Plane's engines focus of crash investigation

By LARRY GREEN and JOHN M. BRODER Los Angeles Times

ROMULUS, Mich. — Investigators searching for the cause of Sunday night's deadly crash of a Northwest Airlines flight 255 turned their attention Monday to the plane's engines.

Bound for Phoenix and Southern California's John Wayne Airport, the twin-engine MD-80, crashed seconds after takeoff just beyond the perimeter of Detroit's Metropolitan airport, killing at least 154 people.

Witnesses, including air traffic controllers, said they saw flames coming from the plane's left engine which, they said, exploded seconds before the plane swerved and crashed on a busy highway.

"At this point all we have are the barest facts," said John Lauber, chief spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board, which is investigating the crash.

"Some eyewitnesses have reported seeing an in-flight fire before impact," Lauber said late Monday, "and other eyewitnesses report seeing no such fire before impact."

Lauber said 25 witnesses were interviewed Monday and that the differences in their observations illustrated how difficult the investigation would be.

Investigators also examined the remnants of both engines, which are lying under an interstate highway overpass near the end of the aircraft's deadly skid. Lauber said the core of the left engine had been inspected. "We found no evidence of an uncontained failure... or any evidence of an in-flight fire."

He said, however, that only the right engine was still covered by its outer cowling, but insisted, "there is no evidence of an uncontained failure of either engine." Lauber identified the engine as Pratt & Whitney JT8D-217.

The disaster unfolded in a similar fashion to the August 1988 crash of a British Airways Boeing 737 equipped with another version of the engine, the JT8D-15.

One of the engines on that plane exploded and caught fire, authorities said, as the fully loaded plane reached takeoff speed at Manchester. Fifty-four people were killed and 83 survived.

U.S. officials have been concerned about the engines on the MD-80 airliner for several months, it was disclosed Monday.

Less than three weeks ago, the Federal Aviation Administration asked the airline industry to comment on a proposed directive to inspect the engines.

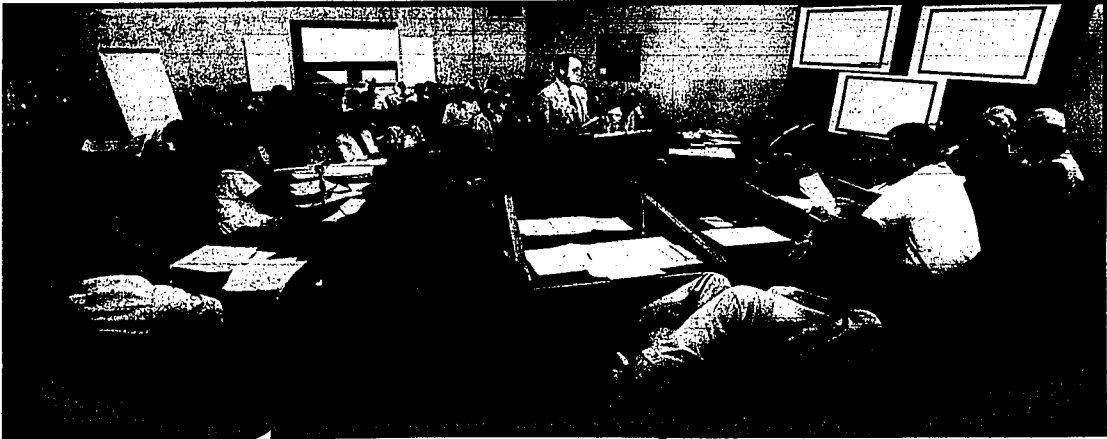

The National Transportation Safety Board, now in charge of the Northwest Airlines investigation, urged in April that all JT8D 200-series engines be inspected because a 1-inch by 15-inch tear was found in the outer skin of one of the engines on an American Airlines MD-80. That plane encountered trouble in mid-flight and landed safely at Minneapolis.

At the time, the NTSB said the engine was damaged when a series of locking pins broke inside the engine.

Similar engine failures were reported by American Airlines and Muso Airlines in December 1986 and by Pacific Southwest Airlines in March 1985, according to the NTSB.

In those incidents, the plane was... See CRASH on Page A3

Twin Falls School Superintendent Carl Snow speaks at a joint meeting of the Twin Falls City Council and the school board Monday night

City, school board, residents discuss pool site

By PAT MARCANTONIO Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Almost everybody agreed they wanted a new swimming pool.

The trouble was no one could agree on exactly where to put the pool.

With a roomful of people looking on, the Twin Falls City Council and Twin Falls School District Board of Trustees held a joint meeting on Monday to discuss the location of the new city pool on the school-district property on Locust Street and Stadium Boulevard.

The council will probably make the final decision next week, but may have limited choices.

District Superintendent Carl Snow said the board would lease the land and geothermal water rights free of charge to the city with the stipulation that Stadium Boulevard be closed. "The board believed the continued use of the street posed a safety problem. It also wanted to use the street for parking for school personnel.

If the street was closed, parents could use Madrona Street and the school could use a bus loop, he said.

Several neighbors opposed the closure of Stadium Boulevard, claiming it would create traffic problems elsewhere in the neighborhood.

Councilman Jim Vickers earned a round of applause when he said he didn't want the street closed either. "It's needed and it's used," he said.

Vickers offered a flurry of suggestions about traffic devices that could be installed on Stadium Boulevard as an alternative to closure.

The city also might be willing to help provide some parking for school personnel, he said.

But Snow remained unconvinced that traffic devices would make the street safe. "You're saying we'd have to kill someone," Snow said.

In a petition bearing the names of more than 137 people, neighbors suggested building the pool on school property between Twin Falls High School and Bruin Stadium or east of the existing tennis courts on the lot, so that any impact from the pool would be minimal.

But Snow said the property between the school and Bruin Stadium is used for physical education. Years before the city approached the board about the pool, the board had planned to build a soccer field east of the district tennis courts, near Sawtooth Elementary School.

The choices left to the city, given the school district conditions, would both be to "build the pool north of the tennis courts. One alternative considered by the council would place a parking lot between the pool and tennis courts. Another alternative would place the pool near the tennis courts, but separated by a grassy area. The two alternatives provide about 200 feet of grassy area between the pool site and neighbors.

But there were other neighbor concerns.

Gary Piller, the former school superintendent who resides in the area, said he had the feeling that the council had already made up its mind about the pool site after a meeting with city staff last month.

Mayor Doug Vollmer replied that Piller was exaggerating and to "back off."

Lori Edson, who resides on Princeton Drive, said the neighbors were willing to sacrifice, but the city and school should also compromise.

Neighbors were also concerned about the traffic the pool would generate.

City Engineer Gary Young said the city anticipated the addition of 200 cars because of the pool, which is not a major impact. Parking could be eliminated on a section of Locust Street to make way for a turning lane, but it would be almost impossible to do as the neighbors proposed and allow only them to park on the street.

The neighbors also questioned who would be liable for the pool and

Missile sale to Saudis planned

By BARRY SCHWEID The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration is mapping plans for another attempt to persuade Congress to approve the sale of 1,600 Maverick antitank missiles to Saudi Arabia along with other weapons in a package worth about $1 billion, congressional and other sources said today.

White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr., a former Senate Republican leader, has a key role in the emerging administration strategy. His job is to sound out senior Senate and House Republicans after Congress returns from its summer recess on Sept. 9 on the chances of pushing the deal through.

Mindful, however, of an embarrassing political setback earlier in the year, the White House is proceeding cautiously. While Pentagon and other officials recommended the sale of Mavericks and other weapons to the Saudis, the package has not yet been approved by President Reagan. Nor, the sources said, has the process set by law for informing Congress actually begun.

Once Congress is notified, the sale would go through unless both the Senate and House approve measures to veto it. Reagan still would have a chance to override the veto.

Administration officials had said in July that the Maverick request could be resubmitted within a few months. The Washington Post said the administration is expected to notify Congress shortly after it returns from its summer recess on Sept. 9.

In addition to the Maverick missiles, the package would include 14 of the latest F-16 jet fighter planes and improvements for ear-

Beirut radio station reports Glass escapes from captivity

By The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — U.S. journalist Charles Glass, who was kidnapped in West Beirut in June, escaped from captivity before dawn Tuesday, the Christian-controlled Voice of Lebanon radio station reported.

ABC-News reported Monday night that Glass, its former employee, was either freed by his captors or had escaped, and that he walked into West Beirut's seaside Summerland Hotel and was seen and spoken to by one of the network's employees in Beirut.

Glass, 37, then left by car with Syrian security officials, ABC reported. His current whereabouts were not known.

Glass walked into the hotel at 2:30 a.m. Tuesday (7 p.m. EDT Monday), and moments later Syrian troops came to the hotel and took him to an undisclosed destination, the radio station reported.

The Voice of Lebanon did not give further details about the reported escape.

Spokesmen for the Syrian command in Beirut said they could not confirm or deny the Voice of Lebanon report, and police also said they could not confirm the report. Switchboard operators at the Summerland did not answer telephone calls from The Associated Press.

In California, the journalist's father said he was aware of the Voice of Lebanon report, but that he was unable to get a confirmation.

"We heard that he had arranged to get in contact with the Syrians. If that is the case, he is in very good hands. We are anxious to hear anything," said Charles Glass Jr., a Los Angeles-area attorney.

Glass, a former correspondent for ABC-TV, was abducted on June 17 by 14 gunmen at the suburban district of Ouzai along with Ali Ouseiran, son of Lebanon's Defense Minister Adol Ouseiran. Glass was beaten with rifle butts and stuffed into a car trunk.

Ouseiran was released a week later. A group calling itself the Organization of the People's Defense claimed July 7 that it had kidnapped Glass, calling him a spy for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

The group is believed made up of Shiite Muslim extremists loyal to Iran.

The Ouzai area where Glass was abducted is a stronghold of Hezbollah, the umbrella of pro-Iranian Shiite militant factions believed holding other foreign hostages. Ouzai is about two miles from the Summerland Hotel.

The abduction embarrassed President Hafiz Assad of Syria, because Glass was the first foreigner seized in Lebanon since the Syrians moved 17,000 troops into West Beirut on Feb. 22 to curb feuding militias.

His kidnapping just 300 yards from a Syrian army checkpoint at Ouzai's coastal highway.

Glass, formerly of Los Angeles, had been researching a book on the Middle East when he was seized.

He lived in London with his wife, Fiona, and five children.

Diplomats meet on Central America

By RUTH BINAL The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — American diplomats and defense officials met Monday for briefings on U.S. policy toward a Central American peace plan, as the State Department questioned the sincerity of the Nicaraguan government's intentions toward the pact.

The hastily convened conference at the State Department was designed to brief U.S. representatives in Central America and to hear their reports on the peace agenda adopted last week by five Central American leaders, a department official said.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said "U.S. decisions on the peace plan were made at such a high level that it was impossible to fully explain them in cables to the embassies."

The source added that the diplomats "need to get a look at where we are. They need a sense of where Washington is going, and they'll report what they're hearing."

The conference is part of the administration's attempt to close ranks in the face of the disarray in U.S. policy toward the peace plan, which has been markedly from an agenda offered earlier by President Reagan and House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas.

The administration's point man on Central America, Philip C. Habib, unexpectedly resigned last

Federal officials to announce human testing of AIDS vaccine

By PHILIP L. HILTS The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Federal health officials are expected to announce Tuesday their approval of the first human testing for an AIDS vaccine in the United States.

The Food and Drug Administration has given approval for the testing to MicroGeneSys, a small company in West Haven, Conn., which has collaborated with researchers at the National Institutes of Health.

The vaccine will initially not be given to AIDS patients, but to uninfected volunteers to test for side effects and to determine whether the vaccine can raise an immune response in humans. Testing the vaccine for protection against AIDS infection will come later.

Indians end salmon-fishing expedition

FORT HALL, Idaho (AP) — The Shoshone-Bannock tribes' controversial fishing expedition on the South Fork of the Salmon River is history, but the tribal chairman says treaty fishing rights may be invoked on other Idaho streams in the future.

"That's it for the South Fork," Chairman Marvin Osborne said Monday after tribal members wrapped up their weekend fishery marked by furor over the survival of the summer chinook run on that stretch of the river. "The agency will be taking place shortly."

Indian fishermen using spears took a total of 29 salmon during the two-day outing at Goat Creek in what Osborne said was a ceremonial rite for some tribal members and a reassertion of treaty fishing rights for the entire tribe.

Osborne said the tribe would not attempt to take the rest of the 60-fish limit it set after discussing the fishery with Gov. Cecil Andrus and reducing its original intention to take 100 fish.

Despite Osborne's contention that state Fish and Game Department officials had been consulted prior to fishing expedition, state officials strongly criticized the action, fearing it could spark more fishing by other tribes and jeopardize attempts to revitalize Idaho's summer chinook run.

But Osborne said salmon fishing under the rights granted the tribe in the Fort-Brigder Treaty was being resumed.

"Depending upon the area and whether or not it's feasible to fish, any area that can possibly give an opportunity for tribal members to fish we will look at," Osborne said. "Of course, we're again going to ask Fish and Game for its blessing."

Last weekend was the first salmon fishing on the South Fork since 1964, when non-Indian fishing was banned there to restore runs of the anadromous fish that were decimated by logging and the construction of the Voluntary Fork road. The tribes had voluntarily complied with the ban until now.

Fish and Game Director Jerry Conley said about six people were fishing Sunday while others herded the fish to within the reach of their spears.

"They weren't paying much attention to taking just males," Conley said. The female salmon, which Conley said could only be identified in quiet water, carry thousands of eggs for spawning in the shallow beds of the Salmon River.

Fish and Game officials counted some 44 fish struck by the spears Sunday, although some hit earlier were finally recovered, Conley said.

"The Nez Perce have asserted their historical fishing rights in that area, also," Conley said. "There is a real possibility, if it continues, we will see some other tribes fishing there."

But Burnie Hill, fisheries director for the Nez Perce, pointed out that his tribe declined the Sho-Ban invitation to fish at the South Fork over the weekend, calling it a political move that could hurt all Idaho Indian tribes.

USDA revises June wheat price upward

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The government significantly revised its June wheat price average from a preliminary 14-year low back up to the mid-two-dollar range, but analysts said the harvest-season market slide continued in July.

Potato prices rebounded to a new two-year high. But cattle prices fell back below the $60-level for the first time since March, and sheepmen saw an end to the two-month string of lamb prices over $80.

The latest price estimates put the June average for wheat at $2.45 a bushel, up dramatically from the initial estimate of $2.12 a month ago but still 12 cents below the May price.

But the Agriculture Department said that while market erosion was not as drastic as previously thought, prices continued to weaken in the past month. The initial July estimate, based on mid-month market conditions, was put at $2.26 a bushel, approaching last fall's market trough.

Barley also slipped again, losing another 11 cents a bushel to fall to $1.78.

Prison inmate cuts to swell county jail numbers

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The number of convicted felons being held in county jails until space opens in the state-prison system will more than double by year's end as the Corrections Department complies with another round of court-ordered inmate population cuts.

Director Al Murphy said Monday.

Murphy also told the Board of Corrections that the problem of meeting the population limits imposed after inmates successfully challenged prison conditions in federal courts was being aggravated by the damage caused to the maximum-security unit during this month's disruption of the Death Row inmates.

In updating the board on that disruption, Murphy said it would be at least 90 days until renovation is completed on the two tiers in the unit.

Cells on those tiers — Death Row and close custody — will be steel-walled with concrete bed platforms and steel toilets installed to preclude damage as occurred two weeks ago when walls between cells were knocked out. The project will cost about $120,000.

Disciplinary action has been initiated against the nine Death Row inmates involved, and Murphy has frozen their personal bank accounts to help pay for the damage. But he conceded there is little the state can do to punish men who are awaiting execution.

Murphy has ordered the work on Death Row to be completed by mid-October, two weeks before the second of two upcoming court deadlines for reductions in prison population.

"The problem we're going to have on Death Row is that the board has to remember it has two significant population cuts coming up," Murphy said.

On Sept. 15, the federal court has ordered the state to reduce the population of one cellhouse from 140 to 108, and by Nov. 1 the state must cut the number of inmates in another cellhouse from 142 to 108 as well as begin single-celling inmates in a third. That will limit the population in that cellhouse — Nine House — to 78. Some 120 inmates are housed there now.

"The only way we'll be able to do it is to cut off what's coming in,"

Murphy told the board, and that means reducing the flow of felons now being held in county jails to substantially less than the 30 a month being transferred now.

About 60 convicted felons are currently backed up in county jails around the state, awaiting room in the state prison system, and 15 more state prison inmates were transferred to the Shoshone County Jail this month in the wake of the Death Row disruption that further reduced cell space.

Murphy said another 15 to 20 inmates would probably be moved to the Shoshone County Jail in the coming weeks to help meet the Sept. 16 population cut.

Potato commission uses Andrus to promote state's famous spuds

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — One of Idaho's best-known citizens approaches the gray-haired shopper in a supermarket and asks, "Do you know me?"

She says she doesn't.

So Gov. Cecil C. Andrus whips an Idaho potato out of his pocket, and makes the points that:

Idaho potatoes taste better, and the only way you can make certain you're getting an Idaho potato (without tasting it on the spot) is to look for the "Grown in Idaho" seal.

With the governor as the centerpiece, the Idaho Potato Commission on Monday started work on its new fall promotion campaign.

Commission member Roy Reed, Idaho Falls, said the agency will spend about $2.5 million this season to convince buyers that the best russel potatoes are those grown in Idaho.

Reed, who has 250 acres of spuds himself, says the commission found a good reason for starring Andrus in the ads, the same as it did in the early 1970s when Andrus was elected governor the first time.

"We got a tremendous response to those ads," said Reed. "They were a tremendous success for the story we wanted to tell."

"We also decided that who would be a better spokesman for the state than the governor himself," said Reed.

Potato promotion ads featuring Andrus went nationwide in the early 1970s, and Andrus also made promotional trips to such places as New York City on behalf of the Idaho spud and other products.

One national publication was so taken with Andrus that it likened him to former New York mayor John Lindsay as a urbane, polished spokesman.

Reed said the Potato Commission may want Andrus to do the same thing again, if funding and his schedule permits it.

The San Francisco advertising agency of D'Arcy, Masius, Benton and Bowles is putting together the advertising campaign.

Filming Andrus at a local Albertson's supermarket was no small production on Monday. The production company, Janco Productions, Inc., San Francisco, brought in 37 cases of equipment and about 40 production workers.

Woman to be arraigned in shooting

GRANGEVILLE, Idaho (AP) — A 69-year-old Koozika woman has been bound over to 2nd District Court in connection with the shooting of her husband.

Gladya Pauline Fleury has been scheduled for arraignment Aug. 20, after Magistrate Michael J. Griffin found enough evidence at a preliminary hearing Thursday to support a charge of battery with intent to commit murder.

Mrs. Fleury's husband, Jesse H.

Fleury, 66, testified he went to sit outside the couple's home on July 17 and invited his wife to join him when she finished her work.

About five minutes later, Jesse Fleury said, "my whole head seemed like it blow off."

The shot from a .38-caliber handgun hit him in the left temple and exited through his jaw. It wasn't until the next day at the hospital he was informed his wife was a suspect in the shooting.

Symms aide's points hurt by tie to Moon

Sen. Steve Symms is a known for his outspoken support of anti-communists everywhere, but when one of his top aides makes "fact finding" trips to Central America, we think both Symms and the aide should be more forthright about who pays for them.

The reason is that the battle in Central America is, like the battle of the Vietnam War, one for control of the minds of the American people.

Facts and distortions about Central America from many parties are commonplace; often, it is just as important to know who is behind the statements as what is being said.

With that in mind, we think people should know, when they hear Symms staff member Sam Routsoun give one of his pro-Contra talks on Nicaragua, that Routsoun has taken several privately-funded trips to Central America, at least one of which was paid for by an arm of Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church.

The Unification Church's involvement in American government and politics is not nearly as well known as it should be. It is particularly active among Republicans and conservatives; its ties to George Hansen were extensive and it got a number of Idaho legislators to attend one or more of its "free" conferences on world communism.

The Unification Church's interest in American foreign affairs is less well known. One of its top American representatives, Bo Hi Pak, is the former head of the Korean CIA and was the subject of a Congressional investigation in the 1970s.

The church has asserted political action arms. One is called CAUSA which is virulently anti-communist and which promotes, among other things, a kind of one-world government of which Moon would be the "Messiah."

Understandably, Routsoun is not particularly anxious to have people know of the Moon involvement to his Central American trips.

In Twin Falls last week, he at first denied there was a connection to CAUSA, but then admitted that another Church organization, called the Freedom Leadership Council, had provided funds for at least one trip.

Asked about it, Routsoun claimed the trips were approved by the Senate Ethics Committee, but he declined to say more.

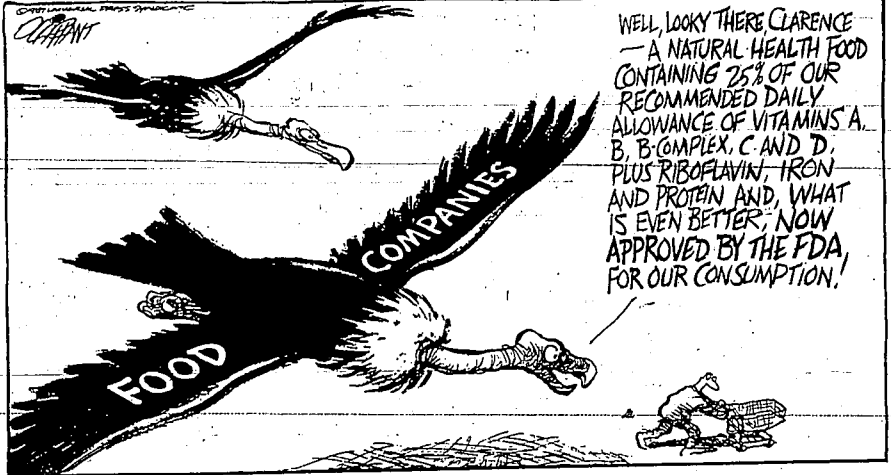

That is an unfortunate stance on a public issue like Central America, for it leave the impression there is something more sinister.

Some of Routsoun's points about the threat of Soviet and Cuban communism in Nicaragua were well taken, although as with other presentations of this sort, as much was left out as was said. But the strength of arguments he made was diminished by his hiding of the privately-funded nature of several of his trips.

People who listen to an aide of a United States senator have a right to know, we think, where the information is coming from.

Routsoun is an articulate individual, as former Marine who clearly believes Central American communism presents an untold threat to America.

But his message, we think, would have more weight if Routsoun got his information from less-interested sources than a shadowy organization whose foreign policy objectives are not the same as America's.

Go ahead with new pool

Our family would like to thank the city council and school district for their courage and cooperation in going ahead with a pool project for Twin Falls.

This type of cooperative effort will make it possible to ensure maximum utilization and benefit from an expensive investment.

It is also a demonstration of faith in the future of Twin Falls and should provide a psychological boost to future efforts to keep our city vital and growing.

To those grumbling about the pool being built near the high school, we remind you that any utilization by the school for activities such as P.E. classes would be during the school year when children are in school anyway.

Since all children in Twin Falls will go to high school they would all have the opportunity to take P.E. swimming classes offered. The danger of the pool being tied up with swim team practices and swimming lessons exists wherever the pool is located.

As best we can recall the old pool at Harmon was closed to public swimming several hours each day while lessons and team practices were held.

Finally, it appears there is a possibility that the pool could utilize water from the school's well, an option that might not be available at Harmon Park, considering the legal battles water well users are now engaged in. Everything considered, the school location makes the most sense.

We urge that if at all possible the pool be covered when built, perhaps with an inflatable bubble that could be removed during the summer. An inflatable bubble is relatively inexpensive and would make it possible to begin using the pool immediately for P.E. classes and year round public swimming.

City council, you are on the right track! We support you.

Don't close teen center

Because of all the recent complaints concerning Fastrax, I feel it's time we hear a teen-ager's point of view.

First of all I would like to ask those of you who would like to see this great place closed a few questions:

1. When you were a teen-ager did you like to dance?
2. Did you like to go out with friends and have a good time?
3. Did you have an organized place to do so in?
4. What's the harm in today's Magic Valley teens in having a place to dance and be with friends?

I would like for you to consider the good points of Fastrax, not just the bad. I know that the kids are drinking outside of Fastrax, but that goes on at school dances and during school itself — are you going to have it closed too? You can't stop the drinking and you shouldn't let the few kids who do drink influence your decision on the closing of Fastrax.

They have said many times that the parking lot would be paved and the lines would be painted on by the end of the month so that "problem" would be solved.

If you have Fastrax closed, it's back to the parties, getting drunk, and driving home, or it's back to the "cruise." Try to think of the good, not just the bad.

A good place to live

Although I faithfully read the Letters to the Editor printed in the Times-News, I frequently tire of the continued harangues from the "prophets of doom," the "fault-finders," the "self servers," the "self-righteous," and the "crusaders," whose comments seem to dominate this section of your publication.

Most of these people seem to be obsessed with informing us of the negative aspects of life in Idaho in general, and Magic Valley in particular.

Over all, you print a fine newspaper, we are fortunate to live in a wonderful community which is located in a great state and nation.

We are governed by those we elect, who, in turn, serve us within the framework of the finest system of government ever devised. We are blessed with an excellent school system, a moderate climate and better than average public facilities.

You may not know it, but you have got a lot to be grateful for. Many of you would do yourselves a favor by opening your eyes and minds and taking a little time out to appreciate and enjoy some of the many benefits which we are fortunate to have at our disposal and unfortunately, all too often, overlook.

With all these blessings at our fingertips, the constant negative attitude expressed by the average public forum contributor amazes me.

U.S. still has no clear oil objectives

When you look at the Persian Gulf and the related global oil situation, you are reminded of the old saw about good news and bad news.

The good news is that things are different from the Middle East oil crises of the 1970s.

We and other major Western countries should be able to ride out an interruption of Persian Gulf oil supplies, if it should come, with much less economic disruption.

The bad news is that:

— Even a little disruption is bad for the deficit-plagued U.S. economy.

— Looking a few years down the road, Persian Gulf oil will become much more vital than it is now.

— The Soviets, perhaps looking to the day when they will need Middle Eastern oil to supplement their own supplies, are moving astutely to establish a permanent military presence in the Persian Gulf and to improve relations with Iran.

— But Washington, meanwhile, is doing an unimpressive job of coping with the strong Soviet political offensive in the area.

— The administration, though agonizing a bit over reliance on imported oil, has no meaningful energy policy to ensure the U.S. economy of plentiful, affordable energy supplies as oil becomes scarcer.

Experts believe that the industrialized nations could cope with a six-months-long cutoff of Persian Gulf oil because of the buildup in strategic petroleum reserves and the existence of surplus production capacity outside the gulf.

Looking a little way down the road, however, the picture is different.

Writing in the Geopolitics of Energy, Joseph P. Riva Jr. of the Library of Congress points out that the first 200 billion barrels of the world's oil were produced and consumed in the 109 years ending in 1968. By 1988, after just 20 additional years, the world will have used up 400 billion more barrels.

Such members belonging to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries control "well over half of the world's remaining conventional oil," Riva says. They will be able to provide an increasing proportion of total world oil production and oil trade.

Such alternative suppliers as Mexico and Venezuela can soften the growing reliance on Persian Gulf oil, but not avoid it unless consuming nations are willing to pay heavy subsidies for the exploitation of Venezuela's huge resources of heavy crude oil and/or the liquefaction of U.S. shale and coal.

No such moves are in the offing. Thus U.S. reliance on Persian Gulf oil appears destined to rise, with ominous effects on our balance of trade.

The aspect of U.S. warships reflects an appreciation of the Persian Gulf's importance. But the Soviets are playing their hand with greater subtlety and skill than Washington is.

Despite the general Arab enmity toward Iran, Moscow's logrolling with Tehran does not seem to be preventing the Soviets from improving their image among the Arab states in the gulf area, where they are now viewed as an essential participant in the Middle Eastern peace process.

Considering the anticipated strain on the future adequacy of its own oil production, the Soviet Union may be interested less in causing trouble for the West than in establishing its own bonna fides in preparation for the day when it will need large-scale access to Persian Gulf oil for its own economic reasons.

That remains to be seen.

Meanwhile, there is mounting concern in official Washington over the prospective increase in U.S. reliance on Persian Gulf oil.

But the sense of urgency obviously hasn't reached the White House, where President Reagan didn't bother to put energy policy on his priority list for the rest of his term.

Unfortunately, the president is right in tune with the American people, who, as one underling said not long ago, "are very happy right now. They aren't concerned about the long term."

Ernest Conine writes for The Los Angeles Times.

Women should oppose efforts to curb their basic rights

I want to express my view, on behalf of a great many women in this country, feminists and believers in human rights, that this current move to introduce censorship in the United States in the guise of suppressing pornography is extremely dangerous to women.

It is extremely dangerous to the rights of women as well as men to speak and think freely and to fight for their basic rights, to control our lives, our bodies, and have some degree of economic and political equality.

There is a dangerous attempt to use a feminist smoke screen and even to claim that this anti-pornography suppression legislation is a weapon against sex discrimination and a weapon to liberate women from the degradation of pornography.

Now, I speak as someone who has no particular liking for pornography and I must say that I don't indulge in it much. I find a lot of it — I haven't seen so much of it — very boring, and I don't find it particularly titillating, but I recognize the right of others who chose to be titillated in that way.

And I do find terribly dangerous the move to suppress sexually explicit material in books or television.

My own book, The Feminine Mystique, which had something to do with putting a name to the problems oppressing women 28 years ago, and helped to start the modern women's movement, was suppressed as pornographic. Why, I don't know.

It's only passion was for the personhood of women. It was suppressed as porno-graphic in libraries in the Midwest, as I believe Mr. Vonnegut's book was, and certain books by Mark Twain and others. I even think Alice in Wonderland was suppressed by this particular library.

If the anti-pornography legislation, the suppression of pornography, was passed, the first targets of it would be feminist books, would be books like Our Bodies, Ourselves, would be books giving women control of their own bodies.

The forces that are behind the anti-pornography legislation are those that would take away the right of a woman to decide when and whether and how many times to bear a child, to control her own body.

They are the very forces that would even suppress books that show women in roles other than sex objects, show women in non-traditional roles, as astronauts or vice-presidents or doctors, lawyers.

We have to ask, what are they up to in this sideshow, this circus about suppressing pornography?

You know, some pornography certainly does degrade women. It also degrades men and it degrades sex. The pornography that pushes violence is particularly deplorable.

But the forces that want to suppress pornography are not in favor of suppressing guns. They are not in favor of legislation — they would undo legislation — protecting women and children from actual violence.

What are they up to?

The ultimate obscenity in America is murderous violence, is the attempt to get rid of our liberties and our freedoms that have made democracy the shining light of the world.

And the ultimate obscenity is also poverty, and those who profit from the poverty of others.

I urge all women to have their eyes opened to the dangers to our basic rights by the pushing of anti-pornography legislation.

Underneath the sideshow, they are trying to excite the passions of the people against ideas — sexually titillating or repulsive sexually — but ideas, not actual deeds, not violence, not the obscenity of poverty — to take our attention away while we are being manipulated in this country, being manipulated, and our right are being threatened.

I call the obscenity that threatens us the obscenity of taking away school lunch from children and milk supplements from babies and some of the medical benefits from old people and reducing Social Security. This is the obscenity.

For women there is a particular danger — the feminization of poverty — and I deplore that even a very few feminists have been diverted by the issues of pornography from the basic protection of all our rights.

Now, I urge all women to have their eyes opened to the dangers to our basic rights by the pushing of anti-pornography legislation.

Betty Friedan is author of The Feminine Mystique. This article is from her recent address to the National Coalition Against Censorship, a New York-based group.

Northeastern Illinois begins to dry out

CHICAGO (AP) — Sunshine and acres of water-soaked flood-stricken northeastern Illinois residents Monday as they headed home, mops and even oars in hand, while water receded after a record rainfall aggravated by weekend thunderstorms.

Thunderstorms that swept through the area late Sunday left nearly 3 inches to the 9.3-inch rainfall that set a 24-hour record Friday. The new storms also caused widespread power and telephone outages and wind damage.

Cov. James R. McQueen said the state likely will ask President Reagan later this week to declare the stricken counties in Chicago's western suburbs a federal disaster area.

"We're in the process today and tomorrow of cataloging the damage," Thompson said Monday at the Illinois State Fair in Springfield.

"The application has to be very detailed. But from what I've been hearing, the odds are that we will seek a disaster declaration, he said.

Thompson declared the region a state disaster area Friday and sent Gov. James R. McQueen to the scene.

Communication problems hampered recovery efforts Monday.

"We'd like to find out how many people are still in shelters and how many need supplies, but we can't get through because the phones are down," said Janet Petsche of the DuPage County Emergency Services Disaster Agency west of the city.

Water seeping into underground telephone cables knocked out service to about 12,000 Chicago-area customers Sunday, bringing the total without service to 42,000, said Illinois Bell spokesman Laura Litala.

Sunday's storms also left about 40,000 customers without electricity as trees were blown onto power lines and lightning struck transformers in the Chicago area and in Rockford, said spokeswoman Debbie Vestal of Commonwealth Edison Co. They and the telephone customers remained "without service Monday.

Water receded Sunday in some areas north and northwest of Chicago, enabling homeowners to start draining basements, cleaning up mud and sewage, repairing damage and salvaging what they could, officials said.

Reagan: Hush on legislative agenda

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, denying that his 76 years have slowed him down any, is spending his ranch vacation riding horseback and cutting brush, and has no plans to talk to members of Congress this week about his legislative agenda.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Firwater told reporters Monday that the president and first lady Nancy Reagan were enjoying clear, warm weather at their Rancho del Cielo in the Santa Ynez Mountains north of here.

He added, however, that the pace of presidential activity would pick up next week when the president goes to Los Angeles, where he is to deliver a major foreign policy address on East-West relations on Aug. 25.

Evicted resident arraigned on murder charges

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An unemployed handyman was arraigned in pajamas and slippers Monday and was ordered held without bail on charges of murdering seven women whose remains were found a week ago in or near his apartment.

Harrison "Marty" Graham, 28, surrendered to police Sunday at his mother's urging. He had disappeared Aug. 9 after his landlord's son asked him to move out of the smelly apartment where six of the bodies were found.

A preliminary hearing was scheduled for Aug. 26 by Bail Commissioner Margaret McCann, who denied the early morning arraignment.

Detectives continued to investigate the circumstances surrounding the deaths, some of which may have occurred as long as three years ago.

"The major focus of the investigation will be to gather evidence and to identify the victims in the apartment," homicide Capt. Robert Grasso said at a morning news conference. "So far we have discovered no evidence of other victims."

Graham had been sought on warrants charging him with seven counts of abuse of a corpse, but since his arrest "We have gathered sufficient evidence to charge him with murder," Grasso said without elaborating.

"I have no comment on what he may have said while in police custody," Grasso said.

Graham appeared in court in pajamas because "his clothes are being examined by the chemical laboratory," Grasso said.

Nearly a week to the hour after police found the bodies, police were summoned by Graham's 45-year-old mother, Lillian Graham, to a street corner where Graham surrendered peacefully.

Graham had telephoned his mother earlier, told her where he was and asked her to bring food and cigarettes, said Detective Gerald Whartenby. When she arrived, the two talked for 45 minutes while she persuaded him to surrender, police said.

"His mother was cooperative, but in terms of evidence, she had nothing to reveal," Grasso said.

The Philadelphia Inquirer reported Monday that Ms. Graham said her son told her he did not kill anyone and that the bodies were there when he moved in 2½ years ago.

Texas salesman never exposed to AIDS

DALLAS (AP) — An insurance salesman who authorities feared had spread the AIDS virus to dozens of children was never exposed to the fatal disease, a pathologist said Monday.

Dr. Charles Petty, the Dallas County medical examiner who did an autopsy on Jimmy Glenn Etheridge, said the original test indicating exposure to the AIDS virus was wrong.

"The original test produced a false positive," Petty said. "We have run every available test and have concluded Etheridge had not been exposed to the virus."

Etheridge, 37, was shot to death June 29 in his Marlin home by a 16-year-old housemate who authorities say will not be prosecuted in the death.

Police searching Etheridge's home found computer diskettes containing records of sexual contacts with young males. Snapshots of boys and pornographic magazine and videocassettes depicting male homosexual acts also were found in the man's home.

The original autopsy report released a month ago said Etheridge tested positive for the AIDS virus but that his blood tested negative for antibodies produced to fight the virus that causes AIDS.

The AIDS antibody test has proven to be nearly 100 percent accurate in its more than two years on the market but the test for the virus itself, called an antigen test, is experimental.

FBI recovers trove of war documents

WASHINGTON (AP) — A trove of 191 Civil War documents that included papers signed by Abraham Lincoln was found Monday in another safety deposit box rented by a scholar accused of trying to sell stolen letters to a Boston bookstore, the FBI reported.

The manuscripts, along with money, drugs and a handgun, were found by FBI agents who searched the box rented under an alias by Charles Merrill Mount, who was arrested last week in Boston while allegedly trying to sell documents identified as stolen from the National Archives here.

On Friday, more than 182 Civil War documents authorities believed to be government property were found during a search of two other safety deposit boxes Mount had rented under a different alias, according to documents filed in U.S. District Court here.

During the search Monday, the agents found $18,400 in cash and a .32-caliber handgun in addition to the cache of documents, which included 28 letters to various Union generals from War Secretary Edwin Stanton, the new court papers said.

Nazi war criminal Hess dies in prison

People

BERLIN (AP) — Rudolf Hess, the deputy Fuehrer who never renounced Adolf Hitler and the atrocities committed by the Nazi regime, died today at age 93 after nearly a half-century in jail, including 23 years as the only inmate at cavernous Spandau prison in West Berlin.

The Western Allies, in a statement on Hess' death, also confirmed that Spandau would be torn down.

Hess, an early Nazi activist who participated in the 1923 Beer Hall Putsch, was arrested in 1941 in an attempt to make peace with Britain, died at the prison in West Berlin, the Allies announced. The cause of death was not made public.

The bushy-browed and gaunt Hess was the last top Nazi to die. "The Allied statement, issued by British diplomatic spokesman Anderson W. Purdon, said: 'The purpose of Spandau Allied prison has ceased on the death of Rudolf Hess.'"

"The World War II Allies had agreed to demolish the aging prison to keep it from becoming a rallying place for Nazi sympathizers. Today's statement did not specify a date for demolition, but Allied sources previously had said the prison would be torn down within days of Hess' death."

The Allies' statement also said Hess' body would be turned over to his family for burial. "The Hess family lawyer, 'Seitz,' said it was Hess' wish to be buried in Wunstiedel, a town in northeastern Bavaria."

There had been unconfirmed reports that Hess' body would be cremated and immediately buried in the town. Hess suffered from lung, heart and stomach ailments and was nearly blind late in his life. He was hospitalized several times in recent years, and attempted suicide three times in his prison confinement.

He had been in custody since 1941, when he parachuted into Scotland in what he said was an attempt to arrange a World War II peace treaty.

By Soviet and British prosecutors at the Nuremberg war crimes trial said they suspected Hess' mission was to settle with the British so Hitler would have just one front to deal with when his forces attacked the Soviet Union.

In recent years, the United States, Britain and France had called for the release of Hess on humanitarian grounds, but the Soviet Union — the fourth country administering Spandau — refused, saying it would constitute an amnesty for fascism.

West German leaders also had asked that Hess be freed and his family had filed a series of lawsuits to get him out of prison.

Spandau guard once said Hess was a "strange sight as he shambles

Rudolf Hess
Last top Nazi to die

around in an old German army skipper and long military overcoat that flaps around his ankles." Hess spent many hours in the prison garden feeding birds.

Hess' son, Wolf-Ruediger, Hess, said his father talked "about little else except wanting to be let go."

Hess was born in Alexandria, Egypt, on April 26, 1894, the son of a German exporter. He was sent back to Germany for schooling at age 14.

His studies were interrupted by World War I, in which he suffered three minor wounds. He began the war as an infantryman, but then became a flier.

After the war, Hess resumed his studies in Munich, where he met and quickly joined Hitler in the growing Nazi movement.

The two were jailed in Landsberg prison after the abortive "Beer Hall Putsch" in which the Nazis tried to seize power in Bavaria in 1923. In prison, Hitler dictated his political tract "Mein Kampf" to Hess.

After their release in 1925, Hess became Hitler's personal secretary. In 1933, after Hitler was elected chancellor of Germany, Hess was given ministerial rank and named deputy Fuehrer.

Hess was said to have inspired a part of the Nazi ideology, the claim that Germany needed to expand its territory to provide space for all Germans.

Hess was a loyal follower of Hitler, telling the faithful at a Nazi party congress that "Adolf Hitler is Germany and Germany is Adolf Hitler" and describing him as the "greatest son Germany produced in 1,000 years."

But more ambitious Hitler aides eclipsed him in his years as deputy and he appeared to achieve little. The reasons for his 1941 flight to Britain remain unclear.

Hess said he flew to England without Hitler's knowledge to arrange a separate peace treaty under which Germany would be given a "free hand" in Europe while Britain's colonial empire would be left untouched.

"If Hess had succeeded with his ideas of peace with England, he would have been welcomed by Hitler as the hero of Nazi Germany," said the late Albert Speer, Hitler's armaments minister who had been a fellow prisoner in Spandau.

But the British government under Prime Minister Winston Churchill spurned such a deal and interned Hess for the remainder of the war.

Hitler denounced Hess as a madman. On May 10, 1941, apparently without telling his family, Hess had signed out a Messerschmitt fighter plane for a flight from Augsburg to Scandinavia, taking it instead over the North Sea to Britain.

Hedgehopping over the countryside until he reached the estate of the Duke of Hamilton, Hess bailed out in the uniform of a German air force captain. Hess had met the Duke at the 1936 Olympics in Berlin and thought he would help him negotiate a German-British peace treaty.

Instead, Hess was found by a farmer and promptly taken into custody. In 1946, Hess was sentenced in Nuremberg to life in prison for "plotting against world peace" and "planning an aggressive war."

On Oct. 1, 1946, he was transferred to Spandau, a prison built to accommodate 600 prisoners.

Initially, six other Nazi leaders also served time at Spandau. They were Speer, Admiral Erich Raeder, Economics Minister Walther Funk, Foreign Minister Konstantin von Neurath, Hitler Youth chief Baldur von Schirach and Admiral Karl Doenitz.

Raeder and Funk got life sentences but were freed early for health reasons and died in 1960. Von Neurath served eight years and died in 1956. Von Schirach and Speer both served 20-year sentences. Von Schirach died in 1974 and Speer in 1981. Doenitz served 10 years and died in 1990.

Until the end, Hess maintained his innocence and did not renounce his past as a Nazi leader. Hess is survived by his wife, Ilse, and his son.

North - a caricature to some WOODBURY, N.Y. (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver North may be a hero to some, but he's mainly a caricature — and a meat ticket — to illustrator Mort Drucker, who just completed a coloring book that focuses on North.

Although it is just getting to bookstores this week, "The Oliver North Coloring Book" already is in its third printing because 200,000 copies have been ordered, said Drucker, a Woodbury resident who drew the caricatures that fill the book's 24 pages.

Writer Paul Laikin of Plainview provided the text for the book that sells for $3.95 and is published by Paul Burke Publishing Inc.

Shooting won't deter journalist

YAZOO CITY, Miss. (AP) — A newspaper editor shot by a county employee while photographing a work crew was released from a hospital and returned to work Monday, ready to track down new leads in stories about county government.

"I'm fixing to really be busy," said Debbie Chaney Montgomery, 26, editor of the biweekly Yazoo City Herald. "I got more tips laying in a hospital bed than I've gotten in the last six months on the story."

Montgomery was struck in the hip and leg by shotgun pellets Friday after she took photographs of a county crew working on a private driveway.

She also bruised her shoulder and twisted her leg as she dived under her car. She made her way inside it and drove to Kings Daughters Hospital.

"I'm fine. I'm just real sore," said Montgomery, who has received flowery messages from well-wishers throughout the county.

Sherriff's deputies arrested county roads worker James D. Hughes, 66, of Benton, and seized a 20-gauge shotgun. He was charged with aggravated assault and released on a $7,500 bond.

He also was suspended from his county job pending the outcome of the case. But county officials dispute Montgomery's contention that the work he and other crew members were doing on a private driveway was illegal.

As the time of the shooting, Montgomery was investigating reports of illegal private work by county employees, a topic that had led to several phone threats in the past three months, she said.

She also said Department officials say they will determine whether the project was legal.

A two-year investigation by the FBI of corrupt county purchasing and work practices has resulted in arrests of 38 county supervisors from across in Mississippi since February. Twenty-four supervisors have pleaded guilty and three supervisors have been found guilty in trials.

Federal officials say the investigation is continuing, but wouldn't say if it extends to Yazoo County. No supervisor here has been arrested in the investigation.

Hyundai lockout triggers street battles

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of workers fought riot police in a southern industrial area Monday after the giant Hyundai conglomerate locked them out of their plants.

Hyundai, a major factor in the U.S. subcompact auto market, and other key companies in South Korea's export-driven economy are among the hardest hit in weeks of strikes for higher pay, better working conditions and freer unions.

The street battles in Ulsan occurred at the beginning of annual military maneuvers, which officials said are being emphasized this year as a defense against "growing danger within and without."

About 60 people were reported injured in strikes-related violence in Ulsan, Seoul and Taean, a textile center 85 miles south of the capital.

Strikes began after President Chun Doo-hwan declared June 30, following a month of anti-government protests, that he would accept opposition demands for such democratic reforms as direct presidential elections and less control over labor unions.

Authoritarian governments have virtually banned strikes since the South Korean "economic miracle" began in the 1970s and have kept wages low in order to make products cheaper abroad.

South Koreans worked the world's longest week last year, an average 54.4 hours, but the average monthly wage was only $370, according to a pro-government union federation. Productivity has nearly doubled since 1980, but pay has increased only 40 percent.

Preliminary figures from the Bank of Korea released Monday showed 15.3 percent economic growth for the first six months of 1987, but strikes have seriously affected exports and officials predict a slowdown of growth in the second half.

Bank officials said they expected the growth rate for all of 1987 to fall short of the 11.3 percent forecast.

The government has stayed out of labor disputes so far, but officials have said intervention may become necessary if they continue.

Labor unrest subsided over the weekend, but was back again Monday with the lockouts in Ulsan.

Yonhap, the South Korean news agency, said about 20,000 workers of the six Hyundai companies went on a rampage after the lockouts.

Surviving septuplets still in danger

LONDON (DPA) — Five of seven attending physician said. The surviving infants, none weighing more than two pounds, were suffering from a respiratory condition Monday after the deaths of two babies over the weekend.

The biggest danger is the underdeveloped stage of their lungs," an attending physician said. The surviving infants, none weighing more than two pounds, were suffering from a respiratory condition Monday after the deaths of two babies over the weekend.

Britain's first septuplets, four girls and three boys, were born four months prematurely to 27-year-old Susan Halton Saturday.

Union wants police off compound

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The black miners' union asked the biggest South African mining company Monday to remove police out of mine compounds as a step toward curbing violence during the nationwide strike.

Leaders of the National Union of Mineworkers, meeting with Anglo American Corp. officials for the first time in the "eight-day" strike, also said mine security officers should be confined to barracks and charges dropped against arrested strikers.

About 240 strikers have been injured and 200 arrested during the strike against gold and coal mines by the 800,000-member union. Four of its leaders, at Anglo American's invitation, conferred for more than three hours Monday with company executives on ways to reduce violence.

No agreement was reached, and the talks were adjourned until Tuesday.

The meeting came hours after the collapse of a planned strike by another black union against SASOL, the state-run coal, oil and gas company. The Chemical Workers International Union, which had hoped 15,000 members would strike early Monday, abandoned its plans after a clash Sunday between strike supporters and opponents in which at least one worker was killed and two injured.

According to the union, SASOL organized groups of workers at a coal mine to attack strike supporters. The company denied it and said violence began when some workers resisted efforts to pressure them into striking.

Chemical union leaders had called for a strike at SASOL's mines and coal-to-oil plants in Secunda, 88 miles east of Johannesburg, to press a demand for paid holidays on May 1, International Workers Day, and June 16, anniversary of the 1976 riots in the black township of Soweto.

"The union said it believed two men were killed at a Secunda coal mine. SASOL spokesman Jan Krynauw said one man — a non-union member — was killed and two union members were injured.

Four union officials, including General Secretary Cyril Ramaphosa, sat across a table from a six-member Anglo American delegation led by industrial relations manager Bobby Godsell.

JERUSALEM (AP) — A defense expert at the war crimes trial of John Demjanjuk accused a prosecution witness Monday of manipulating a photograph on an SS identity card to make it appear to portray Demjanjuk.

The prosecution says it shows Demjanjuk was trained to be a death camp guard at the Trawniki center in Nazi-occupied Poland.

The Swedish-born Mrs. Pritchard was the second defense witness to take the stand. She is a specialist in physiognomy, a field which links personality traits to facial or bodily features.

Mrs. Pritchard showed the court reconstructions of Altmann's photo montages to illustrate her claim that he used lighting to emphasize the uncontented pictures of Demjanjuk and tone down the Trawniki card.

Anita Pritchard, 40, a doctoral student in psychology at the University of Pacific in Stockton, Calif., said West German prosecution expert Reinhardt Altmann used lighting and shading techniques to make the SS picture look like two later photographs of Demjanjuk taken in 1947 and 1967.

The Ukrainian-born Demjanjuk, 67, is charged with being Ivan the Terrible, a brutal guard who operated gas chambers at Treblinka death camp in Nazi-occupied Poland, where 850,000 Jews were killed in 1942 and 1943.

Demjanjuk, a retired Ohio autoworker, claims he is a victim of mistaken identity. He says he was held in two Nazi prisoner of war camps during the period in question after being captured while serving in the Russian Red army.

The SS card is a key piece of prosecution evidence. Altmann was one of six prosecution experts who testified it was genuine. The defense says it is a forgery.

The document, known as the Trawniki card, was supplied to Israel by the Soviet Union last year.

School district's levy is up for another vote

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls School District patrons vote Nov. 10 on whether to continue the school's $319,000 plant facilities levy for another 10 years.

Twin Falls Superintendent Carl Snow said the district has operated under plant facilities levies for the past 20 years.

"It is necessary to renew this levy," Snow said. The School Board agreed, passing the resolution unanimously.

This 200464 levy would cost the homeowners 45 cents per $1,000 of taxable assessed value. In other words, the owner of a $50,000 house with a 50 percent homeowners exemption would pay $11.35 a year.

The current plant facilities levy, which by law must be used exclusively for buildings and ground maintenance, will expire July 1.

"This plant facilities levy is an absolute necessity," Snow said. "Without it we could not operate our facilities."

This will be one of the first levy elections in the Magic Valley held under a state law passed this winter requiring registration of voters and varying percentages of voter approval to pass the levy.

In the Twin Falls School District's case, a 60 percent approval rate will pass the levy. All school districts had to win a two-thirds majority approval under prior state law.

That state law requires school districts with higher bonded debt, when compared to market valuation to get a higher voter approval rate for its levies.

Board postpones action on geothermal well

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls School District Board decided to delay action on a geothermal well agreement with the College of Southern Idaho and a dozen other litigants.

The decision to postpone action followed an executive session Monday lasting more than 45 minutes with attorney Fritz Wonderlich.

"There are certain things we cannot agree to yet," said Carl Snow, superintendent. "We want to approve it, but until those things are agreed to, we cannot."

The agreement would limit the amount of water each litigant could draw from an underground geothermal pool already considered fully allocated.

If the agreement is not signed by a deadline this Thursday, the issue will have to be settled in court on the basis of who filed first.

The district stands fifth in line for the water. If the water users ahead of the district draw all the water they filed for, the district could be high, dry and cold.

Snow said he thought earlier the district would require only a 55 percent approval, but the market valuation of the district dropped from $667 million in the 1986-1987 school year to $619 million this year.

Because the market valuation dropped, Snow said, the district's bond and interest costs were higher compared to market valuation and made it necessary to raise the voter approval rate.

In addition, state law now requires all voters to be registered. Before, patrons voting in the election only had to sign an oath certifying they were residents of the district.

Idaho Code requires voters to register at least 17 days before the election with precinct registrars or 10 days before the election with the county clerk.

The district will hold the election Nov. 10 from noon to 8 p.m. Polls will be open at Lincoln Elementary School, I.B. Perrine Elementary School, Harrison Elementary School, Sawtooth Elementary School and Morningstar Elementary School.

Fossils: Tourism benefits mused

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — How to develop the tourism potential of the Hagerman fossil beds while protecting the resource will be considered at a meeting with Sen. James McClure's staff Wednesday, says the Hagerman Valley Chamber of Commerce.

The 4 p.m. meeting at the Senior Citizen's Hall south of the park in Hagerman will include participation of Bell Rapids farmers whose farms are located above the beds.

The tourism potential of the beds has been estimated at 100,000 visitors per year, according to groups that want to develop the tourism potential. But today the beds are not well marked and difficult for visitors to find.

The beds have been damaged by irrigation runoff and canal leakage that have caused the fossils to wash away, according to a draft of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management resource management plan for the area.

There was a landslide at Bell Rapids earlier this year which also damaged them. Other activities harming the landmark include grazing, private collecting and off-terrain vehicles.

Questions to be considered at the meeting Wednesday are whether Idaho should seek national monument status for the landmark where fossils were first discovered in the 1920s.

The fossil beds are already a designated natural landmark, but damage has occurred despite the status. A national monument is intended to preserve one nationally significant resource. It is smaller than a national park.

The Hagerman group is also interested in exploring whether tourists can be directed to "safe" areas of the beds by interpretive signs and whether a building should be acquired in Hagerman to house fossils.

BL says more than $600,000 should be spent to protect the fossil

Farm Credit Services reports less severe losses

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

SPOKANE — Farm Credit Services of Spokane continued to lose millions of dollars in the spring quarter, as it struggled with troubled loan portfolios in two of its three banks.

The five-state lending system has reported losses of $27.4 million from April through June and $58 million for the first six months of the year.

But the red ink was far less than the second quarter last year, when FCS of Spokane lost $73 million providing aid to other farm credit banks along with its own problems.

FCS officials announced the lower losses represented "good progress in returning to profitability."

Chief Executive Officer Ken Krueger said, "Recent leveling in the decline of land values and improvement in several aspects of the agricultural economy have helped to improve the financial position of many of our borrowers."

Krueger also said the system, formally known as the 12th Federal Reserve Bank, has been clearing its books of non-performing assets by selling off repossessed farmland and restructuring loans.

Most of the red ink in the second quarter again streamed from the Federal Land Bank of Spokane and its local affiliate, Interstate Federal Land Bank Association. The bank, which accounts for about 81 percent of the district's total loan volume, took $21 million from non-existent earnings to log a second-quarter loss of $27.4 million.

The Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Spokane and the system's two production credit associations — Interstate and Eastern Idaho — reported a combined net loss of $1.2 million.

The system's third bank, the Spokane Bank for Cooperatives, buoyed the other two slightly with a profit of $925,000.

Total loan volume in the system slipped 1.7 percent during the quarter to $3.5 billion. The land bank's portfolio was 3.2 percent smaller, but the FICB and Bank for Cooperatives both showed gains, according to the report.

But accumulated losses have exhausted FLB surpluses. Without special accounting tricks allowed by the federal government, the FLB would have eaten $117 million into its basic capital, which is stock held by borrowers.

Krueger blamed $98.8 million worth of financial assistance to other beleaguered farm credit banks in the third quarter last year for a large part of the FLB's problems. The FCS has taken the U.S. Farm Credit Administration to court to recoup the money.

"Return of this capital would significantly improve our earnings and risk-taking ability for our borrowers," he said. "The other two banks still have surpluses remaining."

Krueger said the FCS will continue to pursue profitability by cutting costs, selling off excess properties and restructuring loans. Sales of acquired properties contributed $40.4 million to system coffers in the first half of the year.

Krueger also noted the national farm credit system's request for financial assistance from the Congress.

"It is only with a combination of streamlined operations and federal assistance that we can maintain the ability to continue to serve our borrowers," he said.

FCS in Spokane has more than 40,900 agricultural loans outstanding to farmers, ranchers and fishing interests in the Pacific Northwest and Alaska.

It's fair time in Cassia County Hee Flaw's Ida-Lee is set to appear BURLEY — The Cassia County Fair is under way with an underpinning by "De-Loe" of the television show "Hee Flaw is set to come."

According to the fair board manager, Dean Dreyer, a full week of activities is planned, including a making this one of the "most memorable fairs" ever.

"Fossil Today" — "Fossil Tomorrow" is the theme for the parade, which is scheduled for downtown Burley at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Rodeo fans will be treated to three big nights of rodeo: action, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Thursday is "Kids Nite," with kids aged 13 and under getting into the bishbers for free, Friday is "Family Nite," with grandstand and $5 bishbers. The five-state landing system has reported losses of $27.4 million from April through June and $58 million for the first six months of the year.

Jury notebook sealing won't be challenged

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Times-News will not challenge an Aug. 12 court order sealing Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter's grand jury notebook.

Times-News Managing Editor Stephen Hartgen said that 5th District Judge Daniel Meehl had sealed a working notebook, not the document he had requested, and that the paper obtained part of the document he requested from another source, Fifth District Magistrate Charles Brumback.

"We asked for a copy of the (grand jury) manual and obtained a copy of the manual," Hartgen said. "It would be a waste of taxpayers' and our money" to pursue the matter further.

Hartgen formally requested Ada County Prosecutor Greg Bower's grand jury manual from Baxter on Aug. 12. But Meehl signed a judicial order protecting Baxter's notebook less than three hours after the paper's request was made.

Hartgen said Meehl's protective order does not seem to apply to the document he requested or obtained. "I have no desire to get K. Ellen's working trial notebook," Hartgen said. "We were talking about a manual which is a public record — she is talking about her work product."

Baxter did not return phone calls from The Times-News yesterday.

Baxter argued Bower's manual was integrated into her own trial notebook and combined with research by her office. Under Idaho Rules of Criminal Procedure, documents resulting from research by prosecutors are protected from disclosure.

The manual requested by Hartgen was written by Ada County Deputy Prosecutor Monty Stiles February 1985, under the direction of Bower.

Hartgen said Brumback brought a copy of the manual to the newspaper early Friday morning, the day an article was published outlining initiation of a grand jury and the protective order. Bower also allowed a reporter to read and take notes from his copy of the manual.

Hartgen said the fight over Bower's manual was not as important as reporting on the issue of Baxter's increasing use of grand juries.

"This is a side issue to the main one: the availability of using grand juries for criminal cases and the performance of public officials," he said. "Those matters will continue

Whooping cough cases concern local officials

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Two recent cases of whooping cough in Twin Falls have Health Department officials concerned.

Health officials said two cases of whooping cough were diagnosed last week, both involving children under two years old, and more cases may result.

"We have a lot of people who have not kept up with immunizations and the children are susceptible," said Cheryl Becker, a nurse with the Health Department.

"Several kids have been exposed, but we don't know how many have been exposed in stores. And we don't know where these children got it from," she said.

Whooping cough, or pertussis, starts out as a cold with runny nose and progresses to a fever and a cough that becomes violent and can cause the child to turn blue, Becker said. The cough turns into a whoop when the child tries to take in air, she said.

Whooping cough can lead to death in young children, and the highest death rate is in children under one year old, Becker said.

To prevent a serious outbreak, 80 percent of the children need to be immunized. But in Twin Falls, the rate is about 82 percent, officials said.

So far this year, 28 cases have been reported in Idaho, and three in Twin Falls County. Last year, none were reported in Twin Falls County, Becker said.

The Health Department is giving immunizations on Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Cost is $3.

Becker said children should receive pertussis shots at the ages of two, four and six months old. The child should receive a booster shot at 18 months and when the child is ready for school.

"We're trying to remind people that they should look at the records and see if they're up-to-date," Becker said.

The document Brumback provided to The Times-News included about 18 pages of Bower's manual and about 20 pages of 1986 memoranda from Blaine County Prosecutor Keith Roark to former 5th District Judge Douglas Kramer.

Motorists check your signs

TWIN FALLS — Motorists traveling south of Twin Falls will need to watch for some new stop signs on three county roads as of today.

Twin Falls Highway District Manager Clyde Burney said stop signs on Orchard Drive have been removed and placed on the county roads 25E, 26E and 27E at their intersections with Orchard Drive.

This will make Orchard a thruway in this area," Burney said. "It (Orchard Drive) is part of the cross-county highway and we have just completed another two miles of improvement this summer.

Burney said funds permitting, the district will improve two miles per year for the next several years. He said two miles done a year ago and another two-mile project is on the agenda for next summer.

manual," the introduction to the document states. "It is hoped that in doing so, the grand jury can once again become a 'sword' and a 'shield' in the hands of prosecutors."

Bower's manual goes on to explain legal issues surrounding the format and handling of grand juries.

One of the prosecutor's responsibilities, according to the manual, is to advise the grand jury legal issues. While doing this, the prosecutor must "be scrupulously fair to all witnesses and must do nothing to influence or otherwise improperly influence the grand jury."

Although Bower recommended informing witnesses of constitutional and Miranda rights in the document, he also said federal court case decisions indicate this step is not necessary in grand jury proceedings.

"Remember — this advent of rights is not mandatory," the manual said. "It may slow down the case and create obstacles if witnesses are not potential defendants."

Witnesses can be advised that, although their attorney cannot be in the grand jury room with them, they can leave the grand jury room to consult with an attorney, the manual said.

It also notes that under most circumstances, witnesses favorable to a person's defense aren't called, but "under some circumstances, potential defense witnesses may be called to 'lock in' a story before there is a chance to fabricate a defense or to conform testimony to that of the defendant or other defense witnesses."

The manual also contains advice to prosecutors to avoid problems with grand jurors' questions. Because a grand jury is traditionally and legally an investigative body, the jurors have the right to question witnesses.

However, those questions can be irrelevant, may lead to the disclosure of confidential informant's names or may make later prosecution difficult, according to the document.

Bower recommended excusing the witness from the grand jury room, discussing questions and asking the jury to vote on a question that may cause problems.

Burglar takes off with safe

TWIN FALLS — A burglar visited Rex Restaurant at 638 E. Lakes N., during the weekend and walked away with the restaurant's safe.

Public Safety Director Tim Qualls said the break-in was reported early Sunday morning and took place sometime between 1 a.m. and 5:45 a.m.

The police report showed someone threw a rock through the glass door and then walked into the building.

The office area had been ransacked and the small safe, valued at about $100 and its contents of several hundred dollars were taken. The safe was not bolted to the floor, officers said. An employee discovered the break-in when she arrived for work and called police.

Research at the site has been concerned with fossils of animals with a backbone, such as the Hagerman horse, otter, beaver and birds. The beds hold clues to the life of mammals some 2 million years ago.

6-year-old injured in collision

KIMBERLY — A Kimberly child was injured Sunday when his bicycle and a pickup truck collided in a private driveway.

Kimberly Police Chief James Campbell said Owen Jackson, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Fisher, escaped serious injury when a pickup truck backing from a driveway in the 200 block of Center Street East struck the bicycle and child.

The boy was taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center for examination and treatment and released later Sunday. Campbell said 16 stitches were taken to close a leg wound, but there were no broken bones.

The driver of the vehicle, Jacob Benjamin Ray, 24, Hansen, told police he did not see the child on the bicycle as he backed from the driveway.

3 fires reported in county

TWIN FALLS — Three fires, two of them believed to be controlled burns, were reported in Twin Falls County Monday night.

The third fire was reported in the Balanced Rock park area near Castleford. Crews from the Castleford Mutual Fire Department were at the scene late Monday night. In addition, several Bureau of Land Management firefighters were being dispatched from guard stations in Hammett and Bruneau, dispatchers at BLM fire headquarters in Boise reported.

Controlled burns, which sheriff's officers in Twin Falls said may have gotten out of control, were reported in separate locations south and east of Hansen and the Hansen Butte.

Audiences delight in her homespun stories about life in a large show business family. Her father wrote country music's first million-dollar sale in 1924, "The Sinking of the Titanic."

Following in her father's footsteps, Romi also composes for RCA records, and she appears in several movies, including "Road to Nashville" and "Hell on Wheels," starring Marty Robbins. She starred with Burt Reynolds in "W. W. and the Dixie Dance Kings." Recently she played opposite Robert

In addition to her "Hoe Haw" work, she has appeared on numerous television specials, including the "Johnny Cash Television Special" and the "Music City News Awards," "Hollywood Palace" and "Nashville Live." LDS president urges members to honor pioneer ancestors

Tuesday, August 16, 1987 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho B-3

PRESTON, Idaho (AP) — Mormon Church President Ezra Taft Benson has urged southeastern Idaho church members to repay the debts they owe to their pioneer ancestors.

"Their teaching and examples will live with us forever," Benson said. "I stand today with bowed head and heart overflowing with gratitude."

Benson spoke Saturday at the dedication of an LDS Church park named for Sarah Dunkley Benson, mother of the church president.

She was born in Franklin in 1878; she married and moved to Whitney (where Benson was born) 20 years later. Benson, who became the LDS Church's 13th president in November 1985, was the eldest of 11 children. His mother died in 1933 at the age of 54.

"I shall never forget life in an ideal family, on a farm, in a choice little community," he said.

During his speech, Benson recalled his mother as a dedicated homemaker and a devoted church member.

The Benson family lived in a home without lights or running water. Benson recalled that the family bathed in a large tub in the kitchen, with water heated by a stove. He also recalled his mother's tears as she turned the house's faucet, as running water came out for the first time.

But however outmoded the pioneer's standards may appear today, Benson urged church members to live in accordance with the lives of their forebearers. He said he hopes future generations will continue to be reminded of "the noble virtues of their pioneer ancestors."

He said it was through "the hand of God" that pioneers were delivered to the West's valleys from persecution, and said the pioneers deserve tribute for "their faithful deeds, their noble lives and their lasting lessons."

STALK MARKET CRASHES

While the stock market on Wall Street has been hitting new highs most every week recently, the price of stalks at Swensen's has reached an astonishing new low this week. (Lowest price since the post Christmas rally of 1978). This amazing low average stalk price is not the result of a 2 for 1 stalk split -- (they're extra large complete stalks) or questionable insider trading (inside trimming has been permitted creating stocks of singular quality and crisp crunchiness feature).

Giggling girlfriends met with frowns

DEAR ABBY: Last week my closest friend and I decided to take a day off just to have fun. We are both married women in our 30s and hold responsible jobs. We are not crazy, and we're not on drugs or alcohol — we just love to laugh.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

We drove to Solvang, a small Danish community, for a day of sightseeing and relaxation. We had a rough time of the many shops, we came upon a lamp. I can't describe it, but it was the ugliest thing either of us had ever seen.

We started to giggle, then laugh, then cry at the thought of anyone spending $850 for that monstrosity! We hastily left the shop lest we offend the owner, and collapsed on a bench outside. We were both in one of those moods when everything was hilarious, and we spent the entire day in stitches.

Fansers-by made comments, indicating that they thought we were either drunk or high on drugs. A

Somehow I think you will understand, Abby. And yes, you may use my name

— CATHLEEN KALBREIER, WESTMINSTER, CALIF.
DEAR CATHLEEN: You bet I understand. A friend with whom you can enjoy a hearty laugh is a treasure. Cherish that person and unleash your laughter to the max. And if others misread your natural exhilaration, it's their problem.

DEAR ABBY: I liked your answer to "Hurting in Brooklyn," who had given her mother a jewelry box and was angry with her for giving it to one of her grandchildren.

You said, "Once a gift is given, it is the property of the recipient to do with as he/she pleases." I agree with you 100 percent.

I would like to add that once a gift is given it should never be mentioned by the giver again, as in, "How come I never see you wearing the sweater I gave you? Was it the wrong size?" The answer may be, "No. I just didn't like it, so I sold it at the flea market."

— MICHAEL TYLER SARLOW, FORT WORTH, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: I see by your columns that bowed legs can be corrected by surgery. They've certainly come a long way in modern medicine, haven't they?

I also heard that it's possible for very tall people to reduce their height by having four inches of bone surgically removed from their legs. But then their arms would hang down to their knees.

Wouldn't that look worse than being four inches too tall?

— G.B. IN L.A.
DEAR G.B.: No ethical orthopedic surgeon would undertake to surgically remove bone from the leg for cosmetic reasons only. Somebody must have been pulling yours.

Crime patterns begin at young age

The Associated Press

FOREST GROVE, Ore. — Nearly three-fourths of the juvenile delinquents released from an Oregon state institution commit an adult felony within the next five years, concludes a study conducted by Mary Kay King.

King, a recent graduate of Pacific University's Oregon Graduate School of Professional Psychology, teaches psychiatric nursing at the Oregon Health Sciences University in Portland.

Her research for her doctor of psychology degree shows that 72 percent of the 221 individuals studied had committed at least one felony within five years after they had been discharged from MacLaren School for Boys in Woodburn.

She started her research with a sample of 238 adolescents who had been committed to MacLaren over a two-year period. By the time she had finished it in early 1987, 16 had been dropped from the study, mainly because they had moved from Oregon.

She found that a major predictor for the commission of adult crimes was undersocialized aggressive conduct as juveniles. Her study included looking at a range of individual and family variables relative to each adolescent.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

Give me the luxuries of life and I will willingly do without the necessities. - Frank Lloyd Wright.

Today's dealer got his luxuries confused with his necessities. He thought it more important to establish his solid clubs than to go after the aerie hearts.

After winning his spade ace, South should lead a low heart to turn dummy's queen, and the defense is stuck.

Six banned from Pan Am for drugs

By SALLY JENKINS
The Washington Post

INDIANAPOLIS — Six athletes were disqualified from the 10th Pan American Games after testing positive for drug use, including U.S. hammer throw silver medalist Bill Green, international organizers announced Monday.

Mario Vazquez Rana, president of the Pan American Sports Organization, said the six athletes will be excluded from competition and stripped of any medals. Other sanctions may come from the international federations of their respective sports.

"It is regrettable that we have to fulfill this mission Monday, and we hope there will be no more cases throughout these Games," Vazquez Rana said.

Green tested positive for an extraordinary level (more than double the amount permitted by International Olympic Committee rules) of testosterone, a male hormone that in large amounts can produce effects similar to that of anabolic steroids. He could not be reached for comment, but a spokesman for the United States Olympic Committee said Green would challenge the finding. Steroids are commonly used by athletes to produce extra strength and weight development.

Stephen Sobel, USOC vice president and I.O.C. chief of mission, said Green has obtained counsel to fight the decision.

"The athlete has advised the USOC that he wishes to pursue further remedies to challenge the testing procedure and results," Sobel said. "Therefore, the USOC does not believe that it is appropriate to make any further comments regarding this situation."

The other athletes who tested positive were:

- Orlando Vazquez-Mendoza of Nicaragua, a triple bronze medalist in weightlifting, for hydrochlorothiazide, a diuretic. Vazquez-Mendoza used the drug to reduce his weight.

- Pedro Torres of Venezuela, for the steroid nandrolone. He did not win a medal.

- Elinea Bollings, a basketball player from the Virgin Islands, for phenylpropanolamine, a stimulant.

- Bernardo Ocampo, a pistol shooter from Venezuela, for the relaxant propranolol. Ocampo was a double medalist, winning a bronze in air pistol and a silver in the team competition. Shooters sometimes use relaxants in order to perform more consistently.
- Weightlifter Javier Jimenez of Colombia, for the steroid nandrolone. He did not win a medal.

A number of questions have been raised about drug testing procedures here in the last week. According to some athletes and officials, testing at track and field events suffered from a lack of organization on the first day of competition. Also, there are conflicting statements from officials on whether all medalists have been tested, as the Pan Am governing body requires.

Dr. Eduardo Henrique De Rose, president of the PASO medical commission, which is in charge of testing and which issued the recommendation to disqualify the athletes, said earlier Monday that not all medal winners have been tested in every sport. But Vazquez Rana has issued conflicting statements as to who has actually been tested, and under what circumstances.

Vazquez Rana denied that there was any potential for mistakes in the testing, and asserted that medalists in every sport had been tested.

"Our information is that there were some problems in organizing the tests, but not in the taking of samples themselves," Vazquez Rana said. "It is impossible for every medalist not to be tested. If it was not done, it was a mistake. I, however, was informed that every winner was tested."

Vazquez Rana said there were two or three more instances of potential positive results that were being studied by the Pan Am medical commission. He said he did not know the country or sports the cases occurred in, and would withhold any information until the results were conclusive.

Green had already departed the Games when the findings were announced. According to International Amateur Athletic Federation rules, he is subject to a lifetime ban from track and field, but can appeal after 18 months. That, however, would keep him out of the 1988 Olympics in Seoul if the finding here is not reversed.

An athlete is tested twice to ensure a correct result. However, Vazquez Rana could not explain the statements by De Rose earlier in the day that not all medalists were being tested.

Also, earlier this week De Rose said that on Aug. 9, the first day of track competition, the testing was plagued by problems ranging from lack of escorts and lack of fluids to inadequate facilities. Green was apparently tested on the second day, when testing reportedly ran smoothly.

Young ski veteran Allender sets sights on bigger things

By FLYNN McROBERTS
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Four winters ago, Adele Allender had a monkey on her back.

Thrust into women's World Cup alpine competition at the age of 18, she wiped out eight times in her first season with the U.S. Ski Team.

"The first place we took her, she fell about three times in the first week," recalls Chip Woods, the head coach of the national women's team. "That took the wind out of her sails."

"But," he adds, "she's come back."

With the comfort of later success and a recent warm Ketchum summer day to look back on that winter of discontent, Allender, now 22, says, "I'm surprised I made it through without getting injured. It took me two years to come out of it — to feel confident again. I was a wreck."

She figures it was a mistake to place her directly into World Cup competition, now most new team members start at a lower level, Europa Cup races, and then move up once they're ready, she says.

Allender didn't have that luxury, but once her confidence returned, the results weren't far behind.

In her specialty, downhill, she captured second place at the 1986 U.S. National Championships at Copper Mountain, Colo., and later that spring capped her comeback with a sixth place finish at a World Cup downhill at Vail.

Allender remembers the day well: the course was covered with slow snow early in the day until the sun came out just before U.S. team member Pam Fletcher got to the starting gate.

The sun quickened the course considerably, Fletcher wound up winning the event, and six Americans finished in the top 15, including Allender's sixth, to make the B race the team's best World Cup finish of the season.

Allender's showing moved her to B team status on the U.S. squad, meaning she was one of the top 30 women skiers in the world. Technically, she also became the nation's third best downhiller.

After the past season, however, she fell back to C team status, but not because of disappointing performances.

Explains Allender: "This last season I was skiing a lot better, but the results just weren't happening."

"There were a few bright spots. She was named to the World Championship team and took fourth in super giant slalom at the U.S. Nationals. But Allender says she "was letting everything bother me," and consequently there were no eye-grabbing World Cup finishes such as in 1986.

"This could change this coming season, as Woods says, judging from Allender's performance in June at a team training camp in Austria. "We're very pleased with what she's done in changing some technical aspects of her skiing," he says.

Allender recently returned from a dry-land camp in San Francisco, and she left Saturday for another camp in Las Lenas, Argentina, the U.S. team's late-summer haven.

Soon after the Argentina workout, attention turns to qualifying for the Olympic team, a fairly rapid process that for Allender probably will include a total of about eight World Cup downhill and super giant slalom races in Europe in December and January.

Referring to the 1988 Winter Olympics in Calgary, Alberta, Allender says, "That's a very real goal, but we don't know until the week before...Mentally and physically I'm just going to have to be on top."

One are the days when Allender second-guessed herself, a result of her series of first-season wipeouts. Now she says, "I'm feeling pretty good about myself...I'm in the best shape I've been in — both mentally and physically."

Though she has dropped from B to C team designation for the coming season, such positioning doesn't bother Allender, who says, "I don't care where I'm ranked on the team — as long as I'm skiing the best I can."

That sort of attitude has im-

Cuba knocks out America's Pan Am boxing hope

By TIM DAHLBERG
The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Cuba's Angel Espinosa knocked out champion Dede Allen cold with a devastating right hand midway through the first round Monday to finish off a three-round Cuban sweep of the previously unbeaten U.S. team in Pan American Games boxing. The United States' sudden win at 165 pounds came after two of his teammates had won decisions over American fighters and left the powerful Cuban team in a dominant position midway through the boxing competition.

The drug scandal took the spotlight on the lightest day of action in the games. Cuba won the only gold medal awarded Monday, in men's team sabre fencing. The United States won the silver and Canada took the bronze.

The Americans had won a Pan Am record 326 medals — 150 gold, 105 silver and 71 bronze — including Cuba and Canada were waging a close battle for second place. Cuba led Canada by one medal, 147-146, but the Cubans had 60 golds and Canada had 26.

U.S. teams did well, with the women's softball and men's volleyball squads winning. U.S. welterweight Kenneth Gould was the only American fighter to win during the evening session, taking a decision win over Panama's "Cacha" Cacha. That left U.S. fighters a 3-3 overall record while Cuba's three wins gave their team a 12-1 mark.

"It's two down and two to go," said Gould, who moved into the semifinals. "That's what I'm out for the gold."

Allen, who was stopped by Espinosa, the reigning world champion at 156 pounds, in a match last December, didn't fare any better this time around. Espinosa followed left with a devastating right hook that put Allen flat on his back on the canvas at 1:35 of the first round.

The referee didn't even bother to count out Allen, who was on his back more than a minute while ring doctors worked on him. Cuban fighters watching the bout from seats in the stands loudly counted Allen out themselves, in English.

Also losing were U.S. fighters Arthur Johnson, who dropped a disputed decision to Adalberto Roldo at 112 pounds, and Patrick Byrd, who was outclassed by Julio Gonzalez in a 5-0 decision.

The losses knocked the three U.S. fighters out of the competition and gave Cuba a 3-1 record in head-to-head matches with the American squad.

"We don't want to kill the American fighters, we just want to win," said Regalado.

Johnson's loss came on a 3-2 margin after an action-filled three rounds that was one of the best in the five days of boxing competition at the Convention Center. All three judges that favored Regalado gave him the fight by only a one-point margin.

"A true champion can accept a loss," said Johnson, a Minneapolis college student. "As tough as that one was, I can accept it."

Johnson won the first round on all five scorecards, but lost the second when Regalado used superior hand speed and movement to land an array of punches to the body and head. He stunned the Cuban late in the third round, but could not capture the decision, which was roundly booed by the partisan crowd.

"I knew I hurt him a lot in the first fight," said Johnson. "The guy's tough, he could take a good shot. But I think I won the fight."

Regalado, not surprisingly, disagreed.

"I felt from the beginning of the fight that I won," he said. "There's no question in my mind I won the fight. I was better in the third round."

Johnson said the loss may have ended his career as a fighter. A broadcasting major at the University of Minnesota, he said he is contemplating retirement.

"Years from now I'll look back and say I've had some very high accomplishments," he said. "I've been blessed — but right now — I feel as though I'm going to give it up."

While Johnson lost on a close decision, Byrd never had a chance in his fight against Gonzalez, who dominated the fight en route to an easy 5-0 decision.

Byrd, an 18-year-old 132 pounder from Flint, Mich., had never fought a fight against an international opponent and was in over his head against the Cuban, a member of the world's top-ranked amateur boxing team.

"He threw more punches than me, he beat me," said Byrd. "I'm proud of myself, though. That was my first international fight and I fought it against a Cuban."

Byrd said he too may quit amateur boxing, but for a different reason than Johnson. Byrd said he will probably turn pro before the 1988 Olympics.

Gonzalez, 21, said the win was especially sweet because it came against an American.

T.F. ballclub wins state 'B' softball title

LEWISTON — Rolling through undefeated in six games, Snake River Pool & Spa of Twin Falls grabbed the state men's B softball championship here last weekend.

Snake River took the title of the 29-team event by smothering Coeur d'Alene 17-2 in the championship contest.

Snake River and the tournament's other top four finishers qualified for the regional tournament this weekend in Tacoma, Wash.

In Sunday's title game, the stage was set for Snake River's victory in the first inning when Coeur's pitcher loaded the bases as he intentionally walked the Twin Falls team's big hitter, Gary Huff.

Both Regalado, Gonzalez and Espinosa moved into the semifinals of their weight classes with the wins.

Molitor extends hit streak to 32 games

CLEVELAND (AP) — The difference between a 31-game hitting streak and a 32-game hitting streak doesn't seem significant to Paul Molitor right now, although he admits he might change his mind in a few years.

Molitor got a third-inning bunt single in three official at-bats Monday night to set up a run in the Milwaukee Brewers' 5-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Molitor extended his streak to 32 games, breaking a tie with Ken Landreaux for the longest streak of the 1980s. Landreaux hit safely in 31 consecutive games for Minnesota in 1980.

"People have mentioned that Landreaux's streak was the longest of the '80s," Molitor said. "Maybe when I look back on my career, if this holds up another three years, it'll be that much more important to me."

Molitor, whose streak is the longest in the majors since Cincinnati's Pete Rose hit in 44 straight games in 1978, dropped a perfect bunt toward third base and easily batted "richer Scott" Bailes' throw to first for his only hit in the game. It was his first bunt hit during the streak.

"This is a good field to bunt on," Molitor said. "I just noticed that if I deaden the ball down the line, I would have a chance for a hit and a chance to move the runner over."

Cleveland Manager Doc Edwards could find no fault with Molitor for bunting with a runner at first and none out in the third inning.

"I think he was going for the single (rather than a sacrifice)," Edwards said. "I don't blame him. It was clean. 'I don't care if it was a bunt.'"

Molitor's streak has been entirely as a designated hitter and it's the longest hitting streak in the American League since Dom DiMaggio hit in 34 straight games in 1949 for the Boston Red Sox.

Molitor also walked and scored a run in the first inning.

In addition to the walk and the bunt, Molitor struck out, was hit on the left arm by a Don Gordon pitch and grounded out to third.

Over the streak, Molitor is 54-for-132 (.409) and he's batting .362 for the season.

Milwaukee's Mark Knudson, 33, allowed nine hits en route to his first career complete game. The 26-year-old right-hander struck out two and walked none.

Allender

...describes her as "a very quiet, humble person."

"She's very dedicated. She works very hard," he adds. "I can't say enough good things about her. She's never let skating and being in the limelight change her personality."

Wood River Valley ski fans got their first glimpse at that personality when Allender came to Ketchum from her hometown of Fresno, Calif., at the age of 16.

"When I was 13, I was (already) missing a lot of school," she recalls. "It's just part of the game."

Nonetheless, she still was able to fit in extracurricular activities, including her other favorite sport, tennis.

In fact, she and her partner won doubles at the state tennis tournament her junior year.

On the slopes, she caught the eye of U.S. Ski Team coaches by finishing 13th in downhill at the 1983 U.S. Nationals, during the spring of her senior year.

Once at Bald Mountain with the Sun Valley Ski Team, "My technique improved tremendously," she says. "I think it was the best move I ever made."

The improved environment was a combination of a strong coaching staff that "really worked with us individually," she explains, and a community that provided generous support.

With that she was invited to a walk-on camp in Bend, Ore., and coaches were impressed enough with her performance there that they named her to the National Training Group and brought her to another training camp in New Zealand that fall.

Following the New Zealand trip, Allender was thrown into the World Cup racing. "For my first year on the ski team, that was a mistake," she says, with her series of crashes as testimony.

Those memories are fading, though. This past season, despite the lack of headline-grabbing finishes, Allender says, "I felt my slalom and GS improved a lot too," a step toward becoming a more all-around skier.

"So," she adds with a nod of confidence, "this year is going to be a good one. This year is going to be done on the road."

Those memories are fading, though. This past season, despite the lack of headline-grabbing finishes, Allender says, "I felt my slalom and GS improved a lot too," a step toward becoming a more all-around skier.

Dolphins start shopping around for QBs

By The Associated Press

Pro football

Faced with the loss of quarterback Dan Marino for the rest of the preseason, Miami Dolphins Coach Don Shula reacted by the only way he knows how Monday by beginning to search for another quarterback to help fill the void.

"I did all the feeling sorry for myself that I'm going to do last night," Shula said. "Today, it's upbeat." Marino dislocated the ring finger on his right hand Sunday night in a 10-3 preseason loss to the Chicago Bears. He is expected to miss the rest of the exhibition season, but he vowed to return for the regular-season opener Sept. 13 at New England.

Shula had no updates on Marino's injury Monday, saying the severity of the dislocation will be hard to judge until the swelling goes down.

"A lot of it depends on the amount of swelling and how soon he is able to have some movement in it," Shula said. "As far as throwing the football, you can probably tape that finger, but the swelling will have to go down before you can do anything."

Shula said he had Charley Winner, the Dolphins' director of pro scouting, draw up a list of available quarterbacks and quarterbacks other teams might be willing to trade. He's also looking for a replacement for Marino as much as an insurance policy should backup Don Strock suffer an injury.

"There's nothing saying that now all of a sudden we have no injuries," Shula said.

Making matters worse, rookie quarterback Jim Karsatos suffered a knee injury in the loss to the Bears and won't be able to practice for several weeks. The only other quarterback working out in practice is veteran third-stringer Jim Jensen.

The most likely candidate for the Dolphins is former Philadelphia Eagles quarterback Rom Jaworski, a free agent who worked out for the Dolphins' coaches earlier this year. Shula said the Dolphins have contacted Jaworski to discuss the possibility.

"Bringing in an inexperienced quarterback just to have another arm in camp doesn't make sense," he said.

For Marino, the injury brings an abrupt end to what he had planned to be an ordinary training camp. But he has experience at playing without much preseason practice.

Three years ago, he missed three preseason games after breaking the index finger on his passing hand. Two years ago, he missed 37 days in a contract holdout. He passed for an NFL record 48 touchdowns and 6,084 yards after the finger injury and came back to throw for 4,137 yards and 36 touchdowns after his holdout.

"I'd rather have the work and get a chance to get in the game situations and get ready for the regular season," Marino said. "Now I'm just going to have to wait until the season starts."

Strock, a 14-year veteran who signed a new contract Thursday, said he looks forward to the extra work after playing very little behind Marino in the past four seasons.

"I hate to see anything happen to Dan," Strock said, "but more playing time won't hurt me."

Shula was more concerned about the injury suffered by second-year linebacker John Offerdahl, who will miss at least 10 weeks because of a torn bicep. Offerdahl was the team's leading tackler last year while earning a Pro Bowl spot in his rookie season.

"This puts us in the situation where we have to try to get the job done with the people we have here now or else look for a guy that might be available now," Shula said. "I've already had a couple of calls from teams offering guys that might be available."

Second-year linebacker Andy Hendel is slated to fill Offerdahl's spot. Shula said Hendel has played very well in training camp and did a good job when spelling Offerdahl last year.

Shula also announced that outside linebacker Robin Sendlein will miss the entire season because of a injured nerve in his eye. Sendlein didn't play last year because of a knee injury.

Starters Bruce Collie looks like he's won the starting left guard start for the San Francisco 49ers because rookie Jeff Bregel is in the hospital with an infection developed after arthroscopic surgery. Bregel has practiced only once in two weeks and Coach Bill Walsh said, "We thought Jeff Bregel could conceivably win the job, but and it's possible he could wind up on injured reserve."

Retirement Veteran fullback Hokie Gajan of the New Orleans Saints announced his retirement rather than risk permanent injury by continuing to try for a comeback with the New Orleans Saints.

leans Saints-Gajan, who will train to become a scout for the team, missed the last half of the 1986 season and all of last year with an injury to his right knee, then injured his left knee in non-contact drills two weeks ago.

Moves The Saints traded linebacker

Jack Del Rio to Kansas City for an undrafted draft choice and cut six free agents: tight end Darren Gottschalk, defensive back Preston Davis, center Phillip James, linebackers Merlon Jones and Mark Russell, and defensive end Ted Elliott.

Cuba complains about harassment at Pan Am Games

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Cuban officials asked Monday for stricter security measures to halt what they called "harassment, insults and attacks" on their athletes by anti-Castro Cuban exiles at the Pan American Games.

Conrado Martinez Corona, president of the Cuban National Institute of Sports, requested a Tuesday meeting with organizers of the Games in which he will also ask that the Miami Sound Machine be excluded from performing at Sunday's closing ceremonies.

Mark Miles, head of the PAX-1 organizing committee, said he will meet with the Cubans but indicated their demands could clash with the constitutional right to free speech in the United States.

"I am not aware of what the Cuban officials will discuss with us tomorrow, and we will listen carefully to what they have to say," said

Pan Am Games

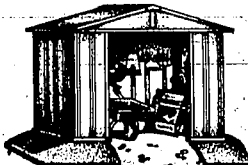

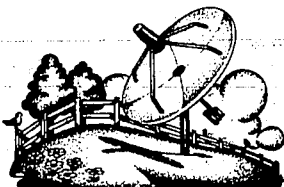

Miles. "But there is a matter of the right to free expression in the United States."

Manuel Guerra, president of the Cuban Olympic Committee, told the Associated Press that any harassment of Cuban athletes will not be tolerated.

"We simply wish that our athletes be treated as the athletes of other countries are treated, that they do not be exposed to insults, attacks and harassment," he said.

A note written to Miles by Martinez Corona specifically cited concerns about security at an expected United States-Cuba baseball game for the Pan Am gold medal on Saturday.

Donations to aid 1990 celebration

BOISE, IDAHO—Idaho's 1990 centennial celebration received a big financial boost Monday with the introduction of a unique commemorative VISA card from First Security Bank of Idaho.

The Idaho Centennial VISA Card was introduced at a news conference Monday when First Security Bank President L. Scott Nelson presented a huge replica of the card to Idaho Centennial Commission Chairman Harry Magnuson.

The new VISA Centennial card—which can be either a credit card or a debit card depending on the customer's preference—will aid the 1990 centennial celebration in that for each card issued, First Security Bank will donate the first year's annual fee to the Idaho Centennial Foundation. For each credit card issued, the bank will donate $20, and for each debit card, the donation will be $6.

In addition, according to bank officials, First Security Bank will donate 10 cents for each retail transaction made with Centennial credit cards through the year 1990.

Commenting on the Centennial card, Centennial Commission Chairman Magnuson said, "We applaud the initiative of First Security Bank which is one of the first corporate citizens to come forward with a program to help fund the state's centennial. The bank's innovative idea represents a prime example of successful public-private sector cooperation."

"The beauty of the Centennial VISA is that people can contribute to the centennial simply by applying for and using either their credit or debit card," noted Magnuson, adding that "I look forward to other Idaho businesses finding creative ways to promote the centennial."

Nelson said, "First Security recognizes the value that the centennial will add to the economy of Idaho. We have a major stake in the economic vitality of the state, and helping to promote the centennial is consistent with our philosophy of being a good corporate citizen."

Some pertinent questions about the program were answered in a fact sheet distributed to media and others attending the news conference. They included:

—Who is eligible for the Idaho Centennial VISA Card? Anyone who normally would be eligible for either a VISA credit or debit card.

—What is the difference between a VISA credit card and a VISA debit card? With a credit card, the customer has a pre-established line of credit which is used for transactions. With a debit card, the customer does not have a credit line, but uses the card to access a First Security checking account. You might say the debit card serves as a "plastic check." First Security recognizes that there are many people who choose not to use a credit card. For these people, the debit card meets their needs by providing essentially the same convenience as the credit card.

—What are the annual fees for the two cards? The annual fee for the credit card is $20, and the fee for the debit card is $6. Both of these fees for the first year on Centennial cards will be donated to the Idaho Centennial Commission.

—Where can the cards be used? Everywhere VISA cards are accepted. Since more than three million businesses accept VISA, the Centennial cards can be used virtually anywhere in the world.

—How long will the Centennial VISA Card be available? The new cards will be available until the end of 1990, but the sooner people apply, the more they'll be helping the state celebrate its centennial.

—How many Centennial VISA cards does First Security expect to issue? This is very difficult to estimate. We hope as many as possible because the more we issue, and the more those cards are used, the more the centennial benefits.

—How much money does First Security expect to donate to the Centennial Commission from this program? This will depend entirely on the number of people who apply for and use the card. If only 10,000 Idaho Centennial cards are issued, the state will receive over $200,000 from First Security.

—What is First Security's interest in the Idaho Centennial? First Security has historically been a leader in the economic and cultural development of our state. We have enjoyed serving the people and businesses of Idaho, and we want to participate in observing this special occasion. From a pure business point of view, we also want to increase our bankcard business. We think the Idaho Centennial Card will give us that opportunity, while at the same time providing important support to the celebration.

First Security Bank pioneered the bank credit card business in the Intermountain region in 1967 when it became one of the first banks in the nation licensed to issue BankAmericard, the forerunner of VISA. Today, First Security Bank of Idaho has more than 65,000 active VISA cardholders.

The bank credit card offers a customer a unique form of credit as interest is only charged on the unpaid balance. In other words, if a cardholder pays off his balance on time each month, there are absolutely no interest charges. Of course interest is never charged for use of a debit card. VISA credit cards may also be used for cash advances and as access cards for automated teller machines.

First Security is a member of the PLUS System network of automated teller machines (ATMs). This Denver-based network provides First Security VISA cardholders access to cash from more than 10,000 automated teller machines worldwide.

The Idaho Centennial VISA Card will be available in early October. In the meantime, applications will be sent to everyone interested in obtaining either the credit or debit card. Interested people should telephone, toll free, 1-800-445-2080 for an application.
