2 Blaine County men surrender seized plane

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES and BART JANSEN Times-News writers

TWIN FALLS — Two Blaine County officials whose airplane was seized by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service have given up their fight to get the plane back. "The case has been closed and the plane has been forfeited," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Kim Lindquist Monday. "No criminal charges were filed in the case and both sides say the case is closed." Lindquist said the agreement was reached last Thursday, before the U.S. Attorney's Office was required to file a civil complaint alleging why the plane was seized by the INS. Blaine County Commissioner Robert Gardner and Zoning Commissioner Nick Purdy, who both own the Cessna 210 Centurion, had petitioned to get the plane back. But attorney Keith Roark, who represented each official, said Monday that this petition has been withdrawn and the matter ended. "We discussed costs involved and other prospects of the situation, and reached an agreement with the U.S. Attorney to withdraw our petition," Roark said. Roark said his clients are giving up the plane. Lindquist said there will be no further action taken against the Blaine County pair. No criminal charges were filed against either official, despite an affidavit outlining reasons for seizing the plane that included it being used to transport illegal aliens. The plane seizure was a civil action. A U.S. magistrate in Pocatello signed the order for seizure of the plane and it was flown to Boise on May 20. INS seized the 1976 white and yellow aircraft at the Pibaco landing field, alleging that it had been used for transporting illegal aliens into Blaine County. The affidavit filed in the U.S. District Court in Boise by INS agents alleged the plane was used by Gardner to fly to Ylanilla, Nev. and pick up three illegal alien workers after the car in which they

Cow viruses may have AIDS role

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal research agencies should investigate the potential role, if any, that certain cow viruses may play in causing or promoting the development of AIDS, a public interest group said Monday. AIDS specialists say they have no evidence whatsoever that cow viruses have a role in the disease. Some animal viruses are distantly related to the one believed to cause AIDS, and are being studied to see if they can provide clues to combating the human disease agent, they say. However, the Foundation on Economic Trends said the government should sponsor research to resolve any question concerning the animal viruses and AIDS, and to find

North breaks silence on Contra affair today

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Lt. Col. Oliver North breaks his public silence today, facing congressional questioning that is expected to home in quickly on whether President Reagan knew about the diversion of arms-scale money to Nicaragua's Contra rebels. North will speak publicly for the first time since the affair broke seven months ago, answering questions from chief House committee counsel John Nields, who also plans to introduce more than 200 documents as evidence during his day-long direct examination. "Oliver North is the man who made things happen from Iran to Central America," Sen. Paul Trible, R-Va., who is to be one of the principal questioners at the hearing, said Monday. "He knows what happened. And, hopefully, he will tell us the full story."

"He's got a great deal to tell us," added Rep. Dick Cheney, R-Wyo., another designated questioner. "If he's able to look back when it's all over, and this will probably have been the most significant week" of the hearings. The session, beginning the eighth week of Iran-Contra hearings, will be carried live on the major television networks. Rather than questioning North chronologically about the Iran arms sales and the Contra aid network, Nields plans to focus on specific issues. House committee spokesman Robert Havel said Monday. "Near the top of the list is the one matter seen as potentially the most explosive for Reagan: whether he was aware that money from the sale of weapons to Iran was being funneled to Central America to arm the Contras at a time when such aid was barred by Congress. Reagan has repeatedly said he didn't know about the diversion. But a weekend poll said a majority of Americans don't accept that. A poll in U.S. News & World Report found that 57 percent of Americans believe Reagan's denials are a lie. However, another of the principal North questioners, Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, said Monday the panels should be careful not to place too much weight on Reagan's knowledge of the diversion. "I think the White House has, in a skillful political way, narrowed it down to that — as though if the answer to that is no, that's all there is to it," Mitchell said. "The significant questions are much broader than that, and they go to the rule of law. The executive branch must faithfully execute it, not seek to evade it." Also high on Nields' list of issues is the November-1985 shipment of Hawk anti-aircraft missiles from Israel to Iran, a shipment carried out with heavy assistance by the Central Intelligence Agency but without written authorization from Reagan, according to earlier testimony. And Nields will question North closely about efforts a year later by top Reagan officials to cover up government knowledge of that operation, Havel said. It is also known that several Middle Eastern arms middlemen were trying to arrange Iranian arms deals as early as 1983, and ABC News' chief, D-Maine, said Monday the panels should be careful not to place

Navy planes practice escort duty but stay clear of Iran

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Navy A-6 warplanes flew a training mission near the Persian Gulf over the weekend in preparation for escorting oil tankers, but they kept away from an Iranian anti-ship missile battery on the coast, Reagan administration sources said Monday. Planes from the aircraft carrier Constellation flew the exercise as the damaged frigate USS Stark left the gulf region, according to White House and State Department officials. Pentagon officials said the Stark is on route to its home port in Florida. They declined, however, to give its exact location or say when it passed through the Strait of Hormuz at the mouth of the Persian Gulf. U.S. intelligence photographed a Chinese-made Silkworm missile last Friday at Kuehstak, one of two hardened bunkers the Iranians have built along the strait, according to Pentagon and State Department officials who declined to provide intelligence also detected a mobile radar unit and generators at the site, leading some analysts to conclude that Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime might be preparing to fire a Silkworm for the first time since a successful test last February, said State Department officials.

But Saturday morning, the missile had disappeared along with the radar, apparently taken to the nearby port of Bandar Abbas, where Iran is believed to be storing the 20 or so missiles U.S. officials say have been purchased from China, said a Pentagon source. At the White House, spokesman Marlín Fitzwater disputed a Washington Post report that the U.S. fighters had been scrambled Iran's air space. Fitzwater said the mission was related to the departure of the Stark, which has had a Bahrain for repairs before it sailed for Mayport, Fla. "It had nothing to do with the Silkworms," said Fitzwater adding that it was not meant to be provocative and did not infringe on Iran's air space.

U.S. vessels cruising entire Persian Gulf

The Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain — U.S. Navy ships are cruising the whole Persian Gulf, including the northern oil limits zone declared by Iraq, as they prepare to protect 11 Kuwaiti tankers flying the American flag, slipping officials report. The exclusion area extends 70 miles from Kharg Island, Iran's main export oil terminal and a regular target of Iraqi air raids in the war that began in September 1980. Iran has threatened to attack the American warships and U.S. officials will not say where they are patrolling. A shipping official based in the area, who like the others spoke anonymously, said they're everywhere in the gulf. Lt. Cmdr. Stephen Honda, a Navy spokesman, said only that the warships "operate in the gulf and the Gulf of Oman in international waters." The fleet is called the Middle East Force and now includes nine vessels. One U.S. vessel seen inside the exclusion zone, where Iraq's air force also has concentrated its attacks on tankers, is the missile frigate Reid, sister ship of the USS Stark.

An Iraqi warplane hit the Stark with missiles May 17 about 40 miles south of the exclusion zone, killing 37 American sailors. Iraq apologized, saying the Iraqi pilot mistook the Stark for an Iranian warship. Gulf-based Arab diplomats confirmed the incident and other U.S. warships, which did not identify, had entered the exclusion zone in recent weeks. They said the American vessels sailed into the area with Iraq's knowledge under an understanding said to have been reached after the attack on the Stark. Political considerations often proving beneficial for INEL

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series of reports by Chris Sivula, science reporter for the Tri-City Herald in Tri-Cities, Wa., that explores the competitive forces between the Hanford Operations in Richland, Wa., and the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory in Idaho Falls. By CHRIS SIVULA, Special to the Times-News IDAHO FALLS — It is not included in the written record of decision, but when the Department of Energy selects a site for a new project, political considerations are made increasingly, that's a factor that plays well for the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, headquartered in this southeast Idaho community. "We recognize that public support — and that includes political support — plays a role in getting some projects," said Karen Wheelless, DOE spokeswoman at Hanford who is on temporary assignment in Washington, D.C. "That's a fact of life." Robert Rossell, assistant manager for administration at Hanford, explained the importance of politics this way: "Obviously, we want to try to avoid situations where, politically, we don't have the strength to pull it off. Just like we want to avoid situations where we don't have the technical capability or strength to compete." In Idaho's corner is Sen. James McClure, a conservative Republican first elected to the House of Representatives in 1972. He is a powerful member of the Senate, even with Democrats in control. Until last November, he was chairman of the Energy and Water Development Committee, which must approve much of DOE's budget. He remains the committee's ranking minority member. Washington's senior senator, Dan Evans, is still serving his first term as is Sen. Brock Adams. Even if DOE's selection of Hanford as a high-level waste repository hadn't alienated the state's congressional delegation, no one representing Washington can match McClure's political clout. If a major siting decision were made today, there is little question that political factors would weigh heavily in Idaho's favor. McClure acknowledges that. "It would be true in the respect only," McClure said. "Whenever there is a siting decision, the political climate does weigh into the equation." It could be argued the political side of the equation has increased under Energy Secretary John S.

Meese investments pay off

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III made nearly $40,000 in profits from some two dozen speculative one-day stock trades in just 19 months, but none of Meese's money was funneled into investment-pinged Welsh Corb attorney general's lawyers said Monday.

Meese's money was invested in a variety of large and small companies in 23 trades beginning in July 1985 out the extent to which humans are exposed to them.

Jeremy Rifkin, the foundation's president and a frequent critic of genetic engineering and federal research policy, said not enough has been done to restate the relationship between animal viruses and the one that causes acquired-immune-deficiency syndrome.

"It's truly amazing what we don't know about animal viruses and that getting this information has not been given a priority," he said.
Dr. Bernard Moss, a virus specialist at the National Institutes of Health, said that while the AIDS virus is in the same family as lentiviruses and other animal disease agents—such as bovine leukemia virus, it still is very different.

Asked about the possibility of cows, sheep or horse viruses jumping into humans, Moss said: "I don't believe this could have happened."
AIDS is believed caused by an

and in each instance, his investment manager bought and sold the stock on the same day, according to a notebook of information compiled by the attorney's general's personal lawyers.

The roughly $39,500 in profits came on an investment by Meese of about $50,000. He profited on 18 of the one-day transactions and lost money on the other five.
Meese has been under fire from unusual virus called human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, which slowly destroys the body's disease-fighting immune system. The virus, previously termed HTLV-3 or LAV, is spread through contact with blood, semen and other bodily fluids from infected persons.

The foundation called upon the heads of the Agriculture Department, the National Institutes of Health and the Centers for Disease Control to take action to investigate any connection between these viruses and AIDS.

Rifkin said he was particularly concerned about bovine immunodeficiency-like virus, or BIV, and a cow cancer agent called bovine leukemia virus, or BLV, as well as others. In the so-called lentivirus family of animal disease agents.
The petition said some of these viruses are genetically similar to the AIDS virus, which scientists believe is the first lentivirus known to affect man, and cause similar diseases in Congress since last April to disclose where his investment manager channeled his money. The attorney general currently is under criminal investigation by independent counsel James McKay, who is trying to determine whether Meese's investment manager, W. Franklin Chinn, funneled any of the attorney general's money to Welsh Corb. Meese has acknowledged interceding on the company's behalf when he was White House counselor in 1982.

Animals. Humans have extensive contact with cows and bovine products, Rifkin said, yet no one knows how extensively these viruses infect and spread to people.
Authorities should find out if these viruses contaminate fetal bovine serum, a preparation from cows widely used for growing cell tissue cultures, Rifkin said.

In addition, stocks of various human vaccines that are made from these cultures and the smallpox vaccine, which is derived from a cow virus, should be checked for possible contamination with animal disease viruses, he said.

Dr. Robert Gallo of the National Cancer Institute, a co-discoverer of the AIDS virus, and others believe HIV is related to a monkey virus that mutated and crossed over into humans. This monkey virus is more closely related to HIV than any other animal virus and does not cause disease in man, he says.

reported Monday that National Security Council and Pentagon officials offered that year to provide Iran with parts for F14 jets, helicopters, missiles and other weaponry in return for Iranian uranium enrichment. William Buckley and other American hostages in Lebanon.
North also agreed to provide Iranians with British, American and Soviet military technicians to service the equipment and train the Iranians, ABC reported. The network, quoting unspecified and unidentified sources, said the technicians came from a mercenary recruiting firm in London that North also used to aid the Contras in Nicaragua. The report was unclear as to when the "weapons and mercenaries were supplied to Iran."

In addition to the central factual questions in the affair, the question of North's own credibility is on the line as he testifies under a grant of immunity that prevents his answers from being used against him in any criminal case.
The U.S. News poll found that 59 percent of Americans don't believe North will tell the complete truth to the committee. Also, 48 percent said they believe North is being "up" to be the guy to protect administration superiors, the magazine reported.

The poll found that 55 percent of Americans believe the hearings so far have brought out evidence of "serious wrongdoings" on the part of administration officials. Thirty-three percent believe the events involve "minor misdeeds."

The sampling, conducted June 30 and July 1, included 1,016 people, with a statistical margin of error of plus or minus 4 percentage points.
Direct questioning of North by Nields is expected to last all day Tuesday and perhaps even longer on Wednesday. House minority counsel George Van Cleve and Senate chief counsel Arthur L. Liman will pick up the thread.
Members of the investigating panel may also be on the scene on Thursday, with two hours each allocated to the House and Senate principal questioners. Taking the first turns for the Senate panel will be Mitchell and Tribe. The main House questioners will be Reps. Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., and Cheney.
Probably beginning sometime Thursday afternoon, the other members of the two investigating panels will be able to ask questions. Under an arrangement with North's defense lawyer, Brendan Sullivan, most of the testimony will be given in a first time, brief private deposition with North, last week was limited to questions about his contacts with Reagan and Reagan's possible knowledge of the disclosure of his activities.
The arrangement also stated that the committee's plans not to keep North on the stand beyond Friday.

Lindquist said the plane is now the property of the government to sell or do with as it pleases. INS officials have said the plane may be sold at auction.

The affidavit also alleged that Gardner had earlier paid another $10 million to bring the plane from Mexico. An INS representative explained shortly after the seizure that the government has the authority to "take any conveyance of a person who is in the country illegally."

The balance used to be in Hanford's favor, and the legacy continues to have an effect. INEL has about 10,000 DOE-related jobs, but the gap has been closing. In 1976 and 1978, Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., was chairman of the Energy Committee and Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., chaired the Appropriations Committee.

Since then, "There's been a switch in the power of the Senate of the United States and that makes some difference," certainly said Tim Hopkins, an Idaho Falls attorney and member of the Chamber of Commerce's INEL committee.

In August 1985 and October 1986, but has yet to visit Hanford.

Political opposition to Hanford in the northwest continued to the Republican Party's control of the Senate. It was the key issue in the Senate race that ousted incumbent Republican Slade Gorton.
Sam Volpentest, executive vice president of the Tri-City Industrial Development Council and lobbyist for Hanford's interests for more than 20 years, thinks DOE's handling of the high-level nuclear waste issue is blameworthy.

"The one edge I think (INEL) has is the fact that DOE headquarters would have more reason to put projects there—because they (DOE) have taken such a hammering from Washington over the waste issue," he said.
Volpentest said DOE brought on its own problems when it simultaneously announced last May collection of Hanford and one of three potential high-level nuclear waste sites and its decision to stop looking for an eastern repository site.

The announcement was guaranteed to create widespread suspicion about DOE's repository search, according to Volpentest. "It wasn't the delegation's fault."

DOE sources believe Wade is being groomed to take over Foley's post when he retires this summer.
Rep. Sid Morrison, R-Wash., whose district includes Hanford, believes reports of Hanford's demise in the eyes of top-level DOE officials are exaggerated.

"I see very strong support for the things we are doing at Hanford," he said. "We may have to work a little harder at bringing programs to the area, but the basic appreciation for the role Hanford has played... is still very much there."

Morrison said lobbying by the present Hanford family and other Tri-City interests is starting to change the political climate, but adds that the effort still "suffers at the hands of some of our good friends in King County."

By contrast, political support for INEL is "unambiguous," according to McClure. The congressional delegation and state and local elected officials are fully behind INEL.

Washington's delegation is split on Hanford issues, partly based on local, urban constituencies opposed to the Reagan administration's weapons policy and to nuclear activity in general.

Gorton's replacement, Sen. Brock Adams, D-Wash., may be the biggest obstacle to what may be Hanford's best chance for the future—a conversion to a "weapons-grade" Public Power and Supply System plant No. 1 to defense production.

Adams' campaign against the conversion, pledging to oppose it until he turns the mothballed reactor into a "bomb factory," is "Last week, Morrison said DOE is expressing diminishing interest in the conversion because of opposition in the Northwest."

There were doubts both at Hanford and INEL that DOE will be unwilling to face strong political opposition to the WPPSS conversion when other states are ready to welcome a new reactor.
And even if Washington's delegation were solidly behind Hanford, there is still the question of whether state's delegation has the political support.

tion were solidly behind Hanford, there is still the question of whether state's delegation has the political muscle.

The balance used to be in Hanford's favor, and the legacy continues to have an effect. INEL has about 10,000 DOE-related jobs, but the gap has been closing. In 1976 and 1978, Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., was chairman of the Energy Committee and Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., chaired the Appropriations Committee.

Since then, "There's been a switch in the power of the Senate of the United States and that makes some difference," certainly said Tim Hopkins, an Idaho Falls attorney and member of the Chamber of Commerce's INEL committee.
"We have two senators at the moment who are very supportive, and one of them is very pro-INEL in the field that very much to the Department of Energy."

Evans and McClure insist his support for INEL doesn't come at the expense of other DOE sites, saying, "I've tried hard to maintain a kind of equality."
In fact, Hanford's budget grew steadily while McClure cut the Energy Committee, and Hanford hasn't lost every contest for projects.

INEL had pushed hard to obtain the status of a major reactor design, where a space reactor design for the so-called "Star Wars" program will be tested, but Hanford was selected.

If the WPPSS conversion proves to be a cost-effective way of replacing DOE's outdated defense facilities, McClure said he would support the project over a new reactor at INEL. With the SIS now headed for Idaho, McClure said he may well be an ally for new Hanford programs.

"I'm glad to hear him say that," said Morrison, who predicts more cooperation and less rivalry between the two sites. For instance, the SIS will depend partly on plutonium from Hanford and there already is cooperation in breeder reactor research.

"I get the impression from hearings that they are going to be very eager to make this dependency work," Morrison said. "I'm hoping we can find more projects where we can work together."

And Hanford Manager Mike Lawrence added another note of optimism during an informal gathering with the press earlier this month when he said Hanford's interests are being protected in both the state Legislature and Congress.

Lawrence said more recently that he wasn't overly concerned by actions last week in the Senate Appropriations and Armed Services committees, which could stall, or perhaps end, DOE's plans to restart the N Reactor.

"I'm optimistic, but obviously we had some setbacks lately," he said. "I would say the long-term future of the (Past Flux Test Facility) and the Fuel Cycle Plant, all the plants of (Battle-Northwest), the opportunity for N Reactor to be replaced WNP1 are all positive factors."

During recent environmental hearings on the Special Issues Separations plant, Lt. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, acting as the state's representative to the federal review of the proposed plutonium production facility. Political considerations opposed to have been sent to Iran. In addition to the central factual questions in the affair, the question of North's own credibility is on the line as he testifies under a grant of immunity that prevents his answers from being used against him in any criminal case.

Today, sunny and warmer. Highs 75 to 80. Tonight, increasing clouds. Lows 40 to 45. Wednesday, cooler and partly cloudy with a chance of showers. Highs in the 70s.
Northern Utah and Nevada:
Utah—Fair through tonight. Fair south and partly cloudy north Wednesday. A little warmer north today than cooler again Wednesday. Lows tonight 50 to 60. Highs tonight in the 80s north and upper 80s and 90s south and Wednesday in the upper 70s to low 80s north and mid-80s to upper 90s south.
Nevada—Variable high clouds today. Fair tonight. Mostly sunny on Wednesday with occasional high clouds east. Overnight lows in the mid-40s to mid-50s. Highs generally in the 60s.
Summary:
Cooler than normal temperatures continued across Idaho Monday. Temperatures at mid-stations were mostly in the 70s with some 50s and 60s reported in the northern part of the state.
Winds over the state ranged from cloudy at some southeastern and northern locations to sunny across most of the rest.
Winds were light at most locations.
The warmest temperature in the state Monday was 84 degrees at Emmett while Deadwood had the low of 27 degrees.
The agricultural outlook for southern Idaho shows conditions are fair through the period with most showers or thunder showers confined to the mountains and late today and Wednesday. There will be no significant precipitation in the valleys. Irrigation demands will be near normal as temperatures continue relatively cool. Winds for spraying today and Wednesday will be northwesterly to 15 mph in western Idaho and southerly to westerly in central Idaho with occasionally higher gusts.

The extended outlook for southern Idaho, Thursday through Saturday, shows mostly fair and warmer Thursday through Saturday. Highs Thursday and Friday in the low 80s warming into the mid-80s Saturday. Lows in the 50s.

Elsewhere in the nation Monday the highest temperature was 110 degrees at Griggs, Ariz., and the lowest was 33 degrees at Eminon, Colo.

Jonah Umstead displays his Bronze Star, Purple Heart After 43 years, ex-GI gets overdue medals

EWING TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — The last time Jonah Umstead saw his old Army sergeant, Tommy McGowan, was wounded badly and on a stretcher headed for a field hospital in northern France.

Across 43 years and 3,000 miles, the 66-year-old McGowan recently tracked down Umstead and saw to it that he got the medals for saving McGowan's life on a snowy day in January, 1945.

"You think somebody's dead, and after all those years you don't expect this to happen," Umstead said Monday.

He and McGowan are planning a reunion this summer on the East Coast, with a third member of their old unit.

Umstead remembers receiving orders to pull out of the stone house he was occupying with about a half-dozen other men.

"So we pulled back and McGowan was left up there. We didn't really think we'd get the medals," Umstead said. "That's when I decided we better go back up and get him."

He said another soldier suggested wearing a medic's armbands, but Umstead stuck a 45-caliber bullet in his belt just in case. The Americans then climbed the hill, knocked at the door and found the house filled with German soldiers. McGowan, dazed and badly wounded, sat in a corner.

"They agreed we could take him back with us. I imagine if they thought we were soldiers, they would have probably gotten pretty sore at us," Umstead said.

When the war ended, Umstead was

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three Republicans running for president scored well to the right of the average American Conservative Union ratings released Monday while all the Democratic hopefuls gave one fell predictably at the other end of the spectrum.

The ACU gave Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., a rating of 91 percent; former Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., 90 percent; and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., 89 percent. That means they agreed much of the time with the ACU's conservative viewpoint on 20 key congressional votes in 1986.

Although ACU chairman David Keene works as a consultant for Dole's still-unofficial presidential bid, Dole is expected to have a

Among Democrats, Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, an oft-mentioned possible presidential candidate in 1988, scored 53 percent, in sharp contrast to already-announced Democrats who all averaged less than 10 per-

"The Democratic hopefuls are a very liberal bunch, much more so than the House or Senate as a whole, and even more so than the Democratic members on average," Keene said. "Most of the candidates fall to the left of Kennedy."

The ACU said the Senate average in 1986 was 50 percent while in the House it was 42 percent. Party by party, Senate Republicans scored 72 percent, while Democrats averaged 25 percent. In the House, Republicans averaged 74 percent, compared with 20 percent for Democrats.

Geographically, the ACU said the South remained the most conservative region of the nation and the West the most liberal area.

The ACU ratings, based on votes ranging from AIDS to Contra aid, reflect the makeup of Congress in 1986. In elections last November, Democrats regained control of the Senate and maintained their long-standing majority in the House.

Space station cost rises to $32 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States space station, originally projected to cost $8 billion, will actually cost $32.9 billion in 1988 dollars, a panel of the National Research Council advised the Reagan administration Monday.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration had estimated the cost at $16 billion in 1984 dollars. Inflation increases that to $19 billion for 1988 dollars.

But the NRC's Committee on Space Station notes such estimates cover only the cost of services, hardware and software purchased from contractors and listed in NASA budgets as research and development.

"A number of other costs for services and support required by space station are not included in the space station research and development account," said the panel. "These include costs for such things as launch services, salaries of NASA personnel working on space station, spares and other operational costs and the construction of space station (ground) facilities."

The report, signed by committee chairman Robert C. Seamans, Jr., was sent to Frank C. Carlucci, the president's national security adviser; William R. Graham, the White House science adviser; budget director James C. Miller; and NASA administrator John C. Fletcher.

Lyndon LaRouche will return from Europe and appear today for arraignment on charges he conspired to obstruct an investigation into an alleged fraud scheme to finance his 1984 presidential campaign, a prosecutor said Monday.

LaRouche to show

BOSTON (AP) — Lyndon LaRouche will return from Europe and appear today for arraignment on charges he conspired to obstruct an investigation into an alleged fraud scheme to finance his 1984 presidential campaign, a prosecutor said Monday.

LaRouche was named Thursday as a co-conspirator with 13 of his aides and five of his organizations in an $1 million credit card fraud scam and plot to block an investigation of the fund-raising tactics.

Assistant U.S. Attorney John Markham said LaRouche, through his attorney, agreed to appear this afternoon in federal court in Boston for an arraignment before U.S. Magistrate Robert B. Collins.

Markham declined to say what the government's bail request would be

"We find the NRC report constructive," said Andrew Stan, NASA's space station chief. "They have generally validated our cost methodologies and cost estimates for the development of the basic facility, but have identified certain program cost concerns."

NASA historically has not lumped these support costs together in developing a specific program estimate, he said.

Because of the dramatic jump in costs since the original estimate, NASA — with White House concurrence — recently decided on a two-phase approach. The first phase, which would yield a usable manned station, would cost $12.2 billion in 1984 dollars; the second block $3.8 billion.

In addition, the NRC said NASA is planning on building a tele robotic service for the space shuttles that will handle crew and equipment, an orbital maneuvering vehicle for moving away from the space station, and crew emergency rescue vehicles.

They would raise the total R&D cost for the two blocks to $17.9 billion in 1984 dollars.

To this the NRC added other costs, such as bringing crews to the station, $2.3 billion; operations before the station is fully operational, $4.4 billion; NASA personnel costs, $2.5 billion; related facilities and shuttle modifications, $300 million.

or if prosecutors would ask Collins to revoke LaRouche's passport.

LaRouche, who espouses often bizarre theories of world conspiracies and has said he is seeking the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination, returned to West Germany a week ago after voluntarily spending four hours before a federal grand jury in Boston. He has spent much of the past year in Europe, where he leads a small but vocal political organization.

LaRouche, 64, boasted after the grand jury appearance that it would prove his innocence. But the panel secretly indicted him the next day and the charges were unsealed Thursday after prosecutors received assurances LaRouche would return from West Germany for arraignment and trial, which is scheduled for September.

Surviving alien possible recruiter

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Families of some of the 18 Mexican men who suffocated in a boxcar say that the sole survivor helped recruit some of the group for the trip to Dallas, a Mexican state official said Monday.

"There are indications he was a human smuggler," said Zacatecas Undersecretary Benito Lopez Dominguez, who was at the Mexican consulate here.

Friends and relatives of some of the victims from the central Mexican hometown of survivor Miguel Tostado Rodriguez told Lopez that he was "the one who invited them to go to the border and to go across."

Lopez said he did not know whether Tostado was paid by other smugglers for recruiting the group, whether he was to receive a free passage to Dallas from the other smugglers, or if he was merely seeking companions on the trip. Tostado and six of the dead were from Pabellon de Arteaga, which is in the state of Aguascalientes, neighboring Zacatecas.

Authorities say two smugglers were among the 18 who died in the boxcar last week.

Heriberto Spindola of the Mexican consulate in El Paso identified one of the dead smugglers Monday as Rafael Zamarron Torres of El Saucito, Zacatecas. Authorities have not been able to determine the identity of the second smuggler, although 17 of the 18 had been identified, Spindola said.

Despite the tragedy, officials noted no decrease in the numbers of illegal migrants.

Eighty-seven illegal aliens were arrested in local freight yards on Saturday and 100 more on Sunday, said William Harrington, assistant chief of the El Paso sector of the Border Patrol. He called that a typical weekend.

The county medical examiner has completed legal identification of the 18 bodies through dental studies, fingerprints, tattoos and scars, said El Paso Mortuary owner Jim Weatherly.

Lastado told a news conference last week that he had not paid the smugglers to take him north but that he was going to pay them $400 when he arrived in Dallas-Fort Worth, the train's final destination.

Cards, lunch note Nancy's birthday

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan decorated Nancy Reagan's breakfast table with "a ton of birthday cards" and her staff treated her to lunch at a restaurant with a panoramic view, her spokeswoman said Monday.

"The issue of the first lady's age did not come up at the luncheon, since there was no 'numerical decoration' on her birthday cake, said spokeswoman Elaine Crispin.

Mrs. Crispin said the president and first lady planned to have dinner together later in the day, but she did not know whether Reagan planned to give the first lady any additional gifts.

Opinion

Bork says clearly that words can limit judicial discretion

There is an unfortunate trend these days to further erode the distinction between law and politics.

The formation and enforcement of laws is, of course, connected with the political process. On the other hand, the interpretation of the law should be freed from the political process as much as possible. The problem is that the Constitution has, more and more, become an arena for carrying on political contests. Where proponents see little hope of legislative success, they have sought to cast their bets in constitutional molds. As a result, there are those who are more concerned with a judge's politics than with his or her view of the law and the role of the judiciary in our form of government.

What is even more alarming is the growing tendency to interpret judicial decisions in political terms that only take account of results.

The blizzard of commentary surrounding the nomination of Judge Robert H. Bork for the vacancy on the Supreme Court has obscured the legitimate issues and served to focus attention on the irrelevant and unworkable. We do not and cannot know whether Bork's heart was pure on the day he fired Archibald Cox. What we can determine is whether his conduct was within, and indeed required by, the law. We cannot know how Bork, now on the U.S. Court of Appeals, will view issues that he eventually will appear before the Supreme Court. What we can reasonably expect to understand is Bork's opinion as to the nature of the Constitution and his approach to interpreting it.

In a 1986 article in the San Diego Law Review, Bork sets forth his views on the proper role of the judiciary and the approach that it ought to take to constitutional interpretation. He discusses the problems created by the use of a concept like the "right of privacy" as the criterion for determining the result in Griswold v. Connecticut. "My point," Bork says, "is simply that the level of abstraction chosen makes the application of a generalized right of privacy unpredictable." What concerned Bork was the trend toward generalization in judicial decisions even when the Constitution itself leads to a source of unstructured judicial power.

The whole tenor of Bork's article is strongly reminiscent of the dissent in the Griswold case. "Privacy," Bork said, "is a broad, abstract and ambiguous concept which can easily be shrunken in meaning but which can also, on the other hand, easily be interpreted as a broad shield against many things."

Bork's view of the manner in which the Supreme Court ought to interpret the Constitution has much in common with Bork's as expressed in the San Diego Law Review article.

Both jurists take the position that the function of the Supreme Court is to interpret the Constitution by reference to the words that appear in it. Both believe that the words can and ought to be limiting factors on the discretion that judges have in making their decisions. Yet there is a growing group of law professors who think otherwise. And there appear to be a number of senators who believe that judicial ideology is the determining factor in judicial decision-making.

But political beliefs held before appointment to the Supreme Court have not been reliable predictors of judicial behavior.

Hugo Black's political background (which included membership in the Ku Klux Klan) would hardly have precluded a judicial record of preserving individual rights. Earl Warren's performance surprised more than a few people.

More is known about candidates who have had judicial experience than those who have not been selected for a judicial arena. But what is it that we know about current or former judges?

What we know is whether they view the law as a rational enterprise and whether, as judges, they are not convinced that they must give good reasons for the decisions that they make. We can discover whether they believe that a judge is morally superior and, therefore, morally justified in substituting his or her opinion for the opinions of legislators or the general population. In short, what we can find out, and what we should want to know, is the degree to which the candidate for judicial office is committed to the rule of law.

JUDGE ROBERT BORK
Views not unique, radical

It is appropriate to ask a political candidate what his or her opinions are in respect to abortion, prayer in schools, gay rights or any other matter within the political domain. What we should ask the candidate for judicial office is his or her opinion with regard to the law on these matters, and whether the candidate is prepared to faithfully apply the law. It is important to determine whether the judicial candidate differentiates between his preferences on matters of social policy and his view of the law on these same issues.

Bork has articulated his views on these matters in numerous law-review articles and judicial opinions. What he has said is not unique nor radical. As previously noted, his position on constitutional interpretation bears striking resemblance to Hugo Black's. The view that a judge must justify his decisions by reference to the established meaning of the words does not justify calling him a right-wing ideologue. The nomination, and confirmation, of Judge Bork will not mean such a radical change in law as we know it, no matter what "we" are.

On bicentennial of Constitution, a new set of arguments

BOSTON — What an unexpected way to celebrate the 200th anniversary of the long, hot summer that produced the U.S. Constitution.

Instead of commemorating the document, we're going to spend this summer arguing over a new interpreter.

The forces that are converging over the nomination of Robert Bork can only increase the impression that a Supreme Court Justice has more leeway than a home-plate umpire. It's sure to add to the uneasy sense that the law is a matter of opinion, not of principle. The left has accused the President of playing politics with the Bork appointment. The right has accused the left of playing politics with the Bork opposition. They both hold sincerely that the prestige of the Supreme Court, perhaps the last institution that Americans overwhelmingly respect, is undermined by these personal games.

Consider the most vulnerable right that's left to judicial politicking this summer: privacy. Bork, who stands at the intellectual center of the right wing, has said that the right to privacy simply doesn't exist. Does a right exist with one judge and disappear with another?

"As I said years ago, I thought the 'privacy' notion had little to do with the intent of the framers," Bork has explained. Indeed the Constitution doesn't spell out the private sphere, nor does the Bill of Rights list privacy.

The concept of an intimate family life protected from the government appeared in the 1920s when the Supreme Court ruled that raising your own family the way you saw fit was a kind of "liberty." It wasn't until the 1940s, when the Court struck down a law that punished burglars with sterilization, that the right to procreate a basic and fundamental one.

The case that put the word privacy itself into the language of rights came in 1965. Connecticut still had a law that banned birth-control for married couples. In striking that law down, the high court said in Griswold that it violated the basic privacy rights of these couples.

One of the justices wrote that privacy rights were deduced from others in the first eight amendments; the freedom of expression, the freedom from unwarranted search, the freedom from having soldiers quartered in your home. A second found privacy in the ninth amendment. A third, the conservative John Marshall Harlan, said privacy was covered in the 14th amendment as personal

Later, in Roe v. Wade, the abortion case, the Court extended privacy to include the right to choose an abortion. Anyway you define privacy, wrote Justice Blackmun, it "is broad enough to encompass a woman's decision whether or not to terminate her pregnancy."

Bork has disagreed with all this. Not just the 1973 abortion decision, which he called "unconstitutional," but just the 1965 birth-control decision, but the whole emergence of a right of privacy. He disagrees because he says the "framers" of the Constitution and its amendments did not "intend" to create such a right.

I have no idea what the original collection of men who spent that tormented summer of 1787 in Philadelphia would have thought about birth-control pills, suction aspiration, or contraceptives. There is nothing in the Constitution or its amendments about reproduction. But I know that they and their followers "intended" to form a government for public life, not one that would reach trustfully into personal life.

Bork has said that the job of a judge is to figure out this "intent" of the framers and to uphold it, nothing more. Anyone looking for new law should go to the legislature. He opposes so-called activist judiciary. Yet, if nominated, this anti-activist judge would create enormous action, or should I say reaction. His saying no could open decades of law.

So we have this uncomfortable lesson for the 200th anniversary of our Constitution. The new candidate for the Supreme Court holds the view that the politics, even the personality, of a justice should make no difference in deciding the law. And with his very presence, he reminds us just how much difference it does make.

Reversing position on SIS wrong move

In a recent editorial you reversed your position to one of support for the proposed Special Isotope Separator, a factor in the plutonium grade plutonium that may be built in Idaho. I believe that you are wrong in doing so for the following reasons:

1. It is not a "fact" that the SIS will be "used" as you have stated. The Environmental Protection Agency has the option of recommending "no action" as a result of its environmental impact study.
2. The stated policy of the administration is one of nuclear disarmament. A policy that is being carried out in recent negotiations with the USSR. If we are reducing our need for nuclear weapons, what intent is there in producing more? There is a finite number of these weapons needed for deterrence.
3. Most agree that we exceed that number today. What is the future need for this facility?
4. More plutonium is not needed to "upgrade" our present system, because existing plutonium lasts for thousands of years, what we are producing in the last 40 has not spoiled, due in the last 40 has not spoiled, due in the last 40 has not spoiled, due in the last 40 has not spoiled.
5. While southeastern Idaho may see a temporary economic gain, the project, in the face of a huge national debt, is bad for America and therefore bad for Idaho.

Doesn't the manufacture have any obligations? Or is this a black market computer that was brought with high expectations? I believe there are many questions that need to be answered. Is there anyone out there that is not afraid to speak out? I would like to hear all responses to this inquiry and maybe some questions I haven't thought of. I am not sure that while the needy were being given from the runaway and losing their place of residence, the people who work for the Health and Welfare still get their paychecks and benefits. I wonder.

Skateboarders deserve reputation they have

I am writing in response to Clay Wallace's letter in Sunday's paper. Dear skate:

I believe skateboarders are getting a justly deserved reputation from citizens who know you are disrespectful. If you have ever been downtown, you can expect skaters, like Clay, to jump on steps and benches. I do not know if benches were made to sit on, not skate on. Property is damaged "unintentionally" from having such a creative mind and doing imaginative things as these "various tricks" on benches. Thus, I consider this a true form of vandalism and disrespect to public property.

Kids who enjoy skating are down town for one reason: harass the public in making the statement "It's a free country, I can do what I want." Aside walk was made to walk on. Just like the word says - sidewalk, not side skate.

Lagging in saying that this community can have potential in providing a skating facility. Until then, get off the sidewalks and out of pedestrians' way.

P.S. Since South Park tennis courts are a snare with snakes, littered with broken glass and virtually unused - have you heard of a broom? Is a broom weed, mean or cruel? I think not.

Moving the capital was major mistake

WASHINGTON — For almost 200 years, American politics have been profoundly warped by the founding fathers' greatest mistake: moving the capital from Philadelphia.

Washington, unlike Philadelphia, was set apart in the beginning. Thus the illusion that the country, or an interloper, was given physical form. "Washington" became a symbol of illegitimate power in a political rhetoric spanning both parties, a rhetoric employed to arouse discontent without resolving the problems that gave rise to it. The use of the anti-Washington symbol reached a crescendo under presidents Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan who, in 1985, denounced the capital as "un-American." There is no more pejorative dismissal of a person or an idea than to label it "inside the Beltway."

Sidney Blumenthal

The distortion exists from both perspectives. From the Potomac, America appears mostly as shadows racing across a distant landscape. From time to time, the use of the crude and the vulgar and the disruption of the elegance of expertise. By making the capital artificial the founders made difficult its purpose of giving coherence to a diverse country.

The Constitution, of course, stipulated that a capital be designated. But transplanted the federal government from the second English-speaking city in the world after London to a desolate swamp was hardly inevitable. Nor was the new capital framed in the spirit that was later claimed for it, as an assertion of the new republic's self-creating ability. Rather, Washington was born in a death: a spirit that would animate many of the capital's future inhabitants.

The placement of the capital on the Potomac was the solution to what seemed to be an intractable problem: paying the debt incurred by the states during the Revolution. Alexander Hamilton wanted the federal government to assume the debt, the better to bid the banks to the central government. The Southerners, however, opposed his plan. Over dinner, Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson worked out a compromise. The federal government would assume the debt in exchange for the construction of a new capital in Virginia.

Hamilton was a center-righter, who believed that in the deal his principle triumphed. In fact, he cared little where the capital was located, having scant attachment to any particular American place. He was, after all, born in Barbados. "The bastard son of a Scotch padre," as John Adams acidly remarked, Hamilton failed to grasp that location is everything. By trading the capital for debt assumption, Hamilton gave up the possibility of America ever having its own London.

As a result of the arrangement, Philadelphia became the federal city for ten years, from 1790 to 1800, when the new capital of mud and mosquitos was ready. The Washington of, say, 1930 still had fewer dimensions as a city than the Philadelphia of 130 years earlier. In 1790 Philadelphia was the leading American city in population, culture, education, finance, industry, and architecture. If it had remained the capital it might well have grown organically into a true national center.

BEN FRANKLIN'S FRONT PORCH, PHILADELPHIA, JULY 4, 1787.

Philadelphia was a city of all classes, from bankers to artisans. The forces contending for power in the country were represented by more than representatives. Underlying shifts in the economy registered instantly among the citizenry, who rode the cycles of boom and bust. And these citizens organized into political societies, unions and associations to express their interests. What was unusual was insulating the capital from the social effects of commerce and the coming industrial revolution. The representative class of American life never lived in the one-company town of Washington. The direct effects of both economic growth and suffering have always been filtered into the capital, almost as if they were abstractions.

Even partisanship, the stock-in-trade of Washington, appears here in an oddly muted form. Absent is the strong presence of local party organizations. By contrast, during the decade in which Philadelphia was the seat of government the Democratic Society, the local branch of the swelling Jeffersonian party mobilized. It had a large and active base in the community; about a quarter of the members were artisans. The Democrats' battle for control of government with the dominant Federalists played out locally as the same light-raged nationally. From city to state to federal government, there was no political discontinuity.

The effect on other cities would undoubtedly have been enormous had Philadelphia remained the capital. New York might not have ever existed. Philadelphia as the financial center of a great university in proximity to government, the University of Pennsylvania, might have reduced the importance of Harvard — and Boston. Literary and intellectual life generally might have flourished side by side with political life, coloring it as it was colored. Germantown, not Greenwich Village, might have been the bohemian mecca. Who knows? With Philadelphia as the capital, the functions that make up a traditional capital might not have been scattered across the country.

The passing of George Washington in December 1799 was mourned in Philadelphia as the passing of its days as capital. Adams lived only two years in the presidential mansion at 190 High Street before leaving for the White House, still under construction.

A dream of a Potomac capital was George Washington's dream long before he became president. He imagined a truly national center, united to the burgeoning West by a Potomac Canal connecting the Potomac and Ohio rivers. The effect on Virginia, the leading Southern state, would be to spur industry and gradually make slavery uneconomical. Then Washington planned to erect a national university "to spread systematic ideas through all parts of the rising empire," he wrote. But that canal was never built, the university never founded. When he wrote Bork Adams, he left "his federal capital, which should have been the focus of American exchanges, industry, and thought, little better than a wilderness." More than anything else, the Civil War dramatized Washington's failed dream of a unifying capital.

Philadelphia missed its chance to rule the nation almost two centuries ago. Now, to get the effect that Washington sought — a city at the heart of the economy in the presence of great universities — the capital would have to be moved to Chicago, which has two major league baseball teams.

Farkleberry festival takes root

HAYTI, SD. (AP) — They're about as scarce as hen's teeth in this part of the world, but the humble farkleberry has become a tongue-in-cheek symbol of rekindled community spirit in this small farm town.

The Hayti Farkleberry Festival, scheduled this coming weekend, grew out of a longstanding, harmless joke among members of the Hayti High School class of 1947. While discussing ways to liven up the old town, Gordon Hanson said Hayti should have an annual festival and suggested it be named after the farkleberry. He didn't have the foggiest idea what a farkleberry was but had heard the name.

"You know how it is. You sit around and dream things up," said Paul Halonen of Watertown, another member of the Hayti class of 1947 and one of those in the bar at the time.

According to Webster's New World Dictionary, a farkleberry is "a shrub or small tree of the heath family, with bell-shaped, white flowers and round, black, inedible berries, found in the southern U.S."

The joke came up many times over the years when the classmates gathered, and began turning to reality when planning for the first real Farkleberry Festival began last January, said Jim Dorman, a member of the sponsoring Hayti Community Club.

Residents were losing interest in the annual summer celebration, previously called Town and Country Days, in the eastern South Dakota town of 375 people, Dorman said. "We thought we would use this idea to revitalize the event."

The three-day event will include a street carnival, one-act plays entitled "Farkleberry Follies," athletic activities, a horseshoe tournament, chicken barbecue, old-time fiddlers and a street dance.

There also will be a farkleberry-pie-baking contest, but almost any berry pie will do.

The festival has even gotten attention from as far away as Wisconsin.

What's what

CONCERN OF THE CLERGY
Something else that concerns your neighborhood clergy is "homophobia" — it's the not-so-unknown "fear of sermons."

So sensitive is a grizzly bear's nose that it would make a much better tracker than a hounddog — if you could control the big beast. From miles away it can follow the scent to a dead animal.

So you thought the Navajos have lived in the Southwest prairie forever, did you? No, sir, several hundred years ago they were the Athabascans of western Canada. They migrated.

PRAM
Q. Says here an American named Charles Burton in 1845 invented the pram. What's a pram?
A. A baby carriage. British term. Pram. Short for perambulator. Lot of young people know ear carriers, but not baby carriages. And certainly not prams.

As for a lobster's claws, the big one crushes, a little one cuts.

Q. Wasn't "Gone With the Wind" the all-time fiction bestseller?
A. No, sir, Jacqueline Susann's "Valley of the Dolls" gets that credit.

A kangaroo can't go backwards.

Only one woman in 42 dies before her husband does.

GAPPED TEETH
A woman with a gap between her front teeth was thought to be particularly sexy. During the Middle Ages, this. She was regarded as worldly. Work on might yield sophisticated, and highly desirable. It's still so in some parts of Africa. I'm told.

Claim is that more women than men in this country can be classified as "gamblers."

Any real battles in the near vacuum of outer space — never-mind the sound-effects-in-U.S.-Star Wars! — would be fought in silence.

Takes seven seconds for an echo to bounce back in the world's largest gutter. Central — Statue of Liberty in New York City. Curiously, the Grand Canyon likewise has a seven-second echo delay.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You will be very clever and resourceful in obtaining the information necessary to round out your interests. Some project. Listen to this person's advice. Delays should be expected this evening, so be productive.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Analyze and improve your business relationships. A romantic discussion with your mate would be good today, but not tonight.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): A civic matter can entail many benefits if you're sure you understand all of the long-term effects connected with it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): A fellow worker will have much insight on how to proceed with a mutual project. Listen to this person's advice.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): If you believe your mate needs more attention, you're probably right. Your intuition is functioning well.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Home improvement projects should be handled now, especially plumbing. Get your debts cleared up this morning.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 23): Focus your energies on improving the financial situation. Think about improving the appearance of your home.

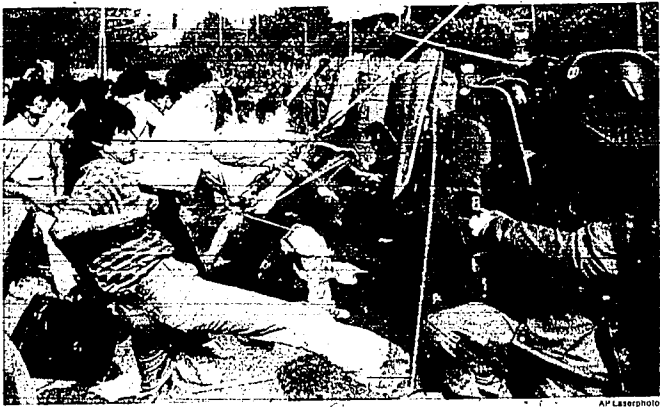

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): An abundance of energy will make goal attainment easy today. Work on improving your personal appearance.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): An idea you've come up with, but not acted on, can be used to great advantage. Get moving early on this.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Today is great for being constructive and reaping the benefits. Be precise in handling credit and civic matters.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): This evening would be fine for celebrating with a close friend. Try to keep a cheerful attitude despite setbacks.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she, will have a great understanding of procedural methods and the patience required to go along with it. Teach your child early not to become angry when he or she doesn't get what he or she wants. Your progeny will always think carefully before acting.

Koreans protest the death of a Yonsei student who died after being hit by a tear gas canister

Comrade's death triggers more student/police battles

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Students enraged by a comrade's death-battered police with wooden poles and rocks Monday. Political leaders appealed for calm-to save talks on democratic reform and preserve the delicate political truce.

The government freed 177 political prisoners in Seoul and eight other cities as part of pledges last week that ended 18 straight days of violent protest against the government of President Chun Doo-hwan. Hundreds of cheering and sobbing relatives and supporters greeted them at prison gates.

At Yonsei University in Seoul, hundreds of students fought riot police after fellow student Lee Han-yul died of injuries received in a street battle with officers a month ago.

"Let's learn from Lee Han-yul's spirit! Down with the military dictatorship!" students shouted. Police fired hundreds of tear gas grenades.

Fighting went on for hours.

At the prisons, exulting crowds chanted "Long live democracy!" as they hoisted those freed onto their shoulders and carried them away.

Political leaders on both sides expressed regret about the 21-year-old Lee's death, but said talks on revising the constitution to permit direct presidential elections and other reforms must continue.

Chun agreed to the reforms July 1 after nationwide protests by an opposition alliance began June 10. They developed into the worst political violence since Chun, a former general, took power with military backing following the assassination of President Park Chung-hee in 1979.

Representatives of both political camps expressed concern that anger over Lee's death could cause a new round of protests and destroy the truce that resulted from Chun's capitulation to his opponents' demands.

Kim Young-sam, head of the main opposition Renovation-Democratic Party, said: "Lee's noble death reminds all of us of the significance of the task of realizing democratization. However, the process of democratization should not be impeded because of the death."

Chun's Democratic Justice Party also urged moderation in a statement that said: "Our basic position is that unfortunate incidents like Lee's death must be wisely overcome, with ill effects minimized."

The National Coalition for a Democratic Constitution, which sponsored last month's protest campaign, called for national mourning until Saturday and declared: "We reconfirm that the only way to preserve the freedom and life of our people is to force out of power the dictatorial government which led to the death of Lee Han-yul."

About 10,000 students gathered Monday at Yonsei to mourn Lee, who died Sunday. A tear gas canister fired from a rifle hit him in the back of the head during a clash with police June 9.

Protests to bring down the Chun government began the next day, coinciding with a governing party convention that endorsed the president's hand-picked successor, party chairman and long-time Chun ally Roh Tae-woo.

Roh declared publicly June 29 that he would resign unless Chun agreed to the opposition demands, and Chun did so two days later.

On Monday, students at Yonsei held a "silent" mourning before a large altar arrayed with flowers and black banners. Columns of students paraded on the campus with pictures of Lee draped with black ribbons.

Riot police in green combat uniforms and black visored helmets tried later to halt a march by students who advanced several hundred yards beyond the school gate. The youths responded to the wall of police shields with poles, fists and feet.

Police hurled tear gas grenades to force protesters back through the gate and students threw rocks in a fierce clash that went on for hours. Several students and police were badly hurt, but officials would not give numbers or details.

Students also fought police at the school Sunday. They said they would hold a funeral service in the capital Thursday before taking Lee's body for burial to his native Kwangju in the south.

Government officials said privately that Seoul police commander Kim Soo-gil was relieved of his post after Lee's death and would be held accountable.

Assad, Waffers meet in Damascus

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — President Hafez Assad met on Monday with veteran U.S. envoy Vernon Walters, who arrived quietly in Damascus for talks on ending an 8-month-old rift in U.S.-Syrian relations, a senior Syrian official said.

Assad spokesman Jibril Kourieh said the talks focused on "Middle East developments and issues related to the Middle East as well as relations between Syria and the United States."

Kourieh said Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa also attended.

Syrian sources, who demanded anonymity, said it was not immediately known how long Walters, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, would stay in Damascus. They gave no details of his schedule.

David Kramer, who as chargé d'affaires has been the most senior American diplomat in Damascus since November, could not be reached for comment.

The 70-year-old Walters traveled to Moscow, Syria's main backer, last week to discuss Middle East developments with Kremlin officials.

The United States withdrew its ambassador in Damascus, William Engleton, seven months ago after Britain severed relations with Syria. Britain said Syrian intelligence was behind an abortive attempt to smuggle a bomb aboard an Israeli airliner in London in April 1986. Syria denied it.

President Reagan sent a message Monday to Walters indicating he wanted to restore good relations with Syria, a powerful Arab country.

The message was given to Assad by Wat T. Cluverius, a veteran U.S. Middle East envoy, on June 19 when Assad was on vacation at his summer home near the Mediterranean seaport of Latakia.

Haiti opposition continues general strike

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Some people returned to work Monday but most businesses closed, resuming a general strike that led to at least 24 deaths last week. Soldiers stayed off the streets and little violence was reported.

In another development, a key opposition leader said recent concessions by Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy might lead-strike organizers to compromise on their demand that he step down as head of Haiti's provisional government.

"We are practical people," said Jean-Claude Bejoux, who has stayed under cover the past week for fear of arrest. "To continue is to lose time and risk having an escalation of violence we cannot control. We are well aware we have nothing to gain from anarchy."

At least 24 civilians were killed in clashes with soldiers last week and more than 90 were wounded, most by gunfire.

Bejoux said the strike would continue Tuesday and, as was the case last week, be suspended Wednesday so people can buy food.

"We cannot see further than that," he said. "We have to evaluate" the situation.

The strike was called because of a decree Namphy's three-man National Governing Council issued June 23 taking control of elections away from an independent election council, which was established by the constitution approved in a referendum March 29. It also banned a militant labor union.

38 Hindu pilgrims killed in massacre

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Sikh terrorists stopped a bus taking Hindu pilgrims to a holy bathing site in Punjab state Monday and sprayed the vehicle with automatic rifle fire, killing 38 people, the Press Trust of India reported.

Press Trust, quoting state police, said 23 more passengers were seriously wounded.

It reported five terrorists stopped a Haranya State Roadways Bus 21 miles from the Punjab capital of Chandigarh at about 7 p.m.

The bus was carrying more than 60 people to Rishikesh, a Hindu pilgrimage site in the Himalayan foothills. It had left Chandigarh about 50 minutes before it was seized by the terrorists.

Press Trust said 36 people were killed at the site and two died in a hospital.

Risk of Marcos return holding up 45 charges

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Authorities will file 45 criminal charges against ousted President Ferdinand Marcos, but first the government must decide if it can risk letting him return to stand trial, an official said Monday.

President Corazon Aquino decides Marcos' return from Hawaii could undermine her government, she may ask that he be allowed to appear in a U.S. court to conduct his defense, said Ramon Diaz, head of the Presidential Commission on Good Government.

Diaz said about 50 Marcos associates would be charged along with the former president, his wife, Imelda, and their three children. Charges would include "pillage, plunder, abuse of authority and abuse of rights" during his 20-year administration, Diaz said.

In other developments:

- Mrs. Aquino ordered her top military advisers to find a way to crush urban terrorism after a series of weekend bombings in Manila and reports that Communist guerrillas killed two people in a suburb of the capital.

The Commission on Elections refused to declare former Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile elected to the Senate.

The Presidential Commission on Good Government was organized last year to recover about $10 billion Marcos allegedly siphoned out of the country before his ouster in February 1986. The commission will file the charges starting July 16, Diaz told The Associated Press.

Marcos has denied the government's allegations.

A special anti-graft court, first created by Marcos, has sentenced several junior bureaucrats to up to 400 years in jail for embezzlement of much smaller amounts of public money.

The Aquino government has barred Marcos from returning to the Philippines, but is forbidden by the new constitution from trying him in absentia. The constitution also gives an August 1987 deadline to begin any "legal effort to recover" what the government calls Marcos' "ill-gotten wealth."

Letters to no avail

Symms: Hansen will serve term

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — There is little chance the administration will cut short the imprisonment of former Idaho Congressman George Hansen despite the flood of requests for intervention by the president.

"I am not optimistic," Symms said in a swing through eastern Idaho during the July 4th congressional recess.

The state's junior Republican senator has written letters to administration officials and made statements on the Senate floor, calling for the release of Hansen prior to the formal end of his up-to-15-month sentence for falsifying federal financial disclosure statements.

Although he has not taken the issue up personally with President Reagan, Symms said he has talked to Chief of Staff Howard Baker about the plight of his conservative Republican colleague.

"He assured me that the president would be reviewing the case again," Symms said, but the senator also expressed little hope the administration would act before Hansen's prison sentence.

ends late this year. "I can't speak for the administration," Symms said, "but there are, other priorities, and frankly that (the Hansen case) is not on the top."

Symms declined to speculate on whether there was any link between the administration's failure to help Hansen and Hansen's television advertisement two years ago against the Internal Revenue Service that included unsanctioned comments from President Reagan. The White House claimed Hansen used the president's remarks out of context and asked him to pull Reagan from the ads — a request Hansen refused.

The former seven-term congressman was paroled last December after serving six months of his sentence. But he was re-arrested in April and his parole revoked in May for traveling outside of Virginia without government approval and failing to file periodic financial statements as required in his parole.

Hansen has contended he never agreed to those terms when he accepted the parole.

Cecil Andrus blasts Reagan's federalism

SNOWBLIND, Utah (AP) — Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus is accusing the Reagan administration of renegeing on agreements to help western states carry the financial burden associated with public lands.

"The former Carter administration Interior secretary said that states such as Utah are worth billions of dollars. Before, we had a firm agreement. They kept their part of the bargain and we kept ours," Andrus said Sunday at the beginning of the Western Governors' Conference at this mountain resort near Salt Lake City.

But lately, "There has been a tendency to treat us as a serf of the mighty landlord," he said.

Federal funding to states has been cut in recent years, but demands on the states to enforce federal regulations have increased, Andrus said.

He said instances of "federal blackmail" include the threat to hold back highway funds from states that did not raise their drinking age to 21; in health care, where federal judges are overseeing state health programs; and air-quality standards, which require states to deal with problems sometimes exacerbated by federal policy.

"They have destroyed air quality with range fires on Bureau of Land Management land and we should send them the bill for about $3 billion to clean it up," the governor said.

"You can say they didn't set out to start the range fires, but we also didn't set out to create an inversion."

After a general business meeting early Monday, governors were scheduled to talk about efficiency, the educational challenge during a transitional period for the West and the new roles and responsibilities for states as federal aid declines.

Today, they will talk about rural and urban issues and gaining the competitive edge in economy and trade. The conference adjourns at noon Tuesday.

Andrus said the greatest benefit of the conference is to give governors a chance to talk with western colleagues about issues of common interest. Highway funding, water, the Bureau of Reclamation, land-use questions, and Indian claims and rights were among the matters talked about during the breakfast meeting.

Sheriffs seek help in killing

MALAD CITY (AP) — The Oneida County Sheriff's Office has asked for help from the public in solving the shooting death of a man whose body was found an Interstate 84 rest stop in Idaho over the weekend.

"Authorities were continuing to withhold the identity of the man, whose car rest stop indicated he was from Ohio, pending notification of his family."

An autopsy performed Monday in Pocatello by Oneida Coroner Spencer

Horsley determined that the man was shot twice in the chest with a .38-caliber pistol. One of the bullets pierced the heart. The coroner said preliminary indications revealed no traces of drugs in the body.

"We are asking the public for help," Oneida County Deputy Jayne Morse said. "We have absolutely no information as to a suspect."

The body was found by a trucker on Saturday morning next to a car at the Juniper rest stop, five miles north of Snowville, Utah.

2 charged in slaying, dismemberment

BOISE (AP) — The dismembered body of a Boise man has been found along the Snake River in Washington County, and two other Boise men have been charged with his slaying.

Ada County Prosecutor Preston Bower identified the victim at a news conference Monday as Gresham Murr, 21. Parts of his body were found Friday afternoon by two fishermen in and along the Snake River, about 20 miles northwest of Weiser.

Daniel Edward Rodgers, 37, was charged with first-degree murder Monday. Daron Jimel Cox, 31, also was charged with first-degree murder by aiding and abetting Rodgers in Murr's slaying, Bower said.

Both men were scheduled to be arraigned in 4th District Magistrate Court Monday afternoon, he said.

Boise Police Sgt. Jim Tibbs said Murr was shot and his body later dismembered with an ax and dumped in more than one location along the river. An investigation was continuing but was expected to be complete by the end of the week, he said.

Ada County Coroner Ervin Sonberg said the slaying was believed to have occurred in Boise, but it was not known when. He called Murr's death "the most gruesome murder in my experience."

The discovery of Murr's body helped solve a mystery that began last Tuesday when Boise police found a handgun and a bullet fragment lodged in the wall of Rodgers' Boise home. Some 13 pounds of marijuana also was found in the basement of the house, and a door leading to the basement was splattered with blood later determined to be human, but no victim was found.

Additional bullet holes were found in an entry way and a laundry area of the house, and blood was smeared on windows of two residences across from the Rodgerses' home.

Tibbs said Cox was arrested Sunday in Boise. He had been questioned several times since Tuesday's arrest of Rodgers and his wife Kathryn, who were charged with possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver.

A preliminary hearing for the couple on those charges was set for July 14. They remained in the Ada County Jail on Monday in lieu of $250,000 bond for Rodgers and $200,000 for Kathryn.

Rodgers previously had served five years in a California prison for murder. Deputy Prosecutor Priscilla Nielson said last week.

Judge voids Pocatello street maintenance fee

POCATELLO (AP) — Pocatello's controversial street maintenance fee to allow Pocatello to maintain its street system has been voided by a district court judge, who agreed with critics that the charge amounted to an illegal local tax.

The attorney representing the coalition of residents who challenged the July 1986 fee said the decision maintained the distinction between taxes and fees. But City Attorney Ivan Legler, arguing the fee was the equivalent of a utility charge rather than a tax, indicated the city would file an immediate appeal.

Left unanswered in Woodland's decision was whether the city had to refund the $50,000 already collected under the fee program and whether the city could finance ambulance service through a fee system.

"There is no legislation which allows Pocatello to impose a tax upon users of public streets," Woodland said. "The ordinance is void as an invalid exercise of municipal government authority."

Calling the plan "innovative if not revolutionary," 4th District Judge William Woodland on Monday ruled that while the city may have needed the revenue generated by the fee it did not have the legal authority to collect it.

The city might have police or proprietary power to impose fees for services, but the judge said, "Filling chueholes and paving streets is a non-regulatory function. Therefore, the city's street fee ordinance has no regulatory purposes."

Asbestos testing of water called for

BOISE (AP) — The possibility that composite water-system piping may be leaching drinking water with asbestos in at least some Idaho cities has prompted the Idaho Conservation League to press for testing of the water supply in the state's largest city.

"Boise is the place to start," ICL Director Mary Kelly said. "There may well be threats in other cities. But we're going to concentrate on the population center."

Asbestos in drinking water, which was linked in one study with stomach cancer, has been found in water systems throughout the country by the Environmental Protection Agency. But the asbestos findings of that 1979 survey, which included Caldwell and Nampa, were below levels the government believed harmful.

Although occurring naturally at low levels in some cities like Caldwell, asbestos can contaminate water that is funneled through pipe made of 85 percent cement and 15 percent asbestos. The fiber was used to strengthen the composite pipe, that was widely used in water systems in the past. Under certain conditions, asbestos pipe can erode. State water quality officials are still trying to collect information on the use of the composite pipe in Idaho, and the Boise Water Corp., which serves over 100,000 customers in southwestern Idaho, reported that about 340 miles of its nearly 600 miles of pipe contain asbestos slingshotting fibers.

Corporate Vice President Ben Hepler said he did not believe the pipe was releasing asbestos fibers into the water so the supply has not been tested. Hepler said if the company had "any indications of asbestos fibers in the water, we will do the testing."

Officials in other cities which have experienced the program said, however, that there was unlikely to be any advance indication of possible contamination, and state water quality engineer Richard Rogers said, "I think if we test, we'll find the fibers. . . I think you're going to get some natural erosion of the asbestos pipe. It's just going to happen."

James Covey, health engineer in New York state where the issue has been extensively studied, said Boise's situation was more prone to contamination because the system pipe is reaching the critical 25-year-old point and because the water itself more moderately to highly corrosive. "We want the testing done and want to know what the results are," Kelly said. "Then we're going to want a plan from Boise Water and the state as to what they're going to do about it."

Gun victim sues

BOISE (AP) — A Caldwell man is suing a Virginia gun manufacturer and its local distributors over a 1985 accident that resulted in his being shot in the hand.

Daniel M. Jones' complaint filed Monday in U.S. District Court in Boise names Interarms, an Alexandria, Va., gun manufacturer; John Jobino Co., a New York weapons dealer; Louis Imperato, owner of John Jobino; and Annie Oakley Inc., a now-defunct Caldwell gun store allegedly also owned by Imperato.

Bonnors Ferry gets wastewater grant

BOISE (AP) — The city of Bonnors Ferry is in line for $118,600 in state grant money to upgrade its wastewater treatment facilities.

The money will come from Idaho's Water Pollution Control Fund as part of the construction grants program administered by the Department of Health and Welfare's Division of Environment, Gov. Cecil Andrus announced. Bonnors Ferry will use the grant to design and build a new chlorination facility to correct existing and potential health hazards and water-quality problems in the area.

The overall cost of the project is estimated at $151,250, with the balance paid by the city.

City Council adopts ordinance banning skateboarding in main business district

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Skateboarders, your days of jumping off ramps and gliding along downtown are numbered. The Twin Falls City Council on Monday adopted an ordinance banning skateboards, roller skates, coasters, toy vehicles and similar devices from the downtown business district. The ordinance will become effective upon publication sometime Friday or Saturday, said City Attorney Shane Bengoechea. The boundaries of the new no-skating land are defined in the ordinance as Third Streets West and North, Fourth Avenue North and East, Third Streets South and East and Second Avenue West and South. Any violation will be a misdemeanor, punishable by a maximum $300 fine and/or six months in jail, Bengoechea said. Skateboarders may take heart in the fact that the council promised the city's help to find another area for the sport and formed a committee to get things rolling. "Business Improvement District" Coordinator Sue Jones, sought adoption of the ordinance at a council meeting last month. She said merchants had complained of vandalism. The council delayed consideration of the ordinance until it heard from the skateboarders. Jones appeared again on Monday to repeat her request. The vandalem, including broken windows, continues, she said. Youths do tricks off the steps of the fountain downtown and build ramps, which is dangerous. "A few are ruining it for the many," Jones added. And, there was nothing to stop the activity, she said. Last year the council considered banning skateboarding, but instead allowed the youth to skateboard at night. At the work session prior to the meeting, Mayor Doug Volmer said he had visited downtown on three evenings and saw skateboarders weaving down the sidewalks.

LIDs for Blue Lakes widening, extending North College work win council approval

By PAT MARCANTONIO

TWIN FALLS — The formation of local-improvement districts to widen Blue Lakes Boulevard and extend North College Road drew no negative comments at a public hearing held Monday night by the Twin Falls City Council. As a result, the ordinances establishing the LIDs were unanimously adopted by council. One LID will provide an estimated $138,000 to widen Blue Lakes Boulevard North from Pole Line Road to Falls Avenue. The street will be widened from 44 feet to 64 feet. New curbs, gutters and sidewalks will also be added. The State Department of Transportation will provide the asphalt for the street widening at no additional cost to the property owners. City Manager Tom Courtney said the project was requested by property owners. Key organizers were Lee

Wagner of KMVT-TV, Roy Raymond of Roy Raymond Ford and Bruce Mecham, who owns property on Blue Lakes Boulevard. "Without their assistance, we wouldn't have had the ordinance tonight, we wouldn't have had the project," Courtney said. Wagner said the primary motivation for improving the busy street was safety. "For anyone who has tried to get on and off Blue Lakes, it get's pretty hairy," said Wagner after the meeting. If the property owners hadn't helped form the LID, the street might have been widened for at least a decade. That's the amount of time it would have taken the state to find funding, said state officials. Property owners who do not want to participate in the LID, which is funded by assessments on property for the life of the bonds sold to finance the project, city staff

Architect's drawing depicts proposed new pavilion linking exhibit buildings at Twin Falls County Fairgrounds

New pavilion proposed at Filer fair grounds

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

FILER — The aging, problem-ridden Produce Building at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds soon may be replaced with a new pavilion connected to the Merchants Building at a cost of between $75,000 and $95,000. The Twin Falls County Fair Board Monday voted unanimously to have an architect prepare drawings suitable for bidding. "I have something I want to show everybody," said Fair Board Vice Chairman Emmett Harrison after the board dispensed with its scheduled new business. Harrison ambled over to a corner of the Cedar Room at Canyon Springs Inn and pulled out full-sized drawings of the 27,000 square foot complex, consisting of a building opening on one side to a courtyard. The new pavilion would be connected to the fair's existing Merchants Building with a 120-foot, uncovered concrete slab. The slab would be surrounded by walls, creating a courtyard in between the two buildings. The new building, which would cover about 33 percent of the complex's space, would not have a wall between it and the courtyard, allowing easy access to exhibits, Harrison said. Not only would the building be used for exhibits during the county's annual fair, the first week of September, but special events could be held in the courtyard, Harrison said. By placing collapsible bleachers and chairs in the courtyard and under the roof of the new building, 13,000 people could attend events like concerts, he said. The Produce Building, which is more than 70 years old, was found to be in violation of several county building codes after an inspection during the summer of 1986. The county's insurer, at that time paying for the replacement of the old Merchants Building after it collapsed under the weight of snow during the winter of 1985, requested the county inspect the Produce Building before extending coverage on it. The Fair Board voted last year to make minor improvements to the existing Produce Building as recommended by the insurer in order to use it for the 1986 fair. The enclosed part of the new building would be constructed under the same design as the Merchants Building and the exterior walls of the enclosed courtyard would be similar, giving the complex the look of a single building. "It's a marvelous idea," said Board Member Don Kramer, because the new complex would add display space equivalent to half the space the fair currently has. The building would cost between $78,000 and $90,000, Harrison said. The fair board has $46,000 in a building fund set up last December to replace the old Produce Building. Harrison suggested asking the county to contribute $20,000 to the fund. County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman, who attended the meeting with County Commission Chairwoman Judy Felton, didn't seem excited about the idea. "I think it's a good idea, I just don't know about the money," Hempleman said as he was leaving for another meeting. In addition to a large amount of display space, the building may fill a void for low-cost special events, said Fair Manager Dan Peters. This was Peters' first meeting as manager after being officially appointed to the position June 3. Peters said event promoters in the Boise area that he talked to said they often couldn't afford to use the College of Southern Idaho Pavilion and would be interested in using a lower-cost pavilion at the fair. Harrison said he would like to start construction on the complex shortly after this year's fair.

Manager's desire to talk to groups may open lion's den of controversy

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

FILER — Now Fair Manager Dan Peters may be walking into a lion's den with a proposal presented at his first Fair Board meeting Monday. Peters said he wanted to talk to 12 groups who get free space for commercial exhibits at the county's annual fair during the week following Labor Day. "If these people have a budget, there's no reason they can't pay," Peters said at the board's meeting Monday. Included on that list are four radio stations, the College of Southern Idaho Office on Aging, the Idaho Air National Guard, the Idaho Army National Guard, Amalgamated Sugar Co. the Vietnam Veterans, the Idaho Water Users Association, the Democratic Party and the Republican Party. Peters suggested trading advertising with the media now getting free space and asking Amalgamated for sugar to be used as prizes. The problem may not be so much with the cost of the display space, which ranges from $450 to $640, according to figures provided by Peters, but with free passes given to the organizations.

He used the Idaho Air National Guard as an example. "They bring in a display, but they also bring in 50 people who need passes," Peters said. Board Member Roy Jessor called it a "lion's den" because attempts to charge these organizations money for their space in the annual fair has sparked heated opposition. "Go ahead," Jessor said, "we've been beat over the head over the years — but you're new." Peters also suggested ending a 10 percent discount offered to concessionaires who send in reservation money before June 1. He said the office has been swamped with concessionaire requests, but still deduct the 10 percent. Board Vice Chairman Emmett Harrison said the policy was instituted to bring in money sooner and ease a cash flow crunch the fair had in the past. Although the board made no decision on the issue, Peters said the discount could be used as leverage to get concessionaires to upgrade the appearance of their booths. Peters suggested telling concessionaires, "If you guys don't spruce up your booth and pay on time, we'll give your booth to someone else." He said he has at least 60 applicants waiting for indoor booth space at the fair. In other business, the board decided to obtain three-portable radios on a lease-purchase arrangement, costing about $700. Peters said the radios are the only way to provide quick and efficient security at the fair and the radios would save more than they cost in fuel and time. He asked Twin Falls County to buy $1300 to pay for a stove and other appliances installed by former Fair Manager Tom Shouse. He changed the procedure to choose Miss Rodeo Idaho at the fair. The board decided to hold two contests this year — one to choose a Miss Rodeo Idaho to serve until and compete in the 1988 Miss Rodeo America contest, and one to choose a Miss Rodeo Idaho to compete in the 1987 Miss Rodeo America contest. Sheri Brown, director of the Miss Rodeo Idaho Committee, said the changes would create a system giving Idaho's rodeo more time to prepare for the Miss Rodeo America contest. In addition, for the first time, the winners will sign contracts specifying their duties as Miss Rodeo Idaho, including a clause prohibiting them from marrying during while serving in the post.

Board adopts new policy on resuscitation

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Doctors' wishes were heard and heeded Monday with the adoption of a new do-not-resuscitate policy at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. After nearly a year, four drafts and tacking on last-minute amendments from the medical staff, the board approved the policy in a split vote. Trustees Jim LaGrone and Frank Arana voted against the policy. Trustee Dr. A.C. Emery argued that doctors should be able to tell hospital employees not to resuscitate a patient over the phone. He said without the option for phoned-in orders, a patient could be put on a respirator or other artificial devices before Emery got to the hospital. Emery's position, which the board ultimately approved, applies only in "rare and unusual circumstances." He said the occasion to phone in a DNR order occurs for him only about once every three years. But he noted that when he is in the hospital he can stop resuscitation for a patient without documentation, and he noted approval on the table Monday would have required documentation for a DNR in the patient's medical record. Hospital legal counsel Kent Taylor, who opposed allowing a phoned-in DNR order, said the resuscitation orders should be clear-cut so hospital employees know how to act in an emergency. "I think that we're looking for a standard for hospital employees to follow — yes or no. I don't think 'rare and unusual' gives that standard," Taylor said. "Some things are best left vague." Doctors agreed with Emery that they should be allowed to call in DNR orders when necessary, if they are familiar with the patient's condition. Dr. John Howard, president of the medical staff, said despite a close vote June 30, "It seemed to me to be a fairly clear message that they felt physician calls should be allowed without documentation." The medical staff voted 18 to 13 in favor of allowing telephone orders in rare and unusual circumstances and that the Bio-medical Ethics Committee should be asked to review all such cases to see if the order was appropriate or inappropriate. Emery's motion included that working in asking for another draft of the policy two months ago, Emery said doctors would support phoned-in DNRs. Dr. Allan Frost, who was sworn in as a trustee Monday, asked that Emery's motion require the doctor phoning in a DNR to "immediately" go to the hospital to document reasoning for the action. The Joint Commission for the Accreditation of Hospitals will begin requiring DNR policies beginning next Jan. 1. Other area hospitals that have DNR policies echoed the Bio-medical Ethics committee's concern that confusion might arise when DNR orders are accepted by phone. Spokesman for University of Utah Hospital in Salt Lake City and St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise each said their DNR policies applied only to documented orders.

After Monday's skirmish, battle in jail suit coming

By PAT MARCANTONIO

TWIN FALLS — A legal skirmish occurred Monday between Kent and the lawyers representing the two Twin Falls County officials in a suit. But the real battle over Kent's claim that the May 12 jail-bond election was invalid will take place next Monday when a slate of motions are heard. Among them is Kent's request to put a hold on any jail-bond sales until the litigation is resolved and a defense request to dismiss County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter from the action. On Monday 5th District Judge Daniel Meehl allowed Boise attorneys Paul Penland and Richard Christensen, who represent Baxter and co-defendant County Clerk Dick Pence, to file a new answer to Kent's lawsuit. In the lawsuit, filed May 26, Kent claims the election was invalid because Pence didn't register voters beforehand. He accused Baxter of not prosecuting Pence on a previous election violation resulting in the alleged violations in the bond election. A former state legislative candidate and mechanic, Kent had filed a motion — or request — to strike portions of the defendant's answer to his lawsuit. He claimed the answer was not verified by oath or written or sworn testimony and called it "a sham, impudent, frivolous and redundant." At the Monday hearing, Kent read through the defense's answer to his allegations and answered each with quotes from precedent cases or court rulings. To a defense statement that Baxter was immune from award of damages on the basis of prosecutorial immunity, Kent replied, "She's not immune from cover-up." To a defense's position that Twin Falls County was an indispensable part of the lawsuit, Kent said he couldn't find any violation on the part of the county or County Board of Commissioners. The commissioners, in fact, had halted the bond sale procedure when his lawsuit was filed because they determined his claims were right, he said. "If they determined I was wrong they would have gone full-speed ahead. Now they have a swat team to determine I was wrong when they already determined I was right," Kent said. To a defense claim that Kent lacked standing to complain of the alleged actions, he said, "Your honor, these are fighting words. This could only happen to a slave in the Twin Falls County plantation." Christensen argued that the law requires only

Inmate sues over county jail conditions

BOISE (AP) — A federal prisoner who spent eight days in the Jerome County Jail in February has filed a $1.5 million lawsuit alleging inhumane conditions at the jail.

Danny Williams, who is in a federal penitentiary in Pleasanton, Calif., names Jerome County Sheriff Eliza Hall as a defendant in the lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court in Boise.

Williams alleges that he was held there for 120 hours without access to recreation or correspondence.

The conditions caused rashes on his back, legs and groin, and resulted in his having "nightmares."

Williams says he was taken out of jail and hanging him from a tree, according to the complaint.

The suit asks $500,000 in general damages and $1 million in exemplary damages.

Sheriff Hall said Monday night he was unaware of the suit filed by Williams, but he said the complaints of the former inmate as listed in the news report on the suit are unfounded.

"We have the laundry done twice a week at our hospital and there are opportunities for the other prisoners to shower at any time," Hall said.

"I know the food is good because we frequently eat our own meals there."

Hall said he intentionally has his deputies, dispatchers or even himself served the regular prison food at unannounced times in order to check on it and to know if there are any problems with the meals. It is cooked at the jail and consists of such items as fried chicken, vegetables and desserts.

He said the county keeps a good and varied menu for the prisoners. He said at one time a Jerome man who was in custody because of a tax charge did cook in the county jail kitchen and he said there was no problem with the man's cooking.

"As far as I'm concerned all of his (Williams') claims are ridiculous," the sheriff said he had not been served with any papers, but he will turn them over to the county prosecutor and insurance company when he receives them.

Bill for fossil bed funds is ready for Reagan's signature

By the Times-News

TWIN FALLS — A bill containing $30,000 for the Hagerman Fossil Beds is on its way to President Reagan for signature, Sen. James McCure's office said Thursday.

Half the money will be used to close a road running beneath the beds, said McCure's spokesman H.D. Palmer. The beds were damaged in a landslide at Bell Rapids April 6. The balance of the funds will help determine what caused the slide, he said.

The road, which runs along the edge of the beds, was used to reach the Bell-Rapids Mutual Irrigation Co. pumphouse destroyed in the slide.

Bell Rapids is several miles downriver on the Snake River from the Owsley Bridge to Hagerman.

The beds are a National Natural Landmark containing fossils of 13 species that lived in the Pliocene Epoch nearly 3.5 million years ago.

Idaho paleontologists are unable to determine the exact extent of the damage because of a lack of fossil records and further slides. The beds have been described by the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, which manages them, as in 100 percent poor ecological condition due to erosion from irrigation runoff and other factors.

Possible causes of the slide April 9 include the unusually wet springs in 1985 and 1986 and seepage from irrigation canals above the beds says Palmer.

The Bell Rapids tract consists of 25,000 acres on a butte atop the fossil beds. Shortly after the slide occurred Gary Carson, BLM district manager, said water from irrigation seeps into the ground loading up the hillsides and when the water gets too heavy it slides out.

When one of the two Bell Rapids "pump houses" was destroyed, members agreed to rearrange the irrigation pipes leading from the river to get them through the summer.

There are other aid requests for Bell Rapids farmers pending before Congress but the status of them could not be determined on Thursday.

In April the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service denied the irrigation company's $42,000 request to cope with damage to the irrigation system. ASCS said, "a review of the documentation submitted does not show a natural disaster to be the principal cause of the earth slide."

Infant placed in foster home

TWIN FALLS — A three-month-old Blaine County infant that was removed from a vehicle at the Magic Valley Mall shopping center Saturday has been placed in a foster home pending further investigation into the incident.

Police have turned the child over to the Department of Health and Welfare. Public Safety Director Tim Qualls said. As of Monday no charges had been filed in the case. The infant and mother were not identified since charges had not been brought by health and welfare authorities.

Police reports show that the infant was heard crying in a parked car Saturday at the shopping mall. It was removed from the car by the mall security officer and taken to the police department. Reports indicated the child was apparently left alone in the car when left by the mother, but had awakened and pulled the blanket over his face.

Immediate efforts to locate the mother were unsuccessful, but police said she came to the station about 4:10 p.m. to report her baby missing from her car.

The mother came to the police department about 25 minutes after the baby was removed from the vehicle by the security officer who was alerted to the problem by a concerned citizen.

Police sergeant takes new job

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls police sergeant is moving back to his home state of Illinois to become a small-town police chief, a job he says will allow him to continue his education.

Kent McDowell will leave work for the police department Thursday with a lot of regret as well as anticipation.

In a letter to the city and public safety director Tim Qualls, McDowell said he is leaving with only a few bitter memories and instead has a great deal of appreciation for the training and experience he has gained with the Twin Falls police department.

McDowell will become police chief of the small town of Astoria, Ill. He said the county sheriff's office provides protection for the community except during nighttime hours. McDowell will be a full-time employee but will be assisted by several part-time officers. The arrangement will allow him to work

Main Street USA to be topic

HAGERMAN — A representative from the Region IV Development Association will discuss the Main Street USA program tonight at the Senior Citizen Hall in Hagerman, south of the city park.

Gooding-Wendell Hagerman business people are invited. The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. and attend Western Illinois University during the daytime.

There is a teaching degree and has coached in the Twin Falls school system and the service club football league. He said his experience in law enforcement gained in Twin Falls and his work with youth helped him obtain the police chief position in the Hagerman school system for a law enforcement degree and masters degree in sociology.

Holiday not hampered by fires

SHOSHONE — Only one fire that could be considered all serious was reported by Bureau of Land Management officials in the Magic Valley area for the holiday week-end.

Dale Chatterton, fire officer for the Shoshone BLM District, said a crew was still at Magic Reservoir late Sunday night, mopping up a 50-acre blaze that started in the community of East Magik.

He said the fire started about 7 p.m. Sunday in the recreation community and because of wind was in the right direction, it missed all of the buildings in the town. He said wind gusts up to 40 mph spread the fire but moved it into brush and grass instead of private property.

Exact cause of the fire was not known and only one BLM fire crew responded. Another crew from Shoshone was assisting BLM fire fighters in the Boise area where a number of arson fires have occurred for the holiday week-end.

Another small fire covered about a quarter of an acre near U.S. Highway 93 west of Kinsy Butte, Chatterton said. The fire resulted from a broken axle on a vehicle but was kept from spreading by the motorist until a fire crew arrived.

Chatterton said those using public land for recreational uses during the holiday week-end "observed regulations and no firefighter-caused fires were reported in the Shoshone district."

Bank and Trust to provide funds for skateboard

Wallace said he attempted to call the YPCA as a possible place for the ramp, "but no one ever got back to me."

He added, "I'll be glad to do anything from here on out."

An infrequently-used city tennis court in South Park would be a good place to build a ramp, he suggested.

Bengeoeche said he had also reported complaints from merchants.

A handful of youths appeared at the meeting to protest the ordinance. Clay Wallace, 18, of Twin Falls said skateboarders aren't responsible for closing downtown.

The board's Executive Committee considered two versions of the policy, from the medical staff and from the Bio-medical Ethics Committee. Property owners John Breckenridge and Roy Raymond were instrumental in the forming of the second LID, Courtney said.

"The city block of Southern Idaho will each pay for about one-third of the costs. The two entities, however, will not be bound to make their payments like the other property owners on the site but bars them from indebting themselves over a long period of time without a public vote on the issue. Instead, they will be allowed to appropriate their own money."

The costs on both projects include the improvements, collection of assessments and engineering, clerical, printing, advertising and inspection services, city staff reported.

The public is invited to watch.

Woman's 'love' needs to be analyzed

DEAR ABBY — I've been in love with "George" for six years. He's 29 and I'm 21. Ours was a long-distance romance.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby:

(I live in Los Angeles and George lives in San Diego.) We got together almost every weekend, taking turns making the drive. We were making serious plans to marry when last Christmas he told me he was marrying a young woman co-worker he had said was "just a friend!"

I was heartbroken because I had no other man in my life since I met George, and I cared deeply for him and thought it was mutual.

He phoned me a few days ago to say he "missed" me, and could tell his wife he had to be out of town "on business," so if I wanted to drive to San Diego, we could hole up in a motel for a couple of days.

Abby—I am ashamed to admit that I really want to see him again because I still love him, but I don't want to be a party to adultery. Should I go to San Diego? The thought of not being with him is tearing me apart.

WITH GEORGE

DEAR STILL: The kind of "love" you feel for George needs to be explored to help you find out why you still love a man who deceived you, used you, rejected you and now wants to use you again.

Give him a firm, unqualified NO. Then get in therapy to discover why you are tempted to pursue such clearly self-destructive behavior. You deserve better. Be good to yourself, or nobody else will.

DEAR ABBY: About five months ago, I ran into a relative of mine at the supermarket. She told me that her son was getting married — she gave me the date, and told me to mark it on my calendar. I did, and was eagerly looking forward to attending the wedding. It was two weeks away, and I have not as yet received an invitation. Others in my family have received theirs. "I am wondering now if mine got lost in the mail, or perhaps I was never sent one."

I considered phoning this relative to remind her that she had asked me to mark the date of her son's wedding on my calendar, but no invitation was received. Then I thought it would only embarrass her, so why should I raise her parade?

What do you think I should do?

—BAFFLED IN BALTIMORE

DEAR BAFFLED: There would be no harm in calling this relative to remind her that she asked you save the date, and as yet you've received no invitation. But if you would feel uncomfortable doing so, why not ask a mutual relative to call and ask her?

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "W.F. in Palmyra, Neb.," who wrote about the alcoholic lady who was drunk when he went to pick her up to drive her to a retirement home in Texas. The lady had told him that she had no family and he was concerned about her because she passed out—and he didn't know whom to notify about her condition.

Abby, I am a recovering alcoholic woman and I've been sober in AA for four years. Please tell "W.F." to waste no time putting that woman in contact with Alcoholics Anonymous. He'll find Alcoholics Anonymous listed in the Yellow Pages of the telephone directory.

Abby, if this woman has no family as she says, she will find a loving, understanding "family" with these people. AA saved my life and I pray that this woman will have a second chance as I did.

—SOBER, GRATEFUL AND HAPPY

DEAR SOBER: Many wrote to suggest that Alcoholics Anonymous could be the answer to this woman's prayers. Thanks to all of you.

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 6940, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

Mother/son relationships can be ambivalent

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP) — Women communicate more freely with their daughters than with their sons, and find raising sons more complicated, according to an associate professor at the State University of New York at Binghamton.

Linda Paroccy, a sociologist who teaches interdisciplinary studies, says there has been little research or analysis on how women see relationships with sons, particularly with sons over the age of 16.

"There is a mother-son equivalent to 'Portnoy's Complaint,' which explores the relationship from a son's point of view," she says.

"Her recently published book, 'Mothers and Sons: Toward an Understanding of Responsibility' is an effort to listen, really listen, to what mothers at all economic levels are saying about their view of the responsibility of raising sons."

Although women often are labeled "people-keepers" within the family, particularly between fathers and sons, Paroccy says they are increasingly uncomfortable in that role, and even resent it.

"Women speak in a different voice... and make moral judgments in a different way than fathers," she says. "They tend to be more conciliatory and compromising."

"masculine" in the traditional sense of the word.

Many encourage their sons to enter the military, yet Paroccy's research indicates women often have ambivalent feelings about those traditional masculine values.

Her study of 120 mothers turned up some "joyous stories" of blossoming relationships between women and their sons, particularly among those who have begun to challenge the traditional mother role, she says.

"Women who have developed their own identities, through education, outside activities and work, are becoming more at ease and communicating better with their sons," she says.

"Most important," Paroccy adds, "women are questioning the myth that they alone are responsible for the well-being of their sons. This is the necessary beginning of true friendship and more realistic expectations between mothers and sons."

Check your fitness level after resting

NEW YORK (AP) — You can check your aerobic fitness level by taking your resting (lying-down) pulse, says the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

The best time is right after you wake up and before you consume any stimulants or experience any stress. A fit heart pumps more blood per beat, so it uses less beats to supply the resting body.

Pitching-thin Cowboys get pair of wins over Blackfoot

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — At a time when the Twin Falls Cowboys really needed pitching, they got a pair of complete-game performances Monday night, sweeping a Southern Region American Legion baseball twinned against Blackfoot here.

Kevin Ames tossed a two-hit shutout in the opener as the Cowboys posted an 8-0 victory. Tom Prater held Blackfoot to a single run in the first inning and pitched shutout ball through the rest of the game as the Cowboys won that game 4-1.

"The pitching is coming through," said Cowboy Coach Mike Federico, whose Twin Falls staff is down to a trio of pitchers. "That's nothing new for them. They (Prater and Ames) were not achieving what I thought they could do and what they thought they could do. Tonight, they did."

The conference sweep by the Cowboys evened their conference mark at 3-3 and kept Twin Falls in the race for the top spot in the region. The Cowboys, 11-14 for the season, are in third place in the five-team region, 4 games behind pacesetter Idaho Falls and 2 games behind second-place Pocatello.

Spinks has better claim on heavyweight crown than Tyson

By SHIRLEY POVICH
The Washington Post

Mike Tyson is 30 for 30, a knocker-out of 27 of his 31 opponents whom did not survive round 1.

He has been an instant favorite to destroy any witness adventurer who climbs into a ring with him. At the age of 20, he is being applauded as the youngest heavyweight champion in boxing's history.

MIKE TYSON Still unbeaten man who unified all heavyweight titles extant by winning 49 fights in a row, and beaten by nobody until Spinks came along. Until somebody lacks Spinks, there is no other champion. Tyson's so-called title is the $3-billion of heavyweight titles. It was conferred of a series of victories over boxing's nobodies who held trashy titles awarded on whim by laughingstock boxing groups with high-sounding names like World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association, both self-appointed with self-interest.

His claim as the new, undisputed champion was first shouted by Home Box Office, the outfit for which he has been working. It is the shame of so many sportswriters and the army of untaught radio and TV sports commentators that they suspended all reason and embraced the Don King-HBO party line.

It's champion. The IBF has proclaimed a new champion of its own, Tony Tucker, who has been fighting on undercards.

But a few days ago an odd thing happened. The ghost of Spinks gave Gerry Cooney 29 1/2 pounds and flattened him. In "as spurious as a one-inning no-hitter. Among the most important guys he beat were Pinkie Thomas, Tony Tubbs, Bonecrusher Smith and Trevor Berbick, who as heavyweights would be flattered by being termed undistinguished.

MIKE TYSON Still unbeaten man who unified all heavyweight titles extant by winning 49 fights in a row, and beaten by nobody until Spinks came along. Until somebody llegged in two rounds. Inevitably the Spinks-Tyson match will be made. There is too much money out there for it to be otherwise. Conceivably it could top the fight scene in 1987.

When it does happen, the savvy Spinks will probably lick Tyson, cut him up, knock him out, walk out the winner by a wide margin. He is unbeaten. He has knockout power in either hand. And as far as it has been tested, his chin is suitably of iron. There hasn't been any aggressive heavyweights since Dempsey, or since Joe Frazier came out smoking. He is the most exciting heavyweight of this generation.

Failure of NCAA cutbacks may signal collegiate reforms are in trouble

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The defeat of an NCAA Presidents Commission proposal to reduce the number of athletic scholarships and the size of coaching staffs seems to signal a new era of self-interest in college athletics programs.

Whether that is indeed the case, and whether it will have an effect, will become known over the next 18 months during a series of Commission-mandated forums on college athletics.

Commission called for a half-dozen or so meetings across the country to collect data on the role of athletics. Given the decisive defeats of various cutback legislation presented during a special convention at Dallas last week, the momentum seems to have swung back to big-time athletic programs — and has renewed hope within that group for a definitive NCAA restructuring.

"We are working against powerful market forces," conceded Michael Heyman, chancellor of the University of California-Berkeley and a participant in the first forum session at Dallas. "Let's face it. There is a public, and the public will be served."

The question is how many programs will be serving that public. The battle of big-time vs. not-so-big has been going on for decades. The last substantive move, involving football, occurred in 1977, when the major programs weren't as united as they appear to be today. Because the majors couldn't control the legislative maneuvering, several smaller programs entered the new Division I-A, with a relative few going into the new Division I-AA, which had been designed with the not-so-majors in mind.

Another difficultly, according to Spooner, who is employed by the Moscow-based U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade Council, is grasping when to respect an American's and when to dispute the Soviet's position.

Soviets vow to master arcane international sport known as baseball

The Washington Post

MOSCOW — By the time Moscow's first baseball tournament came to a batty close Sunday, many seemed to care much who won or lost.

From the time the tournament opened last Tuesday, zany things happened, including lopsided scores (one example: 28-1), shortstops dropping out of line and effortless home runs by players from the Soviet cities of Tashkent, Moscow and Kiev, which finished 1-2-3, showed a mixture of intensive training and a true skill of natural athletes.

Most of the players are students in their late teens or early twenties. Soviet coaches handpick athletes with skills close to those needed in baseball and they hone them: sprinters have been geared toward base running, handball players toward pitching, and so on.

One weak spot for Soviet players is throwing, according to Richard Spooner, an American who helps coach one of the Moscow teams. The reason: popular Soviet sports — such as soccer and hockey — are geared toward the use of the feet instead of the hands.

Encouraged by the recent decision to make baseball an Olympic sport, enthusiasts from the Ukrainian capital of Kiev formed the Soviet Union's first official team last December. Since then, tactics have proven the most difficult aspect of the game to learn, according to Soviet trainers and coaches. "We can hit and run," said Andrei Tolokovsky, 78, a player with the Moscow Chemical-Technological Institute team. "But all of this stuff about balls and strikes and stealing bases is a bit much." Another difficulty, according to Spooner, who is employed by the Moscow-based U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade Council, is grasping when to respect an American's and when to dispute the Soviet's position.

A's slugger says he's taunted by racist fans

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Racist remarks are shouted at players in most ballparks but not as much as here in Oakland, Athletics slugger Jose Canseco said Sunday.

A vocal minority of about 20 percent of the "hunkin' fans" — mostly younger ones between 18 and 25 years old, abuse the Hispanic and black players with racist taunts, Canseco said.

"To me, the remarks they make are very racist," the Cuban-born Canseco said. "It seems like they're alcoholics, drug addicts. I mean, that's the only people who come out to put down the ballplayers."

Canseco said the Athletics generally don't have a very supportive crowd, although he did enjoy playing up to the cheering crowd in left field on Sunday after he homered twice and made two good catches in a 3-1 victory over Boston.

Canseco's teammate, Reggie Jackson, who wrote recently in Sports Illustrated about racism in baseball, said he has discussed the situation with Canseco.

"Jose hears a lot of Cuban remarks," Jackson said. "People drink and they get bold. It's bothered him a lot. I told him to just keep swinging that pole."

Jackson said he didn't think there was any more racism in Oakland than anywhere else.

Oakland Manager Tony LaRussa said the team hasn't discussed the racist remarks very much, and the player's feel it was a serious problem.

"The fans pay their way in, they can shout whatever they want," he said. "I don't hear much of it."

"I've been coming here 20 years, and I've never heard a racist remark" — Jose Hernandez, Oakland Tribune sports writer Ron Bergman said. "You'd have to be crazy to say something like that with all the blacks and Hispanics in the area."

Canseco criticized Oakland fans last year, and he complained that he wasn't getting fan support for the All-Star game because he was Hispanic. He also said his background might thwart his chances for the Rookie of the Year award against California's Wally Joyner. However, he says he won the award after hitting 33 homers.

AL: Viola hurls Twins to shutout of Yankees

NEW YORK (AP)—Frank Viola's mind went blank—and that's what he threw at the New York Yankees. It was the third inning and the Minnesota left-handed ace's real crisis Monday night as he pitched the Twins to a five-hit, 2-0 victory into first place in the American League West. The Twins got three hits off Ron Guidry, but two of them were home runs, by Tom Brunansky in the first inning and Kent Hrbek in the seventh.

With two out in the third, Rickey Henderson singled for New York's first hit and Viola, who had issued only six walks in his previous seven starts, walked Willie Randolph and Don Mattingly to load the bases.

"I don't really know what I was thinking," Viola said. "I've had so many confrontations with Winfield already—I think he has more home runs against me than anybody."

"I was rushing the ball to Mattingly so I was just trying to get myself together and stay back. I told myself to sit back, sit back, and let my arm take over and fortunately it worked out."

Viola started Winfield with a fastball for ball one. A change-up managed to get Winfield missed another change for strike two. Another fouled off a fastball, and another change-up, then hit a routine fly ball to right field on a high fastball.

"He just got under it a little bit," said Viola, who walked four and struck out seven. "The big thing tonight was being able to get my change-up over the plate. It made my fastball look quicker. Even when I went out and got a walk, I was able to sneak my change-up in there."

Viola, 26, had to be good-to-beal Guidry, 1-4, who pitched the Yankees' first complete game since May 10, beyond an 8-0 game.

"My stuff was just as good as it was in Toronto," said Guidry, who pitched 7 2/3 scoreless innings against the Blue Jays last Tuesday. "I'm excited with the velocity I'm getting on my fastball."

"It's always frustrating to lose close game, but I'm doing the best job I can and these guys are doing the best job they can. It's just not happening right now. Hopefully, it gets better. I've still got a job to do—go out and pitch the best I can."

The victory enabled the Twins to climb into first place in the American League West, one game ahead of Kansas City, which lost to Cleveland. The Yankees' lead in the AL East on Sunday is 3 1/2 games.

With two out in the first inning, Brunansky hit his 17th home run of the season, an opposite-field drive over the fence in right near the 353-foot sign.

That was enough to give the Twins their fourth consecutive victory although Hrbek hit his 23rd home run. He was honored in a pre-game ceremony and seven of his last 11 games and seven of his last 11 games. He had 20 homers in his last 43 games dating back to May 11.

It was Viola's first victory in his last four starts, but he had his first of the season and his fourth complete game in 19 starts.

Besides the third-inning threat, the only other Yankee to advance beyond first base was Claudell Washington, who doubled with one out in the fourth and was thrown out by catcher Tim Laudner when he tried to steal third.

Cleveland 9
Kansas City 7
CLEVELAND (AP)—Two-run homer, hit a grand slam with one out in the eighth inning Monday night, giving the Cleveland Indians a 9-7 decision over the Kansas City Royals and ending Bert Sabernagen's 13th victory.

The loss dropped the Royals, who had gone into the game in a virtual tie with Minnesota to a 1 1/2-game back in Kansas City, which had a six-game winning streak snapped, led 6-5 after Danny Tartabull hit a three-run homer in the top of the eighth. Sabernagen, 44-3, pitching with three days' rest for the first time this season, allowed leadoff singles to Julio Franco and Joe Carter and was relieved by Steve Farr.

Tartabull's second home run, Park Walker, hit to load the bases.

Snyder then hit the first pitch over the center field fence for his fifth homer, tying Cleveland, which lost 6-5 to Chicago on Sunday, its third victory in the last 15 games.

Sammy Stewart, 41, won despite allowing the home run to Tartabull, the first batter he faced in relief of Steve Carlton. Carlton struck out six, with Bob Jackson, his final victim, marking his 4,000th career strikeout.

After an RBI groundout by Brett in the ninth, Mark Huttenbach got his second save by getting the last out with the tying runs on second and third.

Carlton took a 5-3 lead and a four-inning lead in the eighth inning before allowing a leadoff double to Kevin Seitzer and a single to Brett, which brought on Stewart. Tartabull followed with his fifth homer.

Steve Carlton, 40, struck out ahead 5-3 in the fifth with a two-run homer, his sixth, following a walk to Brett.

Snyder put Cleveland ahead 2-0 in the ninth inning with his 15th homer following a single by Tabler.

The Royals scored three runs in the third on Jackson's 18th homer, two walks, an RBI single by Seitzer and a sacrifice fly by Brett.

Cleveland tied the game 3-3 in the bottom of the third on Carter's RBI double.

Oakland 5

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Tony Phillips' two-out, two-run double in the eighth inning and a sacrifice fly in the ninth gave the Oakland Athletics to a 5-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers Monday night.

Rollie Fingers retired Eric King, 37, retired the first two batters in the eighth, but singles to Terry Steinbach and Carney Lansford set up Phillips' go-ahead double. Phillips also doubled during a three-run seventh-inning rally for the Athletics, who came back from a 3-0 deficit.

Gene Nelson, 41, pitched one inning of relief for the victory, while Fingers retired the Tigers in the ninth for his 15th save.

Dave Lelper also worked two innings of "hitless" relief for the Athletics, who have won four of their last five games. The Athletics are 9-4 at Oakland Coliseum this year.

Trailing 3-0 in the seventh, the Athletics reached starter Walt Terrell for three runs to tie the game. Carlos Guillen, the Athletics' two-run homer, hit the score.

Ronney started the rally with a leadoff single and Phillips doubled him to third. After Alfredo Griffin and was ruled out by home-plate umpire Durwood Merrill for running out of the base line, Luis Polonia's grounder to second scored pitcher-turned-manager Tommy LeeMaster to make it 3-1.

Davis led off with his homer, knocking out Terrell.

The Tigers scored three unearned runs in the eighth, starting Dennis Lamp in the fourth inning, breaking a scoreless tie.

A double by Bill Madlock and two errors by Griffin off shortstop Greg Gandy, who started on the bench, by Pat Sheridan made it 2-0 and the third run scored on a bases-loaded walk to Darrell Evans.

Seattle 3
Milwaukee 2
SEATTLE (AP)—Ray Quinones hit a two-run homer and Mike Kingery's bloop single drove in the go-ahead run as Seattle ended a three-game losing streak with a 3-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Monday night.

The second-inning homer off Bill Watters, 7-5, which just cleared the left field wall, was the eighth for Quinones, who hit only two in 98 games last season. Quinones also drove in Alvin Davis, who reached first on a fielder's choice after Davis Valle started the inning with a double.

Seattle starter Mike Morgan, 7-9, scored on the Milwaukee Brewers' error.

NL: Idle Cards boost division lead to season-high 8 games

HOUSTON (AP)—Houston Manager Hal Lanier says if Alan Ashby doesn't make the National League All-Star team it's because he doesn't play in the right city.

"I think he deserves it. He's the only catcher hitting over .300 but he doesn't play in one of the big media centers where he can get the big vote," Lanier said. "I think he's the best catcher in the league."

With two out in the first inning, Astros to a 9-3 victory over the Montreal Expos Monday night.

The victory gave the St. Louis Cardinals, who were named to Monday's season-high 8-game lead in the National League East. Houston cut Cincinnati's lead in the National League West to 2 1/2 games.

Ashby raised his average to .303 and hit his eighth home run of the season, one more than last season.

"I'd love to make the All-Star team, I make no bones about it," Ashby said. "This is the best I've ever performed over a stretch like this."

The victory gives Houston a 43-38 record at the midway point of the season. Houston had the best record at this time last season and went on to win the National League West Division title.

"We're basically in the same situation as last year," Ashby said.

"We're in a position to strike like we were last year. The difference is this year we know we can do it and last year we weren't sure."

Houston starter Danny Darwin, 5-5, retired 11 straight Montreal batters with one out in the sixth and with one out Darwin pitched the final out for eight innings. Dave Meads pitched the ninth inning.

Montreal starter Dennis Martinez, 3-1, lasted only 2 1/3 innings, allowing six runs on seven hits.

With the scored tied 2-2, Ashby led off the Astros' eighth inning by moving to second on Billy Hatcher's single and scored on Bill Doran's double.

Houston made it 6-2 in the third on an RBI double by Jose Cruz scoring Glenn Davis and Ashby followed with his homer.

The Astros added a run in the fifth on a bases-loaded single by Chuck Linton and made it 9-2 in the sixth on a two-run single by Denny Walling.

Houston took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on a walk to Hatcher, single by Doran, and a sacrifice fly to Hatcher on a two-run single by Denny Walling.

Hube Brooks led off the Expos' second with his seventh home run of the season and Vance Law scored on Jeff Reed's double to tie the score. 2-2. Reed doubled in the eighth and scored on Expos' third run on Norm Winingham's single.

Philadelphia 9
Cincinnati 6
CINCINNATI (AP)—Glenn Wilson snapped a fifth-inning tie with a two-run homer and Lance Parrish added a three-run shot as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Cincinnati Reds 9-6 Monday night.

The game started 1 hour and 43 minutes late because of rain.

Parrish led off with a single and starter Ted Power, 6-4, and Wilson followed with his 11th homer of the season.

On a bases-loaded walk, Wilson hit a grand slam to lead off the fifth, giving the Phillies a 6-0 lead in the fifth.

Philadelphia led the score 4-0 on Parrish's eighth homer of the season, scoring Mill Thompson and Hayes, who had singled and doubled, respectively.

Chased starter Shane Rawley in the third after Eric Davis doubled and scored on Dave Parker's double. Parker scored on Buddy Bell's infield hit to shortstop for the lead.

But the Phillies tied it for the score 6-6 in the fourth on Juan Samuel's run-scoring double and Thompson's sacrifice fly.

The Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on a walk to Thompson and an RBI double by Hayes.

The Reds came back with four runs in the second inning. Parker singled, Bell walked and Bo Diaz singled to tie the score. Bell scored on a wild pitch and Diaz and Nick Esasky scored on a double by Power.

The Phillies slipped on the wet turf in right field and the ball rolled to the wall.

The defeat snapped Cincinnati's three-game winning streak.

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Mike

Aldrete hit a three-run homer and Mike Lary allowed two runs in eight innings as the San Francisco Giants beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-4 Monday night to complete a doubleheader sweep.

Riddle of minor league to center to start the Giants' fourth and scored when starter Doug Drabek, 18, threw the ball into left field attempting a double-play second base.

LaCoss walked and Miller singled in the sixth before Aldrete hit his second homer of the season.

LaCoss, 7-5, added a two-run single and Miller added a RBI triple driving the Giants' three-run seventh against Drabek, who hasn't won since April 19, and reliever Barry Jones.

LaCoss took a 7-0 lead into the eighth when Sid Bream hit a two-run double with two outs. Jeff Robinson came on in the ninth inning and allowed two runs before Craig Leffler's came to get the last three outs and his third save.

The Pirates scored two in the ninth when Bobby Bonilla scored on a two-out RBI single by Steve Mitchell's three-base error on a Marston grounder and Mike LaValliere followed with a double.

LaCoss allowed three singles in the first, but got R.J. Reynolds to fly out with two on and two out after catcher Bob Brenly threw out Barry Bonds attempting to steal third.

San Francisco 7

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Dave Dravecky won his first start with San Francisco and Chli Davis drove in the go-ahead second base.

The Pittsburgh Pirates 7-5 Monday in the first game of a two-night doubleheader.

Dravecky was considered by Giants manager Roger Craig the key player in Saturday's seven-player trade with San Diego.

The Giants, who beat the Chicago Cubs 7-0 Monday night, won consecutive games for the first time since they won three straight, June 9-11. The Giants have lost 14 of their last 22 games.

Dravecky, 47, pitched two-hit ball over five innings, but was lifted in the sixth after failing to retire any of the five batters he faced.

After Mike Diaz hit a three-run homer, his eighth, on a balk, Jeff Robinson bailed Dravecky out of a two-on, none-out jam. Scott Garretts came on for the final 1 1/2 innings and earned his 11th save. The game was

Hamblins team to win Rupert pro-am honors

By The Times-News
 RUPERT — The father-son combination of Don and Mike Hamblin proved too much for the professional field in the annual Rupert Pro-Am Monday night.

Mike, assistant to his father at Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course, carved out a six-under par 65 to win the tournament. Mike's brother, Don, finished with a 71.

Burley's Tracy Frank had a 69 to second Hamblin, followed by John Graham, Idaho Falls, and Tad Wagon, Caldwell, at 71. Del Ericson, Twin Falls, and Dennis Howell, Pocatello, 72.

Mike Hamblin's best ball teams double-dipped that division, taking first and fifth. In first place were Duane Serpa, Gary Rene Jim Latham and Dell Timpany, at 30 under 112 while Dennis Bruener, Bob Hutchins and Dave Pedersen and Dan Webster had 119.

Second place was won by the Canyon Springs group of Ericson, Doyle Morrill, Milo Pearson, Greg Hafer.

In the upper division, Greg Hafer, Twin Falls, was the gross champion at 77, followed by Dennis Bruener and Duane Serpa, Gary Rene Jim Latham and Dell Timpany, at 30 under 112 while Dennis Bruener, Bob Hutchins and Dave Pedersen and Dan Webster had 119.

Second place was won by the Canyon Springs group of Ericson, Doyle Morrill, Milo Pearson, Greg Hafer.

Softball turns 100 years old

'Indoor baseball' has come a long way from Chicago

By MARIO FOX
The Associated Press

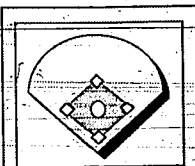

CHICAGO — From its beginning exactly 100 years ago with a stick swatting a boxing glove, softball has developed into a sport played by an estimated 50 million people in 75 countries.

"It's an easy game to play. It doesn't take too much energy. And it's a time-killer," says Billy Carter, brother of ex-President Jimmy Carter and one-time softball player in southwestern Georgia.

To toast the sport's 100th anniversary, the Amateur Softball Association, headquartered in Oklahoma City, unveils a plaque Monday to mark the spot where the game was born on Chicago's Near South Side.

The ex-President's brother is one of many celebrities who have enjoyed softball. Others include movie-maker Woody Allen, actor George C. Scott, singer Barbara Mandrell and syndicated newspaper columnist Tony Danza.

"I'm not playing any more — too old," says Royko, 54. He started in the sport as a youngster "because I didn't want to break a leg playing football."

Billy Carter once played for a league in Americus, Ga., and later pitched on the news media team that played in Plains, Ga., when his brother was at the Southern White House in the late 1970s. He also has retired from the game.

"I'm too old to pitch. And it takes me too long to get out of bed when I do," said Carter, 40. Still very much in the softball spotlight, however, is pitcher Kathy Arndson, who was once able to strike out baseball slugger Reggie Jackson in his prime. In a one-on-one exhibition, Jackson fanned three times in a row in 1981. Arndson, 29, an assistant coach at Northwestern University in suburban Evanston and pitcher for the perennial national champion Hi-Ho Brackets of Stratford, Conn., since 1978, is proud of her individual accomplishments. They include 2,813 strikeouts in 1,834 1/2 mph and do more with it than any other major-league pitchers," says Bill Plummer, spokesman for the Amateur Softball Association.

"She can control the ball at 96 mph and do more with it than any other major-league pitchers," says Bill Plummer, spokesman for the Amateur Softball Association. "She can control the ball at 96 mph and do more with it than any other major-league pitchers," says Bill Plummer, spokesman for the Amateur Softball Association.

But there's a lot of glory-in-winners. "It gets you outside," says Penny Warner, 29, a systems engineer with IBM who has played organized softball in New York and now Chicago. "You're exercising but it's a group sport. Afterwards you give me. There's a lot of pressure."

Graphite may bring 'crack' of the bat back to the ballpark

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The "ping" is gone, the "crack" is back. Jess Heald has a 'space-age' alternative to the aluminum bat.

Head, president of Worth Sports Co. of Tullahoma, Tenn., is marketing a graphite bat which combines the durability of aluminum with the satisfying feel and sound of wood.

"We see the graphite bat as one possible solution to the growing problem of providing wooden bats of a major-league caliber," Heald said. "We're not suggesting that now is the time for graphite in the majors, but we are suggesting that it's not too early to begin looking for solutions before the problem becomes severe."

There is plenty of wood for making baseball bats, but only 1 percent is considered to be of the quality required for major-league bats. And players go through an average of 25 bats a season.

"Traditionally, only one bat out of every 100 has been used in the big leagues."

Our New Rate Cap Offer Is For Those Who Aren't Sure Where Interest Rates Are Headed.

Some say they'll go back up. Some say they're going down. Either way, you'll benefit from First Security's Home Equity Line rate cap offer. Our variable rate loan will follow the prime rate if it falls. It stays at 3% over prime, quite a competitive rate. Currently, that works out to an 11.25% Annual Percentage Rate (as of June 4, 1987). And should interest rates snap back up, you're protected. Our rate cap is 13.25% Annual Percentage Rate. That's the absolute highest our variable interest rate could go, and it's good through January 1, 1991. All you have to do is apply before September 11, 1987. TAX DEDUCTIBLE THIS YEAR. AND NEXT, ETC. You might elect to use your credit line to pay medical bills. Or to finance a college education. Or purchase a new camper. Or make home improvements. Or even to pay off another home equity loan that doesn't have a rate cap. In any case, chances are excellent that you'll still be able to deduct all the interest. (For specific details, see your tax advisor.) NO ANNUAL FEE. NO IMMEDIATE CLOSING COSTS. During our Home Equity Line sale, we've eliminated loan origination fees. And we've deferred closing fees, such as appraisal and filing fees, until you actually take out a loan on your credit line. CALL NOW FOR AN APPLICATION. For your Home Equity Line application, call 1-800-538-1133. Blazers claim Lee damaged; want trade nullified

By BOB BAUM
The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — The Portland Trail Blazers announced Monday they have taken steps to rescind the trade that sent veteran guard Jim Paxson to the Cleveland Cavaliers for forward Keith Lee.

Bucky Buckwalter, the Blazers' vice-president for basketball operations, said the team decided to call off the deal on the recommendation of team physician Robert Cook.

Cook said after examining Lee last week that he believed there was a "high risk" that the former Memphis

Pro basketball

State star would suffer serious knee problems in his NBA career.

"When the final recommendation was given from Bob Cook that we not consummate the trade, we decided to rescind it," Buckwalter said. "It never was really completed."

"It's always contingent on the physical and Jim Paxson hasn't even taken his yet."

Blazer spokesman Tim Benn said the team had notified the NBA office and the Cavaliers of the decision. Buckwalter said the team was trying to reach an agreement with Wayne Embry, general manager for the Cavaliers, had a one-sentence response to the situation.

"We are unhappy about it and we will contest it," Embry said, declining to comment further.

Buckwalter said the Cavaliers could appeal the action to the NBA hierarchy, but he said he was confident the decision to call off the deal would be upheld.

After Cook's comments on Lee's physical were made public last week, Cavaliers' Coach Lenny Wilkens said the Trail Blazers were trying to back out of the deal because they had changed their minds.

"They obviously don't like the deal," Wilkens said. "They're doing whatever they can to get out of it."

But Buckwalter said the decision to call off the trade was made solely on the basis of Cook's recommendation.

"He (Lee) has never missed a game because of his knees, but we have to go with what (Cook) says now," Buckwalter said.

"We're disappointed," Buckwalter said, "because I think he (Lee) could have helped."

Wilkens has indicated the Cavaliers would fight any attempt to rescind the trade.

"I'm real surprised by this whole thing," he said. "They shouldn't be able to get away with something like this and I don't think they will."

The trade was announced on draft day, June 15, sending Paxson, the Blazers' all-time leading scorer, to the Cavs for the seldom-used Lee, who has not appeared in a first injury-plagued Blazer front line.

Surgery may idle Walton for all of 1987-88 NBA campaign

BOSTON (AP) — Major foot surgery scheduled for Tuesday could keep veteran center Bill Walton of the Boston Celtics out of action for most of next year, but the injury-plagued Walton hopes he won't miss the entire NBA season.

The 6-foot-11 Walton is to have surgery on his right foot and ankle to relieve the pressure that is causing stress fractures in the bone. The operation will be done in California by Drs. F. William Wagner and Tony Daly.

Walton is not sure the operation will sideline him for the entire 1987-88 season, which was the case when his left ankle and foot were operated on in 1981.

"I don't think this is as serious," Walton said. "I don't think they have to do as much. The problem is the same, but it's less severe. I don't think the recovery will be as long."

Walton said he made up his mind to have the surgery after a number of medical consultations.

"There's no other way around it," he told The Boston Herald. "The structure of the foot has to be changed. They have to relieve the stress by taking out sections of bone. And as far as being how far it went next season, hey, I waited all year (last season) and nothing good happened."

Walton, backup to starter Robert Parish, played just 10 regular season games after missing the first 61 with an inflamed right ankle joint.

He played in 12 playoff games, seven of which came after learning that the right navicular (foot) bone was fractured.

Walton, who turns 35 Nov. 5, hopes the surgery will allow him to play basketball several more seasons.

"It hurts every day when I wake up," he said. "I can't live that way."

The surgery I had in '81 was not done for basketball; it was done just so I could walk. This is the same thing.

"But basketball's still a big part of my life. It's what I want to do, and I'm going to do everything it takes to get back. I want to play as long as I can. I don't want to retire," he said.

delayed by rain for 45 minutes after 8 1/2 innings.

Diaz added a sacrifice fly in the seventh, and the Braves closed to within 6-5 in the eighth when Barry Bonds hit his 13th homer of the season.

Jeffrey Leonard led off the Giants' ninth with his 16th homer for an insurance run.

The Giants took a 2-0 lead in the first inning against the Reds, 3-1, on Will Clark's run-scoring groundout and Davis' RBI double with two out. Bob Melvin reached on a third baseman Bobby Bonilla's two-base blooping error in the second and scored on Robby Thompson's two-out single.

The Giants made it 6-0 in the third. Consecutive singles by Leonard, Clark and Davis produced a run before Dunne barked home Clark and Melvin's sacrifice fly scored Davis.

Chicago 7 San Diego 0

CHICAGO (AP) — Andre Dawson hit two home runs and a double to drive in four runs and Steve Trout pitched a four-hitter Monday, leading the Chicago Cubs to a 7-0 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Dawson, batting fourth in the lineup for the first time this season, homered in the second inning, doubled and scored on a single by Keith Moreland in the fourth and capped a four-run fifth with a three-run homer, his 21st of the season.

Both of his homers cleared the left field screen and landed on Waveland Avenue. Moreland also hit a Waveland Avenue homer in the sixth, his 14th.

It marked the fourth time this season and the 21st time in his career that Dawson had hit two homers in one game.

Trout—5-3 allowed four singles: Tony Gwynn's in the fourth, Garry Templeton in the fifth and eighth inning and Shane Mack in the sixth. He walked three and struck out five in earning his second complete game of the season.

Trout's first shutout in two years and the eighth of his career. Mark Grant, 1-1, was the loser in his first start for the Padres. Grant was acquired from San Francisco over the weekend in a player-trade deal.

Mike Brumley walked five open the Cubs, fifth and was forced at second on Trout's sacrifice attempt. Dave Martinez singled and one out later, Len Durham singled to score Trout and Dawson followed with his second homer.

Minnesota finally signs up Dozier

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — The Minnesota Vikings signing of No. 1 draft choice D. J. Dozier may open the door for some of the NFL's other first-round picks to sign, General Manager Mike Lynn said Monday.

Pro football

That characterization was disputed, however, by Leigh Steinberg, who represents three first-round picks, most of whom are expected to sign by Monday.

Except for quarterback Vinny Testaverde, who signed with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers even before they made him the first overall choice in the April 28 draft, Dozier, who was the 14th pick, signed the first first-rounder to sign.

The league must be broken at the point that the signing of Dozier," said Lynn, who finalized the deal with the former Penn State running back Sunday.

"I think you'll see a lot of pickings in the next week to 10 days."

D.J. DOZIER
First on many?

But Steinberg questioned that. "No other rookie in the round will be paid on that basis," Steinberg said. "The Vikings are traditionally the lowest paying team for rookies in the NFL. Mike Lynn may think this breaks the logjam; but their log has traditionally been broken, along, separated from the NFL forest."

With two weeks to go until the opening of training camps, four of the top-15 choices—in the draft have signed. The first-rounders and two in the third. According to NFL Players Association figures, 19 of the 33 drafted players had signed by Monday.

The situation is similar to last season, when just two of 28 first-rounders and 80 of 333 choices overall had been signed by July 16, the day the NFL season opened.

Lynn said Dozier was signed to a two-year pact plus an option year for a contract valued at about $1 million, but added: "In order to make the kind of money you're talking about, he's going to have to perform."

Lynn didn't give out figures, but according to sources, the agreement is for a $50,000 signing bonus, a salary of $135,000 the first year; $150,000 the second and a $300,000 loan that can be forgiven if Dozier plays 50 percent of the Vikings' offensive plays the first two years.

allowed seven hits and two walks in six innings for the victory. Edwin Nunez, the third Seattle pitcher, got the last four outs for his 10th save.

The Brewers tied the score 2-1 in the fifth on singles by Glenn Briggs, Jim Gantner, Ernest Riles and Robin Yount.

Seattle scored the go-ahead run in the fifth after Alvin Rodriguez reached first on a bunt single with two outs and stole his American League-leading 20th base, tying his career high.

Milwaukee catcher B.J. Surhoff threw the ball into center field trying to throw Reynolds out, allowing him to reach third. Kingery blooped the next pitch over from Wegman over shortstop for a single.

Toronto 6 Texas 4

TORONTO (AP) — George Bell and Mike Whit (hit) hit consecutive homers in the fifth inning and Jimmy Key pitched a six-hitter for seven innings as the Toronto Blue Jays snapped the Orioles' seven-game streak Monday night, defeating the Texas Rangers 6-4.

Key, 9-5, retired 12 Rangers in a row following Pete Incaviglia's solo homer, his 17th, gave Texas a 1-0 lead in the second inning. Bob Brower broke the tie, hitting a three-run homer on a fly ball in the fifth. Toronto scored four times off Charlie Hough, 9-4, in the second inning. Fred McGriff, Garth Iorg and Tony Fernandez had RBI singles and Kelly Gruber hit a sacrifice fly in the inning for Toronto, which was helped by two passed balls charged to Texas catcher Mike Stanley.

Chicago's Blue Jays pitched 6-1 in the third when Bell and Mike Whit connected for homers. It was the 28th for Bell and the sixth for Whit.

Baltimore 4 Chicago 1

BALTIMORE (AP) — Mike Griffin won his first major-league game since 1981, allowing five hits in seven innings as the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Chicago White Sox 4-1 Monday night, snapping a seven-game losing streak.

Ed Murray hit a solo homer and Kelly Gruber hit a sacrifice fly in the third when Bell and Mike Whit connected for homers. It was the 28th for Bell and the sixth for Whit.

Chicago's... three-game winning streak.

With the score tied 1-1 in the fifth inning, Terry Kennedy walked, was sacrificed to, advanced to second on a fly ball and scored on the single by Wiggins off Jose DeLeon, 6-6, who allowed only three hits in 6 1/2 innings.

DeLeon was relieved by Bryan Clark with one out in the seventh after issuing two walks. Wiggins singled to load the bases and Cal Ripken hit a two-run single off Jim Wineo over later.

Griffin, 1-2, struck out six during his seven-inning stint while making his third start for Baltimore after four seasons in the minors. Mark Williamson pitched the final two innings for his third save.

Baltimore led 1-0 in the second when Murray hit his 16th homer, his second in two days but only his fourth in 37 games.

Chicago, which had 17 runs and 21 hits against the Cleveland Indians in the fifth and sixth innings, Lyons' RBI grounder after a double by Greg Walker and a single by Carlton Fisk.

ripping and tearing at the president from both sides.

"State governments will get involved in this. I can imagine President Reagan, if he's resigning, demanding that their state universities remain in major college-football or basketball competition."

Heyman said three or four schools in his own Pac-10 Conference would be having difficulty deciding which way to go.

"People have been trying to make this an athletic director vs. president battle," Chuck Neinas, executive director of the College Football Association, said. "People seem to think there were 69 athletic directors who voted for it and 39 presidents who voted in favor."

"Well, there were six presidents there from the Southeastern Conference and five voted against it. There were three presidents from the Big Eight and they all voted against it. There were four presidents from the Big Ten who voted against it, just to name a few. I'm disappointed so many people have tried to create the illusion it's a big battle between CEOs and coaches and athletic directors."

leagues," Heald said. "The other 99 went to college, high school and youth leagues."

But with the introduction of aluminum bats in 1971, about 75 percent of the market for those lesser-grade wood bats is gone. And that makes it more expensive to produce top-quality bats.

The major leagues, like the colleges, could have adopted—the aluminum bat, but persists having the "ping" sound of metal hitting ball.

"Unlike an aluminum bat, the graphite duplicates the traditional cracking sound wood makes when striking a baseball," Heald said.

And the graphite bat would also be economical, he added. Most major leagues would go through only three a season.

gout out and drink beer and socialize."

There are slow or fast-pitch leagues, with all-male or coed players. Leagues are often sponsored by businesses or a park district. Most regions play with a 12-inch ball but the Chicago specialty is the 16-inch ball.

It was in 1887 at the Ferragut Bohouse on Chicago's Near South Side where George Hatcock, an employee of the Chicago Board of Trade, became the father of softball, according to the sport's historians.

Twenty friends, alumni from Yale and Harvard, gathered to await the results of the football game between the two schools.

loved the "realistic sound," which he called "important mentally."

"Hitting is a mental thing," he said. "The sound of aluminum turns me off."

"The graphite bat is made of a carbon fiber compound similar to that used for such diverse items as football helmets and shells of racing cars. The bat is filled with carbon-graphite foam to provide a "sweet spot."

Boston Red Sox outfielders Dwight Evans and Jim Rice said the "jumped off the bat quicker," while Boston teammate and three-time American League batting champion Wade Boggs said he believed he could hit the ball farther with a wooden bat.

There was a difference of opinion between Jose Cruz and his Houston Astros teammate, Glenn Davis. Cruz felt the graphite bat propelled the ball better than wood; Davis said it didn't.

The graphite bat has been approved for use in some baseball and softball leagues and is being studied by other organizations, but don't expect it to show up soon in the major leagues.

"Introducing something new to an extremely traditional sport is going to be controversial," Heald said.

"I'm talking about an expensive piece of equipment that has really changed very little since baseball's beginnings."

"Guys have been using this stuff (wood) so long it would take a lot to get them to change. It's going to take some getting used to," Davis said.

"I'm the wrong person to ask," he said.

New York Mets outfielder Mookie Wilson, another who tested the graphite bat. "You're talking to someone who is pretty traditional. I like wood. I used wood bats in college where everyone else was using metal bats."

The name "softball" — the brainchild of Denver's Walter Jackson — was officially adopted as the name of the sport in 1928.

Softball has many records but the most amazing of all may be the mark for the longest game, which belongs to 20 students at Los Alamos, New Mexico, on June 20-24, 1936, two teams of 10 players each played a low-pitch game for 100 hours and 30 innings, according to the Guinness Book of World Records.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

"Beware of the man of straw."
— St. Thomas Aquinas.

A defender who fails to take note of his partner's plays is a favorite to misdefend. For success, West must cooperate with both defenders to achieve an optimum result.

The most accurate defense with today's layout is West to lead the top of his doubleton diamond. East encourages with his seven and South is stuck. If he draws trumps, he loses three hearts and a diamond. If he doesn't draw them, he loses two hearts, a diamond and a diamond ruff.

Given the actual trump lead, the defense is not as evident, but a competent pair should clear the hearts. South wins the trump lead with his eight and cashes his trump ace which he knows that there will be no chance to ruff a third heart. Next, he leads a low diamond to dummy's king to present a challenge to the defense. For success, West must play his eight to show an even number and East must duck to retain control in diamonds. (South's two no-trump rebid denies that the diamond deuce is a singleton.)

The defense is now in charge and South is back at square one. If he draws trumps, he loses three hearts and a diamond. If he doesn't, he loses two hearts, a diamond and a diamond ruff.

ANSWER: Three no-trump. A bordering hand as far as values go. However, as with most club decisions, the odds go with the optimists.

Washington thrift acquires 2 Idaho savings and loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — United First Federal Savings and Loan and Provident Federal Savings and Loan, two of Idaho's most financially-troubled thrifts, were acquired Monday by Washington Federal Savings and Loan of Seattle, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board announced.

Provident Federal, with seven offices across the state, was considered the largest Idaho savings and loan in terms of savings and had assets just over $208 million on March 1. Washington Federal, which has focused its operations in the greater Seattle area, has assets of $1.3 billion.

Southland will focus on 7-11, go private

DALLAS (AP) — Southland Corp. officials said Monday they will focus on the flagship 7-Eleven convenience store chain and sell almost all other operations to finance a $5 billion plan to take the company private.

"If approved by shareholders, the deal would be one of the biggest leveraged buyouts ever, ranking second to the $6.1 billion buyout of Beatrice Cos. Inc. by the investment firm of Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. in April 1986.

assets to pay for the huge debt it will incur under the buyout. The debt had incurred under the Thompson plan also is likely to affect Southland's previous integration strategy, said Ed Gagnon, an investment analyst with Dallas investment firm Rauscher Pierce Refines Inc.

The sale would include Southland Dairies, one of the nation's three largest dairy processors with 28 plants and Chief Auto Rent, a convenience retailer of auto parts with 465 stores mostly in Texas and California.

The proposed buyout includes a common stock purchase totaling $3.76 billion, and debt refinancing that would boost the total value of the deal to more than $5 billion.

Southland stock traded in the $50 a share range in late March, but began climbing sharply in late May or speculation that the company's share price was undervalued and Southland was ripe for a takeover.

Energy Department study lists air conditioning costs

Among the hottest-selling items this time of year are air conditioners — with millions of us across the country right now feeling the heat.

which shows the EER, how the unit compares in efficiency to other models of similar size and a chart to help you estimate annual operating cost. This information is for you, use it!

Central air conditioners, which are measured by SEER (Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratio), are not required to carry labels, so you will have to do more research. Deal with a reputable contractor. Ask the contractor to show you the Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute's (ARI) certification directory that lists the SEER as well as other performance characteristics of the systems you are considering.

The DOE also disclosed that a full 25.7 million households have central air conditioning and 25.8 million have room units.

Reports of odometer rollbacks spur probe

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. Attorney Roy Hayes said Monday he will look into newspaper reports that General Motors Corp. employees rolled back odometers on vehicles tested at a plant in Pontiac.

Officials of GM's Truck & Bus Group, which oversees the plant in Pontiac, said they were conducting an internal investigation.

The charges were reported by The Oakland Press, a Pontiac newspaper, which interviewed unidentified workers at the plant.

"This is the first time I've heard of it," Hayes, U.S. attorney for the eastern district of Michigan, said Monday. "I'll have to discuss this with my staff. We'll have to look into it and make a decision" about whether to investigate further.

The reports of possible odometer fraud at GM, first published over the weekend, follow the June 24 indictment of Chrysler Corp. in St. Louis on odometer fraud charges for testing vehicles with disconnected odometers.

At GM's Pontiac West truck plant, where workers said they replaced and later rolled back odometers on trucks returned from overnight drives, GM officials planned to begin questioning employees, said spokeswoman Karl Huley.

The employees said supervisors at the truck plant who took vehicles home for evaluation were supposed to drive at most 80 miles, but the vehicles involved had been driven 140 to 170 miles before the odometers were rolled back.
