Evergreen faces loss of crucial federal funds inspection.

Still, Evergreen officials have not filed with state or federal agencies their plans to improve nursing care at the facility.

But license revocation and federal decertification will occur unless specific correction plans are filed and followed.

Meanwhile, Schoonover and H&W's Magic Valley regional director, Willard Abbott, said the nursing home apparently is changing administrators.

Schoonover added she heard it may be changing its license, although no state paperwork to that effect has been filed. Chinchurreta could not be reached for comment at work or home Thursday and Friday. Assistant administrator Julie Johnson declined comment until Monday.

Tom Walner, associate regional administrator for HCFA in Seattle, said HCFA could accept or deny the allegation. But "on the other hand, we have done that two times now and they have not been in compliance in either event," Walner said referring to the two critical H&W inspections.

Huzdel Manor, was decertified for six days at the end of August 1986 for inadequate nursing care.

This year, as last, a critical inspection has gone unheeded, so decertification proceedings have begun.

Abbott, the area H&W director, said he has no authority to move residents from one nursing home to another. But he tries to facilitate the transition by counseling the residents and preparing them.

The problem, Abbott said, is that he cannot begin planning until the doors are practically closed. At the same time, the residents need orderly preparation over a longer period.

Sale of jail bonds is postponed until lawsuit resolved

By BART JANSEN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A bond sale to build a new county jail has been postponed indefinitely, pending resolution of a lawsuit claiming the bond election procedures were flawed.

The jail will be built at a cost of $11 million, said Commissioner Jim Fraley.

Mid-July had been the tentative time for the bond sale. But Kent threw a monkey-wrench into the plans by filing a suit claiming he was harmed by the election.

Already a month behind, delays in building a new jail have cost the county $12,000 and $16,000 a month to board county inmates in other jails.

The commissioners decided, after a long session, to postpone the bond sale until it can proceed unimpeded by the suit.

Kent alleges that a May 12 election approving a $3.8 million bond sale damaged him because County Clerk Dick Pence did not register voters correctly. County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter was also named in the suit for not prosecuting Pence on a previous election-law violation.

Fifth District Judge Daniel Meehl dismissed claims July 13, telling Kent that a tort action must first be filed in the circuit court.

But oral arguments are scheduled again Monday on a motion by Kent concerning his appeal of the dismissal.

Kent has said he will appeal his case to the Idaho Supreme Court if necessary. He has 42 days from July 15 to file an appeal to the dismissal.

In light of the suit, Chapman and Cutler told commissioners during a conference call Thursday that an unresolved lawsuit could force the county to pay unnecessary premium rates to attract bond buyers.

Commissioner Judy Felton said in a prepared statement, "Although we expect Baxter and Pence to prevail, even a frivolous suit may cast a question on the marketing of the bonds."

Prosecutor Baxter had said that after reading the pleadings, she "thought it was a frivolous suit."

Tanker hits mine, limps home to port

By JOHN RICE The Associated Press

KUWAIT — A Kuwaiti super-tanker under U.S. Navy escort and flying the American flag hit a mine off a fortified Iranian island Friday morning and limped home with a hole in its port side.

Two Kuwaiti patrol boats took charge of the 401,382-ton Bridgeton and a smaller refueling vessel at 3:45 p.m. about 12 miles from the nearest Kuwaiti island, guiding them to their berths.

More on gulf — A3

None of the 26 people on the Bridgeton was injured, but the tanker took on water after striking the mine 120 miles from home as it passed Farsiyah island, which Iranian Revolutionary Guards use as a speedboat base for attacks on shipping.

Senior Pentagon officials speaking on condition of anonymity said there was little doubt the mine had been planted by Iran.

But until that can be proved, one Pentagon source said, "it will be hard to justify a retaliatory strike against Iran. There's certainly nothing like that working now."

One official disclosed that efforts were under way to enlist the aid of Kuwait and Saudi Arabia in launching a minesweeping operation in the area where the Bridgeton was hit.

After a brief delay, the convoy See MINE on Page A2

Commerce receives positive SSC letters

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho Department of Commerce has received three letters that officials believe will assure the state's place on the list of the final five contenders for the coveted superconducting super collider project.

"With the letters, I'm convinced we'll be on the short list," said Rick Tremblay, coordinator for the state's effort to land the $4.4 billion particle accelerator.

The three letters, released Thursday, were dated July 13 and 14. Two were from the U.S. Department of Energy; the third was from the Commerce Department's attorney.

On July 12, a letter from the Department of Energy gave the state final authority to locate the SSC at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory west of Idaho Falls, should Idaho be selected.

"A second July 13 letter, from Commerce Department attorney B. Joseph Welch, offered the opinion that a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling will force states that want to use private land to host the SSC to compensate property owners if the owners' ability to use their property is hampered at all by the project."

In another court ruling that property owners must be compensated if government bodies prevent or restrict them from developing or using their land.

The July 13 letter from the DOE confirmed an earlier decision by Congress prohibiting the department from considering financial or other incentives in the selection of a site for the SSC.

"The three letters, singularly or together, could tip the scales to our favor," Tremblay said.

He put Idaho's chances of winning a place on the "short list," the five finalists expected to be named in December, at 95 percent.

Thirty-one states want the SSC, he said.

The INEL letter was crucial because for two years the state only assumed it could use that land without the $3 billion science-city infrastructure it offers.

"I was going on faith. I don't see how they could have refused," Tremblay said.

The Commerce Department attorney's opinion confirmed Tremblay's feeling that the Supreme Court ruling boosted Idaho's chances considerably.

Tremblay said that decision will hurt Texas, California and Illinois the most. All three are considered among the leaders in the race for the supercollider.

The second DOE letter, which disallowed incentives, allows Idaho to compete equally with the more well-funded states, he said.

Reagan selects Texas judge Sessions FBI chief

By PETE YOST The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal Judge William S. Sessions, a former U.S. attorney in Texas described by President Reagan as "a fair-minded tough prosecutor," was nominated Friday to become the fourth director of the FBI.

Sessions, a Republican, was selected to head the nation's premier law enforcement agency after a two-month search that became a political embarrassment for the Reagan administration when several candidates declined the $82,500-a-year job.

Sessions, chief U.S. District Court judge in the western district of Texas, is known for his hard-line law-and-order approach to criminal justice and would replace William H. Webster, who became CIA director May 19.

At a news conference at the Justice Department attended by Sessions and Attorney General Edwin Meese III, a reporter suggested that Sessions' reputation was that of a "west Texas tough guy."

"I love the accusation, I think it's delightful," Sessions replied. "I don't wear a gunbelt and I don't have any cowboy boots to my name," the judge added. "If I'm a west Texas tough guy it's simply because we've dealt with difficult problems out there. The drugs and immigration problems are severe."

Whether you are a judge or whether you are involved in prosecution or defense, there are very difficult times. Sessions, who worked in the Justice Department's criminal division from 1969 to 1971 handling obscenity and other prosecutions, said that "the obscenity and pornography business is vicious stuff. I do not look on it as victimless crime and I never have." He qualified his comments by emphasizing that First Amendment rights must be protected.

Justice Sessions has established himself as a fair-minded tough prosecutor and one of the finest federal judges on the bench today," Reagan said. See SESSIONS on Page A2

Shultz: Quitting was not good idea

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George Shultz adamantly dismissed a suggestion Friday that he and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger could have stopped the Iran weapons plan "dead in its tracks" by threatening to resign if President Reagan pursued it further.

"I was going on faith. I don't see how they could have refused," Tremblay said.

"Things are going very much our way" and that in the world, "the basic idea of freedom... is on a roll."

The hearings will resume on Tuesday with Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

Defending his decision to stick with Reagan rather than resign in protest over the sale of arms to Iran, Shultz said, "I'm there to help the president, not make his life more difficult."

However, one Republican on the committee, Rep. Michael DeWine of Ohio, said Shultz should have done more than just stay in his job. DeWine said he agreed with the Tower commission's conclusion that Shultz, after making his opposition to the Iran plan clear, distanced himself from events.

"In my opinion, you walked off the field when the score was against you," DeWine said. "You took yourself out of the game."

Shultz replied in evident anger: "I'll just say that's one man's opinion and I don't share it."

He again accused former National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter, an earlier witness before the committees, of consistently deceiving him.

"From time to time I asked him what's going on," Shultz said. "What I got was not candid." He said he has See SHULTZ on Page A2

Incident refuels gulf policy debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's chief spokesman on Friday cited the Kuwaiti supertanker mining incident as "a good example" of why the United States must escort vessels in the tense Persian Gulf, but the Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd said it dramatizes an "ill-conceived plan."

Byrd's four-spoken Marlin Fitzwater said administration officials had not concluded what nation planted the mine that struck the 1,200-foot Bridgeton, one of 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers being placed under the U.S. flag.

At a news briefing, Fitzwater said, "We're still investigating and analyzing the situation. We have not determined any source for the planting of the mine and, at this time, retaliation is not a matter of consideration."

Three bodies found in L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police called to an apartment building Friday night there fired upon and later discovered three bodies and a critically wounded 3-year-old inside, officials said.

Officer Cortes Curtiss of the Wilshire District station confirmed that the bodies were found, but said authorities had no details.

Officers, investigating a call about an argument, arrived at the apartment about 3:30 p.m. "Officers heard four or five rounds fired and backed off," said Sgt. Tom Johnson.

A SWAT team searched the building and the incident ended about 7 p.m., Curtiss said.

Storms claim 2 in lake state

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Gov. Rudy Perpich declared a state of emergency across Minnesota on Friday as residents struggled to clean up after storms that spawned tornadoes and record rain, killing two people and damaging hundreds of homes.

"It's impossible at this point to determine just which counties are involved," said state Public Safety Commissioner Paul Teschida. "That's why he's making this a statewide declaration."

A tornado spinning 160 mph winds raged through suburban Maple Grove on Thursday night, causing $5 million in damage to up to 300 houses.

The rain shattered a 95-year-old record, leaving 10 inches at Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport on Thursday night and Friday morning.

Sessions

Reagan called Sessions a man of "integrity and honor; dedicated to the vigorous enforcement of the criminal laws of our country and to the even-handed administration of justice."

Reagan refused to say how many people had rejected his approaches about taking the job and said he didn't think the search — which included reviewing more than 60 candidates — had lasted very long.

Sessions was named a U.S. attorney by President Richard M. Nixon in 1971.

He has expressed intense interest in the job of FBI director for the past four months, saying in a March 17 interview with Texas newspapers that becoming director of the FBI would be "the greatest challenge."

vacant too long," said Biden, who said he will discuss a committee hearing schedule for the nomination next week.

Sessions was given strong support from both of his homestate senators, Lloyd Bentsen, a Democrat, and Phil Gramm, a Republican.

"Judge Sessions is a law-and-order jurist in the best sense of the term," said Lamar Smith, R-Texas.

Gramm said Sessions is "the right man at the right time."

Sessions, 57, flew to Washington on Thursday night from San Antonio, Texas, and met with Attorney General Edwin Meese III Friday morning, followed by a meeting with Reagan at the White House.

Meese, who as attorney general conducted the search for a new FBI director, has been preoccupied with legal problems of his own in two states and has expressed interest in a candidate willing to run the FBI, which has 9,100 special agents and an annual budget of $1.2 billion.

Sessions was named a judge in 1974 by President Gerald R. Ford. Sessions gained national attention in 1982-83 by presiding over two trials stemming from the killing of U.S. District Court Judge John H. Wood Jr.

after Webster was nominated to head the CIA. Subsequently, U.S. District Judge D. Lowell Jensen of San Francisco, the former deputy attorney general under Meese, turned down the position because he did not want to return to Washington.

Former Pennsylvania governor and federal justice Department criminal division chief Richard Thornburgh let it be known that he did not want the job because it would remove him from politics for 10 years.

An informed source outside the administration said a man once thought to be the leading candidate for the job, U.S. District Judge Ralph G. Thompson, Oklahoma City, turned down the post because he feared a Democratic president could force him out of the job in little more than a year.

Also on Meese's list of possible choices were former Marine Corps Commandant P.K. Kotel, who was turned out because of the Marine spy scandal, and 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Peter Fay of Miami.

U.S. Circuit Judge William Wilkins was added to the list at the urging of Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., but he turned down the post because of a Justice Department plan to reintroduce the death penalty.

The other directors of the FBI prior to Webster were J. Edgar Hoover and Clarence Kelly-Lytle. Patrick Gray and William French Smith were acting FBI directors never confirmed by the Senate.

Prior to Hoover's taking over what was then the Bureau of Investigation in 1921, there had been four previous directors, the successor agency of the modern-day FBI.

Shultz

"I had no idea of the misrepresentations that characterized this whole thing," he said.

At one point, Shultz said that during the battle over whether to keep selling arms to Iran, he became aware that then-CIA Director William Casey had been signing a finding authorizing the sale of arms to Iran two days before that meeting?

Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., who asked Shultz about the summer 1986 incident in which Casey had suppressed the report because it would have been at odds with the Iran arms sale policy approved by the president at Casey's urging.

"After pressure from the State Department, the CIA apparently finally produced a water-tight denial of the report," Fascell said, adding that his House Foreign Affairs Committee has never seen either the original terrorism report or the rewritten version.

"It looks like there was some intelligence that was cooked, said Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H. "If that's the case, it's a disgrace that's coming out here, how in the world can you tell what kind of briefings the president ever got?"

Shultz reacted negatively to suggestions by Sen. George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, that Reagan himself was among those who were deceiving the secretary of state.

Mitchell asked about three "findings" — presidential authorizations for covert actions — that the secretary of state was not told about.

"The first of them was signed by the president on Dec. 5, 1985," said Mitchell. "You met with the president on Dec. 7 with other officials."

Shultz said firmly, "If the thrust of your questions is that the president was part of an effort to see that I didn't know what was going on, I don't believe that... I have a relationship with the president such that I don't think he is out to deceive me."

Shiites plan to assist Iranian

Hezbollah to seek 'suicide guerrillas'

By RIMA SALAMEH
The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The militant Shiite Muslim group Hezbollah will recruit "suicide guerrillas" to back Iran against U.S. naval operations in the Persian Gulf, a spokesman told thousands of demonstrators Friday.

An estimated 5,000 protesters shouted "Death to America" and "Death to Kuwait" as they wound through the dusty alleys of the Shiite slums to converge at the Iranian Embassy in south Beirut's Bir Hassan district.

The protest against U.S. intervention in the gulf was organized by Hezbollah, or Party of God, a militant Shiite faction that professes allegiance to Iranian ruler Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The three-hour demonstration took place after a Kuwaiti supertanker flying the Stars and Stripes hit a mine in the gulf while under U.S. Navy escort Friday.

Hezbollah spokesman Sheikh Mohammed al-Amiri addressed the crowd, blasting Kuwait's "reflagging" of its oil tankers. The reflagging of the tanker, the U.S. Navy spokesman in the gulf, where Iran and Iraq have been at war since September 1980.

Amiri said Hezbollah will recruit the suicide guerrillas to support Iran against "the escalating naval buildup by the Great Satan in the gulf," a term used by Iran when referring to the United States.

Hezbollah is an umbrella organization for underground extremist factions believed to be holding many of the 26 foreigners missing or kidnapped in Lebanon.

Recruiting centers for the suicide guerrillas will soon be set up in the slums, south Lebanon and east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, Amiri said. He did not elaborate on how it has recruited thousands of Iranian volunteers for suicide attacks against American ships.

Amiri's declaration drew prolonged applause from the marchers, who included several hundred women clad in black chadors that covered them from head to toe except for small slits for the eyes.

Some chanted "We Are Khomeini-Guided Human Destroyers," as they burned effigies of President Reagan, Kuwaiti ruler Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, French President Francois Mitterrand and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. They also tore up U.S., French, British, Kuwaiti and Israeli flags.

The march was led by about 15 turbaned Hezbollah sheiks brandishing automatic rifles.

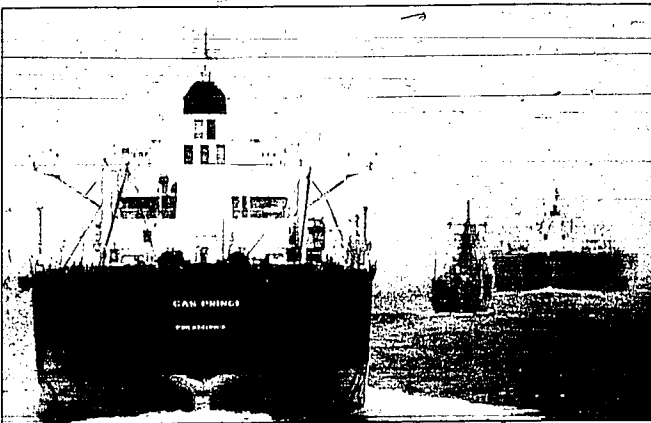

The protesters also chanted slogans denouncing the recent U.N. Security Council resolution that called for a cease-fire in the Iran-Iraq war.

"This is not a resolution for peace," Amiri said. "It's a declaration of war against Islam that ensured a cover for the U.S. navy intervention in the gulf, which is tantamount to invasion."

Amiri vowed that Lebanon will be transformed into a new warfront in support of Iran.

"We will not be seeking to kidnap an American but we shall abduct the United States," Amiri said. "We will not kidnap a Frenchman, but will force France to its knees."

He called on Moslems throughout the world to rally behind Khomeini and "declare a universal holy war against the United States."

ABOARD THE USS KIDD IN THE PERSIAN GULF — When Lt. Richard Vogel was relaxing Thursday night aboard the giant supertanker Bridgeton, he was asked by crew members to say how many minesweepers the United States has in the war-torn Persian Gulf.

"I was going to say none, but then I thought a minute and I said, 'Eleven, but they haven't all been reflagged yet,'" the 26-year-old Navy officer answered.

But he and the Bridgeton's crew laughed. But the remark was stinging president.

Hours later, Vogel was on the bridge of the supertanker when it hit a mine as the ship and another reflagged Kuwaiti tanker, the Gas Prince, were being escorted by two U.S. Navy warships.

The Bridgeton ended up performing a minesweeping role, because the other four ships in the convoy fell in behind it for the trip to Kuwait.

Frank Seitz, the American captain of the Bridgeton, quickly offered to use his ship as a cover for the other ships after his vessel struck the mine 120 miles southeast of Kuwait. "He said everyone else should pull in behind him," Vogel recalled.

"That is just what happened as the convoy made it the rest of the way to Kuwait without further incident."

"Well, it's a good story to tell my grandkids," he smiled. "I was on the first ship to be reflagged and the first U.S. ship to be hit by a mine. So I guess it means luck doesn't like me."

Vogel has been aboard the Kidd for 21 months. After serving as communentation officer, his current assignment is as auxiliaries officer, where he's responsible for a variety of tasks including fresh water, air conditioning, small boats, sewage — and public affairs.

But sea duty wasn't his first choice. It was naval aviation. After graduating from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1962, he entered flight training at Beville, Texas, but washed out because of poor ratings in aircraft carrier landings.

"My landings weren't good enough at night, so I didn't want to even try night landings."

A native of Apopka, Fla., Vogel now lives in Virginia Beach, Va., near the Kidd's home port of Norfolk. He and his wife, Sharon, have an 18-month-old daughter, Rebecca.

The Bridgeton, a Kuwaiti-owned tanker formerly known as the Al Rekkah, was reflagged Tuesday with the U.S. flag. It and another reflagged Kuwaiti tanker, the Gas Prince, were the first of 11 Kuwaiti ships to be switched to the Stars and Stripes.

President Reagan promised to have the United States protect the ships as they traversed the gulf. Vogel went to the Bridgeton on Tuesday, shortly before it lifted anchor from its spot in the Gulf of Oman near Khor Fakkan for the trip up the gulf.

"I had two jobs on the ship," he explained. "The first was to answer questions from the master and the crew about our operations and also to be a U.S. naval presence. That is because if there is the U.S. Navy on board, no other navies can board the ship."

"That latter role was planned as a defense against any attempt by Iran to board the ship. Iran has challenged some ships traversing the gulf, claiming the right to board and search for contraband which could be used against Iran in the Iran-Iraq war."

Instead of allowing the reflagged tankers to be searched, the Navy has taken the position that it will assure Iran that none of the vessels carries contraband. Neither of the ships was challenged by Iran during the three-day trip up the gulf.

Vogel said the mine struck at about 6:50 a.m. Friday when he and Seitz were on the bridge.

"All of a sudden, the whole ship shuddered and rocked for about 15 to 20 seconds," he recalled. "It actually lifted us off our feet three or four feet."

"The master and I went out to the bridge wing," he said. "We weren't sure whether it was a mine we'd hit or perhaps whether the ship had struck bottom. But I didn't think it had struck bottom because the water was about 30 meters below the keel."

The Bridgeton has an 11.4-meter (37.6-foot) draft when empty, as it was Friday.

"The master and I were on the walkie-talkies, calling that we'd been hit," he said. "I looked behind and I saw no sign of smoke trails, so I figured we must have hit a mine."

Asked whether he was afraid, Vogel said, "Yes, of course I was afraid. But really, it was more surprise than anything else, I guess."

Vogel knows what's coming now. "I expect to hear a lot of jokes about mines."

And he expects his Navy colleagues to ask if he plans to concentrate on minesweeping from now on. "But the answer is no. I want to go into anti-submarine warfare. I like that," he said.

Newsman records effect of mine on Kuwaiti tanker

ABOARD THE USS KIDD IN THE PERSIAN GULF — The mercury had hit 100 and the morning was calm and clear at shortly before 6:55 a.m. Friday, as two Kuwaiti oil tankers, with their escort of three U.S. Navy warships, steamed north toward Kuwait.

Then: BOOM.

Seconds later, Navy Lt. Richard Vogel rattled from the super-tanker Bridgeton: "We've been hit! We've been hit!"

The Bridgeton, at the head of the five-ship convoy, had struck an underwater mine. The dawn explosion was so forceful that crew members standing on the bridge, about 1,000 feet from the point where the mine hit, were almost knocked off their feet, Vogel reported.

"All of a sudden, the whole ship shuddered and rocked for about 15 to 20 seconds," Vogel recalled later. "It actually lifted us off our feet three or four feet."

Vogel, the lone U.S. naval officer aboard the Bridgeton, said he didn't hear the boom that was clearly audible aboard the Kidd. "What we heard was the rattling of stuff on the bridge."

None of the 31 people aboard the ship, including the wives of two crewmen, was injured.

A few minutes after the strike, the Bridgeton radioed its Navy escorts. "Have the helicopters take a low pass over our stern — look at the propeller and what he can see above the waterline."

The convoy's helicopters were dispatched immediately to the scene.

"No damage to your rudder or screw," the SH-60 helicopter from the USS Cromwell reported.

"We are listing," the Bridgeton reported moments later. "There is no danger to the ship — plenty of reserve buoyancy here."

Shortly thereafter, the Bridgeton received an update: "The hit is port midships — 100 to 200 feet aft of the bow."

The actual spot where the mine had struck was 70 feet aft of the bow, Vogel said later.

The strike marked the first significant incident of the initial Navy escort of Kuwaiti tankers placed under the American flag. It occurred about 80 miles south of Kuwaiti territorial waters, where the Navy escort is to turn over its protection role to the Kuwaiti navy.

But the initial assessment of damage, the convoy continued its northward journey.

The 401,000-ton Bridgeton remained in the lead, although it had slowed down a speed of 16 knots to 10. The convoy closed ranks and fell into single-file line, with only about two miles separating the Bridgeton from the last ship, the destroyer Kidd.

The supertanker hit the mine about 18 miles west of Parsi Island, Navy officials had said that this was one of the narrowest segments of the north-south route used by deep-draft Persian Gulf shipping — it is only about two miles wide — and a likely place for trouble because the island has served in the past as a staging area for Iranian speed boat attacks on tankers.

So, as the convoy steamed through the area, the Navy crews were at "General Quarters," their highest state of alert.

The explosion was still a shocker, turning what had been a relatively calm three-day journey from the Gulf of Oman to Kuwait into something more chaotic.

Extra lookouts were posted aboard the Kidd's bow to look for mines. At least nine sailors were on the bow, some armed with M-14 rifles to fire at any suspicious objects in the water. They reported seeing all sorts of things, all of which were either safely passed or turned out to be buoys or other harmless objects.

Repair crews stood by below decks at the damage control stations, while other crew members stood waiting to provide medical care, if necessary.

The 336 sailors aboard the ship donned combat helmets. And on the upper decks, seamen put on flak jackets and inflatable life vests around their middle.

The Kidd's captain, Cmdr. Daniel J. Murphy Jr., noted later that the mine hit by the Bridgeton was extremely powerful.

"If we had hit that, it would have done enormous damage to the Kidd," he said.

As the convoy plowed north, Murphy explained, the Bridgeton was heading the convoy because "a mine, even one that big, did relatively little damage to a ship as big as the Bridgeton."

"But we're providing her with plenty of cover from attacks," Murphy said, explaining that the convoy was being protected by the long-range weapons aboard the three warships.

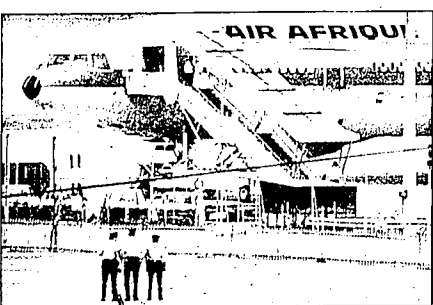

On the cruiser USS Fox, which had fallen in line behind the Bridgeton, Cmdr. William Mathis told a news magazine reporter that the Bridgeton "can take hits easier than we can. The Bridgeton," he added, "will be acting as a deep-draft minesweeper."

A few hours later, the convoy spotted a Soviet warship, which was identified as a Natsya-class minesweeper escorting a pair of Soviet merchant ships heading south. The Soviet ships were about 100 miles to the west of the Kidd convoy.

The Kidd tried to call the Soviet warship, but the warship was unable to return the call. Instead, the Soviet captain aboard one of the merchant ships answered the Kidd's call.

Murphy told the Soviet captain, "I want to report to you the location of a known mine." With that, he read the longitude and latitude of the site where the Bridgeton was hit.

The Soviet captain called: "American ship, American warship. Please say again if that confirmed."

Steward subdues jet hijacker; passengers engineer an escape

GENEVA (AP) — A Lebanese gunman who hijacked an Air Afrique jet Friday and killed a passenger before being subdued was a member of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah and wanted to win the release of a comrade accused in the 1985 hijacking of a TWA plane, authorities said.

Passengers on the Air Afrique DC-10 decided "the time had come to act" and escaped from jet when they heard over the public address system that the Shiite Muslim hijacker wanted the plane to fly to Beirut, said Michel Gregoire, one of those aboard.

As they fled the plane, which had landed in Geneva for refueling, an unidentified flight attendant overpowered the gunman but in the process was shot in the stomach and was taken to Geneva Cantonal Hospital, where he was in serious condition.

About 30 of the passengers suffered injuries, included bone fractures, as they slid or jumped from the plane, hospital officials said.

The hijacker, who also carried unspecified explosives, took French passenger Xavier Beaulieu into the first-class section and shot him fatally in the head, said the pilot, Capt. Edouard Artizzu. The gunman, described by police as "unstable," had selected Beaulieu after demanding the "passports of all the passengers, Artizzu said.

Most of the passengers were French and African, and at least two were Americans, said Geneva Police Chief Bernard Ziegler.

The siege at Geneva's Cointrin Airport lasted about four hours.

Swiss authorities tentatively identified the hijacker as Hussein Ali Mohammed Hariri. In Tyre, Lebanon, however, relatives identified him as Hussein Ali Mahmoud Hariri and said he was a member of the Hezbollah, a pro-Iranian group with links to Shiite Muslim factions holding Western hostages in Lebanon. Geneva Prosecutor Bernard Corboz told reporters the hijacker would face trial in Switzerland on murder and hostage-taking charges. He was taken to the maximum-security wing of Champ-Dollon prison outside Geneva.

Plant's tax break raises steam in Minidoka

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The Minidoka County assessor is hoping to get over a tax break given to a garbage-powered, steam-producing plant in his county.

Assessor Greg Saylor has filed a protest with the Idaho Board of Tax Appeals because the Minidoka County Board of Commissioners reduced by $630,000 his assessment of a steam plant operated by Cassia County on land in Minidoka County.

"They had no right to do it, because Cassia County does not own it," Saylor said. "I took this oath of office to do my job, and there are a lot of laws I don't like but I do the best job possible."

"I am very tempted to have a new conference just to bust on this office," Saylor said.

Under state law, property owned by government entities is exempt from property taxes. But the Heyburn steam plant was built under an arrangement by which Cassia County was given title until 1992, Saylor said. It should be taxed at full value until that time, he said.

A 1983 ruling by the Idaho Board of Tax Appeals said the steam plant was subject to property taxes.

The plant was developed under a lease-purchase agreement that calls for Cassia County to pay rent for the use of the plant. A corporation, Citizens Development Inc., owns the plant until 1992, when Cassia County will gain title to it.

Minidoka County Clerk Duane Smith said Minidoka and Cassia county commissioners agreed to reduce the assessment on the plant by the amount of equity Cassia County would have gained if it were buying the plant under a mortgage arrangement.

In other words, if Cassia County took out a loan for the plant, it would gain equity in annual increments. Minidoka County has agreed to reduce the assessment by those yearly increments, even though no official equity is gained by Cassia County under the lease-purchase arrangement.

"Their name won't appear on it until it is paid for 100 percent, so it is kind of an agreement between two people," Smith said.

To me, it's just a common sense approach to be fair to them," said Minidoka County Commissioner Lyle Barton. "Citizens Development owns the plant, not Cassia County, but by the same token they (Cassia County commissioners) are operating the plant."

To Saylor, the assessment reduction means a loss of $10,000 in tax revenue for Minidoka County and a tax shift from Cassia County to Minidoka County.

Equity irritating to Saylor is how Citizens Development convinced Minidoka County to ask the state to extend the legal deadline for appeals to the County Board of Equalization, a statutory body comprised of the county commission to hear appeals of county assessments.

"I sent Citizens Development an assessment notice," Saylor said. "They did not return it."

"Nobody has followed the proper channels here," he said.

After the state let Minidoka hear the assessment appeal by Citizens Development on Wednesday, nine days after the statutory deadline for appeal decisions, the commissioners reduced Saylor's $1.19 million assessment to $560,000.

Barton said he wished Saylor had attended the Wednesday meeting rather than filing an appeal with the state Board of Tax Appeals.

Saylor says the assessment reduction is illegal.

"Because of unique financing arrangements, title will not be vested in Cassia County's name until the facility is paid off in 1992; thus the State Board of Tax Appeals ruled that the property is subject to assessment until that time," Saylor wrote in a letter to Gov. Cecil Andrus. "However, commencing in December of 1984 and every year since, the Minidoka County Commissioners have approved substantial market value reductions in the steam plant's assessments, contrary to Idaho Code ... and the 1983 ruling of the state Board of Tax Appeals."

Barton is not so sure the agreement is illegal.

"There is a gray line there," Barton said. "There's nothing that says you can do it, there's nothing that says you cannot do it."

"I guess it would be best to ask an attorney about that."

Cassia County built the garbage-fueled plant in the early 1980s after several false starts on financing for the plant.

The plant burns garbage and produces steam to be used in a potato-processing plant owned by J.R. Simplot.

Although this move by Saylor is designed to get the attention of the Minidoka County Commission, he has been known in the past for controversial schemes to get the attention of taxpayers.

In 1984, he sent out notices to area farmers and businessmen doubling the assessed value of personal property. County Commissioner Norman Siebold said Saylor did that to convince taxpayers to keep Saylor's proposal of changes in the value of their personal property, because farmers and businessmen had "greatly neglected" their responsibility to report changes in personal property values.

About 100 property owners protested that move.

Deputy accepts blame in jury list

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A former deputy clerk in Twin Falls district court says she should take the blame for ending, in violation of state law, the practice of using drivers license lists in her master jury list.

Cleo Robinson, who worked as deputy clerk for nearly 26 years, says that although she accepts the blame for omitting drivers license lists from master jury lists, low staffing levels in the court and tight budgets forced her to neglect drivers license lists.

"Yes, we quit using the two lists because there was not time to cast out duplications, number the thousands of cards, etc.," Robinson says in a letter to be published Sunday on The Times-News editorial page.

"If there is blame, do not blame the judges, their loads are great and I don't work there nor am I running for office."

"Now, if you want to blame someone, as I told The Times-News, I would blame the deputy who is now deceased," Robinson wrote.

Robinson worked for County Clerk Richard Pence for about eight years before resigning in 1985. She ran unsuccessfully on the Democratic ticket against Republican Pence last November for the county clerk position.

After reading the letter, Pence said he agreed with the charges.

"We have had a shortage of money," Pence said. "When you have a shortage of money you do not hire any more people than you have to."

Crash destroys experimental plane

The Associated Press

BURLEY — An experimental plane that gained notoriety because it appeared to have no fuselage, body or tail narrowly missed a bridge and crashed into the Snake River in Cassia County today.

All I know is that I took off and climbed to 100 and then started missing a bridge and soft place I could find was to land in the river," pilot Gilbert Davis of Nampa said. He was uninjured, but the plane was destroyed.

Davis said The Davis Flying Wing narrowly missed a bridge off U.S. Highway 30 when it went down about 6:30 a.m. today. The plane, also known as Starship Alpha, was overweight and underpowered, he said.

He took off from the Burley Municipal Airport and had been scheduled to fly the plane over a parade at St. Anthony. Built in 1985, five pilots had flown the plane on more than 280 flights since it made its maiden voyage in June 1986.

Two months ago, Gilbert aborted another takeoff at the Burley Municipal Airport when it began to rain and he lost power.

In an interview last year, Davis said the aircraft was engineered after the Northrop Flying Wing, created by Jack Northrop, one of the great pioneers in aviation development.

He said last year The Davis Flying Wing was probably the only one of its type in the world that was in active operation.

However, one is displayed at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C., and another at the Wings of Fame in Chino, Calif.

The plane had a 35-foot wing span, but Davis said the wings looked longer because the craft did not appear to have any fuselage, body or tail.

"It looks like something out of Star Wars," he said of the plane before it crashed.

Reserve hearing set for City of Rocks

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee will hold a field hearing here on August 19 to gather public testimony on a bill by Idaho Republican Senators Jim McClure and Steve Symms to create a national reserve for the historic City of Rocks near Oakley.

The hearing will be held at the Burley Best Western Inn from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. McClure, who is the ranking Republican member of the committee, will chair the hearing.

McClure and Symms introduced legislation on June 5 that would establish a 10,320-acre national reserve to protect the City of Rocks. Unlike national parks or monuments, which are administered by the federal government, national reserves are managed cooperatively by the National Park Service, state and local agencies.

The senators, who agree that a national reserve would be the best way to protect the site, are seeking suggestions and comments from concerned residents of the area.

The City of Rocks has been a National Natural Landmark for 12 years, but federal control is not imposed.

A National Park Service study completed in March described a national reserve as one of several management choices for the 14,300-acre area. The reserve could be developed into a facility capable of handling tourists, with a history awareness center, two 50-unit campgrounds, 14 miles of trails and seven interpretive overlooks, the study reported. Cost would be about $1.7 million.

Current problems at the City of Rocks include an unmanageable number of visitors and a lack of specific authority for protection of the site. Designation as a national reserve would protect rock formations and historic pioneer trails in the area.

The law would specifically protect recreational areas from off-road vehicles, the use of firearms, uncontrolled camping and hiking, harmful rock climbing, modern graffiti and subdivision of private property, the two senators said.

There are only three designated national reserves in the country: Ice Age National Scientific Reserve in

Giant fires up for corn harvest

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

BUHL — The Japanese eat the crunchy kernels as a cold salad with Kentucky Fried Chicken. On the West Coast, Green Giant sweet corn is likely to land on the dinner table as a hot side dish.

On both sides of the Pacific, the kernels were cooked and packed in cans where the 1987 harvest opened early this morning.

"We plan to start picking the corn about 2 a.m. ... and we are going to start the plants about 10 and 12," said J.R. McRoberts, manager of the Green Giant Co. plant, late Friday afternoon.

The factory is starting about 10 days earlier than usual due to early planting and ideal growing conditions. By late September or early October, when the "space" finishes, 750 workers in the plant will process enough corn to fill 4.2 million cases — about 100 million, 12-ounce cans.

Production should climb 5 percent from 1986 because of a new, higher yielding variety of crop and bigger plantings, McRoberts said. A new variety of corn developed by Green Giant is likely to raise yields substantially. "It will average well over nine tons (an acre) where our previous varieties generally are short of nine tons," he said.

The company also contracted about 500 more acres of corn from farmers, increasing the total near 11,000 acres.

Green Giant harvesters will begin cutting the 1987 sweet corn in fields near the center mill in Elmore County and work their way east during the next 2½ months. The corn arrives within four or five hours at the plant for processing.

It is cooked before being packed in cans or before being quick-frozen in bags. The factory cans about 60 percent of the corn and freezes the remaining 40 percent. At normal processing speed, the plant packs 100 tons of corn an hour.

Only a small fraction of the corn goes out under the Green Giant label. It is distributed year-round to customers in the West and in Japan, an overseas market.

"We are looking at well over 20 percent of this pack going to Japan," McRoberts said. "There, Kentucky Fried Chicken is the greatest seller as a salad with their chicken," he said.

The sweet corn also puts meals on the table in the Magic Valley. Green Giant employs 750 temporary workers at an average wage of close to $6.50 an hour (including overtime and incentive pay) when the pack is under way. This year, 77 percent

Grants nearing $1 million to boost Magic Valley economy

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The economies of four Magic Valley communities will soon be boosted by block grants totaling almost $1 million.

Gov. Cecil D. Andrus announced Friday in Twin Falls that the cities of Gooding, Twin Falls and Paul, as well as the Buhl Senior Citizens Center, will receive community development block grants.

Twin Falls received the largest grant, which came to $600,000, and is in line for a second grant for its senior citizens center if extra money is available later this year. Gooding received $412,000. Paul was awarded $83,817 and $20,000 went to the Buhl Senior Citizens Center.

The grants are awarded annually by the state of Idaho for city or senior citizens center projects designed for community development.

In Twin Falls a $1.5 million project will be constructed for the west presidents streets using the grant money and $150,000 in matching funds from the city. The project should control flooding during periods of heavy rain.

Storm-sewer mains will be extended and expanded near Eiler Avenue from Monroe Street to Van Buren Street and along Heyburn Avenue from Park Street to Van Buren Street. The project includes reconstruction of 11 street intersections.

In Gooding, the money will be used for the construction of a new water reservoir, booster pump and piping. The project will increase water flow and pressure for all residents in the city. Gooding raised $138,000 in matching funds.

In Paul, several abandoned buildings in the downtown area that present a fire and safety hazard will be demolished. Some curbs, gutters and sidewalks will also be replaced to improve the overall appearance of Paul.

The Buhl Senior Citizens Center will use its grant sure for all residents in the city. Gooding raised $138,000 in matching funds.

In Paul, several abandoned buildings in the downtown area that present a fire and safety hazard will be demolished. Some curbs, gutters and sidewalks will also be replaced to improve the overall appearance of Paul.

The Buhl Senior Citizens Center will use its grant storage capacity, which Heller says is one of the lowest in the state. The city's fire insurance rating is a "six," but Heller says with the new system, engineers estimate the rate will be lowered to at least a "five." That means lower insurance premiums for property owners.

to install an air conditioning and ventilation system for the kitchen. Some curbs, gutters and sidewalks in front of the center will also be replaced.

Only one grant application from the Magic Valley that made the it through to the final selection process did not receive funding. The Twin Falls Senior Center application for $100,000 and was put on standby, said Jan Bickenstaff, program manager for the state Department of Commerce.

If one of the other programs falls through or if extra money is found, the center will be next in line for funding, he said.

The money would be used for a 1,800-square-foot expansion of the dining area and more parking at the center. The dining room capacity is 108, but at times almost 160 people have been served.

If the center does receive the grant, the city would provide $50,000 matching funds and the seniors would donate $20,000.

A number of criteria were considered while reviewing the grant applications. One of the most important was the number of dollars raised in matching funds by the project itself, Andrus said. This

Church boosts attendance with ad campaign

'Rush at East 30th and Euclid. We don't have a hell week'

CLEVELAND (AP) — An advertising blitz by a downtown Methodist church has attracted dozens of new churchgoers, along with a spattering of criticism from people who think Madison Avenue should stay out of the sanctuary.

The Rev. Dr. Kenneth W. Chalker said the campaign has been so successful that First United Methodist is building a second parking lot to accommodate worshippers.

"It's been an exciting thing for everyone," said Chalker, 38, a native of Brookfield, a town named after a church he used to try to boost attendance, as he had at churches in Alliance and Lexington, Ohio.

"When I walked out there the first Sunday, it was really there," Chalker recalled about his first Sunday service. "The Sunday before I left a church where there were people standing. To walk in and not counting my sheep and two children, there were 57 people in a room that seats well over 1,000, that was pretty good."

"But we have" made a significant gain in just a year. For instance, on the same weekend — the July Fourth weekend — we had doubled twice what I experienced a year ago.

Attendance in the first six months this year was nearly double the attendance for the same period last year, from 2,315 to 4,042. The church has registered 67 new members since the beginning of the year.

And the make-up of the congregation is more diversified, Chalker said.

Most of the worshippers used to be senior citizens from the neighborhood. "In terms of families or younger couples or young singles, there just weren't very many," he said.

Chalker said he believes it is important to keep downtown churches alive, in part, to serve the community. First Church has a daily meals program for the elderly on Wednesdays.

"I really believe strongly that the church is the only place where folks of different economic, social and racial background can come together in an atmosphere that is totally — and really should be — positive and hopeful," Chalker said.

The church budgeted $140,000 to hire Robert Carter & Associates to coordinate the public relations and advertising campaign that began last fall. The church has an endowment from a land sale decades ago and Chalker decided to use some of it to help the church grow "rather than simply protect (the church) and die wealthy."

"They wanted people who have been turned off by the church in the past to be able to sit up and take notice," he said. "I didn't want any ad... to be negative, judgemental, condemning or as if, 'Here's the answer and you better come and get it quick.'"

The campaign has included newspaper advertisements, bus billboards, radio and television commercials and direct-mail, all featuring Chalker.

"People identify with a person. Jim told me," he said.

"They don't identify with a building or a denomination."

The witty, off-beat advertisements have included such headlines as, "Look Into Our Master's Program," "Summer-time And Religion is Easy," and, for college newspapers, "Rush At East 30th and Euclid. We Don't Have A Hell Week."

Chalker said the advertisements "get people here once. We've got to have something that is valuable so they keep coming."

Stories about the advertising campaign resulted in a few letters attacking the method as irreverent, he said, but most people have been supportive.

Brenda Brooks of Cleveland is one of those who was attracted to the church by one of the early newspaper ads. She is now a member.

"It was such an open invitation, I felt compelled to go," she said, adding that she finds Chalker's sermons relevant.

Factions draw lines over LDS center

JERUSALEM (AP) — Orthodox Jewish leaders want to post signs reading "No Jews allowed" if they fail to block construction of a Mormon student center on the Mount of Olives, where Christians believe Jesus ascended to heaven.

The leaders fear the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints want to convert Jews at the $15 million facility. But church leaders deny the charge and vow to remain.

"We cannot burn them down, and we will try to draw them to us, but we feel unwelcomed," said Rabbi Yitzhak Koltitz, the head of Jerusalem's religious courts and a leader of Orthodox efforts to block the center. "They will not proselytize in Jerusalem."

Koltitz said in an interview he would do anything in his power to stop Christians from trying to convert Jews. He said access to the center should be restricted.

"The demands of the Orthodox are impossible," said Mormon center director David B. Galbraith. "They are trying to dictate what we do here, and when we do it."

The Mormons have won the support of the Anti-Defamation League, a New York-based Jewish civil rights group.

"The demands that no Jewish person may attend any function at the center without prior permission is an unquestionable infringement on their rights," said David Rosen, the group's director of religious affairs.

"We haven't taken an active role in the struggle, but if things get much worse we will," he said.

Construction of the center, to be called the Jerusalem Center for Near Eastern Studies, began in 1984 after four years of negotiations between the Israeli government and officials from the Mormon-run Brigham Young University in Utah.

The seven-story marble and limestone building is nearly completed, and 150 Mormon students from the United States already are attending classes there.

The visitors center, with a 400-seat auditorium, is the focus of the argument because it will be open to the public starting in September.

The dispute began in 1968 when Orthodox leaders demanded a halt in construction. In response, the government formed a committee of eight Cabinet ministers to study the case.

It recommended the original construction permit be amended to include two conditions — that the Mormons promise not to proselytize and that a committee be created to monitor their activities.

The Israel Land Authority, which had issued the permit, and the Mormons agreed to the conditions.

But a dispute developed over who will control the five-member building panel. Further debate is set for July 27.

Uri Mincder, spokesman for Minister of Religious Affairs Ze'evulun Hammer, the chairman of the Cabinet committee, said the Mormons want a majority on the panel and opponents insist the committee include three Jews and two Mormons.

The problem is not what the committee does, but who's in charge," Mincder said. "Mr. Hammer is not about to let the Mormons be in charge of watching the Mormons."

Mormon leaders contend some members of the Cabinet committee are bargaining in bad faith and have no plans to compromise.

"It has become apparent there are certain elements within that (ministerial) committee who could not approve whatever agreement we would make short of our literal departure from the land," Galbraith said.

Brigham Young University began offering three-month study programs in Israel in 1969, and Galbraith said there had been no allegations that Mormons had tried to convert anyone since then.

Galbraith, who noted the Mormons had a 49-year lease, said the latest controversy would not affect the opening of the visitors center.

He said the site was chosen because it is near the Old City and the Hebrew University and because the Mount of Olives is significant to Christians.

The New Testament says Jesus gathered his disciples on the Mount of Olives and told them "you will be my witnesses in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and to the ends of the earth."

It continues, "After he said this, he was taken up before their very eyes, and a cloud hid him from their sight."

Hate mail cripples PTL's fund-raising efforts

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — PTL directors met in secret Friday afternoon after the ministry's new leader said fund-raising efforts have been crippled by hate mail and crank telephone calls.

Appearing on the "PTL Club" television show before the board meeting, the Rev. Jerry Falwell said PTL needs $1,248,000 by next Friday to avoid laying off workers and to keep the Heritage USA Christian theme park in Fort Mill open.

Documents released earlier in the week showed PTL is $56 million in debt, which the ministry has tried to erase through a telenote and stepped-up fund-raising.

Falwell, who took control of the ministry in March when the Rev. Jim Bakker stepped down amid a sex scandal, suspended the telenote temporarily because of hate letters and 1,800 prank phone calls on Thursday.

He read on the air some of the hate messages received by mail or by phone, including one that said, "Strangle, kill, Mr. Falwell, somewhere, someplace."

"In the name of Jesus, I hope you rot in hell," he quoted another as saying.

Falwell said the majority of the telephone calls and letters, though, were supportive.

On Wednesday, attorneys filed documents in U.S. bankruptcy court showing that Bakker paid himself $13.6 million in loans himself $180,000 during his last year as head of the ministry.

Bakker also paid his wife, Tammy Faye Bakker, $37,000 for her share of PTL's $193,856 between June 1986 and June 1987, according to the 545-page document.

Many of the payments were made in the weeks before and after March 19, when Bakker resigned after it was disclosed that he had a sexual encounter with Jessica Hahn, a former church secretary.

The documents show Taggart received $45,000 of his pay March 28 and $30,000 on April 16, weeks after Bakker resigned.

Dortch was ousted from the PTL in April and Bakker left soon after. Bakker quit. Both Bakker and Dortch were later defrocked by the Assemblies of God.

Harry Argrave, appointed chief operating officer by PTL's new management, was paid $21,828 in salary and bonuses between April 28 and June 12.

Former PTL board member Rex Humbar, a television evangelist, received an honorarium of $69,500 in six payments. Two, totaling $20,000, came March 16; the week Bakker quit. Humbar was appointed to the new PTL board but subsequently broke his ties with PTL.

The documents reveal that the PTL has $55,544 in unpaid loans and advances. Taggart was given a loan of $21,148 and Bakker was loaned $180,000, the records show.

PTL also bought $182,400 in equipment and supplies, including a $791 net computer and a $14,671 Jeep for Bakker's home in Gallatin, Tenn.

Legal fees cost PTL $1.3 million last year; the ministry owes $169,000 in federal taxes, $1 million to South Carolina and $202,000 in other taxes, the documents show.

Stallings lone Idaho congressman to turn down pay raise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Idaho's congressional delegation was unanimous in opposing a $12.10 pay raise approved earlier this year. But now that the raise is showing up in taxpayers' pockets, only Democrat Rep. Richard Stallings is turning down the extra money.

"For me, it's a matter of consistency," Stallings said Thursday. "I think it's hypocritical to get on the floor of the Congress to beat your chest against the pay raise and then, when the furor dies down, take it."

Despite widespread congressional opposition to the raises, fewer than one in five congressmen are turning away the money, according to a survey conducted by a Ralph Nader group and published this week by The Washington Post. In the House, 73 of 435 members are forgoing the raise. In the Senate, 19 of 100 members are going without the cash. Stallings said he would use 90 percent of the money to establish scholarships at the five institutions of higher education in his district. Stallings takes 10 percent of his income to the Mormon Church.

Idaho's other congressmen, Rep. Larry Craig and Sens. Jim McClure and Steve Symms, are keeping their raises. All are Republicans.

Symms used harsh words to explain why he's holding out on the cash, and Craig questioned whether Stallings would get a net gain from the donation because of a tax benefit.

"If I have one member of our delegation who feels he's worth as much as the rest of us, that's up to him," Symms said.

"What he's doing is getting a tax-subsidized charitable contribution and you guys are giving him a lot of free publicity. He's getting great PR at the taxpayers' expense."

"I gave away $17,000 last year to charity and $20,000 the year before," Symms said, adding that he expects to give $20,000 this year.

"It's great politics to demagogue the pay issue, and I'm saying I'm not going to," Symms continued. Symms said he was not being hampered by a demagogue.

Told of Stallings' plan, Symms' press secretary Tom Lowery said, "So he's giving it for scholarships? Well, my, that's admirable."

Responded Stallings, "I appreciate him recognizing the noble cause I'm engaged in."

Craig said Stallings' idea isn't original, pointing out that for 19 months in 1982 and 1983 he returned to the Treasury a pay raise he opposed. "So he's taken my lead. I did it, and it netted nothing."

This time around, Craig said he's working to change the way Congress gives itself raises.

"I'm not bedding my chest about anything," Craig said. "I'm out working on it."

When the raise was guaranteed in February, Craig said, "It is outrageous to consider congressional pay raises when so many Americans are being asked to lighten their own belts."

Craig said he was cosponsor of legislation that would rescind the pay raise and make future raises effective only after elections. Stallings also is a cosponsor.

Craig said he helped persuade the 1987 Idaho Legislature to join other states in ratifying an amendment to the U.S. Constitution that would delay congressional raises until after elections.

Asked why he's not returning the money this time, Craig said he probably could give the raise to charity and reduce his tax liability. He added, "I think that's a reasonable thing to ask Richard."

Stallings' press secretary, Melodie Rydchek, said Stallings had no idea how the donations would affect his taxes. "I mentioned that to him and he said he hadn't given it any thought at all."

McClure was unavailable for comment Thursday, but his press secretary, H.D. Palmer, quoted from a letter McClure has written: "I don't think it's right to defend keeping the raise."

"To donate the amount of the raise would only accomplish one thing," McClure wrote. "It would punish or penalize those who voted against the raise, and in turn, reward those who voted for the raise. Fundamentally, I don't think that is right."

Timber industry, environmentalists to sponsor media junkets in northern Idaho

Back to nature for wilderness debate

MOSCOW (AP) — Both sides involved in the long-running debate over Idaho wilderness areas are taking the debate back to nature next month.

Rather than using news conferences in population centers, spokesmen for Idaho's forest products industry and environmentalists both are organizing media junkets into roadless and logged areas in northern Idaho.

Some travel will be by horseback. Lodging will include one night within Forest Service bunkhouses.

It marks the latest efforts by environmentalists and timber companies to get their messages to the public at a time when the Idaho wilderness debate is heating up again.

Friends of the Mallard Larkins, a regional environmental group seeking wilderness protection for an area near St. Maries, has invited reporters to an Aug. 4-7 pack trip through the wilderness area.

The Idaho Forest Industry Council is planning an Aug. 18-19 media junket through the Panhandle National Forest near Coeur d'Alene.

Both sides say the trips are an effective way to focus the requisite amount of attention on a complicated issue like this, he said.

Carl Mellina, Moscow, spokesman for Friends of the Mallard Larkins, said, "I could talk to you about it, but if you actually go out there and look at it, I think the media will have a different impression and communicate that in a better way to the public."

The state already has 3.8 million acres of forests designated as wilderness. Andrus and McClure have announced they hope to negotiate a bill this fall that will recommend to Congress permanent wilderness classification for some of the land under study, freeing the rest for possible logging and other development.

"We want people to attend," said Joe Hinson, Coeur d'Alene, executive vice president of the Forest Industry Council.

"I guess we feel it's a far more attractive proposition to go out and spend some time and not be hampered by deadlines and phones and those aspects of the business that make it hard to focus the requisite amount of attention on a complicated issue like this," he said.

Carl Mellina, Moscow, spokesman for Friends of the Mallard Larkins, said, "I could talk to you about it, but if you actually go out there and look at it, I think the media will have a different impression and communicate that in a better way to the public."

Critical projects deleted

BOISE (AP) — Nineteen critical road and bridge construction projects will go unrealized in Ada County because of funding problems, an official said.

"It's been an arduous and frustrating task," said Tom MacGregor, director of the Ada County Highway District. "The sad truth is that our roads and bridges are in poor shape."

Fourteen bridges either need to be replaced or rebuilt and 23 roads are in dire need of repair, he said. But budget constraints will allow only six bridges and 11 roads to be improved next fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1.

MacGregor said that although the proposed budget of $16.3 million is $3.2 million, 24-percent increase from last year, much of the extra money comes from federal funds that are earmarked for certain projects, such as the Broadway-Childen Connector.

He said $775,000 is proposed for bridge repair, rather than the $1.84 million needed. The road-improvement proposal stands at $2.8 million, rather than the $3.9 million needed.

A public hearing to discuss the budget, which road commissioners have tentatively approved, is scheduled for Aug. 6.

Task force eyes suspect

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — A Florida man who reportedly has acknowledged shooting two men in Utah and Idaho also is being investigated by a special task force probing the slayings of three women in the region, authorities say.

Salt Lake City Detective Jim Bell, a member of the task force that is investigating the shooting deaths over the last two years, said Thursday that James Holland, 47, is a suspect, "although he is not our primary suspect."

But in a telephone interview reported Friday by the Standard-Examiner newspaper in Ogden, Holland, speaking from his jail cell in Florida, asserted: "I've never hurt a woman or a kid in my life and I never would."

Holland was arrested in Bonifay, Fla., July 10 on armed robbery charges. Police say he has confessed to shooting two men near Snowville and Coalville.

Bonifay Police Chief Joe Roberts said bullets shot from the .38-caliber pistol found in Holland's car were identical to those used in the slayings of three women in the region. It will be conducting ballistics tests.

A .38-caliber handgun was used in the slayings being investigated by the task force.

Investigators have linked the shooting deaths of Carla Maxwell, 29, Ogden, who was killed at a Layton 7-Eleven Store in April 1986; Christine Gallegher, 18, West Valley City; and Lisa Strong, 25, Salt Lake City.

Holland, who was on parole after serving 22 years for murdering an Iowa man 24 years ago, confessed to a string of robberies from California to Tennessee as well as the two murders.

Holland said he felt lost when he was released on parole in 1984.

"I've been trying to get caught for a long time," he said.

Endowment board reports record capital gain

BOISE (AP) — The board that manages Idaho endowment funds says it made a record capital gain in the last year, although income was down slightly from the year before.

The Endowment Fund Investment Board manages $274 million, including $189 million in the Public School Endowment Fund and $85 million in pooled investments for a number of governmental agencies, mainly higher education endowments.

Net realized capital gains for the last fiscal year were $7.2 million, said Board Chairman Robert McElfresh. That's 75 percent higher than the previous record capital gain, $4.1 million last year, he said.

McElfresh said the endowment fund board came very close to hitting its estimate on income, which is very important because the Legislature uses the estimates in setting budgets.

Income from the school endowment fund, which goes into the public school support program, was $162 million. McElfresh said. Last year, income from that source was $166 million but McElfresh said there was a sharp decline in national interest rates.

The board estimated school income at $161 million, he said. The pooled investment fund returned $7.2 million, which matched the estimate. Last year's income was $7.1 million.

Capital gains are added to endowment fund principle. McElfresh said $5.1 million was added to the school endowment fund through capital gains and $2.1 million to the pooled fund.

Parade highlights Pioneer Day

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Thousands of people who came out on downtown sidewalks, some for more than 24 hours, were rewarded today with the best seats in the city for the annual Days of '47 Parade.

The parade along with the Deseret News-KSL marathon and 10,000-meter races highlighted celebrations of Pioneer Day, a state holiday commemorating the July 24, 1847, arrival of Salt Lake Valley Mormon pioneers led by Brigham Young.

Among other activities were the conclusion of Days of '47 Rodeo at the Salt Palace and a sunrise service in the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square.

Eight-time champion Demetrio Caballinas defeated defending champion Alvaro Palacios in a bout for the championship in the marathon, while Paul Cummings of Orem won the 10,000-meter run.

The 489 entrants in the marathon and 1,000 in the 10K competed for $28,000 in cash and prizes.

During the sunrise service, Elder

Theodore Burton recounted personal family history in remembering the Mormon pioneers who settled Utah, saying they helped begin "the miracle of turning an arid desert into its present garden-like condition."

He said his great-grandfather led his family into the Salt Lake Valley in September 1847, spending the first winter in a fort where the city's Pioneer Park now stands.

"They came West freedom, to worship and prove their faith in God," Burton said. "They came because of high ideals, with a desire to help one another to live righteous, worthwhile lives. This has given a special character to this part of the West which tourists and visitors both feel and appreciate even today."

Parade co-chairman Dennis Drake said the theme "Patriots and Pioneers — Builders of a Nation" — also marked the 200th anniversary of the signing of the U.S. Constitution.

More than 60 floats, 18 bands, 30 horse entries and more than 100 clowns were entered. Parade judges awarded the coveted Sweepstakes Award to a float built by the Sandy 20th Ward. Awards also were presented for entries in historical and civic categories.

Emma E. Olsen, Days of '47 first vice president, said that although there were no national rankings of top parades, many people consider the Utah parade right behind Mardi Gras in New Orleans and the Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena, Calif., "at the head of the class in spectacle and entertainment."

In the parade's historical competition, the Butler First Ward won Division I, Sandy's 20th Ward took Division II, and the 4th Ward, also of Sandy, won Division III.

The Big Business category was won by Fidelity Investments, while the Utah Jazz placed first in the Small Business division. In the Civic Government competition, Provo City was first in Division I and Murray City was the winner in Division II.

Insurance claims mount after storm

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah insurance agents flooded with claims in the wake of heavy rains and hail which pelted the region Tuesday are saying the thunderstorms are proving financially catastrophic.

"We are certain that the damage in dollars has reached such a high threshold that it is now being considered a catastrophe," said John Watson, a regional claims adjuster for Allstate Insurance. "We expect to see several thousand claims before this is all over."

Particularly hard-hit were Utah County fruitgrowers, whose orchards were so seriously damaged that agriculture officials are considering asking Gov. Norm Bangert to declare a disaster area to qualify growers for federal relief.

"State Farm Insurance, Farmers Insurance, Mutual of Omaha and others have all reported a large increase in claims being processed due to the storm."

"Right now we project at least 800-1,000 auto claims and the same amount on homeowner claims with the average amount being $800 per claim."

Customs agents at the borders use high-tech sniffers to detect the carbon dioxide of contraband fruit. These electronic marvels won't work with contraband meat, though. From meat they get a reading identical to that of dirty laundry — of which there is a plentiful supply in homecoming luggage.

Louisiana convict put to death despite plea

ANGOLA, La. (AP) — A man convicted of raping and killing a medical student died in the electric chair Friday after the U.S. Supreme Court split 4-4 on his request for a stay and Gov. Edwin Edwards rejected last-minute pleas.

WILLIE WATSON Executed early Friday.

The execution of Willie Watson, set for just after midnight, was delayed about two hours while Edwards considered the case. He refused to halt the execution despite a telephone call from Jesse Jackson and a visit on Watson's behalf from Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., said Watson's lawyer, Ted Stone.

Watson, 30, was the sixth man put to death in Louisiana since early June, and the 85th nationwide in the past decade.

He was convicted of the 1981 rape, robbery and murder of Kate Newman, 25, a Tulane University Medical School student. He admitted during his trial that he killed Ms. Newman after kidnapping her from her apartment in a "Pardon" Board hearing Wednesday. He blamed his actions on an addiction to drugs and a hard life in a housing project. Stone later said Watson had been a victim of child abuse.

Watson gave no final statement, but mumbled, "I love you," to his spiritual adviser, Sister Lee Scardina, who watched though a window as guards strapped Watson in the chair.

Afterward, she cried on the shoulder of Stone, who did not watch the 2 a.m. execution.

Stone called the execution "an outrage," saying the U.S. Supreme Court could soon decide that Louisiana's death penalty is unconstitutional.

The high court split 4-4 Thursday on the question of whether Watson should be spared while the constitutionality of the state's death penalty is debated. Stone noted that the June execution of Leslie Lowfield had been delayed pending the resolution of that question.

Collins triumphant in prenuptial litigation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Joan Collins' prenuptial agreement with estranged husband Peter Holm was valid and the former Swedish pop star deserves no more of the "Dynasty" star's money, a divorce judge ruled Friday.

PETER HOLM The paper was valid

Actress Joan Collins and her lawyer Marvin Mitchelson react to a divorce judge's decision in court Friday.

The prenuptial agreement limited Holm, 40, to 20 percent of Miss Collins' earnings during their 13 months of marriage before the 54-year-old actress filed for an annulment.

"I'm absolutely happy," said a beaming Miss Collins after four often bitter days in court.

She gave her attorney, celebrity lawyer Marvin Mitchelson, a long hug after Superior Court Judge Earl F. Ritley issued his ruling.

Mitchelson, who described Holm as greedy, grasping and scheming, said, "The property has been decided. The divorce annulment is now a matter of course."

Holm's hopes now hinge on a division of property settlement, but Mitchelson said the agreement implied that he had waived community property rights.

Holm received $1.3 million plus $700,000 in support during the marriage.

Ritley will decide on Aug. 18 if there will be a hearing to consider Holm's request for $80,000 a month in temporary spousal support until a property settlement can be worked out.

The strapping Holm is "healthy as a horse" and has no disabilities that would prevent him from getting work, Mitchelson said. "He's not suffering from anything except delusions of grandeur."

The court had been asked to determine the validity of the prenuptial agreement, signed on Oct. 23, 1985, and determine if Holm is entitled to temporary spousal support.

The couple was married Nov. 6, 1985. Miss Collins asked for an annulment in December 1986. Frank Steinschreiber, representing Holm, said he was disappointed but that an appeal was under consideration. "I feel sorry it had to end like this," Miss Collins told reporters in the courtroom. "I'm very happy that justice has been done."

Asked what she would demand in any future long-term relationship, Miss Collins said, "Freedom. Freedom from all entanglements."

"She made a lousy bargain ... but that's the bargain she made and she wanted to stay with it. She relied on it," Mitchelson said in his closing statement.

"This lady had been married three times before and knew what it was like. She just finished paying off her last husband more than $1 million," Mitchelson said. "She was entitled to bargain and not have it happen again."

Miss Collins, who is paid $95,000 an episode for portraying the conniving Alexis Carrington on ABC's "Dynasty," told of constant bickering with Holm over the prenuptial agreement. Without it, she said, she didn't want to marry.

"I've never met a man yet who was able to take care of me," Miss

Collins said at one point. During the proceedings, she sipped mineral water brought especially for her and sniffed on a rose bud.

At first, Miss Collins and Holm avoided eye contact. By the third day, the actress sometimes spun in her chair and glared at Holm 10 feet away.

Each day, the third floor courtroom was jammed with scores of "Dynasty" fans, reporters, off-duty jurors and attorneys enthralled with the comings and goings of the actress and her entourage, which included four bodyguards.

Two weeks ago, Holm had holed up in one of Miss Collins' houses, vowing to shoot rather than be evicted. However, he met a judge's deadline to get out.

He then picketed outside another of her homes, complaining that she was treating him unfairly by refusing to give him a place to live.

Romina Danielson, who swooned on the witness stand Thursday after testifying she had had an affair with Holm, was not in court to testify Friday because she was still ill, Mitchelson said.

The judge threw out all of her testimony.

Mrs. Danielson, 23, had testified that Holm urged her to marry wealthy Axel Danielson, 89, 50 she, and Holm could later share their wealth. She said she married Danielson in February 1985, and has since divorced him.

Describing herself as Holms' "Passion Flower," Mrs. Danielson passed out 10 minutes into her testimony Thursday and was carried out on a stretcher.

"Absolute rubbish!" blurted Holm when Mitchelson outlined his purported relationship with Mrs. Danielson.

CDC: Vets free of extra dioxin

ATLANTA (AP) — A study of Vietnam veterans who served in areas sprayed with the defoliant Agent Orange found that very few have elevated levels of polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons, dioxin in their blood, U.S. government scientists reported Friday.

The National Centers for Disease Control, which is conducting a congressionally mandated test on Vietnam veterans, reported that only one of more than 400 soldiers tested so far has shown a higher-than-normal level of dioxin, one of the ingredients of the defoliant.

The agency also has found little, if any, connection between the veterans' recorded exposures to Agent Orange and their blood-dioxin levels today.

AIDS activists rip commission

NEW YORK (AP) — Leading advocates of AIDS research and homosexual rights criticized President Reagan's new AIDS commission Friday as an ill-informed and politically biased panel that stands little or no chance of success.

The commission is unfortunately discredited even before it begins its work," said Thomas B. Stoddard, director of the Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund in New York. "Whatever they come up with is irrelevant."

Stoddard and the leaders of six other of the nation's most prominent private anti-AIDS groups said in telephone interviews that they were dismayed or at least surprised by what they called the lack of expertise among most panel members.

Some also described the commission, named by Reagan on Thursday, as a predominantly conservative group that is likely to alienate homosexuals, who make up the majority of acquired immune deficiency syndrome patients.

"I think they're thumbing their nose in our face. They're saying, 'OK, you wanted a presidential commission, look at this cast of characters. You'll be sorry you ever asked for a commission,'" said Richard Danner, executive director of Gay Men's Health Crisis, in New York. "And maybe we will."

Lonetree attorneys frustrated

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — An attorney for a Marine sergeant charged with passing U.S. secrets to a Soviet lover accused a military judge Friday of being "programmed" after the judge refused to release classified testimony in the espionage case.

The judge also denied a request for a delay in the case. Navy Capt. Philip F. Roberts, the presiding judge at the court-martial of Capt. Clayton Lonetree, chief defense attorney Michael Stuhlf for making "sweeping requests for tons of information."

"The judge is programmed," chief defense counsel William Kunstler said during a break. "We cannot get a fair trial under these rulings."

Roberts also turned down a defense request for a five-week delay in the court-martial, which would have given the lawyers time to travel to Moscow and Vienna to conduct their own investigations of charges against Lonetree.

Senate passes retirement bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Friday approved a bill designed to protect the health benefits of retired workers whose companies enter bankruptcy proceedings.

By voice vote, the Senate approved the measure offered by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and sent it to the House.

Metzenbaum introduced the legislation in response to a move by the Dallas-based LTV Corp., which suspended medical and life insurance benefits to its retirees last July when it filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code.

The payments were reinstated two weeks later after a bankruptcy court in New York authorized their restoration. Since then, Congress has passed top-gap legislation mandating that the payments continue until Sept. 15.

Carbide will pay fines for violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Union Carbide Corp. agreed Friday to pay a record $405,500 fine for contested health and safety violations, settling a landmark case involving two West Virginia plants including one where it was accused of exposing unprotected workers to a deadly gas.

The nation's fourth largest chemical company denied violating the law. But it said resolving the case and agreeing to pay a reduced fine was cheaper than continuing to fight charges of more than 500 violations filed against it last year by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

OSHA originally fined the company $1,377,300 for 221 violations, including 127 described as "willful" or deliberate disregard of the law, at its chemical plant in Institute, W.Va.

Later, another $90,000 in fines were levied for 315 alleged "willful" violations at another Carbide plant less than 20 miles away at South Charleston, W.Va.

The settlement ends what was a landmark case for OSHA in enforcing the nation's job safety laws.

The Institute fines levied in April 1986 were the first time during the Reagan administration that the agency sought the maximum $10,000 penalty for each individual "willful" violation of the law.

In the interim, OSHA has sought more than $8 million in fines against 15 other major corporations, including proposing one of nearly $2.6 million earlier this week against IBP Inc., the nation's largest meat packer. Most, like IBP and Union Carbide, have contested the citations and fines.

New FAA chief urges vigilance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allan McArtor, incoming chief of the Federal Aviation Administration, said Friday he is confident that air safety has not deteriorated but that both pilots and controllers must become more vigilant.

"There's no doubt in my mind that the system is safe," said McArtor. His remarks came as the FAA is investigating a series of embarrassing pilot mistakes at Delta Air Lines and as the number of errors being committed by air traffic controllers has increased sharply in recent months.

Other witnesses testifying on the aural day of hearings by the Presidential Aviation Safety Commission expressed alarm at what they described as a deterioration of safety and service in the airline industry.

Rival Big Sky coaches target UNR

By BOB BLACK
The Associated Press

Football coaches are known for their relentless optimism before the season's first kickoff, but this year there is more enthusiasm as Big Sky Conference teams attempt to dethrone defending champion Nevada-Reno.

That's because this year's Division I-AA college football championship game will be played at Idaho State's Mindome in Pocatello.

"That gives us an incentive," said Nevada-Reno offensive coordinator and running back coach John Pettas. "It'd be awfully nice to have us there with the home court advantage."

Coaches meeting with reporters in the Big Sky football preview at Sun Valley, Idaho, this weekend, seem unanimous in picking the Wolf Pack as favorite to win the title again. But UNR, 7-0 and 13-1 last year, isn't looking ahead to the playoffs just yet. No team has won back-to-back titles since Boise State won three straight from 1973-75.

"The thing with this league is it would be nice if there were one team you could shoot for," said Montana State Coach Earle Solomonson, one of three new coaches in the conference. "With this league, you have to be ready for everybody."

The fact that no team has repeated in more than a decade has coaches optimistic they can win the title and the automatic berth in the playoffs.

"I hope that's right," said Larry Kentera, Northern Arizona coach. "We're going to have to just wait and see. I see in a few magazines that we're picked to finish second."

The Lumberjacks were leading Nevada-Reno with six minutes left in a game to decide the conference championship last year, but they lost the ball twice inside their 20-yard line in the closing minutes and Nevada-Reno rolled to win.

Kentera said his team, 5-2 and 7-4, isn't dwelling on that defeat.

"This is another year and we've got to be concerned about this year now," said Kentera, who lost 10 players to graduation on last year's defense.

Coaches also said Boise State, 3-4 and 5-6, with rookie Coach Skip Hall, could be a contender along with Idaho, 5-2 and 8-4; Montana, 4-4 and 6-4, and new member Eastern Washington, 6-5 as an independent playing Big Sky teams.

"Until we win a game I'll withhold my comments," said Hall, who told coaches mentioned his team as one of the contenders. "We're excited about the new program. A lot of good things are happening."

Eastern Washington is one team concerning Nevada-Reno.

"It will be tough because our first two conference games are on the road, Eastern Washington and Montana," Pettas said. EWU has lost three straight in Reno.

"NAU will be real good, as well as Boise State and Idaho," Pettas said. "Those three teams are probably the top teams in the conference, but Montana will be much improved."

Coaches aren't ruling out some of the also-rans from last year, such as Weber State, 2-5 and 3-8; Montana State, 2-5 and 3-8; or Idaho State, 1-7 and 2-9.

Three years ago Montana State won the conference championship and the national title after finishing last in the conference the year before.

"Every year in our conference nobody knows," Pettas said. "We don't consider them upsets any more."

Because of Montana State's story, Idaho State Coach Jim Koetter doesn't raise many eyebrows when he says the Bengals will be a contender this year.

"We're going to be the main contender (but) you'd have to pick Reno and Idaho based on the people coming back," Koetter said.

"We have to prove we can make a turnaround from a poor season last year," he said.

Koetter said nearly all the skill positions are returning to his offensive unit, and he bolstered the defense through recruiting.

"We really have to play much much better on defense, and we have to be more consistent on offense," he said.

Koetter also says having the championship game in Pocatello will give his team and other conference teams added incentive.

"No question about it, I think that will be an added advantage," he said. "I think it will add some enthusiasm throughout the season."

Shoshone, Buhl will decide which is to head for state

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

SHOSHONE — Shoshone got to save an ace Friday morning and used it to trump Wood River Friday night, moving within one victory of the Braves' first-ever appearance in the state American Legion "B" baseball tournament.

Robert Arrate, a 16-year-old right-hander who was working with stitches in his pitching hand, stumped the Wolverines long enough for his teammates to build up an insurmountable lead and coast to a 15-9 victory over Wood River in the loser-out consolation semifinal of the Southern Region "B" Legion baseball tourney.

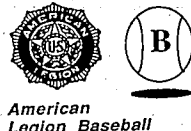

At 11 this morning, the Braves will face Buhl in a 65-inning Pocatello in Friday's championship semifinal game. The winner of that game will qualify along with Pocatello and Idaho Falls for the state tournament in Meridian next week.

The winner of today's 11 o'clock contest will meet the Rebels for the district championship at 2 p.m., but that's purely for seeding purposes at the state tourney, Idaho Falls, which lost to Wood River 5-4 earlier Friday and was eliminated from district in two games, will get to go to state by virtue of having hosted the event in 1986.

The Braves got to save Arrate and right-hander Mike Wallace, who came on in relief to nail down the win Friday night, because Jerome forfeited to Shoshone Friday morning when the Elks couldn't field nine players. That was a break for Shoshone not only Friday night, but this morning as well.

"If we had played Jerome, Arrate would have been the starter," said Shoshone Coach Tony Bozuto. "As it was we could save Arrate for tonight (Friday) and still have a couple of guys we can use tomorrow."

Bozuto said he'll probably start

Wallace, another 16-year-old right-hander, today against Buhl even though Wallace worked seven innings in a 7-3 loss to the Wolverines Thursday and 2 1/2 innings against Wood River Friday. Still in the wings is right-hander Jim Messick, Shoshone's most consistent pitcher during the regular season.

"When we beat Buhl 4-3 in the conference game here (on June 20), Wallace was the winner," said Bozuto. "We'll go with the guy who beat them before."

Buhl Coach Tom Fleming said he'll counter with left-hander Mike Brady, a bullpen ace and spot starter this season for the Indians.

"I've been saving Brady for tomorrow (Saturday) morning because if we win that one, we'll go to state," said Fleming. "Just like everybody else, we're short on pitching right now. I didn't expect (right-hander Brian) Hansen to get roughed up like he did today and we ended up going to (right-hander Jeremy) Schabot a lot earlier than I wanted to."

Hansen only got through one-third of an inning against Pocatello, giving up five runs and four hits before yielding to Schabot with a runner on second. Schabot got out of the inning and finished the game, but by that time the Rebels had all the offense they needed.

Pocatello right-hander Bryan Hicks, who has been injured for most of the season and unable to throw, pitched himself into trouble in the first inning against Buhl and out of it in the second. Buhl scored three runs to cut the margin to 5-3.

EDISON TOWNSHIP, N.J. — Former champions Amy Alcott and JoAnne Carner rolled in birdie putts minutes before play was suspended by darkness Friday and moved into a share of the lead with British Women's Open champion Laura Davies in the 42nd U.S. Women's Open.

There were still 27 players on the Plainfield Country Club when United States Golf Association officials called play at 8:25 p.m. EDT. Earlier play had been suspended for one hour, 47 minutes by lightning and heavy rain.

Alcott, who won the Open in 1980, led birdies on Nos. 16 and 17 to go two under par while Carner birdied the 16th.

Davies had shot a 2-under-par 70 almost seven hours earlier and has a 36-hole record of 2-under-par 142.

Tour veterans Alcott, Carner and the other players who did not finish the round will resume play at 7 a.m. Saturday.

Alcott started the round at even par and hit five birdies and three bogeys in the 17 holes she played.

Among those who did not finish, were first-round co-leader Dot Germain who is at 1-under-par with five holes to play.

After the second round is completed Saturday morning and the field is cut to the low 60 and ties, the third round is scheduled to start at 10 a.m.

Avako Okamoto, Jody Rosenthal and 16-year-old Sandra Palmer were all one shot behind the leaders after firing second-round 72s and were at 143. Nancy Lopez, seeking her 14th Open victory, was at even par 114 after a round of 73.

Davies, a native of England, had five birdies, one bogey and one double bogey in a round that featured only 25 putts.

"I try to put blinkers on tomorrow and we'll see what happens," said Davies, who was the leading money winner on the European women's tour the past two years. "I am very pleased with my position it was not easy out there."

Davies finished 11th in last year's U.S. Women's Open in Dayton, Ohio and has played just once on the American tour this year. She held the first-round lead in the Dinah Shore Classic with a 66, but skyrocketed to an 83 in the second round and finished 33rd.

Carner had completed nine holes when the rains came, and she moved into a tie for the lead with a birdie at the par 4, No. 16 hole. She started the round 2-over-par but moved into contention with a birdie at No. 2 and an eagle at the par-5 No. 3.

German, who shared the opening-round lead with Bonnie Lauer at 69, also briefly moved into a tie for the lead after the rains with a birdie at the 12th hole, but she bogeyed No. 13 to slip one behind the leader.

Lauer was inconsistent in the second round. She moved to 5-under through seven holes, but lost six strokes to par coming home and shot 4-over-par 76, capping it with consecutive bogeys on the final two holes.

"My putter just wasn't working as well yesterday," she said.

Lauer was tied with Cindy Rarick, Debbie Massey, Marc Bozarth and Deb Richard at 145. Massey equaled the course record for women with a 69 on the No. 16 hole.

Okamoto, the third-leading money winner on the LPGA tour this year, had four birdies, two bogeys and a double bogey.

Rosenthal, the No. 4 money leader, started the round with three birdies in the first six holes, but had three bogeys the rest of the way to finish a par round.

Palmer, who won the Open in 1975, had four birdies, two bogeys and a double bogey.

Last Winter, Domingo Lopez again felt like an expectant grandfather.

Daughter Nancy, the mother of two, faced a milestone in her storied golfing career. She was one victory away from the highest honor the LPGA can bestow.

"Now, I'm waiting for one more," he said. "I'm waiting for her to be in the Hall of Fame."

More high-round NFL draftees sign for less as camps open

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

On Wednesday, Hayward Jeffries signed his contract. On Thursday, it was Ricky Nattiel. Can Mark Ingram be far behind?

With NFL training camps opening daily, pro football's version of the domino theory is beginning to operate, bringing with it limited a rookie salary scale. Until a week ago, just two of the 28 first-round picks had signed — top pick Vinny Testaverde, signed before the draft by Tampa Bay and running back

D.J. Dozier, who signed July 6 with Minnesota.

Now there are 11 under contract, including defensive end Reggie Rogers, the seventh player picked overall. He signed with Detroit Friday for an estimated $1.75 million over four years and may lead to the signing of the five defensive linemen selected after him.

According to various sources, the other top picks were caught in a squeeze with the NFL Management Council pressuring teams to roll back rookie salaries and the Players Association trying to get agents to hold the line.

In fact, most of the high picks remain silent, waiting for Seattle to sign supplemental draft pick Brian Bosworth to break the logjam. But the last third of the rookie list is beginning to come in with salaries that average about the same as last year — some are higher, some are lower, and some are about the same.

It started a week ago when Kansas City signed running back Paul Palmer, the 19th overall pick, and the Seahawks signed Tony Woods, their regular pick and the 18th overall choice.

Nos. 39 through 23 have followed along with No. 25, San Francisco running back Terrence Flagger and No. 27, Nattiel, a wide receiver taken by Denver.

Nattiel signed for an estimated $1.3 million over four years the day after Jeffries, got $1.36 million from Houston, which made him the first receiver picked in the draft when they took him at No. 20.

That presumably now makes it possible for the Super Bowl champion New York Giants to sign Ingram, the last pick of the first round and the third wide receiver, presumably at some figure just below $1.3 million.

"We've got time," says General Manager George Young of the Giants, who says rookies are due to report to training camp in Pleasanton, N.Y. on Monday.

"We have the last pick in each round and there's been no sense in signing anyone before the salaries are set for the first weeks in those rounds. That's the way things work these days."

The signing problems continue at the top, with Bosworth the focus. He is seeking $9 million over seven years at the highest unsigned pick is Joey Jackson's death stemmed from birth defects in his heart and had nothing to do with cocaine, a medical examiner said Friday.

Miller said the problem would not have been detected by electrocardiogram, only by putting a catheter in the chest. He added that if he were treating an athlete with such birth defects, he would order the athlete to stop competition.

The autopsy results came from John Smialek, the Maryland state medical examiner who conducted an autopsy on University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias.

Diaz said Smialek phoned-in the results last week, and the autopsy report arrived in the mall Friday.

Salt Lake team ties all-time record

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Salt Lake Trappers won their 27th consecutive game Friday night — matching the longest winning streak in the history of organized baseball — with a 7-2 victory over the Pocatello Giants in a Pioneer League game.

The Trappers, runaway leaders in the Southern Division of the rookie league, can break the record with a victory Saturday night at home against Pocatello.

The 27-game winning streak equaled the record set by Corsicana of the Texas League in 1902 and matched by the old Baltimore Orioles of the International League in 1921.

According to Manager Jim Gilligan, the Trappers were not worried as game time approached Friday.

"They've handled all this as well as any minor-league team has in the past," he said.

Ferguson, who began the game second in the league in batting with a .440 average, said he isn't returning to make history.

"There's no way the team will be down for that," he said. "You come so close, you want to go ahead and break it."

The Trappers entered the game as the top hitting club in the league with a .349 team batting average

Bad heart, not cocaine, killed UTEP player

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Herx Jackson was born with small scars on his heart and an enlarged artery.

It was those defects that slowed the blood flow to his heart that Saturday and caused it to stop beating, Diaz said.

All it can say is cocaine was a contributing factor to his death," Diaz said, adding that it is impossible to know exactly what precipitated the heart attack.

But on Friday, Manny Diaz, county medical examiner's office, said further investigation showed

AL: Toronto rallies, cuts Yankees' East lead

TORONTO (AP) — With two and two-strikes against him, Jack Leach just wanted to make contact.

Instead, he drove a Jeff Reardon fastball deep over the right field fence for a three-run homer, giving the Toronto Blue Jays a comeback, 8-4 victory over the frustrated Minnesota Twins.

Toronto scored seven times in the seventh inning to defeat the Twins for the seventh consecutive time at Exhibition Stadium. The game was the 10th in a three-game, rain-delayed meeting. Immediately after the rain-delayed game, he drove two of his last 22 games in Toronto, dating to 1985.

The win moved Toronto one game closer to the division lead. New York Yankees, who lost Friday night in Chicago. The Blue Jays are in second place, 1 1/2 games out, followed by Detroit another half-game back.

The American League game, delayed three times for a total of two hours, 16 minutes, ended at 12:52 a.m. this morning.

"I think when we were down 6-1 and we had already won five games, if you wanted to be honest about it, I think some guys would have liked to pack it in and come back tomorrow to play a doubleheader," said Leach, the designated hitter.

Leach was 9-9 in the game before facing Reardon, 5-3, who had retired him on a ninth-inning popup to preserve a 3-2 Twins victory in Minnesota, July 17.

"I just wanted to get my bat on the line and one of those rare things happened," said the little-used Leach of his third homer this season.

In the seventh, Tony Fernandez singled for his third hit of the game and scored on George Bell's sacrifice fly. Then Benitez, pinch-hitting for Rube Mullinix, greeted reliever Dan Schatzeder with a wind-aided, three-run homer that bounced off the top of the right-field fence.

It was the fourth home run for Benitez, who was obtained from

Baseball

Kansas City during the all-star break.

"I have to keep moving around in case you have to hit," Benitez said. "When I see a lefty in the pen, I have to get ready and put everything together in my mind. It's a good feeling to get a hit in that situation. They were good fans, but fans to stay so long."

After pinch-hitter Charlie Moore walked, Reardon entered the game for a double strike to pinch-hitter Willie Upshaw. Leach then hit his homer.

"The ball to Leach was out over the plate and he turned on it," said Twins catcher Sam Batters. "We had the same situation last week and Leach popped up to end the game."

"But we are still in first place (in the AL West) and the other teams have to catch us."

Mark Elohorn, 9-5, allowed three hits in 3 1/2 innings for the win. Tom Henke picked up his 20th save.

Chicago 5 New York 2

CHICAGO (AP) — Hot hitting Harold Baines' three-run homer and a solo shot by Carlton Fisk powered the last-place Chicago White Sox to a 5-2 victory over the first-place New York Yankees Friday night.

The White Sox snapped a three-game losing streak and handed the Yankees their third straight defeat, matching their longest losing string of the season.

Fisk's homer was his 16th and third in as many games and extended his hitting streak to 18 games, currently the longest in the major leagues.

Don Bannister, 5-9, was the winner and Steve Trout, 0-2, suffered his second straight defeat as in many starts since being acquired by the Yankees from the Chicago Cubs.

Chicago took a 1-0 lead in the first when Gary Redus singled, stole second and scored on a single by Ivan Calderin. The Yankees' Greg Maddux pitched a double by Rick Cerone and Henry Cotto's two-out single.

Fred Manrique and Redus both walked in the third inning before Baines homered. It was the 156th of his career, adding to his all-time White Sox record.

Mike Pagliarulo hit his 19th homer in the New York fourth but Fisk got that back in the bottom of the fourth with his 13th homer.

The Yankees threatened in the sixth. Dave Winfield and Gary Ward singled and two outs later, Pagliarulo singled to left, but Winfield was thrown out at the plate by Redus.

Trout allowed five hits, walked three and struck out three before leaving in the seventh inning.

Milwaukee 10 Oakland 2

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Robin Yount doubled in the go-ahead run in the fifth inning and Steve Kefauver's three-run homer keyed a four-run seventh inning as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Oakland Athletics 10-2 Friday night.

Juan Nieves, 7-6, allowed six hits in seven innings before getting relief help from Mark Clear. The Brewers backed the pair with a 17-hit attack that also included solo homers by Ernest Riles and Glenn Braggs.

"The only run allowed by Nieves came on Steve Henderson's first homer that drove the Athletics a 1-0 lead in the fourth. Riles' homer with two out in the bottom of the inning off Steve Ontiveros, 5-4, tied the game."

Brewers then took the lead in the fifth as Mike Felder singled, stole second and scored on Yount's third hit of the game, a double.

Milwaukee added two runs in the sixth. B.J. Surhoff doubled with one out and Greg Cadaret replaced Ontiveros, who has not won since June 28.

Jim Gantner in the lineup for the first time since July 9 because of a hamstring pull, then singled and Surhoff beat the throw to the plate to make it 3-1. Gantner took second on a play and scored on Dale Sveum's base hit to left with a hard slide as the ball came off catcher Terry Steinbach's leg.

Kiefer, hitting for Riles, then hit a homer off Cadaret in the seventh after a double by Mullinix and Greg Brock's bunt single. It was Milwaukee's first pinch-hit homer since 1983.

The Brewers added a run in the seventh on Mike Felder's RBI single and Braggs hit his 10th homer in a three-run inning.

Detroit 6 California 1

DETROIT (AP) — Lou Whitaker and Kirk Gibson sparked a three-run eighth inning with doubles, giving the Detroit Tigers a 6-1 victory over the California Angels Friday night.

Tom Brookens opened the game. Mike Heath with the tie-breaking run to put the Tigers up 4-3. Heath had reached second on a single and a throwing error by losing pitcher Chuck Finley, 2-4.

Tom Brookens reached first on an infield single and Gibson brought Brookens and Whitaker home with a double to give the Tigers a 6-3 edge.

Mike Henneman, 7-0, got the win with three innings of one-hit relief.

Boston 5 Seattle 4

BOSTON (AP) — Don Baylor's six-inning homer, his first in more than a month, gave Boston a 5-4 victory over the Seattle Mariners Friday night and kept the Red Sox from sinking 10 games under .500 for the first time in 11 years.

Baylor hit the first pitch of the inning from Lee Guetterman, 8-2, over the left field fence to break a 1-4 tie and the first since June 23.

It gave the Red Sox a 44-32 record. The last time they were 10 games under .500 was July 30, 1976, when they were 4-5.

Steve Like, 11-6, allowed seven bns, struck out seven and walked one as he tied Kansas City's Bret Saberhagen for the American League lead with 11 complete games.

The Mariners had tied the game 4-4 in the sixth when John Christensen doubled home Phil Bradley, who had singled. Jim Prestey then singled, but left fielder Jim Rice threw out Christensen at home. Christensen, who collided with catcher Marc Sullivan, was helped off the field with a strained ligament in his left knee.

Boston had scored three runs with two outs in the fifth to take a 4-3 lead. Spike Owen singled, took second on Ellis Burks' two-out single and scored on a hit by Marty Barrett. Burks and Barrett scored on Owen's double.

Baltimore's Ken Gerhart, went for the force at third and threw the ball into left field to allow pinch-runner Alan Wiggins to score the tying run.

John Davis relieved Farrer and walked pinch-hitter Jim Wynn intentionally to load the bases. After Bill Ripken hit into a force play, Cal Ripken hit a line drive to left field.

Broderick had Larry Parrish hit two-run homers as the Texas Rangers defeated the Cleveland Indians 6-3 Friday night.

Steve Carlton, 5-9, walked Scott Fletcher, leading off the Rangers eighth. After Ruben Sierra grounded into a fielder's choice, Incaviglia hit his looping line double to right field to score Sierra and give the Rangers a 4-3 lead. Doug Jones then came on and pitched the first out of the first pitch into the left field over deck, for his 22nd home run.

Jeff Russell, 4-1, picked up the victory with 1 1/2 scoreless innings in relief. Dale Mabrey pitched the last two innings for his 14th save.

Carlton became the seventh pitcher in major league history to start 700 games. The 42-year-old left-hander yielded seven hits in 7 1/2 innings as he pitched his eighth straight June 20, going 0-5 in his last six starts.

Cleveland tied the game 3-3 in the fifth on a run-scoring double by Brett Butler.

Texas 6 Cleveland 3

CLEVELAND (AP) — Pete Incaviglia snapped an eighth-inning tie with a run-scoring double. Broderick had Larry Parrish hit two-run homers as the Texas Rangers defeated the Cleveland Indians 6-3 Friday night.

Steve Carlton, 5-9, walked Scott Fletcher, leading off the Rangers eighth. After Ruben Sierra grounded into a fielder's choice, Incaviglia hit his looping line double to right field to score Sierra and give the Rangers a 4-3 lead. Doug Jones then came on and pitched the first out of the first pitch into the left field over deck, for his 22nd home run.

Jeff Russell, 4-1, picked up the victory with 1 1/2 scoreless innings in relief. Dale Mabrey pitched the last two innings for his 14th save.

Carlton became the seventh pitcher in major league history to start 700 games. The 42-year-old left-hander yielded seven hits in 7 1/2 innings as he pitched his eighth straight June 20, going 0-5 in his last six starts.

Cleveland tied the game 3-3 in the fifth on a run-scoring double by Brett Butler.

Kansas City 3 Baltimore 1

BALTIMORE — Cal Ripken's sacrifice bunt was topped by left fielder Bo Jackson drove in the winning run in the bottom of the eighth, extending Baltimore's winning streak to 10 games with a 3-1 win over Kansas City Friday night.

Waide Bouie, 7-4, pitched a four-inning game with only the fifth hit off Black. Black was removed for Steve Farr, who walked pinch-hitter Terry Kennedy. Farr then fielded a bunt by

NL: Giants find a way to stop St. Louis — four double plays

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Giants made the most of their half-dozen hits and took St. Louis runners off the bases with four double plays Friday night.

That added up to a 3-2 victory over the Cardinals, ending St. Louis' four-game winning streak.

"The double plays killed us, but you can't win them all, man," St. Louis' Jack Clark said.

The Cardinals' troubles on the bases began even before the game's first double play. In the first inning, with Vince Coleman on third and Clark on first with two outs, Alton Hernandez threw to first.

First baseman Will Clark faked a throw to second to get Jackie Coleman, who had started toward home, Coleman was tagged out as he tried to get back to third.

"Yeah, a play was on, but I didn't do it right," Jack Clark said.

"I think what messed them up was my quick move to first base," Hernandez said. "I took some breaks. I'll take them. I've had a lot to go against me."

With one out in the fifth, Rick Horton, 5-1, walked Mark Wagers before Mike Aldrete tripped into a third-out double to give San Francisco a 3-2 lead. Aldrete later scored on Jeffrey Leonard's sacrifice fly.

Hammaker, 6-7, allowed six hits in six innings before giving up an unearned run in the seventh.

The loss was Horton's first since April 30, 1986, ending a personal nine-game winning streak.

pitched a six-hitter over 7 1/2 innings and drove in the winning run in the third, leading Montreal over the Cincinnati Reds 3-2 and snapping the Expos' three-game losing streak.

Jim Lincecum struck out a season-high nine and walked one, winning for the first time since June 23 and earning his third complete game. Tim Burke got Eric Davis to ground out with one on first and second and two outs in the eighth and then finished the game for his ninth save.

Guy Hoffman, 7-5, allowed all three runs on four hits over seven innings. Hoffman allowed all four hits in the second, the only inning in which he did not retire the side in order.

Trailing 2-0, Montreal went ahead in the second inning. Tim Wallach pitched with one out to right, Hubble Brooks doubled and Andres Galarraga scored both with a two-run single to left.

Guy Hoffman went to third one out later in the inning. Tim Wallach scored the lead run when Heaton hit a fielder's choice grounder to second.

The Reds took a 2-0 lead in the first inning. David hit his 28th homer to put Cincinnati ahead 2-0.

Mike Jackson and Jeff Labadie allowed one hit each over the final 3 1/2 innings to help the Phillies move above .500 for the first time this season.

Jackson and Calhoun each pitched 1 1/2 innings.

Atlanta starter Rick Mahler, 6-9, took the loss, the third straight for the Braves.

Trailing 4-3, Philadelphia batted again in the third for the second time in the game and took a 7-4 lead.

Schmidt and Wilson led off with singles, and one out later, Greg Gross singled to right scoring victory. John Smiley pitched a hillless eighth before Brett Gleason retired the side in the ninth for his second save.

Dunne joined the Pirates June 1 from their Class AAA affiliate in Vancouver. British Columbia, struck out five and walked one.

Ray's double over the head of center fielder Stan Jefferson broke a 1-1 tie with two outs in the fifth inning.

Third baseman Randy Ready booted Sammy Khalifa's grounder to start the fifth. San Diego starter Jimmy Jones struck out Dunne and got John Cangossoli to ground in to a fielder's choice to third; but Andy Van Slyke walked before Ray doubled.

Schmidt, with Wilson advancing to third. Steve Jeltz followed with a fielder's choice grounder to the pitcher, scoring Wilson. Gross and Jeltz, Tom Baker, when shortstop Andre Thomas dropped the ball at second. One out later Samuel hit a two-run triple.

The Braves scored a run in the sixth on pinch-hitter Ken Griffey's RBI single off Jackson's glove.

Philadelpia increased its lead to 4-1 as Paul Assenmacher in the sixth. Schmidt doubled home two runs and Chris James also had an RBI double.

In the 7th, Samuel hit his career-high 20th home run to make it 11-5.

The Phillies batted around in the first and took a 3-0 lead.

Samuel walked, Matt Thompson's single and Von Hayes doubled to score Samuel. Thompson scored and Hayes reached third when left fielder Gary Roeneke threw wild past second base.

Schmidt singled to score Hayes and the Phillies then loaded the bases on walks to Wilson and Jeltz, but Ruffin struck out for the final out.

three no-decisions since May 12.

Chicago's Greg Maddux, 6-8, allowed four runs and five hits over eight innings. Steve Sanderson pitched the last two innings for his 14th save.

Maddux walked Dave Anderson with two outs in the fifth before Ken Landreth hit his fourth homer to give Los Angeles a 4-3 lead.

But Dave Martinez, pinch hitting for Maddux, singled to lead off the seventh before Leon Durham hit ground next a fielder's choice to second. After Ryne Sandberg struck out, Dawson homered to right on Leary's first pitch.

Martinez added his fourth homer in the ninth as the Cubs' final run.

Newly sanctioned Babe Ruth stars take shot at state

TWIN FALLS — An all-star team representing the Twin Falls segment of the "Magic Valley" Babe Ruth League took the first step last weekend in their first-ever attempt at a sanctioned title. This weekend it's back to Idaho Falls for a crack at the state crown.

"This is the first year we've been sanctioned," said Ron Boyd one of four local men who will be coaching the Twin Falls club, whose ballclub ousted St. Maries 13-11 Friday night after losing its first round game to Tri-Counties of the Treasure Valley, 5-0. "We've checked into it a number of different times, but we usually start our season a little later than most of the other towns. This year we started a week or two earlier and got our sanction through because we think baseball's played as well in Twin Falls as in any other city in the state of Idaho and our kids should get chances to advance and do a little better job."

Boyd, working alongside Dal Ames of perennial power Wilson-Bates, Casey Bartholomew and Don Bollinger are in Idaho Falls with other players, where they will collide with toughouts out of the Boise area, Couer d'Alene, Pocatello and Idaho Falls itself.

"It'll be a pretty good mixture of teams from throughout the state of Idaho," Boyd added. "A tough group, but I think it's really neat for our kids to get a chance to go against that type of competition."

Torrey Bollinger, John Horner, Carl Smith, Steve Bartholomew, Bryce Armstrong, Sean Brown, Jason Carrico and Tim Soran, all 15-year-olds are three year Babe Ruth veterans. Riley Boyd, Jeff Ames, Jason Pearson, Eric Morthorst and Vaughn Blair, each fourteen, complete the roster.

"There's some really good players who are fifteen and fourteen who probably got looked over," raved Boyd. "But when you're trying to pick a team in the middle of the year you try to do it position by position. We went after the bats and people that we felt would mix together to give us the right type of chemistry and who could play good defense."

"It's tough for the kids," Ames added. "We have kids off six different teams here and every coach does something a little bit different. "One thing with the other cities. Their leagues have already finished," he continued. "We're just wrapping it up now. The other areas have probably been practicing together for three or four weeks and we still have playoffs coming up."

Ames went on to explain that the top four finishers during the regular season will begin a playoff July 29 to decide their champion. A distinction held by Ames club three years running.

Fresh from their success in district play, the youngsters are out to prove Babe Ruth's contention.

"Twin Falls is traditionally a really good baseball town," he added. "CJ Walker's got it going out there. At DSI and Bill Ingram is a really great coach. I think they have both been involved with some of our players and that really helps when it comes to the top on down."

With a team batting average of .319 from Idaho Falls, the weekend key may lie in the pitching staff.

"Most of the time the roadblock is the team with the big power pit, but none who threw real hard. Somewhere along the line we're going to run into that pitcher,"

When Hicks walked the first four batters he faced, gave up a sacrifice fly to Kelly Atkinson and a single to Shane Wiggins.

"I've heard one of the Buhl fans yelling at him that he was no pitcher, and it made him mad," said Pocatello Coach Gary Parkin. "I guess he wanted to show that he could pitch."

Hicks struck out 10 Indians, allowed just four hits and let just one Buhl runner as far as third base after his shaky first inning.

"We have the luxury of a lot of good pitchers this year, which is great in a tournament situation," said Parkin. "We have five or six kids we can use and feel pretty confident they'll do a good job."

After the Buhl lead over a 7-3 lead with two more runs in the second, Buhl posed just one serious threat — that coming in the fifth. Brady, the leadoff batter, got aboard on an error by the Pocatello first baseman and stole second. Derrick Brinkman followed with a double to left-center, but the Rebels' center-fielder Mike Von Brunt ran the ball down and relayed it to third baseman Craig Hagler, who second to third. Hicks then stranded Brinkman at second with a strikeout and a pop fly.

"I think any time our kids play solid defense, we have a chance to win," said Parkin. "We've had a lot of games canceled in the last couple of weeks, and it really showed yesterday (Thursday's 4-2 Oiler) game just went ready to play, but they looked better to play."

In contrast to the Shoshone staff, Wood River's pitching staff was worn out by the time it had to face the Braves again Friday night. Left-hander Mike Kluge worked eight innings in the victory over Idaho Falls Friday afternoon and then came back to pitch six innings of relief Friday night. That gave him 14 1/3 innings in the four games the Wolverines played in the four-day tournament. On Friday, while teammate Lex Levy had 8 and Doug Nosworthy 5 1/3 plus.

Shoshone, which took a 2-0 lead over Wood River right-hander Phil Uhrig in the first inning, only to have the Wolverines tie the game in the bottom of the frame, sent 12 batters to the plate in the second inning, incredibly, the first 10 on base and the first eight of them scored off Uhrig and his reliever. Not until Kluge came on with Shoshone leading 11-2 and runners on first and third did the Wolverines get an out; the Shoshone retired three in a row to get out of the inning.

The Braves, who had lost four previous encounters with Wood River this season, added two more runs in the third, another in the fourth and overcame 1-0 deficit to run-rule the Wolverines when the Wolverines pushed across five runs in the fifth to cut the deficit to 13-9. But Bozuto brought in Wallace to quash the rally in the fifth. He kept Wood River under control through 2 1/2 innings.

Shoshone, which managed just four hits Wood River pitchers Thursday, hammered 12 hits Friday night, three of them by Nick Gonzalez (3-for-5).

Becker, Germans take Davis Cup lead

By BOB GREENE
The Associated Press

HARTFORD, Conn. — Boris Becker ousted John McEnroe in a record-breaking marathon Davis Cup struggle Friday night to give West Germany a 2-0 lead over the United States in their best-of-five match relegation round series.

"It was a war out there," Becker said. "He tried everything and I tried everything."

Becker needed six hours, 38 minutes to down McEnroe 4-6, 15-13, 6-10, 6-2, 6-2. The time, which includes an 18-minute break after the third set, broke the American Davis Cup record of 6:32 set in 1982 when McEnroe defeated Sweden's Mats Wilander in St. Louis.

In Friday's first match, West Germany's Eric Jelen, rated about 50 places below Tim Mayotte in the computer rankings, rallied for a 6-8, 6-2, 1-6, 6-3, 6-2 victory.

With one more victory, West Germany can retain a spot in the World Group next year and drop the Americans into zonal play. Only the 16 nations in the World Group actually compete for the Davis Cup.

Becker and Jelen will team up to play Robert Seguso and Ken Flach in Saturday's doubles. On Sunday, the three-day battle will end with McEnroe taking on Jelen and Mayotte playing Becker.

"I think this is going to be my sleepless night (tonight)," Becker said, noting Saturday's doubles begin at noon.

In order to stay in the World Group, the United States would have to win all three remaining matches.

"It was a great win for Eric," Becker said of Jelen's surprising victory.

Brisco, Deal get off to quick Olympicfest starts

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Valerie Brisco and Lance Deal didn't make a big deal about the heat at the U.S. Olympic Festival Friday.

Competing in temperatures in the 90s, Brisco ran the third fastest time by an American this year in winning the women's 200-meter dash in a best-of-three 22.57 seconds match. The 1985 Olympic champion from Los Angeles entered the meet only five hours before it began at Wade Wallace Stadium on the campus of Duke University.

"It's nice to be here, but it's hot," she said. "Physically, I'm in good shape — I knew that I wasn't going to be hurrying after the race."

"I'm ready to go overseas. I'm tired of training. I'm ready to get back into running condition."

She appeared to be in fine shape Friday.

55 did Deal, who won the hammer throw the first track and field event at the festival.

Deal, 25, of Eugene, Ore., got off his best toss on his last of six attempts, 239 feet, 9 inches. He did it even though he had a cold, proper warm-up and despite the heat.

"I don't know the secrets of how to beat it (the heat)," Deal said after falling just under four feet short of the world record he felt, he could beat. "But I'm from the North, and

Tennis

"It boasted our spirit quite a bit. But I knew John would be coming out to play all or nothing."

Becker was so right.

"It was a war, a battle of attrition," began at 4:30 p.m. EDT and ended at 11:16 p.m. And Becker, at 19 1/2 years younger than McEnroe, emerged victorious.

"I think he was playing on emotion," Becker said. "I think he was playing to win."

It took McEnroe 50 minutes to win the opening set, breaking Becker at love in the 10th game.

Then came one of the longest sets in the Davis Cup play. Becker broke McEnroe in the 15th game and was serving for the set. But McEnroe broke back.

In the 22nd game, Becker battled back from five set-points to hold serve and pull even at 11-11. On the first set point, the lineswoman called Becker's serve a fault. But umpire Claude Richard of France overruled and called it in.

"If it wasn't for me being out there, I don't think we would have gotten that overrule at love-40," McEnroe said. "I just feel that those things would have happened if it wasn't for the things that happened to me in the past."

Becker then pulled to deceive with two more powerful serves that McEnroe failed to return.

On the third set point, McEnroe sailed a backhand long. The fifth set point was saved when the left-hander's backhand half-volley was wide.

The powerful German broke McEnroe at love in the 27th game, then held all play to take the second set in a set that took two hours, 30 minutes to play — 15 minutes less than it took Jelen and Mayotte to play their entire match.

McEnroe fought off two break points in the seventh game of the third set in the 11th game and two more in the 13th. Becker was never in trouble on his serve until the 18th game.

McEnroe failed to close it out on the first set point, at 15-40, when he netted a service return. But, on the next point, the left-hander left for Jelen and the crowd erupted when Becker's backhand down the line was wide.

That gave McEnroe a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five-sets match.

The third set took one hour, 33 minutes. By the end of the third set, the two had battled for four hours, 58 minutes.

The last two sets were almost anticlimactic. Becker broke McEnroe at 15 to begin the fourth set, then saved off a break point before holding for a 2-0 set.

He broke McEnroe again in the fifth game, this time at 3-0, and when held at 15, he had a 5-1 lead.

McEnroe appeared to be resting, willing to give up the fourth set and regroup for the decisive fifth set. It was a tactic that wouldn't work.

The two battled evenly through the first four games. Then, in the fifth game, McEnroe began with the 18th, 10th of the match, and fell behind 30-40 before pulling to love.

A double-fault, his 10th, gave Becker another break point. Again he saved it, this time on a service winner.

But Becker won the next two points and McEnroe had to let his serve. He would never be close again as Becker wound up winning the final five games of the night.

Becker finished with 18 aces, two more than McEnroe, and nine double faults, three less than his American opponent.

"John came back so well in the third set," said U.S. team captain Tom Gorman. "I'm sure a lot of people will be surprised and remain in the World Group. But Jelen, cheered on by a large contingent of Germans in the Hartford Civic Center, gave the Americans a jolt.

Like Becker, he did it by coming from behind 2-1 after three sets.

Jelen appeared on the brink of defeat after Mayotte rallied to win the first set, then won the third set easily. But Mayotte never broke serve after the fifth game and the fourth set as Jelen gained momentum.

It was all Jelen in the decisive fifth set, with Mayotte losing his serve in the third and fifth games as Jelen moved from a 1-1 deadlock to a 5-1 lead. The next time he served; he held from deuce to wrap up the two-hour, 54-minute contest and give Germany the lead.

Nor is he used to throwing without warming up in the right environment, which the throwers didn't have at Wade Stadium on the campus of Duke University.

"I don't like to make excuses," Deal said. "But we had to fight hard for these warm-up throws. They (officials) wanted it to be an international-type competition, and give us only two throws originally. There was a lot of hub-bub."

The problem was caused by the lack of a practice area, even though one had been promised. The throwers wound up warming up on the main field.

"Safety was our main concern," Deal said.

Other track winners were LaTanya Sheffield of El Cajon, Calif., who also broke festival and stadium records in the women's 400-meter dash.

First runner-up Ed Dougherty, who shot a 64 Thursday, was tied with Don Pooley and Jodie Mudd at 10-under-134. Pooley shot a 66 Friday and Mudd carded a 67, while Dougherty, who started 6 feet day with a one-stroke lead, had a 70.

John Adams, Curt Byrum Scott Hoch were at 135, while Mark McCumber, Mike Reid, Gil Whelan, Gary Krueger and Jay Haas were another shot back at 136.

Dan Pohl and defending Buick Open champion Ben Crenshaw led a group at 149 and 137.

Dewey Arnette, who tied a PGA Tour record with eight consecutive birdies and finished the first round a stroke behind Dougherty, carded a 1-over 73 and was 2-1 under 138 after two rounds.

Ray Floyd, winner of every major for 1976, the British Open, was one 138 below with Canadian Dave Barr. Tom Kite was 2 under, Lanny Wadkins was 2 under while Bill Rogers and Scott Verplank each were 3-under.

In 141, to make the 141 or better qualifier for the final two rounds which will be televised nationally by CBS-TV.

Paul Azinger, the PGA's leading money-winner this year and runner-up in last week's British Open, was 2-under.

Charlie Bolling came in at 122 for a two-round total of 132 over a 7:04-par-par-72 Warwick Hills Golf-and-country Club.

"I got away with murder today," Greco said. "Yesterday was good 66 and today was an awful 66. God gave me every Tranel Hawkins of San Jose, Calif., in the 400 hurdles in 48:89; Randy Heister of Bloomington, Ind., in the discus at 203.6; Jim Hill of Vienna, Va., in the 100-meter in 29:06;61; Mark Sheehan of Phoenix, in the half-marathon in 1:01:46; Bonnie Dasse of Costa Mesa, Calif., in the women's shot put at 58-9; and Kathy Pfeifer of Albuquerque, N.M., in the women's half-marathon at 1:17:49.3.

In hockey, at Greentree, the North and South will meet for the gold medal after the South won a preview 5-4 on Bob Kudelski's goal with 2:12 remaining.

Kudelski, of Yale, poked a rebound off a save by Scott past goal keeper Brad Ryan of Illinois-Chicago, giving the South a 2-1 record, the same as the North.

3-Kudelski had just moved into the line with Scott Fesen and Lane MacDonald, who played together at Harvard.

"The Olympic people wanted to look at me on wing, but I am bigger than Fesen and MacDonald, and have strength to the line," Kudelski said of his move back to center.

"I've played against them in Yale-Harvard games."

The West broke out of its record-setting scoring slump, getting three goals from Wally Chapman and Mike DeCarie in a 9-2 victory over the East.

The West scored seven goals in the third period, tying a festival record and completely reversing its fortunes. The team hadn't scored a goal in 142 minutes, 52 seconds, being shut out twice.

"We were working hard and we knew it would pay off," DeCarie said. "They had a game last night and may have even had a little tired."

Robin Richter of Lincoln, Neb., came from sixth place after one event to win the gold in women's overall gymnastics and helped the West to a record-setting team performance before 14,338 at the Smith Center in Chapel Hill.

Richter, 15, entering her second year on the senior national team, overtook Danna Lister of Tulsa, Okla., with a 9.7 on the balance beam. She held on for a 1-1 deadlock in 142 minutes, 52 seconds, being shut out twice.

"My teammate told me to show off to the crowd," Richter said. "I'm just taking it a year at a time. This helps a lot to build my confidence."

"This (meet) was important to me because I had extra prep time," Richter said. Richter, who broke her arm in a January fall and finished 2nd in the all-around at the national championships last month.
