Secretary Baldrige killed in riding accident

By KATHLEEN MACLAY The Associated Press

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. — Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, a onetime ranch hand who attended Yale and became a successful businessman before joining the Reagan Cabinet, died Saturday hours after the horse he was riding while cattle roping fell on him. Baldrige, 64, died during surgery at John Muir Hospital here at about 2:50 p.m., said Dr. Norman Patel, a trauma surgeon at the hospital. The commerce secretary, a member of President Reagan's Cabinet since 1981, arrived at the hospital via helicopter after the accident at the Jack Roddy Ranch in rural Brentwood, 45 miles east of San Francisco.

Baldrige, who had a lifelong passion for rodeo competition and was elected to the Cowboy Hall of Fame in 1984, suffered massive internal injuries including tears to the pancreas and heart when the horse fell on him about 1:15 p.m., doctors said. His heart stopped for several minutes after the accident. During exploratory surgery, doctors discovered severe internal bleeding that they were unable to stem. Patel said, adding that the aorta and the large vein leading to the heart were both torn. About 1 1/2 hours into the operation, Baldrige's heart stopped and efforts to restart it through heart massage failed. "He died from the massive injuries and from the lack of coagulation of the blood," said chief surgeon Dr. Ronald LaPorta, one of four surgeons who operated on the secretary. "He was always in shock; he never got out of shock." "The nation has suffered a great loss with the tragic and untimely death of Secretary Malcolm Baldrige," President Reagan said in a statement read by Leslye Arshst, White House deputy press secretary. "Under his stewardship, the Department of Commerce played a key role in the rebirth of our country's prosperity and all of us owe a great debt to 'Mac' Baldrige," the president said.

Baldrige was attempting to rope an animal when his horse reared and both fell backward, with the horse falling on the commerce secretary "full force," said sheriff's Sgt. Larry Aulich. He had said he understood the animal was a calf but witnesses said it was a steer. Dr. Bert D. Johnson, a Stanford University gynecologist who arrived at the ranch just after the accident, said he and volunteer firefighters administered cardiopulmonary resuscitation for about four minutes when Baldrige's heart started beating again and he began breathing. He was then taken to the hospital. Baldrige, a former steer roping champion, rode Friday in competition and was to ride Saturday night at the Contra Costa County Fair. Fair officials planned to lead a riderless black horse around the arena with Baldrige's boots and spurs in the traditional cowboy salute to the dead. When the accident occurred, about 35 horsemen were practicing team steer roping before a barbecue, according to witness Bert Krelllow. Baldrige was offered a vodka and orange juice, took two sips, and then "threw the rest away" about 20 minutes before the accident, he said. Though in his 60s, Baldrige competed in about three professional rodeos a year and often participated in Sunday roping competitions. His office was filled with mementos of his life-long passion: bronze cowboy statues, a buckled lasso, a saddle he won at a 1978 rodeo, and a collection of belt buckles won in roping contests. Born Oct. 4, 1922, in Omaha, Neb., Baldrige worked as a ranch hand and started his business career as a mill

Divers inspect tanker's damage

Pentagon considers using minesweepers

By JOHN RICE The Associated Press

KUWAIT — Divers on Saturday checked the damaged hull of a listing Kuwaiti supertanker that hit a mine while U.S. warships escorted it through the Persian Gulf. The captain of one of the three Navy escort ships said he didn't understand why the flotilla didn't have protection from mines. Pentagon sources in Washington said efforts were under way to enlist the aid of Kuwait and Saudi Arabia in sending minesweepers into the gulf to guard future convoys.

Mine warfare — A7

An Iranian naval commander said he hoped the incident would convince Washington to pull out of the waterway.

In Manama, Bahrain, marine salvage experts said the mine may have been laid only two hours before the 40,000-ton Bridgeton hit it Friday morning. Two rusty mines were sighted later by passing ships in the gulf near the Abu Sa'fah field, south of where the Bridgeton was hit, shipping executives said.

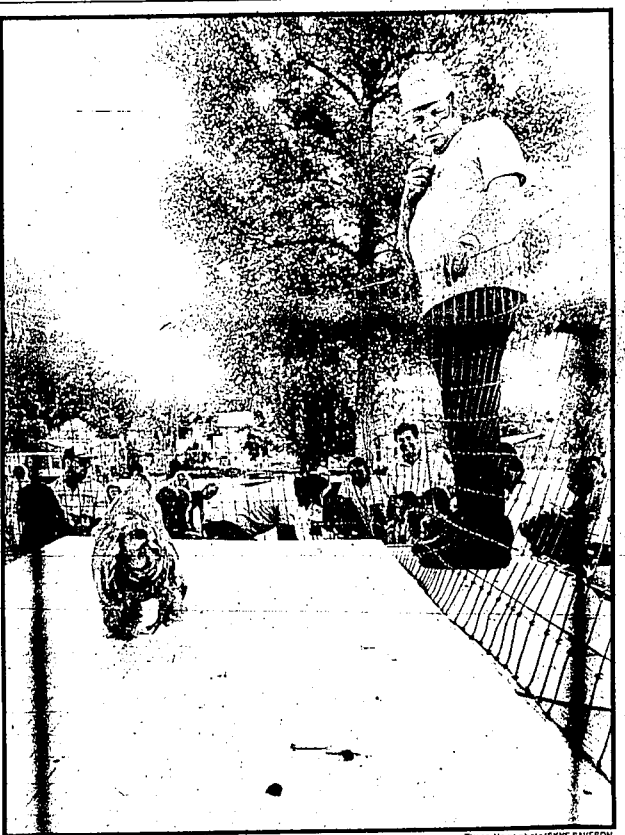

In Long Beach, Calif., the battleship USS Missouri set sail Saturday for the Indian Ocean with about 1,500 sailors on board, Pentagon spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Chris Baumann said. He would not comment on whether the Missouri might enter the Persian Gulf.

The Bridgeton, which raised the Stars and Stripes so it could sail under the protection of a U.S. convoy, was being inspected to determine if it could be repaired in Kuwait or would have to be sent to shipyards in the southern part of the gulf, said U.S. Ambassador Anthony Quainton.

Officials of the Kuwait Oil Tanker Co., which operates the ship, declined to discuss the extent of the Bridgeton's damages. Kuwaiti officials warned journalists trying to photograph the tanker not to approach its anchorage 10 miles off the coast.

Three U.S. warships had escorted the Bridgeton and the smaller oil-products carrier Gas Prince as part of the vanguard of a U.S. effort to protect oil shipping lanes from attacks stemming from the Iran-Iraq war. The U.S. ships arrived safely in Bahrain on Saturday after Kuwait rejected their request to anchor in its territorial waters.

The Kuwaitis also twice asked the Americans to keep their helicopters clear of their airspace. Navy officials with the escorts said. The frigate Crommelin, the cruiser Fox and the destroyer Kidd planned to tie up in Bahrain near the LaSalle, the helicopter ship of the U.S. 5th Fleet Task Force. None of the 17 U.S. Navy ships in Suspense ran high at the chicken drop event at the Sixth Annual Filer Fun Days Saturday, but spectators didn't have long to wait. The rooster promptly indicated his choice for a winner, and

One Hardy request too many led to key water rights ruling

By JANE ROBISON Times-News writer

ANALYSIS

TWIN FALLS — Niagara Springs is the site of sound and cool fury that may end up signifying quite a bit to the people and the state of Idaho. There five small springs meet the light of day, the roar of rushing water through the rocks drowns out any attempts at conversation. Water bursts through the basalt flows in a white froth at the rate of 264 cubic feet per second. It charges down the mountain, cascading through a carpet of ferns on its half-mile route to the mighty Snake River. A short boardwalk has been built that takes those interested from a dusty road into a dense jungle under a huge, overarching tree where the mist mingles with the shade and right to the headwaters in just a few steps. So strong, and swift and sure is the water that it appears nothing could ever get in its way. Several feet below the headwaters, however, where the white rush turns icy blue, a concrete wing wall was built this year. With the turn of the wheel, the water would no longer spill over one ledge falls and disperse into a pool of teal.

Instead of flowing past the Smokey Pugmire Memorial Park, where people bring their fishing poles and their picnic baskets and their children to romp and play, the water would be channeled through a steelhead fish hatchery owned by Idaho Power Company and operated by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. From there, the water would go to another fish hatchery, a commercial trout hatchery, owned by Earl Hardy, a man with more than 1,625 cfs of water to his name, all to raise fish. Hardy has a license for 130.3 cfs at Niagara Springs to raise fish at his Rim View Hatchery. Idaho Power has a license for 132 cfs to raise steelhead at its Niagara EDWIN MEESE III Inquiry a cover-up?

WASHINGTON — The congressional Iran-Contra committees investigate an investigation this week as they interrogate Justice General Edwin Meese III on the scope and intent of the Justice Department inquiry that unearthed the secret diversion of Iran arms sale dollars to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Opening the final phase of nationally televised hearings that began on May 5, the committees also set appearances by former White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger. The trio of major witnesses.

Delta seeks common thread in string of errors

ATLANTA — Wrong runways, a wrong airport, near collisions and a terrifying engine shutdown over ocean waves. The nerves of Delta Air Lines workers have been tested by these recent slip-ups and near-tragedies, but employees say their confidence remains unshaken. The incidents, which have no obvious connections, have focused an unwelcome spotlight on the nation's fourth-largest air carrier, considered by regulators and consumer advocates as an industry leader in safety and customer satisfaction. "We do not know what the cause is," said Delta spokesman Jim-Ewing. "It seems to be random, or by chance. There is no thread we can find linking the incidents."

spokesman John Mazor. "There are thousands of operations every day," he said. "Normally something might happen to us, say, United one day and Pan Am the next and maybe to Northwest the next. It is all spread around and nobody takes any notice. But when Delta is written on all of the planes." Wayne Williams, head of the National Transportation Safety Association, a transportation industry consumer-interest group based in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., agreed. "What is happening is that their numbers finally caught up with them," he said. "Delta has about 6,500 pilots. They have only made about four boo-boos that were really Delta boo-boos. That's four or five explaining out of a pilot pool of 6,500. That isn't bad."

Delta set a record for net income and income from operations for the fiscal year that ended June 30. Chief financial officer Robert Oppelander attributed much of the increase to growth of passenger traffic. Delta has built an enviable record of consumer satisfaction. The U.S. Transportation Department statistics released July 14 rank Delta as the largest carrier with the fewest consumer complaints. From January to June, Delta had 1.5 complaints per 100,000 customers. The industry leader in complaints was Continental, with 41.93 complaints per 100,000 people. Federal Aviation Administration statistics show an industry-wide jump in near misses in recent years and indicate they now

"It is a rare day when we don't have one of these things occur," he said. "Incidentally, they are all happening to one major airline in a short period of time." So far it seems the incidents have not shaken the confidence of Delta customers and investors. Delta stock has remained in the $53 to $58 range it was in before the miscues. Ewing said Delta's passenger totals have not dropped measurably although the carrier announced Thursday that it would refund the price of tickets to anyone worried about flying Delta. "We felt that was only fair," said Bill Berry, a Delta spokesman. "When there has been a hurricane coming in and people are afraid to fly, or there has been any time when we feel that fear is a legitimate concern, we have been willing to make a refund."

Springs hatchery. Both hatcheries have been there for years. And Idaho Power has never taken its full water-right, leaving water to rush down the falls in a natural state. Three months out of the year, the Idaho Power hatchery is not in use.

But a new plan was in the works. The plan, proposed by Hardy and joined by the Department of Water Resources, was to use all the water to raise fish at both hatcheries, and return 50 cfs of flow through a pipe below the falls.

Wendell resident Bob Burka said, "No, enough. His voice was joined by a chorus of protesters, from Hagerman to Burley to Jerome to Sun Valley. From across the Magic Valley, literally hundreds of people showed up to support the plan and friends and relatives to Niagara Springs signed petitions and attended meetings to put the brakes on further development at Niagara Springs.

The request to reuse 90 cfs of his own water, and the request to reuse 90 cfs of water from the Idaho Power hatchery next door, and the request to claim another 115 cfs of water, were apparently three requests for the same thing.

Instead of giving the water to Hardy, Department of Water Resources Director Ken Dunn this week asked the public to take the people. He granted a request from the Idaho Parks and Recreation Department for a 264 cfs minimum stream flow from the hatchery to stretch from the threat of development.

But Dunn, whose job has been to grant nearly every water license filed because the state Constitution told him to, went one step further. He also said the Parks Department and the public had a right to a minimum stream flow from the last diversion at Niagara Springs to the confluence of the Snake River, even if it means modifying existing water rights. The amount of flow will be determined at a later hearing.

It was a thunderous decision, a ruling worthy of the roar of Niagara Springs.

"This is a case of the people winning," said Bill Reed, one of the many protesters who fought to protect the natural springs from development. "All the energy and money we put into the Trout Co. case had some value."

Reed, and her husband, Cole, and the Hagerman Valley Citizens Alert joined Edward and Ruth Shokal in opposing a similar fish hatchery expansion by Trout Co. They spent more than two years and $25,000 in legal fees.

But in 1985, the Idaho Supreme Court ruled the public had a right to water for recreation and aesthetics. And the court outlined the provisions for fish hatchery expansion by Trout Co. They spent more than two years and $25,000 in legal fees.

The ruling was a hollow victory in some respects, Reed said. Along Billingsley Creek near Hagerman, where the Reed home stands, pollution from commercial fish hatcheries has turned the creek almost to mud, she said.

"Sometimes we looked at that mess and wondered why we did it," she said Friday. "I guess this is why. This mess process."

Still, the price of victory is not cheap. Burka, Reed and others are faced with $6,000 in attorney fees over Niagara Springs, which they are hoping to raise through donations.

"In order for people to be watchdogs of the law, they have to participate, and sometimes, that means financially," Reed said.

Mrs. Ken Dunn, who accompanied her husband on his last official duty before retiring last week, said it was his "legacy to Idaho."

"He took me down there for the first time two weeks ago, and I thought, 'This is an area we need to preserve,'" she said. "In saving this, I really believe this is his legacy to Idaho."

But for one man, Bob Burka, who filed a citizen protest in 1971 to more water applications at Niagara Springs, and organized a chorus of protest in support of public interest, Dunn said he would have granted the water application to Hardy.

"Without people saying what should determine where public interest is, it is up to the director," Dunn said Wednesday after he issued his decision. "There is no question this is a turning point in the state and how it appropriates water. With Shokal versus Dunn, the state embraced public trust and outlined the duties and the responsibilities of the director."

Continued Dunn, "With this decision, I had to look at what the state had done in the past, and the impact of development of all the springs. I had to ask whether the state had adequately addressed public interest in the past, and the answer was, "No."

With this decision, the state may now look at modifying existing water rights, where there is a strong public interest. It may be that the thrown water rights into a murky void, said noted water rights attorney John Rosholt.

"This adds the validity of vested water rights if the public has conflicting interests," Rosholt said last week.

While the decision he said comes at a good time, since the adjudication of the Snake River is just getting under way, it still is a major case of concern.

"There is some fear that it could undermine water as a property right," he said. "Development could be allowed because people will not interfere if there is uncertainty. I am hopeful this does not create that kind of instability."

His concerns are shared by others, such as Terry L. Anderson, a professor of economics at Montana State University, and Alan Freeman, a research assistant at Utah State University.

The pair call the public trust doctrine a "free lunch" for recreationalists.

"The public trust doctrine is slowly creeping into legal decisions and legislation throughout the West," they said in a paper on the doctrine. "It has a place on the table, but it must not be used by government to exceed its established powers by circumventing individual rights in order to satisfy public interest."

Adding to the instability is a pending application before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission by Hardy's State hydroproject project at Niagara Springs. Although an adviser said earlier that Hardy probably would have enough water to develop the project should he not get his other water applications, more water would still help. And he might get it through the federal government.

A month ago, Dunn denied a water application by Hy-Tech Co. of Lewiston to develop a hydro project at Elk Creek near Moscow, Idaho, as at Niagara, he ruled the public benefits likely to result from the project did not outweigh the public interest in preserving the site.

But Dunn reacted angrily last week. "I am here to tell you I do not agree with FERC," he said. "I think the federal government simply must recognize the rights of the state to administer its water rights."

The Elk Creek decision or the Niagara Springs decision, or both, could be the beginning of a test over state rights versus federal rights regarding water that could go as far as the U.S. Supreme Court.

The Niagara Springs decision also has emboldened Burka to go after another creek ruined by development, Crystal Springs, where the Army Corps of Engineers recently built a new diversion and expanded a fish hatchery.

There again he may be joined by the Parks Department in trying to preserve a spot for the people.

Todd Graff, a planner for state parks, said Friday the department was seriously looking at the Crystal Springs issue.

Public trust, public interest, state rights, federal rights, and what looks to be major court battles both on the state and federal level. All because one man, Earl Hardy, filed one request too many at Niagara Springs.

Commerce secretary remembered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Friends and colleagues remembered Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige on Saturday as a dedicated public servant, a strong proponent of free trade and a man with a special love for the American West.

"The nation has suffered a great loss with the tragic and untimely death of Secretary Malcolm Baldrige," President Reagan said in a statement. "Under his stewardship, the Department of Commerce played a key role in the rebirth of our country's prosperity and of us owe a great debt to Mac Baldrige."

"He was a loyal member of the Cabinet whose common-sense wisdom and counsel I relied on often and deeply valued," Reagan said.

"Mac and I shared a special affinity for the West and I will greatly miss his friendship."

Baldrige, 64, a successful businessman before joining the Reagan Cabinet, died in Walnut Creek, Calif., hours after the burst of a pipe was riding while steel roping fell on him. He was preparing for a rodeo scheduled Saturday evening.

"I feel like I've lost a brother. I loved the guy," Vice President George Bush said through his press secretary, Steve Hart.

Baldrige headed Bush's campaign for president in the 1980 Connecticut primary and was expected to play a role in Bush's 1988 effort. His appointment in 1981 was seen widely as a gesture to Bush.

Nevada — Mostly sunny and warm with slight chance of an afternoon or evening thunderstorm east today and Monday. High temperatures in the middle 80s to upper 90s. Lows in the middle 40s to upper 50s. Southwest winds 15 to 20 mph east this afternoon.

Summary:
Low temperatures Saturday morning were mostly in the 40s and 50s. Lewiston had a balmy 67 degrees in the morning for the warmest location and Grace was the coolest reporting station with 41 degrees.

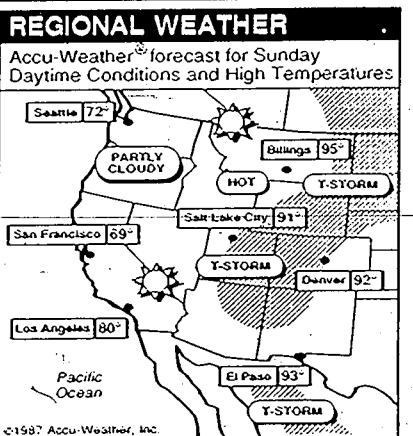

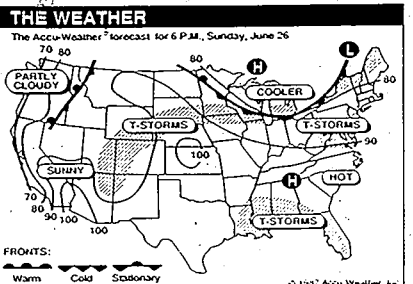

Thunderstorms moved across the Panhandle produced heavy showers over some parts with Lewiston reporting 12 of an inch.

The warmest temperature in the state Saturday was 92 degrees at Sunnyside, while Grace reported the low of 41 degrees.

The agricultural forecast for Southern Idaho shows conditions for field work and haying will be very good for the southwest and good in the southeast. Brief delays will be possible in the east from afternoon and evening thunderstorms. Precipitation will be spotty and brief but localized amounts could total up to one-quarter of an inch. Irrigation demands will be above normal through the period. Winds for spraying will be south to south west near 10 miles an hour.

The extended forecast for Southern Idaho — Tuesday through Thursday, isolated afternoon and evening thunderstorms east, otherwise fair and warm. Highs in the upper 80s to the mid-90s. Lows in the low 50s to the low 60s.

Elsewhere in the nation Saturday.

The highest temperature was 114 Laughlin, Nev. The lowest was 39 degrees at Hullehead City, Ariz. and degrees at Truckee, Calif.

or near the gulf as minesweepers, although several ships have hit mines on their way to Kuwait ports this year.

Arab and Western diplomatic sources in the gulf region said the U.S. Navy is likely to fly helicopters equipped with sonar ships to sweep the waters ahead of future convoys.

Cmdr. Daniel J. Murphy Jr., captain of the USS Kidd, said in an interview that "our capability to spot a moored mine is very poor."

"The U.S. Navy, like all navies, is designed for the prevention of integrated force," he said. "We have capability in detecting mines, both from helicopters and from minesweepers, but we don't have any of those things here."

Asked why, he answered: "I don't know."

Pentagon officials said there was little doubt that Iran planned the mine that hit the Bridgeton hit, but Tehran has not claimed responsibility. The Bridgeton hit the mine 120 miles south of Kuwait off Farsiyah Island, a staging point for naval attacks by Iranian Revolutionary Guards.

hand. A graduate of Yale University with a major in English, he was president of Sevcill Inc., a large manufacturing business in Waterbury, Conn., before joining the Reagan Cabinet in January 1981.

Baldrige came down with viral pneumonia last December and was hospitalized in Albuquerque. He was flat on his back for nearly four weeks, but said in April that he had made a full recovery. He said he had quit smoking and begun jogging two miles a day.

He was one of only three members of Reagan's original 1981 Cabinet team who remain on the job; the others are Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and Housing Secretary Samuel Pierce.

"I guess it's luck of the draw," Baldrige said in April. "There have been other secretaries of Commerce who stayed longer. Herbert Hoover was the longest. He stayed for two full terms."

The intensifying trade dispute with Japan over semiconductors brought him new attention this spring and summer. Long the hawk on trade in an administration that tended to oppose action against errant trading partners, Baldrige marshaled the case in the Cabinet for stiff tariffs imposed earlier this year on Japanese electronics products.

"We want very much to have good relations with Japan," he said. "The fact that in the past not enough attention was paid to trade has led to this friction now. But that should not be other the rest of our lives. We have to be careful it doesn't."

He said the problems "can't be pushed aside," but that they must be "addressed in a straight-forward manner. And that will help both sides."

beginning with Meese on Tuesday, will testify in the aftermath of last week's somber account by Secretary of State George P. Shultz of an epic "battle royal" with White House insiders to get out the facts of the Iran-Contra diversion.

Accusing his opponents of trying to subvert the Constitution's system of checks and balances and mislead the president, Shultz said their effort to cut him out of key decisions on arms sales to Iran and diversion of the proceeds to the Contras in Nicaragua was infused with lies, intrigue and deceit.

In questioning Meese, investigators will address suspicions that the diversion in the Iran-Contra affair was intended more as a cover-up than an exercise in full disclosure.

Critics say that although Meese disclosed the diversion in an explosive news conference last Nov. 25, delays in calling in the FBI permitted stacks of potential evidence to be shredded or buried.

Meese said that while he delayed one criminal investigation linked to aid to the Contras, he did not stall another. He has rejected suggestions he should have called in the FBI earlier and said nothing he did was intended to make a cover-up possible.

Regan was White House chief of staff at the time Rear Adm. John M. Poindexter, then the national security adviser, and the late William J. Casey, then the CIA chief, battled with Shultz for influence with the president.

Weinberger, like Shultz, is known to have vigorously, but fruitlessly, opposed the plan backed by Casey and Poindexter to sell arms to Iran.

Poindexter had said he acted on his own authority and decided that in this case the "buck" stopped with the president. "It stopped here with me," president, "it stopped here with me."

 average more than one a day. Although the FAA does not keep statistics on problems by airline, company officials and consumer advocates agree Delta has a good safety record.

The FAA, however, has sent a team to Atlanta for a three-week investigation of Delta flight-training and cockpit procedures as a result of the recent mishaps. The investigators began work Friday.

The events are unrelated except that "errors" were made by pilots," said Jack Barker, regional FAA spokesman in Atlanta.

Delta has formed a volunteer committee of pilots, each with more than 20 years' experience, to review operational procedures and a similar committee to study recent glitches, but the two panels have not yet begun work.

Delta's blues started June 18, when a Delta jet and a Southwest Airlines plane nearly collided as they taxied toward each other on the same Nashville runway.

Twelve days later, the crew of a Boeing 767 carrying 205 people mistakenly cut off both engines, sending it toward the Pacific Ocean. Power was restored with 30 seconds—and less than 600 feet—to spare.

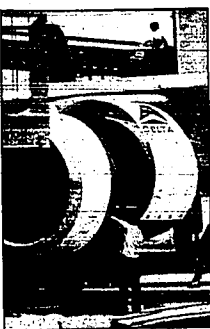

On July 7, a flight to Lexington, Ky., landed instead at Frankfort, 19 miles away. The next day, a Delta plane nearly collided with a Continental jet 31,000 feet over the Atlantic near Newfoundland. Delta was 60 miles off course and radio tapes made public later carried a discussion among pilots about not reporting the incident.

Five days later, a Delta jet landed on the wrong runway at Boston.

On July 16, a Delta pilot, allegedly acting without clearance, took off from Boston just as another plane was about to taxi across the same runway. Delta maintains its pilot had clearance.

The FAA took the blame for two Delta planes that came too close Sunday over Virginia, and Delta said one of its planes swerved sharply near Sacramento to miss a small plane that had strayed into Delta's path.

Three mishaps involving Delta

planes occurred Thursday. In Texas, one of four tires fell off a Dallas-bound Boeing 737 after takeoff from Houston's Hobby airport. The pilot landed, without incident, at Houston Intercontinental Airport, said Delta spokeswoman Jackie Pate.

In New York, a Delta Boeing 727 scheduled to land at LaGuardia Airport had problems with its wing flaps and set down instead on the longer runways at Kennedy International Airport. The diversion was routine, said Pate. "There certainly was no emergency here," she said.

And a Delta L-1011 with 267 people aboard made an emergency landing at London's Gatwick Airport, experiencing technical problems after takeoff. Airport officials did not describe the problem, and the plane, after examination, left later Thursday night for Cincinnati.

The FAA is investigating six incidents involving Delta.

"This thing feeds on itself," Ewing said.

A Delta jet took off and there was a loose pressure gasket on the galley door. For us, that's a no-go item so we returned, fixed the seal and left again. Normally that would not see the light of day (in the press).

"Then I get a call from a television station wanting to know about some passenger hanging outside the plane holding on to the door."

In a recent pilot training session at Atlanta Hartsfield International Airport, Ewing said, a student pilot noticed "stiff steering" in the nosewheel, so the plane was towed in.

"That got three TV crews out here," he said. "There is a level of hysteria here I would hate to see continue."

He acknowledged that some of the problems have been real. "We're not apologizing, we're not minimizing and we're not pointing at other airlines," he said. "Delta pilots are things."

But company leaders as well as rank-and-file workers feel Delta is being scrutinized more closely than other airlines.

"This wouldn't get written up if it happened to another airline," said a Delta operations worker drinking coffee at a cafeteria near Delta's flying headquarters.

Officials say an emergency chute popped out of a rival airliner over Seattle recently and a plane landed in Omaha after compression problems. Another used fire extinguishers to control engine trouble before making an unscheduled landing at Omaha. These events, they said, drew little publicity.

Williams recalled recent landing gear problems on an Eastern jet landing at Panama City, Panama, and a TWA jet that nearly landed in London with its landing gear up.

"To be sure, (Delta pilots) are dismayed to see the publicity," Mazor said, while adding that he didn't think there was a big morale problem.

Delta circulated a memo recently to its pilots saying in part "a snapshot . . . of unrelated in-flight incidents can neither accurately nor fairly reflect the true character of our pilot group" and urged them to not let their pride down.

Recent mishaps, near misses plague once-firm air carrier

July 18
 A Delta Air Lines Boeing 727 bound for Knoxville and a Southwest Airlines Boeing 737 bound for Chicago both roared down Runway 31 at Metro Nashville Airport from opposite directions and barely missed colliding. FAA safety inspector Curtis Wilkes says the Delta jet apparently misunderstood a controller message and thought it was given clearance for takeoff.

July 23
 The captain of Delta Flight 810 shuts off both engines of his Boeing 767-232 jet, and the plane, carrying 205 people, plunges almost 1,200 feet toward the Pacific Ocean before power was restored. The jet, bound for Cincinnati from Los Angeles, was at an altitude of about 1,750 feet when the incident occurred. The flight continued to Cincinnati. The captain was later grounded and disciplined.

July 8
 A Delta Lockheed L-1011 with equipment trouble drifts off course and passes underneath a Continental Airlines Boeing 747 at an altitude of 31,000 feet over the Atlantic near Gander, Newfoundland. The Delta jet, off course by about 60 miles, passes close enough for Continental passengers "to read the name and markings on the airplane," said Continental spokesman Bruce Illicks. The Continental flight was flying from London's Gatwick Airport to Newark, N.J. The Delta flight was bound from Gatwick to Cincinnati.

July 16
 A Delta pilot, apparently acting without clearance, takes off at Boston's Logan International as a taxiing USAir jet is about to cross the same runway. An air traffic controller spots the Delta aircraft and steps the taxiing plane, just short of the runway. Delta contends its pilot had been given permission to take off.

July 9
 A Delta baggage handler is trapped in the luggage compartment of a jet as it prepares for takeoff from Atlanta. He is rescued after passengers on Flight 1076, bound for Raleigh, N.C., hear him banging and yelling. The worker had gone into a baggage bin to retrieve a bag for a passenger while the jet was parked at a gate, but no one knew he was inside when the door was closed and

IF POISON SUSPECTED

QUESTION: What should be done if you suspect that your dog has consumed poison?

ANSWER: The veterinarian within easy reach is a godsend, for there is no time to lose. Act with all speed if your dog is to be saved. If you know the particular kind of poison your dog has eaten, take along the package. This will help the veterinarian to choose the right antidote.

If there is no time, or no veterinarian close by, you must make your dog vomit immediately.

ly. You can give an emetic like any other liquid medicine. You can use hydrogen peroxide mixed with an equal amount of water; common table salt (two teaspoons to a cup of warm water); or mustard (one teaspoon to a cup of water). Vomiting should follow in a few moments.

50 dead in Haiti land clash; dozens wounded

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Peasants demanding land reform and mobs working for landowners fought with machetes, stones and fists in a clash that killed at least 50 people and wounded many more, radio stations reported Saturday.

A group of several hundred peasants on route to Jean Rabel were ambushed by assailants, some of whom apparently were "members of former dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier's private army, the Tontons Macoutes, according to radio stations in Port-au-Prince, 150 away.

At least 50 bodies were recovered and more were visible in the ravines and countryside near the northwestern village of Jean Rabel, Radio Haiti Inter said, basing its report on information from a stranger in the village of Port-de-Paix, 25 miles away.

Radio Soleil, the Catholic Church station, and Radio Antilles said the clash occurred Friday evening, but Radio Haiti Inter said in a report Saturday night that the battle took place Thursday.

Many bodies were dismembered and scattered in ravines, making an accurate death count difficult, its report said.

Radio Soleil, which has a stringer in Jean Rabel, and Radio Antilles said at least 30 people were killed and more than 100 wounded.

Radio Lumiere, the Protestant station, quoted their correspondent in Port-de-Paix as saying 235 people died.

Further details were not available. Jean Rabel has no telephones, and angry peasants wielding machetes blocked the dirt road leading to it.

Repeated phone calls made from the capital to the hospital and police station in Port-de-Paix did not go through.

Pence performance is central jury issue

This week's quashing of 21 drug indictments issued by Twin Falls first grand jury has revealed bumbling on several fronts, but there may be a blessing in this unfortunate waste of time and money.

Because of revelations surrounding the grand jury process, Twin Falls County will be getting proper juries for the first time in about a decade.

For ten years the county, at taxpayer's expense, has been using improper jury selection procedures.

The responsibility for this fiasco lies in several quarters, but the most extensive blame lies with County Clerk Richard Pence.

It is the county clerk who, by state law, is required to put together an accurate jury list with the help of a designated jury commissioner; it is Pence, the county clerk, who in this instance who failed to do so.

Others share responsibility. Fifth District judges, who should have been more watchful, assumed Pence was doing what the law required. Given Pence's track record in other areas, they should have exercised more care.

On the other end, Pence's manner of handling and getting along with people have made an entire courthouse, including his own deputy clerks, leery of dealing with him.

To avoid a confrontation, says former chief deputy Cleo Robinson, she tried to keep up with an increasing workload without adequate help.

Pence apparently took little interest. He has spent an enormous amount of time and money out of the office, going to an endless stream of conferences, when it looks like he should have been at the office, minding the shop.

The result of this neglect was a jury pool selection system, for whom Pence is responsible, which was allowed to drift. Without monitoring, without staffing, without good communication between Pence and those around him, it fell apart. The wonder is not that this happened, but that it didn't happen sooner.

The bottom line is that no one wanted to cause a fuss over Pence and his performance in office. That is why the county is paying the price today, and why justice has not been served.

Indeed, it's not an exaggeration to say that improper juries are a miscarriage of justice. The loss of 21 drug indictments, many for relatively minor offenses, is a small price to pay for the county to once again begin offering a fair and legal court system.

The county commissioners, county clerk, county prosecutor, and judges are all partly responsible for allowing the jury-selection procedures to deteriorate into slipshod illegalities. Despite differing authorities, any one of these elected officials could have taken a more active role.

Pence's explanation follows his past behavior, in which he blames others for problems. In this instance, he says he thought the judges would tell him if they thought there was a problem in jury selection.

Apparently, he had not bothered to review, at any point, a clear state statute on the subject.

Where does the county go from here?

Pence has repeatedly demonstrated his lack of competence. He should resign: But, approaching retirement age and its pension availability, he probably will not, at least until he becomes eligible for a taxpayer-paid pension.

State law makes a recall of Pence nearly impossible. Malfeasance by a public official is grounds for a recall, but simple incompetence is not.

This is an area in which state law might be changed, as some legislators, who are privately fed up with Pence, acknowledge.

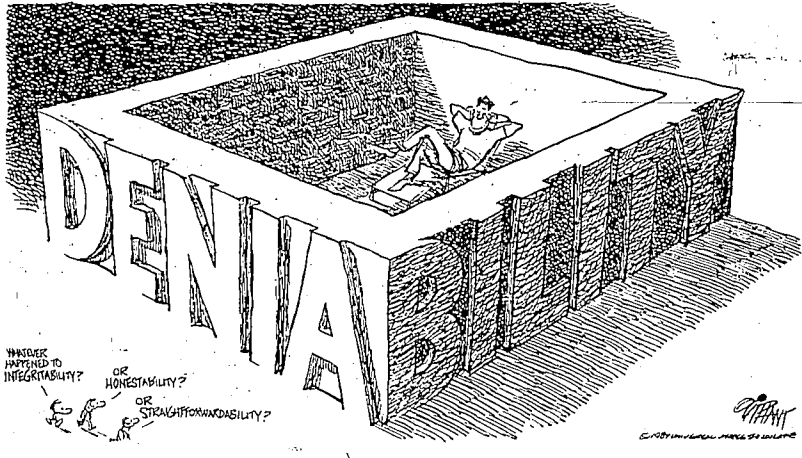

So, the county is stuck with an elected public official, perhaps until the next election, more than three years from now.

In the meantime, other county officials and responsible parties will have to develop ways to get their jobs done, and done correctly, despite Pence.

The judges have already acknowledged as much in hiring an outside jury commissioner and in setting up a parallel filing system for some court records on impending water rights cases.

If Pence's office were running as it should, some of this would not be necessary, nor would taxpayers have to bear the costs.

But that is not the case in Twin Falls County.

Management failed in clerk's office

Cleo Robinson

Since reading the articles regarding the jury selection procedure, it is difficult to read that the change to disregard driver's license lists was made by decision under Judge Theron Ward.

I am here to say that Judge Ward, Judge Daniel Harbut and Judge Dan Neelhi are there and were there to supervise the court work.

When I resigned, I received a call on how to do the jury selection and I referred her to Mr. Pence and the Idaho Code.

Now, if you want to blame someone, as I told The Times-News, blame it on me and the deputy who is now deceased.

At the time Mr. Harold Lancaster was in office, he helped and worked many hours on the driver's license lists to be included in with the registration lists.

When Mr. Lancaster left, Mr. Whitwell was there only a short time and Mr. Pence was appointed.

Under his terms in office, the work grew. I longer had Mr. Lancaster's help and I seldom saw Mr. Pence.

There were three girls in the District Court of office to manage the office, clerk two District Courts and part-time in the three Magistrate more training. Yes, we quit using the two lists because there was not time to cast out duplications, number the thousands of cards, etc.

If there is blame, do not blame the judges. Their loads are great.

I no longer work there, nor am I running for office.

Now, the clerk's office is staffed by four girls. They have the assistance of the judges' secretary, two part-time girls for the jury system, two law clerks and a lady who is helping on the administrative end.

It should be quite simple to include the driver's license lists with the registration lists, by using the computer and Social Security numbers.

It will also encourage more people to vote again. I had many tell me they did not vote because they did not want to serve on jury.

So I am glad they are changing the procedure, as they will have a better cross-section of the people. Good luck.

Cleo Robinson, former deputy clerk of Twin Falls County, lost to her former boss, Richard Pence, in the 1986 election.

Says he was harassed

I'll never forget an incident that happened to me last year. I got off work at midnight and went to a local pub for a drink. I had no sooner ordered a drink when a self-proclaimed "red neck" started to harass me because I was a "wetback."

I assured them that I was indeed a citizen, that I had two brothers that served honorably during the Viet Nam conflict and two of my uncles died in WW.II for our country. The situation was getting ugly fast and I decided to leave. I would have forgotten the whole incident except that the most violent of the two men was wearing an NRA cap.

Governor Andrus tried to pass serious anti-Aryan legislation. The NRA came to the white supremacists rescue. The vote on the legislation was a clear party line vote.

The Republican Party has tried to pass many laws that I consider favorable to the Aryans. I remember reading an article in a Nazi magazine that praised Republican candidates.

In another article that appeared in the South Idaho Press, Democratic hopeful Ed Elliot was upset because the NRA claimed that he was for gun control, an untruth. Could the NRA just be out to get Democrats?

I believe the NRA leadership preys on their members fears of being disarmed to get at our legislature.

As for us picking sides in the Andrus-NRA dispute I just have to ask myself, am I more likely to have my rights as a gun owner violated or am I more likely to be harassed by some redneck racist?

Freedoms are disappearing

Where oh where did the good, old days go? Remember when a farmer's wife could raise turkeys, chickens, geese or just eggs etc., for a little pin money in the fall? Slowly these freedoms as family farmers are disappearing. Conglomerates have taken over the raising of fowl, eggs, feed lots and dairying, until there is little for the family farm to exist on. Remember the good old separators and the cream checker?

Our people of today are out for fun of all types, and money, regardless of the sloppy jobs that are done, to earn it. We used to take pride in our work and a job well done. Now, an eye is kept on the clock, twice or three times as much is paid and so it goes.

The power companies are making so many demands on our water that we use for irrigation, one wonders where it will end. When the corporations take over all the farms, food will become as expensive as implements, gas, repairs, and cars, etc., are now. No one seems to understand this or even care, not as long as they receive a pay-check and can have lots of fun.

The areas for our wildlife to winter are being taken over by ski lifts, summer homes, golf courses etc., but who cares as long as we're having fun?

Our politicians raise their own salaries so they can have fun and a standard of living on the plush zone and can retire as millionaires, regardless of the dire straits of most of their constituents and their paying of taxes.

Our BLM and forest grounds are full of cattle and they are wanting more of them, even beautiful Stanley Lake and campgrounds has had a herd put on it.

Bigger isn't always better. Look at a lot of those hideous summer homes stuck on every hill and valley, motor homes and trailers a mile long. How about enjoying camping in a tent and cooking on a campfire? If you want the luxuries of home, stay there.

Wouldn't it be nice to be self-sufficient on your own little plot of ground again. If we could just get away from the added expense of electricity and telephones, make our own soap, butter, cheese, curcups our own meat, read by gas lanterns, have artesian wells, big gardens, chickens, eggs, etc.

I was told many years ago that the communists would take us over without firing a shot and I believe it now, while we are busy having our "fun."

What has a computer ever given us, but less jobs and more headaches?

Will arsonists be charged?

Re: your article in today's paper, July 20, 1987, by Mark Warbis of the Associated Press in Boise. This is about arsonists and the ranges and forest fires they are starting in Idaho and Oregon. You mention thousands of charred grazing lands, an expensive home, several cars and a fire engine being destroyed along with valuable timber stands.

Where did I see anything mentioned about the two lumberjacks who died in the Oregon fire.

I don't know what the priorities are here, and since I don't know much about the law, what would the arsonists be charged with if they were caught? Murder? Manslaughter? Or just a fire and possibly a paid vacation, free meals, TV, baseball games, medical, etc.? I really would like to know.

Fight the communists

As I listen to the Iran-Contra hearings and listen to the comments comparing Central America and Viet Nam, I feel we should keep something in mind. There are people that feel we should give only humanitarian aid to the Contras. There are those who believe that we should do everything we can, including sending troops. Then there are those who want us to stay completely out of the situation and let the people of Central America settle the affair on their own.

We should consider these things. One argument was that it was an internal struggle and no business of ours. Another was that just because North Vietnam was communist that didn't make them bad or inherently evil. And another was the American troops were making things worse and were the cause of needless deaths.

When I came home from Viet Nam it was popular to call veterans "baby killers." When I returned to the States all the anti-war press and the anti-war sentiments of seemingly good, intelligent people confused me. I was only 20 years old and hadn't yet seen the end result. I began to wonder if I was wrong in my wanting to support the South Vietnamese against the Communists. Maybe all those peace marches were right, our being in Viet Nam was causing needless deaths and suffering.

Then the war was over for the United States, our troops came home and the killing would stop. The peace marchers could go home and congratulate themselves on a job well-done. They said their valiant efforts had saved the people of Viet Nam. But the killing didn't stop. In South Viet Nam, Cambodia and Laos, the communist governments were killing their own by the hundreds of thousands, by the millions.

But a funny thing happened, not a sound was heard from the righteous masses. No one marched down the streets, no one flew to Hanoi, no one did anything. The people were slaughtered by the millions and all was quiet in the streets.

I knew then that I hadn't been wrong. The brave idealists who had marched in the streets were cowards, they were the true baby killers.

Once they had been assured that they or their families would not have to fight and maybe die in Viet Nam they were content. They really hadn't cared that the people of Southeast Asia were being butchered, all they had been worried about was that they might have to put on a uniform and risk their own lives. They stopped us from fighting alongside the Vietnamese and then they stopped our government from sending aid so they could defend themselves and they let the babies die. They are in truth the true baby killers.

So rather than giving veterans parades and black marble walls to salute your consciences, go home and cry for the families and the babies who were sent to their executions. Then come out of your houses and support those who are fighting the communists on our side of the ocean. The communists have always lived up to our worst expectation in the past, how can we really believe anything will be different this time.

We have to deal with this, these things have really happened. We have to remember that anywhere in the world is right next door.

In Russia, "perestroika" is changing cultural affairs

Whatever the Central Committee or the Supreme Soviet may decide — perestroika — the decentralization and democratization of decision-making — seems in practice to be making quite slow progress in the industrial sector of the Soviet economy, where it is most urgently needed.

Factory managers, used to carrying out ministerial commands and to receiving ministerial subsidies, find it hard to change their spots and make serious decisions that risk jobs for some of their workers or even the bankruptcy of their whole enterprise.

But there is one area of Soviet life in which perestroika is going ahead full steam — and, moreover, on the initiative not of the government but of those lower down who will have to live with the consequences of their own decisions.

This area is culture. Writers, musicians, painters and so on have good reason for reformist zeal.

For most of their working lives they have suffered from censorship and petty bureaucratic tutelage that is both spiritually deadening and economically ruinous.

This obstructionism is especially damaging for young artists, who have the greatest difficulty in exhibiting their first pictures or getting their first musical works performed.

To undermine the arbitrary bureaucracy that dog their lives, some leading cultural personalities have been quick to seize on Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's buzz words, "glasnost" and "perestroika."

When, for example, Elem Klimov — himself the director of several banned films — took over the chairmanship of the Film Workers' Union last year he immediately summoned a team of like-minded colleagues and set about drafting a completely new constitution for the film industry.

His proposals would sharply reduce the power of Goskino, the state authority that has hitherto directed and financed the entire film world. Instead, all studios are to become autonomous, to decide for themselves which films to mount, and to raise the funding themselves — at least after an initial "bridging" period.

This they will do by concluding purely commercial contracts with the distribution network, which will in turn deal with the cinemas.

Didn't plan to offend

To Jeanne of Burley: I didn't intend to offend anyone. In my letter, I was just trying to point out a way to the problems of unwanted dogs and I am not envious of females. I have been married to one for 49 years and I love her more each day.

I love all respected women: They were created for the benefit of God and man and most of them do. God bless the godly women.

Now animals are animals and people are people and they are in charge of dogs.

Some people are just careless and they won't change till they have to, if it cost them they will. If you spayed the female the male won't bother her, so there is no need to worry.

And the breeders will care for his or her female because he'll want a good breed for selling or what ever or profit. Now for male dogs some are good for working. My wife has a purebred blue heeler dog. He's worth his weight in gold. He does what she asks him to do, but if neutered him, he would get fat and lazy and wouldn't work most of the time.

Promoting conflict

This letter is in response to your headline on page D4 in the Tuesday, July 21, 1987 paper which read, "U.S. wins more 'G' Games gold than Soviets." I, as a reader, do not care whether or not the United States beat the Soviet Union in the medal count, what I care about is the performance of the American athletes as well as the top athletes from other countries. This headline represents the kind of "cold war" propaganda that keeps the U.S. and USSR from being friends.

I don't know if you are an amateur writer or not, but you must realize that what you write affects people. If you continue to write headlines that laud the U.S. for defeating the Soviet Union, you could create an attitude that may lead to World War III.

When the world lives in peril each day due to the prospect of destruction by nuclear holocaust, I would expect a respectable paper such as yours to attempt to bring our two powers together. For a headline I would rather see, "U.S. athletes fare well in University Games."

It is even intended that individual directors, actors and cameramen will receive personal copyrights for their contributions to the final product.

Such a provision is likely to prove hard to formulate juridically, but it reflects the high priority currently accorded to ensuring freedom and due reward for talented people.

The theater world has been undergoing a similar emancipation. Last year the Ministry of Culture announced an experiment that would allow some theaters more scope to determine their own choice of plays.

If this were successful, the new system would be extended to all theaters by 1989. Oleg Efremov, the director of the Moscow Art Theater, realized that in order to face both the risks and the opportunities offered by this experiment it would be necessary to reorganize the whole theatrical profession.

"Under the present system of cultural administration," he warned, "a new Moscow art theater would never even get off the ground."

He spearheaded efforts to establish a new Union of Theater Workers, whose electoral system was so devised as to exclude people not actively involved in the theater (that is, cultural bureaucrats) from influential posts in it.

Every branch of the new union is to have the right to appeal against "irresponsible administrative decisions" to a special conflict commission, staffed by the union's highest officials.

By comparison, the Writers Union, the best known and the oldest established of all the "creative unions," has been more ambivalent in its approach to reform.

Even here, however, certain editors like Sergei Zalygin of Novy Mir and Grigory Baklanov of Znaniya have converted their journals into bastions of relative free thinking, publishing works long banned in the Soviet Union — notably Boris Pasternak's "Dr. Zhivago," announced for next year.

There are also plans afoot to set up a cooperative publishing house.

owned by shareholders, who would elect an editorial board to decide what to publish. The grand old man of Soviet letters, Vladimir Kaverin, has sponsored the project, recalling his youth in the 1920s — the last time Russian writers were free to publish outside the state network.

The emancipation of cultural life still has a long way to go. Below the surface lie unofficial rock groups, painters whose pictures are exhibited only privately, poets who read their works in each other's apartments.

A whole bubbling alternative culture is struggling to reach an audience thirsty for the color and variety that until recently was so lacking. As an economist would say, there is no shortage of either supply or demand. "Might the example be contagious? It would be ironic if unbusinesslike painters and poets proved more adept at economic reform than the stone-faced men from the industrial ministry."

But perhaps that is why, after spending his first year in office preaching in vain to the latter, Gorbachev has now turned with such panache to the former. It could turn out to be an unexpectedly effective way of creating a public-relations success for perestroika.

Police have released this sketch of a suspect in a Salt Lake double slaying

Salt Lake police seek man in slayings case

Composite sketch of suspect made

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Police have released a composite drawing of a man sought for questioning in the shooting deaths of a South Salt Lake couple earlier this week, authorities say.

The bodies of Norman B. Armstrong, 39, and his wife, Janet Marie, 38, were discovered Wednesday evening lying face down and side by side near train tracks just south of an Interstate 80 overpass at 62nd West.

Both had been shot repeatedly with a .22-caliber firearm, said Salt Lake Police Detective Jerry Mendez.

Investigators are focusing on how the couple — who acquaintances say were unemployed, did not own a car and traveled by bus or taxi — arrived at the place they died. The site is a mile from the nearest bus stop.

A Thursday afternoon search of the Armstrong home turned up nothing suspicious, said Sgt. Don Bell.

A composite drawing distributed by police on Friday shows a white man, between 40 to 50 years old. He is described as having a heavy build and greyish brown hair and beard. He was wearing a black cowboy hat with the sides folded up.

The drawing was compiled through interviews with witnesses and other evidence, Mendez said.

The statements of relatives and witnesses lead detectives to believe the Armstrongs were shooting with a third party Wednesday at a makeshift target range near the freeway. It is the third individual whom police are seeking for questioning.

Leach, kids' abductor, is returned to prison

NAMPA (AP) — A 30-year-old Nampa man who took three children camping near Yellow Pine this past week is back in the Idaho State Penitentiary awaiting a parole revocation hearing next month.

John Leach, who was paroled from prison June 19, 1986, after a conviction for armed robbery, was arrested Thursday on a parole violation charge.

MeNeese said the Parole Commission will conduct a parole revocation hearing next month to determine whether Leach left the area without notifying his parole officer and violated other regulations. A date will be set later.

"It is very unlikely that the parole board will not revoke his parole," he said.

The three children of Angelita Vela of Nampa — Claudia Mata, 12, Erendina Mata, 9, and Clemente Mata, 8 — were with Leach when he was taken into custody on Lick Creek Road, about midway between Yellow Pine and McCall. He then was taken to the Valley County Jail and later to the penitentiary south of Boise.

Leach was convicted in September 1973 for armed robbery and sentenced to a 10-year prison term. He was released in 1986 for good behavior.

Leach picked up the three Nampa children on the evening of July 17 to spend the night with him at a Nampa home, the children's mother, Angelita Vela, said. He had become well acquainted with the family since meeting them in May.

Department of Corrections spokesman Tim McNeese said Leach will be kept in the prison for at least 18 months if his parole is revoked, McNeese said.

Ms. Vela said Leach told her the children would be returned Saturday. When they were not, she filed a missing persons report on Monday. Since being returned, Ms. Vela said her children are "all fine."

NTSB: Fault in Busch crash largely pilot's

BOISE (AP) — A federal flight agency is largely attributing pilot error as the cause of a fatal airplane crash that killed a congressman and his wife.

Pete Busch's plane crashed into a mountain in April 1986, killing three.

The National Transportation Safety Board released its probable cause this week for the crash that killed Busch, 51, his wife, Charlene, 42, and Terry Kelly, 39, of Nampa, who was seeking the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor.

The report said Busch misjudging the weather was the probable cause of the crash on Lone Pine on April 10, 1986.

It cited as contributing factors Busch becoming disoriented and lost, and failing to make adequate preflight plans. The report also cited weather — continuing rain and terrain as other factors in the crash.

A preliminary report issued in December said Busch had failed to obtain an updated weather report before he flew into a severe storm from Lewiston, en route to a political fund-raiser in Idaho Falls.

Busch was a former U.S. Marine fighter pilot who flew 450 combat missions in Vietnam, and had logged 5,000 military flight hours and 1,000 civilian flight hours as of September 1984.

Busch, who lost to U.S. Sen. James McClure in 1984, was seeking the Democratic nomination for the 1st Congressional District and a chance to run against Republican Rep. Larry Craig. He was living in Caldwell, where he had moved from Lewiston.

The preliminary report said toxicology results showed no evidence of Busch using drugs or alcohol.

Busch initially set out from Coeur d'Alene, where he obtained weather briefing from the Spokane Flight Service at 10:37 a.m. and told controllers he would fly under visual flight rules.

First Interstate logs in $652,000 quarterly gain

BOISE (AP) — First Interstate Bank of Idaho reported earnings of $652,000 during the second quarter, even though it added $1 million to its loan-loss reserve during the April-June period.

Earnings for the state's third largest bank were 19.6 percent higher than the second quarter of 1986, but down from the $1 million earnings First Interstate reported for the first quarter.

The main reason is the extra million dollars added to the loan-loss reserve, "financing" the bank's first Interstate's senior vice president and chief financial officer. "Everything else actually improved."

Ms. Orgill said the bank reduced the number of problem loans and continued to improve its efficiency. First Interstate also has increased its assets by more than 6 percent during the last year.

The $1 million addition to the loan-loss reserve is part of a program instigated by parent company First Interstate Bancorp. It reduced many of its non-performing assets, she said.

"We want to get rid of this stuff a little more quickly," she said. "We'll take deep discounts on some property. Right now Idaho is not the best market in the world."

In June 1985, First Interstate hit a record high of $15.8 million in problem loans. That total is now down 54 percent to $16.7 million, she said.

"The improvement in efficiency is a lot of little things," Ms. Orgill said. "We're trying to use our people more efficiently and cut expenses where we can. We're just trying to be smarter in the way we do our business."

In 1985, First Interstate lost almost $1 million. In 1986 it showed a $3.75 million profit. "We'll do better than that this year," Ms. Orgill predicted.

The upturn also mirrors a perceptible turnaround in Idaho's economy, she said. "It's reflective of the fact that the Idaho economy hit bottom and is starting to rebound, and of what our customers are seeing."

Popular mining town may have to be closed

CUSTER (AP) — A popular mining museum in the tiny central Idaho community of Custer will be closed at the end of the summer unless operating funds are found, the museum's director said.

The museum, started in 1959 by Edna and Arthur McGown, has been operated by the U.S. Forest Service for the past 21 years. But that funding has been cut off as the agency's budget gets tighter, Custer Museum Director Sylvia Markley said.

The loss of funding follows years of reduced financing to the museum. This year the museum only got about $8,000, or one-third of the $22,000 allocated in 1979, she said.

Ms. Markley said the museum includes artifacts from the community's past as a gold-mining boom town of the 1880s. Custer is 35 miles from Challis and 22 miles from Stanley on the old Custer Motorway.

has tried to find someone to take over the museum's operation, so far unsuccessfully. The Idaho Historical Society cannot afford to operate the museum, Ms. Markley said.

While Custer has been nearly a ghost town for three-quarters of a century, the mining museum, a treasure to Custer County and Idaho, Ms. Markley said.

She said about 11,000 people visit the museum annually, with about 80 percent of the visitors from Idaho and 20 percent from other states. The visitors have helped boost the area's economy, which has been depressed by the downturn in mining and timber industries.

Ms. Markley said the museum includes artifacts from the community's past as a gold-mining boom town of the 1880s. Custer is 35 miles from Challis and 22 miles from Stanley on the old Custer Motorway.

Marsing high school is denied services

MARSING (AP) — The new Marsing high school is set to open this fall, but city officials are refusing to provide water and sewer.

School district officials have asked the city to annex the school, which is under construction just outside the city limits.

The city officials say they don't want the school in the city limits, and have refused to allow the new building to be hooked up to city water and sewer lines.

Marsing Mayor Roy Herman said he has researched the matter, and concluded there would be no advantage to the city to annex the building.

He has asked the school board to withdraw its petition for annexation, and suggested the city and school district draft an agreement to provide water and sewer services to the new high school without actually bringing the property into the city.

The Marsing city water system can barely provide adequate water to the new school to meet the fire requirements, he said. And if water demand increased in the future, the city would be faced with more of an expense than it could afford.

Council member Harvey Grinnme said the school was attended by children both from town and surrounding farms. So he thought the problem should be addressed by the entire school district, rather than just the residents in town.

Officers voice concern about ability to detect, avoid mines

By NORMAN BLACK
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Officers aboard U.S. warships escorting Kuwait oil tankers through the Persian Gulf expressed concern Saturday about the Navy's ability to detect floating mines, while the United States sought minesweeping help from other gulf nations to ensure safe passage for future convoys. Pentagon officials said efforts were under way to enlist Kuwait and Saudi Arabia in conducting sweeps for mines in the area where the U.S.-reflagged Bridgeton on Friday hit a mine, 18 miles west of the Iranian island Farsi. "I think we want a better handle on this before we have another transit," said the official, who requested anonymity. "That's what we're working on now." Before the escort operation began Wednesday, U.S. Navy divers had joined teams from Kuwait to clear about a dozen mines discovered in the main channel to Kuwait's oil terminal. "But we've never tried to sweep in that area (where the Bridgeton was struck)," said one Pentagon source.

"There's never been cause." However, Farsi island was known to be a staging area for Iranian speedboat attacks on tankers. The officer in charge of the three-ship flotilla that provided last week's escort to the Americanized tankers said he is thankful the convoy managed to get to Bahrain safely. "One of the things I do not have the capability to do is defend against mines," Capt. David P. Vonkers said Saturday. "The mine is far and away the most difficult to defend against. Right now, certainly, I wouldn't want to go back through the area we were in yesterday." Cmdr. Daniel J. Murphy, captain of the destroyer USS Kidd, said the Navy needs to improve its ability to detect mines if it wants to operate safely through the war-torn gulf. "Our capability to spot a moored mine is very poor," Murphy said. "The U.S. Navy, like all navies, is designed for deployment of integrated forces," Murphy said. "We have capability in detecting mines, both from helicopters and from minesweepers, but we don't have any of those things here."

Nation's governors begin annual meeting

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — The nation's governors, opening their annual meeting Saturday, pressed Congress to back their welfare reform plan and recommended each state local programs to reduce dependence on welfare with new jobs and training. The National Governors' Association began its annual four-day summer meeting at this resort by Lake Michigan with most of the 49 Republican and 28 Democratic governors present or arriving Sunday. "What we're doing here is laying the foundation for the future of America's domestic policy," said Virginia Gov. Gerald Baliles, a Democrat. The governors, while asking for federal help on welfare, were focusing on what states can do to expand social programs and encourage private jobs, using the theme "Making America Work." "We're not waiting on Washington," Baliles said at a news conference opening the meetings. "It used to be Washington stood tall and tried to do what was necessary — it built the interstates, supported the students, funded the research. Today it seems that the best Washington can do is stand tall and duck." The governors followed up on major proposals approved at their last two gatherings, on ways to overhaul the nation's education and welfare systems, with a set of reports pointing to successful state programs and. They also planned to focus on problems with the nation's international competitiveness and economic disparities among the states.

GM, Ford marks approach

DETROIT (AP) — The countdown to the midnight Sept. 14 expiration of contracts for nearly a half-million workers at the nation's two largest auto companies starts this week with ceremonial handshakes. The United Auto Workers bargainers will close themselves with executives of General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. for more than a month of negotiating. The union, armed with the threat of an expensive strike, will be fighting to save jobs in an industry that is using more robots and fewer people, to financially protect thousands who soon will lose their jobs and to win a bigger share of multibillion-dollar profits. The executives will be looking for ways to increase efficiency and cut costs so GM and Ford can defend themselves against the growing encroachment of foreign grand vehicles. Talks open Monday at GM's headquarters in Detroit, where UAW Vice President Donald Epstein and an 11-member bargaining committee will represent 350,000 workers. The company's negotiators will be led by GM industrial relations Vice President Alfred Warren. The next day, Ford talks begin in Dearborn, where UAW Vice President Stephen Yokich and a 14-member bargaining committee will represent 109,000 workers. Labor relations director Stanley Surma will lead the Ford bargainers.

Klugman joins picketing at NBC central

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Jack Klugman joined the picket line for 15 minutes Friday outside one entrance to the RCA Building to support union members on strike against NBC. "More and more I'm seeing the security and dignity of our workers being taken away," said Klugman, who starred in the hit 1970s television series "The Odd Couple" and "Quincy, M.E." He is starring in the Broadway production of "I'm Not Rappaport." The 4-week-old strike by 2,800 radio and television producers, writers, audio and video technicians, graphic artists and desk assistants — a third of NBC's workforce — began when NBC imposed contract terms that the union contends are a threat to job security. Contract negotiations between NBC and the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians were called off Thursday by a federal mediator and both sides said they were far from a settlement. Wages have not been an issue.

Reagan blasts House-passed health bill, but no veto threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan charged Saturday that House-passed legislation to provide Americans with insurance against catastrophic illness would "bankrupt the elderly" and eventually run up a $20 billion deficit in the Medicare trust fund.

But while Reagan, in his weekly radio address to the nation, would have vetoed it — as he had done in a meeting with Republican congressional leaders.

"I promised Americans a plan that would protect you in your retirement years from financial devastation brought on by a catastrophic illness requiring prolonged hospitalization and medical care," he said. "I fulfilled that promise, and in the Democratic House more than tripled the costs, increased tax rates for virtually all elderly taxpayers, expanded the program so much that in about 15 years, it will run a $20 billion deficit and threaten the solvency of the entire Medicare trust fund."

"This is a fight about protecting the health of our senior citizens — not to think of it, citizens like me — and doing it in a way that doesn't bankrupt the elderly in the process," he said.

"I know all of this is upsetting," Reagan said. "Everywhere I go, I hear protests from people like you about the ways of Capitol Hill."

"I think the American people are doing a slow burn over Congress' failure to face up responsibly to the problems," he said. "and I think the public's temperature is going to rise even higher when it understands that Congress has been trifling with a plan to provide elderly Americans with insurance against catastrophic illness — a plan that can work without taxing the elderly into servitude."

Reagan quarreled with the House plan, saying the "sound, reasonable program" he proposed "has been converted into a massive program that will impose a new tax on the elderly and soon threaten to bankrupt the Medicare trust fund."

He said the program he proposed — and which the House Republican leadership sought unsuccessfully to get passed — would have limited people's annual out-of-pocket expenses for acute care services to $2,000.

"Beyond that point," he said, "Medicare would pay for unlimited physician care and time in the hospital. The cost would under $6 a month, or $70 next year, in Medicare premiums. Although the premiums as the years go by would rise to keep pace with program costs, they would remain affordable."

Noting the House's refusal to accept a plan similar to that, Reagan said the Democratic-controlled chamber instead "passed a bill that will cost over $10 billion in 1989, and nearly a $100 billion by 2005, more than three times what my plan would cost."

"The House threw out the basic affordable premium of under $6 per month, and replaced it with a surtax on beneficiaries' income tax of up to $300 a year," he said. "That means an elderly person with a $6,000 to $14,000 income would have his or her marginal tax rates raised from 15 percent, as promised in last year's tax reform, to 22 percent in a single year, and by 1992, to 28 percent."

"By 1995, the costs will be great, they will threaten the entire Medicare trust fund," he said. "And just after the start of the next century, in the year 2005, there will be a $20 billion shortfall."

The legislation passed by the House would bring about the broadest expansion of Medicare benefits in the 22-year history of the Great Society program enacted during Lyndon B. Johnson's presidency.

Sixty-one Republicans joined 241 Democrats in supporting it.

In contrast to Reagan's proposal, the House version would add a prescription-drug coverage benefit, and administration officials have said this could prove costly. Also under the House bill, the out-of-pocket expenses would be lower than under the Republican plan, $1,043 for

of-increases in beneficiaries' monthly premiums, the coverage envisioned by the House would be collected by the IRS through a supplemental premium contained in a surtax on the elderly's income taxes.

N.J. senator faults Reagan's budget plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., on Saturday accused President Reagan of juggling the nation's economy by raising defense spending while cutting federal funding for local government programs.

"The government owes more than $1 trillion," said Lautenberg, who delivered the Democratic response to Reagan's weekly radio address. "That's twice what we owed when this president took office."

Lautenberg said the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law would

Bennett: Iran-Contra a farce

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary William Bennett on Saturday accused the Iran-Contra investigating committees of pursuing "venal ends, petty ends, and political ends" in an attempt to discredit the Reagan administration.

In the first counter-attack mounted by a Cabinet member, Bennett called the congressional hearings a complex morality play in which the motives of the accused were better than those of their accusers.

"There's a difference between people who are trying to do the right thing in an important cause, such as freeing the hostages, and those who are . . . out after the president or out to sabotage our important policy of aid to the Contras," Bennett said in an interview with columnist Robert Novak and Rowland Evans on Cable News Network.

10,000 run from liquid spill

AVON, Ind. (AP) — A flammable chemical spilled at a Conrail train yard Saturday when steel rods knocked a hole in a railroad tanker, forcing the evacuation of more than 10,000 people and injuring seven, authorities said.

The spill at Conrail's Avon Yard occurred about 7 a.m. when the steel slipped from a flatbed car and ruptured the tanker coupled behind it, fire officials said.

More than 10,000 people from a two-mile by three-mile area around the site were evacuated, said Tom Drake, assistant chief of the Brownsburg Fire Department who was at the scene.

Fire officials identified the chemical as acetalddehyde, a colorless liquid used to form other chemicals, and said its fumes are flammable and corrosive. The fumes can irritate eyes, nose and skin.

By late morning five railroad employees and two residents had been taken to Indianapolis hospitals and four Wayne Township firefighters had been treated at the scene.

Church annoints AIDS victims

CHICAGO (AP) — A series of anointing services for victims of AIDS and other severe illnesses will be a "heating of emotional wounds," a Roman Catholic priest said Saturday.

The sacrament, formerly called extreme unction or last rites, was to be offered in an hour-long service Saturday night at Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church, said the Rev. Thomas Healy, the church's pastor.

The Chicago archdiocese then plans to offer the service every three months, rotating among Mount Carmel and four other North Side Catholic parishes, Healy said.

It takes more to play Pippi than pigtails and freckles

The Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Tami Erin "radiates sunshine" and that's why she was chosen from 8,000 applicants to play the role of Pippi Longstocking, says the film's director.

"I've created from a very shy little girl a very self-assured bright young lady," said veteran director Ken Annakin. "I think she'll be a great big star."

The pigtailed, red-haired, freckled-face Tami plays the title role in the motion picture, "The New Adventures of Pippi Longstocking."

"It is very, very, very, very much fun!" bubbled Tami as she discussed her movie role in a recent interview.

Pippi Longstocking, created by Swedish author Astrid Lindgren, is the story of a spirited young girl who lives by herself in a 100-year-old house called Villa Villekulla. Both of her parents are dead, but she maintains contact with her mother in heaven through a hole in the clouds.

The cast, which also includes Dick Van Patten, Eileen Brennan, Dennis Duggan and John Schuck, finished nine weeks of filming in Fort Lauderdale and Jacksonville last week. The movie is scheduled for release next spring by Columbia Pictures.

cluded in that deal was a two-year option to buy the additional 135 acres.

Brainerd said Hart told her he wanted the extra land "for privacy" and because "it really should go with the house."

Hart, a former U.S. senator from Colorado and the early favorite for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination, withdrew from the race May 2 — less than a week after reports linked him romantically to Miami model Donna Rice.

In addition to Hart's personal debt to Beatty, Hart's campaign is still $1.3 million in debt from his 1984 push for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Perfume company adds feminine touch to board

MINNETONKA, Minn. — Feminists like to smell good, too, or so says Gloria Steinem, who joined the board of directors of the company that produces Obsession cologne.

Steinem, 53, co-founder and editor of Ms. magazine, was elected Friday to the board of the Minnetonka Corp.

Steinem said she believes Minnetonka asked her to become a director because the vast majority of its consumers are women, yet it did not have a woman on its board.

The controversial Obsession ad advertisements, which feature nude models in sensuous poses, cause no problems for Steinem as a feminist.

Ms. magazine runs the Obsession ads," she said. She said the ads are unusual because the men and women pictured are "equally vulnerable. It's not about violence or domination. It's about sensuality."

Hart takes new plunge into personal debt pool

DENVER — Gary Hart and his wife, Lee, borrowed $265,000 from movie star Warren Beatty to buy 135 acres next to their mountain home.

The money represents all but $5,000 of the price of the land, according to Jefferson County real estate records.

The land was sold to the Harts on July 15 by Ruth C. Brainerd of Denver for $270,000, the records show.

Brainerd sold the Harts their Kiltredge home in 1985 for $170,000. In-Allicia suffers from biliary atresia, a fatal liver disease. She will undergo a liver transplant as soon as a donor is found.

"There's times when you have to do things out of the normal routine of making a living," Skaggs said before going on stage to a standing ovation.

Skaggs performed on a donated stage in the middle of a 60-acre field Friday as the main event in a four-day festival called "Allicia's July Jam."

Organizers of the festival are hoping it will raise $100,000 toward their goal of $200,000. The money will be used for Allicia's medical bills.

The festival will continue throughout the weekend.

They take parking laws seriously in Delaware

HARRINGTON, Del. — Delaware on Governor's Day.

Gov. Mike Castle's car was parked illegally at the Delaware State Fair during Governor's Day and it had to be towed.

The 1987 Lincoln Town Car was parked on the fairgrounds Thursday instead of in the designated parking area. Parking attendants treated it as they normally would an illegally parked car, said fair General Manager F. Gary Simpson.

The "Delaware-1-Governor" plates Castle sometimes uses were covered by regular license plates.

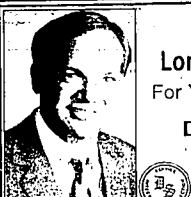

Castle's chief of staff, Michael Hatchette, said the governor "told me, 'It's not easy being governor. They give you your own day, then they take away your car.'"

One difference remained, though: Simpson promised to pay for the tow.

PTL founder tables plans for new ministry while he moves

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Former PTL head Jim Bakker says he's put the plans to start a new ministry on hold while he concentrates on moving out of his desert home.

"Our main priority is to get our family back together," Bakker said Friday as he loaded a moving van parked in the driveway of the Spanish-style estate he and his wife, Tammy Faye, are vacating.

"We have no plans to start a new ministry right away. We have no cameras and no money," he said.

Bakker said he and his wife will be leaving for Gallatin, Tenn., where the couple has taken up residence, in the next few days.

Appearing relaxed as he spoke with reporters gathered outside the house, Bakker refused to comment on a document filed this week in bankruptcy court that showed he paid himself $1.3 million and lent himself $180,000 during his last year as head of PTL, an evangelical empire including the TV ministry and the Heritage Village USA resort at Fort Mill, S.C.

Bakker also paid his wife $137,018 and secretary Shirley Fulbright $193,058 between June 1986 and June 1987, according to the 545-page document.

Many of the payments were made in the weeks before and after March 19, when he was head of PTL after disclosing that he had committed adultery seven years before.

Bakker, who said recent weeks have been "like we went through a plane crash," added he hasn't spoken recently with the Rev. Jerry Falwell, Bakker's former PTL Praise The Lord or People That Love — over to Falwell, but then accused Falwell of betraying him.

When the story broke, hordes of journalists descended on the quaint little house in this New York City suburb where Miss Hahn rented a top-floor apartment.

They stayed, for days, photographing her as she played with her dog, Missy, or as she cried while she begged them to leave. Each time the PTL controversy blossomed, the journalists returned.

"I don't think he wants to talk to me," Bakker said of Falwell.

In Fort Mill, S.C., Falwell said Friday that he cut off a PTL fund-raising telephone because of hate mail and prank calls, but has not stepped up security.

Unless the ministry raises $1,748,000 by Friday, workers will be laid off and operations at the Heritage U.S.A. Christian theme park will be curtailed, he said.

Falwell said PTL's filing for bankruptcy protection, the Bakkers' emergence from seclusion and "national press furor" cut donations in June to $2.4 million, half of the ministry's operating costs.

He said unless the PTL raises money fast through loans and donations, "we could lose our network."

Hahn ends isolation; takes her tale public

WEST BABYLON, N.Y. (AP) — Jessica Hahn, jolted from her quiet life as a church secretary by the PTL scandal, has moved into the fast lane, telling her story to Playboy and making million-dollar book and movie deals.

Miss Hahn's attorney, Dominic Barbara, said his client, who is staying at a Manhattan hotel courtesy of Playboy, stands to receive at least $2.5 million through the deals.

The Playboy story, which will appear in the November issue, will detail Miss Hahn's tryst with television evangelist Jim Bakker in a Florida hotel room in December 1980.

Barbara would not elaborate on the other deals being arranged for Miss Hahn, who made a five-day trip to Hollywood at the end of last month.

Bakker claims he was blackmailed by Miss Hahn and her advisers over the encounter, which led to his res-

Sessions would inherit an agency under renewed scrutiny

By PETE YOST
The Associated Press

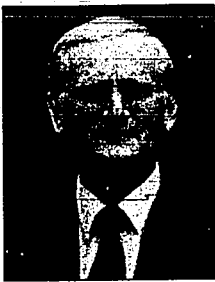

WASHINGTON — If William S. Sessions wins Senate confirmation as FBI director, he will inherit an agency suspected of protecting the White House in the Iran-Contra affair and of harassing opponents of the administration's Central American policies.

Sessions's predecessor, William Webster, succeeded in maintaining excellent relations with Congress and in building a reputation for personal integrity that reflected on the bureau and its 9,100 special agents.

But Webster's recent confirmation hearings to become CIA director brought to light embarrassing disclosures about the FBI's involvement with fired National Security Council aide Oliver North.

For example, North acknowledged two years ago to an FBI agent that he was involved in directing private fund-raising operations for the Congress fighting the leftist government of Nicaragua and that he was informing President Reagan of his efforts.

But a teletyped summary of the agent's interview never made it to FBI headquarters a few miles away

WILLIAM S. SESSIONS
FBI director-designate because it was garbled and was never transmitted.

North dealt frequently with one of Webster's top aides, Oliver Revell, on counter-terrorism matters and then got Revell to agree to intercede with the U.S. attorney's office in Philadelphia on a criminal matter.

Revell telephoned the U.S. attorney's office, but did not intercede because the appearance of a grand jury witness who was assisting Contra fund-raising efforts had already been postponed. It was one of a number of times North tried to inject himself in criminal investigations that directly or indirectly involved the Contras.

"The FBI did not perform well when it came to Oliver North," Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said in an interview. "They had information in July 1985 that could have saved the president and this country a lot of grief, but they didn't use it."

Specter is a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, which reviewed Webster's nomination for the CIA, and is on the Senate Judiciary Committee, which will review the nomination of the new director-designate of the FBI.

The senator supported Webster to head the CIA, calling him "a guy with an extraordinary record," but Specter said that whoever becomes new FBI director "must learn from the mistakes of the past."

Webster has said there were "individual allegations that on examination and 20-20 hindsight we might have done differently." But he instated that none of North's attempts to influence FBI investigations had resulted "in any change in our investigative patterns."

The FBI appears recently to have stepped up the pace of its interviews that have been under way for the past few years of American supporters of the Sandinista government in Nicaragua.

The FBI defends the inquiries as part of its responsibility to protect domestic security or to carry out its foreign counter-intelligence function.

While the FBI insists the interviews are not being conducted for political reasons, Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., says they carry the "odor of harassment." He plans to hold public hearings. A constitutional rights group has filed two lawsuits against the FBI and the U.S. Customs Service over what it regards as harassment.

The Carter administration's Justice Department has issued guidelines to keep the FBI within the Constitution in its investigations of individuals and groups representing a danger to domestic security. Re-writer guidelines issued by the Reagan administration gave the bureau much more latitude.

Webster's nearly 10-year tenure as head of the FBI has been marked by great change.

Under the former federal judge, the bureau has moved aggressively into such sensitive areas as labor racketeering, political corruption, organized crime and drugs.

The FBI was exposed to allegations of entrapment after it completed the highly successful Abscam corruption probe that netted a U.S. senator, six congressmen and a number of local politicians. The courts ultimately vindicated the bureau's tactics.

Under Webster, agencies involved in wrongdoing have faced criminal charges, rather than being dismissed without disclosure of their illegal behavior as was the policy during the 10-year tenure of J. Edgar Hoover.

More than a dozen agents have been charged with crimes and improper conduct during Webster's directorship, including one for espionage. Another is accused of telling lies that for nearly a year shelved the planned prosecution of Teamsters union President Jackie Presser.

There have been other changes as well at the FBI.

Webster has had some success in attracting blacks and women to an agency which in Hoover's day was an all-white male enclave. There now are 722 women who are, special agents, 370 blacks and 367 Hispanics. The numbers show improvement, but less than Webster would have liked. There were 94 women, 144 blacks and 155 Hispanics when he came on board.

If confirmed, Sessions, a federal judge from Texas, will become the fourth director, following Hoover, Clarence Kelley and Webster. William Ruckelshaus and L. Patrick Gray served as acting directors.

Decade-long increase in crime levels predicted

By PETE YOST
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The FBI's national crime index rose 6 percent last year to the highest point since 1981, the government reported Saturday, a development some researchers say may signal rising crime levels for the rest of the decade.

The total number of serious offenses reported to police was 13.2 million in 1986, with violent crime up 12 percent from 1985 and property crime up 6 percent. FBI crime levels have now risen for two straight years, with increases in 1986 in 44 of the 50 states.

In 1981, the FBI index's peak year, 13.4 million crimes were reported. There was a 15 percent jump last year in aggravated assaults, which rose more than 100,000 to 834,000. The number of burglaries and larceny-thefts was up nearly half a million last year, to 10.5 million.

Some of the increase can be attributed to a greater willingness by citizens in recent years to report crime, but it also may suggest that there is more crime overall, reversing the downward trend that began six years ago.

A government survey of households earlier this year showed that crime generally — whether reported to police or not — remained relatively stable last year. But the survey also showed slight increases in robberies and burglaries.

There has been some increase in the rate at which people report crime to the police, "but that can't possibly account for the large and widespread increase in reported crime," said Alfred Blumstein, dean of the school of urban and public affairs at Carnegie-Mellon University.

"We may well be seeing the start five years early of the increase that many of us anticipated would begin in the 1990s," added Blumstein.

Researchers have predicted that crime levels would increase next decade as children of the baby-boom generation moved into increasing numbers into the most crime-prone age group of late teens and early 20s.

Crime levels are on the rise and the criminal justice system hasn't been able to deal with the problem, said Charles M. Friel, dean of the college of criminal justice and director of the criminal justice center at Sam Houston State University in Huntsville, Texas.

Prison overcrowding and early release of violent offenders has led to some probation and parole officers being beset with caseloads of 300 offenders or more. The result, said Friel, is "a breakdown in proper supervision" which increasingly puts "the public at risk. The policy-makers have to come to grips with this problem, and they haven't."

According to the FBI's new figures, more than a third of all serious offenses reported to police were committed in the South last year, where crime levels moved up a substantial 10.1 percent from 1985.

Crime was up 2.6 percent in the Northeast, 1 percent in the Midwest and 5.8 percent in the West.

Crime was up 6 percent in suburban counties, 4 percent in rural counties and 7 percent in the cities.

Lonetree family pushes Indian cause

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — The family of a Marine sergeant charged with giving U.S. secrets to his Soviet spy friend has turned his case into a struggle for Indian rights.

Clayton Lonetree, a 25-year-old part Navajo and part Winnebago from St. Paul, Minn., is yet another Indian victim of lies by the federal government, relatives say.

The government contends Lonetree, the first Marine ever charged with spying, turned state secrets after being seduced by a Soviet woman who worked in the Moscow embassy while he was a guard there.

But Lonetree's lawyers, headed by famed trial counsel William Kunstler, say the Marine fell deeply in love with the woman, an embassy employee, but did not betray his country.

The defense suffered a defeat last week when the military judge presiding at Lonetree's court-martial refused to release classified testimony that allegedly would help prove Lonetree's innocence.

Navy Capt. Philip P. Roberts accused the defense of engaging in a "fishing trip."

Kunstler and colleague Michael Stuhf allege that the testimony would show that security in American embassies throughout the world is lax and that the female employee in the Moscow incident had not been adequately screened.

They also contend that Lonetree was isolated and vulnerable in the foreign post because of his race.

Lonetree's family have agreed with this, some of them reluctantly.

Telephone calls to a Quantico base spokesman for comment went unanswered Saturday.

"Indians are poor, but at times like this we stand together," said Sam Lonetree, the defendant's 72-year-old grandfather.

"They say he betrayed his country. How could this be? This is his country," the elder Lonetree told reporters during a break in the trial, which opened Wednesday.

In addition to the grandfather, Lonetree's father, mother, grandmother and aunt have attended the trial's opening sessions.

Senators ready to press Bork on privacy, race, due process

By JAMES H. RUBIN
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork may have less freedom than his predecessors in sidestepping tough questions put to him by the Senate, where his appointment is seen as possibly tipping the ideological balance.

Some senators, complaining of evasiveness by past high court nominees, say too much is at stake this time to settle for less than candor.

"This is an especially important matter," Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said in an interview. "This is a unique situation. There are very important questions that must be answered."

Specter, a moderate Republican, is a swing vote on the Senate Judiciary Committee, which is to begin hearings on the Bork nomination Sept. 15.

He disclosed that he held an 80-minute meeting with Bork last week to explore the nominee's views on numerous issues. He said he hopes to meet with Bork again privately. "I don't want just a courtesy call," Specter said.

ANALYSIS

He added that Bork was willing to talk about his judicial philosophy, while making a distinction between that and his political ideology.

The senator said among the subjects discussed were Supreme Court cases dealing with privacy rights, free speech and expression, racial discrimination and due process rights for accused criminals.

Specter, who lists himself among the undecided on the nomination, said Bork "is a very intelligent man, an accomplished scholar."

But, he added, "He has very strong and very different views. His views go far beyond harsh criticism of the Warren Court."

The Supreme Court under the leadership of Chief Justice Earl Warren was distinctly liberal and activist, handing down a host of decisions from 1953 through 1969 that expanded civil and privacy rights and the rights of criminal suspects.

The staunchly conservative Bork, a federal appeals court judge since 1982 and a former law school professor, has decried "imperialistic" judges who seek to impose their own views rather than interpret the Constitution and laws. In extensive writings, he has said judges generally should defer to Congress and state legislatures.

But in several recent interviews with the news media, Bork has portrayed himself as a man of flexibility.

He said he is "kind of in favor of traditional values" but is "not hung on them. I'm not an absolutist in these matters."

Also, he said, "My record will show the decisions don't line up on any political axis."

The twin issues of Bork's ideology and his forthrightness in discussing his views will figure prominently in the confirmation process.

Some senators engaged in preliminary debate last week over the Senate's role in scrutinizing Bork's politics.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden, D-Del., expected to lead the fight against the nomination, said Bork's political outlook is fair game.

Others, led by Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said senators should stick to Bork's intellectual and professional qualifications and matters of personal integrity.

Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., a Reagan administration ally with a knack for the pungent and homespun quip, suggested the battle over ideological issues will take on a troupe-like atmosphere.

"It's going to be a little like riding Brahman bulls around here," he said.

Early indications are that the fight over the nomination will go down to the wire. Republicans and Democrats agree that the Senate appears to be evenly divided.

That means that Bork's handling of questions when he testifies before the Judiciary Committee, and the impression he makes on undecided senators, could be crucial.

Specter complained a year ago that Reagan's Supreme Court nominee Antonin Scalia, who breezed through to unanimous confirmation, was evasive.

"I was concerned that he answered so few questions," Specter recalled. But Specter noted that Scalia was filling a vacancy on the

Much more is at stake now because Bork would replace retired Justice Lewis F. Powell, a moderate and a swing vote in many cases.

Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland said Bork can be expected to be more responsive than was Scalia.

The Senate has a mixed tradition in weighing the political leanings of high court nominees but generally it has been off limits to ask candidates about subjects that might come before the court.

Both sides in the battle over Bork's nomination can find ample precedents when they either insist on straight answers or argue that the nominee should not be put on the spot unfairly.

Jackson rips Reagan; calls for unity

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Jesse Jackson, citing his aim of being the conscience of the Democratic Party, urged his fellow Democrats Saturday not to abandon women's rights or the struggle for equality in South Africa in their quest for the presidency.

Jackson, the first of a string of Democrat presidential aspirants or their representatives to address the Southern National Democratic Committee conference, also accused the Reagan administration of violating the law Saturday and called on fellow Democrats to heal the party's wounds.

"I endeavor to be the conscience of our party," said the civil rights activist. "I will not forsake women. I stood alone in 1984 and called for a woman to be put on our ticket."

Nor would he forsake South Africa and its struggle to be free, he said.

Jackson warned other Democratic presidential hopefuls that "our party must never have a moral deficit" and challenged the party to address these issues.

Turning his attention to the current administration, Jackson said

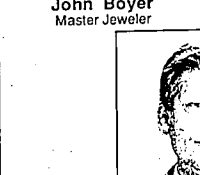

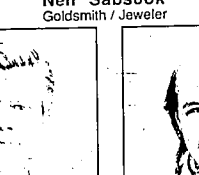

President Reagan's years have been characterized by scandal and flagrant violations of the law.

"This administration will violate the law with contempt-of-Congress and is flaunting that now," said Jackson, who ran unsuccessfully for his party's presidential nomination in 1984 and is expected to be a candidate this time.

He said the administration's handling of the Iran-Contra arms sales is a prime example of President Reagan's failure to abide by the law.

INS slates leniency period to learn statute

By PAT MARGANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Employers have been given a year to learn the ropes of the new immigration law, which makes it illegal to hire illegal aliens.

Despite the delay in enforcement, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service still means business about the new law, say INS officials.

INS District Director Marvin Mohrman of Helena, Mont., said there is a danger that employers will construe the lag as a slap on the wrist and continue to hire illegal aliens. But the majority of employers will comply.

"I really think most people are honest," he said.

A rebel against knowingly hiring illegal aliens was a major provision of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986. Under previous immigration laws, it was only illegal to smuggle aliens into the U.S.

The purpose of the sanctions in the new law was to dry up the jobs that attracts millions of aliens to illegally enter the U.S. each year.

Enforcement-wise, the INS has been in kind of a suspended animation since the act was passed last year.

"I don't think we have conducted any employer raids, we call them surveys, since the law passed," said Mohrman. "We did not want to be arresting people who were eligible for legalization."

Aliens who have resided illegally in the U.S. since before Jan. 1, 1982 may be eligible for permanent legal status under another major provision of the new law.

But another reason for not holding the raids was to give employers an opportunity to become familiar with the law, Mohrman said.

Special Border Patrol Agent, Dale Clairborne of Boise, said, "If people do not have all the information, it is preferable to expect them to comply. Word is getting spread and we are sending out information and meeting with people all the time. And, it would behoove them not to get the idea that this law does not have any teeth. We are not going to give them a freebie. We are working with them."

While this is the year of education, 1988 will be the year of the citation.

Between June 1, 1987 and May 31, 1988, a citation will be issued to those employers who are not complying with the law. But the citation will be issued only after "informational contacts" have been made and it has been established an employer has not followed the rules after he has received information about the new requirements, according to the INS.

A graduated scale of penalties will be phased in after the employers have been informed of the new requirements, provided with the required forms to certify the legal and employment status of new employees and given one warning, states the INS.

Once the education period is passed, employers found in violation of the law face penalties ranging from $100 for failing to file the required forms on new hires to $10,000 for every unauthorized worker he knowingly hires.

If a pattern or practice of knowingly hiring or continuing to employ illegal aliens is proven, employers face fines up to $3,000 per worker or six-months imprisonment per worker.

From June 1, 1987 through Nov. 30, 1988, employers will not be penalized for hiring multiple seasonal agricultural workers. During that period, however, employers may be penalized for hiring illegal aliens located outside the U.S.

The full brunt of the employer sanctions with respect to agricultural workers will not begin until after Dec. 1, 1988.

"The idea is not to hurt the employer or agriculture employee. It gives the employer time to readjust to having an over abundance of people," Clairborne said.

Mohrman said he hopes there will be no citations because that will mean people are obeying the law.

Clairborne, who is working to educate employers about the new law, said the real danger may lie with the employers who do not realize that the law apply to them.

The law requires employers both large and small, public and private to certify whether new employees are legal residents. The law does not prohibit just to agricultural-related businesses.

From what he has seen, there is a

Farmers told to cut back on tilling

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Farmers who till their fields less or not at all can save themselves money in lean times, achieve good crop yields and reduce pollution of creeks and rivers.

That was the message on a U.S. Soil Conservation Service tour of the Twin Falls area Thursday.

SCS shepherded a busload of farmers, state and federal officials to farms using the methods that Dr. Dave Carter of the U.S. Department of Agriculture says cut erosion and sediment loss to near zero.

Farmers who do a minimum of tilling can cut sediment losses by 60 to 80 percent and in some cases by 90 percent, said Carter says. One of the stops on the tour was USDA-managed fields in Kimberly.

"We have had no cases where yields have been dropping with minimum till methods," Carter said standing by a bean field.

John Breckenridge of Twin Falls says the cost of tilling fields conventionally is more expensive than the no-till method but he says he is neither positive nor negative on the practice until he compares crop yields on the till and no-till fields.

Breckenridge planted two fields west of the Magic Valley Mall in fall barley. Prior to barley he grew alfalfa there.

One field was tilled conventionally and the other Breckenridge used the no-till method.

The no-till stand of barley was not as tall as the stand tilled conventionally, he told the tour during a pause by his fields.

Breckenridge says he recognizes more soil is retained in the no-till method and says that this benefit is self-evident but he says this benefit is worth.

"The no-till is easier to do but it is more difficult to irrigate the field because of the debris left to work normally be cleared by plowing."

Fields owned by G.D. Williams near Twin Falls Airport offered a glimpse of the results with the low-till methods.

Williams says the runoff from his corn field is 25 percent less and the field, which has problems to begin with, is yielding 60 to 75 bushels per acre.

"I have got faith in it," says Williams of the low-till methods.

He says the ground is mellow and it had been plowed, it would have been done.

Larry Meyer, who farms south of Filer, explained that the reduced tilling methods allow the bacteria and fungus to stay on top enhancing growing conditions.

"It takes less fertilizer to farm and the soil balance gets set up."

Farmers on the reduced till plan can use a plow which shatters the ground but does not turn it over, which preserves the stubble from the last crop which is good, they say, but makes weed control harder. Normally the deep plowing cuts the weeds roots, farmers say.

Most of the farms on the tour stops participate in the Rock Creek Rural Clean Water Program, which get farmers subsidies for using no-till and reduced till practices.

The program works with 225 owner-operators but is not signing any more contracts, says Mike Neubecker of SCS.

"The main thrust is working with farmers to modify contracts to add tilling," he says.

Some reasons offered during the tour on why some may resist the new methods are farmers may have

Applicants keep offices busy

By PAT MARGANTONIO
Times-News writer

BOISE — Since immigration offices opened May 6, more than 1,750 aliens in the state have received temporary-resident cards under the new immigration law.

The number of cards issued by the two U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service legalization offices in Idaho is about what was expected, said INS District Director Marvin Mohrman of Helena, Mont.

"We started off slow and now we are running to capacity," he said.

In fact, the INS legalization office in Idaho Falls is the second busiest office of its size in the northern United States, said Mohrman. Since the office opened, it has issued more than 1,000 temporary-resident cards to former illegal aliens.

The work at the Idaho Falls office is such that two additional staff members from the Helena district office were sent there, he said.

So far 750 aliens have received temporary-resident cards from the INS Boise office, Mohrman reported.

Aliens seeking legal residency status under the Legalization or Special Agricultural Worker Programs of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 are still assured one-day processing of their applications, if they come prepared with the right documents, he said.

When applicants arrive at INS legalization offices with all the required documentation and completed forms, they are interviewed and given a card on the spot, Mohrman said.

In Idaho, more aliens are now seeking status under the SAW program than legalization, he said.

The programs are basically the same, but the SAW does have advantages, Mohrman said. SAW workers, for example, are allowed to leave the country after they receive their cards.

The requirements for eligibility are also less stringent for the SAW program than legalization.

Aliens eligible for legalization must have resided in the U.S. since before Jan. 1, 1982 and provide documentation of continuous residency.

In the SAW program, aliens who have worked in American agriculture for at least 90 days between May 1986 and May 1986 or in each of the years for the past three years are eligible. The INS began accepting applications for the SAW program in June.

Mohrman reported that more aliens residing in Idaho have been applying directly to the INS than through Qualified Designated Entities, or INS-recognized groups helping aliens in the pre-application process.

Nationwide only about 10 percent of the applications arrive through QDEs, he said. In Idaho, the percentage was higher, although he did not have exact percentages.

The QDEs were supposed to act as buffers between the illegal aliens and the INS, which only months before were arresting and deporting them.

During the few months that the new immigration programs have been in place, the INS has generally found that QDEs have been both a help and hindrance.

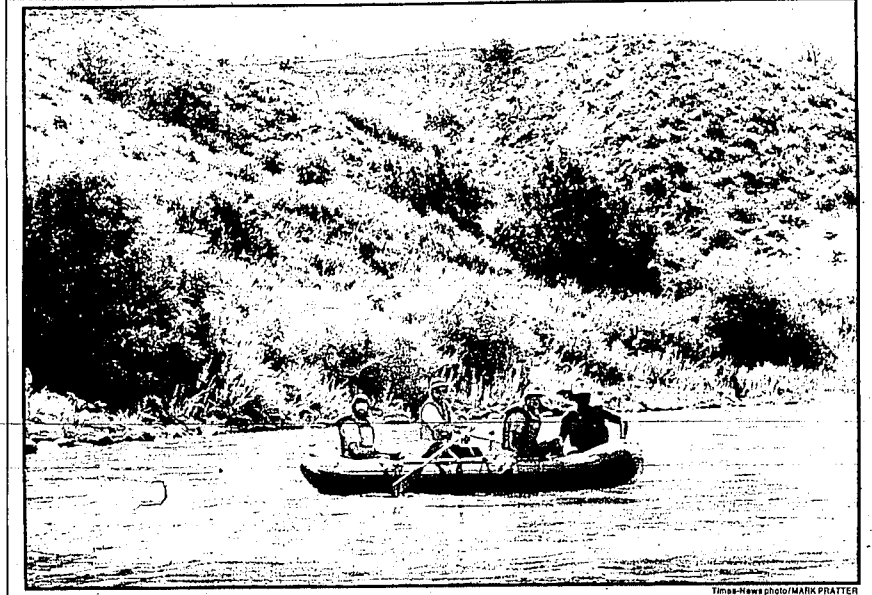

"Some started off not doing a particularly good job," Mohrman said. But he declined to identify them.

The QDEs are up now to speed with help and training from the INS, he said.

The Catholic Diocese and Snake River Farmers Association are among the QDEs designated for Idaho.

State, county and federal officials rafted the Snake River between Lower Salmon Falls dam and Bliss Bridge

State, county and federal officials rafted the Snake River between Lower Salmon Falls dam and Bliss Bridge

Reps take to rafts for impact survey

More data needed to predict effects of dam

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The proposed A.J. Wiley dam project near Bliss and seven other impoundments planned for the Snake River upstream may rob the river of hundreds of thousands of horsepower of rapids that cleanse the water by replacing oxygen, says a state Division of Environmental Stipulations.

"There is not a lot of data on water quality in the river and much more needs to be gathered before the impact of these hydro projects can be determined," Mike McMasters told state, county and federal officials on Friday. Until then, the state cannot make decisions on how the project will affect water quality, the local source control officer said.

State, county and federal representatives set out in five rafts for a first-hand look at the environmental impacts of the 84 megawatt Wiley dam to be located at one of two sites near the Bliss Bridge.

Generally, the officials from the State Department of Parks and Recreation, State Department of Fish and Game and the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, said the project raises many questions that have not been answered yet.

Other hydro projects are planned at Star Falls, Auger Falls, Milner Dam, Rialto Catfish, Milner would dwarf 1.6 miles of river, Star Falls, one-half mile and Auger Falls would create a 2 to 2.5-mile-long reservoir, said Jeff Jarvis, U.S. Bureau of Land Management hydro coordinator. BLM has concerns about the projects but has not taken a stand on them yet, he said.

Another problem is that the detention of some 24,000 acre-feet of water at the Wiley site could enhance the growth of algae in the river and even cause an algae bloom, McMasters said.

Whether that happens depends on how the facility is operated, he said. The dam project would inundate riparian vegetation which helps trap sediments from getting into the river, McMasters said.

"It's really a complex system and land-use practices affect it," he said.

The city of Tacoma, Wash., the developer of the Wiley project, says there will probably not be water quality problems because the reservoir has a rapid flushing rate and will likely maintain well-mixed water throughout the year.

The water will "contain little or no nuisance blooms of phytoplankton and generally exhibit water quality characteristics very similar to the river inflow, according to documents filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. FERC is the licensing agency of hydroelectric projects.

Tacoma says its assessment of the water quality situation is based on the dam project being a run-of-the-river, meaning the project will rely on the free-flowing river current to spin the hydro turbines.

The government representatives, who rode the rapids between the Idaho Power Co. Lower Salmon Falls dam and Bliss Bridge, stopped at sites along the way which illustrated environmental issues relevant to the Wiley project. They traded notes, took pictures and admired the wheeling blue herons that make their home on this reach of the river.

"Personally I don't see giving this up for a foreign company. Some day we may have to have it (the electricity) for ourselves," said Marvin Hempleman, Twin Falls County Commissioner.

He says county commissioners are kicking around the idea of a public hearing on the issue of whether the dam should be built. "We need to gauge public opinion," he said.

But he said as far as commissioners go "the three of us are in agreement about what we want to happen here and that is nothing."

Three Bliss city council members say they support the dam because it would bring new business and employment to their city.

State Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls, like Hempleman had never run the river before.

"I would hate to see a thing created like this dam that is not for the benefit of Idaho. There would be a temporary influx of jobs and then nothing. I just hope the facts do not pressure it into happening if we do not want it," he said.

Black said he intends to look into the Wiley project a lot more closely.

The rafters panned the remnants of the Bonanza flood which inundated the area some 15,000 years ago.

Pillow lava flows dammed up the river in the stretch between Lower Salmon Falls and Bliss Bridge forming an ancient lake, called Lake Idaho.

The rafters found past rock outcroppings of pillow lava, some of them as big as a two-story house, about four miles downstream from Lower Salmon Falls dam. The dam sites include a complex of basalt, pillow lava flows and river and lake sedimentary beds, according to FERC documents. When inundated these outcroppings can disintegrate, said Ted Weasna, a geologist with BLM in Boise.

"One of the concerns is the similarity of this area to the Feton Dam project," said Weasna referring to the eastern Idaho dam that collapsed.

Markets to stock Craters water

By C. CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Craters of the Moon water, naturally laced with 30 or more Carey minerals, will soon be available to local residents.

Albertson's Food Centers all over Idaho will begin stocking the product by early this week, said Spence Ellsworth, president of the mineral water corporation.

It also looks probable that the Twin Falls Shopko will be carrying the product as soon as this week if final approval is granted, Ellsworth said.

The mineral water comes bubbling out of underground springs in Carey on Maurice and his sons runs the farm. Spence's father, originally purchased the land to use the water for heating, Ellsworth said.

The water flows out at a rate of 90 gallons a minute and at a temperature of 130 degrees. Maurice used the water to heat his house and for culinary purposes, his son said.

"When the rancher's cold-water well ran dry, he started bottling the water and cooling it in his refrigerator. After tasting the water, and liking it, his family came up with the idea of selling the product."

The family was drinking it and they gave it to friends who really liked it. Then they thought "We should market this," the younger Ellsworth said. They named it for the national monument 20 miles from the Ellsworth ranch. Maurice and his two sons share equal control of the corporation. The family currently bottles the water with no added chemicals, flavoring, from a modified kitchen tap.

"We'll develop a custom bottling system that the demand reaches that level," he said.

One-gallon jugs and two-liter bottles are available. In the future, the Ellsworths hope to offer 16-ounce plastic bottles and 10-ounce glass bottles. The water will sell in retail stores for $1.79 per gallon.

The water was available in Twin Falls at one time in Swensen's Market, Ellsworth said, but the store hasn't asked for another shipment.

The water is "very competitive," with other mineral water on the market, not only in price, but also in use. Shopko in Twin Falls.

"There are so many waters coming on line. Bottled mineral water is first or second in the industry and water with no added chemicals is ahead of us. When I think we might not be growing as fast as we could, I just remember the quality of our product. We're very confident in our product," he said.

"People drink it for what it does for them. They tell us we should call it the 'Fountain of Youth,'" he said.

The size of the shipment depends on what stores think they can sell, he said. Shopko in Twin Falls has asked for 20-35 cases and Ellsworth will negotiate the size of the Albertson's order during a visit this Friday.

The Shopko in Boise is also considering stocking the water and the Idaho Falls branch of the store is also interested in it, he said.

The Ellsworths are trying to establish a market for their product in Idaho, even though it is not considered a prime location to sell bottled water, Ellsworth said.

"To have a good market, you need three things: a large population, a hot climate and bad water. Idaho doesn't fit those categories, but we'll start here to get a feel for the market," he said.

County growth slows from 1970s

BOISE (AP) — Ada County's population topped 200,000 this year despite a much slower growth rate than the area experienced in the 1970s.

A new set of population figures and forecasts developed by Ada Planning Association members shows that the county's population — now about 200,435 — has grown by 15.8 percent since 1980, for an average growth rate of more than 2 percent per year. ADA planner Dale Rosebuck said that is about twice the national average population growth rate of 1.2 percent per year.

"The current rate is well below the 5 percent annual population growth the county saw in the 1970s, Rosebuck said earlier forecasts were off because they assumed the state of Idaho and Ada County would come out of the recession of the early 1980s more quickly than they did.

A U.S. census for Ada County is completed only once every 10 years, Rosebuck said, so the ADA fills in the years in between with studies of its own. In 1980, when another census is completed, ADA figures will be adjusted to match census figures, he said.

"There was a higher rate of growth during the '70s than we have ever experienced before," said Chuck Winder, ADA board chairman. "I think that probably influenced the projections. I think it's growing at an acceptable rate, although we are hopeful that there will be more economic growth in the county and more jobs."

Mother strangled; infant taken

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — A woman in her final month of pregnancy was strangled in a remote mountain area, and the child she was carrying was then removed, in what police termed a "crude, eastern operation," authorities reported.

Albuquerque police Lt. Roger Anderson said the body of Cindy Lynn Ray, 23, was found Friday in an area just west of New Mexico 14 in the Manzano Mountains east of Albuquerque.

A woman who took a newborn infant girl to the University of New Mexico Hospital late Thursday night and claimed she had given birth to the child led police officers to the area where Mrs. Ray's body was located.

The woman, Darci Kaylene Pierce, later was arrested and was being held in the Bernalillo County Detention Center. Formal charges had not been filed late Friday.

Police said the 6-pound, 8-ounce baby girl was born about two weeks premature, but was in good condition. Authorities were trying to confirm that the infant was the child taken from the slain woman's body.

Police spokeswoman Mary Molina Mescal said the infant and Mrs. Pierce, 19, arrived at the Albuquerque hospital at about 10:40 p.m. Thursday and the woman told hospital personnel she had given birth to the baby girl following a traffic accident.

The woman told two hospital authorities she had delivered the baby by herself.

Hospital authorities, alerted to the fact Mrs. Ray had been reported missing earlier in the day after going to a clinic at Kirtland Air Force Base, checked the condition of the baby and Mrs. Pierce, and notified police.

The hospital insisted on checking the condition of the woman and determined she had not given birth to the baby," said Anderson.

The baby was in good condition, although she was premature, said Anderson.

Mrs. Pierce, after being questioned for several hours, agreed to lead police to Mrs. Ray's body. Police said the victim had been strangled and the child she had been carrying had been taken.

"It appeared the baby had been taken from Mrs. Ray's dead body by means of a crude cesarean operation," said Mrs. Mescal.

Mrs. Mescal said although the husbands of both women are stationed at Kirtland Air Force Base, the women apparently did not know each other.

Mrs. Ray, whose husband Samuel is a staff sergeant at Kirtland, was a former resident of Springville, Utah. Ray is from Payson, Utah, police said.

Child alerts police to fatal accident

CALDWELL (AP) — A 6-year-old boy's frantic attempts to flag down motorists on Interstate 84 alerted officials to an accident early Saturday which claimed his father's life and critically injured a Salt Lake City girl.

Sloasi Tutavake, 27, Portland, was killed about 10 miles west of Caldwell Saturday when his car left the road and rolled twice, said Idaho State Police Trooper Norman Cordeiro.

Sloasi Tutavake of Murray, Utah, climbed up a 29-foot embankment to help summon help, he said.

Passing motorists notified state officers the boy was on the road at about 6:11 a.m. The accident is believed to have occurred about 1 1/2 hours earlier.

The elder Tutavake and a passenger, Sala Hailuliku, 17, were thrown from the vehicle.

to hire a drill seed planter to start their crops. Some farmers may have a conventional planter and resist spending the money.

Farmers are affected by what their neighbors do and can be slow to change. Some farmers like to show straight rows of plowed crops and the reduced till fields look less neat.

The trend in federal policy is toward more control of pollution from non-point sources including runoff from fields.

The state is grappling with meeting federal requirements and is seeking public comment at a series of hearings around Idaho including one Monday at 10:30 a.m. at the office of Southern Idaho Shields Building.

The Rock Creek program is a pilot federal project that has made runoff into Rock Creek by working with farmers to reduce tillage, improve irrigation practices and make use of sediment holding basins.

Sediment traps the fishery but by using these best management practices sediment has runoff has been cut by 50 to 80 percent depending on the location along Rock Creek, says Bill Clark of the state Division of Environmental Management.

The wild trout population went up in 1985 and this year it has increased at some monitoring stations, and decreased at others, Clark says.

Farmers on the tour seemed concerned that reduced tillage methods can help the situation.

But Meyer of Filner says, "There is a lot to be learned from it. There are a lot of different ways and every farm is different."

lot of ignorance out there about the law, and that's what we're trying to fix."

"They still think it pertains to someone else," he said.

Border Patrol officer Roger Otkin, who heads the Boise office, said he anticipates agents enforcing the law by visiting businesses that have employed illegal aliens in the past.

Although the act provides for the reinforcement of INS forces, it took away the authority of their agents to enter without permission of the landowner.

INS agents must either ask permission or present a search warrant before they can enter questions aliens suspected of being illegal.

The new act has also enlarged the Border Patrol concern with just farms and businesses who usually employ illegal aliens to every business to determine whether they are following the new rules.

Clairborne said the act has made the work of the Border Patrol and the administrative side of the INS more complex.

But, Otkin said, the Border Patrol has started to focus on criminal aliens, smuggling and fraud and drugs instead of putting out a large dragnet for aliens.

Weusma echoed McGusters comments on water quality saying more informed decisions to make a geological assessment of the project. Tacoma plans a geological assessment this fall.

Weusma said the blocked flows of McKinney basalt at the time of Lake Idaho created yahoo clay in the region. This is an unstable formation, he said.

Some of the best aquifers in the state are in basalt and these have a high potential for water flow, he said, indicating another situation which would add to instability.

"At Teton they were not able to fill lava tubes (with concrete)," he said.

Tacoma's engineers, Morrison-Knudsen of San Francisco say they will sink a grout curtain beneath the dam to prevent seepage. Weusma said they will have to drill a lot of test holes to determine whether the grout curtain will work.

FERC also refers to seepage problems but M-K says it can get around it.

Edith G. McDonald

BURLEY — Edith G. McDonald, 84, of Burley and formerly of Boise, died Thursday, July 23, 1987, in the Burley Care Center.

Born June 6, 1903, in Boise, she attended schools in Pierce Park and Gardfield. She married James Rex McDonald Jan. 23, 1917, in Boise. He preceded her in death Feb. 26, 1974. In 1915, she and her husband moved to Fairfield, where they farmed as a soldier for 25 years. In 1969, they moved to Burley.

She had lived with her daughter since 1972, following her husband's death. She moved with her daughter's family to Burley in August 1979, and for the past four months, had been in the Burley Care Center.

Mrs. McDonald was a member of the Baptist church.

Surviving are: a daughter, Jane Brown of Burley; a stepson, Paul

Janeau Shinn

TWIN FALLS — Janeau Shinn, 91, of Twin Falls, died Wednesday, July 22, 1987, at Evergreen Manor in Twin Falls.

Born Feb. 29, 1896, in Coeur d'Alene, she moved to the Twin Falls tract in 1907, settling in the Filer area, where she worked as a secretary in the navy during World War I. He also studied journalism at the University of Southern California. He married Margaret Gourley in 1920, and she preceded him in death.

Mr. Shinn was part-owner of the Filer Record, serving as its editor for seven years. He then served as owner and editor of the Twin Falls Evening Times until its consolidation with the Twin Falls News in 1937. From 1937 until 1959, he served as secretary to Idaho Gov. Barzilla Clark. He then joined the Idaho Statesman staff, serving from 1959 until 1964, after which he went to California to work at the Mill Valley Record until 1965. After returning to Twin Falls, he worked on the Twin Falls News until 1977 as a business manager and writer.

In 1947, he went to work at KLiX Radio and Television. Among other things, Mr. Shinn was well known for his "Report to the Valley." He retired from KLiX in 1976 at the age of 80, but continued to work as an advertising salesman for the Northside News in Jerome for another five years.

Mr. Shinn was a member of the Filer Masonic Lodge, No. 55; a 62-year member of Kiwanis, having served as both president and lieutenant governor; a 30-year member of the American Legion, where he was a past commander; and a member of the Presbyterian Church.

He is survived by his son, Joseph Shinn of Vegas; a daughter, Priscilla Stell of Las Vegas; four grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his wife and two daughters.

The funeral will be held Monday at 11 a.m. in the First United Presbyterian Church in Twin Falls, with the Rev. Dennis Cameron officiating. Burial will be in the Filer IOOF Cemetery. Masonic graveside rites will be conducted by members of the Filer Masonic Lodge No. 55.

The family suggests memorial contributions to a favorite charity.

Frederick A. Britt

TWIN FALLS — Frederick A. Britt, 66, of Twin Falls, died Friday, July 24, 1987, in Caldwell.

Born Jan. 5, 1921, in Kimberly, where he grew up and attended schools, he served in the Army Air Corps during World War II. He returned to Kimberly and farmed the home place about six years before moving to Twin Falls. He then worked for the Amalgamated Sugar Co. until his retirement 11 years ago.

He married Lela Stearns Jan. 11, 1948, in Twin Falls.

He was a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, a past president of the Central Labor Council, and a member of the Knights of Columbus. He also was a member of the St. Edward's Catholic Church in Twin Falls.

Surviving are: his wife of Twin Falls; two daughters, Beth Martin of Boise and Christine Britt of Meridian; a son, Edward D. Britt of Park City, Utah; three brothers, Dean Britt of Kimberly; Tony Britt of Hazelton and Robert Britt of Santa Barbara, Calif.; a sister, Mary Whitmore of Carriere, Miss.; and two grandchildren.

Rosary will be recited Tuesday at 7 p.m. at Reynolds Funeral Chapel. Funeral mass will be celebrated Wednesday at 10 a.m. in St. Edward's Catholic Church. Burial will be in Sunset Memorial Park, with military graveside rites by area veterans.

Friends may call at the Reynolds Chapel Tuesday from 3 p.m. until the time of the rosary.

The family suggests that memorial contributions be given to the American Heart Association or the Mountain States Tumor Institute.

George Beardsley wants to be able to sell liquor by the drink at his Filer pub, The Moon

Filer liquor law contested Tavern owner to circulate petition

By DAVID LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

FILER — The owner of a tavern in Filer is bucking a 40-year tradition in attempting to get voter approval for sale of liquor by the drink.

George Beardsley, proprietor of The Moon tavern on Main Street, will attempt to get 77 signatures (20 percent of Filer residents) on a petition to allow the vote on the November city ballot.

Four decades ago Filer residents voted to reject the sale of hard liquor in their community. Beardsley can serve only beer in his tavern.

He came before the City Council July 7 asking it to declare an election for a vote on the proposal. But members unanimously agreed that Beardsley should submit a petition instead with enough signatures to bring the matter to a vote.

The Moon is the only tavern in Filer. Cedar Lunas bowling alley also holds a license to serve beer. State law allows one liquor license per 1,600 population, plus one for competition.

Beardsley does not believe he will have trouble getting signatures for this petition.

"People requested I get liquor by the drink," he said. "I run a nice bar. But some patrons said, 'My wife doesn't like beer. You get liquor by the drink and I will bring her in.'"

Beardsley has operated The Moon for about one and a half years. He does not accept the argument that liquor by the drink is more harmful than a glass of beer.

"There is the same alcohol content in a glass of beer as there is in one shot of whiskey," he said. "A bottle of beer has the same amount of alcohol as one mixed drink."

He believes drinking liquor in Filer is safer for residents than going to Twin Falls or Blaine and driving home again. "There will be less DWI incidents, less accidents," he said.

Mayor Robert Fort said the council voted against a city election on the issue because "it wanted Beardsley" to do the footwork. He is the man who wants the liquor license.

Kimberly schools allotted less

The 1986-87 school year than was originally projected, he said.

The district includes a contingency fund in the school district budget planning. Money from this fund will be used to offset the reduction in money received from the state.

"We are glad if the decrease in money wasn't any more," Bauscher said. "We did program money to take care of this type of thing," he added.

The Kimberly School Board discussed the funding shortfall at its August meeting, along with holding an organizational session for the coming school year.

The board of trustees elected officers for the 1987-88 school year, naming all officers to serve again. Board member Weldon Schuman said, "The School Board has run very smoothly."

Board officers will be: Kent Taylor, chairman; JoAnne Irwin, vice chairman; and LaRae Crawford, clerk.

Jerome board ready for any potential loss

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

JEROME — The ghost of Tupperware haunted the Jerome School District Board meeting last week.

Trustees voted to offset a possible $55,000 revenue loss from the eventual closing of the Tupperware plant in Jerome through budget cuts and personnel changes.

Tupperware announced in June it will close its Jerome plant in phases starting this fall. The move will eliminate 700 jobs in the area.

Superintendent Richard Kugler said budget cuts will not be made if enrollment does not decline as much as he has predicted.

The School Board decided to combine its fringe-benefit pool with salaries to save $15,840, eliminate its in-service training account to save $4,000, leave a maintenance position vacant to save $15,600 and shift personnel responsibilities at its junior high school to save $19,350.

The junior high school shift entails appointing a full-time dean of girls and leaving a junior high counseling position vacant.

The dean, Terry Lloyd, would work toward her counseling certification under the plan, but the junior high school would be put on "advised accreditation" by the Idaho Department of Education for the next school year, Kugler said.

Advised accreditation is used by the state to warn schools that existing deficiencies are not corrected, the school could be put on warned status and eventually its accreditation could be taken away.

The School District's $146,000 levy runs out next year, and Kugler said he would like to ask for a multi-year, $125,000 levy to replace it.

"Even the revenues have come in pretty well and basically our budget is in good shape."

the school, will be provided through federal funding.

Kugler refused to comment on combining salaries with fringe benefit pools, because the district is still negotiating with its teachers.

Trustee Ken Baumgartner, who is also personnel director of Tupperware, initiated the motion to make the budget cuts. He also said the impact of the Tupperware closing will not be as great as originally anticipated.

"The number of workers moving out is not that stupendous," Baumgartner said. "I do not think the impact in the 1987 to 1988 school year will be that great."

On the bright side of the economic front, Kugler reported the school district general fund deficit was reduced about $150,000 last year.

He said the school will probably have a remaining fund deficit of $230,000 to $250,000 this year.

"We had a good year," Kugler said. "Our revenues have come in pretty well and basically our budget is in good shape."

He projected elimination of the deficit in three years.

In other action, the board adopted an AIDS policy based on policies adopted by the Blaine County School District and the Twin Falls School District earlier this year.

"We need a policy as a stop-gap measure right now," Kugler said. He said he expects the policy to be amended as knowledge of AIDS increases.

The policy forms an evaluation team to study each case of AIDS in the school district and then make a nonbinding recommendation to the board of trustees whether the student or employee should be allowed to attend school.

"We definitely need something," said Trustee Mary Rose. "We need to avoid panic at all costs."

The board voted to accept a bid from Idaho First National Bank for two tax anticipation notes.

Idaho First bid a 5.34 percent interest rate on notes for $100,000 and $300,000, which will provide revenue for the school until November.

Trustees consider new levy

JEROME — The Jerome School Board is considering asking district voters to approve a plant facilities levy later this year.

At its meeting last week, trustees asked Superintendent Richard Kugler to put together a package of facility improvements that could be made under a new levy.

The School District's $146,000 levy runs out next year, and Kugler said he would like to ask for a multi-year, $125,000 levy to replace it.

"Even the revenues have come in pretty well and basically our budget is in good shape."

facilities improvement."

A plant facility levy funds improvements on school buildings and grounds by increasing property taxes over the next two years. A two-thirds majority is needed for passage.

Kugler said he would like to present a proposal to voters in September or October.

Trustee Ben Neff said, "We'd like to do it while people are still employed at the plant."

"The question is not if, but when we should ask them and how much," Kugler said.

Abandonment of irrigation system legal, opinion says

By C. CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

JEROME — The city of Jerome would be within its legal rights to abandon a troublesome irrigation system in the Magic Meadows subdivision, according to a legal opinion from City Attorney Rob Williams.

The opinion was read at the Jerome City Council meeting last week.

Low-quality pipes within the irrigation system have caused repeated floods in the area over the past several years. Residents of the subdivision say they would rather do away with the system altogether than continue to repair their flood-damaged property.

At a meeting earlier this month, council members decided to research the possibility of removing the system, providing the action would be legal.

In a memo to the city, Rob Williams, the city can, at its option, abandon the system. He recommended a series of public hearings on the issue, which the council agreed to schedule.

The pipes would be left in place, but the city would stop water through the system and discontinue maintenance.

Another option would be to replace the irrigation system with higher quality material. The estimated cost would be $70,000, which the city does not have, said Public Works Director Lanny Sloan. Money would have to come from the Magic Meadows residents.

Discontinuing the system would be a cost of approximately $3,500 each year in water fees, Sloan said.

The city of Twin Falls experienced a similar problem in 1979, Sloan said. At that time, the city stopped maintenance of the irrigation system and residents in the area were left responsible, he said.

Only about 30 percent of the Magic-Meadows property-owners are actually using the system, he said. A survey by the city two years ago showed that 70 percent of the property owners were in favor of abandoning the system.

The council will probably schedule public hearings the first of September, Sloan said, and will make a decision after gathering public input.

Irrigation at Magic Meadows has been a "problem ever since it was installed," he added. "We have been working on it every year and doing as much maintenance as is possible," he said.

In other business, the council agreed to lease the old Mountain Bell building, which is owned by the city, to the Region IV Development Association for use as an incubator tenant.

Joe Herring, executive director of Region IV, said the building would be leased at below-market rates by the organization to host businesses in the community. After a specific time period, the business would move out to make room for another tenant.

A real incubator facility would offer special services to the new business, but Region IV will just offer the lower rent, Herring said.

The organization hopes to open a full-scale facility at the College of Southern Idaho in about three years.

Board reviews music costs

The Times-News

GLENN'S FERRY — The Glenns Ferry School Board has approved the purchase of a band shell.

However, Board Chairman Richard Stimpson has recommended postponing action on a second request that funding for musical instruments be changed — possibly by increasing student rental fees — until a committee of community volunteers can study the issue.

Band instructor Kevin Gilman made the request for the band shell after he announced earlier this month that he and his wife, Cindy, the district's vocal teacher were resigning.

Gilman said that the band shell would help solve the acoustics problem that the band and choir have in trying to perform in the gymnasium.

Several patrons attending the July board meeting agreed that a band shell is needed. They also said that a new rental system for band instruments is needed to cover the costs of purchasing more expensive instruments, such as French horns and tubas.

Students presently pay only $26 a year for rental of a band instrument, and there are many who are unable to do so because of financial hardship, have been exempted from paying rentals at all.

Gilman said he believes there were many students last year who could afford instruments but rental instead, because of other priorities or the inexpensive rentals through the school.

Board members said they were concerned that in their efforts to help build the band program through the school as well as free lessons, they had created a "musical welfare monster."

The volunteer committee will study ways to increase rental fees and ways of paying for new instruments without hurting the music program. Those serving the committee include Superintendent Bob Fontaine, Board Vice President Ward Rulien, the Gilmans, and district parent Ora Knight. Dale Baxter, Carol Lewis and Carolyn Dilworth.

As a matter of fact, tomato worms don't have any rights

It was classic Star Trek, a little bit science, a lot malarky. A creature from another planet (predicably) was killing people in order to survive. Should the creature be destroyed? No! Not if you're into astro-ecology like the writers of Star Trek. You have to consider the creature's right to survival, too.

I faced a similar crisis this week with my tomato worms. My killer instincts surfaced but then, thanks to Star Trek, I momentarily reconsidered — Don't they have a right to live too? Unfortunately for them, their life was weighed in the balance and they lost. Survival of the fittest, namely me and my tomato-loving family, usurped any humanitarian inclinations I might have had toward my worms.

Tomato worms are truly despicable creatures. They're so ugly they're leeches of slugs. Tomato "worms" is actually a misnomer. My preschool son more accurately calls them snakes. Tomato snakes are anywhere from a half-inch to four inches long, fat, green, and slimy. With these specs they should easily qualify for science-fiction-creature status.

Probably their most distinctive characteristic, though, is their horn, right in the center of their head; rhinoceros-style. I've heard reputable gardeners swear by the vicious sick of the tomato-worm horn.

I noticed my tomato worm problem this year when I picked my string beans. Master planner that I am, I planted my bushy tomatoes right next to my bushy beans. Every time I knelt to pick a bean my oach brushed a tomato vine. Then I'd gasp and arch my back as chills ran down my spine. Was it a worm or a tomato worm? (I had brushed against a worm shell tomato worm's jump. Are they attracted to certain colors or scents? Are they caravans?)

"Of late I've been moving down my bean rows slandering. If the creature's going to get me, I reasoned, I'd rather go down facing him, like a woman. So I learned to do this little head-to-to variation on the (Charleston), which enables me to pick a bean and avoid a vine. I spent my morning yesterday dancing down my bean row. I'm sure if anyone had been watching me they would have marveled at my physical dexterity."

Let my readers think that I am the only wimp when it comes to tomato worms; let me report a way my mother-in-law has dealt with the felons. She said one year she scooped all the worms off her tomato vines with a twig, into a Mason jar. Then she dumped them in a big pile on the road. I'd like to meet her!

Wanted to enter a car race on Indian Cove Road. This is the Messy-Mercy Killing Method for ridding your garden of unsightly pests.

Tomato worms are not just the plague of country folk. My mother lives in an apartment in town and has a potted tomato plant on her patio. Surrounding the pot are manured lawns and cement. There aren't any weeds or vegetable gardens or even cow pies near by. This is civilized territory. Yet, she reported to me just last week she'd lost several leaves and half a baby tomato to a nasty tomato worm.

What did I advise her? "Go to the supermarket and look under the home canning sign and find a box of quart-size Mason jars."

Diana Hooley writes her weekly column from her farm home near Indian Cove.

Report says some public funds tied up in illegal securities

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — At least eight public treasurers for government entities around the state have invested public funds in illegal securities, according to a report prepared by State Auditor Tom L. Allen.

Allen could be sitting on a powder keg," Allen said during a meeting of the Utah Money Management Council, which monitors the investment of public funds by government treasurers.

The report said treasurers in Bountiful, Riverton, Monticello, Spanish Fork, San Juan County, Nepo School District and San Juan School District invested in mutual funds that are illegal under the state Money Management Act, which sets guidelines for the investment of public money.

Allen said the investments are illegal because they involve securities prohibited by the act, which requires that investments mature on or before the date the money will be needed to cover expenditures.

In other words, the money can't be tied up in investments when it's needed to pay the bills.

Some of the mutual funds purchased illegal securities dealing with options and futures and some also invested in long-term securities, which, in certain cases, had maturity dates in the year 2017, the report said.

But the funds are likely to be needed before 2017, so the securities would have to be sold under whatever market conditions and interest rates exist at the time, according to the report.

And while only eight violators have been found, Allen said many more are likely to be discovered. He estimated as many as 40 public treasurers may be involved in illegal investments.

Most of the treasurers seemed to be unaware of the illegality, Allen said, and claimed they had been either tricked or misled by the brokers who sold the securities in question.

Allen said the problem underscores the difficulties of small town treasurers attempting to deal on their own with sophisticated — and, Allen suggested, sometimes unscrupulous — investment brokers.

He said brokers receive better commissions for selling securities that are long-term and more speculative. For that reason, Allen said, brokers often aren't interested in selling the safe, liquid kinds of investments that meet the needs of small-town treasurers.

"I do feel misled," said San Juan County Treasurer Elaine Wilson. "I was told there had been some question on this type of investment, but that it had been cleared up, when actually it hadn't been resolved."

Wilson invested about $1 million at 10 percent interest in mutual funds sold by a broker from a respected firm. She said she now plans to take the money out of the fund in August and could lose about $45,000 in interest unless the current interest rate of 9.6 percent improves.

The question now before Allen and the Money Management Council is what to do about the investments.

Letters were mailed to the treasurers giving them 60 days to get rid of the investments; and Allen recommended that if the securities aren't sold by then, state funds would be withheld from the municipality until it complies.

He also suggested that if the violation isn't corrected in 90 days, the matter would be turned over to the county attorney to file charges.

But both Allen and council members are wary of forcing the treasurers to sell if it would mean they have to take a loss in interest at current rates.

"We don't object to selling," said Bountiful City Treasurer Ira Todd. "But the timing is bad. The interest would cover the loss, but we wouldn't be making a proper interest. In effect, I would be losing more than if (the market) turned around."

Todd said he invested $2 million in the money market at 15 percent last year. The current interest rate is only 12 percent, so any pressure from the state to sell would cost the city substantial interest.

Instead, council members decided to "give" the treasurers a chance to explain themselves. During the recent meeting, council members seemed to agree they would be more patient if the illegal investments constitute only a small fraction — about 5 percent — of the investment portfolio.

The moral of the story, in Allen's view, is that entreprising small town treasurers should invest public funds in the state's investment pool, which is maintained by the state treasurer.

Allen believes as much as 80 percent of public treasurers would be better off putting their money in the pool.

"It's wrong for most of them to think they can beat the investment pool," he said. "That's the reason why they fell prey to unscrupulous brokers who make a lot of promises about what rates have been paid in the past."

Draft: AIDS carrier must warn partners

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Pima County's health director is drafting an order to bar a man infected with AIDS from having sex without first warning his partners, county officials said Friday.

Charles Pyle, a deputy county attorney representing the health department, said he will review the draft of the cease-and-desist order Monday, with the health director, Dr. Patricia Nolan.

Pyle said the order, which he believes will be the first in the state, is to be issued because the man has not followed counseling about safe sexual and drug practices in the wake of his having been tested positive for presence in his blood of an antibody to the virus that causes AIDS.

Pyle said it "should be emphasized that the reason for the order is not because of a testing positive," but because of the concern that his behavior has not responded to counseling.

sharing of needles for drug consumption.

"The order also will indicate that (sex) partners are to be warned" beforehand that the man carries the AIDS virus, and will receive a monthly counseling session with health department personnel, he added.

The order also could ban the man from donating blood, tissue or organs and from sharing drug needles.

Pyle said cease-and-desist orders are commonly issued on a wide range of health concerns, but that such an order would be the state's first to involve a carrier of the virus causing acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"It's a situation that we've been ruminating over for two weeks," he said.

Officials declined to identify the individual or give his age or any other details.

The AIDS disease destroys the body's ability to stave off infections, leading ultimately to death from related complications.

Ms. Nolan said if the man refused to comply with the order she would seek to have him placed in quarantine. An administrative hearing would be conducted first, she said.

She also said there would not be indiscriminate issuing of such orders to people infected with AIDS, but that they could be given in situations where infected people endanger others.

"It is obviously something far beyond positive testing" for the antibody. "The behavior of the person is not and will not be responding to counseling so far, and hopefully will in the future."

Pyle and county epidemiologist Bruce Porter said such orders fall within the health director's authority and do not require court approval.

Pyle said the thrust of the order would be to require the man not to engage in dangerous sexual and drug practices. That will include no unprotected sex and no

British anniversary celebrated

LONDON (AP) — Mormon leaders held a black-tie dinner at the Savoy Hotel to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the church's presence in Britain, and heard videotaped greetings from resident Reagan.

Reagan recalled that Heber C. Kimball, who led the first party of Mormon American and Canadian missionaries to England in 1837, "was so eager to start his work that as his boat was reaching the pier in Liverpool, he leaped the remaining six feet to the dock."

"Well, that eagerness and the inspiration of these young men bore fruit, and their mission prospered," Reagan said in his message to the anniversary dinner of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on Friday night.

The celebration marked the founding of the church in Britain in Preston, Lancashire, with the July 30, 1837 baptizing there of the first nine converts.

Preston's Mormon Church of 450 members is the world's oldest continuing Mormon congregation. The church in America, founded in 1830 in New York, was uprooted and began moving West to Utah 17 years later because of persecution.

About 100,000 British converts emigrated to the United States, and all 13 church presidents have been of British descent.

Presiding over the dinner was church president and former

Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson. The Mormon leaders who flew from the United States brought former Michigan Gov. George W. Romney and astronaut Don L. Lind.

Other guests included Miss America 1985, Shareline Wells Hawkes, who is honeymooning in Britain, and Donny Osmond, leader of the Osmonds singing group, former Prime Minister Edward Heath and British actress Jane Seymour.

Gordon B. Hinckley, second in line to the church presidency, claimed a worldwide Mormon membership of 6.5 million, with 140,000 in Britain. He said the British Mormon population is growing at an annual rate of 5 1/2 percent.

City buys old YMCA building

POCATELLO (AP) — The Pocatello City Council hopes to complete purchase and renovation of the old YMCA building and convert it into a community center by October.

The council voted 3-0 Thursday night to purchase the property from Idaho Bank and Trust Co. for $115,000 cash and five city-owned parcels of land valued at $446,000.

During the next few days, the city will be working on the legal documents for the acquisition to ensure there are no problems with the land transfer. It's hoped the city and IB&T can close the deal July 29, according to Mayor Dick Finlayson.

For three years, the city has worked on reopening the Y, which closed in 1984 after defaulting on a $1 million loan from IB&T.

Finlayson also is working with representatives from the Pocatello School District on ways to utilize the building and perhaps share some of the expense. A similar offer has been extended to Chubbuck.

Workshops held

BOISE (AP) — The state AFL-CIO is conducting information workshops for former Butte employees in Boise and Pocatello.

The workshops will cover stress management, community services, financial management and job retraining. Spouses of former employees may also attend.

The workshop in Boise will be held from 8 a.m. to noon Monday in the Boise State University ballroom.

The Pocatello workshop will be from 9 a.m. to noon at the Idaho State University Student Union Building Little Theater.

Albertson's purchased the Butte stores.

The board elected to maintain the services of the Oakley and Jones Certified Public Accountants for the 1987-88 school year.

In other business:

• The new personal leave policy for teachers was adopted by the board. No revisions were made to the policy which will first read at the June board meeting.

Teachers will be allowed to take a three day of personal leave if they pay the $38-per-day cost of a substitute.

Registration for students new to the Kimberly School District will be held next month. Elementary school students will register the week of August 10th. Junior and senior high students will register the week of August 17th.

• The board approved personnel for three positions. Two positions will be full-time teachers, the other is a driver's education instructor.

This completes the filling of vacancies in the district. Eleven positions have been filled for next school year, including the addition of an additional third grade instructor and a secondary-school guidance counselor.

• Service bids will be solicited for milk, gas, diesel and coal for the upcoming school year. Awards for these services will be made during the August School Board meeting.

Police Chief Donald Barkley noted that liquor can be purchased in Filer markets, and then people go home and drink. He does not see the consumption of liquor by the glass in taverns causing a "large impact" in the city.

Port is staying neutral on the issue and has refused to sign the petition being circulated by Beardley. He believes any churches that make a "concerted effort" in opposing the ballot issue.

But Beardley disagrees. "I was told when I moved into town that you can't get liquor by the drink because of the churches. Church people drink once in awhile," he said.

"I think city residents will support me on this," Beardley said.

The building may be occupied in mid-September, but plans are not definite at this time, he said.

The council also:

• voted to install a new IBM personal computer in the Public Works Department, at the cost of $1,700.

• appointed Byron Machamer to the Jerome City Police. Machamer is from Virginia and has had over three years of experience in law enforcement.

• agreed to install a loading zone for Stockmen Feed on West A Street, 100th block.

Aquino rushes to adopt laws before legislature convenes

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino rushed to issue 11 new decrees Saturday before she loses her lawmaking powers to Congress, which convenes Monday.

One of the decrees issued by Mrs. Aquino increased salaries for military personnel. Another required music radio stations to play at least four local compositions per hour.

The 54-year-old president told reporters she will sign several more decrees Sunday.

Mrs. Aquino has issued 260 decrees since she assumed power and more than 30 laws since Wednesday, including a controversial agricultural land redistribution decree. She left it to Congress, however, to decide the timetable and amount of property landowners will be able to keep.

One of the decrees she is expected to sign Sunday provides for the creation of Regional Consultative Council to help Congress draft a law granting autonomy to 5 million Moslems in the southern Philippines.

Aquino has issued 260 decrees since she assumed power and more than 30 laws since Wednesday.

Talks between the government and the Moslem's Moro National Liberation Front broke down in May over the rebels' insistence that Mrs. Aquino grant autonomy by decree instead of letting Congress do it. The front has been fighting for Moslem rule in the south since 1972.

Another decree Mrs. Aquino said she will sign Sunday is an extension of the Aug. 28 deadline for amnesty she offered both communist and Moslem rebels last February. Mrs. Aquino did not say how long the extension will stretch.

She announced the plan to extend the deadline after Justice Secretary Sofrey Ordenez said Thursday that only 28 "hard core rebels" had accepted her offer.

Mrs. Aquino has ruled the country by decree since former President Ferdinand E. Marcos was toppled by a civilian-military revolution and his rubber stamp National Assembly was abolished last year.

In Monday's ceremony marking the opening of Congress, Mrs. Aquino will formally relinquish her sole law-making powers and deliver a "state of the nation" address.

Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel V. Ramos extended a military alert already in force in Manila to cover 12 provinces within 100 miles of the capital following news reports that Marcos loyalists and other groups planned to disrupt the opening ceremonies.

The ruling leaves only one of the 24 Senate seats vacant, pending a recount demanded by administration candidate Augusto Sanchez.

Panama general insists on new leader

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The former chief of the Defense Forces on Friday called on Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega to step down as Panama's strongman and end weeks of civil unrest.

"It is you, General Noriega (who is) the only and great cause of this conflict that divides two million Panamanians," retired Gen. Ruben Darío Parades said in an open letter distributed to officers and troops.

"You are the only person keeping us from reaching a peaceful and democratic agreement," the letter said.

Noriega, current chief of the Defense Forces, and Parades are Panama's only two generals. Noriega is considered the power behind President Eric Arturo Delvalle's administration.

Parades' comments were considered a clear boost to those demanding that the military reduce its influence on the government.

"There is little space left for maneuvering today," Parades wrote. "Tomorrow could be too late. Your retirement should be planned and professionally ordered, to avoid stampedes and street disturbances."

Parades retired after losing an internal power struggle following the death in a 1981 plane crash of Gen. Omar Torrijos, Panama's former strongman. Parades has maintained a low profile after an unsuccessful campaign for president in 1984.

The unrest began in June when Col. Roberto Diaz Herrera, who recently retired as Noriega's second-in-command, charged Noriega was involved in election fraud, corruption and the deaths of Torrijos and of opposition leader Hugo Spadafora in 1985.

Parades has a reputation for being more level-headed than Diaz Herrera, giving greater credibility to the call for Noriega to step out of government.

El Salvador rebels blow up key bridge

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas blew up a Pan-American Highway bridge Friday, virtually isolating the eastern part of El Salvador, military and civilian sources in the area said.

No deaths or injuries were reported in the pre-dawn explosion. The sources, who demanded they not be identified for security reasons, said the rebels blew up the Quebrada Seca Bridge in San Vicente province, about 45 miles east of the capital.

120 Vietnamese sail to Hong Kong

HONG KONG (AP) — One hundred and twenty Vietnamese refugees made it safely to Hong Kong on Saturday aboard three motorboats, a government spokesman reported.

The spokesman, who could not be further identified in accordance with official practice, said one of the boats, carrying 18 refugees, sailed here directly from Vietnam. The other two boats arrived from China, where the refugees stayed after fleeing Vietnam several years ago, the spokesman said.

Delta does it again: jet at wrong height

PRINCE RUPERT, British Columbia (AP) — A Delta Airlines jet mistakenly climbed to the same altitude air traffic controllers had assigned to another flight off the northern British Columbia coast, an official said Friday.

The Delta jet, bound for the Orient, and an Alaska Airlines plane flying to Seattle from Ketikan, Alaska, flew at the same 33,000-foot altitude for only "a short period" Thursday.

Steve Rybak, a spokesman for Transport Canada, said the planes maintained a safe 10-nautical-mile radar separation.

Air controllers in Vancouver, British Columbia, had assigned the 33,000-foot altitude to the Alaska Airlines plane, Rybak said.

He described the Delta plane's action as an operating irregularity, adding that the incident was not serious enough to warrant an investigation by the Canadian Aviation Safety Board.

Cuba claims CIA plans to assassinate Castro

BATUA, Cuba (AP) — Cuba intensified a three-week old anti-CIA campaign by accusing the U.S. intelligence agency of gathering information to assassinate President Fidel Castro.

Four Cuban agents said Friday during an unusual news conference that they posed as CIA operatives until recently.

They said the agency continually expressed interest in learning details of Castro's movements and his personal life in hopes of assassinating him.

None of the Cubans said they received a direct order to make an attempt on Castro's life.

The news conference was held for reporters—who have gathered here for Castro's annual speech marking the start of Cuba's revolution in 1953. Castro will deliver the speech Sunday night in nearby Artemisa.

Castro seized power Jan. 1, 1959, ousting former dictator Fulgencio Batista.

The agents said the Cuban government decided to disclose their activities earlier this month because it had reason to believe their cover had been blown.

They said most of the alleged approaches by CIA operatives occurred after President Reagan signed an executive order in 1981 prohibiting the CIA from engaging either directly or indirectly in the assassinations of foreign leaders.

The CIA has insisted repeatedly that it has adhered to the presidential order.

Allegations of CIA attempts on Castro's life were frequent during the 1960s and early 1970s but virtually ended after a U.S. Senate investigation in 1975 uncovered eight alleged CIA-sponsored assassination attempts against Castro.

The Cuban anti-CIA campaign began July 6 when the first of a series of half-hour documentaries was broadcast on CIA activities in Cuba.

According to that documentary, 38 of the 69 U.S. diplomats assigned to the U.S. diplomatic mission in Havana since 1977 were CIA operatives.

Single Premium Whole Life

Better than CD's, T-Bills, Money Market Funds, Zero Coupon Bonds, Annuities or Municipal Bonds

6 1/2 - 10% Interest Liquid - Flexible

100% Guaranteed by over 50 leading life insurance companies with assets up to 100 billion dollars.

WHAT IS AN SP?

It's the most revolutionary, yet safest instrument in the marketplace: A versatile vehicle from Professional Economic Services, with almost-unbelievable-benefits-and-tax advantages. The SP is a Single-Premium Whole Life Insurance Policy - and a lot more than just insurance.

In a sense, this is a tax-free Certificate of Deposit, Zero Coupon Bond, Money Market Account, T-Bill, Annuity, Municipal Bond, and fully-paid-up life insurance policy, all rolled into one contract. Your SP gives you a tax-free death benefit and a higher income-tax-free-yield. It will never decrease your growing cash accumulation, as tax exempt bonds do when interest rates rise. And you can never lose one cent of your original single payment, as you can with municipal bonds.

ONE PAYMENT: You can make a single payment, as you would for a CD, T-Bill, Bond, etc. - any amount from $5,000 to $5,000,000. You get a fully-paid-up life insurance policy for a full lifetime, written by a major life insurance company thru Professional Economic Services. You get access to a whole world of tax advantages. And you never pay another dollar!

NO HIDDEN CHARGES: Unlike many mutual funds, the SP carries no front-end load or sales charges. No yearly management fees. 100% of your SP deposit goes to work for you right away.

LIQUIDITY: The SP's initial attraction is the tax-deferred interest buildup, but its real beauty lies in liquidity. Your cash can be withdrawn any time with a tax-free loan. You can also withdraw up to about 85% of your SP principal any time, with a minimum 2% interest loan. And you never have to repay any of these withdrawals.

TAX-DEFERRED ACCUMULATION OR TAX-FREE LOANS

Each year your SP insurance company pays you competitive interest on your principal. Currently, this runs 7 1/2 to 9% for 1 to 5 years, depending on the company you choose from Professional Economic Services. Your interest compounds tax-free, like all life insurance policies, Annuities, or tax-free Zero Coupon Bonds. You can receive your interest accumulation yearly via tax-free policy loans - or you can leave it in to keep on building up.

INCOME-TAX-FREE DEATH BENEFIT

This can be anything from 100% to 500% of your principal. (The younger you are, the larger the benefit.) The principal, any accrued interest not withdrawn as tax-free income, and the death benefit all go to your heirs with no income-tax or probate cost. Of course, you can avoid estate tax by leaving your SP to your spouse. Or insure another family member, if you prefer.

PRIVACY AND SAFETY

No 1099 form goes to the IRS while your SP is in force. And your tax free loans don't count for possible taxation of your Social Security benefit. The SP from Professional Economic Services is sold by over 50 major U.S. insurance companies, many rated A+ by the independent A.M. Best evaluation service. The integrity and multi-billion-dollar resources of these underwriters all stand behind your SP.

Report says some public funds tied up in illegal securities

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — At least eight public treasurers, for government entities around the state, have invested public funds in illegal securities, according to a report prepared by State Auditor Tom L. Allen.

"We could be sitting on a powder keg," Allen said during a meeting of the Utah Money Management Council, which monitors the investment of public funds by government treasurers.

The report said treasurers in Bountiful, Riverton, Monticello, Spanish Fork, Davis County, San Juan County and the School District of San Juan County have invested in mutual funds that are illegal under the state Money Management Act, which sets guidelines for the investment of public money.

Allen said the investments are illegal because they invest securities prohibited or before the date the money will be needed to cover expenditures.

In other words, the money can't be tied up in investments when it's needed to pay the bills.

Most of the mutual funds purchased illegal securities dealing with options and futures and some also invested in long-term securities, which, in certain cases, had maturity dates in the year 2017, the report said.

But the funds are likely to be sold before 2017, so the securities would have to be held under whatever market conditions and interest rates exist at the time, according to the report.

And while only eight violators have been found, Allen said many more are likely to be discovered. He estimated as many as 40 public treasurers may be involved in illegal investments.

Most of the treasurers seemed to be unaware of the illegalities, Allen said, and claimed they had been either tricked or misled by the brokers who sold the securities in question.

Allen said the problem underscores the difficulties of small town treasurers attempting to deal on their own with sophisticated — and Allen suggested, sometimes unscrupulous — investment brokers.

He said brokers receive better commissions for selling securities that are long-term and more speculative. For that reason, Allen said, brokers often aren't interested in selling the safe, liquid kinds of investments that meet the needs of small-town treasurers.

"I do feel misled," said San Juan County Treasurer Elaine Wilson. "I was told there had been some question on this type of investment, but that it had been cleared when, actually it hadn't been resolved."

Wilson invested about $1 million at 10 percent interest in mutual funds sold by a broker from a respected firm. She said she now plans to take the money out of the fund in August and could lose about $45,000 in interest unless the current interest rate of 9.6 percent improves.

The question now before Allen and the Money Management Council is what to do about the investments.

Letters were mailed to the treasurers giving them 60 days to get rid of the investments, and Allen recommended that if the securities aren't sold by then, state funds would be withheld from the municipality until it complies.

He also suggested that if the violation isn't corrected in 90 days, the matter would be turned over to the county attorney to file charges.

But both Allen and council members are wary of forcing the treasurers to sell if it would mean they have to take a loss in interest on the current rate.

"We don't object to selling," said Bountiful City Treasurer Ira Todd. "But the timing is bad. The interest would cover the loss, but we wouldn't be making a proper interest. In effect, I would be losing more than if (the market) turned around."

Todd said he invested $8 million in the money market at 15 percent last year. The current interest rate is only 12 percent, so any pressure from the state to sell would cost the city substantial interest.

Instead, council members decided to give the treasurers a chance to explain themselves. During the recent meeting, members seemed to agree they would be more pliant if the illegal investments constitute only a small fraction — about 5 percent — of the investment portfolio.

"The moral of the story," in Allen's view, is that entering small town treasurers should invest public funds in the state's investment pool, which is maintained by the state treasurer.

Allen believes as much as 80 percent of public treasurers would be better off putting their money in the pool.

"It's wrong for most of them to think they can beat the investment pool," he said. "That's the reason why they fell prey to unscrupulous brokers who make a lot of promises about what rates have been paid in the past."

Draft: AIDS carrier must warn partners

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Pima County's health director is drafting an order to bar a man infected with AIDS from having sex without first warning his partners, county officials said Friday.

Charles Pyle, a deputy county attorney representing the health department, said he will review the draft of the cease-and-desist order Monday, with the health director, Dr. Patricia Nolan.

Pyle said the order, which he believes will be the first in the state, is to be issued because the man has not followed counseling about safe sexual and drug practices in the weeks of the diagnosis, but because he has been tested positive for presence in his blood of an antibody to the virus that causes AIDS.

Pyle said it "should be emphasized that the reason for the order is not because of testing positive, but because of his concern that his behavior has not responded to counseling."

"It is obviously something far beyond positive testing" for the antibody, "The behavior of the person has not and will not be responsive to counseling so far, and hopefully will in the future."

Pyle and county epidemiologist Bruce Porter said such orders fall within the health director's authority and do not require court approval.

Pyle said the thrust of the order would be to require the man not to engage in dangerous sexual and drug practices. That will include no unprotected sex and no sharing of needles for drug consumption.

"The order also will indicate that (sex) partners are to be warned" beforehand that the man carries the AIDS virus, and will require a monthly counseling session with health department personnel, he added.

The order also could ban the man from donating blood, tissue or organs and from sharing drug needles.

Pyle said cease-and-desist orders are commonly issued on a wide range of health concerns, but that such an order would be the state's first to involve a carrier of the virus causing acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"It's a situation that we've been ruminating over for two weeks," he said.

Officials declined to identify the individual or give his age or any other details.

The AIDS disease destroys the body's ability to stave off infections, leading ultimately to death from related complications.

Ms. Nolan said if the man refused to comply with the order she would seek to have him placed in quarantine. An administrative hearing would be conducted first, she said.

She also said there would not be indiscriminate issuing of such orders to people infected with AIDS, but that they could be given in situations where infected people endanger others.

British anniversary celebrated

LONDON (AP) — Mormon leaders held a big dinner at the Savoy Hotel to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the church's presence in Britain, and heard videotaped greetings from President Reagan.

Reagan recalled that Heber C. Kimball, who led the first party of Mormon American and Canadian missionaries to England in 1837, "was so eager to start his work that as his boat was reaching the pier in Liverpool, he leaped the remaining six feet to the dock."

"Well, that eagerness and the inspiration of these young men bore fruit, and their mission prospered," Reagan said in his message to the anniversary dinner of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on Friday night.

The celebration marked the founding of the church in Britain in Preston, Lancashire, with the July 30, 1837 baptizing there of the first nine converts.

Preston's Mormon Church of 450 members is the world's oldest continuing Mormon congregation. The church in America, founded in 1830 in New York, was uprooted and began moving West to Utah 17 years later because of persecution.

About 100,000 British converts emigrated to the United States, and all 13 church presidents have been of British descent.

Presiding over the dinner was church president and former

Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson. The Mormon leaders who flew from the United States brought former Michigan Gov. George W. Romney and astronaut Don L. Lind.

Other guests included Miss America 1985, Shariene Wells Hawkes, who is honeymooning in Britain, and Donny Osmond, leader of the Osmonds singing group, former Prime Minister Edward Heath and British actress Jane Seymour.

Gordon B. Hinckley, second in line to the church presidency, claimed worldwide Mormon membership of 6.5 million, with 140,000 in Britain. He said the British Mormon population is growing at an annual rate of 5 1/2 percent.

City buys old YMCA building

CITYATELLO (AP) — The Pocatello City Council hopes to complete purchase and renovation of the old YMCA building and convert it into a community center by October.

The council voted 3-0 Thursday night to purchase the property from Idaho Bank and Trust Co. for $115,000 cash and five city-owned parcels of land valued at $416,000.

During the next few days, the city will be working on the legal documents for the acquisition to ensure there are no problems with the land transfer. It's hoped the city and IB&T can close the deal July 29, according to Mayor Dick Finlayson.

For three years, the city has worked on reopening the Y, which closed in 1984 after defaulting on a $1 million loan from IB&T.

Finlayson also is working with representatives from the Pocatello School District on ways to utilize the building and perhaps share some of the expense. A similar offer has been extended to Chubbuck.

Workshops held

BOISE (AP) — The state AFL-CIO is conducting information workshops for former Buttery employees in Boise and Pocatello.

The workshops will cover stress management, community services, financial management and job retraining. Spouses of former employees may also attend.

The workshop in Boise will be held from 8 a.m. to noon Monday in the Boise State University ballroom.

The Pocatello workshop will be from 9 a.m. to noon at the Idaho State University Student Union Building Little Theater.

Kimberly

Continued from Page B3 school district this school year. He will be paid an hourly rate, as needed.

The board elected to maintain the services of the Oakley and Jones Certified Public Accountants for the 1987-88 school year.

In other business:

- The new personal leave policy for teachers was adopted by the board. No revisions were made to the policy, which was first read at the June board meeting.
- Teachers will be allowed to take a third day of personal leave if they pay the $38-per-day cost of a substitute.
- Registration for students new to the Kimberly School District will be held next month. Elementary school students will register the week of August 10th. Junior and senior high students will register the week of August 17th.

- The board approved personnel for three positions. Two positions will be full-time teachers, the other is a driver's education instructor. This completes the filling of vacancies on the district. Eleven positions have been filled for next school year, including the addition of an additional third grade instructor and a secondary-school guidance counselor.
- Service bids will be solicited for milk, gas, diesel and coal for the upcoming school year. Awards for these services will be made during the August School Board meeting.

Liquor

Continued from Page B3 the petition. "He is a businessman and has rights. The city attorney will help him with the proper wording on the petition, so it is legal," he said.

Police Chief Donald Barkley noted that liquor can be purchased in Filer markets, and then people go home and drink. He does not see the consumption of liquor by the glass in taverns causing a "large impact" in the city.

Fort is staying neutral on the issue and has refused to sign the petition being circulated by Beardsley. He believes any petition will make a "concerted effort" in opposing the ballot issue.

But Beardsley disagrees. "I was told when I moved into town that you can't get liquor by the drink because of the church. Church people drink once in awhile," he said.

"I think city residents will support me on this," Beardsley said.

Council

Continued from Page B3 could move into the building, he said. The facility will be a benefit to the economy of the city by employing a "substantial" number of full-time jobs, he said.

"We will not take a business we do not think will generate a significant number of jobs," he said.

The building may be occupied in mid-September, but plans are not definite at this time, he said.

The council also:

- voted to install a new IBM personal computer in the Public Works Department, at the cost of $1,700.
- appointed Byron Machamer to the Jerome City Police force. Machamer is from Virginia and has had over three years of experience in law enforcement.
- agreed to install a loading zone for Stockmen Feed on West A Street, 100th block.

Aquino rushes to adopt laws before legislature convenes

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corason Aquino rushed to issue 11 new decrees Saturday before she loses her lawmaking powers to Congress, which convenes Monday.

One of the decrees issued by Mrs. Aquino increased salaries for military personnel. Another required music radio stations to play at least four local compositions per hour.

The 54-year-old president told reporters she will sign several more decrees Sunday.

Mrs. Aquino has issued 260 decrees since she assumed power and more than 30 laws since Wednesday, including a controversial agricultural land redistribution decree. She left it to Congress, however, to decide the timetable and amount of property landfills will be able to keep.

One of the decrees she is expected to sign Sunday provides for the creation of Regional Consultative Council to help Congress draft a law granting autonomy to 5 million Moslems in the southern Philippines.

Aquino has issued 260 decrees since she assumed power and more than 30 laws since Wednesday.

Talks between the government and the Moslem's Moro National Liberation Front broke down in May over the rebels' insistence that Mrs. Aquino grant autonomy by decree instead of letting Congress do it. The front has been fighting for Moslem rule in the south since 1972.

Another decree Mrs. Aquino said she will sign Sunday is an extension of the Aug. 28 deadline for amnesty she offered both communist and Moslem rebels last February. Mrs. Aquino did not say how long the extension will stretch.

She announced the plan to extend the deadline after Justice Secretary Sedfrey Ordonez said Thursday that only 261 "hard core rebels" had accepted her offer.

Mrs. Aquino has ruled the country by decree since former President Ferdinand E. Marcos was toppled by a civilian-military revolution and his rubber stamp National Assembly was abolished last year.

In Monday's ceremony marking the opening of Congress, Mrs. Aquino will formally relinquish her sole law-making powers and deliver a "state of the nation" address. Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel V. Ramos extended a military alert already in force in Manila to cover 12 provinces within 100 miles of the capital following news reports that Marcos loyalists and other groups planned to disrupt the opening ceremonies.

The ruling leaves only one of the 24 Senate seats vacant pending a recount demanded by administration candidate Augusto Sanchez.

Panama general insists on new leader

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The former chief of the Defense Forces on Friday called on Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega to step down as Panama's strongman and end weeks of civil unrest.

"It is you, General Noriega (who is) the only and great cause of this conflict that divides two million Panamanians," retired Gen. Ruben Darío Paredes said in an open letter distributed to officers and troops.

"You are the only person keeping us from reaching a peaceful and democratic agreement," the letter said.

Noriega, current chief of the Defense Forces, and Paredes are Panama's only two generals. Noriega is considered the power behind President Eric Arturo Delvalle's administration.

Paredes' comments were considered a clear boost to those demanding that the military reduce its influence on the government.

"There is little space left for maneuvering today," Paredes wrote. "Tomorrow could be too late. Your retirement should be planned and professionally ordered, to avoid stampedes and street disturbances."

Paredes retired after losing an internal power struggle following the death in a 1981 plane crash of Gen. Omar Torrijos, Panama's former strongman. Paredes has maintained a low profile after an unsuccessful campaign for president in 1984.

The unrest began in June when Col. Roberto Diaz Herrera, who recently retired as Noriega's second-in-command, charged Noriega was involved in election fraud, corruption and the deaths of Torrijos and of opposition leader Hugo Spadafora in 1985.

Paredes has a reputation for being more level-headed than Diaz Herrera, giving greater credibility to the call for Noriega to step out of government.

30 dead after Chilean freighter sinks

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — A 10,000-ton Chilean freighter sank in stormy seas off the nation's southern coast Friday. Thirty sailors drowned, authorities said.

Earlier, authorities said 18 sailors died and 12 were missing, but they later said the 12 missing drowned.

The freighter Alborada was carrying a load of coal when it sank off the Chilean coast about 300 miles south of Santiago, said Adm. Eduardo Alvalley, regional governor of adjacent Concepcion.

He said seven members of its crew were rescued.

In another storm-related incident Friday, six military personnel died when the bus they were riding in spun off the road during a heavy rain and plunged into a river, authorities said.

El Salvador rebels blow up key bridge

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas blew up a Pan-American highway bridge Friday, virtually isolating the eastern part of El Salvador, military and civilian sources in the area said.

No deaths or injuries were reported in the pre-dawn explosion.

The sources, who demanded they not be identified for security reasons, said the rebels blew up the Quebrada Seca Bridge in San Vtecento province, about 45 miles east of the capital.

120 Vietnamese sail to Hong Kong

HONG KONG (AP) — One hundred and twenty Vietnamese refugees made it safely to Hong Kong on Saturday aboard three motorboats, a government spokesman reported.

The spokesman, who could not be further identified in accordance with official practice, said one of the boats, carrying 18 refugees, sailed here directly from Vietnam. The other two boats arrived from China, where the refugees stayed after fleeing Vietnam several years ago, the spokesman said.

Delta does it again: jet at wrong height

PRINCE RUPERT, British Columbia (AP) — A Delta Air Lines jet mistakenly climbed to the same altitude air traffic controllers had assigned to another flight off the northern British Columbia coast, an official said Friday.

The Delta jet, bound for the Orient and the Alaska Airlines plane flying to Seattle from Ketchikan, Alaska, flew at the same 33,000-foot altitude for only "a short period" Thursday.

Steve Rybak, a spokesman for Transport Canada, said the planes maintained a safe 10-nautical-mile radar separation. Air controllers in Vancouver, British Columbia, had assigned the 33,000-foot altitude to the Alaska Airlines plane, Rybak said.

He described the Delta plane's action as an operating irregularity, adding that the incident was not serious enough to warrant an investigation by the Canadian Aviation Safety Board.

Cuba claims CIA plans to assassinate Castro

BATUA, Cuba (AP) — Cuba intensified a three-week old anti-CIA campaign by accusing the U.S. intelligence agency of gathering information to assassinate President Fidel Castro.

Four Cuban agents said Friday during an unusual news conference that they posed as CIA operatives until recently.

They said the agency continually expressed interest in learning details of Castro's movements and his personal life in hopes of assassinating him.

None of the Cubans said they received a direct order to make an attempt on Castro's life.

The news conference was held for reporters who have gathered here for Castro's annual speech marking the start of Cuba's revolution in 1953. Castro will deliver the speech Sunday night in nearby Artemisa.

Castro seized power Jan. 1, 1959, ousting former dictator Fulgencio Batista.

The agents said the Cuban government decided to disclose their activities earlier this month because it had reason to believe their cover had been blown.

They said most of the alleged approaches by CIA operatives occurred after President Reagan signed an executive order in 1981 prohibiting the CIA from engaging either directly or indirectly in the assassinations of foreign leaders.

The CIA has insisted repeatedly that it has adhered to the presidential order.

Allegations of CIA attempts on Castro's life were frequent during the 1960s and early 1970s but virtually ended after a U.S. Senate investigation in 1975 uncovered eight alleged CIA-sponsored assassination attempts against Castro.

The Cuban anti-CIA campaign began July 6 when the first of a series of half-hour documentaries was broadcast on CIA activities in Cuba.

According to that documentary, 38 of the 69 U.S. diplomats assigned to the U.S. diplomatic mission in Havana since 1977 were CIA operatives.

6 1/2 - 10% Interest
Liquid - Flexible

100% Guaranteed by over 50 leading life insurance companies with assets up to 100 billion dollars.

WHAT IS AN SP?

It's the most revolutionary, yet safest instrument in the marketplace. A versatile vehicle from Professional Economic Services, with all the benefits and tax advantages. The SP is a Single-Premium Whole Life Insurance Policy - and a lot more than just insurance.

In a sense, this is a tax-free Certificate of Deposit, Zero Coupon Bond, Money Market Fund, T-Bill, Annuity, Municipal Bond, and fully-paid-up life insurance policy, all rolled into one contract. Your SP gives you a tax-free death benefit and a higher income-tax-free yield. It will never decrease your growing cash accumulation, as tax exempt bonds do when interest rates rise. And you can never lose one cent of your original single payment, as you can with municipal bonds.

ONE PAYMENT: You can make a single payment, as you would for a CD, T-Bill, Bond, etc. - any amount from $5,000 to $5,000,000. You get a fully-paid-up life insurance policy for its full lifetime. You written by a major life insurance company thru Professional Economic Services. You get access to a whole world of tax advantages. And you never pay another dollar!

NO HIDDEN CHARGES: Unlike many mutual funds, the SP carries no front-end load or sales charges. No yearly management fees. 100% of your SP deposit goes to work for you right away.

LIQUIDITY: The SP's initial attraction is the tax-deferred interest buildup, but its real beauty lies in liquidity. Your cash can be withdrawn any time with a tax-free loan. You can also withdraw up to about 85% of your SP principal any time, with a minimum 2% interest loan. And you never have to repay any of these withdrawals.

TAX-DEFERRED ACCUMULATION OR TAX-FREE LOANS

Each year your SP insurance company pays you competitive interest on your principal. Currently, this runs 7 1/2% for 1 to 5 years, depending on the company you choose for Professional Economic Services. Your interest compounds tax-free, like all life insurance policies, Annuities, or tax-free Zero Coupon Bonds. You can receive your interest accumulation yearly via tax-free policy loans - or you can leave it in to keep on building up.

INCOME-TAX-FREE DEATH BENEFIT

This can be anything from 100% to 500% of your principal. (The younger you are, the larger the benefit.) The principal, any accrued interest not withdrawn as tax-free income, and the death benefit all go to your heirs with no income-tax or probate cost. Of course, you can avoid estate tax by leaving your SP to your spouse. Or insure another family member, if you prefer.

PRIVACY AND SAFETY

No 1099 form goes to the IRS while your SP is in force. And your tax free loans don't count for possible taxation of your Social Security benefit. The SP from Professional Economic Services is sold by over 50 major U.S. insurance companies, many rated A+ by the independent A.M. Best evaluation service. The writers stand and multi-billion-dollar resurvation of these underwriters all stand behind your SP.

Swiss foreign minister vows he will try Lebanese hijacker

GENEVA (AP) — The foreign minister vowed Saturday that a Lebanese terrorist who hijacked a jet and killed a passenger will stand trial, even though it could mean retaliation against Swiss citizens in Lebanon and Iran.

Switzerland's national airline, said it would tighten ground and in-flight security in the Middle East and other locations around the world in the aftermath of Friday's hijacking of an Air Afrique jet carrying 163 people.

A gunman identified as a member of the pro-Iranian group Hezbollah hijacked the jumbo jet, which was traveling from Brazzaville, Congo, to Paris, and demanded it be flown to Beirut.

When it stopped in Geneva to be refueled, the gunman, who also had explosives, killed a French passenger but was overpowered by the Air Afrique crew as passengers fled down emergency slides.

— Pierre Aubert
Swiss foreign minister

by the hijacker while wrestling him to the ground was in satisfactory condition Saturday at Geneva Cantonal Hospital. About 10 other passengers remained hospitalized with bone fractures suffered while escaping the jet.

The hijacker, identified as Hussein Ali Mohammed Hariri, will be tried on charges of murder and hostage-taking despite what may mean to Swiss citizens abroad, said Pierre Aubert, the foreign minister who also holds the ceremonial post of president.

"It's up to Swiss courts to judge this crime," he said in an interview with Swiss Radio. "One cannot exclude the possibility of consequences for the life of Swiss in Lebanon or Iran, specifically in Tehran. But that can't dictate our judgment in this matter."

If convicted, Hariri, 21, faces life imprisonment. He was being held in the maximum-security section of Geneva's Champ-Dollon jail. Hariri was not questioned Saturday, said Josef Herrmann, a spokesman for the Swiss Federal Prosecutor's Office.

Swiss authorities said Hariri had demanded the release of two brothers, Lebanese terrorist suspects, who are imprisoned in West Germany.

One of the brothers, Mohammed Ali Hamadi, is wanted in the United States in the 1985 hijacking of a TWA airliner to Beirut. A U.S. Navy diver was killed and 39 Americans held hostage during the 17-day ordeal.

Pro-Iran leader: hostages in danger

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A pro-Iran Lebanese militia leader said Shiite Muslim kidnappers might take action against Western hostages to support Iran against the United States and France, a magazine reported Saturday.

Hussein Musawi, leader of the Islamic Amal militia, did not disclose what he thought would happen to the hostages. He was quoted in the French-language weekly Nouveau Magazine.

Islamic Amal is a radical Shiite group that broke away from the mainstream Amal militia headed by Justice Minister-Nabih Berri. It is not believed to be holding any foreign hostages.

Musawi's remarks came amid growing hostility from Lebanese Shiite supporters of Iran against Western nations, primarily the United States and France, over U.S. military presence in the Persian Gulf and a France-Iran diplomatic dispute.

There are 25 foreigners kidnapped in Lebanon since March 1985 and believed held by Iran-backed Shiite zealots. In addition, Terry Waite, a British envoy of the Anglican Church who has been seeking the release of hostages, disappeared in Beirut Jan. 20. No one has claimed involvement in his disappearance.

Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, kidnapped March 1985, is the longest-held foreign hostage in Lebanon. Eight other Americans are among the hostages.

"If it turned out to be necessary and in the interest of the Iranian struggle against France and the United States, these parties (kidnappers) might take measures against the Western hostages," Musawi said in an interview with the French-language weekly Nouveau Magazine.

Musawi's group is allied with Iran's estimated 3,000 Revolutionary Guards contingent in Lebanon and has close ties with the radical faction Hezbollah, or Party of God.

W. German missiles block historic accord

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — West Germany's old-model Pershing IA missiles have become a major obstacle to a historic superpower missile accord, but government officials have left a slight opening to resolve the impasse.

Moscow insists on the elimination of the 72 West German missiles with U.S.-operated nuclear warheads, under a global plan announced Wednesday by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The West German Defense

Ministry said Saturday the missiles must stay, no matter what U.S. and Soviet negotiators may agree on in Geneva.

But the Bonn government says it could back down on the Pershing IA rockets if conventional Warsaw Pact forces were reduced, lessening the threat of an invasion in Western Europe.

At a news conference Friday in Bonn, Defense Ministry spokesman Horst Prayon, while maintaining the need of Pershing IA missiles as a deterrent against the threat of Soviet conventional forces, indicated the problem is solvable.

Prayon said the Pershing IA missiles remain "an option that makes NATO strategy 'believable,' as long as the Soviets have a larger number of conventional forces than the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in central Europe."

The Soviet-led pact also has more conventional weapons, according to the document, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press.

Crimean Tatars protest at Moscow's Red Square Saturday to demand the right to emigrate

Tatars demand right to emigrate

MOSCOW (AP) — More than 500 Crimean Tatars chanted, waving banners and demanded the right to return to their homeland in a rare demonstration Saturday in Red Square.

The demonstrators brandished their fists in the air and demanded an audience with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to ask him to let them return to the Ukraine's Crimean Peninsula.

"Motherland or death," and "Democracy and openness is for Tatars too," some of the banners read in the second such demonstration near the Kremlin this month. The 7 p.m. protest and the apparent lack of police retaliation were highly unusual. The rally appeared to be one of the toughest tests yet of the official policy of tolerance of criticism, which Gorbachev has advocated.

But news of the demonstration was not reported by either the official Tass news agency or the state-run television, which led its evening news with a story about the inauguration of a subway station in Gorky.

The Tatars are descendants of the Mongolians, who controlled much of ancient Russia for centuries. During World War II, the Tatars were accused of collaborating with the Nazis and deported en masse from the Crimea to the Ural Mountains and the Central Asian republics of Uzbekistan and Kazakhstan.

About 100,000 people, half of the Crimean Tatar population, died during the deportation, according to the Tatar activists. The survivors recently began agitating to be allowed to return to their homeland.

Soviets to put Rust on trial for landing

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet court will try a West German teen-ager who braved Soviet border defenses and landed his light plane near Red Square, a West German Embassy official said Saturday.

Soviet officials told the West German Embassy on Friday that Mathias Rust would be tried, said embassy legal counselor Gerhard Erver Schrommogens. He said the Soviets did not say what charges he would face or when the trial would start.

"We hope to learn that next week," Schrommogens said in a telephone interview.

Guerrillas, Salvadoran army both pass through town often

JUTIAPA, El Salvador (AP) — Hours after the last government troops broke camp and moved on, a handful of villagers chatted in the village square and speculated about how long it would take for the rebels to return.

"I think they'll be back by tonight," said Santa Ana Alberto Lopez, 62. "They come. The army comes. But in reality we are left unprotected."

Jutiapa is a lush village off a muddy dirt road surrounded by mountains about 40 miles northeast of San Salvador, the capital.

It is typical of many isolated hamlets that are occupied briefly by one side or the other in the 12-year old civil war between leftist guerrillas and the U.S.-backed government.

The people, including the 300 who remain in Jutiapa, are bounced back and forth as unwilling hosts to troops and battles they simply want to go away.

The elected mayor moved out a few years ago when rebels went on a kidnapping spree. The insurgents bombed the municipal building and destroyed telephone and electric services as part of their economic sabotage plan and guerrilla campaign intended to prove the government can't protect the people.

The villagers say they don't care which side controls Jutiapa.

"We just want to live in peace," said Lopez, wiping his coffee-colored forehead with his hand and then stroking the white stubble of a beard. "This town used to be filled with people and was so pretty."

Several thousand villagers abandoned their pastel-painted adobe homes and corn fields in 1982, just after the guerrillas grouped as the Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front took over Jutiapa.

"We all left," said Blanca Argetta Ramirez, 50. "I moved my family of nine to San Salvador. It was sad. We were lost there."

Mrs. Ramirez said the townspeople fled not because they feared the rebels, but because they were frightened by possible armed forces retaliation.

On Sept. 25, 1983, the air force bombed the nearby village of Tenancingo to end a guerrilla siege. About 75 civilians were killed, and the town was deserted.

"We thought the same would happen to us," Mrs. Ramirez said. More than 400,000 Salvadorans remain displaced by the war, according to the government and armed forces.

Mrs. Ramirez returned to her village after two years but moved into another house.

"That one was ours," she said, pointing to a house down a rocky road and alongside a rushing stream.

"We were afraid to stay down there because the other houses are empty and we don't know who can come at night."

Jutiapa has no police force or civil defense. There's always the chance the army and rebels will meet in their town and do battle.

"We close the shutters at 7," said Mrs. Ramirez, who wore a blue flowered dress and plastic thongs. "We figure we're all alone and we don't know who will come through."

Neither the rebels nor the army maintains a permanent presence in the town, but both pass by. The government troops recently stayed in the village for 15 days.

noon stillness was broken by the sounds of government aircraft passing overhead.

The small group standing on the muddy, unkempt grass in the shaded plaza looked up indifferently.

"Sometimes when the troops move out they shoot at guerrillas on the ridges or they bomb Cinquera," Lopez said.

A woman who had moved from nearby Cinquera five years ago joined the conversation to say that her house had been bombed and the village destroyed by government forces.

The air force drops an average of six 500-pound bombs per day in the northern and eastern parts.

Geology assists in hunt for clues

Rockhounds leave no stone unturned

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Armed only with microscopes, crime-fighting geologists have helped convict a kidnapper, locate a stolen Cadillac and send a killer to death row, and they say their rock-solid methods should be used by more police.

Many departments don't make use of "forensic geology" to solve crimes, which is a pity because "there are cases that could benefit from it if law enforcement knew it was an option," says geologist John S. Rapp, who detailed such cases in July's issue of California Geology magazine.

"I don't think geological evidence will play a role in many cases, but when it does, it's highly convincing," said Ruth Saavedra, a deputy California attorney general fighting the appeal of a twice-convicted murderer Gerald Frank Stanley. Stanley, now 42, had served four years in prison for the 1975 second-degree murder of his second wife and was suspected of the still-unexplained disappearance of his third wife when he was convicted of the Aug. 11, 1980, first-degree murder of his fourth wife in Lake County, northwest of Sacramento.

During the penalty phase of that trial, Rapp testified microscopic examination of pebbles found on the floor of Stanley's car showed they matched gravel used to bury another murder victim, 19-year-old Renee Wright, near an oil well in neighboring Colusa County.

While Stanley never was charged with Wright's slaying, Saavedra said, "The tie-in with the murder of Renee Wright, which was in great part attributable to the geological evidence, put the lock on the box."

"It was the most 'Perry Mason' evidence I've ever seen in a case of this importance," she added.

Stanley is now on San Quentin's death row for murdering his fourth wife.

Rapp, a senior geologist and publications officer for California's Division of Mines and Geology, discussed other cases described in the article in a recent telephone interview from Sacramento.

After the kidnapping of 10-year-old Kenneth Young, the son of a Los Angeles savings and loan president, diatomaceous soil was found in the kidnapper's abandoned car.

The soil is made of skeletal remains of microorganisms called diatoms, and state geologists determined the diatomaceous soil in the car contained an odd mix of freshwater and saltwater diatoms.

The discovery helped convict Ronald Lee Miller by linking him to a quarry where the boy had been held captive and where the same odd mix was found, Rapp said.

The geologist also cited the 1958 case of the Cadillac stolen in Burlingame by two youths who drove to Monterey, got lost on mountain roads, ran out of gas, abandoned the car, then hitchhiked home to Burlingame, where police picked them up.

The youths couldn't remember where they left the Cadillac, but said they hitched a ride with a miner who held claims for chromite, mercury and benitoite, the state gem.

"Out of desperation, the police contacted Division of Mines and Geology for assistance," Rapp wrote. Staff geologist Sam Rice was able to tell the Burlingame police the exact location of the car ... (because) there is only one area in the state where chromite, mercury and benitoite occur together."

In Stanley's case, Rapp linked the wife-killer and the Wright killing by showing the gravel from Stanley's car and the oil well didn't occur naturally in Colusa County but came from Bakersfield, and the only local area hauled north to Sacramento was put around the oil well.

Rapp said he doesn't feel like a hero for his occasional crime-fighting role.

Idaho lawmakers split on the effect of North's testimony

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Although Marlene L.L. Col. Oliver North's public image has changed from villain to hero in the space of a few weeks, Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, is asserting judgment on North's testimony. McClure, who is on the joint congressional committee investigating the Iran-Contra affair, has said throughout the hearings that the entire picture can't be painted by one witness or one statement. "But he added last week that open discussion on the matter is damaging to the country. "I think with respect to what has been said about the way our government operates in covert activities, the way in which we operate in secret diplomacy — and there must be secret diplomacy — is very, very damaging to the United States," McClure said. The senior senator, who participated in the questioning of North earlier this month, said other governments may be less willing to deal with the U.S. as a result of the open discussions. "I think it is very damaging to the United States, not just to the Reagan administration, Col. North or the Congress," he said. But two other members of Idaho's congressional delegation have different views of North's testimony. Democratic Rep. Richard Stallings thinks the administration has been hurt by North's testimony, while Republican Sen. Steve Symms believes the testimony was "the greatest thing that could happen" to Reagan administration policy in Central America. "Ollie North has sold aid to the Contras in America," Symms said. "It will pass." Symms acknowledged that North made mistakes, but said he nor has done a better job of explaining the Contra movement in Nicaragua than anyone in the administration. "A lieutenant colonel shouldn't have to say the things that the secretary of state ought to be saying and the president ought to be saying,"

Symms said. "I wish (Secretary of State) George Shultz had his willingness to speak up on these issues and with the passion of why we need to win in Nicaragua." Americans would support a policy that called for overthrowing a dictatorship, but not one in which the U.S. is trying to support the Contras and maintain diplomatic relations with the existing government, he said. "We need to overthrow the communist government down there instead of pussyfooting around," Symms said. Stallings said the national attention given to North "is going to damage the administration as much as any single witness there. They have tried to be the very best of their ability to discredit him." The 2nd District congressman said that in light of North's past record, he would have to see more evidence before determining if North has told the truth.

Second trip to Zip's for teen more fun; she wasn't arrested

Eatery has loitering policy

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — When 15-year-old Kristin Kilmer returned to Zip's Drive-in with her mother for lunch, she paid for her right to stay, ordering a 99-cent hot dog and Pepsi. "That trip last Tuesday was a far cry from her previous visit, when Miss Kilmer was arrested for misdemeanor trespassing at the popular drive-in after refusing a security guard's request to leave. "Getting arrested was a little outrageous," said the high school junior, who was president of her eighth-grade class; vice president of the Lakes Junior High ninth-graders; and who this fall will be one of five cheerleaders for varsity wrestling and volleyball at Coeur d'Alene High School. When Miss Kilmer visited Zip's on the previous Sunday, unlike her companions she didn't have the money or desire to buy anything. Kristin visited with friends at the drive-through window while her companions went inside to eat. Security guard Mike Fanning told her to leave. Zip's has a policy forbidding anyone in the premises who hasn't purchased food or drink. After Kristin went inside, Fanning stopped her and again requested she leave. She then sat down with Eric Hart, whom she had come with, and five other friends. When Fanning asked her to leave a third time or be arrested, she refused. Fanning then called the police; Kristin ordered a Coca-Cola, but Fanning made a citizen's arrest when the police arrived. "We come here quite a bit as a family," said Kristin's mother, Pat-i Swisher, when the family returned to Zip's. "We enjoy dining here." "Enjoyed," corrected her husband, Art. "They sure won't get any of my business any more." Art Swisher said the city's young people should boycott Zip's to stop what he sees as discrimination against them. Fanning said the situation at Zip's is "sticky." However, he said, the only way to maintain control is to enforce company rules uniformly. "We can't slack off because it'll get out of control again," he said. "We have to maintain what we've already gained." Following numerous complaints by downtown merchants, Mayor Ray Stone ordered a police crackdown on youths loitering along Sherman Avenue. Zip's owner Garry Fowler backed Fanning's handling of the matter and said he admires the security guard for putting up with nightly abuse. "Ninety percent of the kids who come in here are excellent customers," Fowler said. "I hope the good ones can appreciate what I'm trying to do to make this a better place for them to come to. I hope the parents understand the measures I'm taking to make this a family restaurant." Meanwhile, Miss Kilmer's case is in the hands of a Coeur d'Alene police detective, who will decide whether it warrants being forwarded to the Kootenai County prosecutor.

Doomed teen, trapped in water cave, bids family farewell

By scratching note on his scuba tank

BROOKSVILLE, Fla. — A 17-year-old scuba diver who had planned on going out to celebrate his mother's birthday instead found himself lost in an underwater cave, and scratched a farewell message to his family on his air tank before he drowned, officials say.

"I love you Mom, Dad and Christian," read the words on the tank, which contained only a few minutes' supply of air when found, said Sheriff's Sgt. Frank Bierwiler.

The tank was a few feet from where Jason Tuskes' body was discovered Tuesday, in 57 feet of water, in a spring which had been posted with a "No Diving" warning. Authorities believe the honor student got trapped in the cave and shed his gear while trying to make his way to the surface. When he realized he couldn't, he unsheathed his diver's knife and etched his last message on the yellow metal tank.

The teen-ager's father, Art Tuskes, said Jason had been close to his parents and 13-year-old brother.

"He was so exceptional. . . He was my arms and legs and sometimes my head," said Tuskes, who is wheelchair-bound. "It's such a loss. Why couldn't they take somebody like me who's been crippled up for 28 years?"

Jason would have been a high school senior this fall. He had been enrolled at a community college and was scheduled to receive an associate's degree in mathematics next spring. His goal was to be a lawyer by age 23, his father said.

He also was an expert swimmer and had made about 100 dives since obtaining his open-water certification in February.

Tuskes said he reluctantly gave his son permission to dive in the spring, with 16-year-old Vincent Cusmano after a scheduled dive in the Gulf of Mexico was canceled.

When Jason left the house Tuesday morning, he planned to be home in time to celebrate his mother's 42nd birthday by going out to dinner with the family that night.

Although no one will ever know for certain, authorities believe Jason got lost in the spring, near Weeki Wachee in west-central Florida, and became trapped in a narrow passageway. He had a guideline, which divers deploy so they can trace their way back, but apparently lost it.

"He got wedged into a small area. It was quite murky down there. The poor lad just didn't know which way to go," said Bierwiler.

Vincent made his way out of the cave but lost his friend as their movement kicked up silt and greatly reduced visibility. Experienced divers say the area is surrounded by a mixture of limestone and mud, an unstable combination that is easily disturbed.

"Most experienced divers don't even go around it," said Larry Green, a certified diver who made two dives looking for Jason.

The cave opening has a diameter of about three feet leading into a cramped, dark cavern that descends to 80 feet, divers said.

The "No Diving" sign is hard to see and may be misinterpreted to mean no diving headfirst from a platform, rather than a warning to scuba divers, said Hernando County deputies.

"It's really a dangerous cave. It needs to be blocked up," said Kevin Love, a water management district worker familiar with the cave.

The deep, vast fresh-water aquifers that underlie most of northern and central Florida are marked by hundreds of clear, deep springs. Over the years, dozens of sport divers have lost their lives in the honeycomb of caves-connecting the springs.

Soviet editor draws a parallel

Between Contra, Chernobyl probes

MOSCOW (AP) — Democracy may be nothing more than "a kind of theatrical play" if events such as the Iran-Contra scandal cannot be prevented, a Soviet editor wrote recently in his first column in an American newspaper.

Yegor Yakovlev, editor-in-chief of the Soviet weekly Moscow News, wrote that the televised hearings are similar to the investigation of the disastrous nuclear-power plant accident at Chernobyl in his country, in that both probe events neither country was able to prevent.

Yakovlev wrote a column in the Moscow Idahonian newspaper as part of a two-week visit to the United States. Idahonian reporter Vera White is in the Soviet Union as part of a journalist exchange program.

There are many differences between the Soviet and American press, but there are also principles shared by journalists in both countries, he said.

"The democratic possibilities of glasnost, which are characteristic for many American newspapers, are very important for me," Yakovlev wrote.

"For example, every day I see on the TV screens the sweating face and insecure eyes of Lt. Col. Oliver North. I think it's great that all the secret mechanisms of "frangate" are going to be known by the American public," Yakovlev wrote.

"But isn't democracy a kind of theatrical play if it only can investigate something that has already happened and can't prevent it from happening?"

"This question is important to us, too. Currently, there is a trial in Chernobyl (foreign correspondents are there) where the people who are to blame for the tragedy are to be judged. We couldn't prevent this disaster, either," he wrote.

Yakovlev, 57, said the principles of social justice "are developing quickly and irreversibly" because of his government's policy of "glasnost," or openness.

He chided those who say his publication is allowed to report more critically on Soviet life because it is written mainly for foreign consumption. "There are many stories on its pages that criticize the negative aspects of Soviet life now," he wrote. "The truth is that 25 percent of the circulation, or 250,000 copies, is distributed inside the USSR."

"For us the Soviet edition is very important. The readers in the USSR are in a sense controlling us. They don't want us to write only about the best aspects of the Soviet life (if anybody thinks there are no such aspects, it's up to him). They want us to write only truth."

Trying to debate which country's press is better, "that for one a freedom is unthinkable and for the other it's taken for granted, is nonsense," Yakovlev wrote.

"It can be compared with a quarrel between two boys trying to prove that one of them can spit a longer distance," he concluded.

Buhl joins Poky at state 'B' tourney

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

American Legion Baseball

SHOSHONE — Top-seeded Pocatello quickly erased an early deficit Saturday en route to a 16-8 win over Buhl in the championship game of the Southern Region American Legion "B" baseball tournament.

Earlier in the day, Buhl eliminated Shoshone 12-2 to set up the title clash with the Rebels.

That put the Indians in the state "B" Legion tournament in Meridian this week, along with Pocatello and Idaho Falls, who had qualified earlier. Buhl will open with the champion of the Western Region on Thursday.

Against Pocatello the Indians lost the coin toss, but opened with singles from Mike Brady and Derrick Brinkman and took a quick two-run advantage when Darrell Lebrman followed with a double against Pocatello starter Jared John Casey. Boyer drove in Lebrman on a sacrifice fly as the Indians matched their total output in Friday's 8-3 loss to the Rebels.

But Poky sent to batters to the plate in their half of the inning, exploded for five runs on six singles and a pair of Buhl errors and were never headed again although the Indians kept it close through 4 1/2 innings.

Cornello Hernandez opened the Buhl second with a single, advanced on Jeremy Schabot's base hit and scored on Brady's second hit of the contest to cut the Rebel lead to one.

Pocatello catcher Blake Bell drove in two more runs with a second-inning triple to center, then scored his team's eighth run on Brian Atkinson's bloop single to short right field. Chipping away at the Rebel lead over the next two frames, Buhl pulled back within a pair.

Leadoff batter Boyer singled to open the Buhl third. Boyer gained second on a wild pitch and beat the catcher's throw on a steal to set up another score when Hernandez lined a shot up the middle.

After holding their rivals scoreless in the third John Carroll, who took over on the mound an inning earlier, singled and scored on a Lebrman double which just stayed inside the left-field line.

After the Rebels extended the margin to 9-6 with four innings completed, Buhl picked up an unearned run on walks sandwiched around a Pocatello miscue. Rebel Coach Gary Parkin inserted Scott Wolfenbarger at pitcher to snuff that threat and the right-hander allowed Buhl just two hits the rest of the way while his teammates added seven runs against the last two of four pitchers used by Buhl Coach Tom Fleming.

"We didn't have any pitching left today," Fleming said. "Some of the kids had a few innings left, but I'm not going to throw them. Seven innings is enough."

In the eighth Brady, a 18-year-old southpaw, scattered seven hits over five innings and benefitted from a strong Buhl performance at the plate as Buhl — which batted last even 500 for the contest — scored in every inning of the abbreviated contest.

Together two out in the first Buhl put together three consecutive hits to move to third on Brian Hansen's single and Kelly Atkinson to grab a 2-0 lead.

An inning later Hernandez opened with a one-bagger and one out later moved to third on Brian Hansen's single. A walk to Brady loaded the bases and a second consecutive pass, that to tourney MVP-Brinkman, scored Hernandez. Schabot grounded to the pitcher allowing Hansen to score on the play.

A fly ball choice put Buhl's Shane Higgins aboard in the third and Hansen's one-out fly to center brought the score to 5-0 before Shoshone put the damper on Brady's shutout aspirations.

Braves' right-hander Mike Wallace, who was charged with the loss, scored both of his team's runs. He led off the Shoshone or charged home on a double to third on back-to-back sacrifices by Steve Vaught and Nick Gonzales before scoring on a Tim Tackett single.

The offensive spark failed to carry over on defense. Though as Buhl erupted for five more runs in the bases and a second consecutive pass,

Carey McNeal blasts out of a sand trap on the 17th green during competition Saturday at the Burley Amateur

Spackman chases Blakeley into last day of Burley Am

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Glenn Blakeley's sand wedge returned to a position of high esteem as of Saturday.

In fact, Blakeley has again taken to calling it "little darlin'" for the work it accomplished for him in the first round of the Burley Amateur Golf Tournament.

Blakeley, who has won this title before, carded a five-under-par 67 and credited most of it to "little darlin'" knocking the ball into birdie range and then "making most putts from seven or eight feet in."

Blakeley admits the wedge's restoration to a position of respect has surprised him.

"Two weeks ago in Jerome (during the state men's amateur tournament) I called it several other things," he said with a smile. "It started improving some last week (in the Canyon Springs Amateur) but I wasn't always good."

The upshot of the first round is that Burley has a double-barreled — at least chance for a local champion as Terry Spackman chased Blakeley home with a three-under-par 68 on the Burley Municipal Golf Course. And Ken Cerello of Burley, at 70, and Mike Cerello of Burley, at 72, have to be considered in the wings at this point but definitely not out of it.

A total of seven players teled on Burley Muni, although Spackman noted "it was set up very easy today with the tees up and the pins in the middle of the greens. I would guess that par actually was 68 or 69 today."

Chic Cutler of Twin Falls and Tom Smith of Boise were tied for third place at 69 while the trio of Larry Bull of Caldwell, Hutzings, and Kiefer of Ketchum, were knotted at 70.

Defending champion Joe Maloy of Welsch came up with a two-over 73 and will have a major challenge carding that seven-stroke deficit today.

Salt Lake team breaks baseball record for consecutive wins

By DAVID MONEYPENNY
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — It's a long way from the major leagues, but the champagne tasted just as sweet Saturday night as the Salt Lake Trappers celebrated the longest winning streak in professional baseball history.

The Trappers, an independent team in the rookie Pioneer League, won their 28th straight game by routing Pocatello 13-3 before a noisy, sellout crowd.

"It's like the World Series in here," Trappers Manager Jim Gilligan said of the crowded Salt Lake clubhouse, where champagne corks popped and players danced in the showers.

"I don't think any of them have ever had such a feeling of accomplishment," Gilligan said. "It's really happened for those guys. It's really happened."

The Trappers, with no major-league affiliation, surpassed the record of 27 straight victories set by the 1922 Corsicana Oilers of the Texas League and matched by the 1921 Baltimore Orioles of the International League. The 1916 New York Giants set the major-league record of 26 straight victories.

"Whenever you saw those kids under pressure, they gave you a win," Gilligan said. "In all the games when the record was on the line, they came through."

A crowd of more than 10,000 cheered loudly throughout the night as Salt Lake took an 8-1 lead in the second inning and coasted to history. The fans rose to their feet with two outs in the ninth and yelled until the game ended.

Fans started lining up for tickets outside Derks Field six hours before the 7 p.m. local start. Many who could not get tickets watched from the rooftops of adjacent buildings.

"It's a great feeling. We're not going to let anything get in our way," said Frank Colston, whose three-run double keyed a six-run second inning.

"This record is going to get broken again tomorrow."

The Trappers raised their record to 31-3 in the Southern Division of the Pioneer League. They have not lost since June 24 when they fell 6-5 in Pocatello to the Giants, a San Francisco farm team. Salt Lake was scheduled to play Pocatello on Sunday.

Reliever John Groenert, 2-0, got the victory. Pocatello starter Doug Messer, 1-3, was the loser.

Koichi Ikeue, the Trappers' top starter, started but was relieved in the second inning after allowing a run.

"I made the decision before the game that I was not going to let anyone get us behind," Gilligan said. "Under normal conditions, he would have stayed in there and he would have worked it out."

Salt Lake players earn about $500 each per month. They are mostly a collection of undrafted college players who joined the independent team as a last chance to make it professional baseball.

Colston is one of few second-year players on the team, which is now in its third season. The Trappers won the league title their first two years, and Colston said that accomplishment meant more to him than the record winning streak.

Salt Lake tied the all-time record of 27 straight victories by beating Pocatello 7-2 Friday night.

At the bottom of the first, three men were on base and Trapper Beuder to make something of the situation.

Beuder's grand slam, only his second homer of the season, came just minutes after teammate Jim Ferguson stole home and John Lenke scored an RBI single off loser Steve Connolly, 2-3.

Big Sky's incoming coaches talk up prospects

By BOB BLACK
The Associated Press

SUN VALLEY — Eastern Washington Coach Dick Zornes says he noticed a changed attitude on his team once it was admitted to the Big Sky Conference.

"There's a little bit more to go for," said Zornes, one of six coaches to give previews on their teams here Saturday. "At times (last year) we were walking around in a vacuum. That hurt us last year."

"We lost that Montana game and that knocked us out of the playoffs and there was nothing to play for," he said. "As we go along, they'll become bigger ballgames for us and I think for the people we play."

Also Saturday morning, Boise State Coach Skip Hall told reporters his defense is inexperienced and it will be up to the offense to carry the team in the beginning, and Montana Coach Don Read said he still is looking for a quarterback to replace Brent Pease.

The group also heard discussions from Weber State Coach Mike Price, who plans to emphasize defense this year; Northern Arizona Coach Larry Kentera, who has the conference's only returning starter at quarterback; and Idaho Coach Keith Gilbertson, who vows to continue thrashing the football, even with a new quarterback.

The meeting ends this morning with presentations by new Montana State Coach Earle Stoneman, Idaho State Coach Jim Koetter and Nevada-Reno Coach Chris Ault.

The Eagles, 6-5 as an independent playing Big Sky teams last year, have several factors in their favor as they play their first season in the conference.

"We are close to being as talented a football team as we've had in the past," said Zornes, whose team lost 22 lettersmen and 15 starters to graduation. "The difference is (in the past) we had some kids who had been to war."

Zornes said he will have to wait and see how his inexperienced players react under pressure, and he will get that chance in the second game, when defending champion Nevada-Reno travels to Cheney.

On defense, the Eagles will have an inexperienced line, but experienced linebackers, including senior Allen Gilmour.

"He's our team leader on the defensive side of the football," Zornes said. "We expect a lot of good things out of him."

He said Gilmour continues improving each year and by the middle of last year he was EWU's best middle linebacker ever.

At quarterback, the Eagles have senior Jon Snider, who completed 39 of 69 passes for 317 yards as a backup last year. EWU runs as well as it passes and senior tailback Jamie Townsend has a chance to become the school's all-time leading rusher.

Boise State's Hall, who spent 18 years as assistant to Washington Coach Don James, said the main difference between the Big Sky and the Pac 10 is that his new conference has less depth.

Unlike the Pac 10, which can give out 35 more scholarships than the Big Sky, teams with injuries at key positions can be knocked out of the

'Everybody wants to know about the quarterback spot. I do too. On offense, we want to build a race car. We need somebody to drive that car and hopefully he won't crash and burn along the way.'

— Boise State's Skip Hall running for the title, he said.

"I'd say there's probably four or five teams. If they can stay healthy by the end of the year they can be contenders," Hall said.

Hall's program will be modeled after Washington and Penn State and will have a balanced passing and running attack. He has depth at fullback and tailback, but backups at tackle are inexperienced.

"Everybody wants to know about the quarterback spot. I do too," he said. "On offense, we want to build a race car. We need somebody to drive that car and hopefully he won't crash and burn along the way."

Senior Vince Alesside, 32 of 73 for 407 yards in four games last year, is the favorite, but Hall is giving redshirt freshman Duane Halliday a close look.

Read at Montana said he has most of his offense back this year, but he's lost the big-play combination of Pease and Twin Falls' Mike Rice, now in the New York Jets' rookie training camp. Last year, Pease passed for 3,056 yards and 30 touchdowns and Rice caught 64 passes for 1,066 yards and 13 touchdowns.

Read said redshirt freshman Scott

Waak probably will replace Pease.

"Scott is an extremely talented player out of Oregon," Read said. "In high school he just tore up the state statistically. But he has not taken a college snap."

Read also is looking at junior college transfer Tim Winter.

"If you look at the offense, there are a lot of plusses there," he said. "I don't know if we're going to be as explosive... without those two guys (Rice and Pease)."

On defense, Read said the Grizzlies will be improved in the secondary, which gave up 22 touchdowns and 324 yards.

"We've got a ton of kids back," he said. "Maybe our stats will tell you we weren't the greatest defense, and I don't know what that means."

The key to our season is the defense," said Read, whose team was 6-4 last year. "Last year we won because the offense won. We don't have Rice and we don't have Pease. The offense just isn't going to make it without them."

Price at Weber, 3-8 last year, returns 15 lettersmen. The only question is at quarterback, where untested junior Jeff Carlson is expected to start.

Okamoto takes 1-stroke lead in U.S. Open final

By TOM CANAVAN
The Associated Press

EDISON TOWNSHIP, N.J. — Ayako Okamoto of Japan is heading into the final round of the 42nd U.S. Women's Open with a one-shot lead, and no intention of thinking about the last time she entered the last round leading the field.

"That was just two weeks ago at the du Maurier Classic in Canada and Okamoto went into the final 18 holes with a six-shot lead over Judy Rosenhall. She lost when Rosenhall shot a 61 and Okamoto had a 74 that day, and the major went out the window."

"You learn lessons both from winning and losing," the 36-year-old Okamoto said through an interpreter. "But right now I don't want to think about it. I only want to look ahead."

Okamoto's open champion Laura Davies of England right behind her after three rounds at the Plainfield Country Club.

Davies, the leader after two rounds, handed Okamoto the lead on the final hole Saturday by three-putting from 50 feet for a bogey and a round of 72. Okamoto missed a 12-foot birdie putt on the hole and was at 3-under-par 213 for 54 holes.

"I'm happy to be at one behind at this point," said the 23-year-old Davies, the leading money winner on the European women's tour the past two years. "I'm just as happy to be one behind as the leader."

Okamoto had an outstanding 2-under-par 70 in the third round and it could have been a lot worse, or better.

She started the day 1-under-par, but quickly went to 2-over with a bogey double bogey birdie. She got bogged on her first four holes.

"I was hitting my shots on one through four well, but I had some bad luck," Okamoto said. "I had confidence in the shots I was hitting, so I felt it was just a matter of being patient."

The patience paid off quickly.

She got bogged to even par by making a birdie at the fifth and seventh holes, and then really started knocking it close to the pin on the back nine. She sank a 5-foot birdie at No. 11, an 8-foot birdie at No. 15 and a 6-inch-er at No. 17. She also missed a 4-foot birdie putt on No. 13 and a 10-foot birdie attempt on No. 14.

Davies, who started the day one shot ahead of Okamoto and played in the same group with her, also birdied the 15th and 17th holes, both coming from par that four feet. Her round of par-72 included two birdies and two bogeys.

hand off the ball."
NAU led Nevada-Reno with six minutes left in a game to decide the conference title. Last year, but two turnovers on the Lumberjacks' 20-yard line gave UNR victory.
Kentera lost 10 of his defensive starters and he hesitates to say whether his team will challenge for the title again this year.
"Anytime you lose 10 of 11 defensive starters, that's a big job ahead of you," he said. "You don't win football games if you don't have a good defense."
He did say his defense made progress during spring drills, but the unit remains untested.

Sophomore quarterback Greg Wyatt is the only returning starting QB and Kentera said he continues to improve.
"One of the greatest assets he's got is when he comes up to the line of scrimmage, he studies you," Kentera said.
Idaho Coach Keith Gilbertson's team made the I-AA postseason playoffs along with Reno last year. His first as head coach. He, too, has to replace a quarterback but he's relying on sophomore John Friesz to maintain the Vandals' passing attack.
"Life should have a chance to get into the record books," Gilbertson said. "If Friesz plays in three games as a backup for Scott Linehan last year and completed 10 of 26 passes for 153 yards.
"He's going to get a chance," Gilbertson said. "I'm going to keep calling passes so unless he's checking off to run, he's going to throw it a lot."
Asked if Friesz could move the Vandals, Gilbertson quipped, "He'd better. I've got a mortgage."

Ex-KSU cager murdered

OTTAWA, Kan. (AP) — Former Kansas State University basketball player Jarri Mills died at a hospital Saturday of stab wounds suffered in an early-morning fight at a tavern, police said.
Mills, 35, was found with a stab wound to the chest in the Saddleback Lounge about 1:15 a.m. Found Mills, 29, lying on the ground about a block away, said Oren Skiles, director of the Department of Public Safety.
Mills, who had been stabbed in the chest, died about 2:20 a.m. at Ranson Memorial Hospital in Ottawa, Skiles said.
Two suspects were taken into custody in connection with the incident and were being held in the Franklin County Jail, Skiles said.

Dodgers farm out Duncan

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Shortstop Mariano Duncan was optioned to Class AAA Albuquerque Saturday by the Los Angeles Dodgers.
The 24-year-old Dominican, in his third major-league season, was batting .216 in 87 games with five home runs and 16 runs batted in. He went to bat in 11 attempts.
At the time of his demotion, Duncan led the team with 17 errors. The last three came in the second inning of last Thursday's loss to the St. Louis Cardinals. He left that game three innings later, complaining of a migraine headache.
"By not doing the things we are trying to get him to do," Manager Tom Lauderda said, "he's not bunting and he's not hitting down on the ball."

Vikings' Kramer cited for DWI

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota Vikings starting quarterback Tommy Kramer, 32, has a history of alcohol problems. He was cited for driving while allegedly driving while intoxicated, authorities said Saturday.
Kramer, 32, was arrested by Bloomington police on a charge of driving under the influence of alcohol and was taken to the Fairview Detoxification and Evaluation Center in Eden Prairie, said Sgt. Tom Whithead.
He left the hospital Saturday morning and retrieved his car from the Bloomington Police Department parking lot, said Lt. Keith Stone.
Kramer was not given a breathalyzer test, Whithead said. "Kramer's arrest was made (based) on officer observation of driving and the individual at that time," he said.
Kramer is scheduled to appear on Aug. 6 in Hennepin County District Court.
Kramer declined to comment when reached Saturday at his Bloomington home. But his agent and attorney, Larry Zelle, told the Minneapolis Star and Tribune, "What Tommy will do is whatever is necessary for Tommy's best interests."

Barry, Patterson prevail

RUPERT — Brett Barry and Mandy Patterson had the low scores Friday at the Ruper Country Club stop of the Idaho Junior Golf Tournament here.
Barry shot a 74 to win the boys' 14-15 division, while Patterson's 55 was 10 up in the girls' 12-13 class.
Fifty-five golfers participated.

Dodgers pull something unusual. Win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pedro Guerrero had his first four-hit game of the year and Ken Howell pitched five innings of one-hit ball in a rare start Saturday as the Los Angeles Dodgers ended a six-game losing streak with a 7-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Two of Guerrero's hits came after his bat was confiscated on the third inning, when Chicago catcher Jody Davis complained to the umpires about the legality of the bat. It was taken out of play by home plate umpire Jim Quick and will be sent to the National League office for examination.

Howell, 33, struck out six and walked three in only his second major league start in 185 appearances and his first start since July 3, 1984, his rookie season. He pitched 5 2/3 innings in that game, his longest big-league appearance.

Right-hander held the Cubs hitless until Ryne Sandberg led off the fourth with a single.

Brad Havens, who replaced Howell after the sixth, lasted only three batters and gave up a run on singles by pinch-hitter Bud Derner, Sandberg and Leon Durham. Alejandro Pena retired Moreland on a double-play grounder later in the sixth, and held Chicago to one hit the rest of the way for his second save.

Astros 7
Mets 5

NEW YORK (AP) — Glenn Davis drove in three runs, two with a homer, and Denny Walling knocked out two as the Houston Astros defeated the New York Mets 7-5 Saturday.

Walling tripled home a pair of runs and Davis followed with his 17th homer in a four-run fifth inning that snapped a 3-3 tie.

Jim Deshaies, 94, pitched six innings for the victory. He allowed four runs on five hits while striking out two and walking two. Larry

A Dodger reason to celebrate

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers were so moved by the inspiring presence of Manager Tom Lasorda in the third base coaching box Saturday that they were reciting poetry after snapping a six-game losing streak with a 7-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

"Rosas are red, vitis are blue, why Lasorda and I? Well, we can't lose," newly-acquired Tito Landrum said.

Two games earlier, Lasorda carried the group out to home plate for the first time this season, prior to a game against the St. Louis Cardinals. But shortstop Mariano Duncan committed three errors in one inning and they lost.

Saturday, Lasorda found the right combination. He replaced third base coach Joe Amalfitano and with himself, and first base coach Manny Mota with infield coach Bill Russell. He emphasized, however, that it was no reflection on Amalfitano and Mota.

"We've tried everything," Lasorda said. "I've tried different parking spaces, different directions to the ballpark, extra batting practice, no batting practice, holtering at them, hugging them, feeding them and starving them. I even tried lowering my pants, but it didn't help. Fernando (Valenzuela) said that it only made my legs look longer."

Philadelphia Phillies 2-1.

Palmer, activated from the disabled list earlier in the day, allowed two hits in the 6-13 innings. Palmer, 5-8, won for the first time since May 22. He had lost four straight decisions before losing on the disabled list June 19 with a sore elbow.

Garber finished for his ninth save. The Phillies scored in the eighth on a two-out hit to Vern Hayes, a single by Mike Schmidt and a wild pitch.

Perry hit his fifth home run in the first inning against Tom Hume, 1-2. Atlanta got its second run in the one out and scored on Ken Oberkell's hit-and-run single to left-center. Oberkell was out trying for a double.

Cub Andre Dawson robs Dodger Frank Stubbs of a hit

Andersen and Dave Smith finished up for the Astros, with the latter gaining his 1,000th career hit. Loser Don Schulte, 1-1, in his second start since being purchased from Tidewater of the International League, seven runs on eight hits through five innings.

The Astros took a 3-0 lead in the first on a double by Billy Hatcher, a single by Bill Doran, a double by Walling, and consecutive sacrifice flies by David and Alan Ashby.

single in the Giants' seventh. He tried to score on Mike Aldrete, double to left-center field but was thrown out at the plate, with Aldrete going to third on the throw home. Brenly singled to center after Jeffrey Leonard struck out.

Joe Gwendol, pinch-hitting for Curt Ford in the seventh, hit a two-run homer off San Francisco reliever Craig Lefferts to make the score 4-1. It was Gwendol's second career homer, with the first coming at Candlestick Park in 1983 off the Giants' Gary Lavelle.

The Cardinals trailed 4-1 entering the seventh. They started combined in the ninth on the walk to Jack Clark, a double by Willie McGee and an RBI grounder by Terry Pendleton.

Expos 4 Reds 3

MONTREAL (AP) — Pinch-hitter Mike Fitzgerald singled home the winning run with the bases loaded and one out in the 12th inning Saturday night as Montreal Expos beat the Cincinnati Reds 4-3.

Tim Lincecum led off the 12th with a single and Tim Wallach drew a walk from Bill Landrum, 3-2. After Hubie Brooks struck out, the runners pulled a double steal and Andres Galarraga was intentionally walked to load the bases.

Fitzgerald, batting for pitcher Andy McGaffigan, then lined a single into the head of drawn-in left fielder Dave Collins.

The Expos tied the score 3-3 when Wallach led off the eighth with his 13th home run. Montreal Manager-Manager Jim Rodgers was ejected from the 11th inning for arguing a call with first-base umpire Greg Bonin.

Terry Francona put the Reds ahead 3-2 when he opened the eighth with his third homer. All three of Francona's home runs have come against Montreal, his original major-league team.

Giants 5 Cardinals 4

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Bob Brenly, who homered earlier in the game, delivered a run-scoring, two-out single in the seventh inning to give the San Francisco Giants 5-4 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday.

Brenly, battling 409 over his last 17 games, got his game-winning hit off reliever Bill Dawley, 4-7. Scott Garver, 2-6, hit Gwendol's third pitch, was the winner.

Mark Wasinger led off with a

White Sox push across tiebreaker in eighth to tip Yankees

CHICAGO (AP) — Ivan Calderon led off the eighth inning with a double and scored the tie-breaking run on Kenny Williams' sacrifice fly Saturday to lead the Chicago White Sox to 3-2 victory over the New York Yankees.

After Calderon doubled, Greg Walker sacrificed and was safe at first when Don Mattingly failed to get Calderon at third. It was his first sacrifice bunt of Walker's career.

American League

Whittaker hit his 11th homer of the season on a 2-2 pitch into the upper deck in right field at Tiger Stadium off reliever Greg Minton, 3-1. Mike Henneman, 8-0, was the winning pitcher.

The Angels forced a 4-1 tie by scoring an unearned run off reliever Eric King in the ninth inning. Pinch-hitter Ruppert Jones was safe on Whittaker's error at second, took third on a single to center by reliever Mark Ryan and scored on Brian Downing's groundout.

Larry Herndon, Bill Madlock and Kirk Gibson hit home runs for the Tigers.

Herndon's two-out home run with Alan Trammell in first base gave the Tigers a 3-2 lead in the fourth inning. The homer, off Angels starter Jerry Reuss, was Herndon's sixth of the season.

Madlock led off the sixth against Reuss with his 10th homer to give the Tigers a 4-2 lead.

Bob Boone pulled Cleveland within one run when he lined a solo home run, his second of the season, leading off the seventh.

Twins 13, Jays 9

TORONTO (AP) — Gary Gaetti drove in four runs with a three-run homer and a single and Gene Larkin had two RBI in a seven-run sixth inning as Minnesota defeated the Toronto 13-9 Saturday in the longest night game in Blue Jays history.

Playing less than 13 hours after Friday night's rain-delayed game, which ended at 12:50 a.m., the two teams played for 4 hours and 5 minutes. There were 15 walks in the game and 28 hits, including five home runs off 11 pitchers.

The Twins, who won at Exhibition Stadium for the first time in eight games, entered the sixth trailing 6-4 and emerged leading 11-6 following an inning that featured six hits and four stolen bases.

Larkin, who also drove in a run in the eighth, led off with homer off rookie Don Gordon.

After Tom Brunansky singled, Jeff Musselman replaced Gordon. He walked Tim Lardner and gave up an infield single to Steve Niekro, who scored.

Greg Gagne then singled home two runs to put the Twins ahead 7-4.

After stolen bases by Lombardozzi and Gagne and an intentional walk, shortstop Tony Fernandez threw wild in the eighth inning. He allowed three runs on two first and two more runs scored. Then Bush stole second and Gaetti singled him home and Gaetti stole second and was singled home by Larkin.

Orioles 4, Royals 3

BALTIMORE (AP) — Eddie Murray's solo home run broke an eight-inning tie and the Baltimore Orioles won their 11th straight game Saturday night, beating Bret Saberhagen and the Kansas City Royals 4-3.

The Orioles' winning streak is their longest since winning 13 in a row in 1978.

Murray connected with two outs, sending an 0-1 pitch into the right-field seats for his 22nd home run. Murray had just one hit in his previous 18 at-bats before homering.

Saberhagen, 15-5, gave up eight hits. He is the winning pitcher in the major leagues despite losing three of his last five starts.

Mike Williamson, 5-6, earned the victory despite allowing the tying run in the eighth. Tom Nidenerfer worked the ninth for his fifth save.

Williamson replaced starter Dave Schmidt with two runners on base and two outs in the seventh. Danny Tartabull grounded out to end the inning, but Kansas City made it 3-3 in the eighth.

Bo Jackson got a bunt single with one out, took third on a single by Mike MacFarlane and scored on pinch-hitter Ted Bosley's sacrifice fly.

MacFarlane's first major-league hit, a two-run single, put the Royals ahead 2-1 in the fourth. Tartabull singled with one out and Frank White followed with a double before MacFarlane's two out single.

The Orioles scored twice in the fifth for a 3-2 lead. Ron Washington led off with a triple and scored on a single by Alan Wiggins. Wiggins took second on a groundout, advanced to third on a wild pitch off Terry Saberhagen and scored on a bad-hop single by Cal Ripken Jr.

The Orioles scored twice in the second inning on singles Terry Kennedy and Larry Sheets and Ken Gerhart's sacrifice fly, ending a streak of 29 innings without an earned run allowed by Kansas City.

Red Sox 11, Mariners 5

BOSTON (AP) — Big Sam Horn hit a two-run, tie-breaking homer in the fifth inning with his major league debut Saturday, sparking the Boston Red Sox to an 11-5 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Rich Gedman drove three runs with his first homer of the season and two sacrifice flies, Spike Owen had three RBI with a triple and two singles in a 19-hit Boston attack.

Rookie left-hander Tom Bolton, 1-0, earned his first victory in relief after Seattle shelled Boston starter Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd with five runs on seven hits and two walks in four innings.

Horn, recalled Thursday from Pawtucket after hitting 30 homers in the International League, struck out two and grounded into a double play in his first two times at bat.

Then, after Jim Rice led off the fifth with a single, the 6-foot-6 slugger broke a 2-2 by hitting a 1-2 pitch into the screen in left-center off Seattle reliever Stan Clarke, 2-2.

Every Boston batter in the starting lineup had at least one hit. Owen, Evans, Rice and Ellis struck led the Boston offense with three hits apiece.

Wade Boggs had an RBI single in the Boston first, but finished 1-for-5.

Rangers 7, Indians 3

CLEVELAND (AP) — Charlie Hough, getting home run support from Pete Incaviglia and Steve Buchele, recorded his 12th consecutive victory against Cleveland as the Texas Rangers defeated the Indians 7-3 Saturday night.

Hough struck out three runners on six hits, while striking out four and walking four in 6 1/3 innings. Dale Mohorich, the third Texas pitcher, gained his 15th save.

Hough, the 39-year-old knuckleballer, has notched his last 12 triumphs against Cleveland in 12 starts and his 15-4 lifetime against the Indians. Hough has a 4-0 record against Cleveland this season.

Hough started against 48-year-old knuckleballer Phil Niekro, marking the fourth time the two have met with runs across the plate.

Hough winning on the occasion, Niekro, 7-10, allowed five runs on nine hits in six innings.

Texas snapped a 3-3 tie in the sixth inning. Incaviglia drew a leadoff walk and scored the lead run on Oddie McDowell's double. McDowell took third on Gene Petrali's single and scored on Buchele's suicide-squeeze bunt.

The Rangers added a run in the seventh when reliever Reggie Ritter walked Incaviglia with the bases loaded, and Buchele closed the scoring in the eighth when he hit his 10th homer, off Ed Vande Zande.

Incaviglia started the scoring when he ignited a

Mike Williamson, 5-6, earned the victory despite allowing the tying run in the eighth. Tom Nidenerfer worked the ninth for his fifth save.

A's 13, Brewers 4

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jose Canseco homered and drove in four runs and Mark McGwire capped a five-run fourth inning with a two-run double Saturday night as the Oakland Athletics routed the Milwaukee Brewers 13-4.

The Athletics had 19 hits in giving left-hander Curt Young his 10th victory.

Young, 10-5, gave up only five hits before leaving with one out in the sixth when his left bicep tightened up. The victory was his first since June 24 in his second start since coming off the disabled list July 20.

McGwire, still one homer short of the American League rookie record of 37, hooped a fly ball down the right field line that fell between three Brewers to give Oakland a 6-2 lead in the fourth.

Terry Steinbach, Tony Bernazard, Alfredo Griffin, Luis Polonia and Carney Lansford singled in succession off Mark Kudson, 6-2, in the fourth-and-set up McGwire's double off reliever Alex Madrid.

Canseco's three-run homer in the seventh off Jay Aldrich was his 21st of the season and followed RBI singles by Griffin, who had four hits, and Polonia.

McGwire also drove in a run in the sixth inning with a sacrifice fly after Lansford doubled and went to third on a fly ball. The A's scored a run in the fifth in the same fashion on Steve Henderson's double, a fly ball and Bernazard's sacrifice fly.

Canseco's groundout after Polonia's single, a wild pitch and infield out gave the Athletics a 1-0 lead in the first.

Tigers 5, Angels 4

DETROIT (AP) — Lou Whitaker's two-out home run in the 10th inning gave the Detroit Tigers a 5-4 victory over the California Angels Saturday.

Cowboys end year with loss, defaults

It banged out 13 hits in each of the two contests.

The Cowboys were held to just two hits in the nightcap, but had eight hits in the opener and pushed five runs across the plate.

"We weren't in it from the start," said Tom Prater, field coach Mike Federico, who will play for the alumni squad on Wednesday.

In the next two innings, he rapped starting pitcher Eric Ochsner for three runs in the first inning, but Twin Falls answered with a pair of runs in the half of the first.

Tom Prater led off with a double and scored on a Shane Clark single. Barry Williams singled in Clark.

The Rangers added three more runs in the next two innings, but Twin Falls refused to fold answering with another pair in the bottom of the third inning.

In that inning, Ochsner singled and Clark got on base after drawing a walk. Ochsner scored on a Williams sacrifice fly and Clark scored later in the inning on a passed ball.

Then in the fourth inning, the hood gnat opened as Meridian sent 11 players to the plate scoring six runs on just two hits. The Rangers benefited from four walks, courtesy of the Cowboys pitching staff.

Meridian's second-inning single in the inning and Jim Straw added a double that drove in a run.

Meridian pitcher, Jeff Trudeau, then settled down and allowed Twin

Lora keeps ring title

MIAMI (AP) — Miguel "Happy" Lara of Colombia stopped Antonio Avelar of Mexico at 2:09 of the fourth round Saturday night to retain his World Boxing Council bantamweight title.

Lara, known as a stylistic defensive fighter, changed his strategy and took the offensive from the opening bell. He finished Avelar with a left jab that landed hard on the chin.

Once Avelar was on the ropes, Lara pummeled him until referee Jose Simon Delino of Venezuela stepped in to stop the bout.

Lara was swinging wildly and missing with most of his punches in the first round, but he started with a couple of lefts that rocked Avelar.

Lara put together several good combinations in the second round and hurt Avelar with a head in the middle of the third round.

The fight was halted briefly after 40 seconds in the first round because the loose canvas was bothering too much, but both fighters agreed to continue.

The fight was Lora's fourth defense since he won the title.

The Rangers got all the offense they needed in the first three innings, scoring 10 runs off a pair of Cowboy pitchers.

Staw had the big stick going two-for-three with a three-run homer in Meridian's sixth and seventh. Kevin Jolley, Dan Perry and Miran each had a pair of hits.

Flach, Seguso keep U.S. alive in Davis Cup

By BOB GREENE
The Associated Press

Tennis

HARTFORD, Conn. — Taking advantage of a surprising move by West Germany, the United States captured the doubles to provide the United States with a temporary reprieve in its battle to regain to the minor leagues of tennis.

West Germany still leads the three-day Davis Cup, but the United States must win both singles Sunday to avoid elimination in the next year's Cup competition. John McEnroe will meet Eric Jelen, then Tim Mayotte will play West German star Boris Becker in what could be the deciding match.

Flach and Seguso, the reigning Wimbledon Cup champions, defeated Jelen and Ricki Osterthun 6-3, 8-6, 14-12. Osterthun was a substitute for Becker, who beat McEnroe in a grueling 5-hour, 39-minute, five-set match Friday night.

"It was like leading 3-2 in the NBA championship series and sending in the second team to play the sixth game," U.S. captain Tom Gorman said of Germany's decision not to play Becker in the doubles. "I wouldn't do it if I were them."

Under Davis Cup rules, the doubles team can be changed up to one hour prior to the match.

"I understand they wanted to rest Becker for tomorrow," Gorman said. "It's an interesting move, but not one I would have made. I was shocked. It was like they were checking the doubles to us."

On Friday, Becker outlasted McEnroe 4-6, 15-13, 8-10, 6-2, 6-2 after Jelen had upset Mayotte 6-8, 6-2, 1-6, 6-3, 6-2.

The loser of this relegation round battle will fall to zonal play next year, while the winner will remain in the World Group. Only the 16 nations in the World Group actually compete for the prestigious international tennis trophy.

"We actually wanted Becker to play, because he had such a long match yesterday and it ended so late," Seguso said. "We thought we were confident we could tire him out even more for his match against Mayotte."

Flach said the Germans "made a wise choice... I hope it doesn't work out for them."

Nikki Pille, the German captain, said Becker "didn't come and ask to be held out of the doubles, but the decision was made because of Friday night's long singles battle."

"He hit for about half an hour (Saturday) and he looked stiff, as anyone would after a 6½-hour match," Pille said. "So I went over to him and asked what he thought about it. He said he thought it was a good idea."

Prior to the match, McEnroe talked to the American doubles team. "John said to us in the locker room, 'Make sure you have some long sets and tire Jelen for tomorrow,'" Seguso said.

It took two hours, 48 minutes for Flach and Seguso to complete the victory, although it could have ended earlier. The Americans were up a service break in the third set, but Flach pulled the set back on serve.

It was 19 games later before there was another break of service. And, in a way, it came as a surprise. Jelen dropped his serve three times in the match, once in each set. And after he was broken in the third game of the third set, he had to fight off two break points in the seventh game and come back from love-40 to hold serve in the 11th game.

Then, in the 25th game of the third set, Osterthun, who had been a model of consistency, dropped his serve at 15 when Seguso missed-hit a service return. The ball sailed high into the air but landed just inside the opposite corner.

Flach then held serve to give the United States the victory and its first point.

The only time the United States lost its first two-singles matches and came back to win was in 1934 against Australia. It was 14 years ago, 1973, that the Americans lost their first two matches at home. That also came against Australia, and the United States, with Gorman on the squad as a player, went on to lose all five matches.

The last time the United States has lost a Davis Cup match at home was in 1975 against Mexico. Since then, the Americans have won 15 consecutive matches on U.S. soil.

Navratilova off American Fed Cup team

WEST VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Top-rated women's tennis player Martina Navratilova, hampered by a sprained ankle suffered playing basketball at her home, was removed from the U.S. Federation Cup squad Saturday, a tournament spokesman said.

"Martina Navratilova's injury has not responded to treatment quickly enough and will be replaced by Elise Burgin," spokesman Henry Wanke said.

Preliminary matches in the 25th Federation Cup are scheduled to begin Sunday, with the main draw of 32 countries to begin Monday and Tuesday.

The Americans begin play Tuesday when they face Japan. The United States is hoping the extra week would allow Navratilova to recover from the injury suffered last week at her home in Texas.

The United States, West Germany, Czechoslovakia and other major women's tennis powers will have Sunday to rest or practice while other 20 nations open play at Hollyburn Country Club in preliminary-round matches.

The eight seeded nations, led by the defending champions, Americans, and 14 other countries begin play in the main draw of 32.

The host Canadians, unseeded this year after losing in the first round in 1986 at Prague, play Monday against the Netherlands, the same opponent as last year when Canadian won 2-1 on the strength of doubles victory.

Sunday's preliminary round will determine the 10 nations to advance into the main draw of 32.

Irishman Roche nears TDF victory

DIJON, France (AP) — Stephen Roche of Ireland virtually assured himself of victory in the Tour de France Saturday by taking a 40-second lead over Spain's Pedro Delgado with just one day to go.

Roche beat Delgado by one minute, one second in the 24th-stage time trial to take the overall lead. Jean-Francois Bernard of France clocked the best time in the stage, 48 minutes, 17 seconds on the 22.6-mile course around Dijon. But Roche's second place time, 1:44 behind, was enough for first place overall.

Cycling

Delgado came in seventh 2:45 behind Bernard in the final stage, second lead he wiped out Roche at the start of the day's hilly over.

The final stage Sunday will be a flat 119-mile course from Creteil to Paris.

And while the winner of the Tour de France has emerged unexpectedly in the final stage before, as in 1986, when Han Janssen of the Netherlands stole the victory, such these performances are very rare and Roche seems assured of victory on the Champs Elysees Sunday.

If he holds on, Roche will become the first Irish rider to win the Tour de France. He would be only the second English-speaking rider to win the tour.

American Greg LeMond, who won the race last year, was the first, although, who was injured in a hunting accident, did not compete this year.

It's a bachelor's life: Playboy philosophy fades as men value relationships

By MICHELLE COLE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When asked recently about the disadvantages of being good-looking, 25 years old and single, David Cederstrom naturally needed a minute to think. Finally, the Twin Falls furniture salesman grinned and said, "Are there supposed to be any?"

Still, Cederstrom hardly fits the stereotype of the confirmed bachelor who avoids commitment at all costs. "I had a good opportunity to get married when I was 23," he says. "But I felt I was not ready. I think I am ready now, if I could find someone who is at least close."

The image of the "carefree bachelor" is an archaic stereotype akin to the "dumb blonde" — it just does not apply anymore, says Paul Ives, a psychologist with the state department of health and welfare, who also has a private practice in Twin Falls.

Ives, 39, has been single himself since a divorce nine years ago. Since then, he has participated in a number of local singles groups, and says bachelors today are more interested in forming intimate relationships.

"It used to be that single men in my generation subscribed to the playboy philosophy — if the grass was not green where you were, you just kept grazing — but now people are learning at a younger age, that you are not necessarily going to find what you want by spreading yourself thin," he says.

The AIDS threat has also had something to do with this change in attitudes, and Ives says, "there will be a prize put on virginity again." Conversations with a number of Magic Valley bachelors not only revealed a very real fear of AIDS, but the men also talked of loneliness and of being too busy with their careers to build lasting relationships. Some even say women are not the only ones to hear the ticking of the biological clock.

"Most people around here marry young," says Cederstrom, "so many of the single women my age are divorced and already have kids." While he says he feels no pressure to settle down either from the women he sees, or from his parents, Cederstrom is beginning to want to have a family of his own.

"I always wonder what it would be like to be married to the women I date," he says.

Others, like Dan Brizee have begun to wonder if they might never meet the right person.

"I am going to be 30 soon, and while that is not a major panic factor yet, I fill with that there was someone there to share my time with," he says.

Brizee says he is most bothered by the thought that he might be too old to enjoy the family he has postponed.

"I am pretty much an outdoors person. That is what I do with my time off," he says. "When my kids are in their mid-20s, I will be 55 or 60 and I might not be able to enjoy the things with them that I like to do now such as kayaking, camping and backpacking. You never know what card you are going to get tossed."

Singles groups offer activities, way to share common interests

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Pat Miller, a Wendell elementary school teacher who is single, used to attend a couples square dance club in Jerome. The wives would say their feet hurt and they wanted to sit out, so the married men took turns being her partner.

It was better than staying home doing nothing, but she never knew if she would get to dance or not because dancing is one recreation where it is essential to have a partner.

Then, four years ago this fall, she attended an event at the Jerome Catholic church and the Rev. Bill Taylor asked her if she would like to start an inter-denominational singles square dance club.

Miller, a Catholic, joined forces with Rula Ringel, a fellow teacher who is Mormon. They sent out invitations to some 70 churches throughout the Magic Valley.

"About 70 people showed up and the Magic Valley Singles Square Dance Club was launched," Miller says.

The group is still going strong, with weekly dances every Tuesday night during the winter at the Jerome parish hall. In the summer, members meet at homes and usually dance on patios.

The singles dance club is affiliated with the Magic Valley Square Dance Association so members have a "standing invitation" to any dance sponsored by the other four "regular" clubs, Miller says.

"Some singles go and hope to find a partner," Miller says, "but we usually try to go as a group."

The Wendell teacher invites any singles "just sitting out there" to attend their dances. On Aug. 7-9, the club will meet with singles groups from Elko, Nev., andocatello at Nat-Soo-Pah.

10 Magic Valley women compete for Miss Northside title

Winner of the Lions-sponsored pageant will vie for the Miss Idaho crown next year

JEROME — The 1987 Miss Northside Magic Valley Pageant will be held at 8 p.m. Friday in the Jerome High School auditorium.

Ten young women from three Magic Valley high schools are competing in the event, sponsored by Jerome and Wendell Lions clubs. The winner will participate in the Miss Idaho pageant in Boise next year.

Dan Mink, Jerome attorney, will serve as master of ceremonies for the event, which is directed by Sharon Walker, executive director, and Diane Stauffer, assistant director. Neil Allen, Jerome, and George Crawford, Wendell, are the pageant chairmen.

Lynne Robison, Miss Northside Magic Valley 1986 and a finalist at this 1987 state contest, and Holly Hill, Miss Idaho, will perform at the Friday pageant. Robison will also crown the new queen.

Contestants are Nicole Brollier, Laura Cecil, Lisa Huettig, Natascha Mecham, Jan Pierson, Tiffany Spencer, Aimee Sue Tomei, Shelly Urrutia, Jan Marie Van Beek and Sjaan Zimmerman.

Brollier, 18, daughter of Emmett and Catherine Brollier, Jerome, was valedictorian of the 1987 Jerome High School class. She was named senior of the year, served as homecoming princess, choir accompanist and as National Honor Society president. She will play a piano solo for her talent.

Cecil, 18, also a 1987 graduate of Jerome High School, is the daughter of Don and Evelyn Aardema, Jerome. She holds two school track records and won state and district honors in volleyball and cross-state. She was a varsity cheerleader, secretary of her debate class and on the state championship speech team. She will play a flute solo.

Huettig, 18, was salutatorian of the Valley High school this spring. The daughter of Gerald and Ruth Huettig, Hazelton, she was named outstanding athlete in volleyball and basketball and has earned eight consecutive superior ratings in piano solo competition at music festivals. She will play a piano number as her talent.

Mecham, 16, is the daughter of Kay and Monika Mecham, Hazelton. She attended Valley High School where she lettered in track and basketball and earned a gold star in FHA speech competition. She has been class representative and secretary on the annual staff, a varsity cheerleader and a Girls state delegate. She will sing for her talent.

Pierson, 18, a 1987 graduate of Jerome High school, is the daughter of John and Edna Pierson, Jerome, where she lettered in drama. She was also on the annual staff, belonged to the choir and served as a debate judge. The contestant has had training in dance, art, drama and piano. She will perform a piano solo.

Spencer, 16, daughter of Glen and Paulette Spencer, Jerome, is a senior at Jerome High School where she belongs to the National Honor Society and will be president of the Chorallers. She plays in the band and sings in the Varsity Chorus and was selected for the 1987 All-Northwest Choir. She will sing for her talent.

Tomei, 18, daughter of Scotty and Sandy Tomei, Jerome, is a graduate of Jerome High School where she was active in drama and choir. ## Game aims to help family relations

KALISPELL, Mont. — Two family counselors have teamed up to market a game they developed to help families express their feelings.

"The Faces," a set of round cards depicting human emotions, invites players to match cards and encourages participants to talk about their feelings.

Creators Anna Louise Walker and Kathy McCaughey Wright both have worked with troubled families involved with the Flathend County Juvenile Probation Department. They knew that families need to learn communication skills in order to improve their perception of family. A critical lack of materials to help them.

Ms. Wright said she began developing the Feeling Faces game after she noticed that attention was drawn to a series of smiling and frowning faces in her notebook.

Expressions on the Feeling Faces cards are happy, sad, puzzled, determined, angry, excited, lonely, etc. Players can simply match them, as in many simple card games, or they can use them to stimulate discussion about emotions.

Singles

 While not everyone — single or married — enjoys social dancing, the success of the singles dance group underscores the need for activities geared for singles. Dancers have come from as far as Hatley, Rupert and beyond. Fairfield, Miller says, and regularly attend from Blues, Gooding, Buhl and the Twin Falls area.

board which meets weekly to plan activities.

Some of these planning sessions draw more people than the actual functions.

Thirty people showed up for one planning meeting," Stanley laughs. He says they have been fortunate in that there nearly always seems to be a "mix" between men and women.

In addition to monthly dances, members have a pinchele party every Wednesday as well as house parties and potlucks.

"We are required by our national bylaws to have two educational type meetings each month," Finney says. These usually include coffee and discussion and are aimed to help people adjust to single life.

Churches often sponsor social activities for singles and one of the largest such groups in the Twin Falls area, Southern Idaho Singles, is an offshoot of the now defunct Magic Valley Singles which was sponsored by the United Presbyterian Church.

The Singles group tends to attract career people from the late 20s to those in their 50s. Stanley is involved with the Flathend County Parents Without Partners is that in Twin Falls, its membership tends to be a little older.

But there tends to be frequent interaction between singles throughout the valley, Stanley says, probably because there are not enough in any one community to support many activities.

The local group seems to be about equally divided between divorced and widowed members, Finney says, most of whom are in their 50s.

Many churches in the valley also sponsor social activities for singles and the LDS wards all have active singles groups.

WENDELLE — Army Reserve Private Darren E. Byrne, son of Alfred Byrne of Wendelle, has completed a combat engineer course at the Army Training Center at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo. He is a 1986 graduate of Wendell High School.

TWIN FALLS — Airman Kathleen M. Anderson, daughter of John Anderson of Declo, has arrived for duty with the 36th Tactical Fighter Wing, West Germany. Anderson, an aircraft electrical systems specialist, is a 1986 graduate of Declo High School.

HEYBURN — Army Pvt. 1st Class Michael K. Greenfield, son of Sandra Greenfield of Heyburn, has arrived for duty with the 8th Cavalry, West Germany. Greenfield, an anti-air weapons crew member, is a 1985 graduate of Minico High School.

HEYBURN — Airman Allan Valdez, son of Hermenia Gonzalez of Twin Falls, has graduated from Air Force basic training at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas. He is a 1985 graduate of Twin Falls High School.

Sherm Stanley, Twin Falls, a board member, says the present group was reorganized last fall and will be definitely independent with only a "very loose association" with the Presbyterian church, where members occasionally meet.

The Southern Idaho Singles, which also draws membership throughout the area, boasts 110 members. Stanley says they never draw that many at any one function. Their activity slows during the summer, but the club operates on a roster each Friday and they try to hold some type of function each month.

Activities include picnics, volleyball games, dances, sometimes in conjunction with Parents Without Partners, and outings, including a trip to Jackpot.

The group is run by a six-member

"Twin Falls is a very tough town to be a single person," he says. "It is not an easy life to do in Boise or Portland. And many people will not go out to any function without a date."

Stanley stresses the purpose of Southern Idaho Singles is not to provide opportunity for singles to have fun and find people with common interests. Unmarried people also need to find friends of their own sex, he says, especially those with common interests.

Parents Without Partners, a nationwide support group for single parents, is also very active in Twin Falls, says Doris Finney, a director.

Somebody needs you

Bachelor

 Still, Brice insists that there are a lot of nice ladies out there, and says, "you just have to put forth the effort."

Since his divorce eight years ago, Tony Martinez has become a expert on the subject. He says it is virtually non-existent, but that is just not so, says Martinez.

"It is just out almost every night," boasts a 40-year-old divorced grandfather, who says there is no such thing as an ugly woman. "It does not matter if they are skinny or fat, as long as they are beautiful inside."

Content with single life, Martinez says he does not want to marry again, but adds that all the bachelors he meets are as happy.

Ives says single men drink more than their married counterparts, but that there is a higher rate of suicide and depression among bachelors.

Singles are beginning to reject the bad scene, Ives says, but in a smaller community that can make meeting members of the opposite sex especially difficult.

"At these places, people are coming to accept singleness more and more," he says. "There are graceful ways for singles to meet — more like in dance clubs and church groups where the atmosphere is not degrading or like being on the Love Connection."

It is not an easy life, says Howard Kestie, 47, found adjusting to bachelorhood difficult after his divorce a year ago.

There are advantages to being single in that you can come and go as you please," Kestie says, "but staring at those four empty walls doesn't make a person awful lonely." He says he finds local singles clubs, like Parents Without Partners, relieve the pressures of dating.

"A lot of people have certain ideas of what singles clubs are all about, but they are not like that," he says. "It is just a place to meet and talk at home and feel sorry for himself."

Handicapped woman seeks dance decline

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: What should a handicapped woman say to men who ask her to dance? I am a 27-year-old graduate student who walks with crutches. I enjoy going out with friends to listen to live music, and I put my crutches under the table so no one will trip over them.

When a man comes over and asks me to dance, a direct, "No, thank you," (according to male friends) is seen as snobbish or aloof — and invariably the guy turns and walks away without a word.

To say, "I really cannot dance," leads to arguments that "Everyone can dance," or, "I can teach you," which is very embarrassing. Were I to say, "Sorry, I am handicapped," it would cause an outpouring of sympathy, followed by a hasty retreat.

Abby, please don't suggest I keep my crutches in evidence as a tip-off. I am as flattered as the next woman by an invitation to dance. I need a quick, clever answer that will not embarrass either of us.

Your answer will not only help me, it will remind people to control the urge to say something sympathetic or to hurry away when they meet someone with a handicap.

Finally, it may teach men to react more civilly to a woman who, for whatever reason, turns down their invitation to dance.

DEAR EVA IN BEAVERTON — EVA: When an attractive stranger comes to your table and asks you to dance, instead of a "No, thank you" offer a pleasant, "I would love to — but will you please be seated so we can sit this one out?" My name is Eva, what is yours?

Now, what man would walk away from such a gracious invitation? After he is seated, you can then explain that you were complimented by his offer to dance, but you are physically disabled, and although you keep your crutches under the table, you believe in putting all your cards on the table to ensure a fair deal. Good luck, Eva.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is married and lives in Chicago. Her mother-in-law is 85 years old, in fairly good health and she also lives in Chicago. My son-in-law has a sister living in Chicago. If the mother should get sick, whose responsibility is it to take care of her needs? Is this written into Illinois law?

JUST WONDERING

DEAR JUST: Forgive me for reading your mind, but I think you are really wondering if your daughter is going to "get stuck" caring for her mother-in-law.

How sad that a child would assume the care of an elderly parent only because the law compelled him or her to! I'm sure that few mothers take care of the needs of their children because they are required by law to do so. Whatever happened to love and caring?

For an authoritative answer concerning Illinois law, consult an Illinois lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: I am having a bridal shower for my daughter who is getting married. Must I invite all the people I am having at the shower to the wedding, too?

My sister says that everyone coming to the shower must be invited to the wedding, too. I say, "Not so!" What do you say?

THE MOTHER OF THE BRIDE

DEAR MOTHER: It is true. Score: sister, 1; you, 0.

And by the way, Mother, bridal showers should not be given by close family members. Friends, aunts, cousins, etc. Mothers, not! For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Faulty Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

Women traveling more

WINTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — By the end of 1987, it is estimated that women will constitute 50 percent of the nation's traveling population.

Fritz Fishel, travel services manager for R.J. Reynolds, says business travel for women does not have to cause fear and anxiety.

Fishel, whose department arranges more than 20,000 business trips a year, says the nation's hotels are doing a better job of accommodating female travelers, particularly with regard to safety concerns.

"But you have to help them," Fishel adds. "Ask to be moved to an other room if someone is bothering you. Keep your door locked at all times. Stay out of dark hallways and know where the fire exits are."

Anniversaries

Harvey and Edna Vann
The Vanns

TWIN FALLS — Harvey and Edna (Mickey) Vann, Twin Falls, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary recently at a dinner-dance at Canyon Springs, hosted by Amos and Lurline Goodfellow.

Open house was held the following day at the Vann home on Skyline Drive.

The couple was married July 14, 1937, at Champion, Alberta, and shortly after moved to California where he was employed in the construction industry.

In 1948 he was made manager of foreign construction and worked in Saudi Arabia, Canada, Mexico, Australia, and Iran building synthetic rubber plants and coal plants.

They returned to the United States in 1968 and lived in California until 1974 when they moved to Twin Falls.

Saul and Florence Whitaker
The Whitakers

TWIN FALLS — Saul and Florence Whitaker, Twin Falls, will celebrate their 48th wedding anniversary with an open house Aug. 1.

Friends and relatives are invited to call from noon until 5 p.m. at the home of their daughter, Marie Mondragon, 160 Wiseman, Twin Falls.

Whitaker and Florence Hawks were married Sept. 23, 1941, in Santa Cruz, Calif. Their vows were solemnized Jan. 24, 1947, in the LDS Temple in Logan, Utah. They have lived in Twin Falls most of their married life.

The event will be hosted by their children—Marie Mondragon, Kathleen Hall, Dee Whitaker, all Twin Falls; Louise Jay, Jerome; Darlene Ball, Monte Park, Calif.; and June Trout, Haines, Alaska. The couple has 24 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Roberta and Robert Kehrer

JEROME — Robert and Roberta Kehrer, Jerome, will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary with an open house Aug. 2.

Friends and relatives are invited to call from 2 until 4 p.m. at the Moose Lodge, 226 North Lincoln, Jerome.

Kehrer and Roberta Martin were married Nov. 10, 1937, in Rupert. They have resided in Jerome since they were married. He farmed north of Jerome and she worked for the Jerome City Police Department and also served as police judge for several years.

The open house will be hosted by their children, Robert Kehrer, Payette; David Kehrer and Jack Kehrer, both Rupert; and Julia Turpin, Jerome, and spouses. The couple has 16 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Eugene and Sally Thomas
The Thomases

FILER — Eugene and Sally Thomas, Filer, will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary with an open house Aug. 1.

Friends and relatives are invited to call from 2 to 6 p.m. at Moonglow Village in Buhl.

Thomas and Lucile "Sally" Allen were married July 26, 1937, in Filer. They have lived in the Filer and Buhl area all their married life. He is a retired farmer. She worked as a bookkeeper at Farmers National Bank in Buhl, Rungen, Inc., and retired from Hawkins, Ltd.

The event will be hosted by their children—Sally Jean Thomas, Albion, Mich.; John Thomas, Twin Falls; Michael Thomas, Buhl; Judy Berheim, Meridian; Donald Thomas, Prosser, Wash.; Dorothy Lammers, Nampa, and David Thomas, College Station, Texas. The couple has 20 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

Device 'sees' with sound

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Ultrasound has been used for everything from detecting body organs to cleaning dirt-encrusted tools.

Now, ultrasound technology is being developed to produce a microscope that "sees" with sound instead of light. R.J. Dwayne Miller of the University of Rochester says he is investigating how ultrasound can create images of individual atoms.

Since ultrasonic waves are much shorter than those of light, an ultrasound microscope would offer a better examination of the surface of objects. One use may be in the production of computer chips, where surfaces must meet exacting standards.

Exercise helps lift self-image

NEW YORK (AP) — Exercise helps older adults suffering from problems such as depression, anxiety, low self-concept and a feeling of loss of control, according to the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

It says researchers studied 42 people between the ages of 60 and 79. One group took part in aerobic dance and walking-running. The other group did not exercise. The aerobic exercisers improved in all areas, it says, while the non-exercisers showed no changes.

The Olsons

RUPERT — Wesley and Verna Olson will be honored at an open house Aug. 1 in observance of their 50th wedding anniversary.

Friends and relatives are invited to call from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Rupert Seventh Ward LDS Church, Eighth and G Streets, Rupert.

Olson and Verna Redington were married July 26, 1937, in Salt Lake City and their marriage later was solemnized at the LDS Temple in Logan, Utah.

They lived in Salt Lake City, Spokane and Lewiston before coming to Rupert 16 years ago. He worked for International Harvester Co., and she was employed at Simplots in Hoyburn and Magic Valley Foods in Rupert. Both are now retired.

The event will be hosted by their five children, Dennis Olson, Sandy, Utah; Nola Budge, Clarksburg, Md.; Renee Clinger, Freedom, Wyo.; Jerry Olson, Boseman, Mont.; and Tina Fisher, Phoenix. The couple has 31 grandchildren.

Lunch: Most-often skipped meal

By The Los Angeles Times

Every nine days out of 10, an estimated 15 million Americans choose to skip — lunch, that is. Folks who forgo lunch that frequently have grown in number by 63 percent since 1977.

That is the word from an MRCA Information Services survey of 5,600 persons who kept eating diaries. Lunch is by far the most popular meal to bypass. All in all, 16 percent of lunches are skipped, 11 percent of breakfasts, and 5 percent of dinners, according to the survey.

"Men 18 to 34 are more than twice as likely to skip lunch as women the same age," says David Fencel of MRCA.

Missing lunch is also a major mistake for dieters.

The event is being hosted by their children, Bob Spencer, Cottonwood, Utah; Chuck Spencer, St. George, Utah; and Don Spencer, Jerome. Bonnie Palmer and Jeanne Kincheloe, both Jerome, also will host. The couple has 16 grandchildren.

Business-like farmers turning a profit

Amid reports of farm failure and bankruptcy, some farmers are turning a profit.

Successful Farming magazine profiled five profitable farmers to find out the secrets of their success. The farmers had several characteristics in common.

Good records: Investing the extra time to get and use good production and financial records yields results. The primary functions of records are increasing profitability, aiding in decision-making and helping to get credit.

Professional advice: A farmer who recognizes his limitations, in both time and expertise, can hire help when needed. Successful farmers have accountants who, in addition to doing the tax work, also advise on the business management of the farm.

Other options: Diversity and flexibility help farmers find other good options if farming does not pay.

Low machinery costs: Profitable farmers are conservative machinery buyers. Equipment can be modified both to improve design and save money.

Cost control is imperative in buying for the farm. Fertilizer, animal health drugs or equipment that will not show a return are not purchased.

There is strong evidence that the main difference between farmers who make money and those who do not, is cost control.

For a joint study by Auburn University Extension and the Alabama Farm Analysis Association, Alan Miller divided farmers into two groups, those with the most and least profit. He found both had similar proportions of owned and rented land, yields, crop mixes, debt levels and gross returns per acre.

The high profit farms were slightly larger, but the big difference was on the expense side. High profit farms spent almost $22 less per tillable acre for seed, chemicals and fertilizer. They spent $19 per acre less for power and equipment. The high profit farms gained small advantages for most other expense items, too.

Interestingly, however, the high profit farms paid almost $10 more per tillable acre for rented land, which suggests they rent higher quality ground.

The farms with the highest returns pay more attention to details and spend more time monitoring their businesses," Miller concluded.

In addition, these farmers have a positive attitude. They believe in excellence and set goals for themselves. Enthusiasm and optimism are critical.

The Bon adopts high-tech styling

After 10 months, store set for mall premiere

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Mall gets its final and most fashionable anchor Thursday as The Bon opens a mirrored, high-tech, close department store designed to appeal to the upper-moderate income shopper.

At the same time, the Seattle-based chain is closing its four-level store downtown after 43 years in the city center.

Ten months in the making, the Magic Valley Mall store will premiere with few new departments, but with a much broader range of clothes and home articles across the sales floor, says Carl Koehler, resident general manager.

The Bon will stake down the west end of the enclosed mall with the second largest store in the complex. With 63,300 square feet of sales floor, the new building has two-thirds more retail space than the downtown store closed on Saturday.

The Bon moves in more than nine months after the debut of the mall, at the far north end of Twin Falls. Nevertheless, the arrival of the chain store is being greeted almost like a second grand opening with a line-up of promotions ranging from a hot-air balloon festival to in-store giveaways.

Wilbur Fix, chief executive for the department store chain, snips the ribbon Thursday at the new store at 9:30 a.m.

Behind the hoopla are several bottom-line opportunities for The Bon to set up shop at the sprawling complex.

Prime among them is a new, built-for-Bon facility. Opportunities to showcase the upscale merchandise are limited by the shape of the downtown store and its several levels. A customer could not easily "shop the store," Koehler indicated last week as the mannequins were being set up at the Magic Valley Mall.

The store is laid out on a single level. Shoppers can see the circular walkway with easy eyesight of 22 departments, said John DeGues, group director of stores and a Bon vice-president. Instead of being deep and hard to see, the departments are shallow and wide to grab attention.

At the same time, the layout separates the departments with stylish settings and interior walls. For instance, one display features a wall with artificial back-lighting through a window to show how the drapes would look in sunlight.

The decor ranges from high-tech floor dominated by grays to softer colors for linen and clothing departments.

At the older store, shoppers often had to climb stairs to buy accessories for their purchases, Koehler said. Most accessories now are located in a central core within a few steps of the main departments on the perimeter of the concourse.

The modernized scheme of the mall store ties it closely to others in the 41-store network run by The Bon.

A second, major advantage comes from the size of the new store. The new retail setting will be spacious enough for full displays of Bon lines. Although the downtown store generally had carried most lines of clothing, it had smaller selections.

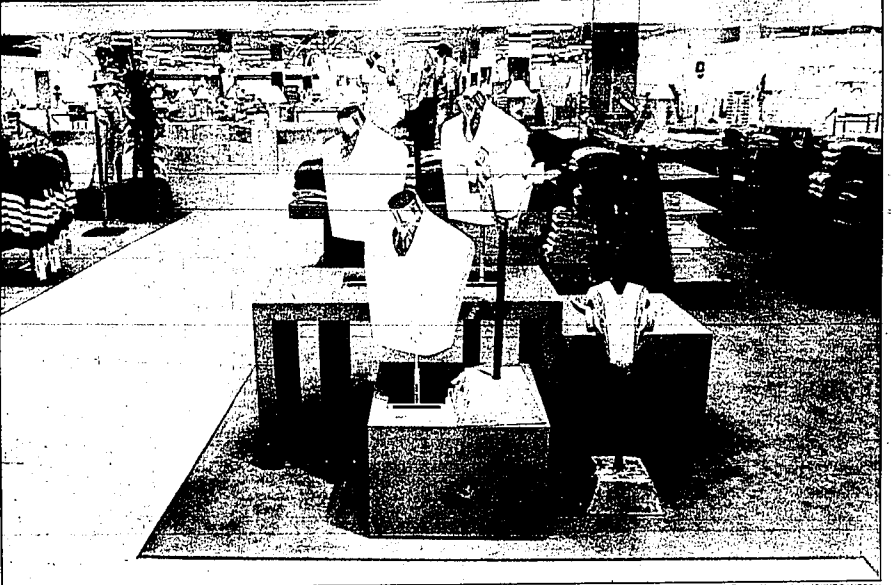

In some instances, such as in the menswear department, "it will allow us to add a layer of fashion we did not have before," DeGues said.

Thirdly, the made-to-order construction also has built in sophisticated links to The Bon chain. The climate control system is operated by a computer in the Seattle headquarters. On the selling side, the bridal registry electronically is copied at other Bon outlets, allowing customers to shop locally for a Twin Falls bride.

As with other stores, availability of large stinks parking also was an important factor, Koehler said.

Finally, the chain also expects to gain significant customer traffic at

Downtown merchants move to fill gap

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The departure of The Bon from its downtown home of four decades will be felt in downtown cash registers. However, merchants also are moving to fill both the merchandising gap and a physical gap left by the vacant building.

"It is important," says Sue Ann Jones, coordinator of the Twin Falls Business Improvement District representing downtown interests. "For one thing, they obviously were a large store and they generated a lot of traffic."

The Bon building also combines with other vacant stores across

Main Avenue tending to isolate retail shops at the southeast end of the open-air mall. The J.C. Penney store moved to the Magic Valley Mall last fall and the ID store closed last year.

"The stores that are past those three stores at the very end of the mall area will not realize the benefits of the traffic that was created by (The Bon)," she said.

The BID is centering many of its promotional events at the fountain at Second Ave. to attract more shopping attention, Jones said.

Beyond that, though, filling the buildings with new tenants has become the top priority of the downtown organization.

The Bon still holds a lease for its building until mid-1989. But Bon officials said that Price Development Co. of Salt Lake City — owners of the Magic Valley Mall and the J.C. Penney store — are to take over management of the building as part of the move.

"I think the big hurdle is getting over the first occupancy in the first building," Jones says.

Although the loss of The Bon will not hurt downtown in some merchandising areas where competitors have been in business, it does take the last full-line department store off the main mall.

The BID now will focus on Sears Roebuck & Co. on the far western end of the downtown as the department store for the retail district.

However, the opening of the Magic Valley Mall last fall had far fewer effects on downtown retailing than many store owners expected. One reason is a "captive" group of downtown workers who tend to shop the area during working hours and after work.

That experience suggests that the closing of The Bon downtown will take a lesser toll in cash registers than merchants now fear.

"I do not think it is going to be as bad as everyone expects, Jones said. "We still have very viable businesses in that area."

"What we want to put across is the idea that it is not going to shut down the downtown."

Heat threatens poultry; shorts out water, power supplies

By RICHARD HEIZFELDER
The Associated Press

Farmers worked to keep crops and animals cool Friday as a stubborn weather system brought heat and humidity to the Eastern third of the nation for a seventh straight day, causing water and power shortages and threatening to shut down a nuclear power plant.

The weather system left 14 people dead — seven from the heat, four by lightning and two by drowning.

"This weather is my mental vision of hell," said Earl Bountree, who raises livestock in North Carolina.

Power use was up as air conditioners ran full blast, and thirsty customers raised water use 50 percent in some areas. Some towns imposed water rations and stagnant air was becoming unhealthy in metropolitan areas.

Beach use was at a peak for a week, with over 30,000 people heading for the state's Lake Park in Lake Erie. Others stayed in their air-conditioned offices and avoided the great, hot wet outdoors.

Thermometers in Newark, N.J., and Lansing, Mich., hit 94 at midday for the seventh straight day. Friday, and five consecutive days of 90-plus weather tied a northeastern Ohio record set in 1959.

In Worcester, Mass., the owner of Peter's pet predicted a good weekend after watching his pet Doberman, Blitz, chew on a block of ice.

"You get the people going to the beach in the morning and people with pencils and people trying to keep the kegs of beer cold," John Landoli said. "Every couple of years I also get one of the guys who buys a 300-pound block to cool off his pool. But I haven't gotten one of those yet."

In the Chesapeake Bay region, an estimated 1 million chickens have died in the past week, officials said. The toll in North Carolina was put at 200,000, and a spokesman for Holly Farms said they had lost 200,000 broilers and 3,000 broilers, mostly in Virginia.

Producers were advised to use sprinklers and fans to keep their birds cool, and the weather service said livestock hauling in the South should be restricted to morning or nighttime hours.

Pennsylvania officials said the sticky heat was unloading many of the state's 8 million car inspection stickers. Transparent tape was prescribed. In Texas, Georgia and Florida, the National Weather Service warned farmers that chemical spray for pest control could evaporate too quickly to be effective unless the spraying was done in the morning. Irrigation was best done in the evening to avoid daytime evaporation.

In Connecticut, Gov. William A. O'Neill switched off the air conditioner in his office and asked residents to cut back on electricity use. Northeast Utilities said it was cutting power 5 percent due to heavy demand for the first time in 14 years.

Officials at a Connecticut state women's prison limited showers and considered using paper plates to cut down on dishwashing. East Lyme residents were asked to refrain from watering lawns and gardens, washing cars and boats or filling swimming pools.

Jeff Loch of Rent-To-Own Centers in Hampton Roads, Va., said the heat was a windfall. He rented the last of 200-air conditioners from his store when the mercury hit 90 degrees Tuesday. One Virginia group donated fans to public housing tenants who could not afford relief.

U.S. sees end to export rut, regains lost grain markets

By ROBERT LEE ZIMMER
The Associated Press

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Farmers in the United States, who have been through "six rough years," are beginning to regain important export markets for commodities like corn, the president of the U.S. Feed Grains Council said Thursday.

"We feel good to be able to start reporting that we've bottomed out and things are turning up," said Darson Stolle, whose organization helps find customers for U.S. grain. "That's the encouraging signal."

Stolle said the value of U.S. agricultural exports, an important factor in a healthy farm economy, fell from $44 billion in 1979-80 to $26 billion in 1985-86.

And, in about the same period, the export volume of feed grains dropped from 71.6 million metric tons to 36 million tons, he said.

Stolle said the value of U.S. agricultural exports, an important factor in a healthy farm economy, fell from $44 billion in 1979-80 to $26 billion in 1985-86.

And, in about the same period, the export volume of feed grains dropped from 71.6 million metric tons to 36 million tons, he said.

But Stolle said U.S. sales of feed grain abroad should increase by a total of 14 million tons this year and next year, partly because of a federal farm program that has lowered prices to competitive levels on the world market.

World trade in feed grain will increase 7 million tons in that same two-year period, Stolle said.

prices, which improve the buying power of oil-producing nations, he said.

Stolle also said some nations like Egypt and Turkey are improving their economies and spending more money on food.

At the same time, Stolle said U.S. farmers are reducing their production, which will help get rid of the huge grain surplus that has depressed farm prices, said Stolle.

Stolle praised a recent proposal by the Reagan administration that all nations end all export and internal subsidies on grain sales and production and open their doors to free world trade.

He said that was "a daring first step toward a more rational trading system for agricultural commodities," but he cautioned against the United States unilaterally dropping its farm subsidies.

Economy looks healthier, shows 2.6 percent growth

By MARTIN CRUSSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy grew at a moderate 2.6 percent annual rate in the spring, bolstered by a shrinking foreign trade deficit and faster consumer and business spending, the government reported Friday.

The Commerce Department said the performance of the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, was "down from a 4.4 percent rate of increase in the first three months of the year."

But it was still up substantially from what many economists had been expecting and prompted some analysts to boost their growth expectations for the rest of 1987.

The Reagan administration hailed the economy's spring performance as proof that the current recovery, now in its fifth year, is showing renewed signs of vigor.

target for the entire year will be reached.

"Nothing is over in the bag, but I feel confident we can do that," he said, referring to the administration's prediction of 3.1 percent growth this year, up from the 2.9 percent growth in 1986.

The administration is counting on a turn-around in the country's huge trade deficit to supply much of the momentum for higher growth. The trade imbalance shrank in the April-June quarter at a rate of $7.4 billion. It was the third consecutive quarterly improvement in the trade figures, something that has not occurred since mid-1980.

The higher economic growth is being accompanied by a pickup in inflation. A GNP price measure rose at an annual rate of 4.3 percent in the second quarter, compared with a 2.7 percent increase for all of 1986. Higher energy and food costs were blamed for the price increases.

Before release of the 2.6 percent GNP growth figure, many private analysts believed that a big drop in business inventories would cut growth to perhaps 1 percent or lower in the second quarter. The inventory decline did occur, but other sectors picked up the slack.

"The second-quarter GNP numbers show that the economy is stronger and remarkably healthier than generally thought," said Jerry Jasnowski, chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers.

"This is a very positive report which shows a much brighter picture of the economy than I had anticipated," said Michael Evans, head of a Washington consulting firm.

Evans, who had been forecasting the economy would expand at a lackluster 1 percent annual rate in the second half of the year, said he was boosting that estimate to 2.5 percent based on the new information.

Not all forecasters saw reason for cheer in the new figures. Lawrence Chimerine, president of Wharton Econometrics of Bala Cynwyd, Pa., said he was concerned that the need for further reductions in business inventories, particularly in autos, would depress growth in the second half of 1987.

Reed Hulet, a Wendell sheep breeder, has been named president of the American Polypay Sheep Association at its recent annual meeting in Illinois. He had served as secretary of the board of directors in 1985. Hulet raised close to 120 head of Polypays and 30 Suffolk at a farm between Tuttle and Wendell.

The seven-member executive committee represents about 190 Polypay breeders in the United States and Canada, registered and owned 1,900 ewes and 600 rams during 1986.

Port of Hope Centers has appointed two new staff supervisors. Wendell Long joined the agency as administrator of Port of Hope South. Long previously was clinical supervisor and senior counselor for Johnson Co. One Council on Alcohol and Drug Problems. He will run Port of Hope Adolescent Treatment Center in Twin Falls and outpatient centers in Hiley, Mountain Home, Burley and Twin Falls. He replaces former Program Director Ron Trompke, who is no longer with the agency.

Larry Staudt, president of Local #282 of the American Federation of Grain Millers, recently was elected to the executive board of the Idaho State AFL-CIO. Local 282 represents workers of the Greater Twin Sugar Co. factories Paul. Staudt will represent AFL-CIO members in the Magic Valley. Staudt, a member of the American Federation of Minidoka and Cassia counties.

Mike Dolton, former executive director of the Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, has been named executive director of the Breckenridge, Colo. Resort Center. Dolton is currently executive director of the Continental Divide west of Denver in the Colorado Rockies. Prior to accepting his new position, Dolton worked six months as executive director of Twin Cities Development Association Inc in Scottsbluff, Neb., an economic development agency.

Lamont Smith, a Paul dairyman, has been elected to a three-year term on the Idaho Dairy Products Commission. Her represents seven Magic Valley counties. The commission, which is financed by the Idaho dairy industry, promotes consumption of milk products with advertising and develops new dairy products.

Norma Andersen, a sales director for Mary Kay Cosmetics Inc., recently was named to the Idaho-based company for leading her sales unit of independent beauty consultants to annual retail sales of more than $90,000. She was named to the Court of Personal Sales for directors, a top company award.

Entomologist Stoltz plans cutworm talk

TWIN FALLS — Robert Stoltz, University of Idaho, extension entomologist, will discuss the Western bean cutworm at the regular Fieldmen Luncheon scheduled for August 12, 1987, at the Mandarin House in the Blue Lakes Shopping Center at Twin Falls.

The Cooperative Extension Service is sponsoring the build-up of the cutworm, which can damage dry edible bean crops.

Cost of the buffet lunch is $4.40. Farmers, field reps and representatives for agri-business and the general public are invited. The luncheon is part of a summer-long series sponsored by an extension office in Twin Falls and Jerome counties.

State Farm reduces rates

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. — State Farm Mutual Insurance Automobile Policyholders Co. is offering lower rates for owners of 37,000 Idaho cars in a new rating plan, the company announced.

Drivers who are at least 50 years old and have no unmarred drivers under age 25 on their policies will pay as much as 10 percent less in insurance premiums than other adults.

The company cited better claims experience with those drivers in making the change on June 1. The plan will lower premiums for Idaho drivers insured by State Farm by $800,000 annually, the insurer said.

"I'm sweating, I'm dealing with it, I've got no other choice," said Steven Van Schaick, running a hot dog cart in Boston. His cart faced the other way Thursday. "Because it got a sunburn on the back of my legs yesterday."

Relief was in sight for the Northeast and Midwest in the form of a Canadian cold front. But the front clashed with humid air and stalled, bringing 10 inches of rain to Minneapolis, causing floods that killed two people and a tornado that damaged 300 houses.

A Charleston, W. Va., radio station went from cool to hot overnight and the hapless New Orleans Saints were headed to professional football's Super Bowl, which is held in January.

Most listeners took it in stride and some "called in and told us what they wanted for Christmas," said disc jockey Steve Clawson.

The Nine Mile Point 2 nuclear power plant near Syracuse, N.Y., came close to shutting down Friday as Lake Ontario's water reached 76 degrees. The plant needs water to cool components in the reactor and is required to shut down if the water is at 77 degrees for more than eight hours. The new plant is running at just a percent of power prior to beginning commercial operation.

Todd Henshal, a spokesman for the Hartford, Conn., Metropolitan District Commission, said Friday that the typical consumption was about 60 million gallons a day but was well over 90 million gallons for a fourth straight day.

The Connecticut Lung Association said Friday that the stagnant air over Middletown, Stratford, Westport and Greenwich was unhealthy.

Deadman's Gulch expands

TWIN FALLS — Deadman's Gulch Leather Work of Twin Falls, a custom leather shop, is remodeling and expanding its business to serve do-it-yourself craftworkers.

The eight-year-old firm recently acquired the Tandy Leather Co. dealership for Twin Falls from Vickers Western Stores of Twin Falls. Deadman's Gulch co-owner Stan Moore announced Monday that part of the same Port Worth, Texas, conglomerate that owns Radio Shack stores, produce kits, leather, shoes and even for leather tooling work.

Deadman's Gulch is remodeling the exterior of its store on South Park Ave. West, one quarter mile west of Grangeville. The company will continue to make customized leather products and to repair leather items, Moore said.

Auto, truck sales up 14%

DETROIT (AP) — Sales of domestic cars and light trucks in mid-July rose a hefty 14.1 percent, helped by the first year-to-year increase in car sales since mid-April and the biggest increase since late March.

In the report issued Thursday, automakers said 187,410 domestic cars were sold in the eight selling days from July 11-19, up 5.6 percent from 177,409 a year ago. Car sales moved at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 7.7 million.

Bon

The shopping center, which is essential to create a high volume of sales. The cluster of stores at the mall brings more shoppers, DeGusc said. "Customer traffic is always better where there are more choices and more of a draw," the executive said.

Meanwhile, Mall Manager Don Chandler also sees The Bon as a traffic builder.

"It is going to draw additional foot traffic into the center," he said. "I think it will complete to a greater degree our merchandising mix in the mall."

"I think The Bon will be appealing to the higher income levels... (it will be) reaching out to those families with more spendable income," he said.

Officials of The Bon describe the store as emphasizing fashions for both the family and home. The Twin Falls store tends towards moderate-priced merchandise more than some other Bon stores, but also carries a selection of "better goods," DeGusc said.

The Bon at Magic Valley Mall also will employ almost twice as many workers as the smaller store downtown. It has a staff of 67 workers, up from 36, Kambler said. The Bon ranges across the Pacific Northwest, but is particularly dominant in the Seattle market. It is one of six retail chains pegged for long-term survival by Campeau Corp. of Canada. Campeau purchased the parent company of The Bon — Allied Stores Corp. of New York — and then divested a number of divisions to help pay $3.6 billion worth of acquisition costs.

Neither Allied nor Campeau show business segments in financial reports and operating figures are not available. The Bon also has been disclosed costs involved in its move to the mall.

UFF's 3rd quarter may fuel top year

MILWAUKEE — Universal Foods Corp., which owns Universal Frozen Foods of Twin Falls, is headed for a record year during 1987, the foods company announced in repeating third-quarter results.

With record results through three quarters of fiscal 1987, I anticipate this will be the best year in Universal Foods history, Chairman John L. Murray announced.

Net earnings for the first nine months of 1987 already have passed the $17.4 million book during fiscal 1986, the previous record year, according to corporate reports. Universal reported nine-month revenues of $92.6 million, up 23.1 percent from the same period in 1986. Earnings were up 88.8 percent from 1986 to $17.6 million or $1.49 per share of common stock. The 1986 figures had included a non-recurring charge of 89 cents per share relating to consolidation of some facilities.

The third quarter ending June 30, Universal posted earnings of $5.1 million or 47 cents per share. That compares with $4.7 million or 43 cents a share in the same quarter of 1986, Universal announced.

The increased earnings came on total revenues of $176.1 million, which were up 11.6 percent from the same period in 1986.

Murray said higher earnings show that "efforts to diversify our business over the last few years clearly have been effective."

The purchase of the former Idaho Frozen Foods Corp. by Universal marked the beginning of its diversification into frozen foods and, more specifically, the frozen potato industry.

State is selling lots along Payette Lake

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Department of Lands has decided to put 24 lots at Payette Lake, including seven prime lakefront sites, up for sale Aug. 21.

It's part of a long-running attempt by the state Land Board to establish fair market value for the lots, which generally have been used for recreation sites. Prices received by the state at an auction Aug. 21 at McCall will be used to determine rental rates to be charged for other state land around the lake.

The board also planned to auction lots at Priest Lake in northern Idaho, but backed down in the face of a lawsuit and will use appraisals to determine those values.

Byrne Taylor, McCall, said the seven lakefront lots vary from 53 feet to 114 feet of lake frontage. The remaining 17 lots are secondary lots with road and beach access. Minimum opening bids will be at the appraised values, which range from $15,000 to $114,000.

The more expensive lakefront properties will be widely advertised in national financial publications. Advertising for the secondary lots will be regional.

All improvements made by lessees, such as houses, water and sewer systems, must be paid in full on the day of sale.

Continued from Page D6 to change that assessment," he said. "I think the second half of the year will be clearly weaker than the first half."

The Commerce Department revised downward its estimate of first-quarter growth to 4.4 percent from 4.8 percent, with part of the change reflecting a one-year revision of all the components of the GNP to reflect new data.

That process prompted upward revisions to previously reported growth figures for the last three years. In 1986, growth had been boosted to 2.9 percent from 2.5 percent.

Much of the strength came in higher figures for consumer spending, in particular in the rapidly growing services sector.

Allen Sinal, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Brothers, said the new-found strength helped solve an economic puzzle. Have the services sector been booming and it wasn't being properly measured," Sinal said.

In addition to the improvement in trade, the economy was boosted in the second quarter by a 2.1 percent rise in consumer spending, a substantial improvement from a 0.7 percent decline in spending in the first quarter.

Business investment in new plants and equipment, which was weak all last year, jumped 7.9 percent in the second quarter. But this gain was offset somewhat by a 0.3 percent decline in residential construction, the second consecutive monthly decline.

Business inventories, which had soared at a rate of $62 billion in the second quarter as automakers cut back on production to work down record-high levels of unsold cars. The various changes left the GNP, after adjusting for inflation, at $3.796 trillion in the second quarter.

Average moth catches per trap for 1984, 1985, 1986, and 1987 are presented in the graph. This year's catches are earlier than average because of warmer weather.

Peak flights near Wendell occurred about July 10. The best time to spray beans in those areas would be July 20 to July 30. Average peak flight in the other areas occurred on July 17. The optimum time to spray beans there would be from July 27 to August 5. Some areas may have later flights and additional updates will be issued if that occurs. Check with your fieldman before spraying for updated information. Bean fields with abundant bloom during peak flight will be more susceptible to damage than fields with little or no bloom.

Dylox, Pydrin, Savin, and thiodan are all registered for use on beans to control western bean cutworm. The treatment periods mentioned above may be applied approximately 10 days earlier or extended 10 days later if Pydrin is used.

DIFFERENT BEAN COMPANIES ESTIMATE LOSSES FROM DAMAGE AND OWMANAGEMENT DIFFERENTLY. EACH GROWER SHOULD CONSULT WITH HIS WAREHOUSE OR FIELDMAN IN ADDITION TO MEASURING APPLICATION COST AGAINST YIELD AND PRICE BEFORE MAKING CONTROL DECISIONS.

Sweet corn growers should contact their fieldman for spray recommendations. Western bean cutworm should be controlled in field corn when plant in seven shows egg masses or larval feeding.

The Bon adopts high-tech styling

THE BON

After 10 months, store set for mall premiere

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Mall gets its final and most fashionable anchor Thursday as The Bon opens a mirrored, high-tech look department store designed to appeal to the upper-moderate income shopper.

At the same time, the Seattle-based chain is closing its four-level store downtown after 43 years in the city center.

Ten months in the making, the Magic Valley Mall store will premiere with few new departments, but with a much broader range of clothes and home articles across the sales floor, said Carl Koehler, resident general manager.

The Bon will stake down the west end of the enclosed mall with the second largest store in the complex. With 53,300 square feet of sales floor, the new building has two-thirds more retail space than the downtown store closed on Saturday.

The Bon moves in more than nine months after the debut of the mall at the far north end of Twin Falls. Nevertheless, the arrival of the chain store is being greeted almost like a second grand opening with a line-up of promotions ranging from a hot-air balloon festival to in-store giveaways.

Wilbur Fix, chief executive for the department store chain, snips the ribbon Thursday at the new store at 9:30 a.m.

Behind the hoopla are several bottom-line opportunities for The Bon to set up shop at the sprawling center.

Prime among them is a new, built-for-Bon facility. Opportunities to showcase the upscale merchandise were limited by the size of the downtown store and its general levels. A customer could not easily "shop the store," Koehler indicated last week as the mannequins were being set up at the Magic Valley Mall.

The store is laid out on a single level. Shoppers will amble on a circular walkway with easy eye-shot of 22 departments, said John DeGueus, group director of stores and a Bon vice-president. Instead of being deep and hard to see, the departments are shallow and wide to grab attention.

At the same time, the layout separates the departments with stylish settings and interior walls. For instance, one drapery display features a wall with artificial back-lighting through a window to show how the drapes would look in sunlight.

The decor ranges from high-tech look dominated by grays to softer colors for linen and clothing departments.

In the older store, shoppers often had to climb stairs to buy accessories for their purchases, Koehler said. Most accessories now are located in a central core within a few steps of the main departments on the perimeter of the concourse.

The modernized scheme of the mall store fits closely with others in the 41-store network run by The Bon.

A second, major advantage comes from the size of the new store. The new retail setting will be spacious enough for full displays of Bon lines. Although the downtown store generally had a closer, more intimate feel, it had smaller selections.

In some instances, such as in the menswear department, "it will allow us to add a layer of fashion we did not have before," DeGueus said.

Thirdly, the made-to-order construction also has built in sophisticated links to The Bon chain. The climate control system is operated by a computer in the Seattle headquarters. At the selling side, the bridal registry electronically is copied at other Bon outlets, allowing customers to shop locally for a Twin Falls bride.

As with other stores, availability of parking also was an important factor, Koehler said.

Finally, the chain also expects to gain significant customer traffic at

The Bon's new location is designed in a circular layout with wide, shallow departments to increase display visibility.

Downtown merchants move to fill gap

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The departure of The Bon from its downtown home of four decades will be felt in downtown cash registers. However, merchants also are moving to fill both the merchandising gap and a physical gap left by the vacant building.

"It is important," says Sue Ann Jones, coordinator of the Twin Falls Business Improvement District representing downtown interests. "For one thing, they obviously were a large store and they generated a lot of traffic."

The Bon building also combines with other vacant stores across

Main Avenue tending to isolate retail shops at the southeast end of the open-air mall. The J.C. Penney store moved to the Magic Valley Mall last fall and the ID store closed last year.

"The stores that are past those three stores at the very end of the mall area will not realize the benefits of the traffic that was created by it (The Bon)," she said.

The BID is centering many of its promotional events at the fountain at Second Ave. to attract more shopping attention, Jones said.

Beyond that, though, filling the buildings with new tenants has become the top priority of the downtown organization.

The Bon still holds a lease for its building until mid-1989, but Bon officials said that Price Development Co. of Salt Lake City — owners of the Magic Valley Mall and the J.C. Penney store — are to take over management of the building as part of the move.

"I think the big hurdle is getting over the first occupancy in the first building," Jones says.

Although the loss of The Bon will not hurt downtown in some merchandising areas where competitors have been in business, it does take the last full-line department store off the main mall.

The BID now will focus on Sears Roebuck & Co. on the far western end of the downtown as the department store for the retail district, she said.

However, the opening of the Magic Valley Mall last fall had far fewer effects on downtown retailing than many store owners expected. One reason is a "captive" group of downtown workers who tend to shop the area during working hours and after work.

That experience suggests that the closing of The Bon downtown will take a lesser toll in cash registers than merchants now fear.

"I do not think it is going to be as bad as everyone expects, Jones said. "We still have very viable businesses in that area."

"What we want to put across is the idea that it is not going to shut down the downtown."

Heat threatens poultry; shorts out water, power supplies

By RICHARD HERZFELDER
The Associated Press

Farmers worked to keep crops and animals cool Friday as a stubborn weather system brought heat and humidity to the Eastern third of the nation for a seventh straight day, causing water and power shortages and threatening to shut down a nuclear plant.

The weather system left 13 people dead — seven from the heat, four by lightning and two by drowning.

"This weather is my mental vision of Hell," said Earl Rountree, who raises livestock in North Carolina.

Power use was up as air conditioners ran full blast, and thirsty customers raised water use 50 percent in some areas. Some towns imposed water restrictions and stagnant air was becoming unhealthy in metropolitan areas.

Beach use was at a peak for a week, with over 30,000 people heading for Proque Isle State Park in Lake Erie. Others stayed in their air-conditioned offices and avoided the great hot, wet outdoors.

"The moment" in Newark, N.J., and Lansing, Mich., hit 90 at midday for the seventh straight day Friday, and five consecutive days of 90-plus weather tied a northeastern Ohio record set in 1959.

In Worcester, Mass., the owner of Peter's Ice predicted a good weekend after watching his pet Doberman. Blitz, chew on a block of ice.

"You get the people going to the beach in the morning and people with picnics and people trying to keep the kegs of beer cold," John Iantoh said. "Every couple of years I also get one of the guys who buys a 300-pound block to cool off his pool. But I haven't gotten one of those yet."

In the Chesapeake Bay region, an estimated 1 million chickens have died in the past week, officials said. The toll in North Carolina was put at 200,000, and a spokesman for Holly Farms said they had lost 200,000 broilers and 3,000 breeders, mostly in Virginia.

Producers were advised to use sprinklers and fans to keep their birds cool, and the weather service said livestock hauling in the South should be restricted to morning or nighttime hours.

Pennsylvania officials said the sticky heat was ungluing many of the state's 8 million car inspection stickers. Transparent tape was prescribed.

In Texas, Georgia and Florida, the National Weather Service warned farmers that chemical spray for pest control could evaporate too quickly to be effective unless the spraying was done in the morning. Irrigation was best done in the evening to avoid daytime evaporation.

In Connecticut, Gov. William A. O'Neill switched off the air conditioner in his office and asked residents to cut back on electricity use. Northeast Utilities said it was cutting power 5 per cent due to heavy demand for the first time in 14 years.

Officials at a Connecticut state women's prison limited showers and considered using paper plates to cut down on dishwashing. East Lyme residents were asked to refrain from watering lawns and gardens, washing cars and boats or filling swimming pools.

Jeff Loeb of Rent-To-Own Centers in Hampton Roads, Va., said the heat was a windfall. He rented the last of 200 air conditioners from his store when the mercury hit 99 degrees Tuesday. One Virginia group donated fans to public housing tenants who could not afford relief.

U.S. sees end to export rut, regains lost grain markets

By ROBERT LEE ZIMMER
The Associated Press

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Farmers in the United States, who have been through "six rough years," are beginning to regain important export markets for commodities like corn, the president of the U.S. Feed Grains Council said Thursday.

"We feel good to be able to start reporting that we've bottomed out and things are turning up," said Darwin Stolte, whose organization helps find customers for U.S. grain. "That's the encouraging sign."

Stolte said the value of U.S. agricultural exports, an important factor in a healthy farm economy, fell from $44 billion in 1979-80 to $25 billion in 1985-86.

And, in about the same period, the export volume of feed grains dropped from 71.6 million metric tons to 36 million tons, he said.

But Stolte said U.S. sales to feed grain abroad should increase by a total of 14 million tons this year and next year, partly because of a federal farm program that has lowered prices to competitive levels on the world market.

World trade in feed grain will increase 7 million tons in that same two-year period. Stolte said.

"What those two numbers tell you is... we're starting to see recovery in the world marketplace," he said.

In addition, he said it shows that the 1985 federal farm bill is working.

"We're getting back a lot of that trade that we lost previous years simply because we're being competitive," Stolte said.

That, he said, has persuaded some countries like Australia and Canada, to reduce the acreage of crops they were growing to sell on foreign markets in competition with the United States.

Aggressive marketing of U.S. farm products also is helping to reverse the export slump, said Stolte.

Other factors are the lower value of the dollar, which makes our products less expensive abroad, and higher petroleum prices, which improve the buying power of oil-producing nations, he said.

Stolte also said some nations like Egypt and Turkey are improving their economies and spending more money on food.

"At the same time," Stolte said U.S. farmers are reducing their production, which will help get rid of the huge grain surplus that has depressed farm prices, said Stolte.

Stolte praised a recent proposal by the Reagan administration that all nations end all export and internal subsidies on grain sales and production and open their doors to free world trade.

He said that was "a daring first step toward a more rational trading system for agricultural commodities," but he cautioned against the United States unilaterally dropping its farm subsidies.

Stolte answered questions at a news conference before a scheduled speech to a Champaign Chamber of Commerce dinner sponsored by its agricultural committee.

Economy looks healthier, shows 2.6 percent growth

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy grew at a moderate 2.6 percent annual rate in the spring, but the performance of the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, was down from a 4.3 percent rate of increase in the first three months of the year.

But it was still up substantially from what many economists had been expecting and prompted some analysts to boost their growth expectations for the rest of 1987.

The Reagan administration hailed the economy's spring performance as proof that the current recovery, now in its fifth year, is showing renewed signs of vigor.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the pace of activity during the first six months of 1987, when the economy expanded at a 3.5 percent rate, made him confident that the administration's growth target for the entire year will be reached.

"Nothing is ever in the bag, but I feel confident we can do that," he said, referring to the administration's prediction of 3.1 percent growth this year, up from the 2.9 percent growth in 1986.

The administration is counting on a turn-around in the country's huge trade deficit to supply much of the momentum for higher growth. The trade imbalance shrank in the April-June quarter at a rate of $7.4 billion. It was the third consecutive quarterly improvement in the trade figures, something that has not occurred since mid-1980.

The higher economic growth is being accompanied by a pickup in inflation. A GNP price measure rose at an annual rate of 4.3 percent in the second quarter, compared with a 2.7 percent increase for all of 1986. Higher energy and food costs were blamed for the price increases.

Before release of the 2.6 percent GNP growth figure, many private analysts believed that a big drop in business inventories would cut growth to perhaps 1 percent or lower in the second quarter. The inventory decline did occur, but other sectors picked up the slack.

"The second-quarter GNP numbers show that the economy is stronger and remarkably healthier than generally thought," said Jerry Jasnowski, chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers.

"This is a very positive report which shows a much brighter picture of the economy than I had anticipated," said Michael Evans, head of a Washington consulting firm.

Evans, who has been forecasting the economy would expand at a lackluster 1 percent annual rate in the second half of the year, said he was boosting that estimate to 2.5 percent based on the new information.

Not all forecasters saw reason for cheer in the new figures.

Lawrence Chimirene, president of Wharton Econometrics of Bala Cynwyd, Pa., said he was concerned that the need for further reductions in business inventories, particularly in autos, would depress growth in the second half of 1987.

Reed Hulet, a Wendell sheep breeder, has been named president of the American Polypay Sheep Association at its recent annual meeting in Illinois. He had served as secretary of the board of directors in 1985. Hulet raised close to 120 head of Polypays and 30 Suffolk at a farm between Tuffin and Wendell.

The seven-year-old association, which represents about 190 Polypay breeders in the United States and Canada, had registered most 4,000 ewes and 500 rams during 1986.

Port of Hope Centers has appointed two new staff members. Wendell Long has joined the agency as administrator of Port of Hope South. Long previously was clinical supervisor and senior counselor for Jefferson Co., Ore., Council on Alcohol and Drug Problems. He will run Port of Hope Adolescent Treatment Center in Twin Falls and outpatient centers in Hailley, Mountain Home, Burley and Twin Falls. He replaces former Program Director Ron Trompke who is no longer with the agency. Robert Clarkson has been named to the new position of clinical supervisor for the Residential Treatment Center at Twin Falls. Clarkson, a certified addictions counselor, formerly was council director for Meagher County in central Montana.

Larry Staudt, president of Local 282 of the American Federation of Grain Millers, recently was elected to the executive committee of the State AFL-CIO. Local 282 represents workers at Amalgamated Sugar Co. factories Paul, Staudt represents AFL-CIO members in the Magic Valley. Staudt, a mechanic at the Paul plant, also is president of the Central Labor Council for Minidoka and Cassia counties.

Mike Dolton, former executive vice president of the Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, has been named executive director of the Breckenridge, Colo. Resort Chamber of Commerce. Breckenridge is a ski resort town along the Continental Divide at Twin Falls in the Colorado Rockies. Prior to accepting the post, Dolton had worked six months as executive director of Twin Cities Development Group, Inc. in Scottsbluff, Neb., an economic development agency.

Lamont Smith, a Paul dairyman, has been elected to a three-year term on the Idaho Dairy Products Commission. Her represents several Magic Valley counties. The commission, which is financed by the Idaho dairy industry, promotes consumption of milk products by advertising and develops new dairy products.

Norma Andersen, a sales director for Mary Kay Cosmetics Inc., recently was honored by the Dallas-based company for leading her sales unit of independent beauty consultants to annual sales of more than $400,000. She was named to the Court of Personal Sales for directors, a top company award.

Entomologist Stoltz plans cutworm talk

TWIN FALLS — Robert Stoltz, University of Idaho extension entomologist, will discuss the Western bean cutworm at the regular Fieldmen Luncheon scheduled for noon, Tuesday at the Mandarin House in the Blue Lakes Shopping Center at Twin Falls.

The Cooperative Extension Service tracks the build-up of the cutworm, which can damage dry edible bean crops.

Cost of the buffet lunch is $4.40. Farmers, field representatives for agri-business and the general public are invited. The luncheon is part of a summer-long series sponsored by extension offices in Twin Falls and Jerome counties.

State Farm reduces rates

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. — State Farm Mutual Insurance Automobile Insurance Co. is offering lower rates for owners of 37,000 Idaho cars in the State Farm plan, the company announced.

Drivers who are at least 50 years old and have no unmarred drivers under age 25 on their policies will pay as much as 10 percent less in insurance premiums than other adults.

The company cited better claims experience with those drivers in making the change on June 1. The plan will lower premiums for Idaho drivers insured by State Farm by $800,000 annually, the insurer said.

Heat

"I'm sweating. I'm dealing with it. I've got no other choice," said Steven Van der Sluis, running a hot dog cart in Boston. His cart faced the other way Thursday. "Because I got a sunburn on the back of my legs yesterday."

Beans were in sight for the Northeast and Midwest in the form of a Canadian cold front. But the front clashed with humid air and stalled, bringing 10 inches of rain to Minneapolis, causing floods that killed two people and a tornado that damaged 300 houses.

A Charleston, W.Va., radio station went from cool to cold with a report that snow had fallen overnight and the hapless New Orleans Saints were headed to professional football's Super Bowl, which is held in January.

Most listeners took it in stride and some "called in" and told us what they wanted for Christmas," said disc jockey Steve Clauson.

The Nine Mile Point 2 nuclear power plant near Syracuse, N.Y., came close to shutting down Friday as Lake Ontario's water reached 76 degrees. The plant needs water to cool components in the reactor and is required to shut down if the water is at 77 degrees for more than eight hours. The new plant is running at just 4 percent of power prior to beginning commercial operation.

Food Resistant spokesmen for the Hannan, Conn., Metropolitan District Commission, said Friday that that typical consumption was about 60 million gallons a day but was well over 80 million gallons for a fourth straight day.

The Connecticut Log Association said Friday that the stagnant air over Middletown, Stratford, Bridgeport and Greenwich was unhealthy.

Deadman's Gulch expands

TWIN FALLS — Deadman's Gulch Leather Work of Twin Falls, a custom leather shop, is remodeling and expanding its business to do-it-yourself craftworkers.

The eight-year-old firm recently acquired the Tandy Leather Co. dealership for Twin Falls from Vicki's Western Stores of Twin Falls. Deadman's Gulch co-owner Stan Moore announced, Tandy, part of the same Fort Worth, Texas, conglomerate that owns Kaplo Shack shoes, processes leathers, skins and dyes for leather tooling work.

Deadman's Gulch is remodeling the exterior of its store on South Park Ave. West, one-quarter mile west of Grandview Drive. The company will continue to make custom leather products and to repair leather items, Moore said.

Auto, truck sales up 14%

DETROIT (AP) — Sales of domestic cars and light trucks in mid-July rose a hefty 14 percent, helped by the first year-over increase in car sales since mid-April and the biggest increase since late March.

In the report issued Thursday, automakers said 187,010 domestic cars were sold in the eight selling days from July 11-20, up 5.6 percent from 177,409 a year ago. Car sales moved at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 7.7 million.

Bon

"I think the Bon will be appealing to the higher income levels... (it will be) reaching out to those folks with more spendable income," he said.

Officials of The Bon describe the store as emphasizing fashions for both the family and home. The Twin Falls store tends towards moderate-priced merchandise more than some other Bon stores, but also carries a selection of "better" goods, DeGueus said.

The Bon at Magic Valley Mall also will employ almost twice as many workers as the smaller store downtown. It has a staff of 67 workers, up from 36, Koehler said.

The Bon ranges across the Pacific Northwest, but is particularly dominant in the Seattle market. It is one of six retail chains pegged for long-term survival by Campeau Corp. of Canada. Campeau purchased the parent company of The Bon — Allied Stores Corp. of New York — and then divided a number of divisions to help pay $3.6 billion worth of acquisition costs.

Neither Allied nor Campeau show business segments in financial reports and operating figures are not available. The Bon also has not disclosed costs involved in its move to the mall.

UFF's 3rd quarter may fuel top year

MILWAUKEE — Universal Foods Corp., which owns Universal Frozen Foods of Twin Falls, is headed for a record year during 1987, the food producer announced in reporting third-quarter results.

"With record results through three quarters of fiscal 1987, I anticipate this will be the best year in Universal Foods history," Chairman John L. Murray announced. Net earnings for the first nine months of 1987 already have passed the $17.4 million booked during fiscal 1986, the previous record year, according to corporate reports.

Universal reported nine-month revenues of $528.6 million, up 23.1 percent from the same period in 1986. Earnings were up 86.8 percent from 1986 to $17.6 million or $1.49 per share of common stock. The 1986 figures had included a non-recurring charge of 89 cents per share relating to consolidation of some facilities.

In the third quarter ending June 30, Universal posted earnings of $5.5 million or 47 cents per share. That compares with $4.7 million or 43 cents a share in the same quarter of 1986, Universal announced.

The increased earnings came on total revenues of $176.1 million, which were up 11.6 percent from the same period in 1986.

Murray said "higher earnings show that 'efforts to diversify our business over the last few years clearly have been effective.'"

The purchase of the former Idaho Frozen Foods Corp. by Universal marked the beginnings of its diversification into frozen foods and, more specifically, the frozen potato industry.

Universal Foods does not report the performance of individual business segments, such as UFF, at Twin Falls, in its quarterly figures.

State is selling lots along Payette Lake

The Associated Press
BOISE — The Department of Lands has decided to put 24 lots at Payette Lake, including seven prime lakefront sites, up for sale Aug. 21.

It's part of a long-running attempt by the state Land Board to establish fair market value for the lots, which generally have been used for recreation sites. Prices received by the state at an auction Aug. 21 at McCall will be used to determine rental rates to be charged for other state land around the lake.

The board also planned to auction lots at Priest Lake in northern Idaho, but backed down in the face of a lawsuit and will use appraisals to determine those values.

Bryce Taylor, McCall, said the seven lakefront lots vary from 53 feet to 113 feet of lake frontage. The remaining 17 lots are secondary lots with road and beach access. Minimum opening bids will be at the appraised values, which range from $15,000 to $114,000.

The more expensive lakefront properties will be widely advertised in national financial publications. Advertising for the secondary lots will be regional. All improvements made by lessees, such as houses, water and sewer systems, must be paid in full on the day of sale.

Average moth catches per trap for 1984, 1985, 1986, and 1987 are presented in the graph. This year's catches are earlier than average, because of warmer weather.

Peak flights near Wendell occurred about July 10. The best time to spray beans in these areas would be July 20 to July 30. Average peak flight in the other areas occurred on July 17. The optimum time to spray beans in the other areas would be from July 27 to August 5. Some areas may have later flights and additional updates will be issued if that occurs. Check with your fieldman before spraying for updated information. Beans fields with abundant bloom during peak flight will be more susceptible to damage than fields with little or no bloom.

Dylox, Olydrin, Sevin, and Thiodan are all registered for use on beans to control western bean cutworm. The treatment periods mentioned above may begin approximately 10 days earlier or extended 10 days later if flyrins is used.

For further information, contact Dr. R.L. Stoltz, 1330 Filer Avenue East, Twin Falls, Idaho 83301, 734-3600. These figures represent losses growers can expect from field loss and cleanup due to cutworm injury. Damage of 2% is a general break-even point for spraying beans.

to change that assessment, he said. "I think the second half of the year will be clearly weaker than the first half."

The Commerce Department revised downward its estimate of first-quarter growth to a 4.4 percent increase, with part of the change reflecting a once-a-year revision of all the components of the GNP to reflect new data.

The process prompted upward revisions to previously reported growth figures for the last three years. GNP growth in 1986 was boosted to 2.9 percent from 2.5 percent.

Much of the strength came in higher figures for consumer spending, in particular in the rapidly growing services sector.

Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Brothers, said the new-found strength helped solve an economic puzzle: How the unemployment rate could be improving with such weak growth over the past two years.

"The economy has been stronger than indicated because the services sector has been booming and it wasn't being properly measured," Sinai said.

In addition to the improvement in trade, the economy was boosted in the second quarter by a 2.1 percent rise in consumer spending, a substantial improvement from a 0.7 percent decline in spending in the first quarter.

Business investment in new plants and equipment, which was weak all last year, jumped 7.9 percent in the second quarter. But this gain was offset somewhat by a 0.4 percent decline in residential construction, the second consecutive monthly decline.

Business inventories, which had soared at a rate of $62 billion in the first quarter, by $6.4 billion in the second quarter as automakers cut back on production to ward down levels of unsold cars.

The various changes left the GNP, after adjusting for inflation, at $3.796 trillion in the second quarter.

GM to lay off nearly 3,000 workers due to slow sales

DETROIT (AP) — Nearly 3,000 workers will lose their jobs in production slowdowns at four General Motors assembly plants hit by slow car sales, the nation's largest automaker said Thursday.

The workers will join 40,000 others at GM who already are on indefinite layoff. The production cuts are the latest in a string that began last week when GM Chairman Roger Smith said the automaker would use that tactic instead of boosting sales with across-the-board buyer incentives.

"It's not something that we can control. Certainly it's our hope that market demand (for the cars) will strengthen. The overall sales picture has softened in recent months," said GM spokesman Jim Smidovich.

In the biggest cut, GM will eliminate one of two shifts at its Buick City assembly plant in Flint. The plant, which recently was rebuilt from the ground up out of several assembly and body plants, uses a highly developed just-in-time inventory delivery system that has been much-touted at GM.

Buick City makes the Oldsmobile Delta 88, sales of which fell 23.1 percent in the latest six months, compared with the first half of 1986, and the Buick LeSabre, whose sales are up slightly.

About 2,300 of the 4,700 workers at Buick City will lose their jobs Sept. 17, a little more than a month after the plant, which is down for changeover to 1988 models, returns to production.

In Oklahoma City, 500 of the 5,800 assembly plant workers will be laid off indefinitely beginning Aug. 24, but the plant will remain on two shifts.

Oklahoma City makes the Buick Century, whose sales are off 39.5 percent, and Chevrolet Celebrity, whose sales are off 18.2 percent from the first half of 1986.

About 170 of the 3,500 workers at an assembly plant in Framingham, Mass., will be laid off indefinitely on Sept. 14, but the plant will remain on two shifts. The plant makes the Chevy Corvair and the Oldsmobile Cutlass Sierra, whose sales have fallen 24.8 percent in the first half of 1986 from a year ago.

Production will be slowed slightly at an assembly plant in North Tarrytown, N.Y., on Sept. 23, but the on-ly workers who will lose their jobs are an undisclosed number of temporary summer employees, the automaker said.

Tarrytown has about 4,000 workers altogether and makes the Century and the Pontiac 6000, sales of which are off 39.3 percent from the first half of 1986.

In addition to the indefinite layoffs announced Thursday, GM also said three of its Chevrolet-Pontiac-Canada group plants will be shut down beginning next week for model changeover.

Sorting and packing

Joe Kipp, 73, winds down his 35th summer of cherry sorting and packing at the Robbin Orchard near Yellow Bay, Mont. Recent heavy rains have put an end to this year's cherry season, except for the kind of hand sorting that Kipp is doing. The 1987 cherry crop was the finest in years.

Arizona-based Estes Co. says it's committed to Utah projects

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Officials with the Arizona-based Estes Co. say they're committed to building four major projects in the Salt Lake area, despite recent boundary squabbles.

The company has delayed construction of a commercial development along 54th South in the Taylorsville-Bennion area, as well as the company's plans to build a resort and hotel along Traverser Ridge, straddling the Salt Lake and Utah county lines.

The setbacks subsequently slowed the company's timetable for developing commercial projects at 160th South and State Street and at 70th South and Redwood Road.

Estes has proposed that Murray City annex property located between 13th West and Redwood Road, extending from 54th South to Interstate 215, to build a large shopping and business center.

But that project has been put on hold until the Salt Lake County Boundary Commission determines whether Murray can annex the 141 acres from the unincorporated Taylorsville-Bennion area.

Annexation petitions were signed by more than 65 percent of all property owners within the proposed annexation area, but Salt Lake County nixed the proposal the day before it was to be voted on by the Murray City Council.

Deputy County Attorney Kent Lewis filed a protest with the Boundary Commission last week that prevents the council from enacting any annexation ordinance until the commission issues a decision. That could take 60 to 80 days.

An incorporation petition filed with the county by area citizens in May was reviewed and determined to be in compliance, Lewis said. Now a study is under way to determine the feasibility of incorporation.

Lewis said the county believes the petition to incorporate was filed before the annexation proposal. However, Estes officials said they filed the annexation proposals with Murray in March.

Prior to making that proposal, Estes asked the county to rezone the area from multifamily residential housing to commercial. The request was turned down, so the company took its annexation proposal to Murray.

Meanwhile, the zoning proposal is on appeal to the county commission. Lewis said the county is protesting the annexation because officials don't think Murray can provide adequate water and sewer services to the unincorporated area.

Despite the setbacks, Estes' Utah project manager Mike Stevens, said the company still wants to break ground this fall and is working toward that goal.

Jack DeMass, a Murray Planning and Zoning Board member and engineer, for the proposed Taylorsville-Bennion shopping center, said it would be a travesty if the company were not able to move forward on the project.

"Estes is a class act. They have a spotless reputation for doing a quality building program in the projects I have reviewed," DeMass said.

"With the economic throes that our state is in now, they are the kind of people we need here," he said.

Stevens said the 54th South development would provide about $500,000 a year in sales tax revenue and 300 jobs.

Along with the 54th South development, Estes also is encountering boundary difficulties with the Traverser Ridge project.

Estes asked Draper City to annex 4,500 acres of unincorporated Utah County land to facilitate development of a $55 million hotel. The annexed land, however, would remain part of Utah County.

But Utah County, which earlier created the Traverser Ridge Special Service District to facilitate the project's development, protested the annexation to both the Salt Lake County and Utah County boundary commissions. The neighboring cities of Alpine, Highland and Lehi also joined the protest.

The Salt Lake County Boundary Commission recently reviewed the protest and approved the annexation. The Utah County Boundary Commission has yet to rule on the matter.

A hearing before the Utah County Boundary Commission had been scheduled for July 1, but was postponed until August when Draper officials failed to attend.

Should the Utah County Boundary

Ford leads pack in automakers' earnings

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. earned a record $1.5 billion in the second quarter, once again surpassing industry leader General Motors Corp., whose earnings fell slightly from a year ago.

Ford's earnings were up 39 percent over second-quarter 1986, the company reported Thursday. They came to $5.81 a share on sales of $19.5 billion, compared with $5.18 billion or $4.02 a share, on sales of $17.3 billion in second-quarter 1986.

GM reported earnings of $989.3 million, or $2.80 per common share, on sales of $27.7 billion, down from $1.02 billion, or $2.92 a share, on sales of $27.6 billion in the second quarter of 1986.

It was the most profitable quarter in Ford's history, but fell short of the record $1.61 billion earned by GM in the first quarter of 1981.

In the first half of 1987, Ford earned $2.99 billion, or $11.51 a share, on sales of $37.6 billion, up 4 percent from $1.8 billion, or $6.72 a share, on sales of $32.1 billion in the first half of 1986.

Ford already is close to matching its record $3.1 billion profit for 1986 when it surpassed GM for the first time since 1927.

GM's earnings fell 14.2 percent in the first half of 1987.

For the first six months of 1987, GM earned $1.9 billion, or $5.42 per common share, on sales of $52.8 billion, down from $2.2 billion, or $6.44 per common share, on sales of $54.5 billion.

GM announced Thursday that it will lay off 2,300 workers at its Buick City plant in Flint, cutting production from two shifts to one, because of slow sales of its Oldsmobile 88 and Buick LeSabre, two large cars.

GM has been cutting production throughout the year because of unsold inventory.

Ford, on the other hand, is working at full capacity. Codergren noted that one of its best-selling cars this year the Mustang, an older, rear-wheel-drive model which is very profitable because tooling costs have long been paid.

On Tuesday, Chrysler Corp., the

No. 3 automaker, reported second-quarter earnings of $428.7 million, or $2 a share, on sales of $6.4 billion. No. 4 American Motors Corp., which is being purchased by Chrysler, earned $30.2 million, or 17 cents a share, on sales of $1.18 billion.

Ford sold nearly 1.7 million vehicles worldwide, up slightly from a year ago. GM's second-quarter sales fell more than 14 percent from a year ago, to nearly 2.1 million vehicles.

More than half of GM's total profits for the second quarter were earned by its three subsidiaries, General Motors Acceptance Corp., Hughes Electronics Corp. and Electronic Data Systems Corp.

Navajo entrepreneurial spirit

Tribe leader wants to bring industry to reservation

TOHATCHI, N.M. (AP) — The chairman of the nation's largest Indian tribe says he wants to stir the country's entrepreneurial spirit by helping private industry to what he calls America's last economic frontier, the Navajo Reservation.

"We would like to bring about economic development that meets the needs of our people by creating jobs," Chairman Peter MacDonald said. "We want to mobilize the great minds of America to help solve this problem."

MacDonald has called a Navajo Economic Summit to bring together tribal, federal and state officials with business leaders to determine what needs to be done to make investment on the economically depressed reservation more attractive.

A daylong series of meetings will be held Saturday at the high school in this reservation community in northwest New Mexico. A dinner will be held Friday night in Gallup, featuring Robert A. Pritzker, president and chief executive officer of The Marmon Group, as keynote speaker.

"We're interested in improving some of the rules of the game so economic development can occur," said Al Henderson, chief of business and economic development for the Navajo.

The reservation's unemployment rate is about 40 percent and runs as high as 70 percent in some areas. Per capita income is about $2,000, one-seventh the national average.

And conditions have been getting worse because of a slumping oil market, that has hurt oil companies operating on the reservation and federal budget cuts that have decreased the flow of money to government agencies, the reservation's largest employer, Henderson said.

MacDonald has set a goal of creating 1,000 jobs a year on the reservation, which he said has been overlooked as industries have rushed to the Sun Belt.

"Virtually all economic development has bypassed this area," he said.

The Navajo Nation has about 200,000 members living in New Mexico, Arizona and Utah on the 24,347-square mile reservation that is roughly the size of West Virginia.

MacDonald said the reservation has a stable work force, abundant resources and access to major markets. And he said the Navajos, because of their sovereign tribal status, can offer tax and regulatory incentives that studies conducted by the tribe indicate are better than most states can offer.

Navajo officials said businesses should talk to them before considering moves to Latin America or overseas.

"We are competitive in providing (business) a package that would improve their cash flow position," Henderson said.

The tribe has begun identifying industries it would like to recruit, including those involved in tourism-electronics assembly and turning raw products into finished goods, Henderson said.

"We are targeting industries that will have high labor content and at the same time we are encouraging businesses on the reservation to capture money that has been going off the reservation for years," MacDonald said.

Navajo officials said they realize the meetings with political and business leaders will not solve all the tribe's problems, but they said they were hopeful they could begin laying the groundwork.

"I believe that the summit is going to bring together a necessary partnership in order to bring about the economic development the Navajo Nation needs," MacDonald said.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., who came up with the idea of a summit, called the meeting a monumental step for the Navajos because for the first time they're asking the private sector. "What do we have to change to make moving-to-the-reservation attractive?"

"The summit won't work miracles, but it certainly is a significant step in the right direction," Domenici said.

He said the tribe must listen to suggestions the business leaders present and must be prepared to make long-range commitments to economic growth.

Federal and state leaders also must listen to those suggestions and be ready to act, he said.

"I think by the time the day's over we'll have a great many ideas to consider," Domenici said.

General Motors Corp., General Dynamics Corp., First Chicago Corp. and Occidental International Exploration and Production are among businesses planning to send representatives.

Tribal officials also said political leaders including the governors and several U.S. senators and representatives from New Mexico, Utah and Arizona will attend.

President Reagan who will send a videotape address, will be represented by Cristina L. Bach, a White House speech assistant.

Other federal officials expected to attend include Ross Swimmer, director of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and representatives from the departments of Labor and Housing and Urban Development.

The focus of Saturday morning's work will be a 20-minute presentation by MacDonald, followed by discussion by the participants.

The afternoon meetings and subsequent discussions with the Navajo Tribal Council on agreements that were reached will be closed to the press and public.

A late-afternoon news conference is scheduled to announce the results of the meetings.

Navajos tearing down their barrier against business

TOHATCHI, N.M. (AP) — After years of building barriers to keep their resources from being exploited by big business, the Navajos now are trying to lure industry to their reservation by promoting those same resources.

Tribal Chairman Peter MacDonald said private sector investment was discouraged not by intention, but through some of the issues the tribe was facing at the time.

An example, he said, was the oil shortage in the 1970s. Oil companies flocked to the reservation ready to begin drilling. The Navajo and other Indian tribes quickly instituted taxes and other regulatory steps to prevent the reservations from being exploited, MacDonald said.

"We created barriers to keep those energy companies at a distance," he said. "Consequently, tribes have created bureaucracies to slow down exploitation attempts. But it also allowed attempts by other industries to locate on the reservation."

"For a long time it appeared the economic circumstances on the reservation were isolated, but we're trying to break down this isolation," said Al Henderson, chief of business and economic development for the Navajo.

MacDonald said during his previous three terms as chairman, from 1970 to 1982, he discouraged private investment.

"I was not because I didn't believe in it, but we had other things on our agenda that were more important," he said.

"First, we had to establish ourselves as a nation," he said. "Then we had to concentrate on education and training. Then we needed the necessary infrastructure before we could begin to recruit industry."

Buttrey employees clock out for last time

BOISE (AP) — Hundreds of Buttrey employees have clocked out for the last time at seven of the chain's grocery stores in Boise and Pocatello.

Five Buttrey stores closed Tuesday in Boise and two more in Pocatello. Buttrey will continue to operate one store each in Twin Falls and Idaho Falls.

Buttrey announced last month that Boise-based Albertson's Inc., one of the nation's largest food and drug retailers, had agreed to purchase three of the stores it was closing in Boise. Albertson's plans to use the Buttrey stores to replace three of its own facilities in Ada County.

Albertson's has guaranteed jobs to full-time employees of the three Buttrey stores it will occupy and is accepting applications from all other Buttrey workers.

About 520 Buttrey employees are affected by the sale and closures, MacDonald was defeated in 1982 by Peterson Zah in his bid for re-election as chairman. After four years as chairman of the Cataractes Inc. in Phoenix, Ariz., MacDonald, an electrical engineer, said he was ready to return to office with new ideas.

"Having four years off allowed me to take a look around and see what was happening," MacDonald said. "I'm looking at (economic development) from a different perspective now."

MacDonald, who defeated Zah last November, pledged in his inauguration speech in January to seek economic development through cooperation with private enterprise. The Navajo Economic Summit on Saturday at Tohatchi is the first major step in that direction, MacDonald said.

Business leaders will meet with tribal, federal and state officials to discuss what changes are needed to attract industry to the reservation. Henderson said tribal leaders also are trying to prepare the Navajo people for changes.

"This is new for us and we must be sure the people are ready to accept it," he said. "We're actually educating people as we go along."

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said he believes the tribe's new attitude toward private investment is great.

"While they want to keep their tribal government and tribal conditions, they're going to create a policy to encourage and to entice the private sector to the reservation to create jobs," he said.

For years the tribe had regulations that inhibited such growth, he said. This is the first time in 15 years of working with the Navajos that the tribe's leadership has sought to set a firm policy on economic development, Domenici said.

which were announced as part of a realignment of corporate resources. Sam Miller, president of United Food and Commercial Workers Local 368-A, said some Buttrey employees were initially told they would not receive severance pay if they accepted jobs with Albertson's or American Stores Co., Buttrey's parent company. But Miller said employees were told Tuesday they would receive the pay if they were hired by Albertson's.

About 140 Buttrey employees had applied for Albertson's jobs as of Tuesday morning.

Along with the state Department of Employment and Buttrey, the union is working to retrain and place all Buttrey workers.

"The union's done an outstanding job," said Dan Mergenthaler, assistant manager of the Buttrey store on Main Street in Boise.

Dick Rogers of the Department of Agriculture holds two packs of the disputed butter

Bogus butter?

Controversy over butter origin churns up Vermont dairymen

By JOHN DONNELLY
The Associated Press

MONTEPELIER, Vt. — Truth in packaging and protecting the state's wholesome image have become hot topics following the disclosure that a dairy's "Vermont butter" actually comes from as far away as Wisconsin and Ohio.

"Buttergate," as a Burlington newspaper called the controversy, has dairymen around the state all churned up, but the company says it didn't mean any harm.

Cabot Cooperative Creamery acknowledges that for the past five years most of its lightly salted and unsalted butter has come from out-of-state brokers, even though the package says in bold letters: "VERMONT BUTTER."

Cabot says it will remove any state of origin from its label by fall.

In the meantime, state agriculture officials are considering ways to ensure that anything labeled a Vermont product really is one.

"Vermont has a romance, a mystique about it, that people associate with wholesomeness," said Dick Rogers, a state agriculture marketing representative. "If we don't be careful about it, we could lose it."

Cabot's case isn't an isolated example.

Several years ago, a Mississippi company was accused of putting the Vermont maple label on its Southern corn syrup. Vermont takes its syrup seriously: five years ago the Legislature made it illegal to put the label on any other syrup.

And an apple drink labeled in White River Junction carries a Vermont tag even though it's made in Virginia.

Cabot spokesman Alan Parker said the labeling of its butter was not a "mean and nasty marketing ploy." Rather, he said, market factors have forced Cabot to buy out-of-state butter.

Federal programs that set a low price for butter and pay farmers to slaughter herds for meat have caused a shortage of cream in Vermont, and the growth of Vermont-based Ben & Jerry's ice cream has consumed much more, Parker said.

Deputy Agriculture Commissioner William Paine agrees. "We're satisfied that Cabot has the utmost integrity. It's not disturbing to me."

"Our concern is about the quality going into the package, less so than where it's from."

Others say Cabot had no business selling Midwest butter as Vermont's.

Lisa Barrett, an assistant attorney general with the state Consumer Protection Division, called the practice deceptive but said the state "won't take legal action because Cabot is changing the packaging."

"I do think to represent something as a Vermont product when it is not is a violation of the Vermont consumer fraud law," she said. "We are keeping an eye on this. This really has raised an issue."

Anthony Pollina, director of Rural Vermont, a farm lobby group with about 800 members, said many farmers have called his office since the weekly Vanguard Press and the Barre-Montpelier Times Argus disclosed Cabot's misrepresentation earlier this month.

"The farmers are upset about it. The farmers are also hesitant to criticize the co-op or Cabot because it's their bread and butter. What we've heard is a lot of discouragement," Pollina said. Of Vermont's 3,200 dairy farmers, about 500 sell milk to Cabot.

Pollina said that if the state doesn't crack down on companies using the Vermont label deceptively, it could lose a prized marketing tool.

"There seems to be very few states that have the ring of the state of Vermont. There seems to be some mythical air in the name of Vermont," he said. "Wholesomeness sells very well these days, and at a premium price."

Sweeping study finds problems in handling of bankruptcy cases

By MICHAEL ABRAMOWITZ
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A sweeping new study of the nation's bankruptcy system has found major problems in the administration of bankruptcy cases, from judges who ignore parts of the law to companies and individuals who abuse the system.

Although the bankruptcy system is working reasonably well on a day-to-day basis, it faces a serious loss of credibility if the flaws are not corrected, according to bankruptcy judges and lawyers associated with the study released Tuesday.

The most serious problem identified in the study, according to the experts, is the failure of many judges to follow the congressional mandate to protect the interest of creditors. Congress in part changed the bankruptcy law in 1984 because of a perception that debtors were treated too leniently, but the study indicated that either the new rules are not being followed or have not had their intended effect.

"In some areas of the country, the judges are not doing what they are supposed to be doing," said George C. Paine, federal bankruptcy judge in Nashville and one of the overseers of the survey of more than 1,000 judges, trustees and other lawyers involved with bankruptcy cases.

Experts cited the sheer crush of bankruptcy filings in recent years as one of the prime reasons judges are not always complying with federal bankruptcy rules. Unusually stringent provisions of the bankruptcy code, including requirements that hearings start within a certain length of time, were also cited as reasons for noncompliance.

The survey also indicated that lawyers are not willing to challenge judges who ignore the law. This problem is exacerbated, experts said, because bankruptcy lawyers are a relatively small part of the legal community and often appear time and time again before the same judges.

Whatever the reasons for non-compliance, bankruptcy lawyers said Congress needs to rethink some of its recent efforts to add new requirements to the system, or provide more resources and judges.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., one of the Senate's leading authorities on bankruptcy, said he was "surprised at the extent of (noncompliance)" shown in the survey. But "it is a little too early to tell what changes we need," he said, adding that he expects hearings to be called on the matter.

The survey released Tuesday was carried out during the past year by the American Bankruptcy Institute, a group of professionals involved in bankruptcy matters. It comes amid a staggering increase in the volume and complexity of bankruptcy cases around the nation that experts say has resulted from the economic distress in some parts of the country as well as the growing use of the bankruptcy code as a business reorganization device.

According to figures released with the study Tuesday, a record 477,843 individuals and businesses filed for bankruptcy in the year ended June 30, 1986, and throughout the first nine months of the current fiscal year, 411,399 bankruptcies have been reported.

The study was primarily intended to assess the effectiveness of the 1984 amendments to the bankruptcy code, but it also highlighted several broader trends. Among the key findings:

- There is a significant degree of noncompliance by judges with various legal requirements of the code, although this varies greatly by judicial circuit. For instance, Congress in 1984 required bankruptcy courts to schedule hearings within 30 days when creditors seek to lift the bankruptcy code's automatic prohibition against their efforts to collect their debts or seize collateral. However, about one-half the survey respondents said the deadlines were not met on at least some occasions, while one-quarter said they were hardly ever met.
- The 1984 changes enacted by Congress that were studied by the Institute did not dramatically change the bankruptcy system. Only 37 percent of the respondents thought the system was better as a result of the changes, while 42 percent perceived no changes.

Farming activist quits the business

PUXICO, Mo. (AP) — Farmer-activist Wayne Cryts, who became a folk hero to some when he defied federal marshals and took 32,000 bushels of soybeans from a bankrupt grain elevator in 1981, said Tuesday he's out of the farming business.

"We could have kept on trying, but with the way prices are, we looked at it and realized we'd just have gotten deeper in debt," Cryts said.

"We worked out an agreement with the bank and an insurance company and turned our 1,000 acres of land over to them."

Cryts still must deal with a $450,000 federal contempt judgment.

He said he would continue as a lobbyist for the American Family Farm Foundation, volunteer to help U.S. Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., in his presidential bid and build his own political career.

Cryts said he will try to unseat U.S. Rep. Bill Emerson, R-Cape Girardeau.

"The real tragedy of all this," Cryts said, "is that my son has left the farm and taken a job in St. Louis. This will be the first time in six generations that a Cryts hasn't put in a crop. We just can't fight the low farm prices."

Cool-Aid

There's nothing better on a hot summer day.

Or a cold winter morning.

If you're pondering the purchase of a new air conditioner this summer, consider a high-efficiency add-on heat pump instead. A heat pump cools your home just like a central air conditioner, but its usefulness doesn't end at the end of August. In winter, it becomes the most efficient way there is to heat your home. In fact, with efficiencies of up to 260 percent, add-on heat pumps are two to three times more efficient than the most efficient gas furnace. So they can heat your home not only with less energy but for less money, too.

Ten-year financing available.

Through Idaho Power, you can finance your new heat pump and get monthly payments designed to fit your budget. We'll even finance the installation — labor and all. And the only thing you have to put down is your signature.

For more information on the year-round wonders of the high-efficiency heat pump or the ease and convenience of Idaho Power's financing plan, call your heating and cooling contractor or your local Idaho Power office.
