U.S., Soviets reach agreement on missiles

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States and the Soviet Union have reached an agreement in principle that could clear the way for removing all Soviet medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe and Asia, a Reagan administration official said Tuesday night.

The agreement could be sealed when Secretary of State George P. Shultz meets here around mid-July with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

The official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, said Soviet negotiators proposed the compromise to U.S. negotiator Maynard Giltman in Geneva two weeks ago and it was subsequently approved by administration officials here.

The Soviets would remove all their two types of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe and Asia in exchange for a U.S. pledge not to convert the cruise missiles that would be dismantled into sea-launched rockets or to turn Pershing II missiles into a shorter-range variety.

Until now, the Soviets had insisted on retaining 32 SS-20 launchers in their Asian territory with 100 warheads targeted on China and Japan and were ambiguous about whether they would give up some 40 shorter-range missiles also in Asia within the 315-to-600 mile range.

In the meantime, a senior administration official said the Soviets were expected to present shortly to U.S. negotiators in Geneva their version of a proposed treaty to reduce the superpowers' strategic nuclear weapons arsenals by about 50 percent.

The official, who demanded anonymity, said the Soviets had engaged in some lively discussion on the issue but had not been as forthcoming yet as they were on medium-range weapons.

The two sides are near agreement on a date for a two-day Shultz-Shevardnadze meeting. When they agree, the official said, U.S. negotiators Giltman and Ronald Lehman, who deals with strategic weapons, will be brought home from Geneva to help Shultz prepare for the session.

Shultz and Shevardnadze also are expected to work on an agenda for a third summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. A treaty on medium-range missiles might prompt Gorbachev to accept Reagan's long-standing invitation to come here later in the year.

The Soviet leader has held back until there was a substantive agreement to conclude with the president. If details are worked out, it would be the first U.S.-Soviet nuclear weapons limitation accord in eight years and Reagan's first since taking office more than six years ago.

However, at least one other major issue remains unsettled. It is how to verify the dismantling of the U.S. and Soviet missiles. U.S. officials have stressed that a pact to eliminate all medium-range Soviet rockets would be easier to verify than one in which they were permitted to retain a portion of their arsenal.

Gem revenue $2 million shy for fiscal year

The Associated Press

BOISE — The state of Idaho closed its budget year Tuesday with tax revenues falling about $2 million short of the $609.3 million spending plan for the past 12 months.

It was one of the smallest amounts of red ink the state has experienced in recent years, and officials had anticipated it six weeks ago by siphoning $2 million from the Water Pollution Control Fund to make sure the books balanced.

New laws take effect — B3

"The state is ending its fiscal year with all its bills paid and without the need to defer any expenditure obligations into the next year," Auditor Joe Williams said.

A year ago, the state was forced to delay a $10 million payment to schools to avoid a deficit at the end of the budget year, and that delayed payment compounded legislative budget-writing problems last winter.

A similar plan to delay part of the school payment this summer was contemplated, but Budget Director Martin Peterson said the $3 million initially earmarked for that purpose was released to the Education Department earlier in June.

The $2 million shortage in revenues was due mainly to continued sluggish collections of sales taxes, one of the key indicators of the state's economic activity. When adjusted for changing tax rates, sales tax collections over the past 12 months rose less than 1 percent from the previous fiscal year.

But state income tax collections from both individuals and corporations, the other key revenue indicators of the state's economic health, grew at a pace greater than analysts had expected.

"The fact that we were able to project state revenue with such accuracy is a further indication that Idaho's economy is stabilizing and is improving," Gov. Cecil Andrus said.

While the books were closed on the old budget year with little upheaval for the state, the outlook continued to be clouded.

The ambitious $657.3 million budget for the year that begins today exceeded the projection for tax collections over the next 12 months by as much as $17 million, according to the Legislative Budget Office. Peterson's staff puts that red ink at a relatively inconsequential $400,000 or less.

But with no reserve after balancing accounts for the past year, the revenue crunch could be severely compounded if the state is hit by another severe fire season as it was a year ago. The state had to cough up an extra $2.7 million to pay its fire suppression bill from last summer.

In addition, some analysts fear the greater-than-expected revenue could lead to a larger deficit next year.

Chun accepts demands for political reforms

The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — President Chun Doo-hwan, in a dramatic reversal that followed 2½ weeks of violent demonstrations, announced Wednesday he "fully accepts" demands for broad political reforms including direct presidential elections.

In a nationwide television address, Chun said he was taking measures to "promote epochal democratic development and national harmony."

Chun made the announcement two days after Roh Tae-woo, chairman of the ruling Democratic Justice Party and Chun's chosen successor, presented an eight-point proposal and said he would resign if Chun rejected it.

The president said he had been briefed by Roh on the proposals.

Chun, wearing a dark blue suit, said the next election "will be held under a new constitution if the basic law is expeditiously revised and enacted following an agreement between the government party and the opposition on a direct presidential election system."

He also repeated his pledge that he will step down when his seven-year term expires next Feb. 25 and transfer "the reins of government to the president thus elected." The president is currently elected by an electoral college system that favors the party in power.

Chun declared that amnesties and the restoration of civil rights "will be extensively granted, while all those detained in connection with the political situation, except for a very small number of felonious offenders, will be set free."

He did not mention Kim Dae-jung, a veteran dissident who is still under a suspended 20-year prison sentence from a 1980 sedition conviction that stripped him of his civil rights and barred him from politics. Roh, in stating his proposals Monday at a meeting of the governing party's executive council, had specifically cited Kim Dae-jung's case as one for amnesty.

Chun said he agreed with the substance of Roh's proposals "for grand national compromise and reconciliation."

"I thus decided to fully accept Mr. Roh's recommendations and take measures to promote epochal democratic development and national harmony."

But the president also said he acted "since there are no prospects for even an iota of concession" from the

BLM official blames arson for Boise fires

The Associated Press

BOISE — Arson was responsible for the fires in the Boise foothills that destroyed one home and threatened scores of others in Tuesday's Capital, a Bureau of Land Management spokesman said Tuesday.

BLM Public Information Officer Barry Rose said fire investigators still were investigating the exact method of how the fires were set.

But, "They do not appear to be the result of inadvertent or careless behavior," he said.

"Fire patterns, discussions with witnesses and observations at the scene indicate the fires were intentionally started," he said.

Earlier Tuesday the BLM had issued a statement saying the fires were man-caused, leaving open the possibility that the blazes were accidental. But after the BLM's fire investigation team did some more checking, the BLM changed its position and declared all three fires in the Boise foothills as intentionally set, he said.

"We're very fortunate that we didn't lose 40 to 50 homes," Boise Fire Chief Phil Johnson said. "It's just incredible how we were able to stop the fire in some areas."

The fires, which were declared out Tuesday evening, were battled by 150 firefighters at the height of the fire, which erupted about 6:15 p.m. Monday.

Two separate fires in the Rocky Canyon area merged before BLM fire crews and firefighters from Boise and surrounding cities gained the upper hand. A third fire at Table Rock brought the total acreage charred to 1,300 acres, Rose said.

The flames forced the evacuation of some residents in several affluent foothills neighborhoods.

Gov. Cecil Andrus, who lives in the area, proclaimed an extreme state of emergency, making all state facilities and services available to city officials. Although the fire was contained, that emergency declaration will remain in effect for another four weeks.

There were no injuries reported. • See FIRES on Page A2

Reagan says escort plan to proceed

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, unswayed by objections from Congress, served notice Tuesday that the United States will proceed with outfitting Kuwaiti oil tankers under the protection of American warships in the Persian Gulf by mid-July.

The White House announced Reagan's decision after the president met with Democratic and Republican congressional leaders in the Cabinet Room for more than an hour, listening to fears that his plan would draw the United States into the Iran-Iraq conflict.

Presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater said the lawmakers raised "concerns about timing and tactics" of the planned escorts after 11

Key senators receive names of potential court nominees

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration presented the names of about a dozen possible Supreme Court nominees to key senators Tuesday.

Later, the Senate Judiciary Committee chairman said some potential nominees would sail through, but others would be in for "a very hot summer" in the Senate.

Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., said he and Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd held blunt discussions on the list with Attorney Gen. Edwin Meese III and White House chief of staff Howard Baker.

Tuesday night, administration and congressional sources confirmed that a meeting would be held at the White House on Wednesday that could be the final session to decide on a nominee.

Earlier, Meese and Baker discussed the list, about a dozen people, with Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas and Strom Thurmond, ranking Republican on the Judiciary Committee. Biden told reporters after the 45-minute meeting, "Clearly, there are some on there who I believe would be someone like a hot knife through butter."

Others, he said, have "hard edges, with ideologically honed points of view." For them, Biden said, it "would be a very hot summer and a very hot fall."

Biden said the two presidential emissaries met with the two majority party officials because "they truly wanted a sense from the chairman of the committee and the leader of the Senate if any problems would arise from that representative list."

Thurmond said after the Republican meeting that 10 to 12 names were on the White House list. A congressional source, speaking only on condition he not be identified, said the list included Judge Robert Bork of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

A staunch conservative and advocate of judicial restraint, Bork has been considered the favorite for the nomination. Congressional sources, insisting on anonymity, said that Bork would generate considerable opposition among Senate Democrats. But the sources said that Bork appeared to be the favorite candidate of Meese.

The source said other names on the list included Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah; Sen. Howard Baker, R-N.H., the former Senate Supreme Court chief justice; and federal appeals court judges: Richard A. Posner of Chicago, Ill.; Clifford W. Wilkins of Columbia, S.C.; and Patrick Higginbotham of Dallas, Texas.

Biden said there was "more than one woman on the list." One reportedly was U.S. Circuit Judge Cornelia G. Kennedy of Detroit.

Baker, the former Senate Republican floor leader, said he was not on the list and did not wish to be considered for the job. He also said he and Baker were not attempting to assess support for various candidates, commenting, "We weren't counting heads."

Response to sales certain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress will not be dissuaded from responding to the sale by Japanese and Norwegian companies of sophisticated submarine technology to the Soviet Union, a House subcommittee chairman warned Tuesday.

"We feel virtually compelled to do something. The question is whether that something is going to be responsible or whether it's going to be irresponsible," Rep. Don Bonker, D-Wash., told a State Department official trying to head off congressional efforts to slap the two companies with stiff import penalties.

The Senate, meanwhile, voted 92-5 Tuesday night to approve a proposal by Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, to ban imports by Toshiba Corp. and Norway's Kongsberg Vaapenfabrik to punish them for the sales.

Under an amendment to the sweeping trade bill under consideration in the Senate, products made by the two companies would be barred from the U.S. market for at least two and no more than five years. The measure includes a number of exceptions, to be ordered at the president's discretion, including one for Penguin guided missiles that the Norwegian company sells to the Pentagon.

Federal probe of PTL widens

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The Justice Department is escalating its investigation of the PTL television ministry and its exiled founder Jim Bakker and will impanel a special grand jury to hear fraud allegations, a source said Tuesday.

Federal officials decided to begin a formal criminal investigation and impanel a grand jury because of the large number of allegations about the PTL under Bakker and questions about the ministry's tax-exempt status, the Justice Department source said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The allegations include income tax fraud, wire fraud and mail fraud, the source said.

John Russell, a Justice Department spokesman in Washington, refused to comment on the case or discuss general procedures of criminal investigations.

Cable News Network reported Tuesday that the criminal investigation of PTL's former management involves possible tax evasion from 1984 to 1986.

Michigan waste site choice

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Michigan was chosen Tuesday by six other Midwest states to be the site of the region's first low-level radioactive waste dump.

The 64 vote of the Midwest Interstate Low-Level Radioactive Waste Commission means Michigan will have to find a location for a dump, unless federal law setting up regional sites is changed or the state refuses.

"It's certainly no surprise," said David Hales, a University of Michigan professor who is the state's representative on the panel.

Gov. James Blanchard, who has said the state may refuse to build the center unless the federal law is changed to meet Michigan's concerns, had no immediate comment.

Representatives of Ohio, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Missouri voted for Michigan on grounds that it produces the biggest volume and most radioactive of the waste generated by the seven-state region.

Skeeters carry AIDS virus

ATLANTA (AP) — Researchers say it is too early to draw any conclusions about public health risk from research showing that mosquitoes which had ingested AIDS-contaminated blood were later discovered to carry the AIDS virus.

"We have no definite conclusions yet," said Dr. Jai Nayyar, an insect specialist at the Medical Entomology Laboratory in Vero Beach, Fla.

The Atlanta Constitution, which reported on the finding Tuesday, said that research by the National Institutes of Health was continuing to determine if this represented a public health concern.

Dr. Robert Gallo, who is conducting the research for the National Cancer Institute, refused to comment Tuesday on the newspaper report. He released a statement from his office in Bethesda, Md., however, saying there was no evidence to suggest that mosquitoes could spread the deadly acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Officials at the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta declined to comment directly on Gallo's research, but said the CDC's own studies indicate that insects cannot transmit AIDS.

Colonel submits papers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, the central figure in the Iran-Contra affair, turned over personal notes, telephone logs and other documents Tuesday to congressional investigators after being granted limited immunity from prosecution.

North's papers, long sought by the House and Senate investigating panels, were contained in a set of seven black loose-leaf binders turned over to each committee during a 15-minute closed session on Capitol Hill.

The papers included North's telephone logs, correspondence, personal calendars and copies of the contents of 21 spiral notebooks he kept during the time the Iran arms sales and Contra resupply efforts were going on, a committee aide said. Sensitive intelligence information had been removed.

North also answered a string of questions designed to establish that he has knowledge of the affair and to lay the groundwork for later interrogation, said the aide, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The Marine officer, wearing his ribbon-studded uniform, was brought into the meeting under tight security and was shielded from reporters as he came and left through a garage entrance in a House office building.

The fired National Security Council aide was to return late today for questioning that will focus on what North knows, if anything, about any knowledge President Reagan might have about the diversion of Iran arms-sale "proceeds" to aid Nicaragua's Contra rebels. Reagan has denied knowing anything of such a diversion before it was disclosed by Attorney General Edwin Meese III last November.

Tuesday's giving up of documents, today's scheduled private questioning session and North's public testimony, expected to begin July 7, were arranged last week as part of an understanding between lawyers for the congressional panels and North's attorney, Brendan Sullivan.

North also was being given access to relevant documents in the committee's possession to prepare for his testimony, and there is an understanding that the length of his questioning, both private and public, will be limited.

North entered a meeting room with his lawyers and shook hands with committee members, then invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination in response to eight questions from Senate committee counsel Arthur L. Liman.

Meese broke law, office charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III violated financial disclosure requirements after investing $60,000 with a businessman involved in the Wedtech scandal, the Office of Government Ethics said Tuesday.

Meese voluntarily invested the money in 1985 with W. Franklin Chinn under an arrangement that fails to qualify as a blind trust under the 1978 Ethics in Government Act, ethics office Director David Martin said in a letter to a Democratic congressman.

Martin said arrangements like the one Meese had with Chinn — a "limited blind partnership" — fail to shield the attorney general from the requirement of disclosing outside financial interests on his annual disclosure form.

Martin's letter to Rep. Gerry Sikorski, D-Minn., said that no limited blind partnership "would shield an executive branch official from being deemed to have knowledge of outside financial interests or from the requirement of disclosing such interests in a public financial disclosure report."

Meese "created a significant financial arrangement that was unapproved and outside the law," said Sikorski, chairman of the House Civil Service subcommittee on human resources.

"Just because Ed Meese said that his arrangements with Wedtech officials were 'blind' did not make them so," concluded Sikorski, who said he will hold a hearing in July on the matter.

At the Justice Department, Meese spokesman Terry Eustand called Sikorski's comments "a purely partisan political attack."

Why not test Gorbachev rather than our nuclear weapons?

A disquieting fact is that despite 30 years of negotiating with the Russians, the nuclear-arms race has been propelled in but one direction, ever upward.

Yet the more we invest in military preparedness, now at a cost of $3 trillion, the more threatened we grow. There is no lack of warnings. Chernobyl and Challenger have been loud clarion calls announcing our common vulnerability to modern technology.

Nuclear weapons and human beings cannot permanently coexist. One or the other must disappear. To date we have survived not by the wisdom of our leaders but by sheer luck.

Since militarization of our foreign policy has been a dismal failure, why not abandon it? This is easier to articulate than to implement. We are trapped in our own carefully wrought illusions.

Nearly all global problems have been framed as a Manichean struggle between our saintly democratic virtues and their imperial communist vice. When governments are driven by worst case assumptions, paranoia will shape foreign policy.

A prevalent attitude has been that we cannot negotiate fruitfully with those we cannot trust. But we could always trust the

Bernard Lown

Soviets to act in their self-interest. An overriding interest of their society, as in all others, is to survive.

As yet, no one has ascribed to them the malevolent intent of destroying themselves for the pleasure of destroying us. In fact, as we go off to sleep we are not plagued with uncertainty about waking the next day — an implicit expression of our trust in the sanity of the Soviet government.

A new factor of momentous significance has now entered the equation, and that is Mikhail Gorbachev. At long last the Politburo has a modern, youthful leader. He is said to be intelligent, to possess a broad historic view unencumbered by ideology and to be eager to effect change, domestically and abroad. He has often affirmed willingness to dismantle nuclear arsenals.

Again the issue of trust looms large. Is this so much pious platitudes or is there substance to his offers? How we Americans answer this question may well determine whether humankind has a future.

Let me begin with some personal observations. I may have spent more time with Gorbachev than any other American except for President Ronald Reagan and Secretary of State George Schultz.

During nearly eight hours, in three separate meetings, the most recent earlier this month, I had the chance of observing this world leader closely, with the trained eye of a clinician. Gorbachev is an attractive person; his eyes are alive with curiosity; he listens patiently and attentively, jots down things of interest; he exudes profound respect and courtesy for visitors. There is a patina of shyness and unpretentiousness.

He poses sharply focused questions and responds with well-thought-out, unequivocal answers. He is ready to laugh, and his repertoire is frequently laced with unabashed humor.

His speech is crafted with significant imagery, with literary and even biblical allusions. "There would not be a second Noah's ark after a nuclear deluge," or "The stockpiling of nuclear weapons means that the human race has lost its immortality."

Many Kremlinologists say that Gorbachev's primary if not exclusive preoccupation is with a lagging, bureaucratic-ridden economy. I believe, however, that his major concern is the nuclear threat. He began our recent meeting with these words: "The task of survival transcends all differences between social systems." He has been hammering away at the urgency of a "new way of thinking," largely focused on the nuclear peril. "The question stands like this: either political mentality is geared to the requirements of the times, or civilization and life itself on earth may perish."

Mankind's immortality "can be regained only by destroying nuclear weapons."

In the brief two years of his rule, Gorbachev has offered 25 major arms control proposals, many of these American ideas presented by previous administrations.

On Aug. 6, 1985, he initiated a complete moratorium on nuclear testing. He extended the moratorium three times during a period of 18 months. The din of underground explosions, unfortunately, continued as the United States tested 22 nuclear devices, thereby rousing an angry world outcry. With his words, deeds and charismatic personality, Gorbachev has turned around a hostile world public opinion.

In a recent poll conducted in Europe by the U.S. Information Agency, Gorbachev received more of the credit for arms-control progress by an "overwhelming margin." In West Germany, where public opinion is decidedly anticommunist, 79 percent credited Gorbachev as a peace advocate as compared to only 9 percent for Reagan.

The argument that we cannot trust Gorbachev will no longer wash. The public knows that trust can be tested. So why not test Gorbachev rather than our nuclear weapons? We now have a unique opportunity in our responses to Gorbachev's initiatives to begin a new chapter in Soviet-American relations, based on co-operation rather than confrontation.

Which shall it be — an escalating nuclear arms race in the heavens or the dismantling of the instruments of genocide on earth? The whole world is watching.

Bernard Lown is professor of cardiology at the Harvard School of Public Health and co-president of International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War, which was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1985.

Letters/ By pulling together, Idahoans can help state's business, economy

In-state shopping pays

There is a plan in the works to bus 200 Idaho people to Utah to shop at a large department store.

What happens to Idaho and business when you go out of state to shop for clothes, furniture, cars, foods etc? Dollars are not retained here, keeping people on the job and building Idaho's economy. Idaho loses tax revenues that pay for government services like education for our children, better highways that take you to Oregon or Utah. If each one of you spends $500 on this trip you will have spent $100,000 and $5,000 in taxes. All of this lost from Idaho businesses and government.

Give Idaho a chance. Inform the business community what you want or need and see if they can find it for you. The cost is devastatingly high to Idaho and business when you shop out of this state.

With the small population we have in Idaho we need to all pull together for Idaho. Help business, but most of all help Idaho's economy — "Buy in Idaho."

KARLEANE ALLEN
Executive director, Buy in Idaho
Boise

Taxes may have been factor

When the news broke about the closing of the Jerome Tupperware Plant, it was hard to believe this large employer of Magic Valley residents would just pack up and leave such an expensive facility to sit idle.

To understand just what might have brought this about, we must dig into the problems faced by this company. Transportation from Jerome to the population centers of southern California are far from being ideal for there is no north south interstate system which would allow for speedy delivery of their products to these high population centers. Also, I'm sure Tupperware is feeling the crunch of competition from competitors who sell to retail outlets and not just being tied to in-home party merchandising; however, I believe one of the main reasons for Tupperware's departure is the tax and spend philosophy of the State Legislature and local taxing districts.

Some of us legislators who debated on the House floor against the large tax increases tried to make the point that to tax and spend at the levels being proposed would not entice new businesses to Idaho, but indeed would cause some of our existing businesses to look for states with taxes that were much more favorable. Tennessee is one of those states that has a taxing system that treats businesses much more favorably.

Have we the tax consuming public killed the "goose that laid the golden egg?" When will we learn that you can't tax and spend yourself into prosperity?

JERRY CALLEN

District's problem remains

As an interested outside party I attended the open hearing in Wendell concerning the issuance of a contract to Ms. Angie Eames by the Wendell School Board.

During that hearing I heard many fine comments from parents of Ms. Eames students and colleagues of hers. There were comments about her excellent motivational skills, her caring attitude, her innovative approaches to teaching her students, her ability to relate well with students, parents and fellow teachers.

During the meeting Ms. Eames' past teaching experience in other districts gave excellent marks to her expertise as a special education teacher.

The decision of the board, you might expect, would be to value this excellent teacher and hold on to her for the excellent teaching which she is. The chairman of the board did in fact, say that her teaching abilities had never been in question. He praised her for her efforts with the students in the Wendell district. The problem, he said, was that a couple of administrators found her difficult to get along with. She was too "assertive." As a consequence the feelings of a very few will override the feelings and concerns of many. Parents, students and teachers in Wendell will no longer have the services of this fine teacher. She will not be offered a contract for the 1987-88 school year.

Assertiveness is not a liability. It is an asset. Assertive teachers are called to be, they are dedicated, they are hard working. All of those attributes are synonymous with assertiveness. God help us all when we are confronted with when we stand up for what we feel is right.

The district feels that they have now rid themselves of a problem. I say that the problem still remains. And it was not Angie Eames.

Waiting for 2 more jumps

First of all, may I thank you for giving us space to sound off as to what is happening in our small world. This is a most important service to us. Keep it please. I can't remember that this forum has ever been abused by anyone. Perhaps it has, but I don't remember anything like that in the 15 years or so that I have been a reader.

My letter to you today is in regard to the most interesting story that only rated a few lines in the paper. In fact, less than the news of what the senior citizens were serving for lunch.

I got so involved in the story of the person that jumped off the bridge that my imagination did run wild with the whole concept of the event and especially when the man who did the rescue turned out to be a go-go dancer of the man responsible for the town and the bridge. Where is our P.R. man when we need him?

I have been thinking and I do believe that all the parachute trips have been made except for the jump that is scheduled for next week or so into the Grand Canyon at its highest point and the jump from the top of the flag pole at the far end of Second Ave. East. Both of these are eagerly awaited.

And as long as I have a nickle, I'll buy your paper.

Explanation of votes due

I read with interest the lead story in Friday's (June 26) News and was amazed at the scrambling by some to find out who would take the time to check the fiscal voting record of Magic Valley legislators.

I had a particular interest in this as I had spent many hours several weeks ago researching those records myself from the final edition of the "Daily Data," which is compiled by the Legislative Data Center for the 1987 session. In order to satisfy my own curiosity after having spent the winter in Boise during the legislative session, I did indeed share my findings with a few interested people; what has happened from then on is like "Pandora's Box." Yes, the Democrat Central Committee chairman obtained a copy of a copy and the rest is history. What is rather strange, however, is that even the report is correct, only a few legislators' (taxing totals was ever mentioned in the media while others whose taxing totals were greatest were apparently protected from exposure.

The glowing daily legislative reports in the liberal media last winter regarding the "honeymoon" with the Governor in particular made for some pretty disturbing reading for fiscal and constitutional conservatives.

At the taxpayer's expense, I guess you could say that it was, to quote Governor Andrus and many others "the best session in their memory." It was however, in fact, a "disaster" as far as the beleaguered taxpayer of Idaho is concerned.

The Legislature's new policy of appropriating the money first and then setting about to find someone to pay for their extravagance is ludicrous to say the least. The taxpayer has to know to who did this to

Also, the Associated Taxpayers have a right to know who used a portion of their very reliable material. They have been informed. Their "taxes and fees imposed by 1987 Legislature" totaling $106,419,600 plus is right on target and if there isn't a huge shortfall this year, as predicted, maybe this is all it will cost us, in addition to the new school district supply levy which is an open-ended question.

Every legislative session in the past five years (1983-87) has consistently imposed enormous taxes on the people of Idaho. Goals for guaranteed appropriations totaling $2,906,820,700; increased taxes and fees totaling $432,398,558 equates to a total of $431.38 in new taxes imposed on every man, woman and child in Idaho in that five year period.

In the meantime, perhaps a call to your local legislators asking them to explain their votes is in order. Also, a letter to the editor asking him why their "news" hasn't bothered to tell you this.

Legislators are responsible

In this year of our Constitutional Bicentennial, we should take the opportunity to express our gratitude to our founding fathers for guaranteeing every U.S. citizen the political freedom to join the political party of our choice and to become involved in political issues which we consider important to us, our state and our nation.

As an expression of my appreciation I've been involved in many political fights, most recently I worked for passage of our state Right-to-Work law.

I have also been a Republican precinct committeeman for seven years and was never told by a county chairman which groups and issues were "inappropriate."

Now Mark Stubbs would take it upon himself to tell a precise communitarian what is an "inappropriate" group to be involved with and to "chastise" him publicly (see Times-News 6-29-87 Sec. B, pg. 1) for distributing a record of how our Legislature voted.

If the report that Orville Knight distributed is in error, then Mr. Stubbs or Cella Fokkinga or whoever feels the pinch should do the record straight. If not, acknowledge that it's public record and face the music.

The report in question comes from two sources; 1. the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho, which lists the appropriations which raised our state taxes by $106 million and 2. the Legislative Data Center which is the official record of how each legislator votes. Both are reliable sources.

Mark Stubbs is a good and capable county chairman and I served on Cella Fokkinga's steering committee to help elect her, but for them to deny Orville Knight's constitutional right to circulate a report that exposes the voting record of elected legislators is wrong. Every legislator should be accountable for their votes.

Apathy a catching disease

If I were as wise 10 years ago as I have become in the last two years, I would become more involved in education and politics.

Having sat through a meeting involving Mrs. Angie Ames of Wendell, having listened very carefully to her testimony, having listened very carefully to the three gentlemen; it is my opinion that Mrs. Ames is a bright young woman with enough intelligence, vim, vigor to replace all three gentlemen who felt compelled to dismiss her.

Advice to parents: get involved in your school, attend board meetings, know your teachers. Wendell is a good school, but if it keeps on going it's not going to be. Our young people are this country's future.

Apathy is a disease and we've got it! BETTY GALVIN

States paying price now for bloating educational systems

To their considerable surprise, the admissions offices of some of the nation's more prestigious colleges and universities find themselves confronted not with the famine they had predicted but with a feast for which they are unprepared.

At institutions such as Dickinson, Carleton, Lehigh and Skidmore, the reduction in applications that the end of the baby boom was supposed to produce has not materialized; instead these colleges have received not merely record applications, but record acceptances — with the result that the freshman class entering this fall will be larger than had been anticipated.

At first glance it may seem that this news, which was reported last week in The New York Times, is good: Strong admissions mean strong operating revenues, which mean bigger budgets and better faculty salaries and so forth and so on. What is more likely, though, is that it's misleading news: There may be a feast at the elite private colleges, but there is certain to be a famine at other schools whose names cause less excitement among the uppies of the future. The end of the baby boom is a fact that cannot be escaped; higher education is in for a period of consolidation and retrenchment, and how it copes with this challenge will say a great deal about the future of American colleges and universities.

There is reason to believe that it will not cope as well as it should or, for that matter, as well as it once did. The reason is that it brought The Times' report on rising applications also brought a story in The Chronicle of

Jonathan Yardley

Higher Education about how "aggressive campaigns by small groups of citizens have made it all but impossible for a state to close or merge public colleges."

Of numerous such attempts at consolidation, The Chronicle reported, only one has succeeded; that was in South Dakota, and state officials "are now being sued for millions of dollars because of their actions." Elsewhere, the pride and avarice of private groups have triumphed over the public's interest in paring down bloated state systems of higher education.

Those systems were built during the great spending spree that began at the end of World War II with the GI Bill of Rights, reached its climax with the orgy that was the Great Society and gradually petered out with inflation and the coming of Ronald Reagan.

The transformation of public higher education during these three decades was nothing less than breathtaking. States that formerly supported a single central university, a land-grant agricultural college and a loose system of normal schools suddenly found themselves running vast systems of "universities" with branches in every locality that could muster sufficient political clout to force its way into a feeding place at the trough.

It was democratization carried to wild, zany, irresponsible extremes, and now the states are paying the price for it.

So long as the money flowed freely and the boomers enrolled in ever-rising numbers, legislators and state boards of education spent the money on anything and everything. Goaded by ambitious alumni and local business interests, administrators of teachers' colleges appeared before legislative committees and demanded that their schools be made into "state universities," localities where no public colleges or universities existed came before those same committees and pleaded for their share of the bonanza.

The order of the day was not the states' real educational needs but politics, and politics insisted upon something for everybody. But the good times roll no longer. The baby boom is over, the number of 18-year-olds will drop by nearly a million between 1979 and 1997 — and so is the spending spree. Not merely that, but there seems now to be widespread public awareness of the excesses that have been committed in the name of higher education and diminished support for unchecked funding of it. The big tool was fun while it lasted, but it's over.

Unfortunately, though, it left the land-scape dotted with agricultural colleges and "universities" that are of use only to themselves. State boards of higher education are at last discovering — eureka! — that they countenanced wasteful duplication of educational services and are now trying to eliminate or reduce this duplication so as to make their systems more responsive to the actual needs of their students. But in trying to accomplish this, they are making a nasty little discovery: The institutions they so casually created during the boom have remarkably little interest in participating in the new order of things.

Thus it is that in the West Texas community of Alpine, the citizenry arose as one when a committee studying the state's educational system proposed to close Sul Ross State University, the gem of Alpine. Sul Ross may have a most unusual university-like enrollment of only 2,315 students, but it pumps millions into the Alpine economy and is a focus of local pride for a community of 5,455. The long day's drive from anything approximating a metropolis.

The good people of Alpine bombarded the committee with 70,000 (!) letters, and 1,000 citizens went the 400 miles to Austin "to talk about how students would be able to attend another institution and how the area's economy would suffer."

Sul Ross carried the day. Just as did the Torrington branch of the University of Connecticut, which was closed by the Board of Governors for Higher Education in 1984 — it had fewer than 200 students — but miraculously was reborn as the Litchfield County Higher Education Center after local politicians put the squeeze on the state.

In both states responsible educational policy clearly dictated the closing of these ersatz universities, but when education meets politics, it's almost always politics that wins. The moment a college or university is born, it develops a constituency that has a powerful interest in its perpetuation and that knows how to play the political game.

So as one state official told The Chronicle, "It's better, and easier, to do it on the front end — and not create colleges — than it is to close them down."

Which is sound advice for the future, but won't help much in the present. Though it is impossible to say how many schools should be eliminated in order to bring American higher education into line with the country's actual needs, there can be no doubt that the number is large and that the amount of money being spent to keep these institutions alive is ridiculous.

There (further) can be no doubt that cutting all this fat from the educational system will be approximately as easy as squeezing blood from a stone. Countless people and businesses have vested interests in keeping these schools alive; though there may be a constituency for the vague notion of budget-cutting, there is none for the hard business of sacrifice.

The result is that in untold years to come taxpayers will spend billions of dollars to maintain educational institutions that never should have been established in the first place and now serve a pitifully small percentage of the population.

It is a terrible waste; but waste has a larger following than frugality — or common sense.

Gorbachev reforms clear first hurdle

MOSCOW (AP) — The Supreme Soviet passed laws Tuesday designed to lay the legal groundwork for Mikhail S. Gorbachev's liberalization plans.

With a unanimous show of hands, the 1,500 deputies of the Supreme Soviet passed three laws the Communist Party Central Committee endorsed at its semi-annual meeting last week.

The Supreme Soviet is the nation's nominal parliament and its passage of the laws was a formality.

One measure is the keystone of an economic reform plan to reshape industry by giving more responsibility to local managers and restricting the role of bureaucrats based in Moscow.

Factories and other enterprises will be expected to make a profit. They also will be allowed to set some prices and fix production plans on the basis of guidelines issued in Moscow.

The other laws adopted on the final day of the Supreme Soviet's two-day summer session implemented clauses of the 1977 Soviet constitution that provide for national discussion of important government decisions and court redress for abuse of power by officials.

All the legislation is linked to campaigns begun by Gorbachev after he became Communist Party chief in March 1985 for increased labor efficiency and discipline, official accountability, and wider citizen participation in decisions.

President Andrei A. Gromyko told the deputies in the Grand Kremlin Palace that the reforms must be implemented quickly because "the party and people are now racing against time. The whole world is waiting for the outcome of this race."

Eleven more economic reform measures are expected to be approved before year's end. Among subjects they cover are pricing, supply, planning, banking and credit, and the gathering of economic statistics.

Panamanians denounce U.S., stone embassy

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Thousands of supporters of Panama's military-controlled government demonstrated Tuesday against alleged American "intervention" and some threw stones at U.S. Embassy buildings.

But thousands of other Panamanians staged at the same time a counterdemonstration against the government of President Eric Arturo Delvalle. They honked car horns, banged pots and pans and waved white handkerchiefs to demand a military withdrawal from politics and investigations into alleged corruption.

Witnesses said at least 10 vehicles parked in the U.S. Embassy compound were damaged by rocks during the pro-government demonstration.

Police made no report of injuries or arrests in either demonstration.

Eight Cabinet ministers and other top officials led the anti-American last week calling for free elections demonstration, the latest in a series and an end to military meddling in actions protesting a non-binding Panama's politics.

Britain's stand deadlocks summit

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Britain's insistence on tighter control of farm subsidies prevented agreement Tuesday on budget reforms the European Economic Community had hoped would end its constant flirtation with bankruptcy.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, isolated at the end of a two-day Common Market summit, blamed the deadlock on leaders of the trading bloc's other member nations.

To stave off immediate bankruptcy, EEC leaders decided to cover an anticipated $6 billion deficit in this year's $41 billion budget by deferring some payments to farmers and transferring part of the shortage to 1988.

Hostage trio taken to Iran

LONDON (AP) — Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite and two American hostages have been smuggled from Lebanon to the Iranian holy city of Qom, Independent Television reported Tuesday night, quoting Shiite Muslim sources in Beirut.

It said Waite and American hostages Terry Anderson and Thomas Sutherland were moved by different routes by their pro-Iranian captors.

The Americans were smuggled overland to Iran, part of the way in coffins, and Waite was taken either by ship via the Suez Canal and Arabian Sea or, more probably, by ship to Turkey and overland to Iran, the network said.

Anderson and Sutherland were kidnapped in Moslem west Beirut in 1985. Waite, the special envoy of Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie to negotiate for the captives, dropped from sight after leaving his west Beirut hotel Jan. 20 to meet with hostage holders.

Runcie issued a brief statement Tuesday night saying: "This is one of many reports which are presented to us. We have to say that we have no confirmation of it."

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You can come to a fine understanding with associates by delegating authority and finishing work which has piled up. Don't ignore the possibility of accidents.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You must budget your time wisely if you're to handle all your responsibilities and have time left for socializing.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): A unique talent you possess can be helpful if sharpened. Try to be more charming to these around you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Home activities may require more attention than you thought. Handle your correspondence when you're not busy.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): If you have a chance, try to reinforce ties with old friends you haven't seen for some time.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Collect on loans and other debts to make bill-paying easier. Get plenty of rest tonight, you'll need it tomorrow.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 21): Concentrate on your own ideas and forget about being helpful for the time being. Your desires are within reach.

LIBRA (September 22 to October 21): Avoid stirring up any arguments with your mate, and form a plan of action to succeed in fulfilling your goals.

SCORPIO (October 22 to November 21): A friend who is depressed needs your help. Being a good samaritan today may end up being quite beneficial.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Handling public and financial affairs should be your first priority. Evening work may be necessary.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Traveling a fair distance will be worth the trip, although not immediately apparent. New friends can be made today.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Keep the promises you have made and get them off your mind. You can achieve domestic bliss with your mate.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Although boring, a long discussion with a partner is necessary. Be very articulate and cautious in any arguments.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he, or she, will develop a lifetime plan while still very young. A very creative and scientific mind is developing here, so an education in engineering, architecture, or electronics would be beneficial. A good diet and plenty of exercise are necessary to avoid health problems.

Michael Jackson plans Japan as kickoff point for solo tour

TOKYO (AP) — Shy superstar Michael Jackson's first concert tour in three years will begin with a series of September concerts in Japan, where the singer feels his fans are among his most loyal, his personal manager said Tuesday.

"He feels very comfortable here," said Frank Dileo.

Jackson, 26, who has not visited Japan since performing with the Jackson Five in 1973, said in a statement that he would give his fans "thrilling and exciting" concerts.

Dileo said Jackson will perform nightly in Tokyo Sept. 12-14, in Osaka Sept. 16-20 and in Yokohama on Sept. 22-27. He said Jackson will go on to Australia, and then tour the United States from February to June and Europe from June through August 1988.

"It will be Jackson's first performances since his 1984 'Victory' tour with his brothers and his first concerts without them."

"There are no bad relations between Michael and his family. They are very close," Dileo said. "After 23 years (of performing together), he decided he wanted a solo career. He had to give to his fans."

HAMLIN, W.Va. (AP) — Susie M. Yeager, mother of aviator Charles E. "Chuck" Yeager, has died after a long illness. She was 89.

Mrs. Yeager died Sunday in Putnam General Hospital at Hurricane, officials at Kootenai Funeral Home in Hamlin said Tuesday.

Yeager was a World War II hero and a test pilot who became the first man to break the sound barrier. He now lives in California.

"Mom always taught me three things — to honor your country, to respect your flag and to be willing to fight for both," Yeager said in 1985.

Mrs. Yeager said she never was comfortable when her son was in the air.

"I've worried about Charles all my life," she said in 1985. "I wish he would stay out of those airplanes."

A beer shortage may hit July 4th

DETROIT (AP) — A labor dispute that led to a lockout Tuesday that cut 250 beer delivery workers is curtailing supplies in some areas as the Fourth of July nears, retailers say.

The Teamsters union and Detroit-area beer distributors have been in a contract dispute since June 3, when the union struck Don Lee Distributors Inc. of Dearborn.

The distributors struck back on June 5, locking out drivers for seven other companies serving bars and grocery stores in two counties.

Those actions killed 450 workers. At midnight Monday, six distributors serving Detroit and nearby communities locked out 250 more Teamsters.

Bird: Americans hurtle from 1 idea to another

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former

California Chief Justice Rose Bird says modern American culture is prone to adopting "radical ideas after little or no thought."

"Ours is an amphetamine society, without the stability of an anchor, hurtling from one idea to another, momentarily clinging to them for support, but then discarding them to search for whatever may float our way," she told 300 members of the American Library Association on Monday.

Quoting folk singer Joni Mitchell, Bird warned that Americans are losing their sense of history, creating a "land of snap decisions ... where nothing is savored long enough to really understand."

WAUSAU, Wis. (AP) — Rep. David Obey was released from an Arlington, Va., hospital Tuesday after an illness he believes was caused by eating bananas.

The Wisconsin Democrat has a hiatal hernia, which affects the esophagus. The potassium in the bananas, which Obey had for breakfast Saturday apparently irritated it and he entered the hospital Monday.

"I started feeling queasy," Obey told the Wausau Daily Herald in an interview from his Virginia home. "I started sweating and I said, 'I don't know what's happening,' and Joan (his wife) said, 'You'd better not take any chances.'"

He had a similar attack about 20 years ago while a member of the Wisconsin Assembly, he said.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — "Hoo Haw" comedian Archie Campbell remained in serious but stable condition Tuesday after being transferred from a coronary care unit to a regular room, a hospital spokesman said.

Campbell, 72, suffered a heart attack June 15. He was moved to a regular room Sunday, said Ms. McNeal, but he cannot yet have visitors, other than family, or telephone calls.

NOW chapter chooses its first male president

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Clint Eastwood may be a man's man, but Ed Lesen is a woman's man — the first of his gender elected president of the Westchester chapter of the National Organization for Women, the group announced Tuesday.

Lesen, 49, general manager of the Rockland Review, an independent weekly in Nanuet, has been active in NOW for 11 years as a vice president, state council delegate, member of the steering committee and fund-raiser.

"There is no issue that is only a woman's issue," Lesen said.

Lesen said he was inspired by the independence of his 77-year-old mother, Nita, who volunteers at an old-age home.

"At a time when women were supposed to go back into the home, my mother continued working and carved out a career," Lesen said. "She fought a quiet battle."

Kuwaiti cargo vessel hit by Iranian rocket

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — An Iranian gunboat rocketed a Kuwaiti cargo ship in the Persian Gulf, forcing it down Tuesday, but no casualties were reported and damage was minor, marine salvage executives reported.

The 32,534-ton Al-Mirkab was attacked near where Iranian gunboats fired missiles that hit two Scandinavian supertankers four days ago, they said.

A rocket on Tuesday tore through the Al-Mirkab's hull into the engine room, near the bridge, and caused a fire, said the sources, who demanded anonymity. It inflicted minor damage to the superstructure and some containers, they said.

The fire spread to the crew's quarters but the 32 crew, mainly Asian, led by the British captain put out the blaze, the executives said.

United Arab Shipping Co., the ship's Kuwait-based owners, said the 2:16 a.m. attack punched a 20-inch hole in the hull just above the waterline.

The ship is sailing under its own power to Mina Salmen in Bahrain for repairs, the company said.

The Al-Mirkab was hit about 150 miles south of Kuwait, in the same area where the Norwegian-owned supertanker Mia Margrethe and the Swedish-owned Stena Concordia were attacked Saturday.

The tankers were trafficking with Kuwait when attacked.

Small BLM brush fire burning

HANSEN — A small brush and grass fire on North Cottonwood Canyon south of here had covered about 75 acres of Bureau of Land Management land Tuesday evening, and fire dispatcher Tracy Thompson said there was concern for more fires due to lightning storms continuing in the South Hills area.

The Tuesday fire, named the Orena fire, was discovered about 2 p.m. by BLM official doing some field work in the area, Thompson said.

By 8:30 p.m. it was contained on three sides, but continuing to spread to the southeast.

BLM crews were working with two heavy engines and two medium engines and a dozer in attempting to cut a line completely around the fire.

Thompson said conditions in the lower elevations where the Orena fire was located are extremely dry and indications of more lightning Tuesday night could mean a rash of range fires. He said fortunately winds were mild while crews battled the fire.

The Orena fire burned about two miles north of the Sawtooth National Forest boundary, south of Rock Creek.

Preliminary hearing requested

TWIN FALLS — Edward M. Weinstein, 43, of Gooding requested a preliminary hearing in 5th District Magistrate Court Monday on charges of grand theft by embezzlement.

Weinstein is charged with two felony counts involving the alleged theft of a videocassette recorder from Smith's Food King in Twin Falls, and cassettes from Appliance and TV Center in Twin Falls. The complaint against Weinstein alleges that the equipment was taken between Sept. 25, 1986, and Jan. 3, 1987.

Some take holiday on Friday

TWIN FALLS — Though Independence Day falls on a Saturday this year, many local government offices and businesses will take a substitute holiday on Friday.

All local banks will close for the day Friday. Offices in City Hall and the Twin Falls County Courthouse will also be closed Friday in recognition of the holiday.

The Twin Falls Public Library will be closed both Friday and Saturday. Mail carriers will work both Friday and Monday, but will not deliver mail on July 4.

Interior Telephone Communication Corp., 538 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., will install one for a AT&T single line residential phone for $35 to $45 plus the cost of the part, according to a spokesman.

Once the customer has determined where the interface is, a phone can be unplugged from its usual location and plugged into the interface, Oppedahl says.

If there is no dial tone after plugging into the interface, then the phone company must fix the wiring, he says.

For those who don't want or have an interface, someone other than Mountain Bell can be hired to repair the wires when it isn't the phone company's fault.

The PUC refused to let Mountain Bell keep the maintenance customers without polling them.
Of the 300,000 Mountain Bell customers in Idaho with single line service, 233,000 have wire maintenance. As of May 5, 1987, 10,000 Bell customers have been contacted by telephone have chosen to keep the service, says Carver of Mountain Bell.

Though the deregulation is intended to promote competition, few vendors of wire maintenance can afford to be polled by direct mail or contacted by telephone have chosen to keep the service, says Carver of Mountain Bell.

The wire maintenance issue came up when the FCC deregulated phone company maintenance to promote competition, says the PUC's Anderson.

"The phone company is certainly in the catbird's seat," he says.

Former ed board executive director, 'expended,' heads back to teaching

MOSCOW (AP) — After four and a half years as executive director of the Idaho Board of Education, Charles McQuillen is leaving administration to return to the classroom.

With him goes a satchel of one liner, including his frequent claim that Idaho is "that state too small to be a country and too large to be a lunatic asylum," and memories of legislative wars, including the time he had to restrain himself from punching a cat-calling lawmaker.

For all that, McQuillen said, he is proud to leave the people of Idaho "comfortable that their system of higher education is efficient and in good working order."

In an interview after leaving the administrative post — Friday, he displayed the unconventional views that made his term as executive director so contentious. McQuillen, 48, praised the system he helped shape as an institution between the board and the four state colleges and universities but called on school officials to dump their "barbershop mentality" and radically change the way they deliver education in the "high-tech, low-touch" era.

"We've been little more than barbers," McQuillen said. "We've raised the price of the product without improving — or even changing — the delivery."

"For years, we have walked in and acted like we were doing the work of the Lord. That won't get you anywhere anymore."

McQuillen resigned last fall, joking that he was bound for Nevada, Tenn., to write country-western music.

His successor is Richard Sperring, former dean of the College of Business and Economics at St. Thomas University in Miami.

After teaching graduate business classes at an Air Force base in Japan this summer, McQuillen plans to begin teaching advanced corporate financial management in the doctoral program of the University of Central Florida at Daytona in late August.

McQuillen said he is leaving Idaho because he has completed the agenda set for him by the board, which hired him away from the University of Idaho College of Business in January 1983.

His relationship with the panel deteriorated last year, however, and his rapport with college faculty and presidents was rocky almost from the start.

Soda Springs patrons OK levy

SODA SPRINGS (AP) — Soda Springs school district patrons have approved a $60,000 supplemental levy that will allow the continuation of the high school vocational-technical education program, Superintendent Lawrence Rigby said.

Rigby said 223 votes were cast in favor of the proposed tax hike on Tuesday, and 52 against. A simple majority was needed for passage.

The one-year supplemental levy would add $5 in taxes to a $50,000 home with a homeowner's exemption.

Property owners in the district actually will see a tax decrease because last year's supplemental levy was $175,000.

Burglaries, thefts reported

TWIN FALLS — Several burglaries and thefts were reported to Twin Falls police during the weekend, ranging from candy bars at the Frontier Field concession stand to jewelry from a Twin Falls home.

Gene Conner of 828 Mountain View Drive told police someone entered his home between June 13 and June 27 and took guns and other items valued at nearly $500. Police said there was no sign of forced entry.

Another theft was reported by Richard Edwards of Filer who works at Continental Oil Co. in Twin Falls. He told police a portable compressor of the valued at $600 disappeared from a Karen Robertson told police someone entered his home at 911 last Thursday night. "We want new merchants, but I'm not sure this is the kind of new merchant we want," he said.

Gordon Conkett, another neighbor and former realtor, said property values of the homes in the area would probably depreciate by 10 to 15 percent if the teen center were allowed.

Upon questioning by the commission, City Development Director Lamar Orton pointed out that the neighbors' City Council or commission could seek a revocation of the permit if there were problems. Tranner said he had about $40,000 invested in the proposal, which is "a lot to lose."

Another teen center, "Fasttrax," located next to Desert Industries on Blue Lakes Boulevard North, will tentatively open July 17. Tranner said he expected to open his business in September.

Unless someone appeals the commission's decision to the City Council, they will be final.

Steven Botmer, public defender for Gooding County, represented Stigall in court. He said Tuesday the guilty plea that was entered last week resulted from plea negotia-

Botmer said he has not requested bond for Stigall at this time and is hopeful that the pre-sentence report will be completed soon and sentencing concluded so local jail time for his client will not be prolonged. Stigall's financial means, he said, would not allow him to post a large bond.

A first-degree murder conviction carries a maximum sentence of death or a sentence of life in prison. Under the second-degree murder charge, Stigall faces a minimum sentence of 10 years in prison which could extend to life.

Terrorism law takes effect

By The Associated Press

At 12:01 a.m. today, hundreds of new Idaho laws went into effect. The state sales tax rate is set to stay at 5 percent permanently, but it already has been at that level for more than a year on a temporary basis.

A variety of other tax increases is expected to generate an additional $100 million for the state. The impact of some of these increases won't be evident until spring, when taxpayers file their state returns.

Corporations, however, have to start making quarterly estimated tax payments the same as they make to the federal government. That's expected to produce an extra $2.7 million.

But Idaho may find itself in the limelight because of a new law intended to discourage terrorists and racial supremacists, organizations such as the Hayden Lake-based Aryan Nations.

Starting today, it becomes a crime — subject to the toughest penalties in the country — to conduct any sort of training designed to cause injury to people or property or to deprive people of their civil rights.

Attorney General Jim Jones says law enforcement officers have had reports from four or five Idaho counties of training sessions designed to "get" certain groups such as blacks, Jews or other minorities.

"The standard of proof is very tough" for the new law, Jones said. The state must prove that the firearms training or other activity is intended to foment civil disorder, riots, or to harm individuals or property.

That will probably require direct testimony obtained by wire-taps, informants, or firsthand observation of the acts involved.

"It should be a tough standard. We should have good, solid evidence before we proceed with these sorts of cases," Jones said.

Another 19 states have laws designed to cover firearm or explosives training for illegal activities.

Jones says Idaho's new law goes much further. It says any sort of activity designed to be used in illegal efforts can be a felony — not limited to firearms or explosives training.

Most of the other states call for a maximum of three years in prison and a fine of $5,000. Idaho's new law can produce a 10-year prison term and a $50,000 fine.

"It won't cover legitimate activities such as self-defense or sportsman training," Jones said. "It will target the obnoxious people we want to put a stop to."

Starting today, drunken drivers will be in even more trouble.

Because the state has been cracking down on drunken drivers, police say more and more motorists have been refusing to take blood-alcohol tests when stopped.

The penalty for that has been the loss of a driver's license for 120 days. Now the penalty becomes 180 days. And a new state law makes it much harder for anyone to get a temporary license for a job or other purposes.

Because of an Ada County case, another state law that goes into effect will make it a felony, not a misdemeanor, to leave the scene of an accident where injury or death has occurred. That legislation was influenced by an Ada County case in which a driver could only be charged with a misdemeanor for leaving the scene of a fatal traffic crash.

Search-warrant requirements have been broadened to expand the scope of evidence that may be taken by an officer. And for the first time, search warrants can cover intangibles such as computer records.

Idaho will get tougher on those who create, possess or sell child pornography. It will become a felony to merely possess "hard core" child pornography.

On the other hand, it will become a little easier to drink beer and wine between 1 a.m. and 2 a.m. in those counties that allow it. State law was changed a year ago to allow expanded drinking hours. But it inadvertently covered only liquor and not beer and wine.

Pari-mutuel betting on dog races

Gas costs climb

BOISE (AP) — The cost of gasoline for Idaho motorists continues to climb as the summer wears on.

The Idaho State Automobile Association reports that its latest service station survey for the July 4 holiday weekend shows gasoline averaging $1.03 a gallon across the state.

That is up two cents a gallon from the state average over the Memorial Day holiday weekend five weeks ago and nearly a dime a gallon higher than the average the AAA reported in its July 4, 1986, survey. At that time, the survey showed self-service unleaded averaging 94 cents and leaded averaging 93 cents.

The current Idaho average price was a penny higher than the average nationwide in the survey of some 5,000 stations throughout the country.

will become legal in Idaho for the first time. But under a restrictive law approved by the Legislature, it won't be allowed in southern Idaho. Reports indicate the state's only legalized dog racing and gambling for the foreseeable future may be at Coeur d'Alene.

Hunters will have several new laws to observe. A $5 state stamp will be required to hunt migratory waterfowl. It will become unlawful to interfere with lawful hunting or fishing activity, or to attempt to disrupt legitimate predator control. And hunters applying for controlled hunt permits now must submit fees for both the permits and a game tag for deer, elk or antelope. In the past, only the permit fee has been required in advance.

A new system helping counties cope with the staggering cost of providing medical help to indigents goes into effect. Leading the way nationwide, Idaho will have new laws on the siting of hazardous waste facilities, and on the regulation of dangerous PCBs.

And voters will have to register in advance to take part in school elections. School boards can seek approval of override levies for two years at a time, instead of being limited to one year.

Kiebert considered for transportation director

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Department of Transportation Director E. Dean Tisdale will retire Nov. 15, and Senate Minority Leader Kermit Kiebert, D-Hope, is being considered as a replacement.

John Ohman, Idaho Falls, chairman of the Idaho Board of Transportation, said Kiebert was one of several people being considered to fill Tisdale's position. But the Legislature's top Democrat is making no promises that he would take the job if offered.

"Until the board comes up with a decision, I'm not making any plans," Kiebert said, who now works as a logging contractor. "At this point I'm going to keep hoeing the garden and working for the folks as senator. Whatever happens, happens."

The Transportation Board met last week in Boise to discuss a replacement for Tisdale and make preliminary cuts from their list of candidates for recommendation to Gov. Cecil Andrus.

Tisdale, 58, has worked for the Department of Transportation for more than 30 years. He was named director in January 1985, replacing Darrell Manning, who was appointed assistant general of the Idaho National Guard.

A decision on Tisdale's successor may be made as early as July 15, but definitely will come before Sept. 1, Ohman said.

"Anyone who wants the job and makes it known to us is being considered," Ohman said, adding that the person chosen will have to be a good administrator, have a good rapport with the Legislature and be acceptable to the governor.

Red tape ensnares residents of home, blocks assistance

NAMPA (AP) — Two residents of Sunny Ridge Manor, who allegedly were cheated out of money they deposited with the nursing home's former owners, are still caught up in red tape preventing them from receiving financial assistance.

At a press conference at the retirement home Monday, Sunny Ridge trustee Harmon Johnson, Canyon County Commission Chairwoman Joyce Chase and Idaho Department of Health and Welfare officials were unsuccessful in attempts to resolve the situation. But a solution is expected soon.

The residents' problems began in January when Sunny Ridge filed for bankruptcy, listing $2 million in debt. A criminal complaint was filed June 12 against former Sunny Ridge owners Max Durbin and Wanda Turner, who it claims took $99,000 from four residents of the home.

Because Sunny Ridge is bankrupt, it cannot be certified by the state so its residents can receive full medical assistance from Health and Welfare.

Of the four residents who lost money, all originally requested aid. One has moved to another facility and receives aid, while another has left the home and no longer requires those funds.

Doctors have advised not to move the two other residents because of their physical condition.

At Johnson's request, the names of the residents have been kept confidential. Sunny Ridge has 156 residents.

Johnson, who was named trustee for the nursing home April 6, criticized Ms. Chase for what he said was a six-week delay in responding to the senior citizens' problems. The County Commission is empowered to apply for non-budgeted funds in emergency situations.

Ms. Chase defended the panel, saying it had been prevented by law from applying for assistance because Johnson had not proven that all options for the residents' support had been exhausted.

Johnson said only temporary assistance is required from the state and he expects to find a new owner for Sunny Ridge within the next 100 days.

"I do not request that you people do anything illegal, immoral or the like," he said. "Too much of this has gone on at this facility so far."

Once Johnson provides the county commission with a written denial of aid from Health and Welfare and a request for assistance from the county, the commission will move forward on the matter, Chase said. An application was expected by the end of the week.

Bingham County joins disaster list

BLACKFOOT (AP) — The Bingham County Commission has declared the county a disaster area in an attempt to help parched farmers save their endangered potato crops.

If approved by Gov. Cecil Andrus, the declaration would make farmers eligible for federal financial assistance should the need arise. The Commission Chairman Dale Arave county would be the 14th declared a disaster area this year because of drought conditions across southern Idaho.

Bingham County's declaration was issued at the request of Watermaster Ron Carlson urged Wapello farmer Thain Evans and his son Dean. The Evanses said a disaster declaration would allow them to get an emergency permit to drill an irrigation well to provide water for crops when their allotment of water from the Blackfoot Irrigation District is exhausted, possibly within three weeks.

"This should open the gate and cut through a bunch of red tape," Arave said. "We're not asking for any percentage of county farmland. But it will be severe enough to cause those affected to lose their potato crops if they are unable to obtain water, he said."

"It would take too long for them to get a permit the regular way," Arave said. "The crops would be gone."

Dean Evans said Snake River was issued at the request of Watermaster Ron Carlson urged Wapello farmer Thain Evans and his son Dean. ## Hansen says group to help finance suit

PETERSBURG, Va. (AP) — Former Idaho Rep. George Hansen expects a group of supporters to help finance his lawsuit against the Justice Department over the way U.S. marshals handled his arrest and return to prison for parole violations.

The marshals who picked him up in Omaha, Neb., on April 15 were "badge happy" and possessed of a "Mazda mentality," said Hansen, who was returned to the federal prison camp here a month after his arrest.

"I'd like to see them spend a little money out of their own pockets defending themselves," he said.

A conservative group is holding a "Free George Hansen" meeting in Washington later this week or press for a pardon, Hansen said Monday.

The incident made him "look like an international criminal, like one of the most wanted" and damaged his reputation, Hansen said. "I want them to have to pay for it."

The former Republican congressman last year was fined $40,000 and ordered to serve a five-to-15 month prison term following his conviction on four counts of falsifying financial disclosure statements required from members of Congress yearly.

Hansen had served six months of the sentence when he was paroled last Christmas. He was arrested in April after violating conditions of his parole restricting him to travel within Virginia and requiring him to submit periodic financial reports, with the Parole Commission. He is due to be released on Oct. 18.

Hansen said Monday he withheld the financial reports because releasing them would have betrayed people he was advising "who have difficulties with the government."

The former congressman's chief complaint about the criminal justice system centers on the way marshals picked him up in Nebraska, allegedly without a warrant, hauled him back to Virginia in leg irons and stuck him in the Alexandria jail for a month.

During his incarceration at the jail, which has since been closed, Hansen went on a hunger strike, shedding some 30 pounds from his 6-foot-4, 280-pound frame. He refused to shave with a common razor because of the risk that it would expose him to AIDS and now sports a short beard.

Idaho Power to establish own PCB testing lab

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Power Co. has decided to establish its own laboratory to test for hazardous PCBs, a move aimed at saving time and money in the wake of a rash of southern Idaho spills.

The state's largest electric utility expects to have the facility operating in Boise before the end of the year.

The unusual insulating capacity and fire-retardant qualities of polychlorinated biphenyls made them ideal coolants and lubricants for transformers and other electrical equipment for decades.

But by the 1970s, it was becoming evident there was little natural breakdown of the chemical when it entered the ground and water. Tests on laboratory animals also linked PCBs with cancer. The federal government ordered an end to production of the chemical in 1977 and developed strict disposal regulations.

Idaho Power began an ambitious program several years ago to remove PCBs from its electrical equipment. But utility officials say removing the chemical is costly and time-consuming because of the number of transformers in the company's service area.

Hundreds of electrical transformers being shipped to a disposal yard in Idaho Falls spilled PCBs when a truck crashed along U.S. Highway 20 near Fairfield in May, and a smaller leak was reported about a week later at the Bliss port of entry on Interstate 84.

Inmate sues over extent of AIDS virus

BOISE (AP) — An inmate at the Idaho State Penitentiary has sued the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare and the Department of Corrections, alleging that 15 prisoners are infected with the AIDS virus or have tested positive for the virus in the facility, instead of the one announced earlier this month by prison officials.

Lee Hays, a clerk in the prison library, filed the suit in 4th District Court on June 19. Hays is calling for mandatory testing of all prisoners and guards for the AIDS virus and quarantine if the results are positive.

Hays claims the Correction Department has deliberately covered up the extent of the disease in the prison.

Dr. Kelly Mutch, Corrections Department medical director, said only one inmate has been found with the AIDS virus. He was diagnosed through a routine test at the prison blood plasma center.

In the past, up to 12 prisoners tested positive for the virus, but later confirming tests indicated they were not infected, he said.

Mutch said prison officials had mounted an effort to educate the inmates about the spread of AIDS. He said Monday that he still advises against a mass screening of the prison population.

"I don't know where Mr. Hays is getting his figures," Mutch said. "This is typical inmate life."

Andrus announces his 4 appointees

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus has announced the appointment of new members to the Idaho Judicial Council and the Idaho Commission on Human Rights.

He chose Betty Lou Donnelley, a Boise businesswoman, to serve on the Judicial Council. She replaces Mar Hartung of Payette, who resigned. Mrs. Donnelley's term will run until July 1, 1991.

Andrus appointed Phil Sansotta of Boise to the Human Rights Commission. Sansotta succeeds Benjamin Pease Jr., also of Boise.

The governor also announced the reappointment of Marianne Endo of Pocatello and Larry Broadbent of Hayden Lake to the Human Rights Commission. Terms for all three run until July 1, 1990.

ICC orders rail line sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission on Tuesday ordered the parent company of the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific railroads to sell one of the rail lines after it refused to reconsider a proposed merger of the two systems.

The ICC rejected the merger plan last July, saying it posed serious competitive problems. By a 4-1 vote Tuesday, the commission reaffirmed its ruling by refusing to accept a request that the case be reopened.

Santa Fe Southern Pacific Corp., a diversified, Chicago-based company, immediately announced plans to realign its operations and said it would sell a number of its holdings to concentrate in its "core businesses" including real estate, petroleum and minerals holdings as well as transportation.

Among the holdings to be sold are 520,000 acres of timberland in northern California, several pipeline companies in the Southwest and Gulf Coast areas and an equipment leasing firm, the corporation announced.

Joe E. Johnston, chairman of Santa Fe Southern, said no decision has been made on which of the railroads will be sold, and he left open the possibility that both rail lines may be put on the market.

Kansas City Southern Industries said it was ready to buy the Southern Pacific and announced it will make a formal offer within 60 days. The Burlington Northern also indicated it may be interested in buying some or part of one of the railroads.

The commission ordered Santa Fe Southern Pacific to produce a divestiture plan for one of its railroads within 90 days and directed that the sale be concluded within two years.

Economic forecast points up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said Tuesday its main economic forecasting gauge posted a fourth consecutive monthly increase in May, a 0.7 percent advance which the Reagan administration had as evidence the long-running recovery is not wearing out.

The Commerce Department's index of Leading Indicators posted its best gain since a 0.9 percent rise in March. Additionally, the government revised the April figure to show a small 0.2 percent rise instead of what originally had been reported as a steep 0.6 percent drop.

Administration officials said the combination of the May increase and the April revision offered further proof that the recovery from the 1981-82 recession, already the second longest peacetime expansion in U.S. history, is showing no signs of faltering.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the index has been rising at an annual rate of 7.4 percent over the past six months, a pace he was consistent with overall economic growth of between 3 percent and 4 percent in coming months.

The administration has predicted that the economy's measured by the gross national product, will expand 3.2 percent this year, substantially better than the weak 2.5 percent GNP increase in 1986.

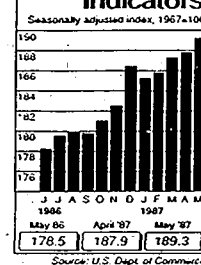

While the economists agreed that the leading index was signaling continued expansion, many said the rate of economic growth would be little changed from the sluggish performance of the past three years.

"I don't see any recession on the horizon, but I don't see any economic boom either," said Michael Penzer, economist at Bank of America in San Francisco. "The leading index suggests we are going to continue to have economic growth at a modest pace of around 2.5 percent, just where it has been since the middle of 1984."

formance of the past three years.

"I don't see any recession on the horizon, but I don't see any economic boom either," said Michael Penzer, economist at Bank of America in San Francisco. "The leading index suggests we are going to continue to have economic growth at a modest pace of around 2.5 percent, just where it has been since the middle of 1984."

The economy, as measured by the GNP, shot ahead at a 4.8 percent rate in the first three months of 1987, but many analysts believe this pace will slump to a barely noticeable 1.5 percent level in the April-June quarter as industries cut production in order to work off unwanted inventories.

Baldrige and Beryl Sprinkel, the president's chief economic adviser, forecast faster growth in the second half of the year, but both officials warned that this prediction would be jeopardized if the Federal Reserve Board tightens up too much on credit conditions.

Sprinkel, in testimony before the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, said that the Fed's current tight money stance, if continued for several more quarters, could put the economy at risk.

"Such a dramatic slowdown of money growth, if continued for several more quarters, could place the continuation of reasonable growth of real output and employment at risk," Sprinkel said.

In a second report Tuesday, the government said that orders to U.S. manufacturers were unchanged in May at a seasonally adjusted $206.6 billion as a steep decline in demand for military hardware was offset by strength in civilian categories. Analysts said that for much of this year, manufacturing orders have been on the rise, reflecting improvements in sales by American manufacturers abroad.

The administration is counting on further improvements in the country's huge trade deficit to power 100.

growth for the rest of the year, but many private economists are not as optimistic because they believe the trade gains will be largely offset by the slowdown in export spending.

Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm, predicted sluggish GNP growth of around 1.5 percent and the rest of the year.

The main source of strength in the leading index in May was a rise in the number of hours worked at manufacturing plants. A decline in manufacturing hours had been the biggest factor holding back the April index.

But the swing in manufacturing hours basically reflected the fact that the survey was conducted in April during a week when the religious holidays of Passover and Easter had reduced the work force.

In all, four of the available nine indicators posted increases in May. After manufacturing hours, the largest positive factors were changes in raw materials prices, business delivery times and a rise in plant and equipment orders.

Five of the indicators held back the index. The biggest negative factor was a drop in building permits followed by slower growth in the money supply, a rise in unemployment claims and a decline in orders for consumer goods and a drop in stock prices.

The various changes left the index at 189.3 percent of its 1967 base of 100.

Judge dismisses suit threatening merger

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — First District Judge VeNy Christofferson has dismissed the $5 million suit challenging existence of the Inter-mountain Milk Producers Association.

The suit had threatened the merger going into effect Wednesday of the Inter-mountain Milk Producers Association with the Denver-based Western Dairyman's Cooperative. The new Mountain Empire Dairyman's Association will represent 1,500 dairymen in 10 states and will be the 14th largest dairy cooperative in the nation.

Christofferson's ruling Monday left open the possibility the suit could be refilled seeking damages on other grounds, but plaintiffs' attorney George Daines said he will recommend his clients accept the decision rather than refile the suit.

"We don't want a monetary damage award. We want the Cache Valley Dairy Association controlled by local farmers again, and it is very clear the judge is not going to consider this possibility," he said.

The suit, filed by seven former directors of the Cache Valley Dairy Association challenged the formation of IMPA in January of 1986. The association was formed by combining the CVDA with three smaller associations. The IMPA represents producers in Utah and portions of Idaho, Wyoming, Nevada and California.

The suit contended the formation of IMPA violated state merger law because non-producer equity holders were not allowed to vote.

The IMPA contended the formation was not completed under the merger statute, but under statutes of the state of Utah.

Christofferson ruled that there was no merger or consolidation, but there was a transfer of assets by CVDA to IMPA.

He said, "The court holds that a merger or consolidation is not an exclusive alternative to a change or effecting a consolidation by exchange of assets."

The judge said the formation of IMPA could not be undone, because, "There are many other entities and people involved that have changed their position in reliance on transfer of assets and it would be inequitable for the court to consider the remedies of rescission and restitution."

But he said the plaintiffs may be entitled to damages on grounds such as a transfer put members or producers of CVDA in a position where eliminating all the assets of the CVDA destroyed the value of their equity rights.

Daines said to refile the suit could mean a delay of two or three years before a resolution came. He said an appeal would go either to the Utah Supreme Court or the new state Court of Appeals.

Defense attorneys and IMPA officials could be reached for comment.

Mitsubishi raises car prices

DETROIT (AP) — Mitsubishi Motor Sales of America Inc. raised its car and light truck prices Monday, citing increasing strength of the yen compared to the U.S. dollar.

Suggested retail prices of Mitsubishi passenger cars went up an average of $227.

The price increases ranged from $170 for the Mirage model, which will now cost $6,139, to $240 for the turbocharged Starion, which will cost $16,199.

Price increases for trucks averaged $107, from $146 for a two-wheel-drive Mighty Max pickup, now $6,599, to $280 for the four-wheel-drive Mighty Max, now $9,419.

The price of the Montero sport utility vehicle, which had cost $19,100, the Mitsubishi Precis price is $5,195 remained unchanged. There was no change in suggested retail prices of optional equipment.

New tax law offers some bright spots

The new tax law — and it is new, with different aspects popping up almost daily — both maximizes the tax breaks and minimizes the effect of the crackdowns.

The new gross income test for dependency deductibles in 1987, for instance, is $1,900. That's good for you if you support dependents. The dependents can earn 76 percent more in 1987 than in 1986 and still qualify. In 1986, if your dependents earned $1,080, they generally wouldn't qualify as deductible dependents. So the new gross income limit is good news.

The new law raises the medical expense floor 56 percent higher. If J. J. Warach, chief tax consulting officer of Premier Law, stressed to me, it had been 5 percent and is now 7 1/2 percent of adjusted gross income. That is bad news.

Under both the new and old law, if your relative's gross income is over the new gross income limit, you generally could not claim the dependency exemption.

But if you provide more than half the support, you still can get credit for the medical expenses you pay for the dependent.

Now, let's put it all together — bad and good — and see how to make the most of it. Some taxpayers, particularly including you, assume that if you are the primary breadwinner, you are exempt from a relative, neither can you get a deduction for that person. Fortunately, that is not the case. There are always medical expenses.

Let's say that your mother has interest income of $2,500, plus another $3,000 from Social Security. You can't take the $1,900 dependency exemption for her — she has too much gross income. Let's also assume that you actually pay the expenses of your mother's medical care. In addition, you contribute more than half her support. The good news here is that you are entitled to the deduction for medical expenses.

There's an even bigger incentive to do this. The medical expenses you pay for your mother may help you get over the new, higher threshold. You add Mother's medical expenses to yours to see if they reach the 7 1/2 percent floor.

Here's one typical situation: Daniel gives his mother $6,500 in support payments each year. She also gets roughly $3,000 from Social Security and $2,500 in bank interest that she uses to support herself. His mother's yearly medical expenses run about $2,000 more than what Medicare covers.

Even though Daniel provides more than half of his mother's support ($6,500 vs. $5,500), he cannot claim a dependency deduction for her. She does have $2,500 of income subject to tax. That knocks out the dependency deduction.

But Daniel decides to get as much tax benefit as possible out of an otherwise tax-losing position. And his mother doesn't lose a thing. (She won't pay any tax.) Instead of giving his mother $6,500 in general support, Daniel pays the $2,000 in medical bills and provides $4,500 in general support payments.

Daniel still doesn't get a dependency exemption deduction for his mother. But now, for tax purposes, her medical expenses are his medical expenses. Reason: For someone to qualify as a "medical dependent," the taxpayer only has to provide more than half of his or her support.

The big tax-saving payoff: Daniel now adds his mother's expenses to his own (and those of his wife and children) when figuring up his medical deduction. Her expenses may well get Daniel over the hump of the 7 1/2 percent of adjusted-gross-income mark and qualify him for a tax deduction — or increase his deduction if already qualified.

"Wait a minute," you may be saying. "How about the Medicare benefits that his mother gets? Don't they count as her support?" The surprise answer is "No — they don't." Medicare benefits are ignored where the support test is involved.

Suppose your father, who has $3,000 a year in taxable income, is in an expensive nursing home. You pay the costs. Here's the tax benefit: In most cases, these costs are deductible. The costs are medical care expenses. The deduction provides medical care, and 2) one of the main reasons your relative is in the institution is to receive medical care for a physical condition.

IMPORTANT: You must provide more than half of your father's total support. And your combined medical expenses must exceed 7 1/2 percent of your adjusted gross income.

No one wants to be constantly reminded of sickness, but it does happen. And from a tax viewpoint, you must know the rules.

Leasing bill endorsed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department on Tuesday endorsed a bill to subject all onshore federal oil leases to competitive bidding the first time around.

We know of no better way of identifying which federal lands are of sufficient value to generate competition than going to the marketplace," said Robert Burford, director of the department's Bureau of Land Management, in testimony before the mineral resources development and production subcommittee of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

A sizzling 4th of July

This year's Fourth of July party can be a celebration of independence from the kitchen for the host or hostess. Now, with a little work in advance, it's possible to serve an enticing and attractive meal while still having plenty of time to socialize with guests.

Americans are starting to appreciate grilled seafood as a tempting alternative to the standard barbecue fare of hotdogs and hamburgers. Kabobs of shrimp and scallops can be made in advance, marinated with a bottle vinaigrette sauce, and stored in the refrigerator until later that day. Trout, salmon and other fish are also delicious and easy to prepare with the help of a variety of commercial dressings and sauces.

RANCH GRILLED TROUT
4 whole fresh rainbow or brook trout, about 8 to 10 oz. each, gutted, boned, tail intact and head discarded
8-oz. bottle buttermilk-based dressing

2 lemons, sliced thinly
12 fresh oregano sprigs
Rinse inside cavity of fish. Paper towel dry. Spread inside cavity of fish with 2 to 3 tablespoons dressings; top with lemon slices and oregano. Brush dressing on outside of fish. Place fish on well-greased grill or in fish baskets. Bake often during cooking to keep moist. Grill over hot coals 5 to 6 minutes on each side until fish begins to flake when tested with a fork or by removing fin — if it comes out easily the fish is cooked.

*Can substitute any small fish. Makes 4 servings.
Leftovers make great next-day cold salads.

FRUIT SALAD
For a healthy, refreshing dessert, cut up a variety of fruits for a colorful fruit salad, and accompany it with blue cheese dressing as a convenient dipping sauce. Fruits such as grapes, pineapple, melons, strawberries, blueberries, bananas and kiwi are especially colorful. To make ahead, cut fruit and seal in separate plastic bags. Just before serving, combine fruits and toss. Although a garnish isn't really necessary, fresh mint leaves and zest of orange rind add a nice touch.

GRILLED VEGETABLE KABOBS
Arrange a variety of fresh vegetables on skewers. Combine an 8-oz. bottle Italian dressing and 1 tablespoon prepared mustard. Brush vegetables with dressing mixture. Grill over hot coals to sear their skins; approximately 5 minutes. Continue grilling on the sides of the grill while the main course is cooking, approximately 15 to 20 minutes or until vegetables are tender, turning and brushing frequently with dressing mixture. Vegetables such as red, green or yellow bell peppers, onions, mushrooms, carrots, squash, corn and potatoes are a nice accompaniment to grilled seafood.

DILLED SALMON GRILL
4 salmon steaks, 1 inch thick
1 8-oz. bottle spicy-sweet French dressing

2 tablespoons chopped fresh dill
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
Place fish in 12x8 inch baking dish. Combine dressing, dill and Worcestershire sauce; pour over fish. Turn fish to coat well. Cover, marinate in refrigerator 1 to 2 hours. Remove fish from marinade; place on well-greased grill over hot coals. Cook 8 to 10 minutes until fish begins to flake when tested with a fork but is still moist and juicy brushing occasionally with marinade. (The steak can be turned after 4 minutes.)

*Can use swordfish, tuna, mahimahi, shark or local variety. Makes 4 servings.

SHRIMP AND SCALLOP KABOBS
4 green onions
1 lb. sea scallops, halved horizontally

Planning a social summer

June was a very, very quiet month. I'm glad it was quiet, because July is coming in like a fireworks display or a seismograph. There's the big-time busy, busy Fourth of July in Rupert with booths and carnival and rodeo and horse racing and parade and gabbing with old friends come home.

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

There's a big family reunion, a big school reunion, Rotary Exchange students stop over, company and club picnics... anyway it's a good time to put into practice all my advice about preparing ahead.

There are a few really easy things you can do ahead. Here is an appetizer or a mid-afternoon cool snack to have on hand.

COOL VEGIES
6 cucumbers, sliced diagonally (about 3 inch slices)
2 green peppers, sliced (try the red and yellow peppers if you can find them)
1 large Bermuda onion, sliced (a red onion can be substituted)
2 heads cauliflower, cut into pieces
1 can tomato soup (10%, ounce can of concentrate)
1/2 cup salad oil
1/2 cup vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
1/2 cup sugar
Drop the carrots into boiling salted water and cook for about 10 minutes. Carrots should stay crisp. Now mix the soup, oil, vinegar, sugar, salt, mustard, and salt and pepper together thoroughly. Place all the vegetables in a large bowl that has a sealable cover. Pour the sauce over the veggies, seal the lid and refrigerate for at least 12 hours.

This can be kept in the refrigerator for up to 2 weeks, and really hits the spot. Every year for the Fourth, I make a traditional coffee cake. This year, I'm going to use the following recipe calling for cocoa. It should be cooked in a bundt pan, but any other works fine (try a loaf or a tube pan). Just grease and flour the pan really good before pouring the batter into it. Preheat your oven to 350 degrees.

SOULCREAM COCOA COFFEECAKE
1/2 cup butter (margarine can be used, but I prefer the butter)
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon baking powder

Stalleys' pool keeps guests cool at annual July 4th barbecue

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Only the hamburgers will sizzle during Donna Stalley's Fourth of July party. In addition to enjoying good food, drink and conversation, her 73 guests will keep cool in her pool.

She says this is the seventh such celebration, and that in past years, guests have divided into teams to play volleyball. As one team loses, they leave the pool, and another takes their place. Or, sometimes the kids challenge parents to a game.

"Our rules are very loose. We make them up as we go along, depending on the size of the group who wants to play, and how they want to play," she says.

Friends who play musical instruments will provide entertainment. And, there will be plenty of chips, dips, baskets of cherries and soft drinks, sun tea, and a keg of beer. And, especially for the children, there will be pretzel sticks and popsicles.

Guests will bring along a variety of dishes for dinner, including hamburgers supplied by Bill and Donna Kyle, owners of McDonalds. Stalley says she likes to simplify her outdoor parties by using recipes for potato salads, hors d'oeuvres and desserts that she can prepare the day before or the morning of the party. In this way, she says it is possible for her to enjoy herself with her guests, rather than spending the whole time cooking and preparing food. Her tables are set up ahead of time, with silverware wrapped in napkins and tied with a colored ribbon. With everything ready, all she has to do when guests arrive, is take food out of the refrigerator, and start the grill. As it begins to get dark on Independence Day, all but five or six guests head for the city fireworks display. Later, many of the guests return, take lawn chairs to the side of the road, and set off their own fireworks.

"Everybody gets to watch everybody's. They don't have to have quite as many," she says. The following is the potato salad recipe Stalley will follow.

POTATO SALAD FOR 100
14 pounds potatoes
1/2 cup salt
38 hard-boiled eggs
1 1/2 cups onions
2 1/2 quarts mayonnaise
1 pound celery
Cook, peel and chop potatoes and eggs. Finely chop onions and celery. Add salt and mayonnaise and mix well. Chill and serve. Stalley says she probably will add 16 ounces of sour cream, and mustard, to taste.

"When you are making that much potato salad," she says, "you can't make a gourmet potato salad very easily. So, you have to use a basic potato salad and then add the sour cream and mustard." She has also prepared a batch of picante sauce for the party from a recipe she developed.

Easy tips for safe outdoor dining

Don't let food poisoning spoil your fun

By BARBARA NEIWEIT
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — The long days of summer are upon us, and what better way to celebrate the warm weather than by spending the Fourth of July outdoors.

Food always tastes better while picnicking, barbecuing or camping, but outdoor dining can be less than pleasant if food poisoning spoils the fun. Several easy precautions can be taken to keep your summer outing carefree.

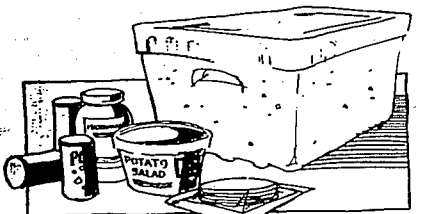

The best method to avoid food poisoning, but not practical by any means for summer activities, is to keep your food refrigerated from preparation to serving. But even when roughing it outdoors, perishable foods like meat and poultry should still be kept cold. At warm temperatures — 60 degrees and over — food poisoning bacteria can begin to multiply and cause illness, according to "Safe Food to Go," a bulletin published by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. At summer temperatures of 80 degrees and above, bacteria multiply very rapidly.

For some food poisoning means only uncomfortable intestinal flu-like symptoms, but it can cause serious problems for the young, the elderly and people with other illnesses. The microscopic bacteria which cause several forms of food poisoning are difficult to deal with because you can't see, smell or taste them. But by observing cold storage, sanitation and thorough cooking rules, you can keep your food safe on summer outings or in your lunch box by following a few simple guidelines prepared by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

*See SAFETY on Page C2

Planning a picnic?

Take the time to read this quick checklist of harmful bacteria that can cause food poisoning, and a few tips to help you keep your outing germ-free.

BACTERIA	HOW IT ATTACKS	SYMPTOMS	PREVENTION
Staphylococcus aureus (Staph)	Staph spreads from someone handling food. It is found on the skin and, when warm, produces a poison.	From 2-8 hours after eating, you could have vomiting and diarrhea lasting for a day or two.	Cooking won't destroy the staph poison, so: wash hands and utensils before preparing food and don't leave food out for over 2 hours.
Salmonella	You can get salmonella when infected food is eaten raw or undercooked, or when infected raw food contacts cooked food.	In 12-36 hours you could have diarrhea, fever and vomiting lasting from 2-7 days.	Keep raw food away from cooked food and be sure to thoroughly cook meat, poultry and fish. Don't drink unpasteurized milk.
Clostridium perfringens	This germ grows rapidly in large portions of food that cool slowly, or in refrigerators if food is stored in large portions that do not cool quickly.	In 8-24 hours you could have diarrhea and gas pains, usually ending in less than a day.	Keep food hot (over 140 degrees F) or cold (under 40 degrees F). Be especially careful with poultry, gravy, stews and casseroles.
Campylobacter jejuni	Can be transferred in untreated water (such as that found on an outing) or in raw or undercooked foods.	In 2-5 days you could have severe diarrhea, cramping, fever and headache lasting from 2-7 days.	Don't drink untreated water or unpasteurized milk. Also, thoroughly clean hands, utensils and surfaces that touch raw meats.

Natural food advocate offers cooks a gourmet alternative

By Newsday

Ten years ago, when she started the Natural Gourmet Cookery School, her ideas about whole foods food advocate Annemarie Colbin stood her ground as the world spun around her. The world of nutrition, at that time, was not as accepting as those ideas become more accepted.

Annemarie Colbin's ideas were once thought way-out, today the same ideas are almost part of the mainstream "Much of what I've been teaching over the years — how to cook and serve beans and grains — has become mainstream. Many more people are into complex carbohydrates, low-fat cooking; their doctors are pushing it," said Colbin.

A decade ago, she was deep into the "macrobiotic" food regimen, "a plenty of sea vegetables, kasha and other grains." Over the years, she has embraced a wider perspective while the nutrition establishment started recognizing that the health-food movement had contributions to make. They are not one and the same, but Colbin believes the two points of view have merged "or at least come close enough to live harmoniously together."

A year and a half ago, with the help of a silent business partner, Colbin moved her cooking school from her West Side kitchen into a 2,000-square-foot Midtown loft at 48 W. 21st St. in Manhattan. At the same time she opened a branch in Amity Harbor on Long Island. Both offer a wide variety of natural foods and vegetarian cooking classes for about 150 students a week. In addition, the Manhattan center serves a $15 four-course buffet dinner Friday evenings on Mondays and Thursdays, food for take-out or home delivery is available.

For a $45 (plus tax) package, there's enough food to last a single person for four to six meals; or a couple two to three meals. Some of the dishes include pinto bean soup, sweet and sour cabbage soup, kasha and tempeh with onion gravy, millet, croquettes with red lentil sauce. For dessert, some of the choices include poached pears with raisin sauce and almond cookies.

Classes include cooking with sea vegetables, sugar-free baking, making low-cholesterol or low-fat dishes like tofu-stuffed manicotti or sesame-rice burgers. There are courses on stir-frying, making sauces like almond miso to substitute for those made with high-fat cream and cholesterol-rich eggs, and making summertime desserts without sugar. The only sweeteners Colbin endorses are maple syrup and malt barley. What about honey, a popular sweetener among anti-sugar advocates? "No, I find it makes me sleepy," she said.

In the fall, Colbin plans to offer a professional chef's training program at the Manhattan location and she is in the process of getting accredited by New York State as a trade school.

"People become more aware of the line-between food and health, there is a greater need for professional chefs to cook natural, low-salt, high-fiber," said Jerry Rubin, the school's Manhattan program director. "We'll be teaching ways with sea vegetables, tofu and tempeh. We want to teach chefs to use these ingredients as well as teaching them the necessary chef skills," said Rubin. The chefs will be trained to cook for spas, restaurants, institutions and for executive dining.

For her efforts, next week the Roundtable for Women in Food Service will award Colbin the Pacesetter award in the category of Education. Colbin is pleased about the award. "It's recognition from the mainstream."

But not all her ideas are grounded in scientific data. For example, Colbin is against using dairy products as part of a healthy diet for adults. This is in contradiction to the current push by registered dietitians for adults to consume low-fat dairy products to get adequate calcium. "I find that people feel better when they go off dairy. I see that in the people I deal with, especially those with sinus problems, respiratory problems, asthma," she said.

Colbin, who holds a master's degree in holistic nutrition from Columbia Pacific University in San Rafael, Calif., a college not accredited by the Western Association of Schools and Colleges (but approved by the California Superintendent of Public Instruction), finds that there is room for flexibility, though. "Pizza is all right once in a while," she said. "Sometimes I eat fish or fowl, but it's one thing to eat it as a small side dish, not the main food for dinner." A chicken in her house, she said, feeds four people for two days. This approach isn't that far from the line of the scientific nutrition community which does advocate that Americans eat smaller portions of meat and poultry.

There are no easy answers, said Colbin. "I try to get the students to look at many possibilities to better our chances of responding accurately to a problem."

But there is one thing that's not confusing to anyone — the quality and taste of the food. At a recent luncheon, chickpeas in a light sauce served over couscous were delicious, as was the pasta salad and carrot salad with bits of dill and parsley. For dessert, there was a not-at-all-sweet poppy seed cake and a cup of Kukicha tea, a Japanese roasted tea made from the twigs of the tea plant.

"Consumers want and need to be educated and they need help to implement the new food ways,"

Peanut butter is good food

By Newsday

Adults who have abandoned peanut butter as too high in fat, too high in calories or just too childish should reconsider.

Peanut butter offers a good source of vitamins and minerals; it contains mono-unsaturated fat, now being touted by researchers for its cholesterol-lowering benefits.

It is, in fact, cholesterol-free, pan. Add the dried pepper and over a (Remember, though, that all plant products do not contain dietary cholesterol.)

Peanut butter does have a lot of calories — 190 for 2 tablespoons. But you don't need much to satisfy, or to slowly adding peanut butter, stirring as you do. Add in chicken stock, peanut sauce jazzed up with hot, you add liquid. Makes 2 cups. Set dried, crushed pepper that appeals to grown-up tastes.

SHREDDED CHICKEN WITH SPICY PEANUT SAUCE
2 tablespoons corn oil
1 teaspoon crushed dried hot pepper

3 tablespoons chopped scallions
1 teaspoon sesame oil
2 tablespoons brown sugar
4 tablespoons rice vinegar

2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 cup chunky-style peanut butter
1 cup defatted chicken stock
1 large bunch watercress
1/2 head shredded Boston lettuce
2 cups shredded cooked chicken
1 cup bean sprouts
8 cherry tomatoes
8 Chinese pea pods
2 scallions, chopped

1. Heat the vegetable oil in a small saucepan over low heat again, stir in 1/2 cup of peanut butter, stirring as you do. Add in chicken stock, peanut sauce jazzed up with hot, you add liquid. Makes 2 cups. Set dried, crushed pepper that appeals to grown-up tastes.

2. On a serving platter, arrange watercress and shredded lettuce. Top with shredded chicken. Garnish plate with bean sprouts, tomatoes and Chinese pea pods. Pour 1 cup peanut sauce over the chicken and toss with chopped scallions. Allow to stand for about 10 minutes for flavors to blend. Makes 4 servings. Preparation time: 15 minutes.

Cooking time: 5 minutes (20 minutes more if you have to poach the chicken).

Nutrition analysis: 245 calories for each, serving of 1/2 cup cooked chicken mixed with 4 tablespoons sauce; 145 grams fat, 80 milligrams cholesterol, 355 milligrams sodium.

PASTA AND PEANUT BUTTER
1 pound uncooked pasta
1 cup peanut sauce (see above recipe)
2 cups zucchini, diced
2 sweet red bell peppers, seeds removed and diced
1 cup mushrooms, coarsely chopped

Cook pasta according to package directions; drain. Combine peanut sauce with zucchini, red peppers and mushrooms. Mix well, then toss with drained pasta. Makes 4 servings. Preparation Time: 10 minutes. Cooking Time: A few minutes up to 10, depending on whether fresh or dried pasta is used.

Nutrition analysis: 550 calories for each serving of 2 cups of cooked pasta with 4 tablespoons of sauce and vegetables; 12 grams fat; 355 milligrams sodium.

Letters of thanks

Troop 56 says balloons were a great success

Girl Scout Troop 56 wishes to extend sincere "thanks" to NOR-20 of Twin Falls for their kind help and their donation of 75 helium-filled balloons.

This year being the 75th anniversary of Girl Scouts, our troop of 30 girls had wanted to do something extra in celebration. We decided to release 75 helium-filled balloons with messages attached about our troop and location.

The girls had a wonderful time watching their blue and green balloons race away on the breeze. NORCO's donation is greatly appreciated by each girl and the leaders of Troop 56. Thanks.

DIANA STARTIN and GIRL SCOUT TROOP 56 Twin Falls

'Gift of life' something to consider, couple says

Again I say "please consider being an organ donor." Here at Sun Arbor Terrace, in Salt Lake City, Utah, it's exciting to see the many people who have been given a "second chance" at life.

Larry is doing very well and we look forward to returning to Twin Falls.

A special thanks to Immanuel Lutheran Church for all their help. MR. and MRS. LARRY GIER Salt Lake City, Utah

Lions Club appreciates perspective on pageant

Thank you for the article on the three Magic Valley contestants who are participating in the Miss Idaho Scholarship Pageant.

There was enough information in the article to give the readers of The Times-News a little different perspective of the Miss Idaho Scholarship Pageant than the usual picture of the contestants departing on an airplane for Boise.

JIM JENSEN President, Twin Falls Lions Club

The Times-News welcomes letters of thanks of fewer than 100 words, which will be published as space permits. Send to "Letters of Thanks," The Times-News, Box 548, Twin Falls, Idaho 83401.

Words hurt: don't lash out at your kids

DEAR READERS: Have you ever abused your child? Perhaps without realizing it, you have. Words can hit as hard as a fist. For example: "You disgust me. Just shut up!" "Get out of here. I'm sick of looking at your face!"

"You're pathetic. Can't you do anything right?" "You're more trouble than you're worth."

"Why don't you go and find some other place to live?" "I wish you were never born."

Children believe whatever their parents tell them. Next time you lose your temper, stop for a moment, and listen to what you're saying. You might not believe your words.

Take time out. Don't take it out on your kid. Here are 12 alternatives to lashing out at your kid:

1. Put your hands over your mouth. Count to 10. Or better yet, 20.
2. Stop in your tracks. Press your lips together and breathe deeply.
3. Phone a friend.
4. Phone the prerecorded weather

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

information number.

5. Say the alphabet out loud.

6. If someone can watch the children, go outside and take a leisurely walk.

7. Splash cold water on your face, or take a warm bath.

8. Pick up a pencil and write down your thoughts.

9. Close your eyes and imagine you're hearing what your child hears.

10. Turn on the radio or TV.

11. Hug a pillow.

12. Write for prevention information: National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse, Box 2866, Chicago, Ill. 60690. You'll be glad you did.

This is a non-profit organization. The information is free for the asking, but if you are able to send even a small donation, it will be greatly appreciated.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were divorced many years ago and I was left to raise our two children with no help from him. They are now 11 and 13 years old. My mom took care of my kids all the years I worked.

I am going with a gentleman who loves me. He is 49, divorced and has two teen-age children who live with his wife, but he supports them in style. He is well-off financially and just came into some inherited money.

He has offered to marry me and buy me a home — on one condition: My children cannot live with us. My mother practically raised my kids, so he thinks they should live with her. Abby, my mother is 72 and she has worked her butt off looking after my kids, and I just can't lay that on her after all she's done for me.

I love this man and he treats me very well, but we fight about this all the time. My kids are good kids, and they come first with me. Please tell me what to do. He has given me an Aug. 15 deadline.

— ALL TORN UP
DEAR TORN: Tell the gentleman

if he wants to marry you, it's a package deal — triple or nothing. If he says, "Nothing," don't eat your heart out. Would you really want a man who asked you to abandon your children?

DEAR ABBY: I graduated from Graceland College at Lamoni, Iowa, in 1930. Twelve of us were very good friends. We all went in different directions after graduation, but wanted to keep in touch with each other, so we started a round-robin letter, and after 57 years it is still making its rounds with only six of us left!

That letter has had an interesting history. It was censored during the war, dunked in the ocean, and almost everything that could happen to a letter happened to this one.

Can any of your readers beat our record? Would we be eligible for the Guinness Book of Records?

— FLORENCE (ZIEGENHORN) BRAYTON, MUSCATINE, IOWA

DEAR FLORENCE: I don't know, but maybe we can find out. Readers?

Louise and Leonard Condit

The Condits

GOODING — Leonard and Louise Condit, Gooding, will be honored with a reception Sunday in observance of their 50th wedding anniversary.

Friends and relatives are invited to call from 3:30 to 6 p.m. at the Lincoln Inn in Gooding.

Condit and Louise Wharton were married in October 1937 in Hagerman. They lived in the Tuttle and Hagerman areas until moving to Anchorage, Alaska, in 1954. They returned to the Gooding area in 1976 after both retired.

The event will be hosted by their children, Richard Condit, Anchorage, Alaska, and Lola Methner, Bloomington, Ill. The couple has five grandchildren.

Engagements

Tracy Lancaster

Lancaster-Godat

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Lancaster, Twin Falls, announce the engagement of their daughter, Tracy, to Tony Godat, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Godat, Olympia, Wash.

Lancaster, a 1982 graduate of Twin Falls High School, graduated in 1984 from Idaho State University and is employed as a legal secretary for an Olympia law firm.

Godat, who graduated from Capitol High School in 1981, is employed by the civil engineering firm of Howard Godat and Associates.

A Sept. 26 wedding is planned. The couple will reside in Olympia.

CSI offers cashier training program

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho Cashier Training Program will again be offered with classes starting Aug. 17.

The program runs for eight weeks, including four weeks in the classroom and four weeks at a coop training site. Students will be introduced to the basics of cash register and scanner operations and will receive hands-on practice and experience.

Those interested in the program should call John Byrne at 733-9554, Ext. 241.

College coaches block NCAA cuts

By DOUG TUCKER
The Associated Press

DALLAS — Coaches in virtually every NCAA sport defeated an attempt by the NCAA Presidents Commission to cut scholarship limits Tuesday, and in an unexpected about face, Division I schools restored basketball scholarships they had voted five months ago.

Most football schools at the special cost-cutting convention also defeated proposals to reduce coaching limits and watered down a move to curtail spring practice.

The most unexpected development came in the vote on basketball scholarships. At first, by a 152-145 vote, schools sustained a ruling by the chair not to vote on whether to restore the cuts enacted last winter when the number of scholarships were reduced to 13 from 15. Then, after a two-hour lunch break, the schools voted 159-132 to reverse that vote and bring the matter to the floor. Then, by a 164-124 vote, the scholarships in both men's and women's basketball were restored to

15. "There are too many ways to save money rather than cut scholarships," said Eddie Sutton, the Kentucky basketball coach and president of the American Basketball Coaches Association. "All coaches are going to be excited when they hear about this."

Already excited were women's administrators and officials of the U.S. Olympic Committee, who had opposed a Commission plan to cut back scholarship limits in most men's and women's Division I sports. Women's groups had protested the cuts would affect women's programs disproportionately.

Many of the most significant items were acted upon in Tuesday's morning session and the convention was to conclude with a three-hour afternoon meeting. Many delegates openly questioned the wisdom of even calling this two-day meeting. "Our people figure it cost about $1.8 million to put on this cost-cutting convention," said Dave Gavitt, commissioner of the Big East Conference. "How many baseball scholarships would that pay for?"

One question in the delegates' minds was how the powerful Presidents Commission would react to its first legislative defeat. Since it was formed in 1984, the Commission had been defeated in its moves to push through reform legislation.

Chancellor John Slaughter of Maryland, chairman of the 44-member Commission, promised it would be double its efforts.

"Naturally, we're disappointed that some of the legislation we proposed has not been adopted,"

Slaughter said. "But it points out the significance of what we said yesterday — that there are significant areas of disagreement, and that's not going to change until people begin to identify some better understanding of these issues. I think also the Presidents Commission failed to do a good enough job of working with other presidents and chief executive officers to get them to understand why we felt it was important that they support our proposals. To a large extent, presidents and chancellors around the country have not followed our lead."

And that's probably our fault. The Commission will not relinquish its new position of leadership in college sports, Slaughter said.

"By all means, we were established to make sure that presidents had a voice in what happens in intercollegiate athletics. Now, that's more important than ever."

Coaches Joe Paterno of Penn State and Tom Osborne of Nebraska were among those speaking against a Pac-10 proposal to trim overall football scholarships at Division I-A schools from 95 to 90.

The proposition failed 69-39. A short time later, the convention passed a motion to indefinitely postpone consideration of a Commission measure to cut scholarships in 12 men's Division I sports and 10 women's Division I sports. Olympic officials had also opposed it.

In moving that it be body, delegates referred to the failure to cut football grants.

Delegates to last January's convention voted to reduce the number of scholarships in a football program can give in one year from 20 to 25.

Medicine now sports' biggest growth industry

By TRACY DODDS
Los Angeles Times

"...the hip bone's connected to the thigh bone, the thigh bone's connected to the knee bone, the knee bone's..."

From Dry Bones, lyrics by James Sheldon Johnson

It used to be so simple.

Athletes know now that nutrition is connected to attitude, and that attitude is connected to endurance, and that endurance is connected to muscle-building, and that muscles have to be honed and conditioned just right to respond properly to what will be asked of them, and that conditioning is connected to injury-prevention, and that injury-preventing devices such as mouthpieces just might be connected to performance.

Elite athletes want the best specialists in each field and a good physician to coordinate the whole effort. Weekend athletes want what they think elite athletes have.

As Dr. John Lombardo of Ohio's Cleveland Clinic put it, "About 110 million people exercise regularly. A lot of them are going to injure themselves. It's popular — it's trendy — to go to a sports medicine clinic."

So, the sports medicine field is booming.

But it is not without its problems. For one thing, medical professionals specializing in sports can't even agree on a good working definition of what sports medicine is. For another, there is no way of defining their ranks, knowing who is a sports medicine specialist and who is an opportunist.

And then there are the endless controversies over whose claims and discoveries and products to welcome as revolutionary breakthroughs in the field, and whose to shrug off as malarky.

But it makes for an interesting forum.

In May, when the American College of Sports Medicine held its annual convention in Las Vegas, Nev., more than 3,000 health professionals gathered to share the latest research and discuss their concerns.

They addressed everything from the very specialized "Effect of a Topically Applied Counter-Irritant Analgesic on Skin Blood Flow" to the more everyday "Field Evaluation of Injuries." From "Recreational Drug Abuse in Athletes" to "Sports Sociology: Participant and Spectator Violence."

Also at the convention were exhibitors, companies that "set up booths to demonstrate their products and services. That group ran the gamut from familiar Ben-Gay to the latest in computerized biostatistics, body composition analyzers and underwater treadmills.

To drink Gatorade or to drink one of the many other concoctions? That was one of the questions.

Which organizations to join? Which publications to buy? The Sports Medicine Digest? Optimal Health? And then which position papers and research analyses to believe?

Business is, indeed, booming. Let the buyer beware.

Jim Bush, who led the UCLA Bruins to five national Collegiate Athletic Association track and field titles when he was the coach, has always been known for his willingness to try different forms of treatments and techniques to get optimum performance from his athletes.

Lately he has been working as a consultant to individual elite athletes, and to teams, including the Los Angeles Raiders football team and the Los Angeles Dodgers baseball team.

Treating injuries like this one suffered by cyclist Danny Van Haute are only part of sports medicine nowadays

Along with his prescribed training programs, he recommends a "whole range of specialists," including chiropractors.

"I think there's a place for everybody," Bush said. "The problem we've had over the years is that there is so much jealousy among the different fields. Most doctors feel threatened by chiropractors. It scares the devil out of most of them."

"One of the reasons that our country is so far behind the European and Communist Bloc countries in sports medicine is that too many doctors here don't want to try new things or share information. People are afraid of the unknown."

Bush has been helping to choose the experts — orthopedic surgeons, podiatrists, nutritionists, psychologists, optometrists and others — who will be on the staff of a clinic called TeleSports Institute, Inc., scheduled for completion in this fall in Culver City, Calif., about 10 miles west of Los Angeles.

"We're gathering some of the best," Bush said. "But what worries all of us is that some of the other clinics might not be getting the best, and there is no way to tell."

"With the way sports medicine is growing now, there are people who know that this is the thing now. Some of them have done intense, specialized studies. Some have worked with established sports specialists or taken internships.

Some have participated in clinics at the right specialists to research and attended the conference to assign to share the latest findings."

Some haven't.

Dr. Bert Mandelbaum, an orthopedic surgeon at UCLA, explained the sports medicine intern program at the UCLA Medical Center and then warned, "There's a lot of hocus-pocus in sports. A lot of people who claim things happen and they do not. There are a lot of charlatans out there."

Historically, it has been the job of the coach to see to the needs of his players. Coaches saw a need for a trainer to tape ankles and pass out ice bags and a need for one kind of sports doctor, the orthopedic surgeon, to fix broken bones and twisted knees.

Advances in arthroscopy also helped to make for some superstar orthopedic surgeons. Suddenly, everyone with an athletic injury was looking for "the best" to get him back on the field as fast as the athletes they read about in the newspapers.

Continuous research and cooperative efforts by kinesiologists, muscle specialists, and biomechanics have helped to structure and function specialists, are expanding the field.

Mandelbaum and UCLA internist Dr. Carol Olls have been working together on a research project on stress fractures. If they can understand the causes and tendencies, they might be able to find a way to prevent that common sports injury.

"The goals in sports medicine are to maximize performance, minimize morbidity (down time) and promote prevention," Mandelbaum said.

Here is a brief look at growing specialties in sports medicine.

Sports psychology

Dr. William Morgan of the Sports Psychology Laboratory at the University of Wisconsin points up the problem of recognizing sports psychologists. "Very few of those who call themselves sports psychologists are trained in sports psychology. That seems like a paradoxical statement, but in point of fact, what we have going is a lot of people who are not psychologists but who are interested in sports."

Whitehead wins Round 4 of Ore-Ida

STANLEY (AP) — Defending champion cyclist Rebecca Twigg Whitehead, who hadn't been a contender so far in this year's Ore-Ida Women's Challenge, won Tuesday's stage of the bicycle race — the grueling 56-mile Round 4, the Horn Road Race from Lewiston to Stanley.

Suddenly, her bicycle crash in March and the lengthy fight with bronchitis seemed distant.

"Every day I feel better," Whitehead said.

"Every day, you look better," offered Celestial Seasonings' teammate Genny Brunet, who finished six seconds behind Whitehead in a pack of 14. "Now riders will be saying, 'We've got to watch out for Twigg.' A few weeks ago, they wouldn't even have considered it."

But Whitehead may have dashed any hopes of winning her fourth straight Women's Challenge Saturday when she finished sixth. Like teammates Brunet and Madonna Harris, she probably must be content to settle for stage victories.

Brunet has climbed to eighth and is 47 seconds behind 7-Eleven's Inga Thompson-Benedict.

Sjoberg lifts world high jump record

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Sweden's Patrik Sjoberg moved the world men's floor high jump record closer to the 8-foot mark Tuesday by leaping 7-foot, 11 1/4 inches in a track meet here.

Sjoberg, the 1984 Olympic gold medalist, set the previous record of 7-foot, 10 1/2 inches of the Soviet Union on Sept. 4, 1985, in Kobe, Japan.

The best American mark belongs to Jim Howard of Sugarland, Texas, who has jumped 7-8 1/2.

Paklin's old high jump mark stood for almost two years, in contrast to the previous eight years when a new standard was set nine times.

Cowboys get one victory Tuesday, about 90 percent of a second win

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — With wins being as hard to come back as they have been, it was small wonder that Twin Falls' right to league play tonight.

"How do you like our bullpen?" Federico was disappointed when an asked Hovey, referring to a place that hadn't been visited by anyone. "We're just out of pit-night. They were returning from a started making offensive noises in the sand five-day eight-run swing that took them from Minico last Friday to a six-game Utah tournament and then Twin Falls. They go on to a three-run scoring on an error."

Kelly Chatterton finally nailed the victory down but not before a bit of a battering. Rod Hansen, John Harrington, Chad Moffatt, Chris Miller, and Chiers reached him for consecutive singles to start out seventh but it still only amounted to three runs.

The nightcap was about the same as the Gems put Dave Young on the mound for the first time this year. A walk and an error put Prater and Ames on base in the first inning and Barry Williams singled both in. An inning later, Shane Quesnell singled and Boomer Walker was hit by a pitch to set up two more runs, one scoring on Matt Rasmussen's single.

Rasmussen drove in in Quesnell and Walker in the third to run the count to 6-0 before the Gems picked up their lone run against Prater.

Connors battles to Wimbledon quarterfinals

By BOB GREENE
The Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Jimmy Connors has never done things the easy way.

He is a scrambler, a battler, a singles hitter, a fighter who stuns you with a flurry of punches but who lacks a knockout blow.

So, he said, it just took him a long time Tuesday to wear down Mikael Pernfors and advance to the quarterfinals of Wimbledon.

The 34-year-old American was just taking games away from elimination when he rediscovered the magic that has carried him to two Wimbledon men's singles championships — in 1974 and 1982.

"I don't think I'm surprised that I won," he said after his 3½-hour marathon on Centre Court. "I can still play."

Tennis

And that he did, rallying for a 1-6, 7-5, 6-4, 6-2 victory over his young Swedish opponent.

Also moving into quarterfinals were three Swedes — third-seeded Mats Wilander, No. 4 Stefan Edberg, and Anders Jarryd — along with No. 2 seed Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, No. 9 Henri Leconte of France and No. 11 Pat Cash of Australia.

"I'm not out there for any other reason except that I can play tennis, but I feel the best that I did out there was grind and fight," Connors said.

It was typical of Connors, who came back from a two-set deficit to win in the quarterfinals of Wimbledon in 1981 as well.

The last American in the men's field, Connors began taking the ball earlier. His groundstrokes were deep and accurate. His volleys precise and sharp. And gone were the spate of unforced errors that had put him in such a deep hole, down two sets and 1-1 in the third.

"I don't think I've been that far down here and won before," Connors said. "The last time I was so embarrassed, I was out there being kicked and I had to do something to stop that."

He picked up pace, going to the net more, putting on more and more pressure until his opponent left the court a loser and Connors had his 77th singles victory at Wimbledon.

"Now I'm in the hunt" for the title, Connors said after advancing to a quarterfinal meeting against Yugoslavian's Slobodan Zivjovnick.

But if I don't go out there and perform well tomorrow, that's what I'll be all about."

It was vintage Connors, the man who has won a men's record 105 tournaments in his career and who now has reached the Wimbledon quarterfinals 14 times.

For Zivjovnick, Tuesday's 6-2, 6-4, 7-5 victory over Australian Peter Doohan had a huge of revenge. In the second round, Doohan upset defending champion Boris Becker of Germany, the Yugoslav's friend and frequent doubles partner.

Besides the Connors-Zivjovnick match, other pairings Wednesday will pit Wilander against Cash, Jarryd against Edberg and Leconte against Lendl.

In the women's fourth round, in addition to Navratilova, the winners were No. 2 Steffi Graf of West Germany, No. 3 Chris Evert of the United States, No. 4 Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, No. 5 Pam Shriver of the U.S., No. 6 Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina, No. 7 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany and unseeded Dianne Bolestad of Australia.

Evert and Shriver almost didn't make it.

"I've had one struggle," Evert said after defeating South Africa's Rosalyn Fairbank 6-2, 7-5. It was her first of the tournament that was not in straight sets. "It's not as though I've gone three sets every match. It's not that I'm not pleased with the way I'm playing, I'm just not pleased with my concentration level as far as closing out a match."

Shriver was down 1-4 in the final set and fought off two match points before outlasting No. 16 Sylvia Hanika of West Germany 6-7, 7-5, 6-3.

Wednesday's matches will pit Navratilova against Balazsar, Evert against Kohde-Kilsch, Shriver against Sukova and Sabatini against Graf.

Pernfors, who was 10 years old when Connors won his first Wimbledon crown in 1974, was superb in the first 2½ sets, winning 16 of the first 19 games.

"I didn't do anything bad at the beginning," Connors said. "I was just getting beat."

Pernfors was finding the passing lanes, hitting topspin lobs, catching Connors at the baseline with perfectly placed drop shots.

Roberts to coach at SUSC

CEDAR CITY, Utah (AP) — Former Dixie College and Burley High School basketball coach Nell Roberts has accepted the head coaching job at Southern Utah State College, a newspaper columnist says.

Roberts told the Deseret News although a contract has not been signed, he has been offered the SUSC job and has accepted. An official announcement is expected Wednesday at a press conference in Salt Lake City.

"I feel like the new kid on the block and it's exciting," Roberts said.

A former basketball coach at Skyline High School in Salt Lake, Roberts' last coaching job was at Dixie College, where in his final year with the school, 1984-85, the Rebels won the national junior college championship.

Roberts was the head coach at Burley High during the 1969-70 season.

Following that season, Roberts applied for the Weber State College coaching position after he had been left for New Mexico following the resignation of Frank Arnold.

At SUSC, Roberts will inherit a progressive program. The school is moving to Division I next year, and "they're putting a lot of marbles in that basket," he said.

"I really feel that the commitment of SUSC officials, particularly college president Gerald R. Sherratt, played a major role in his decision to seek the coaching position, Roberts said. He said he feels he'll get support from Sherratt and other administrators to build a successful Division I program.

"The attitude is 'Let's make a go of it.' The emphasis is on 'we,'" he said.

As for his contract, Roberts said, "I'd prefer a single year. If I go there and they don't like me, I don't want them to feel obligated to keep me around." If all parties are happy after the first year, then they can sit down and talk about a multi-year pact, he said.

Packers trade for Woodley

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The Green Bay Packers on Tuesday acquired quarterback David Woodley from the Pittsburgh Steelers in return for a 1988 undrafted conditional draft choice.

Woodley, 31, was listed on the Steelers' reserve-retired list last season. He played for Pittsburgh in 1984 and 1985 after spending 1980-1983 in the NFL.

His career totals include 1,300 attempts and 687 completions for 52.9 percentage; 8,558 yards, 48 touchdowns and 63 interceptions for a rating of 65.5. He has played in 58 National Football League games in his career, 51 as a starter.

Woodley was an eighth-round draft pick by Miami in 1980 from Louisiana State.

Umpire suffers broken leg

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Home-plate umpire Billy Munsee suffered a broken right fibula Monday night after colliding with Atlanta Braves pitcher Zane Smith.

The San Francisco Giants were trying a suicide squeeze in the fifth inning of the game when the collision occurred. When the Giants' Earl Williams laid down a bunt toward the pitcher's mound, Smith grabbed the ball with his glove hand and raced the plate to cut off Joel Youngblood, who was sprinting in from third.

The 205-pound pitcher tagged Youngblood, but then smashed into the umpire, who lay on the ground for a good five minutes before staggering to his feet with the help of Giants catcher Bob Brenly and making the call.

Munsee, Tripp have fast times

JACKPOT — Kelly Munsee of DeLo and Evan Tripp of Wells, Nev., registered the two fastest times in the Second Series Team Roping Sunday at Cactus Pete's Desert Arena.

Munsee and Tripp clocked a time of 42.20 seconds in the 3-for-55 competition, then came back to get a 6.59 in the 3-for-55 competition.

Some 100s participated in the competition.

AL: Guidry blanks Jays; Yanks 2 up in East

TORONTO (AP) — The lightning may not flash as brightly but the skinned left-hander from Louisiana can still come up with a little night magic.

On Tuesday night, Guidry showed a bit of the old brilliance as he teamed with reliever Tim Lincecum on a seven-hitter and lead the New York Yankees to a 4-0 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Guidry, 1-3, checked the Blue Jays six singles and did not allow a runner to reach second base. He struck out nine and walked one batter before handing the ball to Stoddard with two out in the eighth.

"That was a Guidry-type performance, no question," said Yankee Manager Lou Piniella.

Piniella said he pulled Guidry after his 10th pitch, which was bordering on the limit he had set for his veteran left-hander. "He went to a lot of hard stuff early and had a good assortment of pitches," Piniella said.

Guidry cautioned reporters not to get overly excited about his outing. "I didn't feel I had great stuff when I was warming up," Guidry said. "That often happens. I'd hate to say I'm back. One good game doesn't make a season. But I feel good."

Baseball

The loss for the Blue Jays was their third in a row, marking their longest losing streak of the season, and dropped them two games back in the American League East Division.

In his previous four starts, Guidry had not lasted more than six innings. His last victory occurred on Sept. 20, 1986.

"I had good velocity," he said. "The slider wasn't there the first couple of innings."

His job after that fiasco last night is a 15-14 New York victory was to pitch a solid game right away, take the momentum away from them early."

Seattle 5

Texas 2

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Mark Langston threw a six-hitter while striking out 11 and John Moses drove in three runs Tuesday night as the Seattle Mariners beat Texas 5-2 to snap a five-game Rangers winning streak.

Langston, 10-6, went the distance for the eighth time in 17 starts and increased his American League leading strikeout total to 137.

Texas starter Mike Loynd, 1-4, gave up a second-inning home run to Alvin Davis, his sixth, then was chased when Seattle scored three times in the fifth.

Minnesota 3

Kansas City 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bert Blyleven pitched a six-hitter over 8 1/2 innings and Kirby Puckett hit his 14th home run Tuesday night, pacing Minnesota over the Kansas City Royals 3-1 and ending the Twins' five-game losing streak.

Blyleven, 7-6, allowed one run, six singles, struck out two and walked one.

An error by shortstop Greg Gagne allowed the Royals to score their only run in the ninth, preventing Blyleven from getting his 56th career shutout.

Bosley singled in the ninth and Jackson scored on Gagne's error of Jamie Quirk's grounder.

Jeff Reardon got the final out for his 16th save.

Blyleven, who set a major-league record last season by allowing 50 homers, did not allow a home run for only the second time in 18 starts this season.

Twins left fielder Dan Gladden made two running catches behind Blyleven, crushing into the wall in foul territory to catch a Jim Eisenreich drive in the second inning and robbing Willie Wilson of a hit in the fifth inning.

Chicago 12

Oakland 3

CHICAGO (AP) — Ivan Calderon's two-run single capped a five-run fourth inning Tuesday night to lead Sox to a 12-3 victory over the Oakland A's.

It was the White Sox' second straight over the A's and marked the first time since May 29-30 that they had won two games in a row.

Nielsen, 3-2, picked up his first victory in his third start for the White Sox, allowing six hits in eight innings. Jim Winn pitched the ninth for the White Sox.

Boston 13

Baltimore 9

BOSTON (AP) — Dwight Evans, Wade Boggs and Mike Greenwell keyed a 17-hit attack with home runs Tuesday night as the Boston Red Sox rallied for a 13-9 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Evans hit a three-run homer; his 13th, high over the screen in left off starter Mark Williamson, 2-6, in the first.

Then, after Bill Buckner put Boston ahead 8-7 with a two-run single in the fifth, Boggs hit a two-run homer, his 13th, and Greenwell followed with his ninth homer off reliever Dave Schmidt in the sixth.

Detroit 8

Milwaukee 5

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Darrell Evans capped a four-run third inning with a bases-loaded double and Bill Madlock and Matt Nokes homered Tuesday night as the Detroit Tigers beat the Milwaukee Brewers 8-5 for their 30th victory in their last 43 games. Madlock hit his sixth homer of the season in the first off Mark Clear, 5-3, who was making his first major league start after 425 relief appearances since 1979.

Lou Whitaker, Madlock and Kirk Gibson singled in succession to begin the third and make it 2-0. Clear then walked Alan Trammell to load the bases and one out later, walked Pat Sheridan to force in the third run.

Evans then doubled to give the Tigers a 5-0 lead for starter Dan Petry, 5-4.

Cleveland 2

California 1

CLEVELAND (AP) — Phil Niekro gained his 37th career victory as the Cleveland Indians ended an eight-game losing streak with a 2-1 decision over California Tuesday night, handing the Angels their first loss in nine games.

Niekro, 6-7, scattered seven hits, struck out four and walked one before needing last-out relief help from Scott Bailes.

Bailes gave up an infield single to George Hendrick with the bases loaded before gaining his sixth save.

NL: Cincinnati shades Houston in showdown

CINCINNATI (AP) — Manager Pete Rose figures the Cincinnati Reds brushed the Houston Astros out of first place.

Kurt Stillwell scored from second base on Tracy Jones' infield single in the bottom of the 10th inning Tuesday night to give the Reds a 5-4 victory over Houston in a showdown for first place in the National League West.

Jones beat out a grounder to shortstop Dickie Thon and Stillwell kept running, easily beating the relay home with a head-first slide to leave Cincinnati 1 1/2 games ahead of Houston.

"We stole the game," Rose said. "You don't see many games end that way. It's a great way to win a game, and to walk and an infield hit. It was just good, aggressive play."

Stillwell and Kal Daniels drew one-out walks from Larry Andersen, 5-4, the third Houston pitcher. Terry Francisco fouled out before Jones hit his high-hop grounder to Thon.

Umpire Dutch Rennett called Jones safe at first on a close play, and a bases-and-an-infield hit didn't have a chance to get Stillwell after stretching for the throw.

Astros Manager Hal Lanier angrily disputed the call with Rennett. "He said he got the play (called) right," Lanier said. "That's all he said. Of course, I disagreed with it."

"That's a hell of a way to lose a ballgame, an honest mistake."

Stillwell pinch hit in the 10th for reliever John Franco, 5-2, the fifth Reds pitcher. The left-hander pitched two perfect innings to get the win.

The Reds took a 4-1 lead as right-hander Mike Scott struggled in the first four innings, but the Astros upped Billy Hatcher's singles and topped the sixth-inning homers by Jose Cruz and Alan Ashby off Bill Gullickson to tie the score 4-4 tie.

Los Angeles 4

Houston 0

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Orel Hershiser pitched a seven-hitter and Steve Sax singled in two runs as Los Angeles defeated San Diego 4-0 Tuesday night.

Hershiser, 9-7, struck out seven and walked one in winning for the fifth time in his last six decisions. The right-hander's 11th career shutout tied him with teammate Fernando Valenzuela and Pittsburgh's Rick Reuschel for the National League lead in complete games with six.

San Diego starter Dave Dravecky, 3-7, surrendered six hits and four runs in six innings. He set up the Dodgers' third run with a throwing error on Pedro Guerrero's infield hit in the sixth inning, allowing Guerrero to move to second.

Montreal 5

Chicago 4

MONTREAL (AP) — Dennis Martinez pitched seven-hit ball over 8 1/2 innings and struck out eight as Montreal snapped a three-game losing streak with a 5-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs Tuesday night in a tight-marred game.

Martinez, who walked one, won his third straight decision without a loss since being called up from Class AAA Indianapolis on June 8. The right-hander spent parts of 11 seasons with Baltimore, winning 108 games, before he was dealt to Montreal last June.

Martinez left after yielding Manny Mota's pinch single and Bob McClure came on and allowed a two-run pinch homer to Rafael Palmeiro. Tim Burke relieved McClure and got one out before Jeff Parrett recorded the last out when Keith Moreland popped to second with the bases loaded.

Philadelphia 6

Pittsburgh 4

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Juan Samuel's leadoff home run and Von Hayes' RBI triple keyed a three-run first inning that sparked Philadelphia to a 6-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Tuesday night for the Phillies' fourth consecutive victory.

Kevin Gross, 6-7, allowed three hits over seven innings. The Pirates scored two runs in the ninth on R.J. Reynolds' RBI double and a run-scoring single by Mike LaValliere off reliever Kent Tekulve. Steve Bedrosian came on to get the last two outs for his 20th save. It was also Bedrosian's 13th save in 13 straight appearances, extending the major-league record he established Monday night.

Doug Drabek, 1-7, pitched six innings for the Pirates, giving up five runs and seven hits as the Pirates lost their third straight game.

New York 3

St. Louis 2

NEW YORK (AP) — Howard Johnson singled home pinch-runner Len Dykstra from second base with one out in the ninth inning Tuesday night, giving Dwight Gooden and the New York Mets a 3-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Mets won for just the second time in eight games with St. Louis this season to move within 6 1/2 games of the first-place Cardinals in the National League East.

Gary Carter led off the ninth by drawing starter Greg Mathews' second walk of the game. Kevin McReynolds then had his first sacrifice of the season against reliever Bill Dawley, moving Dykstra to second. After Ricky Horton intentionally walked Lee Mazzilli, Johnson lined a single into the left-field corner.

Gooden, 5-1, allowed eight hits, struck out one and walked two. He has won five straight decisions against the Cardinals since April 24, 1986.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

"We should not let our fears hold us back from pursuing our hopes."
— John F. Kennedy.

Players who fear leading away from kings will have trouble with today's hand. One moment of indecision from West is all that South needs before he sneaks off with today's game.

North's reverse of two diamonds was a one-round force, and when South chose his most descriptive rebid, he became declarer at the no-trump game.

West made the normal lead from his "longest and strongest" and dummy's spade jack held. When South continued with the spade king, First, he didn't want to establish South's queen and 10, and second, he didn't want to face the problem of finding the right shift.

That's all the time that South needed. He rattled off six club winners and the diamond ace, claiming game and rubber for his side.

When South continues with the spade king at trick two, West should concern himself with only one question: "Who has the queen of clubs?"

Since South didn't start the clubs at trick two, it was a virtual certainty that the suit was solid. And with six club winners and the diamond ace for South, West couldn't afford to duck the spade king.

Since the spade king looks strongly like trick number nine for declarer, West should grab it and switch desperately to hearts. East wins and returns the 10, and the four heart winners stop the game.
