B.Y. Ellsworth, right, thought he had seen the license plate number on Thelma Lee's Nissan pick-up before. And indeed he had, on his own Buick LeSabre. The two Twin Falls residents shared some laughs recently after Ellsworth made his observation and pointed it out to Lee who visits relatives in Ellsworth's neighborhood. An official of the Twin Falls County Assessor's Office said identical numbers may find their way on two vehicles for a short time as the new license plate program continues.

Wind shifts struck airport before crash

The Associated Press

ROMULUS, Mich. — Potentially dangerous wind shifts were recorded at Detroit Metropolitan Airport just 30 minutes before the fiery crash — of Northwest — Flight 255, which killed as many as 168 people, federal investigators said Tuesday. John Lauber of the National Transportation Safety Board said the condition, known as wind shear, was recorded by the airport's computer-controlled detection system a number of times on one runway, prompting air traffic controllers to move all traffic to another runway. Such a sudden shift in wind can cause an airplane to suddenly lose speed and has been listed as a factor in several air crashes.

However, Lauber said at a news briefing that the preliminary reports were not complete enough for investigators to draw a conclusion about what caused the crash. Lauber also said the cockpit recorder chronicled the computer-generated voice of a warning system chanting "final stall" only seconds after the MD-80 took off Sunday night.

"That system was activated and continued to (sound) for some period of time, measured in seconds. And then the sounds of impact and the aircraft breaking up," Lauber said.

The recorder also caught the flight crew talking about a thunderstorm moving in from 18 to 20 miles away, with one member joking that the plane wouldn't be turning toward the storm.

A transcript of the pilot's conversation with the airport tower showed that the last exchange came when the flight was cleared for takeoff, he said.

Engine trouble — A3

In Washington, investigators said they have the problems with the readout on one of the critical "black box" recorders taken from the jet. But a spokeswoman for the NTSB said the problem is believed to be in the decoding machine and not the flight recorder tape.

Investigators have determined the plane reached an altitude of 100 feet to 150 feet before it began its final plunge, he said. As teams of investigators crossed the scorched crash site, grieving families waited for doctors and technicians to identify the bodies of the victims.

One man marveled that his 4-year-old granddaughter was the lone passenger to survive Sunday's tragedy, while relatives of other passengers were warned that some of the mutilated bodies might never be identified.

"If you have a mass of body parts and none of them have an identifiable item on them it's going to be impossible to identify," said inspector Richard Stover of the Wayne County Sheriff's Department's emergency management division. Officials disagreed about the number of fatalities.

Glass locked up guards, then fled

The Associated Press

DAMASCUS, Syria — American journalist Charles Glass said he was freed from a Beirut apartment before dawn on Tuesday and escaped to freedom after two months' captivity.

Syrian troops, whose government claimed to hand Glass freedom, whisked him from Beirut to Damascus, the Syrian capital, where he was handed over to U.S. Charge d'Affaires David Brennan.

Glass said he had no doubt he escaped on his own and that his captors did not allow him to flee. A Reagan administration official in Washington who spoke on condition of anonymity said U.S. intelligence has concluded that "Iran ordered his kidnapping so it is safe to assume Iran was responsible for his release."

That official and a Syrian source suggested that Iran, under Syrian pressure to release Glass, had arranged the escape so the journalist's captors would be able to plausibly deny they had freed him if questioned by rivals.

Glass, 38, left Damascus in a chartered jet for London at 8:48 p.m. to be reunited with his wife, Fiona, and five children, official sources at Damascus airport reported. Reporters were barred from the airport when the plane, provided by the A.C. Vertovsk, took off.

"I feel good," a beaming Glass said when he was turned over to Ransom by Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharrah. "The people who really suffered were my wife and children. All I want to do now is get home, see my wife and children."

The tall, dark-haired reporter, originally from Los Angeles, looked tired but in good shape after his 62-day ordeal. In an interview from Damascus, Glass told ABC news that he was convinced his captors did not permit him to escape because they had recently become more severe with him, shortening his chain so he couldn't get near the window shutters.

"As far as they knew, the chains were tight and it was impossible for me even to move," he said.

Glass said he secretly was able to stretch his wrist and ankle chains and slip them on and off. When he ordered, there were two guards and Glass sneaked through the shutters to a balcony said he hoped that he could jump to another balcony or apartment, he said. That wasn't possible, however.

"I would have had to jump about See GLASS on Page A2

Voters may have to provide $555,000

County to pay Gooding hospital debt

By JANE BUCKWAY Times-News correspondent

GOODING Hospital and county officials are looking to voters in Gooding County to come up with as much as $555,000 to pay off debts and keep the Gooding County Memorial Hospital operating next year. Gooding County is proposing to levy as much as $366,000 in supplemental taxes next year to pay outstanding debts at the Gooding County Memorial Hospital.

As a result of the negotiations over transferring hospital operations to the taxing district approved by voters, the county has agreed to pay the accumulated debt of the hospital.

The Gooding County Hospital District, which follows county boundaries, will then be allowed to levy its own money — up to $200,000 in the coming tax year — to run the hospital.

The hospital district was formed by special election in May 1986 and has the ability to levy $160,000 in property taxes for hospital operations. The district can also levy an additional $50,000 for a capital improvement reserve fund.

A hearing on the proposed hospital budget will be held at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 25 in the hospital conference room. The proposed 1987-88 county budget, which includes the additional $355,000 levy, will be discussed at a public hearing at 10 a.m. Sept. 8 at the courthouse.

In 6th District Court Tuesday, the county obtained a court order allowing it to issue registered bank warrants to pay the hospital's creditors and then assess a special property tax to repay the notes totaling $365,000.

"These accounts payable are the legal responsibility of the county," County Clerk John Myers said Tuesday.

County officials are hoping the county levy for the debt payment will be smaller than $365,000, he said. The county is trying to negotiate lower settlements with some creditors and is hoping the largest single creditor, First Security Bank, will carry its $160,000 note for another year.

Americans attempting to modify peace pact

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — American envoys returned to their posts in four Central American countries Tuesday to suggest ways to make a regional peace plan more palatable to the United States.

The U.S. diplomat, assigned to Guatemala, Costa Rica, El Salvador and Honduras, held a long strategy session at the State Department on Monday, then returned to their capitals for talks with the foreign ministers of each country. The U.S. charge d'affaires in Managua, John Moderno, also attended the meeting.

"The envoys were told that U.S. policy is to try to make the agreement to put the change in effect. The letter from Jones to Tax Commissioner Larry Looney also officially dropped an alternative plan to keep the tax in place, despite federal orders to quit taxing food stamps. The state planned a voucher system, reimbursing all food stamp recipients for the sales tax they paid on the stamps.

But J. Tim Brennan, executive director of the Idaho Retailers Association, sponsor of the plan, decided it would be "impractical and cumbersome" and it was scrapped. Instead, starting Oct. 1, Idaho grocery stores will have to separate items purchased with food stamps from non-food stamp items. The 5 percent sales tax will be collected only on purchases not qualifying for food stamps.

Brennan said that will result in some expense for retailers, who will have to reprogram cash registers, and inevitable delay at the checkout stand.

He said on a recent trip to Utah, which exempted food stamps from sales tax one year ago, he visited several retail establishments.

Gene engineering safe, scientists say

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Modern techniques of genetic engineering are "powerful and safe" and no more dangerous than selective breeding techniques used for thousands of years, the National Academy of Sciences said Tuesday.

In particular, the products of recombinant DNA techniques should be judged by how dangerous they are, not how they are produced, said a report from the academy council.

"There is no evidence that a gene will convert a benign organism to a hazardous one simply because the gene came from an unrelated species... a recombinant DNA modified organism is not a novel organism rather it is like a broader, new variety of flower," said the report by a committee of five experts.

A gene is a small section of genetic material in cells whose arrangement, when active, directs the cell to assemble a particular protein. Groups of genes and associated control sections of the cell's chromosomes, made of DNA, control all heredity — for example, whether human eyes will be blue or brown, or whether a bacterium will resist an antibiotic.

Recombinant DNA techniques developed in the last 15 years use special enzymes to snip out genes from one DNA molecule, and splice them into another of a different species.

State will drop sales tax on food stamp purchases Oct. 1

The Associated Press

BOISE — Starting Oct. 1 Idaho will stop collecting the 5 percent state sales tax on food stamp purchases.

That was decided Tuesday, when Attorney General Jim Jones notified state tax officials to put the change in effect.

The letter from Jones to Tax Commissioner Larry Looney also officially dropped an alternative plan to keep the tax in place, despite federal orders to quit taxing food stamps. The state planned a voucher system, reimbursing all food stamp recipients for the sales tax they paid on the stamps.

But J. Tim Brennan, executive director of

"They said they were living with it," he said.

The action will cost Idaho $1.7 million per year in lost revenue.

Idaho was notified by the federal government that if it didn't quit collecting sales tax on food stamps, it could lose the entire $40 million program. The deadline for compliance was set at Oct. 1.

Federal officials said they didn't want benefits to recipients to be used even in part to pay state taxes. Also involved are the benefits paid to recipients of the Women, Infants and Children (WIC) program, officials said.

Because the change doesn't go into effect until Oct. 1, the impact on state tax collections in the current tax year will be $1.4 million. Next year, when food stamps are exempt from sales tax for the entire year, the impact will be $1.7 million.

House Bill 342, approved by the 1987 Legislature, provided a two-prong approach. If the federal government approved, Idaho planned to keep taxing food stamp purchases, but refund the money to food stamp recipients.

Brennan said the U.S. Department of Agriculture approved that approach. But after he worked with state Department of Health and Welfare officials to set up the program, he realized it would not work.

Brennan said the voucher refund system would have required Health and Welfare to issue another 17,000 checks each month for as little as $3 to make the refunds.

"It would have created so many problems for Health and Welfare, administrative costs, we're just going to comply," Brennan said, speaking for the retailers.

Jones said he was certifying the new procedure now, so changes can be made by the Oct. 1 implementation date.

But at the end of the letter to Looney, he served notice that he still does not accept federal government authority to force policy decisions on states.

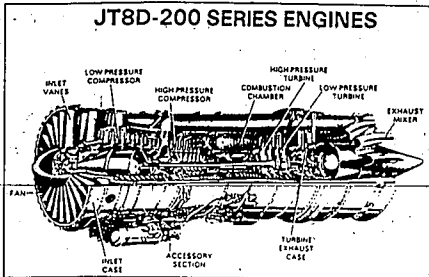

"This office... does not concede that the enforcement mechanism employed by Congress (threatened loss of the stamp program) is appropriate," Jones said.

Jet was hampered by engine trouble

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ill-fated Northwest Airlines jet that crashed near Detroit was plagued with engine problems on at least three previous flights forcing pilots to turn back each time, according to Federal Aviation Administration records.

But in two of the incidents, involving turbine blade failures, the troubled engines were replaced for repair and likely were not involved in Sunday's crash that killed at least 154 people, the records indicate.

Northwest Airlines issued a statement Tuesday night saying the engines that were on the plane when it crashed were not the same engines that were involved in the previous engine failures in 1985 and 1986. The airline said it had no record of a third incident that FAA records show occurred in January 1987.

Investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board, meanwhile, began backing away from the possibility that a catastrophic engine failure caused the crash.

NTSB board member John Lauber said there is no physical evidence of an uncontained engine failure, less severe engine problems has not been ruled out. An uncontained failure means engine parts break free of the engine's outer skin and could damage critical parts of the plane such as the control system.

In each of the three previous incidents, which occurred between November, 1985 and last January, the troubled engines were shut down and the planes landed safely on the remaining engine.

The McDonnell Douglas MD-80 is designed to fly on one engine. The MD-80 that crashed seconds after taking off from the Detroit airport was purchased in 1982 by Republic Airlines, which merged with Northwest Airlines last year.

Records at the FAA's Aeronautical Center in Oklahoma City show a total of eight in-flight incidents involving the plane since 1984 including two engine turbine blade failures in the Pratt & Whitney JT8D 200 series engines and one incident involving low engine oil pressure.

The other incidents reported to the FAA involved a blown tire, a malfunctioning sensor on the main landing gear, defective warning lights or switches on the cockpit control panel, and problems with the cabin oxygen mask system.

Letter by James found

WASHINGTON (AP) — A manuscript librarian also said Mount had borrowed the handwritten letter, which is worth more than $5,000, the FBI said.

James, who died in 1916, is regarded as one of the most influential figures in American literature for his novels, short stories and criticism.

He was ordered held in lieu of $25,000 bail on the new charge.

Single survivor, age 4, shows improvement

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The 4-year-old lone survivor of a jetliner crash showed improvement Tuesday, and relatives marveled at her good fortune at the same time they despaired at the loss of her parents and 6-year-old brother.

Her grandfather said he had set aside his grief over the deaths of his son, daughter-in-law and grandson long enough to come from Pennsylvania to identify her.

Cecilia Cichan, of Tempe, Ariz., was upgraded from critical to serious condition Tuesday afternoon at St. Motz Children's Hospital, spokeswoman Catherine Curton said. The girl's breathing was being assisted by a respirator, which may be disconnected Wednesday, Curton said.

Cecilia was the only person aboard Northwest Airlines Flight 255 to survive the crash that killed 154 people on board the plane and at least three people on the ground

Sunday just outside Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

Curton said doctors expected Cecilia to live. She was responding to stimuli Tuesday and was unconscious, but not comatose, they said.

Cecilia suffered a broken leg, broken collarbone, concussion and burns over 30 percent of her body. She underwent surgery for the broken bones.

Curton said no additional surgery was planned except for possible skin grafts on her burned arms and hands. The girl's identity had remained a mystery until 24 hours after the crash, when her grandfather, Anthony Cichan, 59, of the Philadelphia suburb of Maple Glen, Pa., arrived at the hospital with a son and another relative and went to her bedside.

Cichan said he was able to identify Cecilia by her chipped tooth.

Famous cat to make bid in 1988 race

WASHINGTON (AP) — You know it's the slow season in Washington and people have nothing better to do when a major petfood maker calls a news conference to announce that Morris the Cat is running for president — and more than two dozen reporters show up.

Not to mention the 10 television cameras.

Not to mention the introduction by Eleanor Mondale, whose father once sought the presidency, seriously.

"May I introduce a candidate with the quiet demeanor of a Coolidge, the animal magnetism of a Kennedy, and with the honesty of a Lincoln," a candidate who may be edged but will never shred, a candidate who stands foursquare behind the values of life, liberty and the pursuit of din-din," Ms. Mondale, an aspiring actress, rock'n'roll television show hostess and spokeswoman for "Morris for President," told a crowded room Tuesday at the National Press Club.

The "campaign" is just that — a national ad campaign put together by the New York advertising agency Leo Burnett U.S.A. for 9-Lives, maker of the catfood that bears the candidate's name.

Conservatives launch campaign to gain aid for Contras

REP. JACK KEMP
Peace bid won't work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservative leaders launched a campaign Tuesday to pressure Congress to approve $310 million in military aid for the Contras in Nicaragua and said President Reagan's peace initiative is doomed.

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., speaking for the group, said at a news conference that the diplomatic peace initiative being pursued by the administration is unworkable.

Kemp said conservatives have warned that any plan that halts aid to the freedom fighters before the Soviet colonial presence is out of Nicaragua, before democracy comes to Nicaragua, is a plan that is flawed at its core and that is doomed to fail."

Kemp, who is seeking the GOP presidential nomination, said that when Congress returns next month he and Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., will seek approval of $310 million in military aid for the Contras to pay for their efforts over the next 18 months.

He said they will also ask that any peace arrangement not require cutting off assistance to the Contras unless all Soviet-bloc troops and military equipment are removed from Nicaragua and a firm agreement is reached for free elections to be supervised by the Organization of American States.

Kemp said he believes that without the military aid for the Contras, Nicaragua will never be freed from communist rule and the Monroe Doctrine, barring foreign intervention in the Western Hemisphere, will be destroyed.

He also said: "Destiny is not a fate to which we must blindly surrender. Destiny is a choice we can make and work and create together."

At the news conference, 28 leaders and members of conservative groups made public a letter to the president insisting there be no interruption in military aid to the Contras.

"Without the pressure from the democratic resistance (the Contras) the communists who rule Nicaragua will use this time simply to strengthen their control over the Nicaraguan people," the letter said.

Open field in politics for unions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unable to unite behind a candidate, the AFL-CIO on Tuesday abandoned hopes of making an early presidential endorsement and freed individual unions and political activists within its ranks to work on behalf of various candidates.

Our rules say we have to have a two-thirds majority to endorse. We don't have it," said AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland. "The field is wide open and support is scattered. Accordingly, I don't expect a convention endorsement in October."

Since last February, Kirkland had kept the presidents of the 89 unions and most labor activists in the federation from endorsing or working on behalf of any candidate until the AFL-CIO's biennial convention in October in Miami.

With polls showing rank-and-file union members overwhelmingly prefer "none of the above," the AFL-CIO's 35-member executive council concluded that finding a consensus candidate early, as labor did with Democrat Walter Mondale in 1984, is all but impossible.

The executive council adopted "voluntary" guidelines Tuesday urging officers and other top national officials of its member unions to continue refraining from working on behalf of individual candidates.

But for the first time this year, the guidelines permit individual unions and officials to begin working with candidates in slating labor delegates for the Democratic and Republican conventions next summer.

Five of the largest AFL-CIO unions immediately began completing plans for an alternative "multi-candidate strategy" aimed at packing the Democratic National Convention with as many activist labor delegates as possible.

"We're looking for delegates and a foot in the door with all of the major candidates," said Philip Sparks, a spokesman for the 1.2 million-member American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

Other unions already in what Sparks described as a group reminiscent of the 1976 Labor Coalition, when the AFL-CIO also could not agree on a single candidate, are the United Food and Commercial Workers Union with 1.3 million members and the United Auto Workers Union with 1.1 million members.

Ex-Time editor may turn envoy

NEW YORK (AP) — Henry Grunwald, who has resigned as editor-in-chief of Time Inc., may replace Ronald S. Lauder as ambassador to Austria, it was reported Tuesday.

The Washington Post and the New York Times said Grunwald has been chosen for the post in Austria, which he fled 47 years ago to escape the Nazi persecution of Jews.

Contacted in Santa Barbara, Calif., White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Grunwald "is undergoing clearance for a high government position, but we don't have anything to announce at this point."

Officials who spoke anonymously said the position was understood to be that of ambassador to Austria.

Time has announced in April that Grunwald would step down at the end of the year, when he reached the mandatory retirement age of 65. On Monday, the company said Grunwald had resigned five months earlier than expected "in order to prepare for post-retirement activities."

Time spokesman Louis Slovinsky said Grunwald was "being considered for a government position" and resigned early to "avoid any appearance of a conflict of interest." Slovinsky declined to elaborate on what the job might be.

Buckley to blind: if you can't see, you shouldn't go sailing

NEW YORK — In a televised debate, Sen. Jim Dickson defended his solo attempt to sail across the Atlantic while columnist William F. Buckley Jr. insisted, "People who can't see have no business sailing."

"I'm not trying to say blind people ought to all get on sailboats and go sailing," Dickson said from St. George's, Bermuda, on ABC-TV's "Nightline" program Monday. "I'm trying to say that able-bodied people should not define what a disabled person is."

Dickson, 41, of Washington, D.C., set sail Aug. 4 from Portsmouth, R.I., bound for England aboard his 36-foot sailboat, Eye Opener. Three days out, however, his autopilot and other equipment broke down, and he had to manually bring his boat through heavy seas to Bermuda, where the vessel awaits repairs.

The debate was syndicated by Buckley's Aug. 10 syndicated column, in which the columnist, an experienced sailor, wrote that there are some things the physically handicapped should not undertake because of their limitations.

"Jim Dickson is endeavoring to jump off a stunt, and the blind stand neither to benefit from his adventure nor to take heart from it," Buckley wrote.

Lawyers delay decision in 'L.A. Law' star case
LOS ANGELES — Prosecutors have delayed a decision on whether to file charges against "L.A. Law" actor Jimmy Smits, who was booked last week for investigation of battery on a police officer.

The city attorney's office referred the case back to the Police Department for further investigation, spokesman Ted Goldstein said Monday.

Goldstein said he did not know why police had been asked to investigate whether the actor had charged could still be filed this week.

Smits, 31, and his girlfriend, Juanita Cruz, 28, are free on $1,000 bail.

"They were arrested in Smits' west Los Angeles apartment after allegedly fighting with officers who had come to check a domestic violence complaint.

SEA GIRT, N.J. — The Joyce quintuplets celebrated their fourth birthday Tuesday with a party for 30 children during the day and a dinner planned for family and adult friends, their mother said.

The quint — Megan, Lauren,

Ryan, Christopher and Kevin — were born Aug. 18, 1983, instantly transforming their first-time parents into leaders of the dispersal brigade.

Keeping track of the children is a full-time job that has Jennifer Joyce constantly counting heads.

"They swim, talk, run, wake up early and go to bed late," she said. "They haven't calmed down at all, 10 hours and six minutes off the previous record, his coach said Tuesday.

The children will be continuing vious record, his coach said Tuesday.

Swimmer breaks record for Channel crossing
DOVER, England — Philip Rush, a 28-year-old marathon swimmer from New Zealand, made a triple crossing of the English Channel in 28 hours and 21 minutes, chopping 10 hours and six minutes off the previous record, his coach said Tuesday.

The only other person to have swam the English Channel three times in a row is Jon Ericson, a 26-year-old physical education teacher from Chicago who did it in 38 hours and 27 minutes in 1981. No one has ever made four crossings in a row.

The channel is about 21 miles (34 kilometers) wide, although swimmers can cover greater distances depending on where they start and land.

Rush's coach, Tony Keenan said the swimmer was "in great shape" following his marathon, suffering only from raw patches of skin on his neck where he turned his head in the water to breathe.

"It's a wee bit tired," said Rush, a financial services manager who has been swimming marathons for seven years.

Black mayor surprises Soviet women on hike
LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Mayor Lotie Shackelford says a wilderness hike during her two-week trip to the Soviet Union gave her a chance to talk frankly with a group of Soviet women.

"Without a formal setting, one can talk to people one-on-one and get away from the party line," Ms. Shackelford said Monday, a day after returning to Little Rock.

Ms. Shackelford said she was the only black woman on the hike and her race "provoked a lot of lively discussion" about racial discrimination in the Soviet republic of Kazakhstan, near the Chinese border.

"They wanted to blast (the border

United States) for not giving blacks equal rights. In fact, I was hard for them to believe that I was hard and they wanted to know whether I was just a symbol or something."

Ms. Shackelford was one of 16 American women who participated in a cultural exchange program by joining a group of Soviet women for a hike in the Tien-shan Mountains.

Gunplay: husband shot, killed
LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 25-year-old woman shot and killed her husband while the couple played in bed with what both apparently believed were unloaded pistols, authorities said.

"It appears at this time that there is no foul play," police Detective David Straky said of the shooting early Monday. "She was not arrested."

The couple's names were withheld until relatives could be notified. They had no children.

The 27-year-old victim and his wife often went to target practice at the Beverly Hills Gun Club and had a habit of "dry-firing" or pointing unloaded guns at each other, Straky said.

The woman had returned from a trip just two hours before the shooting, and the victim may have loaded his wife's weapon when she was out of town and forgot to tell her, he said.

The two were in bed in their Venice home when the man pretended firing at his wife with an unloaded gun he kept near his side of the bed. She fired back with what she thought was the unloaded weapon she kept beside her, Straky said.

Straky called the practice of dry-firing "very poor judgment" and said police officers are taught all ways to treat weapons as though they are loaded.

Name changed
SEA ISLE CITY, N.J. (AP) — The Dominic C. Raffa Community Center in this seashore town is now just a generic "community center" because residents demanded a name change after the former mayor — Dominic C. Raffa — became a convicted felon.

Raffa's name was removed quietly from the building's brick exterior after the city commission responded to a petition signed by more than 200 residents.

Raffa, 68, recently completed a six-month prison sentence on his guilty plea in connection with charges that he arranged false registration papers for stolen cars while serving as director of the local Division of Motor Vehicles branch office.

First Strait of Hormuz attack in Gulf war hits chemical ship

Sweeping Mines By Helicopter

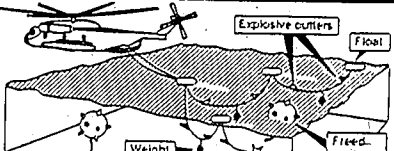

1 Locating mines below the surface

On the first pass through the area being swept, an RH-53D Sea Stallion helicopter tows an AN/AOS-14 sonar detector buoy on a predetermined underwater search pattern. The sophisticated sonar sensors on the buoy pinpoint the location of any submerged mines in the area.

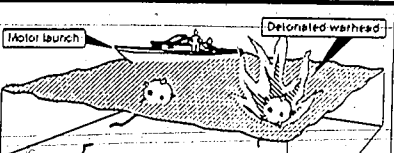

2 Bringing mines to the surface

On the second pass, the helicopter tows sweeper cables fitted with explosive cutters. When the cutters snag the anchor cable of a mine, they go off, severing the anchor cable and cutting the buoyant mine warhead loose to float to the surface.

3 Detonating mines harmlessly

If the concussion of the explosive cutters does not set off the warhead, the warhead is hoisted to the surface. Rifle of machine gun fire from a helicopter or from assisting ships or boats can then detonate the warhead.

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Rocket-propelled grenades and machine gun fire hit a tanker Tuesday at the southern edge of the Strait of Hormuz.

Shipping sources called it the first known attack there in the seven years of the Persian Gulf war. Kuwait reported finding a floating mine in its coastal waters at the other end of the gulf, raising new problems for U.S. Navy officers preparing the next convoy of reflagged Kuwaiti tankers and Navy warships. It did not say when the mine was found.

According to a Defense Ministry statement, the latest mine was found northeast of Kubbah island, 20 miles from Al-Ahmedi, where three Saudi gun tankers have waited since Saturday for the new convoy to sail. The Navy has given no hint of when that will be.

U.S. minesweeping helicopters, newly arrived in the Persian Gulf aboard the amphibious assault carrier Guadalcanal, are expected to clear waters ahead of the convoy. The Sea Stallions have been flying practice drills since Sunday from the 11,000-ton carrier, which is escorted by a guided-missile frigate.

The warships were reported Tuesday to be off Bahari in the southern gulf, about 450 miles from Kuwait.

Members of an NBC television crew said they flew around the Guadalcanal in a chartered helicopter and were told they would be "subject to appropriate defensive measures" if they got too close.

After the journalists explained that they wanted to film the ship, an officer said by radio: "We are preparing to conduct extensive flight operations... Request that you expedite your picture-taking and clear the area." Members of the NBC crew said they complied.

In Washington, Pentagon sources confirmed that the Guadalcanal was carrying other helicopters, including gunships, in addition to the eight RH-53D Sea Stallions.

Pentagon sources said the gunships could be especially effective against speedboats.

There was no immediate explanation for the attack on the Oco Sierra, a 20,578-ton chemical carrier registered in Liberia and operated by a Norwegian company. The shipping sources blamed Iranian commandos in speedboats, a tactic Iran has used often to attack ships inside the gulf.

Sources said damage to the tanker was minor and there were no casualties. They said the ship changed course to Fujairah, a United Arab Emirates port 30 miles south of Hormuz in the Gulf of Oman.

One reported that Iranian naval units later stopped and searched a second vessel, the Splendor Cyriot, in the same general area, but no details were available. Iran often searches for patrol vessels looking for cargo bound for Iraq, with which it has been at war since September 1980.

Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit in London said the Oco Sierra was bound for Kuwait at the head of the gulf.

It said the ship was "attacked by two missiles." According to Lloyd's, one hit the galley and the other missed.

The report, which said two gunboats were involved, apparently used the term "missiles" to describe the shoulder-fired rocket grenades.

Iran began regular attacks last September on ships owned by or serving Kuwait, which it accuses of transshipping arms to Iraq, the oil-rich nation's eastern neighbor. Iraq's ports were closed soon after the war began.

Shooting incidents in or near Hormuz have been rare. Iran never has fired the Silkwoorm anti-ship missiles it placed along its bank of the strait, the entrance to the Persian Gulf.

In the report from Lloyd's, the location of Tuesday's attack was given as 25.55 north latitude, 56.42 east longitude in the Gulf of Oman. The area is just inside the eastern end of the Hormuz passage between Iran and Oman.

Although mines have plagued the area recently, it was the first reported shooting incident.

The last incidents involving Iranian speedboats were in late May, inside the gulf. Iraq has not attacked ships in the gulf recently, although it began the "tanker war" on commercial vessels in which hundreds of ships have been damaged.

Iran's Revolutionary Guards have used speedboats to raid shipping from islands in the gulf, but marine executives said they could not recall any in the Strait of Hormuz.

Sri Lankan president accuses Sinhalese terrorists of assault

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — President Junius Jayewardene on Tuesday blamed Sinhalese terrorists for a grenade attack in a Parliament meeting room that killed one person and injured 14.

Jayewardene, who was unharmed, said on national radio that he was the target of the assassination attempt earlier in the day by terrorists angry with the agreement he signed with India last month to try to end the 4-year-old insurrection by Sri Lanka's Tamil minority.

The assailant fled in the panic that followed the explosion. Some accounts put the number of wounded at 16.

Six of the wounded were ministers in Jayewardene's Cabinet and the dead man was a member of Parliament. A legislator who was not hurt said the attacker fired an automatic weapon before hurrying away.

A group calling itself the Patriotic People's Movement, previously unknown, claimed responsibility Tuesday night.

A telephone caller told a British Broadcasting Corp. correspondent there would be more attacks because the government "betrayed the people by entering into an agreement with India."

The United States condemned the attack.

"We are shocked by this outrageous act of violence and express our sympathy with the victims," said a State Department announcement.

Police and soldiers immediately sealed off the Parliament building, which is on an island in a man-made lake just southeast of Colombo, the capital.

The 80-year-old Jayewardene said both he and Prime Minister Ramasingha Premadasa were unharmed, but witnesses who saw Premadasa leave the room told The Associated Press his leg was slightly cut.

Kirthi Abeywickreme, district minister for the southern Matara region, died of his wounds, the official radio said.

The president said Parliamentary Affairs Minister Vincent Perera was one of those wounded by "two or three blasts, which I learned later were gunshots or ... grenades." Jayewardene said his own shirt was stained with blood, adding, "I will keep it as a memento."

Other Cabinet ministers wounded were National Security Minister Lalith Athulathumudali; Agriculture Minister Gamini Jayawariya; Minister of Plantation Industry Montague Jayawickreme; Culture Minister Edward Hurulle; and Parliamentary Affairs and Sports Minister Vincent Perera.

Hess commits suicide in Spandau after nearly 50 years imprisonment

BERLIN (AP) — Rudolf Hess, the last member of Adolf Hitler's inner circle, apparently strangled himself with a length of electrical cord after nearly half a century in prison. British officials said Tuesday.

Hess died Monday in a British military hospital in West Berlin, at the age of 93. He had been in prison since a bizarre "peace flight" to Britain in 1941 and, for 21 years, was the sole inmate of cavernous Spandau Prison near the hospital.

Eugene K. Bird, once the top American officer guarding Spandau, told The Associated Press the one-time Nazi deputy fuhrer tried to commit suicide on four other occasions.

Hermann Goering, commander of the Luftwaffe and one of Hitler's closest confidants, poisoned himself to death after the Nuremberg war crimes trials in 1946, two hours before he was to be executed.

Soldiers of the four World War II allies — the United States, Soviet Union, Britain and France — took turns guarding Hess for a month each, and Americans were on duty during August at the prison in Berlin's British sector.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said: "He was guarded by a U.S. guard and it was a U.S. guard that found him."

A State Department statement said the military guards provided by the wartime allies were used solely to patrol the outer perimeter of the prison and did not come into direct contact with Hess.

It said a second group of guards, known as warders and also provided by each country, was used to oversee the prisoner directly.

"These guards are civilians, permanent employees of the prison," the statement said. "Although warders of various allied nationalities were working in the prison on the afternoon of Aug. 17, an American warder happened to be in charge of accompanying Rudolf Hess to the prison garden."

"As was standing practice, the warden left Hess alone in the small garden house but remained nearby in the garden. Approximately five minutes later he returned to check on Hess and then immediately called in medical assistance."

Bird, in an interview with West Germany's ZDF television network, said it was unusual that Hess was left alone outside his cell long enough to wrap an electrical cord around his neck.

"It strikes me as very odd he was left alone like that," Bird said.

Bird said the Nazi leader's first attempt at suicide came soon after he parachuted into Scotland on May 10, 1941, when he called a mission to end the war, and the other three occurred during the nearly 41 years Hess spent in the fortress-like Spandau prison.

Hess grew increasingly depressed toward the end of his life. In February 1977, he tried to kill himself by cutting his wrist, elbow and leg with a dull table knife.

S. African union chiefs leave talks

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Talks aimed at reducing violence in the black miners' strike collapsed Tuesday, and union leaders said they walked out after learning that 15 miners were injured by police during the negotiations.

Mine management blamed the breakdown on union recalcitrance.

"It would seem the situation could get extremely worse," Cyril Ramaphosa, general secretary of the National Union of Mineworkers, said after his delegation broke off the talks with the Anglo American mining conglomerate.

Anglo's chief negotiator, Bobby Godsell, said he regretted the union's "unreasonable rejection" of company proposals. Anglo has been affected more severely by the nine-day strike than the five other targeted mining houses.

The union said more than 300 of its members have been injured and another 300 arrested during the strike.

Ramaphosa said union delegates were informed during the talks that 15 miners had been injured by whips and rubber bullets in an unprovoked police assault near the President Steyn gold mine, owned by Anglo, in the Orange Free State.

Police said officers dispersed an "illegal gathering" of miners and denied anyone was injured.

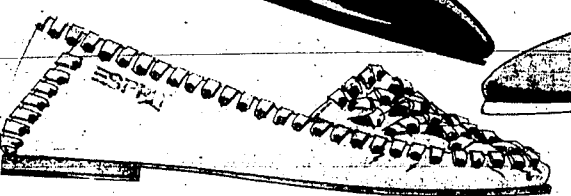

"We are distressed and disappointed that while we were negotiating, Anglo would allow the police to attack our members," Ramaphosa said.

Afghanistan rebel commander Mohammed Alim arrived in Twin Falls Tuesday where he will receive medical help

Afghan fighter arrives for treatment

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A small part of the war in Afghanistan arrived in Twin Falls Tuesday, carrying a briefcase in his wounded hand.

Mohammed Alim, a 30-year-old Afghan freedom fighter, stepped off a commuter plane and was greeted by a small group of supporters.

Alim is the eighth Afghan to arrive in Idaho and the first to arrive in Twin Falls for treatment through Project Wounded, a nonprofit organization founded to treat refugees from the Afghan war.

Alim, dressed in flowing white clothes and wearing a long black beard and short-cropped hair, arrived from Pakistan via Washington, D.C. Within the next few days, he will undergo reconstructive surgery on his left hand to repair the damage he received when a Soviet aircraft bombed the pickup truck he was riding in, killing the other six men.

Alim, who spoke through a translator, is the commander of 2,000 troops, part of the estimated 30,000 "mujahideen" or holy warriors fighting the Soviets in a seven-year-old war.

Alim was flown to Twin Falls after physicians at Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital agreed to volunteer their services and operate on Alim's deformed hand.

"We see this cause to be an important cause, an international cause, and we're more than happy to have the privilege to help," said Dr. David Spritzer, chief of staff at Twin Falls Clinic.

Spritzer said the surgery and medical services would cost between $5,000 to $6,000, but will be donated by the clinic and surgeon Dr. John Porter.

Spritzer and Dr. Russell Newcomb, a Twin Falls physician and state representative, were instrumental in helping bring Alim to Twin Falls, said state Rep. Elizabeth Allan-Hodge, R-Caldwell, state director for Project Wounded.

"Thanks to the generosity of the good physicians, medical personnel and other concerned members of the community, Project Wounded is able to continue helping patients who, otherwise, might receive little more than basic first aid," Hodge said Tuesday.

Spritzer said a close friend of his is currently in Pakistan, providing medical help to some of the more than three million refugees.

Newcomb said he was moved to help because involved with the project because of his experiences during the Vietnam War.

"When I first saw some of these refugees last winter, it brought memories back," Newcomb said. "In the Third World, the standard of medical care is in great need. That's why I wanted to help set this up."

Hodge said Project Wounded was organized in 1981 and has brought about 200 people to the United States for medical help. The U.S. government pays to airlift the refugees to America, and volunteers take over after that, she said. Great Britain, Egypt, France, Switzerland and West Germany also have joined the project.

In Idaho, Project Wounded has raised about $2,000 to help cover the costs of translators and prescription drugs. Donations can be made to Project Wound through Idaho First National Bank-Caldwell, Hodge said.

For Alim, his month spent recovering in America will be for one purpose, to return and fight another day in Afghanistan.

"I want to fight for a free Afghanistan," said Alim through his translator, Sayed Najibi, a former Boise resident who now lives in Southern California.

"For six days, he didn't know where he was or what he was doing," said Najibi. "They took him to Pakistan for treatment, about six months ago."

Alim, a student before the Soviets invaded in 1980, has no family, all killed in the war that has claimed an estimated one million.

"I'm very pleased with America. People are very kind, and different, from another world."

Western gets nibbles from local hydro developers

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Western Power, the Boise company that wants to build a power line to Las Vegas, is getting some nibbles from its efforts to reach electricity contracts with local hydro developers.

Rock Creek Joint Venture of Twin Falls has talked with a representative of Jay Jackson, Western's president, says Jack Straubhaar of Rock Creek.

Rock Creek Joint Venture has a royalty interest in Auger Falls, a 49.8 megawatt hydroelectric project proposed 4.5 miles below the Perrine Bridge.

Straubhaar says he hasn't signed anything yet. "It's just a business decision. It comes down to the best contract," he says.

Under federal law, Idaho Power Co. would have to buy the power from Auger Falls unless the Auger backers decide to sell to someone else.

Straubhaar thinks Western has an advantage over a regulated utility such as IPC.

Western has a freer hand to negotiate and make a better deal for selling power to the California market, Straubhaar says.

The downside for Western is IPC is involved in a competing project to strongly endorsed the move, calling the tariff "the single thread that kept the mine economically viable."

Yeutter initially said it could take a year before a determination on the Cyprus request was made but under pressure from the congressional delegation he agreed to expedite the proceeding, McClure announced several weeks ago that a decision would be made by mid-October.

Battered by international competition and a weakening market that prompted closure of several U.S. molybdenum mines, Cyprus is already in the process of laying off half its 300 workers, and corporate officials have been busy denying persistent rumors that the entire Idaho operation would shut down.

In addition to the impact of Chilean molybdenum, which accounts for nearly two-thirds of America's imports, the industry has been hit hard by the escalating price of copper.

That development has increased operations at a number of copper mines, where molybdenum is produced as a byproduct.

McClure predicts victory for Cyprus

By The Associated Press

CHALLIS — Republican Sen. James McClure is predicting victory for officials at eastern Idaho's beleaguered Cyprus-Thompson Creek molybdenum mine in their campaign for reimposition of tariffs on competitive imports.

"I think you are going to win this one," McClure told Cyprus Minerals Inc. officials during his six-day congressional recess tour of the state.

"You're in a clearly a situation where fairness dictates that the tariff is justified."

Earlier this summer, the Denver-based company petitioned United States Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter for restoration of tariffs on Chilean molybdenum the company claimed was being subsidized by that nation's government and no longer qualified for trade preferences.

McClure, who wrapped up the eastern Idaho leg of the tour in Idaho Falls Tuesday, along with the rest of the congressional delegation

Ex-sheriff's employee still faces theft charge

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — A trial set for Aug. 31 for a former Twin Falls County sheriff's department employee who is charged with grand theft involving county prisoner work-release funds is expected to go ahead as scheduled.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter said Tuesday that nothing was changed during a pre-trial status conference conducted last week by telephone.

Baxter said efforts to clear some preliminary motions were held by telephone conference because 6th District Judge George Granata, who will conduct the trial, is in Burley, the defense attorney is in Halley and the prosecution in Twin Falls.

Charlene Hine, 42, of Twin Falls faces three counts of grand theft involving alleged irregularities in the handling of the prisoner work-release payments in her office. A complaint was filed last January in the case following an investigation by the county officers.

She has pleaded innocent to the charges of taking the county money for her own use while employed in the sheriff's department, where she had worked for eight years. The county officers in the complaint against Hine list alleged thefts of $168, $180 and $204 on three separate occasions.

Judge Granata was appointed to hear the case by 5th District Court Administrative Judge Phillip Becker after both district judges in Twin Falls County disqualified themselves because of their acquaintance with the former county employee. The trial will be conducted in Twin Falls, Baxter said.

Hine is represented by Attorney Keith Roark of Halley.

Lessons and recreation to be priorities for pool

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Although a new pool has yet to be built, the Twin Falls City Council adopted on Monday a policy on how to run it.

The policy was drafted in response to public concern about pool operations, including a fear the pool would be dominated by the Twin Falls School District because the proposed site is district property near Sawtooth Elementary and the Twin Falls High School.

According to the policy, the priority use of the pool will be swimming lessons and general recreational swimming.

"It is the policy of the City Council to develop, operate and maintain a general use, family oriented swimming pool facility which will be made available to all citizens of the community for their use and enjoyment," states the policy.

The pool will be built to last 40 years and use geothermal water that has already been tapped by the school district.

The policy also explains why the district property was selected.

Harmon Park was considered because it was the traditional site of a pool. But it was not selected because of "crowded operating conditions, anticipated future increases in use for established recreational programs and lack of a proven thermal water heat source," states the policy.

The school site was chosen because it provides future use of geothermal water, is easily accessible to all users and "facilitates joint use with the school district when covered," states the policy.

To support the central-location description, the City Engineering Department completed a population study for the pool site. Using 1980 census figures, the study revealed that 60 percent of the city population resides north of Addison Avenue. About 9,200 people live within one mile of the proposed pool site, while 8,600 people reside within one mile of Harmon Park, according to the study.

In addition, the center mass of the population is in the 100 block of Taylor Street and appears to be moving north.

On the subject of pool fees, the policy states that admission prices will be maintained "generally affordable to the average citizen."

On a related subject, a $2,500 check was presented to the council for the pool by Joe Citek, chairman of the Business Improvement District. The check represented the proceeds from a barbecue.

Drug counts net hearing for area man

TWIN FALLS — A preliminary hearing has been set for Aug. 31 at 9:30 a.m. in 5th District Magistrate Court in Twin Falls for Kirk Christiansen, 38, of Twin Falls, who faces three drug counts.

Christiansen, who operates Kirk Christiansen Construction, was released on $20,000 bond following his arrest at 1980 Highland Ave. E. on the night of Aug. 10.

Twin Falls Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter said Christiansen was taken into custody by Twin Falls city police after a search warrant issued by Magistrate Michael Rodman and a Highland Avenue. Court records show police confiscated 170.9 grams of cocaine as a result of the search warrant, and a quantity of marijuana.

Christiansen is charged with delivery of a controlled substance, possession of a controlled substance,

Idahoans prepare to don cap of activist farm group

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In 1979, they rolled their tractors to the steps of the Capitol in Washington, D.C. to protest farm policies. The cross-country convoy gave the American Agriculture Movement a reputation as the aback troops of the nation's farm economy.

The AAM still doesn't shrink from throwing picket lines in the path of imported farm products or holding down the fort at a table in a Senate reception room.

But the AAM cap — with its red, white and blue map of the United States — now is cocked more towards political action.

And it is about to appear on the heads of Idahoans.

A small group of Magic Valley farmers and ranchers are pulling together the state's first AAM chapter. They formed the nucleus for the drive at a meeting Monday night in Twin Falls.

If farmers want to be heard in Washington, said organizer George Juker from Buhl, they've got to join a group with wide membership and political clout.

"We need to be in Washington," he said.

AAM leader Wayne Meyer, a northern California farmer, said the organization operates in 38 states and fields a staff of well-respected lobbyists on Capitol Hill.

"I think the main thing (we can offer) is the direct link and input into a national organization with offices in Washington," he said.

"We've got support in Washington for our program. Now we've got to build on it," Meyer said.

He described AAM's political aims to 21 farmers and ranchers, many of whom belong to other farm advocacy groups such as the Idaho Rural Council.

Created in a Colorado coffee shop in 1977, the AAM advocates 100 percent parity prices for all crops. Strict parity would give farmers the same relative returns from their crops as in 1910-1914.

AAM also proposes banning foreign imports of any agricultural products that are domestically produced until parity is reached.

Like other farm groups, the AAM is now flexing its muscle to ensure passage of the Harkin-Gephardt bill, which proposes a national system of production quotas and supply management on approval by the nation's farmers. The bill effectively would guarantee farmers at least 70 percent of parity for 1988 crops.

Meyers, who ran a close race for U.S. House of Representatives last year, said the policies of the 1986 Farm Bill and its predecessors are driving farmers off their land and threaten to "make the worst of the '30s look like a Sunday school picnic." He referred to "ding-a-ling" (Secretary of Agriculture Richard Lyng).

"We're of the opinion the only problem we've got in agriculture today is a political problem and no other problem," he said. Large, multi-national conglomerates are benefitting while the nation's farmers are suffering, he said.

"The AAM uses grassroots power to offset their millions in campaign donations to Congress, he said. It also has set up its own political action fund.

"We can't compete with their money, but we can rally the people," he said.

Some farmers balked at chartering a new organization in favor of joining through an established group, such as the Idaho Rural Council.

Both farm groups are part of the National Save the Family Farm Coalition, which is working for the Harkin-Gephardt bill.

Meyer said farmers in Payette, Grangeville and Blackfoot areas also are interested in an AAM chapter.

Juker said after the session that he and several other farmers would begin organizing a chapter. They hope to have it chartered by mid-November, he said.

Illegals sentenced Heroin dealers draw 10 years

BOISE (AP) — Two Mexican nationals each were ordered to serve 10 years in prison Tuesday, after a prosecutor described one of them as "one of the most significant heroin dealers we've had in court for some time."

U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan pronounced sentence here Tuesday on Jose Antonio Muneton-Ayala, 24, and Gerardo Valencia-Farias, 35, both illegal aliens.

In the case of Valencia, Ryan disregarded the prosecution recommendation of no more than five years in prison, reached under a plea-bargain agreement, and sentenced Valencia to a prison term twice as long.

Both men were arrested in January in the Homedale area. Assistant U.S. Attorney Monte Stiles described Muneton as a major drug dealer, although his attorney called him a "small fish" in a Canyon County drug operation.

A third man arrested at the same time, Sergio Ayala, faces sentencing next Wednesday before Ryan.

Muneton and Valencia pleaded guilty to a federal charge of conspiracy to sell heroin after state charges were dismissed. Both men have been held in jail since Jan. 14, when they were arrested, and their attorneys asked Ryan to give them credit for the time they already have spent in jail.

But the judge granted each only 131 days' credit, from the time federal charges were filed against them in April.

Ayala has pleaded guilty to conducting a continuing criminal enterprise, drug dealing, and under a federal law being used in Idaho for the first time faces a mandatory minimum of 10 years in prison, with no possibility of parole.

Stiles said the men were involved in dealing "black tar" heroin, which he described as a particularly pure, and therefore deadly, form of the drug.

He said one Ada County man said he had a $400 per day "rent" and committed numerous crimes to buy heroin. He said Muneton pressured another woman, also badly addicted to heroin, to commit a $10,000 embezzlement to buy the drug.

Defense attorney David Nevin disputed that, saying the woman committed the crime for reasons having nothing to do with his client.

Nevin said Muneton wouldn't talk to investigators, and the man also declined to say anything when Ryan gave him a chance to speak.

Stiles suggested a harsh prison term to discourage Muneton from ever coming back into this county, although Nevin said his client told him he had no intention of ever returning to America after he serves his prison term and is deported.

Nevin said his client admitted he made "a terrible mistake" by getting involved in drugs, but he was not a major player in the Canyon County dope ring. "He was not a key player in this," Nevin said.

Stiles said Valencia had "a significant prior criminal record," including being deported twice, two previous drug charges and two counts of illegal weapon use or possession.

Forest service proposes closing road

BOISE (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service wants to close 15 miles of the road along the South Fork of the Salmon River to halt sedimentation of the stream.

But residents of the remote town of Yellow Pine say the road is the only access to their town in the winter and they intend to fight the closure.

The proposed action, which would not take place for three to five years, would run from Cabin Creek to Reed Ranch and involve the steepcut and most unstable portions of the road, said David Olson, public affairs officer for the Payette

Forest. Sedimentation caused a massive decline in salmon spawning in the stream and closed the South Fork to fishing in 1964. The first fishing there since that time, by the Shoshone-Bannock tribes over the weekend, caused a storm of protest from the state Fish and Game Department.

"This is something people can rally behind to do something for the fish," Fish and Game biologist Don Anderson said.

But Yellow Pine residents said they would either sue the Forest Service or engage in civil disobedience to keep the route open from Warm Lake.

"The Forest Service has between 400 and 600 miles of sediment-accumulative road in there, and they're going to close 15 miles of our road. That just doesn't make sense," John Sumner of Yellow Pine told the Central Idaho Star-News in McCall.

The road, opened in the 1960s, pushed tons of highly erosive soils into the river, Rick Edwards, a hydrologist for the Payette National Forest in McCall, said.

In the winter months, when traffic on the road is allowed two days a week, plows shove dirt into the river while clearing snow, Anderson said.

In its final forest plan, the Payette National Forest has recommended that the 16-mile stretch be turned into a trail, Olson said. If adopted, the road would remain open for up to five years while the Forest Service uses it to haul in materials to improve fish habitat.

The Payette forest plan will be submitted to the regional forester for approval by early January. During the summer, Yellow Pine can be reached via two other dirt roads.

Former major leaguer appointed to tax board

BOISE (AP) — Larry Jackson, a 14-year major league pitcher with three National League teams, has been appointed to the Idaho Tax Commission by Gov. Cecil Andrus.

Jackson, 56, a former Republican state legislator, replaces Morgan Munger, Ole, on the four-member commission. The commission runs the state's tax agency, the Department of Revenue and Taxation. The appointment must be confirmed by the next Idaho Legislature.

Jackson, a native of Nampa, started his major league career with St. Louis in 1955 and pitched for the Cardinals through 1962. He was traded to Chicago and early in the 1966 season was traded to Philadelphia. He retired after the 1968 season with a 194-183 record and a lifetime 3.40 earned run average.

He appeared in 568 games in his 14-year big league career. Jackson's best year was with the 1964 Cubs when he was 24-11, leading the league in victories.

He has been in the insurance business in Boise since then and now lives at Garden Valley north of Boise. In 1970 he was elected to the Idaho House of Representatives, serving eight years until he made an unsuccessful bid for the GOP governor nomination in 1978.

Jackson served two years as co-chairman of the Legislature's Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee.

Jackson supported Andrus, a Democrat, in last year's election.

Deadwood fire revived

By The Associated Press

The five-day reprieve wet, cool weather gave Boise National Forest officials ended Tuesday as temperatures heated up and renewed the once-calm wilderness fire near Deadwood Summit in Idaho's central mountains.

"The moisture from the rains which helped curb the fire on Thursday has dissipated quickly," spokesman Greg Spangenberg said. "From the indications it's brewing a little again today."

The blaze, sparked by lightning on Aug. 1, blackened some 5,300 acres on and along the western boundary of the Frank Church River of No Return Wilderness about 23 miles east of Cascade because a weather system brought rains to the area late last week.

After adverse weather conditions thwarted an initial plan to fight the blaze early this month, the Forest Service decided to allow it to burn naturally, taking precautions to fight the flames only if private property was threatened.

A week ago, 60 firefighters were airlifted into the Sulphur Creek Ranch east of the fire's front to set up a precautionary fire line between the resort and the flames.

Utah guard and reserve troops could be deployed in Gulf

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii (AP) — The United States' military involvement in the Persian Gulf could result in dispatch of some of Utah's 13,000 National Guard and Reserve troops to the island's maintenance and air defense missions in the Hawaiian Islands.

Cmdr. Jim Mitchell, deputy public affairs officer for the commander in chief of the U.S. Pacific Fleet, told Utah political and business leaders that it is "a real possibility that is being studied."

The delegation of 40 Utah businessmen and government officials were briefed at the fleet headquarters as part of "Operation Boss-Lit," a weekend orientation tour of guard units' maintenance and air defense missions in the Hawaiian Islands.

The tour is an annual effort by Guard and Reserve officials to encourage employer cooperation when their workers request time off the job for training and deployment. Utah units regularly train and do play from the Army, Navy and Air Force bases in the islands.

Mitchell said that a large component of the Navy's mine-sweeping force is made up of Reserve units, and some Reserve units may be activated to deploy mine-sweepers into the Persian Gulf.

He also said that ships of the Pacific Fleet are being transferred to the Persian Gulf and Indian Ocean, which stretches the fleet thin, and the Navy "could have to call on the Reserves to backfill that."

Rear Adm. Henry Mauz Jr., deputy commander of the Pacific Fleet, also said there is a possibility that some ships entirely manned by reservists or ships with reservists serving alongside active duty sailors could be sent to the Far East.

The Utah group also received a briefing from Air Force Brig. Gen. Edward V. Richardson, commander of the 14th Composite Group of the Hawaii Air National Guard at Hickam Air Force Base at Pearl Harbor.

The unit, which is currently being upgraded from aging F-4 fighters to F-16s, has the full-time responsibility for the air defense of the Hawaiian Islands and a large portion of the rest of the Pacific. The 1,600-man unit operates two 24-hour radar stations on the islands and scrambles its jet fighters to intercept unidentified aircraft.

The general said his unit is a good example of the Department of Defense's Total Force policy, which integrates Guard and Reserve units into active duty missions.

Almost 40 percent of the nation's armed forces are composed of Guard and Reserve units.

The Utah branch of the National Committee for Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve sponsored the Hawaiian trip.

Utah Director of Public Safety John T. Nielson said a large percentage of his Utah Highway Patrol troopers are in the Guard and Reserve.

Raids in Spokane retrieve firearms

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Three recent raids at Spokane-area residences have netted two dozen firearms and evidence of a possible large methamphetamine manufacturing operation, authorities said.

George Winston Pabat, 37, was arrested on the first raid, on a charge of being a convicted felon in possession of a firearm.

He is being held in jail without bond and could face additional federal charges after an investigation and laboratory tests are concluded, said Assistant-U.S. Attorney Earl Hicks.

The raids, initiated by investigative work by the Spokane County sheriff's department, were linked to the seizure in April of 70 grams of methamphetamine and enough chemicals to make an additional 200,000 disage units of "as say."

Three suspects were arrested, and Pabat's name and telephone number were on a notice seized at that time, according to court records.

Pabat was arrested last week when county sheriff's detectives, the department's SWAT team and federal Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms agents served a search warrant at a rural residence about 20 miles north of Spokane.

The suspect's wife, Linda Pabat, was arrested on a misdemeanor charge of possessing marijuana, authorities said.

During the raid, authorities seized 16 weapons, including two illegally sawed-off rifles, and 200 rounds of ammunition, said an ATF spokesman.

Other evidence seized led au-

Crowds get first look at B1-B bomber

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Spectators at Fairchild Air Force Base got their first look at the B1-B bomber, the Air Force's newest bomber.

The $265 million plane, half the length of a football field and with sweeping, movable wings that can open almost as wide, landed at Fairchild Monday as part of the Strategic Air Command's annual Giant Sword competition for weapons loading crews and security police.

More than 900 military and civilian competitors and guests are expected to come to Fairchild for the competition, which ends Wednesday.

"It's made to fly low and fast, and it does," Capt. Dave Zehr, co-pilot for the bomber from Ellsworth Air Force Base, S.D., said.

Ellsworth and Dyess Air Force Base in Texas each have about 30 B1-B bombers, and plans call for more of the advanced warplanes to be stationed in North Dakota and Kansas. There are no plans to locate any of the bombers at Fairchild.

The bomber, nicknamed "My Mistress," appeared like a dark silhouette as it made three low passes over the runway before landing.

The plane can carry three rotary launchers in its belly, each holding eight nuclear or conventional weapons.

Its sophisticated electronics system is designed to detect and jam radar signals directed at the bomber, while continuing to monitor and jam signals already sensed, according to an Air Force information sheet.

The bomber has a crew of four: pilot, co-pilot, defensive weapons officer, and an offensive weapons officer.

thorities to a second warrant the next day to search another residence rented by Pabat.

Federal Drug Enforcement Administration agents in the second raid said they seized evidence of a methamphetamine lab operation, including a large glass beaker containing chemical residue.

Federal agents then obtained a third warrant to return to the rural residence, the scene of the first raid. There, they seized three empty 55-gallon drums of caustic soda and two empty 55-gallon drums of sodium hydroxide. The chemicals are used in the manufacture of speed.

A DEA spokesman said the investigation is continuing and more arrests are possible.

Andrus calls for lands compromise

BOISE (AP) — There are many competing demands for Idaho's natural resources, and cooperation is the key to land management, says Gov. Cecil Andrus.

Andrus on Tuesday welcomed delegates to the National Stewardship Natural Resource Conference here.

He said natural resource managers first of all must be responsible.

"We must approach these resource management issues with a long view of their ramifications. We have a vast supply of resources.

Hi-Fi killer's lawyer says case has been unduly singled out

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The case of Pierre Dale Selby, sentenced to die Aug. 28 for the 1974 torture-slayings of three people, cries out for "fairness, equality and concern," the killer's attorney says.

"This case has been singled out for separate and disparate treatment," D. Gilbert Athay says. "Some say that's because this crime was so heinous. Even if that is true, there is not equal justice under the law here."

Selby, 34, and co-defendant William Andrews, 32, were convicted

13 years ago for the deaths of a man and two women during a robbery of the Hi Fi Shop in Ogden. The victims were forced to drink caustic drain cleaner and then shot. One of the women also was raped.

But during comments Monday night at an Amnesty International-sponsored symposium on capital punishment, Athay said the infamy of the crimes should not lessen the requirement for his client's case to be treated with fairness and justice.

In addition to Athay, other panelists at the discussion were Paul

Lindsay Hoffman, the founder and national coordinator of Amnesty International USA's legal support network and the legal director for the American Civil Liberties Union Foundation in Los Angeles; Dr. L. Kay Gillespie, a Weber State College sociology professor; and Rev. M. Francis Manning, rector of the Cathedral of the Madeleine in Salt Lake City and chairman of the Lutheran-Roman Catholic Dialogue.

The symposium was a response to Selby's pending execution, which would be the first in the state since Gary Gilmore's death by firing squad in 1977.

Athay acknowledged that his long involvement with Selby and the Hi Fi case "has been trying."

"It's difficult to come so close to the execution and feel how futile what we're doing is at the current time," he said.

Athay said he is opposed to capital punishment because he is convinced it is carried out disproportionately on society's poor and minority members. Selby and Andrews both are black, while all the Hi Fi victims were white.

Athay said Selby's difficulties in the case, from a legal standpoint, began with the origin appointment of a public defender who had just seven years' experience. Having such relatively inexperienced counsel is typical for inmates on death row, Athay said, and "that alone should condemn this barbaric process."

Athay also said that judges allowed the Hi Fi murder trial to be moved from Weber County only to adjacent Davis County, where potential jurors were just as likely to be prejudiced about the case from pretrial publicity.

Further, the trial judge ruled that Selby could be sentenced to death when just a preponderance of the evidence allowed that — as opposed to the stricter but accepted standard of those sentencing Selby "being beyond a reasonable doubt" that the death penalty was deserved.

Rhoades' lawyers file request

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Defense attorneys for accused multiple murderer Paul Ezra Rhoades have filed still another legal request with 7th District Judge Larry Boyle — as Rhoades' trial for two Bonneville County slayings nears.

The latest motion asked Boyle to require prosecutors to turn over any information they may have on potential jurors in the case.

Rhoades, 30, of Idaho Falls, is scheduled to go on trial Oct. 6 for the March slayings of convenience store clerk Nolan Haddon and school teacher Susan Michelbacher. He faces a January trial for the February killing of convenience store clerk Stacy Baldwin in Blackfoot.

Because of extensive publicity over the slayings, Boyle has ordered the jury for the Haddon-Michelbacher trial to be selected from Ada County and then transported to Idaho Falls to hear testimony.

Defense attorney Stephen Hart said prosecutors in large counties like Ada sometimes keep files on the current jury pool that has much more information than the standard juror questionnaire.

Boyle set Aug. 26 for arguments on the request.

A week later, the judge will hear arguments on another defense motion, this one to suppress all statements Rhoades made shortly after his arrest on grounds he was still under the influence of an excessive amount of drugs.

Already granted by the judge was the defense request for state-financed investigators to assist in preparing the case.

Boyle also has three other motions under review in the case, the most prominent a request that he validate the insanity defense that was banned by the Legislature in 1982 after the attempted assassination of President Reagan.

The defense has also asked that Boyle hold separate trials on the Haddon and Michelbacher slayings, contending there is no relationship between them except that the same man is accused of both.

In addition, Hart has asked the judge to reconsider his earlier rejection of a defense request that the entire trial — not just jury selection — be moved out of Bonneville County because of the publicity the case has generated.

Gem County owes bill for airport design

EMMETT (AP) — Although plans to build a Gem County airport were grounded in the spring, a 3rd District judge has ruled that at least one bill still remains to be paid.

The Gem County Commissioners must pay Hoac Engineering Inc., Meridian, for its work on the construction design of the $1.5 million airport, Judge Dennis Goff ruled Friday.

The bill could run as high as $176,000. Another hearing has been scheduled Monday on the county's $150,000 agreement to purchase nearly 100 acres of land for the project.

The long-running airport conflict forced an abortive recall election last July against the commissioners and was the major issue in November's election which put two new commissioners into office.

The project is sited near the Kennedy-Keefer Wildlife Management Area on the Payette River and the county over the effect of aircraft on waterfowl there.

A new set of commissioners in March turned down a Federal Aviation Administration grant which would have paid for 90 percent of the airport construction costs.

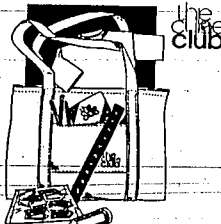

When the commissioners voted Jan. 26 to abandon the site, landowners Jerry and Donna Pulley sued the county to force it to honor the $150,000 agreement made by the previous commissioners to purchase about 100 acres from them for the airport.

Because of Friday's judgement, the county can levy outside the 1.1 percent initiative to pay back the money, Gem County Prosecuting Attorney Cy Rood said.

Weak dollar, bonds bring sharp Dow decline

Dealers welcome respite from effects of lengthy rally

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market fell steeply Tuesday in reaction to a weak dollar and bond prices, but most dealers welcomed the selloff as a much-needed rest from a lengthy rally that produced many overpriced shares.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which closed above the 2,700 mark for the first time on Monday, tumbled 45.81 to 2,654.66 — its seventh largest daily drop.

The losses were felt across the board. Declining issues outnumbered rising stocks by more than 3 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 1,296 down, 393 up and 312 unchanged.

Big Bond volume came to 198.40 million shares, up from 166.12 million in the previous session.

Traders blamed sharp drops in the dollar and bond prices for Tuesday's market pullback. The dollar's weakness was largely a continuing reaction to Friday's trade report, which showed the nation's shortfall in the trade balance widening to $15.7 billion.

A weak U.S. currency makes dollar-denominated securities, such as stocks, less attractive to foreign investors. Lower bond prices mean a rise in interest rates, and that could increase the attractiveness of debt securities over stocks.

But traders said investors merely used the dollar as an excuse to sell following several weeks of sharp gains in stock prices, fed, in part, by a hungry appetite for equities by foreigners.

Before Tuesday, the Dow Jones industrial average — the best-known measure of market trends — had risen 804.62 points, or 42.44 percent, from the start of the year. On Monday, the index gained 15.14 points to climb to 2,700.57, one week after its first close above 2,600.

Traders said the market was in for a "correction" — Wall Street's jargon for a pullback — before moving higher again.

Stock prices started out sharply lower Tuesday and stayed that way for the rest of the session, with slight rebound later in the session on bargain-hunting.

At one point, shortly after noon, the closely watched Dow industrial average was down just over 650 points. The record daily loss was 86.61 points on Sept. 11, 1986.

Among the most actively traded blue-chips, International Business Machines was down 1 1/2 to 173, General Electric was down 1 1/2 to 65 1/2, American Telephone and Telegraph was down 1/4 to 94 and American Express was down 1/4 to 37 1/2.

Many oil stocks posted losses as oil futures prices were little changed from Monday's settlement levels after falling below $20 a barrel for the first time in nearly two months.

Atlantic Richfield was down 1 1/4 to 90 1/2, Amoco was down 1 1/4 to 78 1/2, Mobil was down 1/4 to 50 1/2 and Exxon was down 1/4 to 97 1/2.

Gillette declined 1/4 to 42 1/2. Revlon made a proposal Monday to acquire the company for $47 a share in cash and securities.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades of those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 233.12 million shares.

The NYSE index was off 2.64 at 184.12.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell 5.56 to 383.81, and S&P 500 stock-composite index was down 4.88 to 329.25.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index declined 4.89 to 867.98. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 446.76, down 4.89.

Union workers worry about merger of utilities

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Union employees of Utah Power & Light Co. are concerned about the effect of the impending merger of the Utah utility with PacifiCorp will have on their jobs, union officials say.

"There's been a lot of concern about still having a union and any changes in working conditions and benefits because of the merger," said Blaine Newman, business manager for Local 57 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

"IBEW membership accounts for about 9,200 of the 6,000 positions at UP&L."

UP&L announced last week that it had signed a merger pact with Portland, Ore.-based PacifiCorp.

The stock swap, valued from $1.8 billion to $2.2 billion, would make UP&L a separate division within PacifiCorp, with UP&L's headquarters remaining in Salt Lake City.

Newman said executives and IBEW officials at PacifiCorp have assured him the local union should not be harmed by the merger.

"They've indicated to me that they don't see any labor problems in making the merger, and we're relieved at that," he said.

Newman plans to meet next week with UP&L officials about the merger and other issues, including the utility's austerity program that has already eliminated more than 800 jobs through early retirement and layoffs.

"We hope to see a stop to the company's austerity program, and many workers anticipate the merger as a possible light at the end of tunnel that the cuts won't continue," he said.

Before being finalized, the merger must first pass a lengthy regulatory approval process that could take a year. UP&L officials said the company's cost-cutting measures will continue until its objectives are met.

"We are in the middle of the process now," said UP&L spokesman John Ward.

He said the company is not trying to meet an overall job reduction quota but is determining manpower needs in each department.

UP&L president Frank N. Davis said deciding on cutbacks in all areas of the company have been some of the most difficult decisions he has made since joining UP&L 38 years ago.

"The austerity program has been extremely hard on everybody," he said.

Ward said Friday the company is working on a videotape with Davis and Pacific Power president David F. Bolander explaining the benefits of the merger to employees.

Maximize conservation investment in home heating

At this peak of the summer when you, the homeowner, are (or about to be) evaluating your home-heating system before it resumes operation in a few weeks, addressing the advantages of oil vs. gas vs. electricity are hitting you on all sides.

• Major question: Are tensions in the Persian Gulf a signal for you to switch from oil to natural gas or electricity?

• Answer: Not at all.

• Look back to the effects of the Arab embargo in the 1970s. That was practically an emergency situation to what we are now facing.

• About one million Americans switched their heating systems from oil to natural gas early in this decade on the basis that the shift would ensure lower heating bills.

Considering the skyrocket in oil prices following the oil embargo, turmoil in Iran and the fact that natural gas was considered cheaper in most parts of the country, it seemed the economical decision.

But when oil prices plunged in 1986, savings

ings for many of these consumers became minimal. In fact, depending on the region of the country in which you live, it may have been cheaper last year if you had stuck with oil.

"Forget the switching," remarks Ellen Berman, executive director of the Consumer Energy Council of America (CECA), a private non-profit group and the oldest public-interest energy policy organization in the country. "Why spend all that money to change your system when you are not saving any energy? It is really an issue only if you are constructing a new home or must replace an old system.

"The real issue is how to maximize your conservation investment," she added.

The home heating debate has become as well as new efficiency advancements make it impossible to predict what is the "right" energy source for the "typical" American home. It is critical to keep this in mind when bombarded by persuasive advertising.

The home heating debate has now shifted and the competition is between electricity and natural gas. A recent study conducted by CECA analyzed the relative costs and benefits of electric heat pumps vs. natural gas. The fundamental point, however, remained: There are no ironclad rules.

The heat pumps are typically less efficient in colder climates. But in some parts of the country, they can be the most efficient and least expensive way to heat and cool. In other areas, natural gas furnaces cost less to operate and are preferred. As a result, you cannot base your decision on general media campaigns stating absolute pros and cons of either energy source.

While different groups clearly have motives for making their own energy source appear to be the most beneficial, don't lose your perspective. Approximately 55 percent of homes use natural gas, 18 percent use electricity and 10 percent use fuel oil for space heating.

Although New Yorkers and folks in New England are accustomed to heating homes with oil, it's rarer in the South and the West. Statistics from a 1984 Residential Energy Consumption Survey conducted by the Energy Information Administration revealed: In the Northeast, the main heating fuel was oil (43 percent). Gas accounted for 39 percent of electricity for only 9 percent. In the South, gas heated 45 percent, electricity 29 percent, oil only 5 percent. In the West, gas heated 65 percent of households, electricity 20 percent, oil only 3 percent.

Most buyers of new homes are willing to pay an extra $1,000 for energy efficiency, reports the National Association of Home Builders. The reason: This initial investment could translate into $50-60 less on your monthly energy bills.

In general, homeowners may want to consider an energy audit, a service typically offered by utility companies to assess how you can be more energy-efficient. Formerly they were free. Now you will probably have to pay from $20 to $100 for an audit. But it will be worth it.

• Look into cleaning or tune-up of your heating system. In addition, equipment modifications may be beneficial if the new equipment has a considerable lifespan.

• Reduce air leaks through such open spaces as cracks around windows and doors. Lights switches, etc. Caulking and weatherstripping are inexpensive and often do-it-yourself projects.

• Proper insulation can lead to enormous savings. Insulating ceilings, walls and floors as well as adding storm windows and doors are essential.

Uncertainty over gulf situation pushes oil imports upward

WASHINGTON (AP) — An abnormally large jump in oil imports, possibly triggered by concern over events in the Persian Gulf — could herald temporarily low prices for gasoline and other petroleum products, the Energy Department predicted Tuesday.

The department's quarterly forecast said that if its assumptions about refinery utilization, demand and other factors are correct, "any effort on the part of refiners to move the additional product out of storage could spell weak gasoline prices for the rest of the summer."

"So far, increased imports have been quickly refined and gasoline has been moved to distributors and retailers almost as soon as it is produced."

"At the same time, the additional buildup of distillates and other oils, mainly liquefied petroleum gas, could result in difficult for those markets later in the fall," said the forecast by the department's Energy Information Administration.

"One interpretation of these developments is that stocks have accumulated only for those products that are currently most difficult to market without major losses," said the administration's Short-Term Energy Outlook.

Gross crude imports — including imports for the Strategic Petroleum Reserve but deducting exports — rose 22 percent or nearly a million barrels a day from the week ending June 5 to the week ending July 24 — from 4.139 million barrels to 5,039 million barrels.

In the corresponding periods of 1986, when prices were weakening, gross crude imports rose 9.1 percent, from 4,265 million barrels per day to 4,656 million barrels.

"The increased purchases do not appear to reflect a speculative response to any expected long-term trend toward higher prices; rather they may indicate increased concern over the security of Persian Gulf oil supplies," said the department.

"The department made a special computer run to add an additional 500,000 barrel per day of crude imports for July and August to its earlier most-likely projections. Like all the calculations, this one assumed no disruption in shipments from the Persian Gulf.

This run showed refinery capacity heavily used, possibly above 90 percent, for the rest of the summer and lower profits for refiners "unless offset by higher product prices or by lower crude costs, neither of which appears to be forthcoming."

"The bottom line from this reasoning is that the current rise in imports beyond the base case level could lead to excess product supply and, consequently, a short period of higher product consumption and lower oil prices toward the end of the summer than are forecast here," the forecasters said.

The department's most likely forecast called for $18-a-barrel third-quarter and fourth-quarter imported crude prices. That is refinery average cost, generally about $2 less than the nearest price for West-

Texas Intermediate crude on futures markets. The average for 1987 was forecast as $17.70.

"Though prices are higher now — the September contract closed at $20.99 a barrel on Tuesday — the coming weakness means the $18 figure for refiners' import cost "should turn out to be about right for the year on average."

Other points in the forecast: —Gasoline prices, partly propped by heavy consumption, will average $1 a gallon for the summer quarter, 99-cents for the fall and winter and then rebound to $1.04 in the summer of 1988 and a 1988 average of $1.02.

—Alaska will surpass Texas as the leading oil producer toward the end of 1988. Domestic production in the lower 48 states is expected to decline from 8.28 million barrels per day to 8.06 million barrels, while Alaska production rises from 1.95 million barrels to 2.02 million.

—Nuclear power plants will account for 19 percent of electricity generation in 1988 compared with 18 percent this year as a total of 11 new plants should be placed in service during 1987 and 1988.

And some advance preparation assures the cook the time to savor a wonderful meal with guests and family. You can "put up" this array of home canned goodies for a picnic this summer, or anytime you are in the mood to enjoy homegrown delights.

Grilled meat or fowl is delicious with a Spicy Barbecue Sauce that has a boldly seasoned tomato base. Pickled beans and onions is a crunchy combination well-suited for picnic fare. Another crispy combo is Pickled Calico Vegetables — a patchwork of cauliflower, onions, peppers and carrots in zesty vinegar.

Tropical Barbecue Sauce blends orange marmalade, crushed pineapple and rum in an exotic complement for pork or poultry. The grand finale for a fancy feast is Spiced Pears in Rum Raisin Syrup — a delicately spiced brown sugar syrup with fresh pineapple and succulent pears.

Combine vinegar, sugar, water and spices in a large saucepot. Simmer about 15 minutes. Pack beans and onions into hot jars, leaving ¼-inch head space. Carefully ladle brine over beans and onions, leaving ¼-inch head space. Remove air bubbles with a non-metallic spatula. Adjust caps.

Process 10 minutes in a boiling water bath canner. Yield: about four pint jars.

Bigger is better for local canners

By DANA WATERS
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Home canning. It's great to have food you've grown and processed tucked away for the winter... But, oh, the mess: a hot kitchen — counters and sink filled to capacity with produce — a canning pot overflowing on the stove, sticky syrup running down the sides of sterilized jars and recipe books and utensils covering every unclaimed horizontal surface.

There's got to be a better way... Right? Right, Jerome's Community Canning Kitchen offers a spacious, time-saving, "out-of-the-home" alternative to food processors who like to can in a big way.

Walking through the door of the old building, located on the corner of Date St. and 3rd Ave. W. in Jerome, is like walking into another world — a canner's paradise.

The first thing one notices is the quality of long tables and benches, plenty of "horizontal space." Wooden scaffolding above kitchen-like counters holds colanders, ladles, funnels and spoons; the cupboards beneath store large tubs and baskets. Huge metal sinks filled with freely circulating boiling water make blanching a cinch. Produce is placed in deep wire baskets with handles and dunked into the sinks — a whole batch of tomatoes or peaches done at once and ready for easy peeling in a fraction of the time it takes at home.

The kitchen itself is spacious, the walls lined with windows. Air moves freely and all is clean and orderly. An older couple sits at one table with metal bowls full of peaches. Several feet away, another couple works to debone pressure-cooked chicken.

A family leaves, taking with them almost 100 pint cans of green beans. Sealed and processed, the beans are ready for the pantry shelves and it isn't yet 10 a.m.

And all of her beans washed and snapped before she came? Mary McFargue, a member of the canning kitchen's board of

Follow recipes when canning

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The canning season is upon us, and Joan Parr, the Cassia County extension home economist, is once again dispensing advice on the subject. When it's a question of safety, she says it's important to follow directions.

Parr warns that problems can arise when people who ordinarily make up their own recipes while they are cooking, become creative when they are canning. "They just don't stop to think before they go to preserve food that it's really a different ballgame when we're preserving food at home," she says.

When it comes to originality in preserving saunas or other tomato mixtures, there is also a problem of safety. She advises anyone who wants to use a favorite recipe for canning these spicy treats, to freeze them instead.

For people who have been canning pie fillings of their own design, she says research conducted at the University of Idaho concluded that adding thickening to fruit which is to be canned may cause safety problems. For example, she explains that canning apples is different than canning apple pie filling, because when thickening is added it will take a longer time for heat to transfer.

When there is a problem of food safety in home canned foods, she says density is a question that often comes up. The product cannot be thickened without changing the processing time. For people who call wanting to know how to do this with their own recipe, she says she has no ready answers because the

What vinegar added to the world of food

The Chinese are generally given credit for inventing pickling. In fact, laborers on the Great Wall of China are said to have carried salted vegetables to the Wall with them.

Early preserving methods generally consisted of salting or drying. Those living near the oceans and salt water seas of the world quite naturally came to rely on salt for preserving, while those in more arid areas learned the benefits of drying. Today, the availability of vinegar combined with modern canning methods make it easy to preserve the quality and flavor of food anywhere in the world.

A cornucopia of preserving and pickling recipes exist from virtually every ethnic group on the face of the globe. The U.S. ethnic group most famous for its pickles is the Pennsylvania-Dutch. Turn the pages in a Pennsylvania-Dutch Cookbook and you'll find dozens of recipes for both fruit and vegetable pickles. Their tradition of serving seven sweets and seven soups with meals is widely known.

The recipes you see here call for a variety of vinegars. You'll find each has been picked for a specific reason and plays a unique role in the taste profile of the food. Incidentally, in all forms of pickling, it's advisable to use commercial vinegar which is of known strength. All commercial vinegars have a minimum of four percent acidity, although five percent is widely available. Some manufacturers express this in grain, multiplying the percent by 10. Thus, 4 or 5 percent is the same as 40 or 50 grains.

Home economist offers tips to help determine food safety

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — At this time of year, it seems there is no end in sight to canning chores. But when every jar has been filled, and the snow is covering the last traces of the garden, a question of safety may arise about a particular jar or batch of preserved food.

Joan Parr, the extension home economist for Cassia County, says she is receiving more and more questions after the fact, by people wondering if the food they have canned is safe. Parr and the other county extension home economists are there to help people, she says — not just when they are canning, but all year round.

She says she would like to stress the adage, "When in doubt, throw it out," but she has prepared some guidelines to help you decide if the food is safe.

Proper canning is your only assurance to food safety. Be sure the canning procedure and processing time you follow are reliable and up to date. Even when a canned food product is sealed correctly, learn to automatically look for obvious signs of spoilage: bulging lid, cloudy liquid, off-odor, mushy food, mold growth or anything else unusual. Never taste or serve a questionable food.

• Cloudy canning liquid could mean several things. Even if the food had been processed correctly, this may appear, if overmature vegetables were canned and starch is now present in the liquid. It could also mean a salt containing and an anti-caking agent was used in the canning process. Additives such as liquid, off-odor, mushy food, mold growth or anything else unusual. Never taste or serve a questionable food.

One thousand miles. One thousand incredible miles in Idaho. It was my lost kiddie car pool. I guess you would call it that when you truck your youngest child off to college.

The first half was most enjoyable with daughter chatting about her summer and noting the beautiful scenes we passed that have almost become commonplace. The second half was rainy and I fretted about leaving her without a raincoat.

Nancy Joy Jones Valley cooking

Since my friends in Moscow had loaded my car with bounty from their gardens and since the summer food magazines were piled high on my desk, I combined the two and looked for newer ways to use vegetables.

The cover picture on the August issue of Bon Appetit featured skewered corn on the grill. The recipe was easy, showy and tasty. It called for red and yellow peppers which are sometimes hard to come by and quite expensive, so I did some substituting. Here is the revised version of that recipe.

- SUMMER VEGETABLE SKEWERS WITH CUMIN BUTTER
- 2 servings can easily be doubled or cut into 1 1/4 inch squares
- 1 small red bell pepper, seeded, and cut into 1 1/4 inch squares

1 small yellow bell pepper, seeded and cut into 1 1/4 inch squares (Optional: use green pepper, chunks of yellow crooked neck squash, leafy folds of cabbage, chunky slices of mushrooms, or thin slices of broiled carrots.)

2 small ears fresh corn, husked and cut into 1-inch thick rounds 6 tablespoons or 3/4 stick butter 1/4 teaspoon ground cumin 1/4 dried red pepper flakes Salt and freshly ground pepper

1 1/4 tablespoons chopped, fresh cilantro (Mexican oregano) Have the barbecue on medium heat. Alternate vegetables on four skewers. (NOTE: soaked wooden skewers 1/4 hour in hot water in advance so they won't burn on the grill.)

Melt butter with cumin, red pepper flakes, salt and pepper in heavy small saucepan. Remove from heat and stir in chopped cilantro.

Arrange skewers on barbecue rack. Brush with some of the butter. Grill until vegetables are crisp-tender and beginning to char, turning and basting occasionally. About 15 minutes. Remove from grill. Brush with butter and serve.

- CORN AND TOMATO MUFFINS
- 2 tomatoes
 - 2 tablespoons butter, plus more for serving density question is a major one. Instead, she advises callers to follow one of the extension service's recommended recipes, known to be tested and safe. Otherwise, she tells them to can their fruit slices as they are, or make their pies and freeze them.

Produce for canning should be ripe enough to eat right now. She says, often people will use produce of a lesser quality — usually over-ripe — and expect preservation methods to either mask or overcome the problem. This can lead to an unsatisfactory canned or spoiled food item.

Parr says people need to remember, when researchers test how long to process foods, they are looking at how long it takes to kill the micro-organisms that are there. "We can never have 100 percent kill of micro-organisms, and so consequently, if people use produce that is very, very over-ripe, and have started to mold, or is starting to spoil, they are going to have a higher load of micro-organisms than they would with just ready to eat ripe peaches (for example)."

And so, even if we follow the recommendations for canning, she says we may not end up with a product that won't spoil.

home canning. One is a very easy microwave strawberry jam.

MICROWAVE STRAWBERRY JAM

- 4 cups crushed strawberries
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1/4 cup powdered pectin
- 3 cups sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon of ground coriander

Combine the strawberries, lemon juice and pectin in a 3 quart microwave-safe bowl. Cover with plastic wrap or waxed paper and bring to a boil in microwave oven on a high setting (about 7 minutes). Remove from oven and stir. Cover and cook 3 minutes in microwave oven.

Add remaining ingredients. Return uncovered mixture to oven and cook until jam sheets from spoon (about 1 minute). Skim foam; pour into hot jars, leaving 1/4-inch headspace. Adjust caps. Process 10 minutes (must make altitude adjustments) in boiling water bath. Do not attempt to process in the microwave oven!

- CARROT PICKLES
- 2-3 bunches of small carrots
 - 1 cup sugar
 - 1 tablespoon mixed pickling spices
 - 1 stick cinnamon
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 2 cups vinegar
 - 1 1/4 cups water

Cook carrots until just tender. Drain and remove skins. Leave small carrots whole; cut larger ones into pieces as desired. Combine sugar, vinegar, water and salt. The main ingredients in a large saucepot, except rum; simmer about 15 minutes. Drain and rinse pears. Pack pears in water about 6 minutes, cooking one layer at a time. Pack pears into hot jars, leaving 1/4-inch head space. Remove from heat. Stir reserved pineapple tidbits and rum into syrup. Carefully ladle syrup over pears, leaving 1/4-inch head space. Add a cinnamon stick to each jar. Remove air bubbles with a non-metallic spatula. Adjust caps.

Process 25 minutes in a boiling water bath canner. Yield: about 4 quart jars.

- spices into a cheese cloth; add to vinegar mixture. Boil 5-8 minutes. Pack carrots into hot jars, leaving 1/4-inch headspace. Remove spice bag. Heat syrup to boiling. Pour hot over carrots, leaving 1/4-inch headspace. Remove air bubbles. Adjust caps. Process pints and quarts 30 minutes (must make altitude adjustments) in boiling water bath. Yield: about 3 pints.

It's a sweet, spicy carrot pickle, and it's a wonderful garnish to use in the winter, when you are having things like stew or kind of heavy meats. It's just wonderful," she says.

Zucchini Mustard Pickles

- 4 quarts (about 6 lbs.) zucchini, medium size, sliced
- 1 1/2 cups (about 1 lb.) onions, small white, sliced
- 2 large garlic cloves
- 1/4 cup salt
- 2 quarts (2 trays) ice, crushed or cubes
- 3 1/4 cups sugar

Have it ana of Parr's favorite pickle recipes:

Process in boiling water for 5 minutes (start to count processing time as soon as water in canner returns to boiling). Remove jars and complete seals if necessary. Set jars upright on a wire rack or folded towel to cool. Place them several inches apart. Yield: 7 pints.

Pack hot pickles loosely into clean, hot pint jars and cover with hot liquid to 1/2-inch from top. Adjust jar lids.

Tips

Continued from Page C1 or pickles, acidity may have been reduced by the mold. This could lead to growth of spoilage or botulism-causing bacteria. Discard.

Check the seal. The lid should be concave, and should not move when pressed in the center. If the lid is bulged, it could mean spoilage bacteria are present. Lids that move are not properly sealed and could lead to spoilage, because air and bacteria can enter through the opening. Discard food from unsealed jars, or else reprocess, within 24 hours after canning.

After preserving the season's catch from the fishing hole, Parr suggests the following oven method for heating home-canned fish: Open the jar of fish and examine for spoilage. If spoilage is evident, discard the fish (without tasting) out of the reach of pets. Wash the lid before discarding.

Insert a meat thermometer upright into the center of the jar. The tip should be at the approximate center of the fish. Cover the jar loosely with foil, and place in an oven, preheated to 350 degrees. Remove the jar from the oven when the thermometer registers 185 degrees F. — about 30-35 minutes will be needed.

Let the jar stand at room temperature for about 30 minutes, to allow the temperature to become uniform throughout. By using a thermometer to determine the temperature of the fish, the treatment is equivalent to boiling. Serve the fish hot; or refrigerate immediately for later use.

Preserves

- Continued from Page C1
- 1/4 cup white wine vinegar
 - 2 tablespoons lemon juice
 - 2 tablespoons prepared mustard
 - 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce

Carefully pack into hot jars, leaving 1/4-inch head space. Remove air bubbles with a non-metallic spatula. Adjust caps.

- SPICED PEARS IN RUM RAISIN SYRUP
- 7 to 8 pounds pears

- 2 cups water
- 1 cup apricot preserves

maining ingredients in a large saucepot, except rum; simmer about 15 minutes. Drain and rinse pears. Pack pears in water about 6 minutes, cooking one layer at a time. Pack pears into hot jars, leaving 1/4-inch head space. Remove from heat. Stir reserved pineapple tidbits and rum into syrup. Carefully ladle syrup over pears, leaving 1/4-inch head space.  directors, "and had her cans filled and processed in less than an hour."
 In the back are six large pressure cookers that stand alone — and bright. As many as 100 cans — and sometimes more depending on their size — can be processed at one time in one canner. The cans are loaded into metal cages and lowered into the cookers. All the processing of all the similarly packed cans is done at once instead of in "batches" as in home canning.

"We're here to help and answer questions throughout the canning process," says Bernice Couch who is in charge of the kitchen this year. She sets appointment times and runs the office of the facility which is owned by the community and run by a board of directors.

Persons who want to use the canning kitchen pay a $10 fee per year in addition to the cost of the cans needed for their processing. The kitchen is open on Tuesdays and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. and people doing large amounts of canning are scheduled in two hour intervals. Couch asks that interested persons contact her at 324-2729, or Ellen Robinson at 324-4473 to make appointments.

"We try to make things as easy as possible for people without interfering," she says. "They can prepare their food any way they wish, slicing it, halving it, snipping it, deboning it or leaving it whole, just as they would at home. We have most utensils here that folks need, and even an appliance manufacturer that sends the pulp of the fruit one way, and the skins and seeds the other. We also supply all of the salt for the canners, but sugar and other special ingredients that their own particular recipes call for, they must bring from home.

For packing all the food they process, canners have a choice between pint-sized cans at a total cost of 35 cents each which includes the can itself, the lid and the entire sealing process, or quart-sized cans which are 45 cents for fruits and fruit juices and 48 cents for low-acid vegetables and meats.

When the food has been packed in the cans to the individual's satisfaction, the cans are placed in wire baskets and taken to a steamer — a large sink structure with wooden slats on the bottom and a hinged lid — to be heated to a temperature that enables them to be sealed and taken to the pressure cookers for final processing. A trained worker takes care of all the timing, knowing the proper amounts of pressure needed to prevent botulism.

"We really get busy around here when people want to make use of their dried beans," says McHargue. "We have folks lined up waiting for their turn at the steam kettles."

 Seven very large steam-heated pots can each hold enough chili, baked beans or soup to fill 75 quart-sized cans.

"The chili and other items cooked in the kettles are heated to a high enough temperature that they can be poured into cans and processed immediately, foregoing the sink-type steamer," says Couch.

Because the kettles are so large and so much food is heated and ready at one time, the kitchen asks that two people come prepared to work together.

"People can just about everything here," says McHargue. "Fish, chicken, fruits, vegetables, juices, soup, stews, chili and even cakes and puddings."

Even though Couch does plenty of advertising on local radio stations and in newspapers, many people don't know the kitchen exists. Those who do, though, use it faithfully year after year and come from all over the Magic Valley and as far away as Mountain Home and Pocatello.

"If the need rises, we can open the kitchen on additional days," says Couch. "We also can schedule special days for wild game processing."

A unique fund-raising option is offered to interested organizations.

"Community groups can come in to process food for resale at bazaars and fairs," says Couch. "We must regulate their work from start to finish for health reasons, but other than that, they have free rein."

The kitchen also offers a booklet entitled "Big Batch Recipes," a new edition of which will be available soon. In it are recipes for spaghetti sauce, meat loafs, baked beans, chili, barbecued beef, fruit cakes, pickles and pie fillings, all calling for ingredients in quantities to boggle the mind. But, as it is so easy to process so much at one time, people take advantage of it.

Canning kitchens, once so popular, are becoming more scarce. Lower prices of canned goods in grocery stores are largely responsible, along with the availability of fresh produce all year. It's not so impressive to "put-away for the winter."

But for those who like to know exactly what they are getting, who want to regulate salt and additives in their families' diets and to process large quantities of food in cans that can be stored easily and that keep out mild ensuring a fresher product, Jerome's Community Canning Kitchen is a viable place.

Home/gardening

Treat your lawn to timely fertilizing

Fertilizing sometime between the middle of August and the first of October is one of the best favors you can do for your lawn. The immediate green-up is less important than the long term benefits which will last clear into next year.

Lawns make their greatest underground growth in the shortening days of fall. Roots go deeper and become thicker. The rhizomes or underground stems produce many new plants which make the lawn thicker. Thick lawns leave no room for weeds to grow. If you have weeds in your lawn, now is a good time to eliminate them because the grass will naturally fill in the bare spots quickly.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

ply a general purpose fertilizer at this time of year.

Another important fertilizer element in the Intermountain area is sulfur. Most of our soils are alkaline, which often limits the availability of nutrients such as iron. Because of this, many fertilizers also contain iron.

However, in the long term, sulfur reduces iron deficiencies by making the iron naturally in the soil available to the grass.

Combination fertilizer and weed killer products are also available which eliminates broadleaf weeds at the same time they are feeding the lawn. Professionals can also apply appropriate fertilizers and weed killers.

Now is not an appropriate time to feed woody plants such as trees and shrubs. It could stimulate soft new growth which might not be able to withstand the cold temperatures of winter.

However, the small amount of fertilizer received by trees growing in the lawn will not hurt them.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College.

Letters of thanks

Senior citizens center thanks all for paint job

All of the seniors at the Twin Falls Senior Citizens Federation would like to take this means to again thank the Rotary Club of Twin Falls for all their work and efforts in the cleaning and painting of our center on July 25. Their members donated many hours to this project.

We would also like to express our appreciation to those who donated paint and supplies for this project: Sears, Volco, Sherwin-Williams, Columbia Paint, Paintin' Place and Bennett's Twin Falls Glass and Paint. You were all most generous.

We are very pleased with the nice new color and the bright and clean appearance it now presents. We feel it makes a great addition to our neighborhood.

special elders of our community. Volunteerism is the vehicle that has the ability to carry the heavy load of any worthwhile project. It was "neighbor helping neighbor" that made this wonderful country great. I am happy to report that volunteerism is alive and well in Magic Valley.

Special Olympic Team booths both successful

Once again we have had two successful fund-raisers; our booth at the fair and at Gem Dandy Day.

So, again we would like to say a very special thank you to the people who helped us out.

Donna Bailey, Bailey Sign Arts, North Side News, Smith's Food King, Coca-Cola Bottling Company, Falls Brand, Eddy's Bread, and all those friends and families who helped us sell and bought our goodies. We do appreciate all the support.

Water ballet organizer thanks all for turn out

Because the people in Magic Valley made my water ballet show a big success, I want them to know without the following people my show wouldn't have had such a great turn out.

I had 36 girls perform this year and it was my 17th year. I'd like to be able to go on and hit the '20 years'.

These people made it possible; KMYT, Penny Mayne, Doug Maughn, John and Rosie Atorquin; Radio Shack; Ken and Tish; East Side Chronicle; Vicki Cowger; The Holiday Inn for giving us the use of the pool; Bev; Virgil Siasion.

Parents and my students; Randi McDermitt, Especially Shirley Schmitt, Becky Mason, Nikole Tegan, Michele Frazier.

Again Magic Valley, thank you. SANDY SUZETTE and MICHELLE TEGAN Twin Falls

 - 2 teaspoons baking powder
 - 1 1/2 teaspoons sugar
 - Salt and coarse pepper
 - 1 egg
 - 1/2 cup milk
 - 6 large basil leaves
 - Butter or six cup muffin tin. Peel the tomatoes and cut into 12 slices. Heat oven to 425 degrees. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in a large bowl.
 - Sift together the flour, cornmeal, baking powder, sugar, 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1/2 teaspoon pepper. Lightly beat the egg and mix in the milk and melted butter.
 - Pour the egg mixture in the dry ingredients and stir until all ingredients are just moistened, but still a bit lumpy. Pour into prepared muffin tin and bake in preheated oven until golden brown, about 12 minutes. Turn out onto a rack to cool for about 5 minutes.
 - Split each muffin in half and butter both sides.
 - Put a tomato slice, basil leaf and another tomato slice on the bottom half and sprinkle with salt and pepper.
 - Replace muffin top and serve warm.

boil. Simmer the mixture for 10 minutes. Add the corn kernels and simmer for another 15 minutes. Discard the corn cobs.

Stir in the cream, white pepper and salt to taste and simmer the mixture for 5 minutes.

In a blender or food processor, puree the mixture in batches and transfer the soup to a bowl. Let the soup cool and chill it covered, for at least 3 hours and up to 24 hours. In the food processor puree the basil leaves and the remaining 1/2 cup oil with salt to taste until smooth. Drizzle the soup among chilled bowls and swirl some of the basil puree into each serving. Makes about 6 cups, serving six.

Enjoy!

Delays not always fault of repairmen

DEAR ABBY: In response to both you and "Harriet in Phoenix": Harriet complained about repairmen who could not tell her whether they would come before noon or after noon, but the last straw was when the drapery cleaners told her they would pick up her draperies sometime on Thursday or Friday.

Harriet suggested that if more consumers would stand up for their rights, another field of consumer exploitation will fall. And you, Dear Abby, said, "Count me in as a charter member."

Abby, may I offer a plumbing serviceman's view of "consumer exploitation"?

It is not uncommon for a serviceman to schedule five or six service calls a day. A normal service call usually can be handled in about an hour, barring "unforeseen complications."

Here are a few "unforeseen com-

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

plaintions" that may alter his schedule:

1. Homeowner not home to unlock door.
2. Homeowner late for appointment; serviceman waits.
3. Homeowner asks for three or four additional "repairs" that were initially not mentioned. ("While you're here, will you please look at the faucet in the powder room — it's been dripping for a month.")
4. While on a routine maintenance call, serviceman gets an emergency call: "Water is running down on Mrs. Jones — five miles away. Please rush over before everything is ruined!" (Emergency calls always get priority.)

5. Truck flat tires, traffic delays, etc.

Abby, please remember that we are bringing our truck, tools, personnel and our entire business to your home, instead of asking you to bring your toilet to our shop.

In conclusion, throughout all of these above mentioned variables, it is still an indescribable feeling when at 6:30 p.m. you finally complete your last call that was scheduled for 3:30 p.m. (after missing your evening meal with your family, or a ballgame with your son) and you present the invoice with a note: "No overtime charged" and the customer will say those two magic words, "Thank you!"

— TIM FOLEY IN MUNCIE

more suggestion that was omitted: Be sure to contact potential employers yourself. Don't have Mom or Dad make the calls for you.

As a park superintendent, I receive many job inquiries from teenagers, and I can tell you that I would never consider hiring one who did not speak for him or herself.

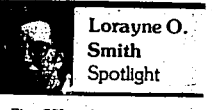

A teen-ager whose mom or dad has to make the initial call or contact either doesn't want the job very much, or he's too shy to verbalize his own thoughts. A sad case, either way.

Pan Am: Bartow fired; drugs masked

By BARRY WILNER
The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Gene Bartow resigned or was fired — as Puerto Rico's basketball coach Tuesday and at least two athletes were trying to trick the drug testing system at the Pan American Games.

U.S. sailors, meanwhile, won six gold medals but had to share one with Canada following a "bumping" dispute.

Bartow, basketball coach at Alabama-Birmingham, said he resigned for health reasons. But Joaquin Martinez Roussel, press officer for the Puerto Rican delegation, said Bartow's departure could be called a "firing."

Pan Am officials said at least two athletes were using probenecid, a medication prescribed for gout, to mask the use of steroids.

"This is new... It is alarming," said Mario Vazquez Rana, president of the Pan Am Organizing Committee. "We don't even know the harm this drug does, but it erases the other drugs that have been taken."

Athletes caught with the drug won't be punished because it isn't on the list of 3,700 substances banned in international competition.

In yachting, Canada's Donald B. MacDonald shared the gold in the 22-foot Star class with Vince Brun of San Diego. Race officials disqualified Canada's first-place finish after Brun alleged MacDonald bumped into his craft.

Canada picked up three silver medals, while Argentina got two and Brazil one. No silver medal was awarded in Brazil's class. Brazil took four bronze medals, and Cuba, Canada and Puerto Rico each won one.

The U.S. baseball team routed Aruba 16-2, and the U.S. women's softball team advanced to the gold medal game by beating Puerto Rico 4-0 on a one-hitter by Michele Granger.

The U.S. men's softball team lost to Canada, 3-0. Now the Americans had to win three straight games for a gold.

Canada's Ian Miller, riding Big Ben, got the equestrian individual jumping championship.

The United States has won a record 332 medals. The U.S. total consisted of 158 gold, 105 silver and 71 bronze medals. Canada moved back into second place at 152 medals to 148 for the Cubans, who had 60 golds to 28 for Canada.

BASKETBALL

Bartow said he quit as Puerto Rico's coach after Sunday's victory over Panama gave the team a 4-1 record.

Rice keeps up the pressure on Jennings

By FLYNN McROBERTS
Times-News writer

NEW YORK — Former Twin Falls Bruin grid star Mike Rice led the New York Jets in a nation of punts Saturday as his squad captured a 13-10 victory in the team's exhibition opener against the Philadelphia Eagles.

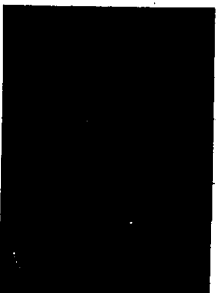

Rice, an all-Big Sky selection at punter and receiver for the University of Montana, booted four punts for 163 yards against the Eagles, including a 39-yarder in the first quarter that stopped inside the 1-yard line.

David Jennings, the 13-year veteran punter who Rice and two free agents are trying to displace, did not punt during the contest.

"Coach (Joe) Walton wanted to see what the other punters could do," Jets spokesman Brooks Thomas. "He pretty much knows what Dave can do."

Jennings' other key challenger, Tom O'Connor, hit two punts for a 61.6-yard average, including one 54 yarder, and the second free agent, Jimmy Villani, punted twice for a 38.5-yard average.

With his longest punt measured

Four punts vs. Eagles at 48 yards, Rice's 40.8-yard average on the day was enough to maintain his position as the primary threat to Jennings, according to Thomas.

Political tension means trouble at Pan Am Games

INDIANAPOLIS — When the regime from communist Cuba sends representatives to Middle America, strange occurrences are to be expected. Politics have made their inevitable progress into the athletic arena here at the 10th Pan American Games, where fists are thrown and leaflets are flung.

Cuban boxers have charged into the stands to brawl with anti-Castro demonstrators — a U.S. weightlifter who defected from Cuba several years ago was labeled a "traitor" by his former countrymen, and an American pitcher has compared Fidel Castro to University of Michigan football coach Bo Schembechler.

The latest controversy centers around a Miami dance band with ties to Cuban exiles that has been chosen to play at the closing ceremonies. Cuban officials said Monday the selection of the band, Miami Sound Machine, is an affront to their country, and threatened again Tuesday to boycott the closing.

"If the band is there, we won't be. I want to see 20 dancing hula girls," said Cuban Olympic Committee president Manuel Gonzalez Guerra. Then he hid the hula.

At least that was a rare jovial side to the nearly constant and sometimes physical debates that have taken place at the Games since they opened Aug. 9. Cuba's presence here represents the first time the country has sent a major athletic delegation to the United States since the Castro regime took over in 1959. And athletic officials and authorities of both countries have encountered many unfamiliar and difficult problems as a result.

FIDEL CASTRO
Eye of the storm

A number of Cuba-related incidents have threatened the peace of the Games as words like "propaganda," issues like civil rights and accusations of betrayal are commonplace.

Among the incidents have been the Cuban Olympic Committee president being verbally accosted in his hotel elevator the first day of competition; pickets outside the baseball park before Cuba's first game and a subsequent fight afterwards; a verbal exchange outside the boxing ring between U.S. and Cuban fighters; nearly a dozen members of the Cuban boxing team leaping into the stands Friday night — to fight — anti-Castro demonstrators; police escorting anti-Castro demonstrators from an other baseball game, and finally, a fight between U.S. and Cuban handball players Sunday night after the U.S. tied the game with one second remaining and eventually won in overtime.

In addition, Cuba has protested the presence of both Soldier of Fortune Magazine backed leaflets offering $25,000 to any Cuban defector and small index cards with local immigration service phone numbers that were quietly distributed by the Washington-based Cuban National Foundation.

But the core of the debate is the presence of the most visible protesters here, the Miami based anti-Castro group, Cuba Independent Democracy (CID).

Cuba has called the group's flags and banners "provocations," and has threatened not to tolerate them. CID, meanwhile, has charged that it was physically attacked at the boxing matches Friday night and the members' civil rights are being jeopardized.

Local authorities, who have tried to mollify both sides, have beefed up security. But tensions remain high and local "organizing" president Mark Miles said Tuesday that while Cuba and the CID delegation appear to be more cooperative after meetings with local law enforcement officials, whether they can avoid more incidents until the game concludes Sunday remains a question.

What authorities fear most is a repeat of the boxing incident. A brawl broke out Friday night, when Cuban boxers rushed into the stands and fought with three CID members, sending two to the hospital.

According to Indianapolis police, a Cuban athlete claimed he was slapped as he tried to find his seat. CID says its members were peacefully displaying a banner when Cuban boxers tried to wrestle it away from them.

In the aftermath, Cuban officials, including chief of security Armando Garcia, said the CID delegation would take matters into their own hands and respond to any more provocations.

Local authorities are in the awkward position of arbitrating between the two sides and permitting free speech.

"It's new to us, that's for sure, and we've jumped in with both feet," said Indianapolis police spokeswoman Barbara Sinclair. "The reality is that we have to find a balance that is not offensive to one and over-protective of the other. Cuba has a right to compete without harassment and the protesters have a right to speak and write and convey what they want to say. The problem is to provide that without creating a security or police state."

Progress appears to have been made. As a result of the boxing melee, Miles and chief of police Paul White met with Cuban officials warning them that any more forays into the stands would be met by a response from Indianapolis police.

But the Cubans remain on edge. On Monday, official Coronado Martinez sent a letter to Miles requesting a meeting to discuss security and Cuban Olympic Committee president Guerra stated, "There is no security or guarantee for us here."

Tuesday, there were more meetings and the organizing committee in Indianapolis has promised to work with Guirela in protecting the Cubans from harassment at athletic events, while the Cubans have promised to tell their delegation to defer to law enforcement officials in case of a problem.

Miles is also considering limiting the size and type of flags and signs that can be taken into events, although he is awaiting a legal opinion on the matter. The Indianapolis police are working with FBI security here to gather early information on plans for any more demonstrations.

"My only regret is that it was so expensive and time consuming to reach this decision."

Blazers spokesman John Lash-way said no negotiations to trade Paxon to another team were conducted during the trade dispute. He said he was unaware of any other teams that expressed interest in the 30-year-old guard.

Since the league has raised the salary cap, Paxon will be affordable to teams that could not pay his salary previously, said Bucky Buckwalter, vice president of basketball operations for the Trail Blazers.

"There's no huge rush at all," he said. "We'll just make a few calls and see what happens between now and Oct. 1."

NBA commissioner vetoes Lee-for-Paxon trade

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The trade that sent veteran guard Jim Paxon of the Portland Trail Blazers to the Cleveland Cavaliers for forward Keith Lee was voided by the NBA Tuesday because Lee flunked a Blazers physical.

Paxon's request that they would try to trade Paxon elsewhere, while the Cavaliers said the soldomplayed Lee would compete for a spot on Cleveland's roster next fall.

NBA Commissioner David Stern upheld Paxon's request to void the trade, saying he agreed with the Blazers' contention that the deal was subject to Lee and Paxon passing physicals.

The 6-foot-10 Lee was traded to the Blazers June 22 for the 6-6 veteran Paxon. Eight days later, Dr.

Robert Cook, Portland's team physician, expressed concern over knee problems that might make it impossible for the former Memphis State star to play. Lee, 24, had surgery on his right knee when he was about 16, Cook said.

"My feeling was, despite the fact that he hasn't had any catastrophic knee problems yet, the probability is for very significant knee problems," Cook said in July. "I think it would be a bad risk."

Cleveland argued that since Lee had played with the same problems in college and in two NBA seasons, the deal should be upheld. Stern, however, disagreed.

"Cleveland contended that Lee is healthy and fully capable of playing," he said in a statement issued by the NBA. "While that contention may well be true, Portland still has the right to rely on the judgment of its own physician in such matters."

"Cleveland did not present any evidence to indicate such judgment was made improperly and I am not prepared to substitute my judgment for that of the team physician," Stern said.

Cavaliers General Manager Wayne Embry said the club was disappointed with the decision and that Lee would remain in Cleveland, where he has had a reserve role.

Lee could not be located for comment Tuesday. At a news conference in July, he said rumors about his knees had dogged him throughout his NBA career.

"My only regret is that it was so expensive and time consuming to reach this decision."

Paxon, the Blazers' all-time leading scorer who is from Dayton, Ohio, declined to comment on the Paxon trade to the Portland Trail Blazers Club, where he was serving as the Portland player in the Fred Meyer Challenge golf tournament.

"I'm not talking to anyone today," he said. "I'm working today."

Blazers President Harry Glickman said the team would try to trade Paxon to another club. Paxon had asked to be traded at the end of the last season.

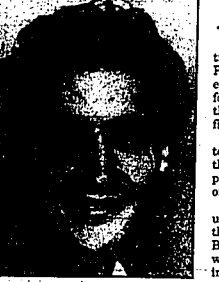

"We have felt all along that the only decision the commissioner said could reach was the one he announced Tuesday," Glickman said.

JIM PAXON
Still on block

In praise of 6-5 guards — regardless of how tall they are Just rambling around.

About the only thing left in the barrel for ball recruiting, according to College of Southern Idaho Coach Fred Trenkle, are 6-foot, 5-inch, very quick players.

But Trenkle, after spending most of the summer signing 6-5 players, is aware that there really aren't any 6-5 players in the land.

That number — 6-5 — has become the magic height now. It is considered the optimum guard height. Hence, when a coach or player in whom Trenkle is interested asked his height, he's 6-5.

That works out pretty well in some cases but, Trenkle, being 6-5 himself, has a pretty good built-in gauge.

He is finding — with very little exception — that 6-5 means something between 6-3½ and 6-4¾.

But just simply to prove to you there is no such thing as a 6-5 player, every player from 6-4½ to 6-5½ will tell you he's 6-5.

Now this fall as you become acquainted with the various new players coming into CSI, you will hear 6-5 so consistently that you will suspect even the manager is that height.

For all of you shooters who will be turning more and more to steelshot for your waterfowl pursuit, Bob Latham has come up with the perfect rangefinder for you.

In reading about steel shot, there is a constant refrain that it loses its effectiveness quite quickly after 50 yards.

Now very few people can give you an idea of where 50 yards ends, particularly against a jet blue sky without a tree or some reference frame for guidance.

But if you really want to see what 50 yards straight up look like, go to Latham Motors, get under the giant flagpole and look up.

Bob tells us the top of that pole is 146 feet, 10 inches — within a yard of the supposed steel shot range limitation.

However, Bob couldn't tell us the size of the golden ball top on the pole so we could compare that to a mallard for you. Don't bother looking at the flag. Bob says that's 30 by 60 feet.

Magic Valley's two money-winningest pros have had a pretty fair season but it hasn't been all sweetness and light.

Consider Burley assistant Tracy Frank. He went to the Utah Open last week and got into one of those situations when the morning squad one day is the afternoon squad the next and it only rains on that squad.

He had a pair of 73s and felt "like I shot lights out" considering the conditions. But the other squad didn't have any rain and Frank missed the cut.

Twin Falls' Hamblin is coming off a surge of really pushing him into the first place he played in the Wyoming Open and placed fifth. Then he and Frank took turns leading the Treasure Valley before falling back to second and third on the last day.

From Boise, Mike drove home, got up early and motored to Salt Lake City to catch a flight to St. Louis where he finished 22nd in a 54-hole tournament since he'd been ninth previous year.

The next day he failed to qualify for the Utah Open — so instead he came home, went to the Idaho Falls Country Club program and shot a five-under 67.

And Hamblin is thinking about taking some time this fall to try the four school and see if he could win a tour card. But thinking and doing is something else because the PGA charges $1,700 to simply tee it up. That covers two tries, however — $1,000 for the first one and a bargain $700. Veteran Jaworski signs contract with Miami

By The Associated Press

Ron Jaworski, the former Philadelphia Eagle quarterback who has been shopping for a team during the off-season, finally found one Tuesday when he agreed to terms with the Miami Dolphins.

RON JAWORSKI
Backup QB

Pro football

Jaworski, who said he will sign a two-year contract, becomes the third quarterback on a team that went from five to two within a week. All-Pro Dan Marino dislocated a finger on his passing hand against Chicago Sunday night following a week in which free agent Larry Doyce left camp and 12th-round draft choice Jim Karasos injured his knee.

Shula said. "Not that I don't have the confidence in Don Strock, but after what happened the other night I thought that something could happen to Strock in these next three games."

Jaworski, 36, has thrown for 27,682 yards and 176 touchdowns in his 13-year professional career and led the Eagles to the Super Bowl in 1980. He was released by the Eagles after last season, ending a 10-year stay with the club.

Marino is expected to miss the remaining three exhibition games and return for the regular-season opener on Sept. 7.

"If that happens, we'd be looking for an experienced quarterback with the season right on top of us. This way we'll bring Ron in and he'll be able to play the three preseason games," Shula said.

Jaworski was to begin practicing with the team Wednesday. Shula said the veteran quarterback should be ready to play Monday night against Denver.

Herzog says the Oilers are about $1 million apart in contract negotiations with No. 1 draft choice Alonzo Highsmith but won't trade the University of Miami running back.

Herzog said the Oilers have offered Highsmith a 4-year deal worth $2 million that includes an $800,000 signing bonus. He says Highsmith is seeking a $3 million package, although Thobert Fraley, the athlete's agent, says their proposal now is at $2.8 million.

Last year, the Oilers were unable to sign quarterback Jim Everett, their No. 1 draft pick last season and eventually traded him to the Los Angeles Rams.

Oiler starting left tackle Bruce Matthews also remains a holdout. Matthews is represented by Howard Slusher, who also held his client out of camp four years ago when Matthews was the Oilers' No. 1 draft pick.

The Lame, the Halt and the III San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh says rookie offensive linemen Harris Barton and Jeff Bregel may not be on the active roster when the regular season begins because of injuries. Barton, the 49ers' first pick, sprained his right elbow while pass-blocking during a scrimmage Monday. Bregel, a second-round pick, had arthroscopic surgery on his left knee two weeks ago, then was admitted to a hospital Saturday with an infection related to his knee surgery.

"It's very common for first-year players to have a myriad of maladies crop up," Walsh said. "I suppose that it's such a faster, harder-hitting game. They're trying to learn things while they execute them, so they're more susceptible to injury."

Ten Atlanta Falcons didn't practice Tuesday because of injuries. The list included linebacker Joel Williams, sidelined with a right toe sprain, and running back Gerald Riggs, who's suffering from a shoulder sprain. Tight end Dan Starup, who broke a finger July 27, returned to practice.

The Pittsburgh Steelers say they won't change cornerback Dwayne Woodruff's duties to compensate for his knee injury. "Hell have to play it the way it's been played, do the things we need to get done," said defensive coordinator Tony Dungy. Woodruff missed last season after tearing ligaments in his right knee Aug. 22. He said he has recovered completely from the injury.

Cuts
San Francisco waived veteran wide receiver Johnny Lam Jones, acquired July 23 in a trade with the New York Jets.

The Jets cut free agent tight end John Goode, while New England waived free agent tight end Mike Siragusa to cut its roster to 96,

Patriots, fresh from offering kicker $1.5 million, express reservations

SMITHFIELD, R.I. (AP) — Now England's stable kicking situation broke shaky Tuesday as Tony Franklin remained out of camp because of the condition of his knees, Patriots' General Manager Patrick Sullivan said.

TONY FRANKLIN
Highest paid kicker

Franklin underwent arthroscopic surgery on both knees last Feb. 9, but it's the opinion of our medical people that he did very little, if any, rehabilitation on his legs" during the off-season, Sullivan said.

Franklin's agent, agreed Saturday on a four-year contract reportedly worth $1.5 million, that would make Franklin the highest-paid kicker in NFL history.

AL: Molitor stretches hit streak to 33 games

CLEVELAND (AP) — Pat Tabler has no idea why he's been so successful when he hits with the bases loaded.

"You just stay positive and you get lucky," Tabler said Tuesday night after he drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single in the 12th, giving the Cleveland Indians a 9-8 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Tabler is now 6-for-7 with 10 RBI in bases-loaded situations this year, and 29-for-63 with 67 RBI in his career.

Tabler's hitting spoiled a two-hit night for Paul Molitor, who extended his hitting streak to 33 games. The streak is the longest in the majors since Pete Rose hit in 44 straight for Cincinnati in 1978 and the longest in the American League since Dom DiMaggio hit in 34 straight for Boston in 1949.

"It's definitely a lot easier to talk about when you win," Molitor said. "In a game tonight, where we gave away a 7-1 lead, then had chances to win, it's a lot harder to matter what you do personally, it takes away from the feeling."

Ray Burris, 1-2, Milwaukee's sixth pitcher, took the loss when Tabler's weak bloop to right slipped out of the glove of diving right fielder Glen Bragg, scoring Carmen Castillo.

"I was watching him all the way. I thought he was going to catch it," Tabler said.

Castillo reached first when Milwaukee third baseman Ernest Rife bobbled his grounder with one out in the 12th.

Baseball

Chris Bando singled Castillo to third and Junior Noboa was walked intentionally to load the bases. One out later, Tabler dropped in the winning hit.

John Farrell, 1-0, got the victory in his major-league debut, allowing two hits but no runs in the 12th.

Bando and Tabler drove in two runs each during the seven-run sixth inning that put the Indians ahead 8-7. Julio Franco scored the go-ahead run on a wild pitch from reliever Chuck Crim to cap the scoring in the sixth as the Indians overcame a 7-1 deficit.

But Milwaukee tied it 8-8 in the eighth on a pinch double by Rick Manning, a sacrifice bunt by Paul Molitor and Robin Yount's sacrifice fly.

The Brewers had scored three runs in the top of the sixth with the help of an infield single from Molitor, who extended his hitting streak to 33 games.

Molitor went 0-for-3 against Cleveland starter Darryl Kile, but then beat out a hit to Franco at short off reliever Jamie Easterly in the sixth. He also singled off Farrell in the 12th.

Oakland 1

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — George Bell hit a two-run homer with two outs in the eighth inning and Dave Stieb pitched a three-hitter for eight innings as the Toronto Blue Jays stayed in first place in the American League East with a 2-1 victory over the Oakland Athletics Tuesday night.

Stieb, 13-5, who has won seven straight decisions, trailed 1-0 until Bell connected for his 37th homer as the Blue Jays retained their half-game lead over Detroit, which beat Minnesota 11-2.

Stieb struck out seven and walked four before Tom Henke relieved for his club-record 28th save and 15th in his last 15 save opportunities. Henke struck out Mark McGwire with one out and a runner on third, then retired Dwayne Murphy on a grounder to end the game.

Bell's homer off Dennis Eckersley, 6-6, the A's fourth pitcher, raised his league-leading RBI total to 102.

Cecil Fielder led off the eighth with a pinch-hit single off Dave Leipziger, who struck out Lloyd Moseby and then was relieved by Eckersley. Pinch-hitter Rick Leach struck out before Bell homered to left on the first pitch.

Detroit 11

Minnesota 2

DETROIT (AP) — Larry Herndon knocked in five runs with two homers and Jack Morris checked Minnesota at three hits for seven innings as the Detroit Tigers beat Minnesota 11-2 Tuesday night, snapping the Twins' four-game winning streak.

Herndon hit a three-run homer and Tom Brookens a two-run shot to highlight Detroit's six-run first inning. Herndon, who was 3-for-3, also had a two-run homer, his eighth, keying a four-run fourth inning.

It was Herndon's first two-homer game since Sept. 28, 1982 at Baltimore, and the first time a Tiger had five RBI in one game this season.

Morris, 14-6, struck out seven and walked one, improving his career record to 18-5 against the Twins. His only mistakes were solo homers by Randy Bush in the third inning and Roy Smalley Jr. in the seventh — hiking Morris' total to 92 home runs this year. Eric King pitched the last two innings.

The Tigers hammered Minnesota starter Steve Carlton, 6-12, for nine runs on 11 hits in three-plus innings.

Texas 3

Kansas City 1

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Larry Parrish's two-run homer over the right field fence with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning Tuesday night gave the Texas Rangers a 3-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Parrish's 26th homer of the year came off Mark Gubieza, 9-13, after Pete O'Brien had tied the game with a double following a walk to Ruben Sierra.

Boston 14

Chicago 8

CHICAGO (AP) — Spike Owen and Marty Barrett had four hits apiece and Ellis Burks and Dwight Evans each had three, leading a 20-hit attack that gave the Boston Red Sox a 14-8 victory over the Chicago White Sox Tuesday night.

Twins left fielder Tom Brunaneky opened the door to the Tigers' six-run first inning when he topped Lou Whitaker's leadoff fly ball for a two-base error. Bill Madlock singled Whitaker home, then Kirk Gibson bunted for a single and Herndon hit a one-out shot into the right field seats.

Baltimore 4

California 1

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Terry Kennedy drove in two runs with his 15th homer and a single and Ken Dixon and John Habyan combined on a four-hit Tuesday night as the Baltimore Orioles beat the California Angels 4-1.

Dixon, 6-8, blanked the Angels on three hits for five innings before leaving with a stiff shoulder. John Habyan pitched the last four innings for his first major-league save despite losing the shutout when Tim Stoddard, 4-2, was the winner, Doug DeCinces led off the eighth inning with his 14th homer, the only hit Habyan allowed.

New York 4

Seattle 3

SEATTLE (AP) — Mike Pagliarulo's leadoff home run in the ninth inning broke a 2-2 tie and the New York Yankees went on to a 3-2 victory over Seattle Tuesday night, the fifth consecutive loss for the Mariners.

Bill Wilkinson, 2-3, entered the game with two outs in the seventh and ended a New York threat by getting Don Mattingly to fly out. Wilkinson then retired the side in the eighth before giving up Pagliarulo's 26th homer, which just cleared the fence in left.

Mattingly hit his second RBI single of the game in the ninth to give the Yankees a needed insurance run.

Tim Lincecum, 4-2, was the winner, going 2 1/3 innings.

NL: Ryan, Smith toss 3-hitter vs. Cardinals

HOUSTON (AP) — Nolan Ryan's first victory in more than two months should serve as a warning to the rest of the National League West.

"This is an omen, the rest of the National League West better look out for the Astros. We've turned it around," Ryan said after ending his eight-game losing streak in leading the Astros past the St. Louis Cardinals 4-0 Tuesday night.

Ryan and Dave Smith combined on a three-hitter as Houston posted its 11th game of division co-leaders Cincinnati and San Francisco.

Ryan, 5-13, won for the first time since June 12 and ended a losing skid that matched the longest of his career. Ryan gave up three hits in seven innings and walked two.

Ryan struck out nine, raising his all-time career total to 4,467 and increasing his season total to 190, one behind teammate Mike Scott for the league lead.

Despite his losing streak, Ryan has been pitching well. A lack of run support has doomed him more than his own pitching.

"I didn't worry about it (the losing streak) that much. It was just one of those things that sooner or later was going to come," Ryan said. "I think the guys felt much worse about it than I did."

"You can't get too high or too low in your career and that's the kind of attitude that helps you weather bad times like this," Ryan said.

Smith finished for his 20th save. He said this save meant more than most.

"This was the most pumped up for a regular season game I've ever been in my career," Smith said. "I knew how bad he (Ryan) needed it, and how personally tough it has been on him."

Alan Ashby homered and drove in three runs in sending St. Louis to its third consecutive loss.

Ashby hit a two-run homer in the fourth off Danny Cox, 8-4. He connected after a double by Bill Doran and tied a career high with his 12th home run.

The Astros added a run in the seventh when Clement Davis led off with a double, advanced on a grounder and scored on Craig Reynolds' single. Ashby hit an RBI single in the eighth.

19th, broke a 2-2 tie in the third inning. The three runs batted in gave Johnson a team record for third baseman with 80, one more than Richie Hebner's 79 in 1979.

Touffel hit his 10th homer leading off the fourth and McReynolds connected for his 22nd with two outs in the sixth.

Allee Hammaker, 8-9, took the loss. He allowed five runs on eight hits in two-plus innings.

Pittsburgh 7

Cincinnati 4

CINCINNATI (AP) — Barry Bonds hit two home runs and John Cangelosi's pinch-homer broke a seventh-inning tie Tuesday night as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Cincinnati Reds 7-4.

Cangelosi's second homer of the season gave Pittsburgh a 5-4 lead against Rob Murphy, 6-4. Bonds and Bobby Bonilla, who hit two doubles and drove in three runs, both homered in the ninth.

Bob Walk, 5-1, gave up four runs, two of them earned, on seven hits in six innings. Jim Gott pitched the final inning for his third save.

Nick Esasky homered for Cincinnati, his fourth in three games.

The Pirates scored twice in the first inning. Andy Van Slyke and Johnny Ray singled and Bonilla hit a two-run double.

Cincinnati made it 2-2 in its half of the first. Buddy Bell and Eric Davis singled, shortstop Al Pedrique made an error and Kal Daniels had an RBI groundout. Dave Parker walked and scored on Esasky's single in the fourth for a 3-2 lead.

Bonds hit a two-run homer in the fifth off Bill Gullickson. Esasky tied it 4-4 with his 17th homer in the sixth.

Bonilla hit his 11th home run and Bonds his 19th in the ninth off Murphy.

New York 7

San Francisco 2

NEW YORK (AP) — Howard Johnson, Tim Lincecum and Kevin McReynolds each homered Tuesday night, leading Dwight Gooden and the New York Mets over the San Francisco Giants 7-2.

Gooden, 10-6, gave up two runs, one of them earned, on six hits in seven innings. He hit an RBI single in the second inning that tied the score 2-2.

Chicago 5

ATLANTA (AP) — Dion James homered and drove in four runs Tuesday night as the Atlanta Braves snapped a five-game losing streak with a 9-5 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

James, whose RBI forecourt broke a 5-5 tie in the sixth inning, hit a three-run homer in the eighth. James also had a leadoff homer in the first inning that sparked a four-run outburst.

San Diego 9

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Benito Santiago hit two homers and John Kruk drove in five runs, including a two-run single in the 11th inning Tuesday night as the San Diego Padres beat the Philadelphia Phillies 9-4.

"I just don't feel good," Bartow said from Birmingham. "I've had a tough of the flu. I told them that Stany and I had told them that after the Brazil game and they told me just get through the week."

Martinez said assistant coach Armando Torres would take over as Puerto Rico plays the United States in the semifinals. He described Torres as "a fiery coach and Bartow was a calm coach. Torres will psych up our players more."

Bartow's hiring brought criticism from other Puerto Rican coaches who were upset that an American was named coach of the team. But Bartow said he was unaware of any criticism of his coaching.

"Our only loss was to Brazil and that was by one point with a controversial ending," said Bartow, who led UCLA and Memphis State to the Final Four and coached the 1972 Puerto Rican Olympic team. "Two or three of the players were not getting the minutes they thought and might have been unhappy. But that happens with an all-star team."
