Security Council calls for cease-fire in Gulf

By O.C. DOELLING
The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — All 15 nations on the Security Council voted Monday for a U.S.-sponsored resolution demanding an end to the Persian Gulf war, which Iraq supported and Iran said in advance it would ignore.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz raised his hand high in the vote to dramatize the Reagan administration's stated commitment to a diplomatic settlement of the 7-year-old conflict between Iran and Iraq.

"The international community has joined together today to say, 'Enough! Stop the war! Now!'" Shultz said.

KUWAIT — Iran said Monday the latest U.N. effort to end the Persian Gulf war is "not worth a penny" and told the United States it will retaliate for any attack.

The U.N. Security Council unanimously approved a resolution demanding a cease-fire in the 7-year-old war with Iraq but the Iranians said they would ignore it, as they have several previous resolutions.

U.S. Navy warships are stationed just outside the Strait of Hormuz, the narrow southern entrance to the gulf, preparing to escort Kuwaiti tankers that will sail under the American flag.

Kuwait is Iraq's western neighbor at the gulf's northern end. Iran accuses it of serving as a conduit for arms shipments to the Iraqis, whose ports have been closed since soon after the war started in September 1980.

Iraq has attacked ships owned by or serving Kuwait frequently since last September and says it will not be deterred by U.S. Navy escorts for 11 refueled Kuwaiti tankers or by Soviet presence in the Persian Gulf. Kuwait has leased three tankers from the Soviet Union.

In Washington, Defense Department officials said the first U.S. Navy escort operation has been tentatively scheduled to begin Tuesday night. The officials, speaking with the condition they not be identified, said two Kuwaiti oil tankers flying the American flag would get under way and pick up Navy escorts either Tuesday evening or early Wednesday morning — Persian Gulf time.

Ministers Jean-Bernard Raimond of France, Hans-Dietrich Genscher of West Germany, Giulio Andreotti of Italy, Rashid Abdullah of the United Arab Emirates and Dante Caputo of Argentina, and Sir Geoffrey Howe, Britain's foreign secretary.

Raimond's government severed relations with Iran last Friday in a diplomatic dispute. He presided at Monday's meeting because France is Security Council chairman for July.

All five permanent Security Council members — the United States, Soviet Union, China, Britain and France — cooperated in drawing up the resolution.

Shultz said: "The very adoption of this obligatory resolution is an historic step. Yet its adoption is only a start. Responsibility for compliance rests fundamentally with Iraq and Iran."

While criticizing Iran for its support of "terrorist activities," Shultz held out an olive branch to the government in Tehran.

"We remain ready and willing to discuss with Iran the serious problems which continue to divide us," he said.

"A positive Iranian response to this resolution and an end to aggressive actions against other states and their citizens would do much to make possible a mutually beneficial bilateral relationship in the future."

CSI approves geothermal water pact

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho trustees voted Monday to settle a lawsuit spanning more than two years and a dozen organizations tapping geothermal wells in Twin Falls and Jerome counties.

CSI's attorney, John Rosholt, said the tentative agreement must still be approved by the state Department of Water Resources and the organizations tapping a common hot-water aquifer with CSI. But the prominent water-rights attorney said DWR Director Kenneth Dunn and five "major players," including CSI, appear ready to accept the agreement.

"With the board's approval, that would be all of the major players," Rosholt said.

The agreement lowers each organization's current rights to hot water, but many are not drawing their full amount anyway. It also limits future thresholds of use and creates a mechanism to check whether the aquifer is being drained faster than it can fill back up.

The agreement proposes each participant report quarterly to DWR the levels of flow, pressure and temperature of hot water from its well. After pressure in two wells dropped substantially, CSI filed suit in March 1985 to limit water taken from the aquifer and prohibit new rights to the water from being granted.

Using that information provided under the agreement, DWR will calculate whether the aquifer can recharge itself.

These levels of use are not currently monitored. But the agreement also requires participants to put measuring devices on their wells.

Participants will pay DWR $1,000 a year for at least five years to collect the information. And no new geothermal permits will be approved for this area during those five years.

Rosholt said if there is extra water found during the studies, more rights will be distributed proportionate to each organization's current rights.

But if the aquifer cannot recharge itself under the agreement, it's back to the drawing board, basing each organization's right to the water on when its right was filed, he said.

"From that standpoint, we don't give anything up," said Rosholt, referring to CSI's second-oldest right filed June 1978.

The oldest pertinent right is held by a company based in Tulsa, Okla., Professional Investors Life Insurance Co., which uses the water to raise fish.

Professional holds a right for 6 cubic-feet-per-second of water from a well on the north side of the Snake River in Jerome County. The agreement would limit Professional to 4.5 cfs for fish-raising and potentially another 4.5 cfs for power generation. But it takes only 3 cfs now, Rosholt said.

One cfs equals about 450 gallons-per-minute. CSI holds total rights for nearly 9 cfs, but uses only 1.21 cfs now. The agreement would limit the school's development to 6 cfs.

The school currently has two wells that heat four

Poindexter lashes back at GOP critics

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — John M. Poindexter angrily responded to Republicans' criticism Monday, declaring that he had conducted himself honorably as President Reagan's national security adviser, that he regrets nothing he did and that "I'm not going to be apologetic about it."

He said, too, that he knows nothing about a meeting in the White House last Dec. 16 at which — a congressman intimated — a pardon was discussed for Poindexter and his aide, Lt. Col. Oliver North.

While House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said he was unaware of such a meeting, but that a presidential pardon for Poindexter and North was considered in December as a means of getting them to testify before Iran-Contra committees of Congress.

Reagan decided to recommend a grant of immunity instead, Fitzwater said.

Poindexter's break from the calm manner in which he testified before the congressional Iran-Contra committees last week came during sometimes-harsh questioning by three Republican members of the committees.

When Sen. Paul Trible of Virginia suggested he had not lived up to the honor code agreed to by all midshipmen at the U.S. Naval Academy, Poindexter, a rear admiral and No. 1 graduate in his class there, shot back:

"I think that's a very unfair thing to say and I object to it. I have always lived by the honor concept and I still live that way today. One of the things you also learn at

Admiral's memory lauded in reports

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Throughout his testimony before Iran-Contra investigators, Rear Adm. John M. Poindexter has responded to many questions with the words, "I don't recall."

That might come as a surprise to his superiors in the Navy who evaluated his performance over the years.

Poindexter, 50, graduated first in his class at the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis. He later received a doctorate in nuclear physics.

And throughout his career his superiors never evaluated his performance and his memory as less than superb.

Some members of the Iran-Contra committees, after hearing Poindexter's testimony, say they have doubts about the Poindexter memory.

"I think it's a little bit underdeveloped if you ask me," said Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas.

"I think there are an awful lot of things he doesn't remember," said Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md. "There are all sorts of things he doesn't recall, and these are things of consequence."

Illiteracy rate hampers Idaho economy

The Associated Press

BOISE — Although a new optimism has fueled Idaho's drive to breathe life into its long-stagnant economy, a severe illiteracy problem throughout the state is undermining that campaign, state Employment Director John Kilgrow says.

State officials have touted Idaho's educated workforce in bidding for both the multimillion-dollar US West communication-research center and the multimillion-dollar federal Superconducting Super Collider.

But Kilgrow said only a quarter of the state labor force — 16 percent of the total state population — has no high school diploma and a third of those 160,000 people function at a fourth-grade literacy level.

"That has a major impact on where we're going to be going in the next five or 10 years," she said. "If we do not bring these people's basic skills up to a literacy level that can compute, math and have writing skills, we're going to be in deep trouble."

"Compounded with that you've got high school students dropping out 4,000 a year," she added. "We just simply have not addressed that problem in this state."

Kilgrow made her comments in an interview with The Idaho

Statesman.

The illiteracy problem is as much a societal one as an educational one, she said, and requires the home to become more involved in basic education while the community develops programs to help people learn the math, reading and writing skills needed to make them employable.

"We watch people come in every day into the Job Service office that cannot fill out an application," Kilgrow said. "They're either embarrassed and they leave, or we cannot refer them onto a job because you've got business and industry saying, 'Don't send us anybody that can't read or write.'

"We've got to be able to refer these people to a program that can build their basic skills up," she said.

Conceding the state economy has been undergoing a structural change in the 1980s, Kilgrow said the percentage of service-oriented jobs has increased at the expense of higher-paying resource industry jobs.

That has helped to diversify the economy to some extent, but she said higher-paying jobs in other sectors like high-tech are needed to

Idaho among states with income decline

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Residents of Iowa and Nebraska enjoyed the best income gains in the country in the first three months of the year, but six states suffered annual declines due primarily to a drop in farm-subsidy payments, the government reported Monday.

The Commerce Department said nationwide incomes rose a seasonally adjusted 1.7 percent from January through March, compared with an increase of 0.9 percent in the October-December quarter last year.

Iowa led the country with an increase of 9.7 percent, followed by Nebraska, whose personal incomes climbed 4.5 percent. The substantial gains in both states were attributed to advance gov-buildings, saving an estimated $23,000 annually in heating bills and plans to heat two other buildings this year.

CSI filed its suit after the pressure of its wells dropped from about 30 pounds-per-square-inch to about 10 psi. That drop forced CSI to begin pumping water out of the well, instead of allowing natural pressure to deliver it to buildings.

Other players in the agreement include the third-oldest holder, J.D. and Jean McCollum, from Twin Falls County, who use water for irrigation, fish propagation and heating. The couple holds rights to 25 cfs, they divert 6.6 cfs, and would agree to develop only 1.5 cfs more.

These totals include 5 cfs of diversion for irrigation. That use, which does not take advantage of the heat of the natural resource, is prohibited for new geothermal rights but allowed for ones already in place.

Because of this suit, state legislation was previously this year recognizing the previously undefined distinction of geothermal water, which holds characteristics of both water and mineral rights because of its nature. The law limits development of the resource for use only as hot water.

"That was the do-gooder side" of the suit, Rosholt said.

But the law "grand-fathered," or allowed previous water rights, including the ones in CSI's suit, to continue uncut, Rosholt said.

Twin Falls School District, which heats its high school and Sawtooth Elementary School with 5 cfs from its well, would limit its current 1.11 cfs right to .75 cfs under the agreement.

And Twin Falls City holds a right for 1.92 cfs, but would limit itself to .96 cfs.

Others tapping the same aquifer include Michael Kestler, Gary Stone and Arnold and Ronald Elsing, Twin Falls County residents; First Church of the Nazarene; Hydrotube of Idaho; and Magic Gardens. Each of these permit holders currently draws less than 1 cfs.

Regardless of whether they sign the agreement, "they" would be bound by it if the "major players" and Dunn approve it, Rosholt said.

Rosholt said litigants could sign the agreement, which closes CSI's civil case, by Wednesday and Dunn could finalize it that afternoon. Dunn will be in Twin Falls Wednesday to announce another water-rights decision involving Niagara Springs.

CSI trustees voted unanimously to approve the agreement, unless trustee vetoes it by noon today. Trustee Bob Blastock asked for time to read the agreement before "setting it in concrete."

But the trustees thanked Rosholt for apparently settling the case.

"Our advice to you has been that we could effect a long-term solution best through (out-of-court) settlement," said Rosholt, who characterized going to court as "the most expensive hobby in the world."

ernment subsidy payments to farmers on their corn crops.

But a big drop in government payments to farmers contributed to income declines in the states of North Dakota, Montana and Idaho. In those states during the first three months of the year following large fourth-quarter payments on the 1986 wheat and corn crops.

The new figures emphasized how much of an impact swings in subsidy payments can have on the economies of farm states. The report said the effects of the government subsidies vary from state to state and quarter to quarter because the assistance is not paid out evenly over the year and each eligible crop is under a different payment schedule.

States that suffered income declines in the first three months attributed to a fall-off in subsidy payments included North Dakota, with a 1.6 percent income drop; Montana, down 1.9 percent; Idaho, down 1.5 percent; Kansas, down 0.6 percent; and Oklahoma, down 0.4 percent.

Alaska also suffered a 2.0 percent drop in incomes during the first three months of the year, but this setback was attributed primarily to weakness in the oil industry.

For the country as a whole, incomes in mining, which includes oil and gas drilling, rose a tiny 0.2 percent, the first improvement in this category following six quarterly declines. In Idaho, income in the gas industry tumbled when producers cut back on drilling and exploration because of falling prices.

The biggest rise by payroll category was a 2.1 percent increase for government workers, followed by an increase of 1.9 percent in the service sector.

Construction payrolls showed a 1.6 percent increase as declines in mortgage rates sparked a boom in housing construction. However, this category is not expected to perform as well in the April-June quarter because builders, concerned about mortgage rate increases, cut back on production.

Payrolls in the manufacturing sector were up 0.5 percent. Rudolph DePass, an economist for the Commerce Department, said this increase was held back by production cutbacks in the auto industry and scattered strikes during the quarter.

States besides Iowa and Nebraska with large income increases in the first three months of the year were Indiana, up 2.7 percent; Tennessee, up 2.6 percent; Delaware, up 2.5 percent; Minnesota and Nevada, up 2.4 percent; and Maine and Illinois, up 2.3 percent.

He is an imaginative thinker, with a retentive memory and has an exceptional ability to examine and analyze methods and procedures and to devise ways and means of increasing their effectiveness and efficiency," the evaluator said.

In evaluating Poindexter's testimony, Sarbanes asserted Monday that the admiral was intimately involved in the secret operation managed by his aide, Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, to secretly sell arms to Iran, to use that leverage to try to gain freedom for U.S. hostages in Lebanon, and to channel some of the arms profits to Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

"There's a very sharp gap — a large gap — about what he knew as things went along and what he knew when they were preparing chronologies" about what had happened, Sarbanes said.

the Naval Academy is the ability to exercise independent judgment."

In four days of testimony under the House Select Committee on North's plan for diverting Iranian arms-sale profits to the Nicaraguan rebels but did not tell Reagan what he was doing. He said he wanted to insulate the president from political problems if word of the plan should leak out.

However, he said Monday, he periodically informed Reagan of certain aspects of the Contra resupply effort, and he said Reagan knew that North was the principal National Security Council aide on the project.

In his testimony Monday, Poindexter also accused former House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., of holding up final approval of Contra aid last year "while men in Central America that were fighting for their freedom were dying."

Reached at home in Warwickport, Mass., O'Neill said Poindexter is wrong, that he never slowed down the vote.

"It was just going through the legislative process," O'Neill said, adding that Poindexter "still doesn't have a real good idea of how the Congress operates."

Other critics, as well as Republicans, lashed on criticism. Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, said he found it incredible that a presidential staff member thought he could provide the president with selective knowledge and thereby insulate him from political embarrassment.

"If this relationship between the president and his staff is condoned," Brooks said, "who will ever believe any president of the United States again? Not the American people, not our friends, not our adversaries."

"Our wages are low, very low, in Idaho compared to other states," Kilgrew said, but she emphasized that that factor also is a benefit because it does attract business.

Those showers won't go away today

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding:

Today and Wednesday, partly cloudy with chance of a shower or thunder-shower, most likely late afternoon and evening hours. Highs both days mid 80s. Lows tonight 50 to 60.

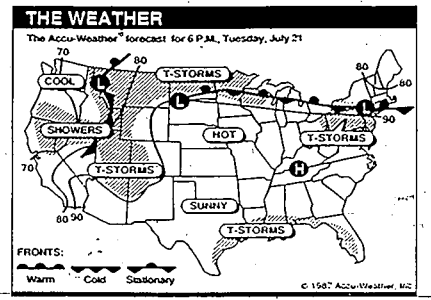

Camas Prairie, Halley and Lower Wood River Valley:

Today and Wednesday, partly cloudy with widely scattered showers and thunderstorms, most likely over the mountains late afternoon and evening hours. Highs both days upper 70s. Lows tonight near 40.

Northern Utah and Nevada:

Utah — Areas of showers and thunderstorms Tuesday. Decreasing Wednesday. Lows 55-65. Highs upper 70s to near 80.

Nevada — Partly cloudy today with a chance of afternoon thunderstorms. Fair tonight. Mostly sunny Wednesday except for a chance of afternoon thunderstorms north. Lows in the mid 40s to mid 50s. Highs both days in the 40s to low 60s.

REGIONAL WEATHER

The National Weather Service says a large low pressure system off the northern California coast, reaching an, a southwestward flow along Idaho, a series of small weather disturbances embedded in the airflow continued to cause mid and high level cloudiness along with afternoon and evening shower and thundershower activity.

The warmest temperature in the state Monday was 87 degrees at Boise, while Stanley reported the low of 31 degrees.

The pollen count in Twin Falls Monday was 50 particles per cubic meter of air.

The agricultural outlook for Southern Idaho — Conditions for field work and haying will be fair today and Wednesday, then good or very good Thursday through Saturday. Widely scattered thundershowers will develop today and Wednesday, especially in the east portion where locally poor conditions may occur. Total rainfall: 0.1 to 0.2 inches, one to three tenths of an inch in the east. Drying and gradual warming later in the week with high temperatures near normal by Saturday. Winds for spraying today will be west or southwest about 10 mph. Gusts to 35 mph possible near thundershowers.

The extended forecast for Southern Idaho: A few afternoon thundershowers Thursday otherwise fair with gradual warming. Highs upper 70 to mid 80s Thursday—mid 80s to lower 90s by Saturday. Lows mid 40s to lower 50s

Memory

One of the most consequential is the secret shipment of U.S.-made Hawk missiles to Iran in the fall of 1985, a shipment that the admiral says he remembers knowing about in advance. Last year he left that event out when questioned by Congress and when helping prepare chronologies of events for President Reagan to use in making public statements.

Why? He simply forgot, he testified repeatedly when questioned last week Monday.

Poindexter's naval superiors, however, had an extremely positive view of his memory, as reflected in his fitness reports, made available Monday by the House and Senate Iran-Contra committees.

In September 1976, when Poindexter, then a captain, was serving as executive assistant to Adm. James L. Holloway III, then the chief of naval operations, Holloway offered this summary:

"He is an imaginative thinker, with a retentive memory and has an exceptional ability to examine and analyze methods and procedures and to devise ways and means of increasing their effectiveness and efficiency," the evaluator said.

In evaluating Poindexter's testimony, Sarbanes asserted Monday that the admiral was intimately involved in the secret operation managed by his aide, Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, to secretly sell arms to Iran, to use that leverage to try to gain freedom for U.S. hostages in Lebanon, and to channel some of the arms profits to Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

Better pre-natal care could cut costs

BOISE (AP) — Numerous state and federal studies show that more money spent providing prenatal medical care for low-income families could result in a huge savings in bills later for babies that must receive expensive intensive care.

A legislative committee, meeting here Monday, was advised that one Colorado study estimated that for each $1 spent providing prenatal care to the needy, $9 would be saved later through the birth of more healthy babies.

And a study conducted by a Twin Falls physician, Dr. Paul Miles, showed a definite link between the amount of prenatal care and the number of babies that later have problems requiring expensive treatment.

The committee, headed by Rep. Brent Brockme, R-Boise, will make recommendations to the next Legislative session on Medicaid laws.

One suggestion might be that Idaho spend more money providing low-cost or free prenatal care to the needy, with the hopes of producing more healthy babies and avoiding bills that can run up to $300,000.

The state also would only have to put up a portion of the cost, with the rest coming from the federal government, officials said.

Chuck Holden, executive director of the Idaho Association of Counties, said state and national studies indicate there can be a "distinct savings" by providing more prenatal care.

"Preventive medicine is a whole lot cheaper in the long run, as you well know," said Holden.

He said children born premature, with very low birth weight or other defects often have problems that prevent them from functioning in society, making them permanent wards of the state.

Committee member Rep. Russell Newcomb, R-Twin Falls, presented Miles' study of babies born in the Twin Falls area.

Miles said of 29 babies born to very high-risk mothers, but with complete prenatal care, three went into intensive care. Total cost of prenatal care was $6,900.

Of 44 "drop-outs" who gave birth with no prenatal care, 9 babies went into intensive care at a cost of $59,000.

Dr. Zsolt Koppanyi, chief of the Bureau of Child Care, Department of Health and Welfare, presented the committee with a study showing 19 of Idaho's 44 counties spent a total of $1.7 million in 1983 on infants requiring intensive care, for an average of $21,750 per case.

Leading the list was Ada, which spent $435,100 on 15 cases, nearly 60 percent of the county's entire budget for the indigent.

Two Bannock County cases resulted in a bill of $200,000, Koppanyi reported. Blaine also had two cases that year, and the bill of $175,000 is pending. Bonneville had 13 cases, costing $158,000 and Owyhee had $152,000 in a claims pending or paid. Jefferson county has $130,000 in bills pending.

Koppanyi's report said of 18,000 live births in Idaho in 1983, 1,200 required intensive care at a cost of $10 million to $12 million. The bill for the 150 births requiring extended intensive care was another $5 million. The study concluded 40 percent of the birth problems could have been prevented with good prenatal care.

Another study, covering 1979-82, considered "adequate" pre-birth care as at least nine visits to a doctor or health facility before birth. Four or less visits were considered inadequate care. Any other combination of care was listed as marginal.

With those guidelines, the lowest level of prenatal care was in Lemhi County. Of 640 births in the study period, 57 percent of the mothers received marginal care and 17.5 percent received inadequate care.

Others in the top eight, with number of births, percentage of marginal care, and percentage of inadequate care, were:

Cassia, 2,285, 47 percent and 13 percent; Blaine, 859, 43 and 13; Benewah, 392, 40 and 13; Franklin, 569, 49 and 11.6; Jerome, 64, 40 and 10.9; Gooding, 340, 28 and 10.2 and Clearwater, 364, 21 and 9.83.

More crews pulled from Minneha fire

IDAHO CITY (AP) — Fire bosses pulled out some 200 more firefighters from the now-controlled Minneha Creek Fire Monday, leaving only a few crews to complete mop-up work at the 1,900-acre blaze.

With cool, rainy weather drastically reducing further threat from the fire that started a week ago, Boise National Forest officials said the remaining crews would patrol the fire to handle any smoldering hotspots.

The blaze was controlled Saturday, just two days after the near triple-digit temperatures and gusting winds gave way to daily-high temperatures below 70 and persistent moisture. To the northeast of the fire, the Boulder and Pioneer mountains received several inches of snow over the weekend.

The fire was declared contained Friday night, after a battle that involved up to 550 firefighters working 15 miles of fire lines. Another 100 people were supporting the effort at its peak.

After rain Friday afternoon and Saturday quelled the blaze, the work crew was pared to 12 crews of 20 firefighters each, plus two tanker crews of three persons each.

Boise National Forest spokeswoman Lynne Moreland said the area within the fire's perimeter measured 2,230 acres, but 275 acres were unburned. No buildings or other property were damaged, with the loss only to vegetation and timber.

The fire had raged out of control since Monday, when it was started by a downed power line. But Thursday afternoon, nearly a third of an inch of rain fell on the mountain area, just outside Boise. During the night another tenth of an inch fell and temperatures fell into the 40s and low 50s.

Agencies suspect transients in Ashton slaying

ASHTON (AP) — Investigators have launched a search for as many as two transients they believe may have been involved in last week's slaying of Ashton grocery store operator Teresa Rice.

Through the investigation at the crime scene, the investigative team believes the perpetrator is a transient passing through the area.

Fremont County Sheriff Terry Thompson said.

Law enforcement agencies throughout Idaho and surrounding states have been issued composite drawings of the pair, both seen in the Ashton area around the time Mrs. Rice was shot in the head last Wednesday night during an apparent robbery at the store.

Investigators said the men were considered armed and dangerous.

Meanwhile, Clark County officials were trying to determine the identity of a man who was found stabbed to death over the weekend in the second slaying in a week in that region of eastern Idaho.

Officials said the semi-nude body was found in Birch Creek on Saturday by a rancher. The man, a Mexican or Indian in his early to mid-20s, was stabbed repeatedly in the abdomen, back and throat and had been in the creek for six to eight days, Coroner Ernest Sill said.

But the latest lead in the Ashton murder had officials in disagreement over whether there were one or two transients considered prime suspects. Thompson said the descriptions given by people who saw the men in different settings under different light were very similar with only the hair color the major difference.

But Duke the two sightings at different times in different locations ruled out the possibility the descriptions were of the same person.

Authorities were not releasing much information about the robbery and murder for fear of jeopardizing the investigation. Detectives have been interviewing scores of people in the Ashton area for the past four days in an attempt to develop leads in the case.

Physical evidence collected at the scene was being processed by the state crime laboratory, Thompson said.

Man charged with the beating death of his wife

IDAHO CITY (AP) — A 41-year-old Boise County man was formally charged with second-degree murder Monday in the slaying of his wife, who was reportedly beaten and kicked to death over the weekend.

Bond was set at $100,000 for Stephen Lane during his initial court appearance before Magistrate Patricia Young. Young scheduled a preliminary hearing for Lane on Aug. 3. Lane remained jailed in lieu of posting bond.

arguing at the Pine Tavern earlier that evening and they were walking home when Mrs. Lane was killed. He said he was unsure what the dispute was about.

"She was very much physically abused," Boise County Coroner Lynn Kuwahara said. Mrs. Lane suffered head and other internal injuries as well as the ruptured liver, the coroner said.

Lane, described as a "quiet person" by acquaintances, was discovered near his wife and was arrested without incident, Landers

Lynda Davis, co-owner of the Pine Tavern, said the Lanes, who lived in the area about three years.

Unidentified body found by rancher

DUBOIS (AP) — Authorities in Clark County tried on Monday to determine the identity of a man who was found stabbed to death over the weekend in the western part of the rural county.

Authorities said the semi-nude body was found in Birch Creek by a rancher who was touring the pipeline of a new hydroelectric project.

Clark County Coroner Ernest Sill said the man apparently died of multiple stab wounds to the abdomen, back and throat, inflicted by a small sharp object.

He said the body had been in the area six to eight days. The victim, either a Mexican or an Indian, was 20 to 25 years old and had a goatee and a mustache, Sill said.

Authorities said Songwain Lane, who lived on Robie Creek Road, died of a ruptured liver between 10:30 p.m. and midnight Saturday. Her body was found a quarter mile from the home, Sheriff Craig Landers said.

Landers said the couple had been

Media has missed the real story on Contra hearings

There has been an unconscionable reluctance by the mass media to spell out precisely the stakes involved in the game of try-to-catch-us-in-a-lie that the administration has been playing with Congress and the country all these months.

The stakes, of course, are the continuation of a democratic way of life that until now has been accepted without much thought as a birthright in perpetuity, thanks to the Founding Fathers. The White House's actions, largely carried out by military officers both active and retired, have now put that in doubt. If you have felt the earth move slightly under your feet, it is not your imagination.

The major news organizations have been mostly silent on this, but slowly, painfully and perhaps even nervously, a few publications and handful of congressmen have been giving voice to their darkest concerns about what the Iran-Contra affair has really meant to the country.

The New York Times in a recent editorial referred to a "rogue government." The New Republic pinpointed the military involvement in an article titled "The Colonels' Coup." Joan Didion, writing in The New Yorker, traced the origins of Lt. Col. Oliver North's operation back to the early days of the administration and outlined the goals of President Reagan's true believers in Central America — Nicaragua today, Cuba tomorrow. Here and there have been snippets and intimations that there have been more or less left hanging in the air.

Probably the bluntest and most comprehensive analysis as to what has been at stake in the controversy was by Elizabeth Drew, writing in the June 22 issue of The New Yorker. "If the administration was perfectly within its rights to do what it did, why the secrecy?" she wrote.

"If such an evasion of the law can be carried out, if the safeguards in our system of government can be so easily subverted, our constitutional system is finished. The Iran-Contra affair was a constitutional breakdown."

That is the foul little fact underlying all the activities and the fabrications of recent months, but it is one that most of the media have not brought themselves to utter. The television networks, in particular, have behaved abominably; not one documentary hour has been devoted to exploring the ramifications of the Iran-Contra affair in terms of its constitutional effects, despite the hours of "Nightline" and the authoritative posturing of television anchors and correspondents.

It was left to one of the committee members covering the Iran affair, Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., to put into words what even Drew, Didion and The New York Times stopped short of suggesting. Fascell closed the loop, as they say, probably much to the discomfort of the committee and the mass media covering its hearings, which did not see fit to repeat his words in the wrap-ups and excerpts of that day's session.

Addressing North directly, he tried to explain what has been troubling him, despite North's obvious patriotism and loyalty. At one point, he said: "I keep asking myself, how come I don't feel so good?"

Part of the answer was that "We the people, in order to form a more perfect union, Colonel North, have instead adopted the values of a totalitarian government, at least temporarily, in an effort to enhance democracy ... In the process, we have shredded our own democratic process," he said.

Possibly catalyzed by North's bravura performance, other committee members also came close to saying the same thing in stronger terms than they had used thus far. They spoke of the breakdown of the democratic process — which, of course, had been alluded to before, but not as powerfully. More important, they repeatedly pointed out that the administration's philosophy, as embodied by North, was an adaptation of the Communist credo that the end justifies the means.

In other words, and in so many words, totalitarian, however temporary.

The implications are obvious. The end result of a "rogue government," unless checked, inevitably is more rogues. A constitutional breakdown can lead to a Constitution in name only. Giving the military, retired or not, the right to raise men and money to fight a war without Congress or the people's approval can lead to a de facto military government.

These are the facts in the Iran-Contra affair that the media have shirked and that override all others, not whether there is a "smoking gun" or who told who what and who did or did not know about this or that memo.

By pursuing the alleged "legalities" to the detriment of the principles violated, the media have played it safe and have failed in their responsibility to keep the public informed. The news has to be more than the sum total of a single day's news story; it is also history, and history to be understood must be placed in context.

Even now it is doubtful that the press and television will explore the validity of Rep. Fascell's words. But if they decide that Reagan has won because nobody first-guessed him, they are just putting off the day when they will have to confront the next constitutional crisis.

Without North on TV, it's time for summer reading

BOSTON — Now that the Adventures of Ollie North are off the air, it's time at last to turn off the tube and head to the hammock for a rendezvous with a nice, stable book or two. No charging up the hills, please.

The problem is that any summer reading is likely to be a letdown after the twists and turns of the arms-for-hostages potboiler. Even the best-seller list won't help much. A composite of the dismal tales of the top ten would star an American amputee who held himself in a psychotic at a swank health spa where an alien spaceship captures a Vietnam vet trying to stave off the Russians in World War III while searching for a missing cat.

This year, even some usually reliable authors have turned out less than their own person's best. John Updike's narrative in "Roger's Version" are trapped in endless conversations about the computerized search for God. And Saul Bellow's lauded novel, "More Die of Heartbreak," about life and the threat of sexual love in the "post-humans" era left me colder than his botanist's fictions.

Ellen Goodman

As for "Cultural Literacy," E.D. Hirsch Jr.'s alleged highbrow entry to the non-fiction list, it's a magazine piece with a list. His theory is that the younger generation doesn't share the information that forms the core of our national culture. I just saved you $19.95. He then goes on to list that information for 63 pages—Achilles, acquittal, acrophobia, Horatio Alger, you get the idea—hooking people who love to tell you their IQs.

Under these circumstances, lost you are reduced to Ollie videotapes. I feel compelled to offer my annual counter-list. What follows is, as always, an entirely personal and quirky list of the books I most enjoyed over the past year.

The most vivid and complex character I've encountered this year, on or off TV, was Adele in "Anywhere But Here." Mona Simpson creates a riveting, idiosyncratic child-woman who abruptly leaves her old life and travels west to turn her daughter into a movie star. This is a novel of illogical decisions, moods and uprootings, and about the fierce love-hate bonds of mother and daughter.

The theme recurs in a memoir entitled with absolute accuracy, "Fierce Attachments," by Vivian Gornick. She sets up the book with a single sentence: "My relationship with my mother was not good and as our lives accumulate it often seems to worsen." The 45-year-old daughter writes as she walks with her 77-year-old mother through the streets of Manhattan, arguing about the past. "Tough" is the word that comes to mind.

It's not attachment but abandonment that is the catalyst for Louise Erdrich's novel, "Beet Queen." The children in this book are deserted by a mother who flies out of their lives at the state fair, leaving them grounded. Erdrich's clarity creates not only vivid characters but a rich secondary world and place, 40 years in her native North

In contrast, Philip Roth is all over the map, geographically, creatively and emotionally. As a sometime Roth fan, I found "The Counterlife" an astonishing piece of work. The author struts his stuff, showing just what he can do with all the old subjects: sex, religion, writing. The Jewish angst, the inner demons of Nathan Zuckerman—a man with "a taste for perpetual crisis"—is on full display.

Carolyn See doesn't wrestle with inner demons; she takes on the big one: the bomb. In a slight, offbeat novel, she portrays California as a place where someone can insist that "your fear of nuclear war is a metaphor," and where people spend the last days watching television. In a twist on Holocaust novels, this one is placed after the end: the "Golden Days."

If you prefer history to such futuristic fantasies, David Garrow's portrait of Martin Luther King Jr. shows him "bearing the Cross." What emerges out of the wealth of detail, much of it personal and controversial, is a more human King, trapped by his times and conscience into a life he accepted but didn't choose.

Elizabeth Becker writes a portrait as well, a portrait of Cambodia. In "When the War Was Over," she uses the tools of historian and journalist, including an account of a harrowing personal trip—to describe how the Khmer Rouge came to devour its own.

As for children, no one knows them better than Robert Coles. "The heart of my work is listening, years of it, and then describing what has been heard..." In his latest book, "The Political Life of Children," he listens to the slum dwellers of Brazil and to the Africans children of South Africa with enormous respect.

Finally, a rerun. When Margaret Atwood's book, "The Handmaid's Tale," made this list last year, I thought of it as a chilling fantasy of female life in a theocracy. The Republic of Gilead, where women's role was to produce children. After a year of Baby M, of surrogate motherhood, and an egg-donor clinic opening in Cleveland, I picked it up again. This is one novel that looks less and less like fiction.

Reagan may be pushing too hard for pact with Soviets

The president of a prestigious New England educational institution, who also happens to be a longtime observer of U.S.-Soviet affairs, worried the other day that President Reagan may be "too anxious" for a summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

His point was that Reagan, his president's trouble because of the Iran-Contra affair, might be tempted to accept a flawed arms-control deal — or one whose full implications have not been thought through — in order to bring off a Gorbachev visit to the United States.

The administration dismisses such speculation. As one official said Thursday, "The president has made it clear that he'd like to have a treaty, and he would like to have a summit this year. But he's perfectly capable of walking away from it if he can't get the deal he wants."

The Soviets, however, are plainly trying to use the prospect of a summit meeting to squeeze concessions on arms reduction out of Washington. And with Reagan's mouth watering for a solid accomplishment during the final months of his troubled presidency, you have to wonder whether he is really immune to temptation.

It is self-evident that a summit meeting should be a means to an end — to put the final touches on agreements for verifiable arms reductions, for example — rather than an end in itself. In real life, however, things don't work out that way. There are too many people here and abroad, who are so nervous about U.S.-Soviet tensions that they demand periodic summit meetings, even when the odds are that the two great powers are not on the verge of blowing up the world.

The sensible answer would be annual summit meetings, held without regard to whether the political weather is fair or foul. But neither side has been willing to take such suggestions seriously. U.S. presidents look on well-timed summits as plums that pay dividends in terms of domestic politics. And the Soviets, not being able to treat summits as bait to be dangled before salivating American leaders.

During his first four years in office, Reagan showed little discernible interest in summits or arms control.

The president, though, seemingly became sensitive to Democratic taunts that he was on the way to becoming the first president in 35 years who failed to meet one-on-one with his Soviet counterpart; and that he was being deliberately sabotaging the arms-control process.

In any event Reagan has talked less about the "evil empire" during his second term, and has become visibly more interested in summit meetings and arms-control negotiations. In fact, the pattern has been for Washington to talk about the desirability of summits while Moscow has attempted to treat such meetings as a prize to be awarded for U.S. acceptance of Soviet arms-control demands.

The saving grace is that Gorbachev has seemed to have the sense of the situation, including a desire to head off an unconstrained arms race in "Star Wars" and other high-technology weapons — to consider meetings with Reagan desirable.

Twice now the Soviet leader, in the end, has been willing to drop the posturing and meet with Reagan without any important preconditions.

The first Reagan-Gorbachev summit meeting took place long on atmospheric but not much on substance beyond an agreement to meet again. The second meeting, held at Reykjavik last October, proved just how dangerous it can be for a president to wing it at an ill-prepared summit.

Reagan agreed to the Reykjavik summit on a few days' notice; the general expectation was that the meeting would be an informal preliminary event to a Gorbachev summit to Washington.

The two leaders, however, plunged deeply into substance. They agreed in principle to a 50 percent cut in strategic offensive nuclear forces and the removal from Europe of medium-range missiles.

The shock and dismay of the European allies and our own Pentagon when they heard about it, Reagan went on to propose the elimination of all ballistic missiles over time, and Gorbachev trumped him by proposing that all strategic nuclear weapons be tossed into the garbage bin by 1996.

As it turned out, the preliminary agreements fell apart because of the dispute over Star Wars. But European leaders, who look on the U.S. nuclear deterrent as vital to their security, have not forgotten that an American president was so cavalierly prepared to turn a 30-year-old strategic doctrine on its head.

The Europeans were further irritated by disclosures that Reagan had been pursuing arms-for-hostages deal with Iran at the very time that he was lecturing allied governments against compromising with terrorism.

The lingering European resentment and distrust have complicated U.S.-Soviet efforts to finalize negotiations on the removal of medium-range missiles from Europe. But the Soviets have said both publicly and privately that they want to pursue arms control now instead of waiting for Reagan's successor.

Several knotty problems stand in the way of a Euromissile agreement, but none seemed insurmountable until a few days ago when the Soviets seemed to switch tactics. Plans for a mid-July meeting between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and his Soviet counterpart petered out. Moscow has hardened the Soviet position while charging that Washington is to blame for blocking agreement.

Maybe Gorbachev no longer wants a summit — or an arms-control agreement — because the Politburo has decided that the Democ... an Congress, faced with a weakened president and terrible budget pressures, will slow or cancel ongoing weapons programs without requiring any reciprocal action by the Soviets.

It is more likely, though, that the Soviets are simply nibbling that, with Reagan so obviously needing a diplomatic victory to repair his damaged prestige, they need only wait him out in order to extract concessions on safeguards against cheating and other unresolved issues.

If Gorbachev may turn out to be right. But if Reagan stands firm and time runs out on his presidency, it will also run out on any chance of significant arms-control negotiations before 1990, the second year of a new administration.

If Gorbachev runs his bluff much longer in the face of that prospect, the world will be entitled to conclude that his expressed interest in arms control has been a con game all along.

Ernest Conine writes for the Los Angeles Times.

Retirement Fund should seek highest return possible

The Public Employees Retirement System has a stormy history. It started in July 1965. The then existing teacher's retirement fund was incorporated with the state plan in 1967. Citizens and counties were given the option to join from the start. The firemen's retirement system, which was bankrupt, was added in 1980.

As with most good things, it cost something to get started. In the beginning, the employer's (state) was required to pony up 9.1 percent of salary in order to build some reserve. We legislators were assured that our obligation would drop to 7 percent and remain there within a few years.

The PERB board, through its executive director, developed a pesky habit of coming up with verifiable arms reductions, for example — rather than an end in itself. In real life, however, things don't work out that way. There are too many people here and abroad, who are so nervous about U.S.-Soviet tensions that they demand periodic summit meetings, even when the odds are that the two great powers are not on the verge over 40 years to amortize it.

When I returned to the Legislature after being defeated for governor, I mounted a campaign to protect the solvency of the fund. The Legislature accepted some suggestions for trimming back the fund's liabilities. One of these changes did away with the windfall, for which legislators and other part-time employees could qualify by getting appointed to full-time, high-paying jobs in the twilight of their careers. In the instance, I have 25 years of part-time state service. Under the old setup, had I wangled an appointment to a $35,000 per year state job, I could have retired at $17,500. Not bad, but unfair. It is to the credit of the Legislature that they did away with that windfall.

Another change was to clean up the list of those eligible for early retirement because of hazardous-duty classification. Whole departments were taking advantage of an option, granted to the directors, as to who could qualify for "police duty."

Therefore, we had secretaries and janitors receiving enhanced early retirement under the guise of hazardous duty. At my prodding, the Legislature accepted sensible rules regarding such eligibility.

We also pushed for minor changes. As it turned out, I then focused our main attention on the abysmal earnings which the system had been getting on its investments. The PERB rate of return on its holdings had ranked it in the bottom 10 percent of all such comparable funds in the country.

There was a requirement in the law that the funds be invested with banks and trusts. We found that this limitation was unduly restrictive, and I persuaded the Legislature to allow the board to invest anywhere it felt that it could seek the highest return safely and prudently available, as required by another section of the law.

Well, you know the rest. The board hired a Tacoma-based firm to do its investing. Some Idaho banks and trust and Governor Andrus is raising the roof about the money leaving the state. He is replacing the board members as their terms expire.

I have no quarrel with the governor for his objective of obtaining a board of people who are skilled in the investment field. The board he returned is, in fact, composed of outstanding, dedicated people, did lack knowledge and experience in the arcane jungle of high finance.

However, I think our chief executive is dead wrong if he insists that this billion-dollar fund be returned to Idaho banks, unless they can perform competitively. The money does not remain here in any case, it is invested in a world-wide market of stocks and bonds. There are some Idaho jobs involved and the board may have been less than diligent in attempting to keep the custodial aspects here.

But the fund must seek the highest return possible within the bounds of safety; Had we done so in the recent past, we would have been probably $200,000,000 ahead. That money belongs to the retirees. It was my painful duty to recommend holding down on cost-of-living increases for these folks the last couple of years because of the increase in the unfunded liability period. High yield investments would cure that problem and also allow the state to reduce its contribution to a healthier 7 percent or so.

Idaho banks and trust institutions should be allowed every opportunity to compete for those funds and all things being equal, the money should be invested by them. However, they should not be granted any privileges to the detriment of the fund. And there should be no possibility of linkage between political contributions and investment authority such as existed prior to our change in the law.

Uncle Sam's kicking the check habit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Uncle Sam, the world's largest bill payer, on Monday launched a major overhaul of the way those bills are paid. Officials hope the change will one day make obsolete the phrase, "The check is in the mail."

Instead of sending checks, the government will make the payments by computer, transferring money directly into the bank accounts of thousands of firms that do business with Uncle Sam.

Social Security recipients, federal workers and retirees have had the option of getting their monthly checks by direct deposit for a decade.

And some of the largest government contractors have been paid for years by direct deposit as well.

But the new program, which is being run by the Treasury Department's Financial Management Service, has as its goal a complete transfer to a checkless government payment system for businesses.

The first three agencies making the switch Monday were the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Education Department and the Health Care Financing Administration.

Initially, only 3,000 payments will be made electronically each month by the three agencies—as officials check to insure there are no problems in the switchover.

The Labor Department will follow in September and by the end of the year, with other agencies added, the government expects to be making 50,000 business payments a month by computer.

By 1990, the goal is to have switched 50 million of the 77 million business payments the government makes each year to computer transfers.

The reason for the change is simple: money, it costs 26 cents to print and mail out a paper check, but the government estimates sending the payments electronically will cost only three cents.

The Financial Management Service, the agency responsible for paying the bills, expects to save up to $18 million a year when the new system is fully operational.

While Social Security recipients and other individuals will continue to have the option of using direct deposit or getting a monthly check, businesses will not have a choice. If they are dealing with a government agency which has converted to the new "vendor express system," then they will be paid by direct deposit.

There are 80,000 firms in the country which make at least $25,000 in sales to the government annually and officials estimate another 150,000 businesses are paid less than that each year.

FMS Commissioner William E. Douglas said in addition to the amount of the payment, the government was also transmitting electronically an invoice number so that firms will know which bill was being paid.

Douglas said if there are any problems in the new program they will likely show up in the first two months. But Douglas said officials "hoped they had anticipated most difficulties, drawing on the experience gained with 10 years of making Social Security payments electronically."

At present, 43 percent of the country's 37 million Social Security recipients receive their benefits by direct deposit.

Age was no obstacle to fire rescuer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — An 83-year-old man who ordinarily has trouble walking ran to a burning home early Monday and broke a window to rescue a man trapped inside. He said he had to take a tranquilizer later to calm down.

"I couldn't stop shaking for two hours," Fred Shearer said. "All my life I wondered if I would be in a situation where I can help save somebody's life. It never happened before, but it happened this morning."

Shearer said he was taking his trash out in the trailer park where he and his wife live when he heard a

Postal unions cut back demands for wage hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postal unions reduced their wage demands Monday in response to a smorgasbord of offers from the U.S. Postal Service tying pay increases to how much the unions will let it use cheaper, non-union "casual" workers.

Even in the absence of a strike threat, a midnight Monday deadline loomed. American Postal Workers Union President Moe Biller said he still held hopes of reaching a new three-year agreement and avoiding a costly and complex arbitration process that could stretch into the Christmas season.

Strikes by Postal Service employees are illegal under federal law, and the last time they walked off their jobs en masse was in 1970.

"It would be counterproductive," Biller said of the possibility of a walkout, particularly with President Reagan's resolve to fire striking government workers, as he did with more than 11,000 air traffic controllers in 1981.

The postal workers union and the National Association of Letter Carriers, which together represent 579,000 employees, said Monday they had reduced their wage increase proposals from 6.8 percent to 4.5 percent for each of three years.

"The ball is in their court," letter carriers President Vincent B. Sombrete said in calling for the Postal Service to come up with a new "fair and decent offer."

The Postal Service on Sunday laid out the bargaining table what Biller called a "Chinese menu" of proposals, including one offering what union officials described as 1.6 percent annual increases above the inflation rate in exchange for greater "work force flexibility."

Postal Service officials said any of the alternative proposals offered to the unions would allow the government agency to operate within a budget that anticipates approval of an increase in mail rates next year, from 22 cents to 25 cents for a first-class stamp.

The two sides negotiated late into the night Sunday and informal conversations continued Monday.

But neither side appeared willing to be the first to call for a resumption of formal talks.

"Both sides have said we're ready to go back," said Jim Van Loosen, a spokesman for the Postal Service. "They said they would come back when we do X and Y. We're just not willing to play that game."

The 1.6 percent annual increase would match a tentative agreement reached last week between the Postal Service and the small 50,000-member Mail Handlers Division of the Laborers Union.

Postal workers union officials said a memorandum of understanding was signed over the weekend satisfying their concerns about a possible new jurisdictional dispute between the two unions.

Silence ends as NBC, union meet

NEW YORK (AP) — Negotiators for both sides in the 22-day-old NBC strike met Monday for their first talks since 2,800 behind-the-scenes workers walked out in a job security dispute.

"When people are willing to meet and discuss issues, that's always a good sign," Timothy Germany, a mediator with the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, said before the meeting began about 11 a.m. Germany had called the sides together.

"They have met face-to-face and it's still going on," Calvin Selmer, secretary-treasurer of Local 11 of the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians, said early in the afternoon.

"At least they got into the same room. That's good," Selmer added. He said the last time talks were held, on June 28, "they didn't really get together except to discuss who's paying medical benefits."

Ramp site approved by council

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The decision of the Twin Falls City Council on Monday to allow a skateboard ramp at Frontier Field made 12-year-old Mike Alexander's trip to City Hall worthwhile.

Alexander, a Twin Falls resident, was one of about two-dozen youth and adults who turned out to support the construction of the ramp and were happy when the council said, "yes."

Although the measure passed, the vote wasn't unanimous.

Council members Erik Andersen and Mary McClusky opposed the proposal, fearing a ramp would expose the city to lawsuits.

"They think we are very foolish because of liability," McClusky said about what constituents told her.

But those council members who voted in favor of the ramp said the skateboarders should be given a chance.

The council voted to allow the ramp — or pipe as it is called in skateboard lingo — behind the baseball diamonds at Frontier Field. The site was the recommendation of the Parks and Recreation Commission.

Now that the skateboarders have the land, they are going to have to come up with the $1,500 needed to build the wooden structure, which will be 32-feet wide and long and nine-feet high. A committee of youth and adults already has a $250 donation from Twin Falls Bank and Trust, said State Rep. Ron Black of Twin Falls. Black was appointed to head the committee by the council after it banned skateboarding downtown.

Black said the group will seek $500 from businesses, leaving the remainder to be raised by the people who will use the ramp, which will become city property.

In asking the council's support for the ramp, Black said the city takes similar liability risks with people diving off the rocks at Dierkes Lake or scaling the eight-foot slides. The difference is that the skateboarders would be wearing helmets and protective pads, he added.

City Attorney Shane Bengochea said the Idaho Supreme Court ruled recently that a public or private entity is not liable for recreation areas where no fee is charged.

That doesn't mean people couldn't sue the city, but it does say the city would be exempt from liability, he said.

Andersen said skateboarding might be considered outside traditional recreational use.

"This type of thing is best left with the private sector. I am not in favor of it," he said.

McClusky said she was bothered by lack of supervision.

Black replied that city recreational property, such as the playgrounds, were not supervised.

Councilman Jim Vickers said he had intended to vote against the ramp, but changed his mind. The council shouldn't arbitrarily erect something that might invite a lawsuit.

"But in the same token, we have to be progressive and open-minded," Vickers said.

The majority of the council approved the construction at Frontier Field contingent on approval by officials of the College of Southern Idaho, which leases the area to the city. The structure will also have to pass a building inspection.

The vote received applause from the audience, who gathered outside council chambers for a pep talk from Black after the vote.

"You made the difference," he told them. Now they have to put their efforts into raising money, he said. He also warned them to be careful about how the ramp, which could be built in a few weeks, is used.

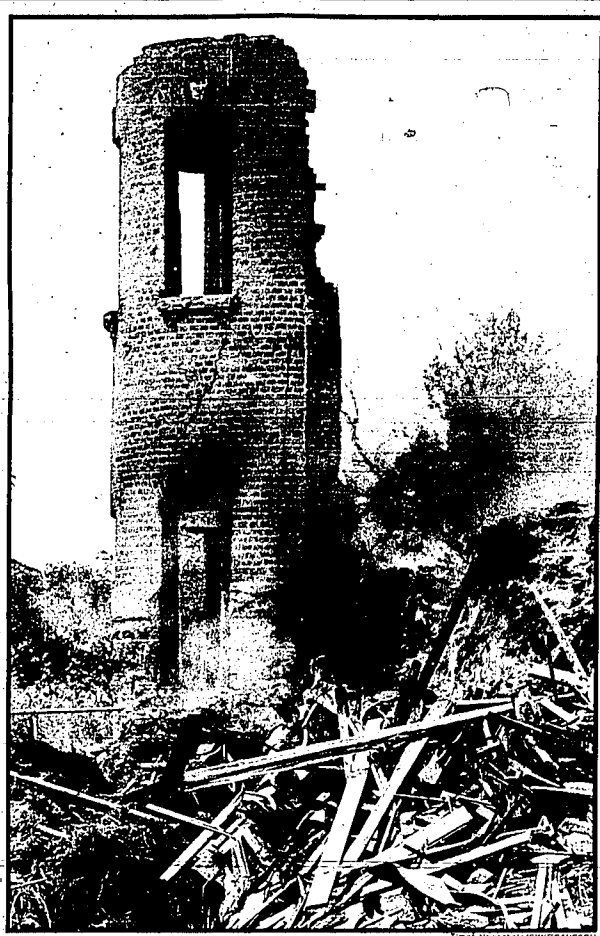

If a serious injury occurs, "you could lose it," he said.

In other business, the city awarded IBM Corp. a $64,043 bid for a new computer and printer for City Hall. City Manager Tom Courtney said the present 8-year-old system has reached its capacity.

IBM was the only bidder.

The council also awarded a $21,417 bid to Jac-Lyn Construction of Jerome for roof repair and replacement at city shops. The other proposal was from Quality Roofers Inc. of Twin Falls, with a $22,000 bid.

The council also approved a request by Steve Gardner to install some landscaping at his automobile repair business at 264 Main Ave. Council permission was needed because the landscaping would encroach on public land.

Rubble surrounding the old Hansen Hall continued to smolder all day Monday

Albion rubble catches fire

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

ALBION — An early morning fire on the old college campus in Albion was being investigated Monday as a possible arson.

Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal said the fire began about 4:30 a.m. Monday in the rubble of the old Hansen Hall, which was being demolished before the fire started. He said loss would be minor since fire was largely confined to the rubble and was then pushed into a large pile to burn itself out.

"We are looking into the possibility of arson," Crystal said. "There is no electricity or gas connected on the campus at this time, so we know it had to be man-caused."

Hansen Hall served as the original girls' dorm on the Albion Normal School campus, and like most buildings on the campus was made of brick. Annie Phillips of Rupert, who has been campaigning for development and sale of the old school, said she was glad to hear the fire involved only Hansen Hall and not Comish Hall, the later and larger women's dorm.

The volunteer Albion fire department remained on the scene for several hours and kept fire from spreading to other structures on the campus.

The state closed the school in 1951. Magic Valley Christian College occupied the campus from the late 1950s until 1969. Since that time the campus has been largely unoccupied.

However, the city of Albion, which owns the campus, is currently awaiting an offer from an individual interested in purchasing the long-abandoned campus.

Peter Dewey, of Burley, met with college alumni earlier this month and outlined a plan that could lead to an unnamed, out-of-state company acquiring and developing the old campus for commercial development.

Also this summer, the Albion Valley Players Inc. has cleaned up and repaired the campus' auditorium to stage a historical production of the Diamondfield Jack story as a fund-raiser for that facility.

Phillips said the group's effort, led by Kay and Verlene Powell, has paid off. The three performances by the Albion theatrical group raised a total of $1,800, which will be used to continue the refurbishing of the auditorium for future community use.

IPC contracts with valley power plants

By The Associated Press

BOISE — Idaho Power Co. has announced the signing of contracts to buy energy from four new cogeneration and small power production projects with a combined capacity of about 19 megawatts, the majority from the Magic Valley.

The four projects contracting to sell electricity to Idaho Power are Dietrich Drap, 4,500 kilowatts; Rock Creek II near Twin Falls, 1,750 kilowatts; Mingie Reservoir, 5,900 kilowatts; and Barber Dam near Boise, 2,000 kilowatts.

Negotiations on the projects were nearly complete when the Idaho Public Utilities Commission issued a June order suspending a requirement that Idaho Power sign new contracts for cogenerated electricity at existing rates. The requirement was lifted until the PUC can study several cogeneration issues.

In other news, Idaho Power Co. has agreed to supply wholesale electricity to the Utah community of Washington City for the next 15 years, when the utility thinks the demand for power in its own service area will be nearer the current surplus supply.

Washington City has been receiving its energy from Utah Power & Light Co. under a contract that allowed it to form a municipal utility and purchase wholesale power from a different supplier.

Idaho Power said it was interested in supplying the city with 22,000 to 23,000 megawatt-hours of electricity annually because its energy supplies are expected to be adequate for its own customers' needs until the late 1990s. Revenue from the sale also can reduce the company's need to seek higher rates from its Idaho and Oregon customers, Idaho Power officials said.

The agreement with Washington City is expected to produce about $565,000 in revenue per year for Idaho Power. That is considerably more than the same amount of electricity would bring on the surplus market, the company said.

Back to the drawing board for power line

By The Associated Press

HAILEY — After five years of trying to win approval for construction, Idaho Power Co. is about back where it started with plans for a 138,000-volt power transmission line through the Wood River Valley.

In April of 1982, the utility filed an application for a permit to construct the "Silver" substation southeast of Pieno and a 138,000-volt transmission line connecting it with another substation at Twin Falls and the Hailey substation.

Battles over the proposed route went to the Idaho Supreme Court, which eventually ruled there had been a conflict of interest in earlier decisions on the route.

Idaho Power proposes a route along U.S. 20, crossing Silver Creek about where the highway does. It runs near the communities of Gannett and Bellevue on the way to Hailey.

Jim Taney, Idaho Power information officer, said the utility has been faced with increasing service demands in the area, and fears its existing transmission line will not continue to carry the load.

The current Idaho Power proposal has drawn fire from local residents concerned about the impact on scenic values along a heavily traveled highway in a popular recreation area. Idaho Power plans to run the transmission line on single poles, 300 feet apart, carrying the power line 70 feet off the ground.

Pieno area rancher Nick Purdy, who as a member of the county's zoning and planning commission was involved in the battles over the route in the first place, has proposed an alternative route, which crosses some of his property. But that would require Idaho Power to run about 1,500 feet of the line underground at the Pieno Airport.

Taney said in general, it's more expensive to run power lines underground than above ground.

At a hearing on the proposal last week, another route was proposed, running along the base of nearby mountains. Taney said Monday he hasn't had a chance to study that proposal.

City council will call for pool design proposals

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council will dive feet first into unknown waters as it prepares to use a new law to construct a new city pool.

At a Monday work session, the council agreed to solicit design/build proposals that it hopes will invite innovative designs and obtain the best pool for the taxpayer dollar.

Traditionally, the city would have hired an architect to design a pool, prepare specifications, and then place the project out to bid among contractors.

Instead, the council has chosen to take advantage of a new law that allows a public entity to provide general specifications and solicit proposals for both design and construction of the pool.

The city will be ready to call for proposals this week, City Manager Tom Courtney said.

The pool will be paid for by money the council has already budgeted, an $80,000 donation from First Federal Savings and other public contributions.

The pool will be built near the Twin Falls High School tennis courts at Locust Street North and Stadium Boulevard.

In its request for design/build proposals, the city maps out its general criteria for what it wants in a pool, deck, picnic area and dressing room.

The city requests, for example, that the pool should be 50-by-60 meters, designed for a 50-year life and geothermal heat, and meet health standards.

No preference is given to pool-construction materials, such as concrete or stainless steel. The city does state that it prefers a stainless-steel gutter system, a three-foot-wide motorized bulkhead to separate the pool for different activities, a 20-foot-wide concrete deck around the pool and a children's wading pool.

The total project cost is not to exceed $1 million.

Bidders should be prepared to provide background on their qualifications. The background requirement was suggested by City Engineer Gary Young.

Courtney said, "I think we need to require, as part of the design

School district hires new superintendent

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

BLISS — The Bliss School District has hired Wendell Anderson, the former principal of Aberdeen High School, as its new superintendent.

Anderson, who will be paid $32,840 a year, replaces Greg Cox. Cox was not offered a second-year contract by the board earlier this year. School Clerk Anita Standal reported at the last board meeting that Cox has accepted a school superintendent job at Lendore in northeastern Idaho.

Anderson attended — that board meeting as part of his new duties, and with the trustees, he reviewed applicants for an open music teaching position.

Anderson was one of about 10 qualified applicants for the superintendent position. In addition to working for the Aberdeen district, he has served five years as superintendent of the Kuna School District.

Mini-court to handle Snake River water right claims

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The judge overseeing the Snake River Basin adjudication says his court has the resources to handle the estimated 180,000 water rights claims.

Judge Daniel C. Hurlbutt Jr. of the 5th District says he plans to install a separate computer system and have a separate staff to handle the filings.

"We'll set up a mini-court system to handle it," says Hurlbutt.

In the meantime, the state will reimburse the county for any extra clerical expense, says Carl Binchell, administrative director of the state courts.

"We would hate to have any slowness in a case this important to the state of Idaho," says Binchell.

Court expenses will be covered by a $80,000 appropriation from the Legislature and if more money is needed, the court will request it, he says.

In all the Legislature has appropriated $1 million to get the process going, says Norm Young of the state Department of Water Resources. The adjudication is expected to take 10 years and cost $27.4 million, says DWR.

Money for the adjudication will come from permit fees, Young says.

Even people who have valid water rights claims have to file under the adjudication which is believed to be the largest in the West. But in the case of canal companies the managers will file for the shareholders.

A hearing to determine the boundaries of the adjudication will begin September 8 before Hurlbutt.

Once it is completed, DWR will serve notice on those who have water rights to file them with the 5th District Court.

Water users have until August 24 to notify the court if they wish to present arguments at the hearing.

No water rights filings will be accepted until Hurlbutt orders the commencement order, according to the court.

The adjudication, which is a determination of all the water rights in the basin stems from the Swan Falls water rights agreement between the state and Idaho Power Co.

Attacks prompt dog program

TWIN FALLS — A number of dog attacks on meter readers and other service personnel has prompted Idaho Power Company to put together a public awareness program concerning dog bite prevention.

As an example of the problem, Central Division safety specialist, Phil Vadembecour, cited an incident several weeks ago, in which a customer's dog attacked a meter reader, inflicting injuries that resulted in $7,000 in medical costs, six days' hospitalization and three weeks' away from work. So far, total cost of the attack is $10,000.

600 fight blaze in western Oregon

A force of some 600 firefighters dug a line Monday around the worst blaze to hit western Oregon in 20 years, while firefighters in four other states mopped up forest and brush fires and began going home.

The blaze near Garfield, Ore., called the Bland Mountain fire had blackened 10,300 acres, burned eight homes and killed two loggers since it began last week. Sunny weather Monday after several days of rain helped fire crews gain better footholds on the steep terrain, said Randall Lau, spokesman for the Oregon Department of Forestry.

Fire crews had dug trails around 95 percent of the burn's perimeter and hoped to finish the job by Monday night, Lau said.

Development on the Snake in heavily-irrigated southern Idaho. Negotiations between the state and IPC took place when there was a deadlock in the Legislature on how to deal with future water uses and pressure from irrigators to process water claims held in limbo by deadlock.

The agreement also limits new agricultural development to 20,000 acres per year or no more than 80,000 acres in a four-year period. Swan Falls has yet to be ratified by Congress but approval is expected, according to Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho.

criteria, that they have the expertise we need." The design/build concept, already used in the private sector, will invite innovation and the most qualified people, said city employee Vince Alberti, who has expertise in construction.

State law dictates that a public entity accept a low-bid from a responsible bidder, although the low bid may not be exactly what the city wants, Bengoechea said.

Young said the design/build concept allows more flexibility on the front end. But someone may have to be hired to evaluate the designer and contractor's proposal.

Blaze

In Idaho, fire bosses pulled out some 200 more firefighters from the now-controlled Minncha Creek fire, leaving only a few crews to complete mop-up work at the 1,900-acre blaze.

Alberti

Alberti said the problem with the concept is "how do we legally select a low bid?"

Mayor

Mayor Doug Vollmer said, "I feel we can get more pool for the money. I'd like to pursue this."

Whistling screaming noise to neighbors' ears

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I live in a beautiful home alongside another beautiful home. The elderly gentleman and his wife who own it work on their yard all year around, and it looks wonderful.

The problem? The man whistles. Oh, my God, how he whistles! From early morning until late at night that insidious sound comes through closed windows, doors and walls. The sound is nerve-racking.

When his stops for a few minutes, we hold our breath and say a silent prayer. But luck is not with us because he starts to whistle again.

We had a cookout for friends on our patio last week and our neighbor started whistling again. By the time the food was served, everybody was snapping at each other. Abby, this walking tea kettle is making our lives miserable.

My husband says there is no way we can stop a person from whistling. Can you help us?

-BJ DuBIELE, WELCHES, ORE.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

who kids played rock music from dawn until dark? Some folks have neighbors whose kids practice the tuba in the daytime and drums at night.

And you're complaining about a neighbor who whistles! Hallelujah and praise the Lord, lady. Send him a case of something to wet his whistle, and count your blessings.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you can settle an argument between my husband and me. He says now that we are married he has the right to know all about everything I have ever done -- every boyfriend I ever had, everything we did, every place we went, etc.

He says a wife has no right to privacy as far as her husband is concerned. He is driving me crazy with his pestering to tell him

"everything." I say that what I did before we got married is none of his business. What are your thoughts on the subject?

-- PESTERED

DEAR PESTERED: Same as yours, and it's not a case of one woman supporting another woman. A man is entitled to the same right as you -- prison records and children born out of wedlock excepted.

DEAR ABBY: An article in a recent issue of Readers Digest lays practically all the blame for impotency in America on the young. This is nothing new. The older generation has always criticized the younger generation. I would like to defend today's youth:

I have witnessed several instances where an older person showed no consideration for a younger person. For example: An older gentleman pushed ahead of me to pay at a gas station. When I informed him that I was also waiting in line, he said, "I just have to give the cashier my $20." "And I just have to give the cashier my $10," I replied.

"Then GIVE it to him!" he said curtly.

Abby, I'm 24, but many people mistake me for a teen-ager because I look like one. Consequently, I am treated like a kid and know firsthand that most adults are very rude to kids. They either think that kids have no rights, or they lump them together as "troublemakers."

The problem of rudeness in this country is not the fault of the young people; it's the fault of the older generation who are responsible for teaching courtesy and setting a good example for the younger generation to follow.

-- SETTING MY OWN EXAMPLE

DEAR SETTING: Hear, hear! (To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Spiffy up doctors, study says

By The Los Angeles Times

say it turns out that poorly dressed doctors may put off their patients enough that their slovenliness interferes with their medical effectiveness.

Too many doctors look like slobs and could do with massive doses of dressing-up, a new study concludes, arguing that, for the sake of maintaining the confidence of their patients, physicians should deck out a little more -- but not too much.

This may not be a research finding with strong Nobel Prize credentials, but it has been deemed important enough to be the lead article in a major medical journal, the Archives of Internal Medicine, this month.

Bakker's make-over is the talk of the town

By Bettijane Levine
Los Angeles Times

Tammy Faye Bakker has had the last lash.

Never mind the jokes she doubtless has heard about herself ("If they scraped off all her make-up, they'd find Judge Crater"). Never mind the song lyric that has her "baptized in Maybelline." Never mind that Time magazine likened her to Miss Piggy, and Newsweek called her hair a mop.

Despite the dozens of alurs on her appearance, Tammy Faye's amazing face is a golden media mine. A bigger draw than Fawn Hall, Donna Rice and Jessica Hahn combined if the media splash on her visit to a beauty salon last week was any marker.

Not one of these younger, slimmer, scandal-gladd women could have made up-front news from such a visit. But when Tammy Faye announced her cosmetic makeover, she managed to make the pages of most papers in the country.

What's more, all this hullaballo and hallelujah was accomplished with barely the bat of a glaucous lash. In fact, Bakker's new look is strikingly similar to her old one, a point that befuddled many viewers as they watched the conversion coverage on TV.

And Tammy Faye, it turns out, did not even have to pay the make-over artists for their trouble and time.

"We knew the publicity we would likely get out of doing Tammy Faye's hair and face," said cosmetic designer Coryen Cordova, of San Francisco's toney 77 Maiden Lane salon, "so we offered to stay after closing hours and asked her to be our guest."

The evening must have been a blast.

"Did you ever have a sleeper when you were a kid, the kind where everyone brings out their make-up and sets their hair and talks about nothing but primping and preening and things like that?" "Well, that's what this evening with Jim and Tammy Faye was like," Cordova said. "No politics, no problems. We sent out for Chinese food and from 7 p.m. 'til midnight we had the best time."

Bakker, who accompanied his wife, had his hair trimmed. Tammy Faye had hers shopped and tinted bamboo-brown with blonde highlights, after which a make-up base, three shades of blush and three shades of eye shadow were applied. "We tried to get her away from all those frosted colors," Cordova confided.

But what about those aving-fringed eyes?

"She wants to look glamorous, she adores make-up, and I was very sensitive to her trademark look -- especially her eyes," Cordova said.

"She's a woman with eyelashes. That's who she is and who she wants to be. She guesses them on, one by one to her own natural lashes. She wears them day and night until they fall off. I have to respect that, about her."

Tammy Faye didn't want her husband to see her until she was all done, the cosmetics expert added. "But he kept knocking at the door, as if he couldn't wait." When Her Radiance emerged, Bakker was so delighted that he blessed her with a chaste kiss on the cheek.

A fortuitous photographer must have been lurking among the shadows. The kiss which Cordova so poignantly described was immortalized in the press the next day.

Imagine this: The singing evangelist whose lavish shopping sprees have been likened to those of Imelda Marcos, and whose 50-foot clothes closet was lit by a cut-crystal chandelier, told Cordova that until last week she had always done her own hair and makeup and had never even been in a beauty shop before.

And that, Tammy fans, must be the unvarnished truth.

Floods that killed 19 recede, but many left stranded in Alps

SONDRIO, Italy (AP) — Flood waters receded and the sun came out Monday across the Italian Alps, but dozens of villages remained cut off and thousands of people stranded after floods and mudslides damaged roads and bridges. Officials said 19 people died in four days of rain that turned the Adda and Brembo mountain streams into raging torrents and sent mud cascading down wooded mountainsides. Eight people were missing and 50 were hospitalized. Heavy rain in Switzerland and Austria also caused flooding. Hundreds of homes were evacuated in Switzerland, and police said three people died in a car accident on a rain-slick road. Thousands of troops and civilian rescue workers, aided by dogs trained for avalanche rescues, waded through jakes of mud to reach isolated villages and search for survivors. Two rescue workers on a mission to bring out a heart attack victim were injured when their helicopter hit electricity lines and crashed as it was preparing to land north of Bergamo. Damage to the area, a center for summer and winter tourists and a leading producer of fine wines, cheese and smoked meat, was estimated at $800 million. The covered the ground floors of many farmhouses. Hardest hit was the Valtellina Valley near the Swiss border, where a mudslide slammed into a resort hotel and three-story condominium complex in the village of Tartano on Saturday, killing 12 people.

Albertson's sets expansion for golden years

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Two years away from the its 50th anniversary, Albertson's Inc. is at the threshold of its biggest expansion ever...

"As long as investors perceive this company is going to be a very stable grower, those purchasers can expect to do better than other types of investments..."

meeting. Warren McCain, Albertson's chairman and chief executive officer, said the company intends to spend $1.3 billion — most of it with its own money — during the period to finance the expansion...

stock ... but we feel comfortable with it. I'm not out selling any of mine, anyway."

a good earnings position all the time (and) the stock is of a value where it just can't be very attractive for anybody to come in and offer the kind of premium it would take to take over," he said.

replace or rebuild most of its Oregon outlets. During the period, Albertson's may hire as many as 125 new employees to beef up its corporate staff of 500. McCain said the headquarters at ParkCenter will be enlarged.

The move, outlined during the company's annual meeting in May, has drawn praise from many analysts, who say Boise-based Albertson's is one of the darlings of the food and drug business. They said many others have watched Albertson's stock price soar some 40 percent in the past year. The message is buy.

"We anticipate that Albertson's may not only benefit from the confusion in these firms, but could actually become an aggressor."

That cheers analysts who say Albertson's has had 17 years of gains in sales and income. McCain says it is unrivaled in the low-margin grocery business. He said one share of stock purchased for $12 in 1974, when he became president, would be worth more than $220 today, considering a pair of 2-for-1 stock splits.

"We like it," says James Steele, resident vice president of the firm's Lynch, Pierce, Fennier & Smith Inc. in Idaho. He estimates the company will report earnings per share of $3.40 to $3.55 in 1987, up from $3 in 1986.

Founded on the corner of 16th and State streets in Boise in 1929, Albertson's now operates more than 400 stores in 17 Southern and Western states.

When you evaluate your hand, there is more to it than rigidly counting points. As South, would you have passed two no-trump or bid game?

Playing an opening no-trump range of 16-18 HCP, South rightfully considers a pass to North's invitational raise. However, since South's major-suit honors are buttressed by 10-spots, South pushes to game.

West's fourth-best lead rides into South's K-Q-10, demonstrating the value of the spade 10. Without it, the game would have little chance. Nevertheless, South must be careful. If he takes the club finesse immediately, he will suffer defeat. Best will be in clear spades while West still holds the heart ace. South must attack hearts before taking a club finesse, and his heart 10 plays an important role. After West's heart ace has been dislodged, the game is safe and South receives a reward for promoting the evaluation of his minimum opening.

The topic of hand evaluation, as well as other areas of bridge not usually found in textbooks, is covered on a new 60-minute VHS video titled "Mastering the Mind Game" by Audrey Grant. It is available for $21.45 postpaid from "Tapes, Box 12393, Dallas TX 75225.

Expelled BYU player badly hurt in barroom fight

By MARTIN GRIFFITH
The Associated Press

RENO, Nev. — Former Brigham Young football player Trevor Molini was seriously injured after brawling with security guards who ejected him from a Reno tavern.

Police said Molini was injured after getting in a fight with security guards at the Premier Club. They said the fight occurred after the game on Monday night at the bar around 1:30 a.m. Sunday.

Molini, 22, of Sparks, Nev., was listed in serious condition at Washoe Medical Center with head injuries. He was placed in the hospital's intensive care unit after undergoing surgery.

A police news release failed to mention the reason for his ejection from the bar, but Steve Wilson, Premier Club general manager, said he was because Molini and some friends allegedly got in a fight with other club patrons.

Wilson said Molini was injured when he tried to come back in the club after his ejection. His friends tried to prevent him from doing so, but he broke away from them and got in a scuffle with club security near the door, he said.

"It was a real fast occurring thing," Wilson said. "It happened when he tried to come back through and he was unruly with the door-man."

Police found Molini in the parking lot outside the club. They said no arrests have been made and the case is under investigation. Molini was expelled from BYU in April after pleading guilty for the second time this year to prescription drug charges in Provo.

In May, he was sentenced to 10 days in jail and a $500 fine after pleading guilty to a felony charge of obtaining a prescription drug by fraud.

Fourth District Judge George E. Balli also placed Molini on a year's probation, and deferred giving the maximum penalty for the offense based on Molini's performance.

In a separate case earlier this year, Molini pleaded guilty to three reduced counts of attempting to obtain a controlled substance. Perdon, by misrepresentation.

McGuire delayed sentencing for a year, saying the court would monitor his progress.

Molini is a former all-state player at Reed High School in Sparks and an honorable mention All-America tight end as a sophomore at BYU. In April, he said he planned to pursue his collegiate football career elsewhere, possibly at the University of Nevada-Reno.

Molini underwent an inpatient drug rehabilitation program for addiction to the narcotic painkiller Percodan after his first arrest last year.

An attorney for former All-American wide receiver Cris Carter, banned from playing his senior season at Ohio State University, says he will ask the National Football League to allow Carter a spot in the league's supplemental draft.

The NFL, backed by the National Collegiate Athletic Association, does not allow the draft of players with college eligibility remaining unless they have graduated. It is the only sport with such rules.

Carter was declared ineligible by Ohio State last week, after admitting he signed a contract and accepted money from agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom. Carter would be a senior this fall. The All-America wide receiver from Middletown, Ohio, has set most of the receiving records at Ohio State.

Carter has a contract with Walters and Bloom dated to begin Jan. 2.

In the year of the rabbit ball, going to the plate is becoming dangerous

By IRV MOSS
The Denver Post

It's the most demanding confrontation of individual athletic abilities in professional sports.

Pitchee against hitter. Rock-hard baseballs launched to feet away and arriving at speeds near 90 miles per hour. Sometimes faster.

Decisions have to be made—in a split second. Is it a strike? Is it a ball? In the interest of good health, is it best to duck? Vern Rapp, former manager of the St. Louis Cardinals and Cincinnati Reds, grades the test.

"I believe it's the most difficult thing in sports," said Rapp.

"The concentration is demanding and definite. The confrontation this year in the major leagues has been a classic.

Hitters have sprayed home runs like firemen fighting a three-alarm fire. Mark McGwire, a rookie with the Oakland Athletics, had 33 by the All-Star break. He is near the pace to break Roger Maris' record of 61 hit in 1961.

Pitchees have become surly. Batters have become hit. Ales from Eric Show of the San Diego Padres struck Andre Dawson of the Chicago Cubs in the face. Left-hander Danny Jackson of the Kansas City Royals sent the very first pitch of a game behind the head of Brett Butler of the Cleveland Indians. Jackson's next pitch was at Butler's head. The confrontation has started brawls. Hitters have rushed the mound after tight pitches, the ensuing skirmish giving baseball the appearance of a tag-team wrestling match.

Pitchee Tippy Martinez believes that the home runs and the light pitches could be related. Martinez, who is sitting out this season because of shoulder surgery after a long career with the New York Yankees and Baltimore Orioles, calls it frustration.

"It's frustrating for a pitcher to see all the home runs," said Martinez.

"The home runs might have something to do with all the pro-

Tony Conigliaro seemed destined for baseball's Hall of Fame.

He was the youngest player ever to reach the career total of 100 home runs. He was building the reputation of a player who could perform at high levels in the clutch. He was the toast of Beantown as the leading member of the Boston Red Sox in the mid-1960s.

Mike Andrews, one of Conigliaro's Red Sox teammates, recognized the talent.

"I don't think there was any question that he was headed to the Hall of Fame," said Andrews.

Pitchee Jim Lonborg, another of Conigliaro's teammates at Boston, added a qualification.

"Barring any damaging injuries, he had the potential to be in the Hall of Fame," said Lonborg. "He was a fantastic player in the clutch."

Unfortunately, the qualification Lonborg raised became the obstacle Conigliaro could not overcome.

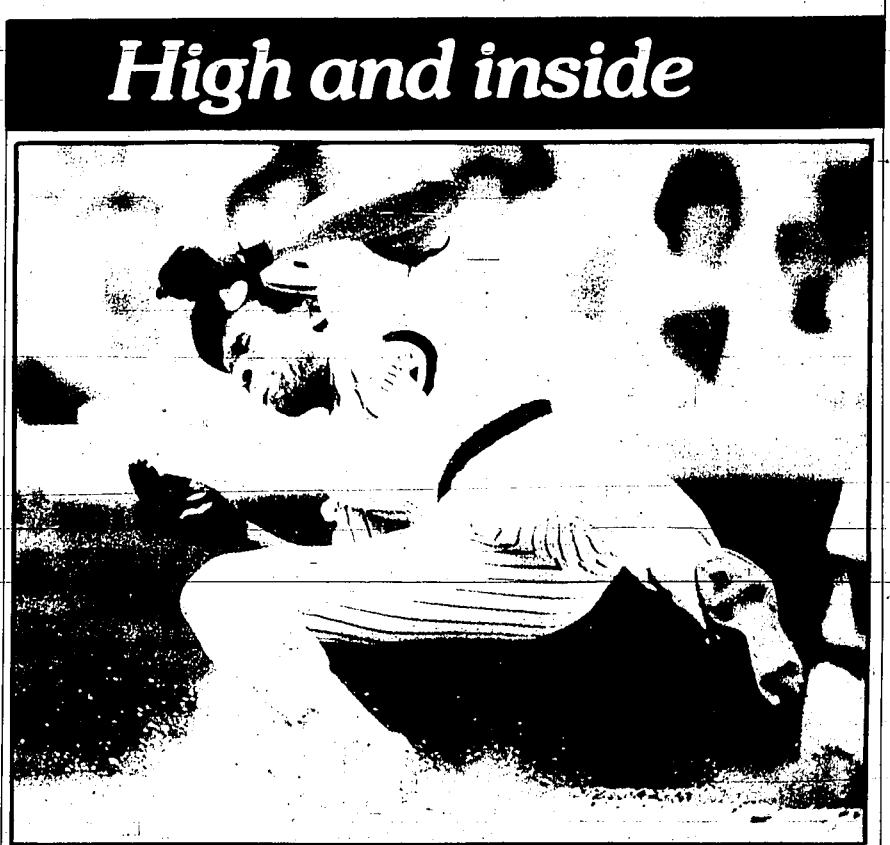

In August 1967, he entered the batter's box to face Jack Hamilton, a relief pitcher for the California Angels. Conigliaro never was the same again.

Learning to hit batters is a subtle — and silent — part of pitcher's education

By THERESA SMITH
The Denver Post

Denver Zephyrs pitcher Ricky Wright will never forget the only beanball he ever threw.

"I was scared to death," said Wright. "I prayed that he'd be all right."

It was a case where I'd been throwing him breaking balls all night," said Wright of the Triple-A game a few years ago. "In the eighth he hit a curveball foul, so I told myself I've got to do something different. I came in with a fastball up on his hands. As he was diving to go for what he thought was another breaking ball, he froze, he couldn't get out of the way."

"In no way was it intentional. I had him 0-2. No way was I going to hit him."

The player was taken to the hospital and was out of action two weeks because he was bothered by headaches.

"I called and talked to some guys to find out how he was doing," said Wright. "It affected me. I tried to keep everything away on the next hit."

The next day the other team retaliated by hitting a player on Wright's team in the ribs.

"But that was the end of it," said Wright. "I think most of their players knew me and knew the type of guy I am."

Wright said that he first heard about the brushback pitch at the age of 13.

"He does that again, you knock him down, that's the kind of things you hear even in the teen league," said Wright.

When Wright was 18, a manager told him to hit a batter.

"And I've been told two or three times since then," he said. "Did he hit him? 'I did what I was told to do,' said Wright. "You try to hit him in the leg or mid-section; you don't want to throw anywhere near his shoulders."

Wright said that there are several situations that dictate hitting a player, but that hitting his guts isn't one of them.

"If a guy has hit three homers in a row, somebody's got to get him off the dish," said Wright. "That's not bad baseball to throw inside after back-to-back home runs. You can't be intimidated by the hitter and the hitter shouldn't be intimidated by you. But nobody goes for the head when you're trying to drill somebody, that's ridiculous."

"You have to pitch inside," said Zephyrs' pitcher Len Barker, an eight-year major-league veteran.

"You have to eventually come in, it's part of the game. As far as a shot to a guy's face, that's not part of the game. You don't want to hit him where it could kill him."

Russets' forfeits improve Wood River's standing to third

By The Times-News

KETCHUM Idaho Falls forfeited a Southern Region "B" American Legion doubleheader to Wood River Monday, giving the Wolverines the No. 3 seed in this week's regional tournament in Shoshone.

The twinnill, rained out here Friday night, was rescheduled for Monday. But Idaho Falls couldn't find enough players to play the games Monday, according to Wood River Coach Wayne Roth.

That means Wood River ends the regular season with a conference 5-3 record — 9-9 overall — compared to 5-4 and 15-13 for the Russets. Third-seeded Wood-River is tentatively scheduled to meet sixth-seeded Shoshone in the first round of the tournament Thursday, while fourth-seeded Idaho Falls will play sixth-seeded Jerome.

Twin Falls picks up a pair of victories from Rebels by forfeit

By The Times-News

POCATELLO — Twin Falls picked up two games in the win column in the Southern Region "A" American Legion standings Monday when Pocatello forfeited two games to the Cowboys.

The forfeits came after Pocatello canceled two regularly scheduled games in Pocatello last Thursday in order to play Woods wound up the regular-season American League schedule with a Southern Region "B" doubleheader split here Sunday.

The Indians won the opener, which counts in the conference standings, 10-2, but the Elks came up to take the nightcap 5-0.

Derrick Brittainman was the hitting star for Buhl in the first game, going Cross, Utah. The teams were unable to find a mutually convenient date to reschedule the games.

Pocatello Coach Randy Jensen said Monday that the Rebels would forfeit the games. He said he preferred to count the two games Pocatello will play against Twin Falls in Twin Falls Wednesday night as four games, but that Twin Falls Coach Mike Federico

3-for-5 at the plate with two doubles, as Buhl stretched a 4-1 fourth-inning lead to 10-2 with three-run innings in the fifth and sixth.

Jay Ostler paced the Elks at the plate with two hits in four trips.

In the nightcap, Jerome backed the four-hit, shutout pitching of right-hander Mike Welch with three runs in the first inning and one each would not agree to that arrangement.

The two additional victories improve Twin Falls' season record to 19-18 and its league mark to 6-5, one-half game behind Pocatello, which is now 22-16 for the season.

Twin Falls could move into second place in the conference standings by winning both games here Wednesday.

In the second and third, Mike Anderson had the big blow in the first inning for Jerome, hitting a bases-loaded double to drive in two runs.

The split left Buhl at 7-3 in conference and 14-17 overall; the Indians will get a first-round bye in this week's regional tournament.

Jerome wound up 1-9 (11-15 overall) and at the bottom of the regular-

Women's teams to go straight to state

By ELYNN McROBERTS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Thord's been an exodus from Magic Valley women's softball. It hasn't been one of Biblical proportions, but large enough to eliminate District 5 tournament competition in women's B league for the first time in recent memory.

"Coed has really hurt the women's program all over the state," said Chad Browning, Twin Falls Parks & Recreation director and District 5 Commissioner of Idaho's branch of the American Softball Association.

Last year there were 32 total co-ed teams; there are 40 this season. "And it just keeps growing every year," Browning said, pointing out that co-ed ball is more appealing for some because it's less time-consuming, with games played only once a week.

In contrast to the rise in co-ed softball, the number of women's teams has dropped in most leagues throughout the valley.

The bottom line for tournament time is that only five women's teams, signed up to play in the District 5 "B" tourney. An average of 22 women's teams have played in the district tournament in previous years.

Rather than slugging it out for state bids, each of the five teams was expressed interest, but Browning received permission from ASA officials in Boise to send five this year to the tourney, which is set for Aug. 15-16.

Unlike women's B, however, post-season play in the other two women's leagues will be much the same this year.

Coors of Magic Valley, the perennial powerhouse in A league, will return to the state A tournament, set for Twin Falls, Aug. 14-15, along with K&AZ/Fairhaven of Twin Falls and Formula Sports of the Ketchum Women's League. (There has never been a women's A district tournament because of the small number of teams that play at that level.)

The women's C-district tournament is slated for Jerome Aug. 7-9, with 15 teams vying for a spot in the state tournament in Sandpoint.

That same weekend, 31 teams will compete in the state tournament for the division will be in Boise the following weekend.

niture of Burley will advance to post-season play, going straight to the state tournament in Caldwell.

Twin Falls will play host at the same time to the men's B district tourney, which will feature 16 teams battling it out to advance to state in Lewiston.

Going into the men's B district league, observers say four teams stand out: Farmers National Bank and Snake River Pool & Spa, both from the Twin Falls League; Longview Dairy from Jerome; and Mallory Trucking/Forschler Plumbing of Rupert.

Other contenders mentioned are the Renegades, Reser's, 7-Eleven and Circle 4.

Pete Dias, Longview's big hitter, said his squad is "down from last year as far as personnel goes, but we're kind of on an upswing" after recently clinching the Jerome Upper B Division championship.

Dias said he is convinced Longview "can play with the best teams" in the Twin Falls leagues; he cited his team's victory in the Tom Turner tournament over Snake River Pool & Spa earlier this summer.

"But whether we can make it through an entire weekend of competition...is questionable," he added.

Last year at district, Longview took second behind Farmers National Bank, losing 10-9 in the final game. Advancing to state in Twin Falls, Longview went 2-2 and was eliminated in the consolation bracket by Snake River, who also finished 2-2.

"I think we should be up in the top 2," said Snake River manager and player Bruce Bird, whose team is currently tied with Farmers for the

Twin Falls A league title. (Both squads are sanctioned "B" for tournament play.)

Snake River could have momentum going into district, after winning the KNS Invitational in Salmon last weekend. They also beat Longview earlier in the season in Jerome's Rusty Palmer memorial tourney.

Another team that could have momentum is Mallory's, which won the four-team Twin Falls Masters softball tournament last weekend.

The defending district B champions, Farmers National Bank, were less than stunning at state last year, but team manager and first baseman Mike Hamilton said, "We'd like to get to state and perform better than we did."

What's more, Hamilton said, "one of the reasons for our success is that we've developed some consistency" as a team.

That consistency paid off two weekends ago when the team won the Cafe Ole tournament in Boise, for its sole tourney victory of the season.

In the newest division of ASA softball in the Magic Valley, Mallory Trucking/Forschler Plumbing of Rupert captured the crown in the first ever men's Masters Tournament in Twin Falls.

The Masters, for players 35-and-older, is an ASA-sanctioned division that is only in its second year in Idaho. "We're just trying to get it off the ground here," said Pat Labrum of the Twin Falls Parks & Recreation Dept.

Finishing behind Mallory's in second, third and fourth were Astlett's Fossils, Wholesale Carpet and Buhl City Blues, respectively.

The tournament outfield MVP was Lawrence Davits of Mallory's, while the infield MVP was Roger Anderson, also of Mallory's. Buhl City Blues' Joe Leach was the leading hitter, with his .615 effort.

Burger Stop/The Beacon grabbed the title last weekend in the third annual Twin Falls Co-ed Invitational, beating United First Federal for the championship. Uncle Bob's, a Boise team, took third.

Krista Kravitz and Jeff Clydsie, both of United First, were tournament MVPs. Leading hitter honors were shared by Uncle Bob's Roger Gardel and Burger Stop's Audra Uric.

In the tournament's consolation bracket, Wholesale Carpet finished first, followed by Universal Frozen Foods of West Virginian. The consolation MVPs were Brenda Fisher of Wholesale Carpet and Larry Lux of Universal Frozen Foods. Leading hitters were Sue Ramshire and Steve Gentry Jr., both of Wholesale Carpet.

RUPERT — Buhl's Coors of Magic Valley softball team powered to first place in the Mini-Cassia Men's C Regional Qualifier last weekend and thereby earned a spot in the regional tournament in Billings, Mont., Aug. 29-30.

In the first regional qualifier hosted by the Mini-Cassia Men's Softball Association, Coors of Magic Valley beat Coors of Rupert 5-4 and 13-11 in the championship series.

B&B Market placed third, followed

At the Ballpark

by fourth-place Burgers Etc. In addition to winning a trophy, Coors of Magic Valley also won $100 in traveling money.

On a side note, league officials report that the highest field ever in the men's C district tournament, 31 teams, will come to Rupert Aug. 7-9.

JEROME — The Jerome Men's City League tournament is scheduled for July 27-Aug. 5, according to league officials.

"All he needs is a good swift kick in the pants."

How many times have we thought this about a loved one who isn't performing up to our expectations?

We see their depression as a bad attitude. Misread their self-centeredness as a personality problem. Believe their inability to cope with daily activities is laziness.

But sometimes inappropriate behavior may be a warning sign of something more serious: A mental illness.

Mental illness is a medical illness—not a personal weakness. And learning to recognize its warning signs can be the first step to healing the sickness.

U.S. wins more U-Games gold than Soviets

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — The United States won six track finals and swept past the Soviet Union, topping the final gold medal count at the World University Games which ended Sunday.

The sensational comeback of the Americans, who trailed the Soviet Union through two weeks of competition, gave them a 26-25 margin after Sunday's track finals which closed the Games.

It was an incredible swing from the Games in Kobe, Japan, two years ago, when the Soviet-Union outclassed the Americans 44-22 in gold.

Given Torrence of Decatur, Ga., took her third gold medal of the Games, anchoring the American women sprinters to victory in the 400-meter relay in 42.90 seconds.

The United States swept all four relays in the final day, and they won the men's 400 meters hurdles and high jump.

The Soviet Union, which moved into the final day leading with 23 golds to 20, had to settle for two victories, in the women's marathon and javelin.

Romania was third in the final gold medal count with 21, Italy had 12 and China nine.

But the real swing in the track finals came in the men's high jump. Unheralded Jim Lott of Austin, Texas, was competing against Soviet former world record holder Igor Paklin and Rudolf Povarnitsyn.

Despite the torrid temperature of about 91 degrees at Dinamo Stadium, Lott cleared 7 feet, 6 1/2 inches, just one-quarter of an inch under his personal best.

Povarnitsyn could do no better than 7-3 1/2 for fourth place, trailed by another former world record holder, Zhi Jianhua of China with the same height, and Paklin with a poor ninth at 7-1 1/2.

The other American victories were by Dave Patrick, 48.76 seconds in the men's 400-meter hurdles; the women's 1,600-meter relay in an easy 3 minutes, 27.16 seconds; the men's 400-meters—with a margin-of-30 meters in 38.66; and the men's 1,600 meters with an even greater margin in 3:01.78.

The loss in the women's sprint relay and the high jump was decisive in the swing of gold medals.

Only seven out of 18 starters completed the women's marathon in a slow time because of the heat.

a five-run Wood River explosion that gave the Wolverines a 7-2 lead. Wood River had to hold off a five-run outburst by Shoshone in the top of the seventh, however.

Mike Bradshaw led the nine-hit Wood River attack with three hits in four at-bats, while Brad Detillo and Mike Ferries were both 2-for-4. Nick Gonzales and Don Trappen were both 2-for-4 for Shoshone.

In the nightcap, the Wolverines pushed across one run in the first, two in the second and five in the third to put the game away. Ferries was 3-for-4 in that game and 5-for-8 for the day.

Shoshone wound up the regular season at 3-7 (6-22 overall) and is tentatively scheduled to face Wood River in the first round of the regional tournament in Shoshone Thursday.

JEROME — Shoshone relegated Jerome to the basement of the Southern Region "B" American Legion standings here Saturday by splitting a doubleheader with the Elks.

The Indians scored 12 runs in the sixth lining of the opener, which counts in the league standings, to erase an 8-0 Jerome lead. The Indians then pushed across the game-winning run — which was unearned — in the seventh to escape and he liked to take command of the strike zone.

with a 13-12 victory. The Elks came back to win the nightcap 8-0 on Lance Cole's four-hit shutout.

In the first game, Jerome right-hander Darren Osborn was cruising along with a nine-strikeout shutout until the roof fell in the sixth. Don Trappen's two-run double was the big blow, but the Elks committed four errors in that inning — including three in a row.

Jerome came back to score four runs in the bottom of the sixth to tie the game, but the Indians scored the game-winner in the seventh on an error.

Jerome's Mike Welch was the big hitter in that game, going 2-for-4 at the plate, both doubles.

Cole dominated the Indians in the nightcap, striking out six batters. Jerome struck for three runs in the first and five in the second, paced by Jay Ostler's 2-for-3 hitting.

Our New Rate Cap Offer Is For Those Who Aren't Sure Where Interest Rates Are Headed.

Some say they'll go back up. Some say they're going down. Either way, you'll benefit from First Security's Home Equity Line rate cap offer.

Our variable rate loan will follow the prime rate if it falls. It stays at 3% over prime, quite a competitive rate. Currently, that works out to an 11.25% Annual Percentage Rate (as of June 4, 1987).

And should interest rates snap back up, you're protected. Our rate cap is 13.25% Annual Percentage Rate. That's the absolute highest our variable interest rate could go, and it's good through January 1, 1991. All you have to do is apply before September 11, 1987.

TAX DEDUCTIBLE THIS YEAR. — AND NEXT, ETC.

You might elect to use your credit line to pay medical bills. Or to finance a college education. Or purchase a new camper. Or make home improvements. Or even to pay off another home equity loan that doesn't have a rate cap. In any case, chances are excellent that you'll still be able to deduct all the interest. (For specific details, see your tax advisor).

NO ANNUAL FEE. NO IMMEDIATE CLOSING COSTS.

During our Home Equity Line sale, we've eliminated loan origination fees. And we've waived closing fees, such as appraisal and filing fees, until you actually take out a loan on your credit line.

CALL NOW FOR AN APPLICATION.

For your Home Equity Line application, call 1-800-532-1133. Or stop by our nearest First Security Bank office. And stop worrying about the ups, and downs, of interest rates.

*Exclusive of deferred closing costs. After January 1, 1991, the rate will again vary.
