Rescuers help a young girl from the rain-swollen Guadalupe River, near Comfort, Texas.

Swollen Texas waters roll over vehicles; 8 are missing

By DAVID SEDENO

COMFORT, Texas — A church bus and a van carrying 43 people from a children's camp to a rafting expedition were swept into a rain-swollen river Friday, killing two people and leaving eight missing as survivors clung to trees awaiting rescue, authorities said.

Sheriff's officers said they had called camp officials between 3 and 4 a.m. Friday to warn against crossing the swollen river.

"Everybody down the river was certain, but I think that would be right that it could have been avoided if they would have taken notice of the warning."

The body of one girl was found three miles downstream, and a 14-year-old girl died when she fell 100 feet from a rope dangled by a rescue helicopter, authorities said.

"She couldn't hold on. She apparently was too weak to hold on. She had the rope around her property, but she just couldn't hold on," said Sgt. Charles Seale, area supervisor for the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The girl, who was from Mesquite, was identified as Melanie Finley. The second victim was identified as Tonya Smith, 13, of Scurry.

Survivors clung to trees or tried to form human chains to get out of the flood, but Seale said eight people ranging in age from 10 to 18 were still missing hours after the 7 a.m. accident. The accident occurred at a

Poindexter: Reagan would have approved

Diversion plan would have had President's OK, insists admiral

Testimony 'chilling,' Reagan quiet — A4

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former National Security Adviser John Poindexter testified Friday that no matter what the White House says he still believes President Reagan would have approved diverting Iranian arms-sale profits to the Nicaraguan Contras.

His comments drew quick new denials from Reagan officials.

In the face of sharp congressional questions about his own credibility, as well as White House denials, Poindexter stood by his earlier testimony that he approved the diversion on his own to protect President Reagan, that he never told the president and that he believed he wasn't doing anything Reagan himself wouldn't have approved.

Confronted with a statement on Thursday by Reagan's chief spokesman, Martin Fitzwater, that the president would not have allowed the diversion to proceed, Poindexter told the Iran-Contra committees on Friday, "I would have expected him to say that. That's the whole idea of deniability."

Reagan declined to respond to Poindexter's latest remarks, saying to reporters, "No comments until the investigation is over and then I will be eagerly responding."

However, his chief of staff Howard Baker challenged Poindexter's testimony and said of Reagan and the diversion, "I don't know about it, he simply would have stopped it."

Baker contended Poindexter's statements were merely "the admiral's opinion," based on no facts, evidence or conversation with the president.

Poindexter told the committees that he had based his view on 5 1/2 years of working for Reagan on the national security staff, including the final year during which he had nearly daily meetings with the president.

In a CBS News-New York Times poll released Friday, 53 percent of those questioned said they think Reagan is lying when he says he didn't know about the diversion, while 34 percent said he is telling the truth. And 47 percent said Poindexter is lying when he says he didn't tell Reagan while 33 percent believe the aide's story. The rest had no opinion.

The telephone poll was conducted Thursday, with interviews of 665 people nationwide and a statistical margin of error of plus or minus 4 percent, the sponsors said.

At the start of Poindexter's third day of testimony before the congressional committees, his attorney Richard Beckler, objected that committee members were being quoted in news accounts as questioning his testimony.

FAA investigating sixth odd Delta incident since June 18

By H. JOSEF HERBERT
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Federal Aviation Administration is investigating an incident in which a Delta Air Lines pilot took off from Boston's Logan Airport without proper clearance as another jetliner was about to cross the runway, officials said Friday.

The incident involving Delta Flight 670, bound from Boston to Montreal, occurred late Thursday night. It was the sixth unusual incident involving a Delta flight since June 18.

It came a day after the FAA announced a "special surveillance" of Delta because of a rash of unusual pilot mistakes in recent weeks.

FAA officials, responding to an inquiry about the incident, said the Delta Boeing 727 had been cleared onto the runway, but had not received the go-ahead from the control tower to take off.

"He was not cleared to take off," said Fred Farrar, an FAA spokesman, who added the agency was investigating the incident.

Farrar said the air traffic controller noticed the plane taking off and directed a US Air jetliner that had just landed on another runway not to proceed across the runway being used by the Delta plane. The US Air pilot held just short of the runway.

Delta spokesman Jim Ewing said that the incident involved "a possible misunderstanding of directions from the air traffic control tower and that the airline believes the pilot did not act improperly."

"We're confident he had the slanting to take the airplane off," Ewing said in a telephone interview from the airline's Atlanta headquarters.

US Air spokesman Dave Shipley said US Air Flight 80, which had just landed following a flight from Cleveland, was halted on a taxiway and had been cleared to cross the runway.

Donations from bank, others to enable city pool construction

By CLAUDE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An $80,000 donation to the city pool fund from First Federal Savings and Loan, as well as other donors from the community, will enable the city to start construction of the pool this fall, said Mayor Doug Vollmer.

First Federal announced its donation at a Friday morning press conference.

Rick Allen, president of First Federal, said the management of the bank wanted to "help community efforts."

"A pool is a vital part of the community," he said.

The city council has also allocated $270,000 to the existing pool fund in the next fiscal year's budget. The city will give a total of $770,000 to construction of the pool.

The estimated cost of the pool is $1,000,000. Community donations, including First Federal's gift, are expected to raise $150,000. Local fund-raising projects should bring in $25,000, according to council estimates.

The remaining balance will be collected through voluntary water bill donations. An earlier survey of 708

Twin Falls residents showed that 60 percent were willing to donate $3 each month to the pool fund on their water bills.

Vollmer was confident that the water bill donations would bring in the needed funds. "We should not have any problems," he said.

Preliminary plans for the pool were also announced at the conference, but have not received final approval from the council.

The 60-foot by 50-meter pool will be designed for future enclosure, said City Engineer Gary Young.

Depth will begin at 3.5 feet and slope to 10.5 feet.

A motorized bulkhead, which is used to divide the pool into two sections, will be installed so that the pool may be used for two different activities, such as lessons and lap swim, at the same time. One-meter diving boards will be installed at the deep end, he added.

A small wading pool, about 30 feet in diameter, will be installed to the side of the large pool and a 20-foot cement deck will surround the area, he said.

The pool will be not be located at Harmon Park, as originally planned. Instead, the facility will be constructed at the corner of Locust Street North and Stadium Boulevard, near Twin Falls High School tennis courts, Young said.

The pool will be heated using a combination of conventional heating and the high school's geothermal well, Young said. A solar insulation blanket will cover the water when not in use to conserve energy, he added.

School Board Chairman Calvin Lamborn said the district is "excited" to work with the city on the pool. The land is owned by the district and will be leased to the city.

"We are working toward a common goal," he said.

Also, the city will be able to utilize the geothermal well, which failed to produce adequate water temperature and pressure to heat the school, he said.

The council will advertise for construction bids next month, said City Manager Tom Courtney. Applicants will have 30-45 days to submit their plans and estimated costs, he said.

Community awareness will be promoted by a citizens' pool committee, to be organized and chaired by pool supporter Lance Clow.

Idaho First, investors file countering mushroom suits

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A $2.2 million lawsuit filed by Idaho First National Bank against a Blais mushroom farm and its investors has been answered by counterclaims alleging fraud by Idaho First National Bank.

The investors also contend the farm organizers violated Racketeer Influence and Corrupt Organizations Act.

Earlier this year, Idaho First filed the lawsuit over a loan gone sour. In 1984, the bank loaned $2.9 million to Blais Valley Foods Inc., the corporation that operated the mushroom operation. Idaho First now wants the loan repaid.

Blais Valley Foods and its owners, Robert Erkins and Twin Falls attorney Thomas G. Walker Jr., and 24 investors are named as defendants in the suit.

The defendants aren't playing dead, if answers to Idaho First's original filing are any indication.

Blais Valley Foods has filed a counterclaim against Idaho First, saying the bank breached a contract to close two loans equaling $3.15 million and gave bad management advice to the mushroom farm. The company is asking the bank to loan the entire $3.15 million to the enterprise.

And the other defendants in the case, the 24 people who signed limited guarantee agreements, have filed counterclaims against Idaho First and cross-claims against Erkins and Walker. A cross-claim is one defendant suing another defendant of the same case.

In 1984, Walker and Erkins organized Blais Valley Growers Ltd. and began production of gourmet mushrooms at Erkins' ranch near Blais. The two owners worked together to develop and finance the Idaho production of the exotic white mushrooms and greenhouse structures and other equipment necessary for the mushroom operation.

The two also organized financing for the operation, which was at that time a limited partnership, and convinced several people to sign on as limited guarantors for the operation.

Those investors, including eight local doctors, say in a counterclaim that William Blacklock, branch manager of Idaho First's Blue Lake Branch, misrepresented the investment potential of the venture.

In that filing, the investors asked for $13 million in damages from the bank. The guarantors have since revised the damage request to an amount deemed appropriate by the court.

Two local 6th District Judges,

• Daniel Meahl and Daniel Hurlbutt, have disqualified themselves or have been disqualified and the case is now before 5th District Judge James May in Hailey.

The limited guarantors say in an amended counterclaim that they were induced into signing their guarantee agreements and that Idaho First had the duty and a reasonable opportunity to tell the investors of facts which made the mushroom farm a more risky investment than the guarantors thought.

The investors said, "Mr. Babcock led at least one, and perhaps more, of the Limited Guarantors to believe that an investment in the mushroom-growing facility was a sound one and that he recommended the investment. Mr. Babcock made such representations, knowing them to be false, or with reckless disregard of their falsity, and intending that they be relied upon."

The counterclaim went on to allege that the bank's conduct violated the Idaho Securities Act, was fraudulent, negligent, and a breach of the duty of good faith.

Idaho First claimed the investors exercised contributory negligence in their investment. Babcock said the risk voluntarily, failed to act to mitigate their losses and acted in reckless disregard or at least without due diligence.

"The Limited Guarantors and each of them acted in reckless disregard or without due diligence in connection with investing in the business enterprises associated with Geo/Plutonium-Growers Limited Partnerships and Bliss Valley Foods, Inc.," the bank said.

The investors went on to file a cross-claim against their co-defendants, Bliss Valley Foods owners Walker and Erkins.

"The Limited Guarantors allege... that said transactions were consummated in furtherance of an unlawful scheme and artifice to defraud by defendants in violation of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO")... that said transactions, together with other wrongful conduct, constitute violations of state securities laws, common law fraud, constructive fraud, negligent misrepresentation, and as to Walker, professional malpractice, breach of the duty of good faith and negligence."

The investors said each of them, with the possible exception of one, was being represented by Walker while he solicited investments in the mushroom farm.

Both Erkins and Walker approached the local doctors and others and convinced them to sign as investors and in the process misrepresented the growth potential of the operation, the court document states.

The document states Erkins and Walker wrote in a private memorandum, "There is a reasonable opportunity for the partnership to realize a return in excess of 50 times the original investment by 1990... when there was no such reasonable opportunity."

Meanwhile, Walker and Erkins filed a counterclaim against Idaho First, saying the bank breached a contract to loan a total of $3.15 million to the mushroom venture.

They claimed in court documents that the bank agreed in 1984 to execute two loans totaling $3.15 million to the mushroom venture, but "without justification or excuse," delayed closing the loans from July 1984 to August 1984.

The delay in the closing of the loans in the summer of 1984 caused a consequent delay in the commencement of construction of the Facility, which caused an even greater delay in the completion of construction of the Facility because more construction had to be done during the harsh winter of 1984-

1985 than otherwise would have been."

After more delays in what they said were promised funds from the bank, Walker and Erkins decided to close the mushroom farm in January 1986.

But, according to court documents, Babcock and Don Chance, a representative of the bank's Boise office, convinced the mushroom farmers to continue operation and suggested if the farm continued operating it would be easier to find a potential buyer.

Walker and Erkins say that as a result of those and other actions by the bank, the corporation has been damaged. They are asking for damages to be determined at trial.

The bank said the meeting on the mushroom farm meeting did occur, but denied every other allegation by Walker and Erkins coming out of that meeting.

In addition, the bank says any contract mentioned in the Walker and Erkins counterclaim is not documented in writing and therefore void.

Walker and Erkins also said that Idaho First breached good faith and fair dealing by having Babcock become involved in the management of the farm.

They said Babcock insisted Bliss Valley Foods hire Kansas City, Mo., as general manager and after that convinced the company to convert from a partnership to a corporation for the benefit of the bank.

"Both during the operation of the facility by partnership corporation, Mr. Babcock provided inaccurate and misleading information to investors who were initially partners and thereafter shareholders in the respective business entities, the effect of which was to have adverse impact on the facility's operations," said the counterclaim.

The bank says the investors in the mushroom farm exercised contributory negligence in the investments, assumed the risk of investments and any contract, in addition to being void because of the lack of writing, is also void because no consideration changed hands.

The limited guarantors who invested in two limited partnerships and signed loan guarantees are: Dr. and Mrs. Harry F. Brumbach Jr. $55,000 invested, $90,000 guaranteed.

Dr. and Mrs. Allan R. Frost, $100,000 invested, $165,000 guaranteed.

Nixon papers show system created to punish leakers

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the year before Watergate, Richard M. Nixon became so obsessed with leaks from his administration that a system was set up to track down leakers and punish them, according to documents released for the first time on Friday.

Nixon's chief of staff, H.R. Haldeman, agreed that in several cases "direct means, FBI, polygraphs, etc." be employed.

Fred Malek, a White House aide, was put in charge of the "leaks project" by Haldeman in September 1971 after Nixon complained about leaks, the documents show.

Three months later, he reported that "12 leaks were uncovered in the last two weeks" and were being tracked. He said also "a high proportion of the apparent leaks that have been detected since we have begun the program have emanated from or have been attributed to the White House."

The documents were among 800,000 pages of Nixon administration papers opened for public view Friday by the National Archives at a warehouse in Alexandria, Va., which houses 40 million papers left behind when Nixon resigned from the presidency.

The newly released documents included the papers of Haldeman and of Charles C. Colson, both of whom served prison sentences for Watergate and related crimes.

About 15 percent of the Haldeman papers were removed from the files at the request of Nixon's lawyers — by far the greatest number of deletions from any of the Nixon files. The reasons given were possible injury to reputations of the people named in the papers. The archives will review the disputed specified documents to decide whether they should be restored to the files.

In his Dec. 15, 1971, progress report to Haldeman, Malek noted that "the intent of the leaker at the White House is not principally to embarrass or otherwise hurt the president, but rather to better the leaker's own position, or stroke his own ego."

Malek suggested a hard crackdown on violators, and Haldeman initiated his agreement. The case selected for FBI investigation, said Malek, "should be a definite leak, on which we will almost certainly fire the leaker when we find him, and make this event widely known, at least in the White House."

In October 1971, Haldeman received a note about a quote attributed to "a White House aide." The note carried the recommendation from a White House staffer that "we muzzle White House aides such as the one referred to."

Reagan declines to comment

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Friday he will "eagerly" answer questions about Rear Adm. John Poindexter's testimony on the Iran-Contra affair when the investigation is over — and only then.

Reagan, peppered with queries during two appearances before reporters with visiting British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, deflected questions about the congressional hearings into the affair, saying a statement will come later.

The president and his spokesmen also refused to go beyond earlier denials of Poindexter's assertion that the president would have approved the diversion of money to Nicaraguan rebels from the sales of arms to Iran — had he been given that option.

Poindexter said Friday he expected the denials.

The president, posing for photographers with Mrs. Thatcher on a porch just outside the Oval Office, was asked about Poindexter's testimony that he had not informed Reagan about the diversion of Iranian arms sales, proceeds to the Nicaraguan rebels.

"No comments until the investigation is over, and then I will be eagerly responding," Reagan said.

Pressed to answer whether he knew that Poindexter had approved the diversion, Reagan smiled, then replied, "You tempt me, but I'm not going to answer you."

After a private meeting with Mrs.

Thatcher, Reagan again faced reporters at a farewell ceremony for the British prime minister. And again, he turned aside questions about the affair.

"I will have a statement to make when the investigation is over," Reagan said. Pressed for an answer, the president gibed: "You don't want me to repeat what I just said."

New questions arose Friday after Poindexter continued to assert — in the face of White House denials — that Reagan would have approved the Contra diversion.

White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater on Thursday said Reagan "has said on past occasions that had he been told, he would not have allowed, and he should have been told."

Reagan wants UN to end gulf war

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan called Friday for a personal mission by United Nations Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar to end the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq War.

Reagan, bidding farewell to British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher after a two-hour meeting at the White House, listed an effort by the U.N. chief executive among the steps the United States is taking to "end this bloody and senseless conflict."

The main diplomatic efforts, Reagan and Thatcher said, are two strong U.N. Security Council resolutions the United States is sponsoring.

The second measure, on which a consensus has been difficult to reach, would impose on both Iran and Iraq — if they refuse to stop fighting — a worldwide arms embargo.

Poindexter's testimony 'chilling'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Iran-Contra investigatory panel said Friday that Dan Daniel's testimony about the White House deception to run covert operations and create a presidential shield were "incredible, mindboggling, chilling."

Daniel, D-Hawaii, made the comments in sharp rebuke after Poindexter's attorney, Richard Becker, objected to what he considered repetitive and hostile questioning of the panel and its committee members' negative comments quoted in news stories.

Inouye interjected to defend the committee as being eminently fair to Poindexter.

"When we sit here and listen to your testimony, in which you tell us that you have either withheld information from, or misled, or misrepresented the members of the United States, that you have withheld information from the president, that you have either withheld information from, or misled, or misrepresented the highest ranking Cabinet members of the United States, that you have withheld information from your most trusted deputy, Colonel (Oliver) North — I don't think it is proper for a member of this panel to characterize that testimony as being incredible, mindboggling, chilling. I think they are all proper inouye said.

Other House and Senate committee members were more reserved in characterizing the former national security adviser's testimony, in which he described keeping President Reagan in the dark about the diversion of profits to the Contras from the U.S. arms sales to Iran and discussed misleading Congress on administration involvement with the Contras rebels.

Some members, however, indicated they had reservations about Poindexter's credibility.

"I like his demeanor much better than a lot of the other witnesses ... very matter-of-fact, takes the heat," said Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Ga.

But Jenkins said that while he thinks Poindexter has been telling the truth "on most issues, I'm not sure on one or two of the major issues. I have not made up my

Thatcher lends support to Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher declared her confidence Friday in President Reagan despite his difficulties with the Iran-Contra affair, telling Americans "we need leadership and your president is uniquely able to give it."

Mrs. Thatcher, after two hours of talks with Reagan, warned that the United States must not become so preoccupied with its problems that it fails to aggressively pursue vital issues such as arms control or a Middle East peace.

"It's a time of unprecedented opportunity if we are wise and skillful enough to grasp it," Mrs. Thatcher declared in her departure statement.

"Now more than ever we need American leadership and your president is uniquely able to give it and will give it. We must not let slip the tremendous gains of the last few years," she advised.

Mrs. Thatcher did not directly mention the Iran-Contra affair in her White House remarks, but did state her concerns about the matter in several television interviews given before the session with the president.

"I believe he's a great leader," Mrs. Thatcher said on NBC-TV's "Today" show. "Even during this difficult period, he has not let his leadership role in any way."

In an interview on CBS-TV, she urged Reagan to move forward with foreign policy initiatives, saying, "If America does not take the leadership role ... she injures the interests of the free world."

Nofziger letter to Meese disclosed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House political director Lyn Nofziger was charged with violating federal ethics laws in a six-count indictment, unsealed Friday, which revealed he had written the White House counselor Edwin Meese III on behalf of scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp.

The indictment accuses Nofziger of a conflict of interest in provisions of the 1978 Ethics in Government Act in connection with lobbying for Wedtech, Fairchild Industries, which is a Chantilly, Va.-based defense contractor, and the National Maritime Engineers Beneficial Association, an AFL-CIO maritime union.

Nofziger said in a statement that he is innocent "of any deliberate violation of the law" and added:

"If the independent counsel wants my scalp, he will have to get it the old-fashioned way."

The indictment was obtained by independent counsel James McKay, who also is conducting a criminal investigation of Meese's involvement with Wedtech. The indictment is the first involving a former high government official under the conflict-of-interest provisions of the Ethics in Government Act.

The letter from Nofziger to Meese is dated April 8, 1982, and came the month before Meese's deputy, James Jenkins, called a crucial White House meeting that resulted in Wedtech receiving a $32 million engine contract from the Army without competitive bidding.

The letter, the first known instance of direct lobbying of Meese by Nofziger on behalf of Wedtech, "was made in connection with ... the proposed Army engine contract," said the indictment, which does not elaborate.

One of Meese's attorneys, James Keop, said he was familiar with the letter but declined to discuss it.

Meese, who is now attorney general, has acknowledged that in 1982 he directed his staff to ensure that Wedtech, the Bronx defense contractor that is now the focus of five criminal investigations, got fair consideration from the Army in its efforts to obtain the contract.

Nofziger's letter to Meese was illegal, said the indictment, because it constituted lobbying of Nofziger's previous government agency within one year of his departure from government.

If convicted on all six counts, Nofziger could face a maximum of 12 years in prison and a $50,000 fine.

Nofziger's lobbying partner, Mark Bragg, was indicted on one count of allegedly aiding and abetting Nofziger's contacts on behalf of Wedtech.

Foundation to save Hotel Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A Counselor Gordon B. Hinckley plan to raise the $30 million needed to keep the Westin Hotel Utah open has been presented to Mormon Church officials, a Utah Heritage Foundation spokesman said Friday.

The foundation would act as a coordinator to obtain a corporate bond to raise money for renovation the LDS church says the hotel needs to keep operating as a "first class hotel," foundation board member Yan Ross said Friday.

The funding proposal was hand-delivered to Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints First Thursday, Ross said.

LDS-Church officials announced plans to convert the 76-year-old hotel to office space earlier in March, citing renovation costs as the primary reason.

But Richard Lindsay, Mormon Church director of communications, said last week the problem of liquor use at the church-owned hotel was another reason for the planned closure.

Ross said the Foundation would help raise the money needed to upgrade the hotel by coordinating

Convicted killer Selby asks board of pardons for hearing

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Convicted killer Pierre Dale Selby petitioned the state Board of Pardons Friday to hear his request that his death sentence be commuted to life in prison.

Selby, scheduled to be executed by lethal injection at Utah State Prison on Aug. 28, signed the four-page document early Friday afternoon. It was delivered to the board by his attorney, Gil Athay.

Selby, a 21-year-old airman at Hill Air Force Base when five people were tortured and three of them killed at the HI F1 Shop in Ogden in 1974, has become "a different individual, physically, mentally and emotionally" since the murders, the petition said.

He also said he was sentenced to death under a state law which since has been changed to provide stricter criteria for capital convictions and the imposition of the death penalty.

Athay said that after 13 years of failed appeals, Selby had all but given up hope of a reprieve. But the attorney said during a news conference that after several discussions, he and Selby "decided to give it a shot."

Athay, who personally opposes the death penalty, said that while he believes anyone is capable of murder, he had not decided whether Selby still is a dangerous man.

"I haven't made up my mind," he said.

Barring a commutation or the U.S. Supreme Court's granting a rehearing, Selby, 34, would be the first Utah inmate to be executed in a decade and the first ever in Utah by lethal injection. His last judicial appeal was rejected in June by the high court.

Athay met with Selby at Utah State Prison earlier this week to discuss options and the inmate decided to submit the petition, which by law had to be done by midnight Friday.

The board is the only agency that can commute the death sentence under Utah law. It can review whether the punishment is appropriate for the crime, but does not review legal or constitutional matters—previously reviewed—in court, according to the court's policy manual.

Police: Wife to return her husband

PROVO, Utah (AP) — A woman sought by police in the apparent abduction of her 79-year-old estranged husband agreed to return him if authorities withdrew a fugitive warrant for her arrest, police said Friday.

Provo Police Capt. George Pierpont said an attorney for Ann Gross Taylor of New York City telephoned her after two people questioned by police told them her out-of-state destination.

Attorney Richard Johnson told police that Mrs. Taylor promised to return John Max Taylor to Provo by 5 p.m. Saturday if the day-old warrant was dropped. Pierpont said the warrant, alleging second-degree kidnapping, would be canceled, but not the felony charge.

Police had been looking for Mrs. Taylor since early Thursday afternoon when two men and two women forced her husband into an automobile after he walked out of a doctor's office.

Taylor was hustled into the car by the men while two women held Taylor's sister, Nadine Ashby, Pierpont said.

Later Thursday, 8th Circuit Judge E. Patrick McGuire issued an arrest warrant for Mrs. Taylor, 56. On Friday morning, police questioned two people they said were suspects in the case. They told police where Taylor was being taken, Pierpont said. One of the two was identified by Pierpont as Raeddon Palmer, 46, of Pleasant Grove.

Cool, rainy weather assists Montana firefighters' efforts

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Cool, rainy weather gave firefighters an out-of-control blaze. Snow on the forest fire near Glacier National Park under control and snuffed another near Libby.

"Mother Nature knows what she's doing," said Ron Hendrickson, regional fire coordinator for the U.S. Forest Service.

Rain was falling through much of western Montana Friday evening.

The 300-acre Skyland fire on Marias Pass near the southern border of Glacier Park was "almost out," Hendrickson said Friday afternoon. "It's raining a lot up there. We're taking virtually everyone off that fire."

About 400 firefighters fought the fire at its height. It started when high winds Wednesday fanned the remnants of a controlled burn into an out-of-control blaze. Snow on the pass Thursday night prompted fire crews to use makeshift shelters and heaters.

The Sterling Gulch fire in northwestern Montana also was controlled by evening.

"Unburned islands of fuel" remained Friday at the fire, which burned more than 2,000 acres of timber in a drainage about 20 miles southeast of Libby, said Bill O'Brien of the state lands office in Kallispell.

"We have to get out there and grub out all the burning stumps."

About 550 firefighters were at the scene Friday, and state officials said the big problem by late afternoon was complaints from firefighters about being cold in the cool, damp weather.

Police discover three bodies

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The bodies of a couple and their 4-year-old son were found Friday afternoon after what police described as an apparent double murder and suicide.

Salt Lake County Sheriff's Lieutenant Ben Forbes said the bodies of the man and boy were discovered by a friend in the cab of a truck parked at the couple's residence. He said the man apparently had run a hose from the truck's exhaust to the cab.

"It appears the wife was drowned in the bathtub and the boy was taken to a truck by the father where he committed suicide by carbon monoxide poisoning," Forbes said. "The boy was killed in the process."

He said the names of the victims were being withheld until relatives had been notified. The woman's parents were out of state.

Forbes said police had not established a motive. He said autopsies were being performed but results likely would not be available until Saturday.

Judge may send cavorting Penn to jail without more delay

The Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES — Actor Sean Penn is tempting fate and a city prosecutor again.

The pugnaeous actor, who won a delay in a 60-day jail sentence to complete film projects, has been spotted cavorting around town, throwing the jail postponement into doubt, a prosecutor said.

Deputy City Attorney Alice Hand said Thursday that Penn, 26, had been spotted in the middle of a disturbance Monday evening at a Beverly Hills restaurant.

"He has been seen around a number of different places," Ms. Hand said.

"Obviously, I am not pleased," she said, adding that she intends to talk to court officials on Monday for "a serious discussion about whether there's any need to delay his sentence any longer."

Penn's sentence was delayed so that he could complete projects in New York and West Germany.

Piscopo mimics rocker Roth in skin-tight suit

NEW ORLEANS — Comedian Joe Piscopo, the plucky imitation artist, is taking on another rock 'n' roller: David Lee Roth.

Prancing about the stage of the Saenger Performing Arts Center in a skin-tight, tiger-striped body suit, Piscopo launched his first national tour Thursday.

"Piscopo, 36, the former 'Saturday Night Live' performer known for his imitations of Bruce Springsteen, Frank Sinatra, David Letterman and other celebrities, dubbed his routine 'What hath God Roth.'"

The performance in New Orleans was the first of the 12-city "Miller Lite Momentary Madness Tour."

Moyer becomes L.A.'s first $1 million anchor

LOS ANGELES — Paul Moyer of KABC-TV has become the first $1 million-a-year anchorman in Los Angeles, sources said after a three-station bidding war for his services.

"He's making a million a year now at KABC under his new contract," a source at the station was quoted as saying in Friday's Los Angeles Herald Examiner.

Moyer, 45, who is co-anchor of the 5 p.m. and 11 p.m. newscasts for KABC, was also wooed by KCBS and KNBC.

Legionnaires' Disease doctor turns to weaving

SWARTHMORE, Pa. — David W. Fraser, the physician who headed the task force that discovered the cause of Legionnaires' Disease, is taking leave from his college president's job to write a book on weaving.

Fraser said Friday he is taking a six-month leave from Swarthmore College beginning in January to finish research and write the first draft of a book on "wett spinning."

It's a special form of weaving, Fraser said.

Dogs sniff out beetles to rescue historic church

BOSTON (AP) — Two specially trained beagles spent Friday sniffing for the wood-loving beetles that are chomping on the Old North Church, where a patriot hung the legendary lanterns that sent Paul Revere on his midnight ride.

Powder post beetles have infested parts of the church's north aisle and basement, and church officials fear the bugs will cause serious damage if they are not exterminated.

"The church in no way is structurally weakened, but preservation of the Old North Church is important," said exterminator Stephen

Keris. "We just can't let it go away."

Robert Golledge, vicar of the Episcopalian church, also known as Christ Church of Boston, said extermination will prevent further deterioration of the 261-year-old facility visited by one-half million people each year.

The dogs, Stewart I and Stewart II, sniffed, scratched, whined and barked when they found beetles. Cries of "Dig 'em out, dig 'em out!" and "Go to work, go to work!" sounded in the nave as handlers encouraged the hounds.

Pesticides will be used to kill the bugs once they are located, and the dogs will return on an intermittent basis in the next several weeks and will make a final check in four months to see if the church is rid of the bugs.

Tourists and others gather at the white-spired facility in Boston's North End to see where the church's sexton, Robert Newman, climbed into the steeple on April 18, 1775.

Paul Revere told Newman to hang one lantern if a British expeditionary force, which planned to march to Lexington to seize a cache of Colonial military stores, was coming by land. He hung two when he spotted the British moving across the harbor and up the Charles River to Cambridge, "by sea."

Revere's subsequent dash, which actually ended ingloriously when he was captured and his horse confiscated, was immortalized by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's poem, "Paul Revere's Ride."

Revere had to walk most of the way while others alerted residents of the impending coming of the British, who arrived the next morning. The fighting at Lexington and Concord began the American Revolution.

Tourists also don't realize, Golledge said, that the church's steeple isn't the original, which was destroyed by a hurricane in the 1950s. The current steeple was built from the original's blueprints.

Golledge said he believes the church, where daily services are held, still serves as a symbol of freedom, and preservation efforts are important.

The exterminators, Termex International, leased the dogs from California-based TADD Services Inc. Both companies are donating their services.

Jewelry stolen from Juliana of Netherlands

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Thieves stole an undisclosed amount of jewelry from the Italian villa of the Netherlands' former queen, Juliana, royal family spokesman Fred Loertzer said Friday.

The theft occurred Sunday, a day after Juliana and her husband, Prince Bernhard, arrived at the villa near Porto Ercole on Italy's northern Mediterranean coast for their annual vacation.

The theft was kept secret for five days "in connection with the investigation," said Loertzer, who gave no details.

Newspaper reports said a gold watch and jeweled bracelets and necklaces were taken.

Rome's Il Tempo newspaper quoted investigators as saying there were no signs of forced entry.

Senior Interior Ministry officials are heading the investigation, Amsterdam daily De Telegraaf said.

BIG CHEESE
British farmers thought it fitting to give to Queen Victoria a wedding present of half a ton of cheddar cheese. She thought otherwise. Wasn't that she didn't like cheese. But they'd carted that wheel all over the country to show it off. By the time it got back to her, it looked pretty ratty. "Take it away!" she cried. Or words to that effect.

FORKS
You're read that Catherine de Medici introduced table forks into France and thence to the rest of the western world. Forks weren't all. At the same spectacular dinner where the forks turned up were such other novelties as ice cream and Parmesan cheese.

Price of dried caterpillars in Botswana now is about 50 cents for 60. You pay a little more for those canned in tomato sauce.

Judge may send cavorting Penn to jail without more delay

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Actor Sean Penn is tempting fate and a city prosecutor again.

The pugnaclous actor, who won a delay in a 60-day jail sentence to complete film projects, has been spotted cavorting around town, throwing the jail postponement into doubt, a prosecutor said.

Deputy City Attorney Alice Hand said Thursday that Penn, 26, had been spotted "in the middle of a disturbance Monday evening at a Beverly Hills restaurant."

"He has been seen around at a number of different places," Ms. Hand said.

"Obviously, I am not pleased," she said, adding that she intends to talk to court officials on Monday for "a serious discussion about whether there's any need to delay his sentence any longer."

Penn's sentence was delayed so that he could complete projects in New York and West Germany.

Costs hold back challengers to Stallings

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Although the 2nd Congressional District in Idaho is one of the more solid GOP strongholds in the state, Republicans are not lining up to run against incumbent Democrat Rep. Richard Stallings for 1988.

Mel Richardson, who lost a 1986 race against Stallings for the 2nd Congressional District, said Friday he is definitely considering entering the race, but "far from making the announcement."

"There are too many things we've got to consider," Richardson said Friday.

But Richardson said he must decide soon whether or not he will run, to allow others to make decisions.

Although the election is more than a year away, the race for attention already is heating up.

State Democratic Party Chairman Mel Morgan this week took on Richardson, after Richardson blasted Stallings.

Richardson challenged Stallings' record on the Strategic Defense Initiative, Richardson earlier in the week said Stallings voted three times against more funding for SDI, but then called himself a strong supporter.

In making the comments, Richardson said he was speaking on behalf of the Republican members of the Idaho congressional delegation and Blake Hall, GOP State Party Chairman.

Morgan said Richardson's statements "indicate that Idaho GOP leaders have decided to support a second Richardson bid for the seat next year."

"To have a soundly defeated candidate speak for the Republican members of our congressional delegation and the GOP State Party Chairman is certainly a new twist," Morgan said, "and must mean that Richardson is again going to be their boy."

Richardson said Friday he has not made that decision. One factor holding him back he said was a $16,000 debt from the last campaign still hanging over his head.

Richardson said he has made a substantial dent in the debt, reducing it from $42,000 in November to the present $16,000, but Richardson said he would not run again "until I eliminated all debts."

Aside from debts, the other drawback facing any potential candidate, Republican or Democrat, is the huge sum needed to take on any incumbent.

"You need $400,000 to $500,000 to run, and the big question is whether the money is there," he said.

Lack of money is keeping state Sen. Larry Anderson, R-Twin Falls, from entering the race. Anderson earlier this year hinted he was considering taking on Stallings.

But Friday, Anderson said he probably will not run.

"I've had some people ask me to reconsider, but it looks like I won't run," Anderson said. "I went to Washington and met with some people, and the PAC's West East are reluctant to get in the race."

Although Anderson said there is still plenty of time for candidates to get ready, he said people are more hesitant to run against Stallings.

"People are not lining up. It's going to be a tougher race," he said. "I still don't think anybody without $250,000 can even think about running."

Anderson also said the GOP field of potential candidates is "wide open."

Richardson said three to four people had approached him about their interest in seeking the GOP nomination if he decided not to enter. Although Richardson did not divulge names, he said because others are interested he will decide by September whether to run.

"I'm going to take on honest, hard look at it," he said. "There's a lot of emotional stress involved. And unless

I think I can win, I don't want to do it."

Other Republicans have said there are no serious candidates being mentioned to try and oust the lone Democrat in Idaho's Congressional delegation.

State Sen. Lynn Tominga, R-Paul, said Friday Stallings will be "a tough cookie to break unless he makes a big boner."

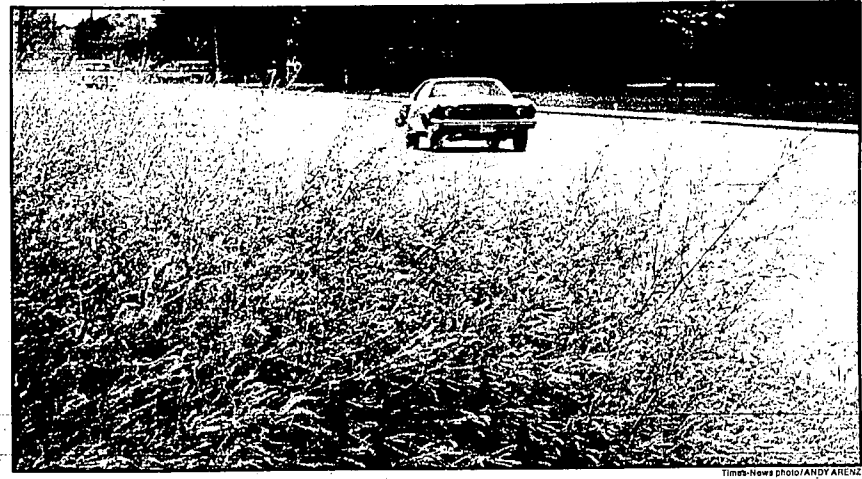

"Most people around here believe he's well entrenched," Tominga said. "And it didn't hurt when he brought in Hightower."

Texas Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Hightower toured parts of southern Idaho two days this week to stump for a new national farm policy and economic diversification.

Tominga said Stallings also received high marks for arranging a Congressional hearing on agriculture in 1985 with Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

"People view Stallings as at least a person who's willing to listen," Tominga said. "Idaho is a strong GOP area, but crop prices aren't great, and they're willing to give Democrats a chance."

Tominga added if the farm economy doesn't turn around soon, people will also turn against Stallings.

Large crops of unsightly weeds, like this thriving patch along Falls Avenue, have been sprouting up around Twin Falls. Weeds are mainly an eyesore.

Inspectors get tough on violators

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The warm months of spring and summer have brought a new enemy to local neighborhoods — unsightly weeds — have sprung up in many neglected lots and City Sanitation Inspector Sherry Jeff says people are complaining.

A two-inch stack of complaint slips for one month sits on her desk at City Hall, most of which are complaints about weeds, she said. Most people call in to report an overgrown lot in their neighborhood, worried that the weeds might be a fire hazard or might spread to their own property, she said.

Though some weeds do spread, the biggest problem with weeds is their appearance. "Most are too green to burn. They're really just an eyesore," she said.

The most frequent weed is called Kochia, a bushy plant that usually grows to be several feet high, she said. Kochia is not on the Idaho Department of Agriculture's noxious weed list. "It's a nuisance weed and not really dangerous," she said. Other common weeds are Canada thistle and Morning Glory.

Morning Glory plants are small, leafy and have white flowers. Canada thistle usually grows in the country, but can be carried into towns by water, she said. Both are considered noxious weeds by the Department of Agriculture.

Weed abatement in the city is done on a complaint basis. If someone calls in to report a problem lot, Jeff will inspect the site and determine whether the owner is in violation of the city code which holds property owners responsible for cutting and removing weeds, grass and rubbish from their land.

Many people don't realize that they are responsible for their property from the center of the street to the center of the alley, Jeff said. Weeds in the alley behind a house are that person's responsibility, she said.

If the lot is found to be in violation, a letter is sent to the property owner, who then has seven days to correct the problem. Verbal contact is also made in some cases, she said.

In the recent past, owners who refused to clear the lot were taken to court by the city. This summer, a new policy has been implemented.

If the lot remains a problem, the city will hire someone to remove the weeds and then bill the owner. If the bill is not paid within 30 days, a tax lien is placed against the property.

Jeff said she has had "good results" with the new policy. Taking unscrupulous property owners to court was too time-consuming, she said. "The case would get wrapped up in court for six months and by then, it was winter," she said.

The weed season lasts from early spring until fall, she added.

Weeds can be eliminated by burning, spraying or mowing. The best way is to spray the weeds, let them absorb the chemicals and then mow, Jeff said. Weeds can be burnt to the ground and still grow back, she said.

Many of the weeds lots have owners that live out of town, she said. Some have been foreclosed and left without a definite responsible owner. "It's hard to track down the owners. I've looked all over the country in some cases," she said.

"Nobody wants the responsibility," she added.

In other cases, the owner may have hired someone to eliminate the weeds, but broken equipment caused a delay, she said.

An owner is responsible for the weeds on his lot, even if they grow back after he has sprayed, burned or mowed them, Jeff said. Sometimes, the owner will have to cut the weeds two or three times a year.

Lots that tend to have repeated problems with weeds are usually located near water, she said.

Garbage pick-up is also a problem with weeds. Many people just leave piles near their trash cans, she said. Those wishing to dispose of their weeds should bag them, she added.

Water specialist questions results of Burley well tests

The Associated Press

BURLEY — A local health specialist has taken issue with the results of a geological survey team's testing that found wells in the Burley Irrigation District containing concentrations of nitrate-nitrogen above federal safety limits.

"The first thing is not panic," said John Tolman, senior environmental health specialist for the Southcentral Community Action Agency. "I think the study released the information before they had enough data to make a conclusion."

A sampling of 118 wells in the district found 19 with nitrate-nitrogen levels in excess of Environmental Protection Agency standards, Deborah Parham, of the state Water Resources Department said.

Nitrate-nitrogen, which generally comes from fertilizers or septic tanks, can reduce the oxygen capacity of the blood in babies and small children, pregnant women and possibly ailing senior citizens.

"Outside those three groups, the levels we are talking about do not represent a problem, according to my information," Tolman said.

But more importantly, he said, his own testing of wells in the area has shown that nitrate-nitrogen concentrations appear to swing up and down through the year so that continuous testing over an extended period would be the only way to determine whether there is any real problem with the wells in question.

"Until we have enough information over a longer period of time, it's not feasible to draw the conclusion that there's a problem," Tolman said.

"The information I saw tended to give the impression that the whole water table had a problem," he said. "That's not true. Individual wells may, but the only way to determine that is through long-term sampling."

But Tolman and other health officials have advised people obtaining water from the wells in question to find other sources of drinking water if they have people in their households in the high-risk groups.

Andrus says the wait for cleanup too long

The Associated Press

BOISE — Waiting up to eight years to start cleaning up leaking chemical and radioactive material dump sites at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory is too long, says Gov. Cecil D. Andrus.

The federal Department of Energy plans to start in 1995 with a massive cleanup of sites used over the years to dispose of dangerous chemicals and radioactive materials. Some of the material has been stored over the years at INEL, a 550,000-acre federal nuclear research center in eastern Idaho.

In a letter to Energy Secretary John Herrington on Tuesday, Andrus said the work should start immediately. The governor said a recent DOE study showed some materials have leaked into the groundwater under INEL.

"I am only slightly reassured that DOE feels the amounts of materials detected are small and pose no health threat," the governor said.

"But I am concerned about the long-range implications of these leaks," he said. Andrus said records of what was stored where are sketchy at best "and the extent of leakage or potential leakage is unknown."

Even though outmoded disposal methods haven't been used for years, Idaho is left with "a legacy of

State submits its bid for US West center

The Associated Press

BOISE — Idaho has formally submitted its bid for the multimillion-dollar US West central research facility, stressing the state's nearly 40 years experience serving a major research community.

Gov. Cecil Andrus on Friday submitted a 50-page booklet to US West. The telephone company has announced plans to build a central research facility in one of the 14 states it serves, which includes Idaho.

Andrus said more than 100 people worked on the Idaho presentation, with the work coordinated by the Department of Commerce. The bid included attachments from Idaho Falls, Boise, Nampa, Lewiston, Moscow, Coeur d'Alene, and Twin Falls-Jerome-Burley.

"The spirit of cooperation demonstrated by this effort can't help but leave a positive impression with a business relocation prospect," said Andrus. "When you combine that with Idaho's strong economic climate qualities, we have a solid chance of getting this facility."

The 50-page booklet lists state resources in education, quality of life, business and employment environment, transportation and technical access initiatives.

The booklet, Andrus said Mountain Bell "has been one of Idaho's most respected corporate citizens for many years and has a long history of positive relations with our state."

Dunn to give Niagara Springs decision

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Department of Water Resources Director Ken Dunn will announce Wednesday his decision in the Niagara Springs issue, and then Dunn is through.

Dunn was expected to issue his ruling this week on water rights at Niagara Springs along the Snake River, and retire Friday.

But Friday, he said he was still working to get the language "the way we want it."

Dunn will rule on an application for 264 cubic feet per second of water at Niagara Springs by the state Parks and Recreation Department to preserve the recreational and aesthetic value of the springs.

Niagara Springs, the site of two fish hatcheries and a park, has been the center of a heated debate over development versus preservation of the clear spring water in the Hagerman Valley.

Trout farmer Earl Hardy touched off a flood of protest when he applied to divert more water from the stream to enlarge his commercial trout hatchery. The plan includes diverting water from Idaho Power's steelhead hatchery next door.

Opponents such as Wendell resident Bob Burks argued the diversion would dry up the springs below the falls, destroying a natural stream.

Man charged with indecent exposure a recurrent offender

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A 28-year-old Twin Falls man being held in Twin Falls County Jail on indecent exposure charges has been sentenced twice for indecent exposure, three times for disorderly conduct and once for a bomb threat.

Twin Falls City Corporal James G. Munn Jr. arrested Andrew Scott Aragon of 280 2nd Ave. N. after city police received a complaint from three teen-age girls shortly after noon Thursday.

Aragon is being held on a $25,000 bond. He was charged Friday with indecent exposure, a misdemeanor.

According to police reports, Thursday's incident occurred while three teen-age girls were riding their horses east on Elizabeth Boulevard.

The girls told police they saw a blue car with a broken windshield heading west near the intersection of Morningside Drive.

The girls then rode through a field south of Elizabeth Boulevard and called the police, according to police reports.

When Munn responded to the call, he saw Aragon parked in a cul-de-sac on the 1900 block of Elizabeth Boulevard and made the arrest when Aragon pulled onto Elizabeth Boulevard.

Aragon received six-month sentences in February 1981 and December 1982 for indecent exposure.

He has been arrested for indecent exposure five times since 1978.

In 1977, Aragon was sentenced to 180 days in jail on the year of vocational training under parole for a bomb threat.

He was sentenced to 90 days in jail for disorderly conduct in 1980, for six months in 1984 and for 180 days in 1985.

Accidents send 3 to hospital

TWIN FALLS — Three accidents on area roads and Interstate 84 Saturday sent three people to hospitals Wednesday and Thursday.

Roger Williams of Boise fell asleep and rolled his 1986 Pontiac four-door two miles west of Burley at 10:48 a.m. Thursday on U.S. Interstate 84, attorneys said.

Williams was taken to Minidoka Memorial Hospital suffering from a concussion, police said.

Williams was driving west at the time with Joe Williams, 80, and Loren Williams, 83, who suffered cuts and bruises in the accident.

Another two-car accident on I-84 near Idaho Falls sent a 27-year-old Garland resident to Cassin Memorial Hospital late Thursday afternoon.

State police reported Mith Leng, driving a 1987 Nissan, fell asleep, veering off the southbound lane of the interstate, overcorrected and rolled his vehicle twice.

Leng was wearing a seat belt.

Near Dietrich, a one-car rollover sent a youth to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center with possible internal injuries.

Kasi McChesie, 14, was driving east on a county road about four miles south of Dietrich, said Bruce Eggleston, Lincoln County deputy, when she lost control of her vehicle and went sideways off the gravel road.

Eggleston said the vehicle hit a fence, rolled three times and landed on its top, Eggleston said.

A passenger—Angela Wynn, also 14, was held overnight at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

McChesie was treated and released. Eggleston said. No citations have been issued.

Snow falls in Boulder Mountains

BOISE (AP) — Four inches of snow was reported Friday in the Boulder Mountains north of Sun Valley — two days after near triple-digit temperatures scorched parts of Idaho.

"We could get some more tomorrow in the mountains above 6,000 feet," National Weather Service spokesman Jim Chadwick said.

Chadwick said snow hadn't been reported in other parts of Idaho Friday, where unseasonably cold temperatures swept the state. "But it's conceivable it's snowing in the higher elevations," he said.

Chadwick said Deadwood reported the state's low at 41 Friday morning. However, he said there aren't reporting stations where it's snowing in the Boulder Mountains, at 8,000 feet.

The unusually cold temperatures were expected to linger through Saturday, with snow possible at 6,000 feet, he said.

High Saturday in Boise were predicted in the mid-60s, 20 degrees cooler than normal, Chadwick said.

On Wednesday, Boise recorded a high of 70.

The weather service attributed the cool weather to a cold, upper level low pressure system over northern California.

Mother convicted in death; jury recommends 31 years

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — A circuit court jury Friday convicted a mother of involuntary manslaughter and three other charges in the beating death of her 13-year-old adopted son and recommended she serve 31 years in prison.

The nine-man, three-woman jury deliberated 10 hours over two days in the trial of Karen Diehl, 36.

Her husband, Michael Diehl, 42, was convicted by a separate jury Wednesday of first-degree murder, abduction, felony child neglect and rape of a child.

The jury recommended a 41-year sentence.

"I think justice was still served," she said.

Two jurors said the prosecution failed to prove the intent necessary for a murder conviction.

"We just did not feel that it was her intent to murder," said Judge J. Terry M. Andres said.

"I did show a little compassion toward her," said Gerard Allard Jr., "but what she did to Andrew was uncalled for."

Jury had the most trouble deciding on a verdict in the first-degree murder charge.

It was a "battle" of Michael Diehl and his wife against that kid, and it was just too far gone," she said.

Diehl walked arm in arm outside the courthouse while the jury deliberated the charges against Mrs. Diehl.

Rosenblatt rejected defense motions for a mistrial because one juror saw a newspaper heading declaring Diehl guilty and another juror brought a dictionary to the jury room.

Stephen C. Kurz, jury foreman in Diehl's trial, said his jury thought that Diehl had to be guilty of first-degree murder if the child died during an abduction.

"The instructions were very explicit and that's all we had to go by," he said.

Diehl's lawyer gave the choice of convicting him of first-degree murder, second-degree involuntary manslaughter or involuntary manslaughter. Mrs. Diehl's jury was told to choose between first-degree murder and involuntary manslaughter.

The prosecution had contended that Mrs. Diehl had inflicted the fatal blows to her son, but Judge Scortino said the fact that she got a lighter sentence than her husband is just something that happens when two different juries decide the case.

The jury recommended that Diehl serve 41 years in prison and pay a $10,000 fine. Circuit Judge Edward W. Hanson Jr. let him remain free on $15,000 bond.

In closing arguments, Shuttlesworth conceded that she could be held responsible for the vicious wounding and felony child neglect. But he denied that Mrs. Diehl fatally beat her son as he said, whether it can be designated as murder or not.

"She did some things that would be terrible and some things that were disgusting," he said. "She didn't murder her son."

Mrs. Diehl testified that she and her husband kept their son shackled naked to the floor of the school bus where the couple lived with 17 natural and adopted children.

She had been charged with murder in the October 29 death of her 13-year-old son, Andrew Diehl, but the jury convicted her of the lesser manslaughter charge and recommended the maximum sentence of 10 years.

She was also convicted of abduction, and felony child neglect and rape of a child. The jury recommended a 41-year sentence of 10 years on each charge. She had been charged with malicious wounding, but the jury opted for assault. The charge of misdemeanor assault and recommended a 12-month term.

But Hanson reversed his decision after prosecutors pointed out that state law prohibits bond for first-degree murderers.

One juror in Diehl's trial said the defendant incriminated himself with his testimony.

"He presented the facts to convict himself," Audrey Heiggenlotter told the Daily News of the Times-Herald of Newport News. She said the jurors were not convinced by the testimony of the other jurors. "I don't think the jury was convinced by the testimony of the other jurors," he said.

"I don't think the jury was convinced by the testimony of the other jurors," he said.

Officers attempted peaceful arrest

DUBOIS (AP) — A pair of state and county police officers risked their lives in an attempt to peacefully arrest a Jefferson County man before the county deputy sheriff and another officer could shoot him.

The two officers, who were on patrol, saw a man in a dark car driving away from them. They tried to stop him, but he sped up and tried to talk him out in a peaceful manner.

Sullivan was not identified, but Gundersen identified his deputy as Jeff Poole.

The prosecutor has already said he has no plans to pursue the case, but Coroner Ernest Sill has yet to decide whether an inquest will be held.

State police were called to assist local officers after Sullivan had brandished a weapon when sheriff's deputies arrested him on the highway on a warrant for failing to answer charges of having no driver's license.

The state police officer said, "Put the gun down," but Sullivan fired through the glass of the door Poole was holding.

Poole said, "Put the gun down," and then shot Sullivan, Gundersen said.

Otters are scarce in Idaho Falls Zoo

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Plenty of stories get written about trade matters between the United States and Canada, but little is said about otters.

Firearm violation gets men 9-year sentences

BOISE (AP) — Two men involved in a massive drug-for-guns deal in eastern Idaho one year ago were ordered Friday to serve nine years in prison for violating federal firearms laws.

But the sentences pronounced Friday by U.S. District Judge Marion Callister will meet no additional jail time for the two men. Callister ordered it served at the same time as 30-year prison sentences given the two men on the drug charges.

Both were fined $50.

Jose Morales Rodriguez-Machado, 38, Rigby, and Gorgonio Carrascosa-Juarez, 41, a Bay Area national, were arrested at the Rexburg Airport nearly one year ago. Federal agents said they delivered more than two pounds each of heroin and cocaine in exchange for money and guns. The drugs were valued at $1.6 million and Idaho law enforcement officials said it was the largest seizure of heroin in state history.

"A state charge resulted in sentences in February of up to 30 years in prison, which means the men will have to serve 9 to 10 years before becoming eligible for parole."

The federal charge was conspiring to export guns to Mexico, although both men told Callister on Friday, through an interpreter, that they never intended to get into the gun-running business.

Circus tiger bites worker

TWIN FALLS — A circus worker was bitten by a tiger Friday while moving the animal's cage in an unsafe manner, according to police.

The man, who police declined to identify, put his right, gloved hand inside the bars of the cage and the tiger grabbed his middle finger, crushing it. When the man tried to push Thaina, the rear of two Bengal tigers at Reid Brothers Circus, the tiger bit and punctured the two men on the drug charges.

Other people freed the man from the tiger's grasp by pushing it with poles and the man was taken to Magie Valley Regional Medical Center.

Police said the tiger was fully inoculated and that the animal's owner, Helen Carpenter, held appropriate licenses for the animals. She had warned workers against placing limbs inside the cage, police said.

God revealed his truth in the Bible but the report claims that biblical stories need correction," he said. "The Rev. Rajinder Daniel, an Indian-born clergyman working in Smethwick near Birmingham, where many non-white immigrants live, criticized the report saying it was "based on Western doctrine and white theology."

Salvadoran chief says human error caused fatal crash

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — El Salvador's military commander said Friday that a U.S. helicopter crashed because the pilot misjudged the intensity of a rain squall and turned at the wrong time. Six American servicemen were killed.

The UH-1H Huey helicopter was on a mission Wednesday night to aid a wounded U.S. military adviser in eastern El Salvador. It crashed against a cliff seven minutes after leaving Ilopango Air Base in San Salvador. Only one of the seven men aboard survived.

The helicopter pilot surely thought the atmospheric conditions throughout the country were the same, but they are completely different," said Gen. Adolfo Blandon, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff. "There was rain, strong rain, and it turned," Blandon told a news conference. "According to the technicians, this is very dangerous, and he lost altitude and crashed into the mountain."

Official accounts said the Vietnam-era helicopter ran into a squall and the pilot, 1st Lt. Gregory J. Paredes, tried to turn back. Paredes, 24, was among those killed. The victims also included the deputy commander of the U.S. Military Group, Air Force Lt. Col. James Basile, 43.

U.S. Embassy personnel said investigations were being conducted and declined comment on Blandon's assertion of human error. Embassy spokesman Jacob Gillespie said Thursday that leftist guerrillas fighting the U.S.-supported government had nothing to do with the crash.

Sgt. 1st Class Thomas G. Grace, 32, survived and was "greatly improved" Friday at the military hospital in San Salvador, said Joe McManus, another embassy spokesman.

A private service was held Thursday night at Ilopango for the six victims and the bodies were flown to Panama, which is U.S. military headquarters for Central America.

William Ormsby, a spokesman for the U.S. Southern Command in Panama, said Friday that autopsies were being performed and the bodies probably would not be taken to the United States until next week.

According to the embassy, the helicopter set out Wednesday for La Union, 113 miles east of San Salvador, in almost immediate response to a report that Staff Sgt. Timothy C. Hodge, 29, suffered an accidental gunshot wound.

Hodge was taken to the United States on Thursday with a serious neck wound, the embassy said.

Blandon said Hodge was shot accidentally by another U.S. adviser who was clearing a weapon. The embassy did not confirm the story, but backed off its initial statement that Hodge fired the shot.

Callers warn Islamic Jihad will kill two French hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Telephone callers claiming to speak for Shiite Muslim kidnapers said Friday that the pro-Iran militants will kill two French diplomat-hostages because France broke relations with Iran.

But French Embassy spokesman Gerard Boivineau said he doubted the calls were authentic because the callers did not say they would provide a picture of a captive.

"It has been decided to carry out immediately the death sentence against Marcel Carton and Marcel Fontaine," calls to two Western news agency offices in Moslem west Beirut said. The callers claimed to speak for Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War.

Carton, 63, protocol officer at the French Embassy, and Fontaine, 46, the vice consul, were abducted separately in west Beirut on March 22, 1985.

It was not clear whether the same person called both agencies. The statements, in classical Arabic, were almost identical.

The calls said the telephone was used because Syrian secret servicemen had been placed around Western news agency offices in west Beirut.

Islamic Jihad is believed made up of Shiite extremists loyal to Iran's revolutionary patriarch Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Rafsanjani: Iran will kill columns of U.S. troops

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran will kill columns of U.S. troops in the Persian Gulf and the survivors will swear allegiance to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iran's Parliament speaker was quoted as saying Friday.

Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani said the United States was planning to intervene in the gulf because President Saddam Hussein of Iraq could not defeat Iran himself, according to Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency.

His comments during a sermon in Tehran were carried by IRNA. The agency, monitored in Nicosia, paraphrased his remarks with no direct quotes.

State-run Iranian television, also monitored in Nicosia, showed a painting of battleships and aircraft carriers, superimposed with rows of crosses depicting a Christian cemetery.

The United States plans to refuel 17 on the USS Stark, which killed 37 Iranian merchant ships during their nearly 7-year-old war. But the United States considers Iran the greater threat despite an Iraqi attack May 17 on the USS Stark, which killed 37 sailors. Iraq said the attack was a mistake and the United States accepted Iraq's apology.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"The most imaginative people are the most credulous, for to them everything is possible."

— Alexander Chase.

If you are a defender, don't believe everything that you see. It's dangerous to put too much trust in declarer's apparent plan of play.

West's fourth-best heart was covered by dummy's 10 which held the trick. Dummy's diamond jack came next, declarer apparently intending to finesse against a missing queen.

Trying to avoid a revealing hesitation, East played low smoothly, waiting for the finesse to lose to partner's queen. He's still waiting. After the diamond jack held, South switched to spades and there was no longer any way to stop nine tricks.

East should have been more skeptical of South's play. And instead of ducking the diamond jack, he should have grabbed his ace immediately. A heart lead through South's A-Q would establish West's suit, and West later runs his hearts when he gets on lead with his spade ace.

Azinger tops British Open by one stroke

Watson has feeling Muirfield will bring out best

TOM WATSON The feeling's back

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) — Paul Azinger had the lead, but Tom Watson had a feeling.

Azinger, the best bunker player on the American golf tour, scrambled out of wet sand to a 68 and a one-stroke lead in the second round of the 116th British Open Friday.

Watson, troubled by a three-year slump and doubts about his drive to win, was among those in contention, two strokes off the pace.

"I have that feeling again," Watson said. "That love of the game."

"It's here, in this place, in the feel and the smell, in the texture of the grass, in the people. It's here. I love it."

It was in Scotland that Watson won four of his five British Open championships, the titles that made him golf's leading performer during the late 1970s and early '80s.

While that feeling may inspire Watson in the last two rounds, Azinger preserved his lead with a great sand shot on the 18th hole at Muirfield's soggy links.

His blast to about 6 inches on the final hole enabled him to complete 36 holes with a 138 total, six under par.

Thirteen of the world's leading performers — including Watson — were within three strokes of Azinger at the halfway point.

Americans, who have fared poorly in this tournament in recent years, held seven of the first 15 places.

Among them is Payne Stewart, who one-putted nine times in a 5-under-par 66 that was the best round of the day.

He played in late afternoon when the rains had subsided and the cold abated.

Stewart was tied for second; a single shot back, with Nick Faldo of England and a pair of Australians, longshot Gerry Taylor and first round leader Rodger Davis.

Watson, with a 69, finished 138 day, was another stroke back at 138 and was tied with Craig Stadler, Bernhard Langer of West Germany and David Frost of South Africa.

The close quarters put Azinger, the American tour's leading money winner, in position for the self-less he has been seeking.

"I wasn't nervous today. I was just trying to figure out how to cope with the conditions," said the 27-year-old called "Zinger."

But the nerves are coming, predicted Azinger, playing in his first British Open.

"I haven't been in this position in a major tournament before," he said.

"I'll probably be more nervous than usual feeling off tomorrow. I want to find out. I want to be there. I want to find out about the pressure. I welcome it," he said, then flashed a weary grin.

"You better welcome it — or go home."

Azinger, who had not won before his three victories this season, must contend with more than the pressure of the lead in this oldest of tournaments.

Watson, although a non-winner for three years, may be the most formidable of the group behind him.

He provided evidence he has snuffed his slump with a one-shot runner-up finish at the recent U.S. Open.

"It came," Watson said, paused, and snapped his fingers, "like that. In the second round of the U.S. Open. All of a sudden, it's Yeah. That's it. That's the way to do it. That's the way to play golf."

"I'm playing with confidence now. But I'm just a little concerned with the putter. If I putt well, I can win the tournament." Watson three-putted twice.

Faldo, a three-time British Open champion, shot 69. Taylor held three putts of 30 feet or more in a 68. Davis' went up nine shots from an opening 64 to a 73.

"Not a great effort," he said. Lange and Stadler, both former Masters champions, each shot 69. Frost had a 68.

Bracketed at 139 were PGA champion Bob Tway, Masters titleholder Larry Mize, Mark Calcavecchia, Carl Mason of Great Britain, Graham Marsh of Australia and Nick Price of South Africa.

Mason moved up with a 69. Calcavecchia and Mize each had a 153 total. Mize and Price matched par 71 and Tway took a 72.

Lee Trevino and Ken Green, who shared second at the end of 18 holes, dropped back. Green went to a 78 and was at 143. Trevino had 74-141.

And Arnold Palmer was out, a victim of the 146 cutoff.

The 57-year-old Palmer failed to qualify for the final two rounds with a 153 total. He had a second round 78 that included a score of 10 on the 14th hole.

Palmer drove into a fairway bunker, played out, and each hit a third into a deep, steep-sided greenside bunker.

It was in an impossible position. But Palmer refused to play away from the hole.

"I wouldn't say God couldn't get it out in one, but He'd have to throw it," Palmer said.

Arnold took five gouges at it before he got it on the putting surface.

"I felt like I was digging a hole," he said.

After two putts, he walked away with a 70.

Jack Nicklaus fared better with a 71 but was nine shots off the lead at 145.

Seve Ballesteros of Spain, twice a winner of this title one of the pre-tournament favorites, birdied three of the last four holes that left him at 143.

Greg Norman, the defending champion, had another 71 in the worst of the weather and was at 142.

"In weather like this, at this stage of the tournament, you just try to stay in touch," Norman said.

Azinger, who has shown steady improvement since joining the PGA Tour in 1981, broke through to his first victory in Phoenix earlier this season.

He has won twice since and leads the American tour with $586,951.

A large part of his success, he said, is due to his bunker play.

"It's not without work. I've spent hours in the practice bunkers. I've developed a technique that is pretty consistent," said Azinger, who led the Tour in sand saves in 1986.

Azinger, who scored three birdies in a row beginning on the ninth hole, was one stroke in front going to the 18th.

He got a 4-iron approach a little to the right, and the ball hit the green.

"When I walked up and saw it, I thought, 'dead,'" Azinger said.

"But I dug my right foot in, and played probably one of the best sand shots I've ever hit."

It came within 6 inches of the cup and Zinger tapped it in for the lead.

Paul Azinger does what he does best, putting a sand shot within six inches for a bird on No. 18

Festival officially ushered in DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The eighth U.S. Olympic Festival got off to a rousing official start Friday night as more than 50,000 people greeted the 3,000 athletes.

A crowd estimated at 52,700 at Carter-Finley Stadium was entertained by military bands, card stunts, the Golden Knights marching band, and a concert featuring the Charlie Daniels Band and Roberta Flack.

The fans cheered mightily for the competitors as they marched into the stadium, saving their biggest ovations for the South team and three North Carolina athletes who participated in carrying the Festival torch and lighting it.

Before that, the athletes filed into the stadium led by five astronauts from the Mercury space program. Each of the teams was led onto the field by a military band.

"This is indeed the greatest sports extravaganza in the history of North Carolina," said Dr. Leftoy Walker, former track and field coach at North Carolina Central University, a recent inductee into the U.S. Olympic Hall of Fame and a prime mover in bringing the Festival to the state.

Closing the ceremonies was a fireworks display by Zambelli International, which helped in the centennial celebration of the Statue of Liberty last summer.

Earlier Friday, two familiar athletes, divers Greg Louganis and Michele Mitchell, continued their Festival domination by winning the preliminary rounds of platform diving.

In addition to the divers, Greco-Roman wrestlers were the only athletes competing Friday. The Festival, which began with wrestling and swimming and diving earlier this week, gets into full swing Saturday with competition in 17 sports.

Louganis, holder of 41 national titles, two gold medals from the 1984 Olympics and all but two of the golds in Festival diving since 1979, led the preliminary round off the 3-meter springboard on Thursday. He moved into first place in the platform event on Friday with a late surge.

"I felt pretty steady," Louganis said after taking the lead on his sixth dive, a reverse triple-twist on which he scored 91.00 points. "I hate to rate myself today, but I was probably a 6 1/2."

That still was far better than Bruce Kimball, who was second with 57.25 points, well behind Louganis' total of 645.90. Mike Wantuck was third with 577.56 points.

University Games U.S. cagers gain basketball finals

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Mitch Redmond of Kansas State scored 19 points Friday as the U.S. men's team cruised to an 88-70 victory over Cuba Friday and a berth in the basketball finals at the World University Games.

The Americans will meet Yugoslavia in Saturday's gold medal game. The powerful Yugoslavs, featuring three seven-footers, made the finals by manhandling Spain 100-69 in the semifinals.

The Americans, ahead by just 45-43 at halftime, broke the game open halfway through the second period behind the shooting of Richmond and Georgetown's Perry McDonald, who finished with 18 points.

The U.S., which nearly lost two earlier games due to poor shooting, hit 60 percent of its 2-point field goal tries and was 30-for-35 from the free throw line.

Center Dan Perry of Duke grabbed a team-high seven rebounds and scored 10 points, while Purdue's Anthony Taylor, Duke's Billy King and Mark Bryant of Seton Hall University added eight points each.

But the American squad, playing without most of the top college stars, who are getting ready for next month's Pan Am Games, will face a tough challenge from the veteran Yugoslav squad, which includes seven members of the national "A" team.

The Yugoslav attack revolves around Drazen Petrovic, a sharp-shooting guard considered Europe's best player. Petrovic has averaged 33 points per game during the competition, while Richmond has led the Americans with an average of 14 a contest.

"We don't have any superstars on our team, but we have a team that plays well together," said U.S. coach Mike Krzyzewski of Duke, who was an assistant coach of the team that won the gold medal at the 1979 Pan American Games.

"But we know the Yugoslavs will be tough. They are a polished team and they are big and talented," Krzyzewski said.

Americans reap track gold

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — The United States took four of six track gold medals at the World University Games Friday, and came within striking range of the Soviet Union in the gold medal count.

The Soviets had a bad day, with just one gold from the women's tennis doubles, and the Americans advanced to two golds from the lead, 22 to 20.

The Chinese women dealt a severe blow to the Soviets, beating them in three finals: the 5-kilometer walk, the platform diving, and volleyball.

Gwen Torrence led the strong American track performance with her second gold medal of the Games, a 22.44 seconds win in the women's 200 meters.

"I hope to win a third gold in the 400 meters relay on Sunday," said Torrence of Decatur, Ga. She had taken the 100 meters in 11.09.

William Spearman upset favored teammate Floyd Heard to win the men's 200 meters in 20.42 seconds in another strong U.S. performance. Heard, who holds a 19.95 this year, trailed all the way and was second with 20.44.

"I figured it would come down to Floyd and myself, but I must say I am stunned by my recent performance at the TAC (The Athletic Congress meet) and here," Spearman said.

Charlie Simpkins won the triple jump with 56 feet, 3 1/4 inches, which he matched on his first two jumps.

Simpkins, from Summerville, S.C., edged teammate Kerry Harrison, second at 56.

"I have been sick for five days," Simpkins said. "It is some kind of stomach flu. I have been given all sorts of medicine, but it didn't work."

"I relaxed only when I went over 17-meters (55-9/16) on my first jump."

The fourth American gold came from Randy Heister in the men's discus with 204 feet, 8 inches.

The 88-70 triumph of the U.S. men's basketball team over Cuba completed the good day for the Americans.

McCallum, Curry see today's fight as pivotal to careers

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Undeclared Mike McCallum, boxing's longest-reigning champion, is seeking the recognition and big paydays that have so far eluded him.

Donald Curry says his future as a fighter is at stake.

McCallum defends his World Boxing Association junior middleweight title Saturday night against Curry, the former welterweight champion once considered the best pound-for-pound fighter in the world.

Curry hopes to regain the stature he had before losing his undisputed welterweight crown.

"I feel like he's my whole career," said Curry. "It's a must-win situation for me."

Curry, 27-1 with 20 knockouts, is a 2-1 favorite in Las Vegas sports books, but their scheduled 15-round fight figures to be an attractive matchup featuring two boxers with fine skills and proven knockout power.

"It will be a good fight, a sensational fight," predicted Lou Duva, who manages McCallum. "This fight really belongs up there as a great fight."

McCallum, 31-0 with 28 knockouts, has held the WBA 154-pound crown since winning it from Sean Manning in October 1984. He knocked out all five opponents in title defenses, but has drawn little attention for his work.

"If I knock out Donald Curry, the whole world will know it," said McCallum, a Jamaica native who now lives in Valley Stream, N.Y.

"Everyone will know what a great fighter Mike McCallum is."

While McCallum has remained an enigma for all, but the most dedicated boxing fans, Curry's talents are well documented.

The 25-year-old Fort Worth, Texas, fighter was the rave of the boxing world when he scored a stunning second-round knockout over previously undefeated Milton McRoy in December 1985 to unify the 147-pound welterweight title.

But a shocking knockout loss at the hands of Britain's Lloyd Honeyghan last September cost him his title and raised some questions about how good Curry actually was.

"Anybody could have beaten me that night," said Curry, who blamed his loss on managerial problems and trying to lose 11 pounds in three days before the fight. "I had stopped trying to improve as a welterweight and it caught up to me. I had no motivation."

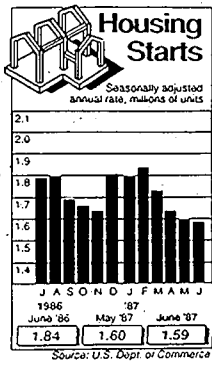

Curry has won his only two fights since the loss, both on fifth-round disqualifications for hitting. He knows he must look impressive against McCallum if he is to get in line for some future big paydays.

"I need a dramatic win," Curry conceded. "I feel I have pressure on me, pressure I put on myself."

Housing starts post four-month decline

But analysts pin hopes for rebound on declining mortgage rates

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Housing construction fell for the fourth consecutive month in June, posting the longest string of declines in six years, as builders continued cutting back following a jump in mortgage rates this spring, the government reported Friday.

The Commerce Department said construction of new homes and apartments dropped 0.7 percent in June to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.59 million units.

The four-month decline was the longest since mid-1981, during the last recession, and it pushed the rate of home building to its lowest level since August 1984.

Many analysts expressed hope that the worst is now over because mortgage rates, after rising rapidly in April and May, have edged back to levels where home buyers should be willing to enter the market again.

Fixed-rate mortgages declined to a nine-year low of close to 9 percent at the end of March, before investor fears about a weak dollar and renewed inflation sent rates up sharply. Fixed-rate mortgages shot up almost 2 percentage points, hitting 10.6 percent on May 22.

But since that time, rates have been steadily declining. The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. reported Friday that its weekly nationwide survey showed rates had now fallen to 10.23 percent.

Analysts noted that building permits, a good sign of future activity, were up a modest 1.6 million in June to an annual rate of 1.51 million units. It was the first increase in permits since March.

After the spring rate shock, things are bottoming out and the worst appears to be over," said James Christian, chief economist for the U.S. League of Savings Associations. "We should see improving housing numbers in July and August." Martin Regalia, chief economist for the National Council of Savings Institutions, agreed that housing starts, which are 13.5 percent below their February level, should not drop any further, but he said he is not looking for much of an upturn in activity either.

John Tuccillo, chief economist of the National Association of Realtors, predicted that housing starts for all of 1987 would total 1.69 million units, down 7 percent from the eight-year high of 1.81 million units actually constructed in 1986.

But if July does not show an expected rebound, then, Tuccillo said, "We could be facing the beginnings of a housing recession."

For the first six months of the year, work was started on 10.6 percent fewer homes and apartments than in the same period in 1986. The 0.7 percent June decline in housing construction followed even bigger decreases of 5.9 percent in March, 5.0 percent in April and 2.3 percent in May.

The weakness in June came from a 2.4 percent fall in construction of single-family homes, which put the annual rate at 1.59 million units. It was the fourth consecutive drop in single-family activity and it followed an even bigger 7.4 percent May decline.

Construction of multifamily units was up 3.1 percent in June, with the strength coming in an increase in two-to-four-unit complexes. Multifamily construction dropped slightly. Analysts do not expect the upturn in multifamily construction to last, given high nationwide vacancy rates and the adverse impact of the new tax law on apartment construction.

Every area of the country showed weakness in June except for the West, where construction activity climbed 13.3 percent to an annual rate of 427,000 units.

Construction fell 9.5 percent in the Northeast to an annual rate of 267,000 units. Analysts said this decline was to be expected because builders are beginning to have trouble finding enough land.

Strengthening dollar helps push Dow over 2,500 mark

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street's bull market, coming up to its fifth anniversary, passed a new milestone Friday as the Dow Jones industrial average closed above 2,500 for the first time.

Analysts said blue-chip stocks benefiting from strong earnings reports and issues involved in takeovers and buybacks paced the market's fourth consecutive gain. Dow Jones' average of 30 big-name stocks climbed 13.07 to 2,510.04, and several other market measures also rose sharply.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange remained active at 209.89 million shares, against 210.88 million in the previous session.

The Dow Jones Industrials flirted with the 2,500 mark Wednesday and Thursday, only to close below it both times.

However, the average moved cleanly past that round-number landmark Friday morning, with the help of a strengthening dollar in foreign exchange and a decline in open-market interest rates.

Perceptions that the economy remains sluggish, keeping inflation subdued, were reinforced by word that housing starts fell 0.7 percent last month.

Analysts say the market has also benefited lately from impressive second-quarter earnings reports by several leading industrial companies.

With all the positive developments, brokers said Friday's advance typified the rally since late May in its lack of speculative exuberance.

"This whole thing has crept up on us," said Hugh Johnson at First Albany Corp. "There's still a healthy amount of skepticism among investment advisers." Philip Morris' which reported strong second-quarter earnings Thursday, added 1% to 99%.

RJR Nabisco gained 1% to 57%. On Thursday the company posted higher quarterly earnings and raised its dividend.

At the same time, investors continued to bid up international stocks such as Korea Fund, up 2% at 85%, and Taiwan Fund, up 10% at 64.

British Airways forges $390 million merger purchase with rival

Los Angeles Times

LONDON — Five months after being sold to private ownership, British Airways announced Thursday an agreement to merge with the country's smaller international carrier, British Caledonian. Under the agreement, British Airways will spend $390 million to buy its rival. Although described as a merger, the move is effectively a takeover by British Airways of a key competitor and is expected to strengthen its role as one of the world's largest international airlines.

British Airways is already Western Europe's largest airline and claims to carry more international passengers than any competitor. "The merger gives British aviation an unprecedented opportunity to create a British airline capable of taking on the world," said British Airways Chairman Lord King in a prepared statement.

The proposed takeover must be assessed by Britain's director general of fair trading, Gordon Brown, before the government can formally approve the action. If he decides that the merger is against the public interest, British Airways would delay the action by at least six months. But aviation analysts considered delays unlikely.

In the House of Commons, opposition Labor members of Parliament charged that the merger was in direct contradiction of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's pro-competition policy of encouraging competition.

"It is a conspicuous irony that after years of public ownership, when a merger was resisted and competition promoted, privatization should within months lead to merger and stifled competition," Labor MP Antony Blair complained.

Thursday's announcement ends a prolonged struggle for survival by the British Columbian, which competes against British Airways on lucrative North Atlantic routes, including those to New York and Los Angeles, in addition to being the sole British carrier to West Africa and parts of the Middle East.

With 27 aircraft, its fleet was barely one-sixth that of British Airways.

Key shareholder increases stake in Tri-Star

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Tri-Star Pictures announced Thursday that its largest shareholder has agreed to increase its stake, paying a premium over the market price to invest another $50 million in the 5-year-old entertainment company.

If approved by Tri-Star's board next week, a subsidiary of Coca-Cola Co. will acquire 3.3 million new shares of common stock at $15 per share. The new shares would increase Coca-Cola's ownership interest to 29.3 percent, up from 23.4 percent on a fully diluted basis.

The news spurred trading in Tri-Star shares, which closed at $11.375, up $1.375, in over-the-counter trading, with 530,300 shares changing hands.

Tri-Star Chairman Victor A. Kaufman "indicated that he feels it's a very big vote of confidence. He's feeling very happy," said Harold Vogel, a securities analyst at Merrill Lynch.

New York-based Tri-Star said it intends to use the proceeds to reduce bank debt, accelerate in-house production of motion pictures and expand Loews Theaters, the recently acquired movie theater chain.

Lewis J. Korman, Tri-Star's senior executive vice president, said the company not only gained an equity infusion and the enhanced commitment by Coca-Cola but tried to minimize any "disruption" of the stock market. "New offerings in the past have depressed Tri-Star's price, Korman said.

Kaufman, noting that the company already has a net worth of $250 million, said Tri-Star is in "very strong financial" shape. "This is just to help grow."
