Mohorcic came on in the ninth after Williams allowed two walks and threw a wild pitch. California got another run on a fielder's choice by Brian Downing, then DeClinces hit his eighth homer, making it 5-4.

Mohorcic still got his eighth save. Mike Loynd, who has one, is the only other Ranger with a save.

The Rangers took a 2-0 lead in the second inning as Pete Incaviglia and Pete O'Brien singled and moved up on Mike Stanley's fly to right. They scored as Steve Buechee's two-out grounder to third went through DeClinces for an error.

Texas chased John Candelaria, 5-3, in the sixth, when the Rangers loaded the bases on singles by O'Brien and Stanley and a walk to Oddie McDowell. Buechee's sacrifice fly and Jerry Browne's two-run triple got the runs home.

Guzman faced the minimum number of batters until DeClinces' hit. He walked Downing leading off the second inning, but DeClinces then hit into a double play. Schofield backed leading off the third, but Bob Boone also hit into a double play.

Jays 10, Tigers 4

TORONTO (AP) — Tony Fernandez and Jesse Barfield led a 16-hit attack with four hits apiece as the Toronto Blue Jays routed the Detroit Tigers 10-4 Tuesday night.

The loss snapped the Tigers' win streak at four and ended the Blue Jays losing skid at two. Toronto has lost more than two straight games this season.

The Blue Jays, trailing 3-2 entering the fourth, scored six runs with two outs on six consecutive hits.

Trailing 3-2, Garth right started the scoring in the big inning and tied the game with a single to right that scored Willie Upshaw. Fernandez, who was 4-for-4, followed with an RBI double that glanced off the first-base bag, and he came home on Lloyd Moseby's single.

After Barfield's infield single, George Bell's RBI single made it 6-3 and knocked reliever Jeff Robinson, 4-3, out of the game.

Indians 8, Red Sox 7

CLEVELAND (AP) — Brett Butler singled, doubled, tripled and scored three runs as the Cleveland Indians defeated the Boston Red Sox 8-7 Tuesday night.

Mark Hulsmann, 2-3, pitched 3 1/3 innings of two-hit relief, struck out one and walked one in place of Ken Schrom. Mike Armstrong got the final out, retiring Jim Rice on a line out to right field, for his first save. Rice stranded nine runners in going 0-for-5.

Al Nipper, 5-6, took the loss, Boston's fourth straight, as he yielded four runs in the first 2 1/3 innings.

Boston's Wade Boggs had four singles and a walk in five plate appearances as he extended his hitting streak to 17 games. He is hitting .359.

Buted opened the scoring in the first inning when he doubled on scored on a grounder by Joe Carter. Butler led off the third with a triple and scored on Nipper's mid pitch. After two outs, Carter doubled, scored on a Mel Hall double and Cory Snyder added a run-scoring single for a 4-0 lead.

Yankees 6, Orioles 5

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Randolph broke a 4-4 tie with a two-out, two-run single in the sixth inning and Dave Winfield hit two home runs Tuesday night, lifting the New York Yankees to a 6-5 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

It was the Orioles' 12th loss in their last 13 games. Baltimore opponents have scored six or more runs in 16 of the last 20 games.

Rich Bordi, in relief of starter Charles Hudson, allowed two runs in 3 1/3 innings, raising his record to 3-0. Dave Righetti pitched three innings for his 14th save.

Bases-loaded walk lifts Padres to 3-2 victory over Dodgers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Randy Ready drew a bases-loaded walk with two outs in the seventh inning to score Garry Templeton with the game-winning run Tuesday night, giving the San Diego Padres their fourth consecutive victory, 3-2 over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Alejandro Pena, 0-6, walked Shane Mack to open the seventh and then balked him to second. After Kevin Mitchell struck out and Templeton was intentionally walked, pinch-hitter Tim Flannery singled to right but Mack was out at the plate on a perfect throw from Mike Marshall.

Pena intentionally walked Stan Jefferson, loading the bases, and then walked Ready on a 3-2 pitch for the game winner.

The winning streak is the longest in a year for the Padres, who last won four straight between June 19-26.

Cubs 7, Phillies 2

CHICAGO (AP) — Steve Trout, backed by home runs by Jerry Mumphrey and Dave Martinec, came off the disabled list Tuesday and pitched the Chicago Cubs to a 7-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Trout, 3-1, allowed six hits over 8 2/3 innings as the injury-riddled Cubs snapped a five-game losing streak. It was his first start since going on the disabled list May 4 with a deep thigh bruise.

Mumphrey hit his third homer in the first inning and also beat out a bunt single to start a two-run third. He had to leave the game with a leg cramp after beating out the hit.

Bobby Dernier ran for Mumphrey and scored on a triple by Rafael Palmeiro, making his first appearance since being recalled from the minors. Palmeiro then scored on the first of two doubles by Leon Durham.

Mets 7, Expos 3

MONTREAL (AP) — Terry Leach pitched a seventh-inning over eight plus innings and Kevin McReynolds and Darryl Strawberry hit home runs Tuesday night, powering the New York Mets to a 7-3 victory over the Montreal Expos.

Leach, who began the season in the bullpen and was making only his third start, struck out four, and did not walk a batter as he raised his record to 5-0. Roger McDowell got the final three outs after Leach allowed three hits to open the ninth.

Leach had retired the 17 consecutive men between Herman Winningham's third-inning and ninth-inning singles. Tim Raines followed Winningham in the ninth with another single before Dave Engle hit a five-run homer. Two outs later, Mitch Webster added an RBI single to McDowell.

Bob Sebra, 3-7, struck out nine in five innings but allowed five runs on eight hits.

Braves 7, Giants 2

ATLANTA (AP) — Ken Griffey and Ozzie Virgil hit home runs and Doyle Alexander overcame a shaky start to pitch a five-hitter Tuesday night, pacing the Atlanta Braves over the San Francisco Giants 7-2.

It was the fourth loss in a row and the sixth in nine games for the Giants.

Griffey's three-run homer was Atlanta's fourth consecutive hit in the fourth inning off Kelly Downs, 5-3.

Ken Oberkfell started the rally with a one-out single and Gerald Perry had an infield hit before Dale Murphy extended his hitting streak to 13 games with an RBI single.

Griffey then hit a 1-1 pitch over the center field fence, his eighth homer.

Virgil hit his 17th homer of the year and first since May 29 over the center field fence in the sixth following a single and stolen base by Andres Thomas.

Spinks sees Tyson in his future, Cooney not that certain of view

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Michael Spinks said Tuesday in the aftermath of his fifth round knockout over Gerry Cooney that Mike Tyson is "a young man a lot of us wouldn't want to climb into the ring with."

Spinks might not be a champion in the eyes of the three governing bodies, but his two knockdowns of Cooney, who was stopped at 2:51 of the fifth round, certainly established him as one of the two premiere heavyweights in the world along with Tyson.

Spinks said at a news conference Tuesday, "Spinks is a boxer. I've never looked at myself as to what I've proven to anybody."

Spinks and Tyson will fight Aug. 11 in Las Vegas, Nev., for the three titles.

Spinks' managers, Jim Jacobs and Bill Cayton, also have planned fights for him against Tyrell Biggs in October and against unnamed opponents in December and March. They have indicated a Tyson-Spinks fight would not be possible until the fall of 1988.

As for Cooney and Cayton having Tyson fight at least two more times before he meets Spinks, Lewis said: "I don't think Jacobs and Cayton, doing such a fine job so far, would jeopardize a major fight coming up."

Spinks said he would call Jacobs and Cayton sometime next week.
