Bureaucrat given look at ranching

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

PICABO — In an effort to inject a little more "bit overall" philosophy in Washington, the Food Producers of Idaho acquired a government scientist around a southern Idaho ranch and food plant on Friday, says Jerome rancher Tom Prescott, who served as guide.

The rancher and scientist-bureaucrat were hoping to learn a little more about each other in the encounter.

"I am not politically influential but I can tell what's going on in the bowels of government," said Bart Suhre, an analytical chemist with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's pesticides division.

Suhre, whose specialty is the analysis of pesticide residues, says the impact of ranching and herbicides on Silver Creek near Picabo. He tramped through a national forest near Fairfield to see how the U.S. Forest Service applies herbicides. He says he was impressed with the techniques used. Suhre even visited the Ward's Cheese factory in Richfield.

In the past, Congressional staff members have visited annually to gather the Idaho point of view. This trip took the process a step further by bringing a staff member of an agency that has to put environmental regulations into effect.

The Tuesday-to-Friday trip was for by the Idaho Food Producers, an umbrella organization, for 30 different commodity groups, including the Idaho Cattle

Association. When Suhre gets back to Washington he will brief his colleagues on what he saw in the Gem State. At every livestock meeting there is concern about the "hysteria" in Washington on destruction of river and stream habitat, says Prescott.

"I don't want livestock to be held responsible for all of it," he says.

Suhre and Prescott joined Bud Purdy of Picabo Livestock for a tour of Purdy's spread, which serves as a backdrop in the Marlboro ads.

"The world-famous Silver Creek trout stream winds through the lush grasses of the Purdy ranch. His cattle graze near Silver Creek. Prescott says he was trying to show how properly managed stream habitat and ranching can co-exist.

Food, energy price declines tame inflation

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A dip in food costs and moderating energy prices held inflation at the retail level to a tame 0.2 percent increase in July, its best performance this year, the government reported Friday.

The rise in the Labor Department's consumer price index was half the 0.4 percent increase posted in June. Analysts cited the report as further evidence that inflation is calming again, at least temporarily, after a spurt in the first half of the year.

It was the lowest one-month rate since a similar 0.2 percent increase last December.

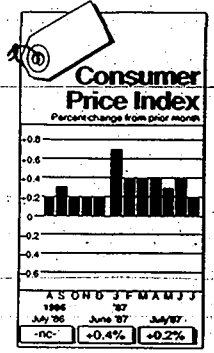

Food and beverage prices, which had increased 0.7 percent in June, did a turnaround and fell 0.2 percent in July, paced by a 0.5 percent drop in grocery prices. Energy prices were up a moderate 0.5 percent after rising 1.5 percent in June.

In another report, the Commerce Department said that the national economy grew at a modest annual rate of 2.3 percent from April to June.

That represents a downward revision from the 2.6 percent increase in the gross national product for the same quarter reported initially. The revision was almost entirely due to an unanticipated worsening of the U.S. trade deficit in June.

Economists said the reports demonstrate that inflation is low and the economy weak, making it unlikely that the Federal Reserve will act at this time to tighten credit, such as raising key interest rates, in an effort to prevent further declines in the value of the dollar.

"The outlook for the economy is for slow growth, not fast growth and not no-growth, not a recession," said

Consumer Price Index
Percent change from prior month

Donald Straszheim, chief economist for Merrill Lynch. Straszheim said the July inflation figure was "good news, but I don't think it is time to do much celebrating." He said a further weakening of the dollar on foreign exchange markets will inevitably contribute to higher import prices and more inflation in the months to come.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., deputy White House press secretary Leslye Arush said about the inflation figures, "The inflation rate increases in consumer and producer prices in July provide further evidence that inflation is returning to the 4 percent pace reported during the first three years... of the expansion."

Stage set for Utah slayer's execution

The Associated Press

POINT OF THE MOUNTAIN, Utah — The clemency plea of "Hi-Fi killer" Pierre Dale Selby was denied Friday by the state Board of Pardon, setting the stage for Utah's first execution in a decade.

Following an extraordinary intervention, Selby will be executed by lethal injection shortly after 1 a. m. Friday at Utah State Prison for the torture-murders of three people during a 1974 robbery.

The board's 3-0 decision not to commute Selby's sentence to life in prison came a week after the inmate told the panel he has found God "on death row" and isn't the same man who committed what prosecutors call the most heinous crime in the state's history.

Board Chairwoman Victoria Palacios told Selby that while he had endured a stressful childhood and undertaken sincere efforts at rehabilitation, the aggravating nature of his crimes outweighed all mitigating factors.

PIERRE DALE SELBY
Clemency plea denied

"In sum, the board unanimously finds that the petitioner has not met the burden required of him; the petition for commutation is denied," Palacios said.

Moments later, outside the prison hearing room, she wept.

Selby, 34, showed no emotion as the decision was read. Then he smiled slightly as he pressed the arm of an attorney seated next to him and was hustled back to the maximum-security cell that is some 200 yards from the execution chamber in a new prison warehouse.

Later, Selby told Warden Jerry Cook that he planned to fast the 48 hours before his execution. He also added the names of Julia and Peter Vernon, members of the Central Seventh-day Adventist Church to which Selby belongs, to the list of witnesses he wants at the execution, said Department of Corrections spokesman Juan Benavidez.

Earlier he had asked prison officials to invite the church's pastor, the Rev. Roy Fernandez, to be present. Benavidez said Selby also indicated he did not wish to donate any of his organs for transplant, but asked that all his personal possessions go to Fernandez.

Selby's would be the first execution in Utah since 1977 when Gary Gilmore was put by a firing squad at the prison, breaking a 10-year national moratorium on capital punishment. Selby, who could have chosen the same method of execution, instead would be the first inmate in the state to die by lethal injection.

Selby was an airman from Brooklyn, N.Y., stationed at Hill Air Force Base near Ogden when, on the night of April 22, 1974, he tortured five people during a four-hour robbery at the Ogden H.E.C. Shop.

The victims were forced to drink liquid drain cleaner before being shot in the head. Three died. One of the two survivors had a pen kicked

White House willing to talk with Iranians

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, whose relations with Iran have long been frigid, said Friday that officials would be willing to meet Iran's deputy foreign minister next week to talk about U.S. hostages and the Persian Gulf crisis, if Iran asks for a meeting.

In a meeting, top officials would be the first high-level discussion — except for the secret talks during the Iran-Contra affair — since early 1981 when the two countries arranged the release of Americans held hostage in Tehran for 444 days.

The Iranian official, Mohammed Jawad Larjani, is scheduled to be in New York on Monday to attend a United Nations disarmament conference and to meet with officials of the world body.

Asked at the State Department if U.S. officials would also hold talks with Larjani, Deputy Spokesman Phyllis Oakley said, "We are not aware of any such meeting being planned but would be prepared to meet should the deputy foreign minister so desire."

As for possible topics, she said, "What we are talking about are serious issues we're talking about the aggression of Iran against its neighbors, the continuation of the war, the support for terrorism."

Iran has acknowledged having influence with groups claiming responsibility for the abduction of eight Americans still missing in Lebanon, and Mrs. Oakley said a meeting with Larjani could include discussion of the captives "in a general way."

She repeated U.S. policy against negotiations for release of hostages. That policy, she said, calls for "no deals, direct, indirect, under the table, around the thing, any way you want to say it: no deals."

As has become clear in the Iran-Contra hearing, the Reagan administration conducted secret talks with Iranians in 1985 and 1986 and sold arms to that country in an effort to win the release of the hostages and to build "better relations with some Iranian leaders."

President Reagan has barred further arms sales but has said the United States would be willing to talk with the Iranians in an effort to get them to moderate their policies.

Mrs. Oakley, who called a meeting with Larjani "a hypothetical issue, said the United States had not decided who would be its representative if such talks were held, but she suggested that Richard W. Murphy, the assistant secretary of state for Near East affairs, would be the logical choice.

Theories about cause of crash still in dispute

The Associated Press

ROMULUS, Mich. — Lingering uncertainty for some families of 156 victims in the nation's second-worst disaster since Friday with release of a corner's list of identified victims, but theories about the cause of the crash remained in dispute.

The Wayne County Medical Examiner's office said its list included 147 passengers and crew members aboard Northwest Airlines Flight 255 and two victims on the ground.

Names of other victims confirmed by family members raised the total to 156, all but two of them aboard Northwest Flight 255. Authorities have said they believe up to 156 people were killed in Sunday's crash at Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

Northwest has said that 156 people were aboard the flight, and authorities do not know how many other people were killed due to number of unidentified body parts they have. Northwest has said it will not release a list of the passengers.

A 4-year-old girl was the lone survivor. She remained hospitalized, in American serious but improving condition Friday.

Meanwhile, the National Transportation Safety Board began winding down its on-site investigation with the cause of the crash undetermined. The investigation team planned to stay in Detroit for three to four more days, a spokesman said. The investigation concerns whether the plane's flaps and slats, panels along the leading and trailing edges of the wing that help provide lift during take off, had been extended.

Investigators said they had yet to determine why the panels were positioned at the time of the crash. Two witnesses have said they were extended as it was taking off, contradicting indications in one of the plane's "black boxes" that that was never done.

One of the top investigators, NTSB board member John Lauber, said Thursday after returning to Washington that the co-pilot of a Northwest plane awaiting takeoff "was very positive" the doomed jet's flaps were in the proper position.

And Raymond Peller, a Romulus truck driver and licensed private pilot who was watching air traffic near Flight 255's runway, said, "The flaps were down when they were in front of me and went up in the air."

ABC News quoted unnamed sources Friday as saying investigators were checking to see if the crew intentionally disabled a warning system that would have indicated that the flaps were not in the proper position.

The system had gone off in the past when there was no actual problem, ABC said.

Iran has acknowledged having influence with groups claiming responsibility for the abduction of eight Americans still missing in Lebanon, and Mrs. Oakley said a meeting with Larjani could include discussion of the captives "in a general way."

She repeated U.S. policy against negotiations for release of hostages. That policy, she said, calls for "no deals, direct, indirect, under the table, around the thing, any way you want to say it: no deals."

Court-martial convicts Marine Lonetree of spying charges

The Associated Press

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — Sgt. Clayton Lonetree, the first Marine ever court-martialed for spying, was convicted Friday of passing secrets to the KGB after he fell in love with a Soviet woman while a guard at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

Lonetree faces life in prison on the 13 counts, but defense lawyers said they would appeal.

The eight officers on the jury agreed by at least a two-thirds vote on the charges of espionage, conspiracy to commit espionage, failure to report contacts and disclosing secrets to the KGB after he fell in love with a Soviet woman while a guard at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

Lonetree was said to have become involved in spying after falling in love with a Soviet translator, Violeta Sanni. The defense contended that he disclosed nothing of value to the Soviets but gave them non-vital secrets so he could string them along as a free-lance double agent.

The jury got the case after the defense rested without calling a witness and after the prosecutor, Marine Maj. David L. Beck, said Lonetree sold out "to a nation that has since the 1950s declared our nation to be public enemy No. 1."

"We shall appeal and we shall fight this to the end and we hope in the end justice will prevail," said defense attorney William Kunster.

Kunster had argued that the case against the 29-year-old Indian from Saint Paul, Minn., was not that cut and dried.

"It's a very complex case," Kunster said. He had predicted conviction on four charges of failing to report contacts with the Soviets.

Kunster said Lonetree took the verdict better than he and Staffid did.

"I just put my arms around him and he was shaking but he was like a Marine. He took it and he took it well."

Lonetree was silent as he was led out of the military courtroom to a van that took him back to the Quantico Marine Base brig.

Before the jury got the case, the judge, Navy Capt. Philip F. Roberts, turned down a motion for a mistrial as well as requests to have the 13 charges against Lonetree reduced.

Saudi Arabia set to provide landing sites for U.S. planes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saudi Arabia has agreed to provide expanded landing rights and refueling support for U.S. aircraft in the Persian Gulf, The Washington Post reported in Saturday's edition.

The Post said the Saudis, previously unwilling to extend landing rights to U.S. combat planes, will allow carrier-based jet fighters and amphibious planes to land for refueling and other logistical aid under what sources called "emergency" use in case of need conditions.

The newspaper, quoting unidentified U.S. officials and diplomatic sources, said the circumstances under which the ban on combat aircraft will be relaxed are being kept vague and are likely to be decided on a case-by-case basis.

One U.S. official was quoted as saying the situation is "more likely described as an understanding rather than a concrete agreement in the sense of a document with signatures. It is far too explicit about these arrangements, they are likely to disappear."

The agreement, however, goes beyond the current arrangement under which four U.S. A-7C planes and three aerial tankers have operated from Riyadh since 1980.

Sources told the Post the change in attitude appears to have been prompted by recent events such as the rioting by Iranian pilgrims at Mecca inside Saudi Arabia and the increased number of mines, apparently laid by Iran, found in Gulf waters.

The sources said these incidents have made the Gulf states increasingly aware that their efforts to mollify Iran through appeasement and keeping the United States at arms length are not succeeding.

Earlier this week, the Reagan administration said it was putting together a new U.S. arms package for Saudi Arabia worth about $1 billion. While no final decision has been made, the administration stressed that it felt the two countries had "a longstanding and important security relationship."

The Pentagon has sought expanded landing rights in the Gulf to bolster its protection of the Kuwaiti coast operation. Saudi Arabia and Kuwait have appeared less than cooperative on that issue, although the Post said Kuwait may also offer refueling aid for U.S. planes involved in the escort operation. The newspaper said its sources, however, were not sure an understanding had yet been reached with Kuwait.

A Pentagon spokesman, Maj. Greg McGuckin, said late Friday he had no comment on the Post report.

Earlier Friday, Pentagon officials said the amphibious landing ship USS Raleigh had cleared the Suez Canal and began the final leg of its journey to the Persian Gulf bearing a cargo of four small mine-sweeping boats.

The progress report came as the Defense Department announced that a fourth convoy of Kuwaiti oil tankers had successfully traversed the Persian Gulf and arrived in Kuwait waters. It also confirmed news accounts that six larger mine-sweeping ships were being dispatched to the Gulf.

Officials, citing a news blackout ordered by Defense Secretary Casper W. Weinberger, refused to say when the next convoy would leave Kuwait.

In another development, the Pentagon announced it was drawing all U.S. military units operating in and around the Persian Gulf under a new "Joint Task Force Middle East" and installing a two-star Navy admiral as the on-scene commander.

Rear Adm. Dennis M. Brooks, 52, who commanded the Navy's Carrier Group Five in the Philippines, was named to head the task force.

Rebels agree to peace talks

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Nicaraguan rebel leaders on Friday approved a Salvadoran proposal that they and insurgents in El Salvador hold separate but simultaneous peace talks with the governments they oppose.

Salvadoran rebels previously agreed to the proposal.

But the leaders of the Nicaraguan rebels, known as Contras, set the condition that they would not lay down their arms until Nicaragua's left-wing Sandinista government is on an "irreversible path to democracy."

The United States supports the Contras and also backs the Salvadoran government in its battle against leftist guerrillas.

Six Contra leaders announced their decision after meeting for five hours with Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte, who suggested last week that the separate Nicaraguan and Salvadoran peace talks begin Sept. 15.

"We are disposed to talk and to sit down at a negotiation table and we have accepted the peace plan (proposed by the five Central American governments), but until Nicaragua is on an irreversible path to democracy we aren't ready to have our people turn in their weapons and expose themselves to another betrayal by the Sandinistas," said Pedro Joaquín Chamorro, one of the Contra leaders, at a news conference.

Maria Auzeena Ferrey, also a member of the Contra Directorate, read a statement from the steps of the presidential palace saying, "We state our political goodwill to begin discussions directly with the Sandinista regime that could lead to a cease-fire."

But when she was asked why the Contras would not disarm, she said:

into his ear by Selby, who also kept 19-year-old Michelle Analey.

William Andrews, 32, a fellow airman from Jonesboro, La., also was convicted and sentenced to death for the murders, although his only part in the actual slayings was pouring the Drano for the victims.

Andrews appeals trial Selby's by about six months.

It was during the robbery, Selby had ample time to weigh his actions and preserve his victims' lives. Selby said he was high on beer, marijuana and Valium at the time.

"The board was unimpressed by the petitioner's points... claiming diminished capacity. Of greater significance was the time involved in the crime, during which he could have reconsidered his actions," Palacios said.

Defense attorney Gil Athay said he would study the opinion and decide over the weekend whether he would appeal to stop the execution.

Utah Attorney General David Wilkinson said he has 12 lawyers standing by to fight any defense action.

Athay said the board, like the courts which have heard his appeals, had turned a deaf ear to Selby's plea.

In their seven-page written decision, Palacios and board members Gary Webster and Paul Boyden said the brutal nature of the crime could not be ignored.

"That the victims were tortured, while not specifically enumerated in the statute as an aggravating circumstance at the time of the crime, certainly justified the use of the word 'heinous.' The net result was that a large number of people were victimized, three were killed and two suffered permanent physical and emotional injury," they wrote.

The actual firing only at the store's basement took 30 minutes, the board pointed out, adding, "Such leisure and deliberateness lend themselves to the interpretation that Mr. Selby did not find the events distasteful."

In his first public recounting of the crime, Selby told the board last week that he began firing only after one of his victims, Carol Nalbitt, 62, called him a "godless niggar."

However, survivor Orren Walker, whose son Stanley, 20, was killed, told the panel Mrs. Nalbitt's mouth was taped and she said nothing.

Today's weather

We could see a few showers develop

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding:

Today mostly sunny. Slight chance of a late afternoon thundershower. Winds S to 15 mph. High 85 to 90. Tonight and Sunday partly cloudy. Chance of afternoon or evening thundershowers. Lows in the 50s. High 84 to 89.

Camas Prairie and Wood River Valley:

Today and Sunday mostly sunny days and fair at night. Slight chance of an afternoon or evening thundershower. High 75 to 85. Lows Saturday night in the low to middle 40s.

Northern Utah and Nevada:

Utah: Variable cloudiness through Sunday with scattered mainly afternoon and early nighttime showers and thundershowers. Clear to partly cloudy near any thundershowers. Lows in the 50s through mid-60s. High in the 80s.

Nevada: Partly cloudy today with isolated afternoon and evening thundershowers. Tonight, mostly sunny with isolated afternoon thundershowers sunny. Overnights lows in the 40s to mid-50s. High in the low 50s to 60s.

Summary:

Heavy thundershowers occurred over the southeast late Friday with reports of heavy rain, small hail and gusty winds to 40 mph near Milad, the National Weather Service said.

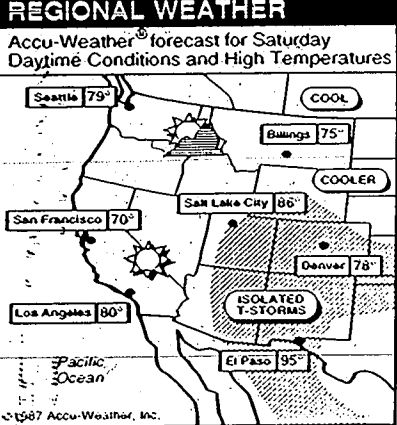

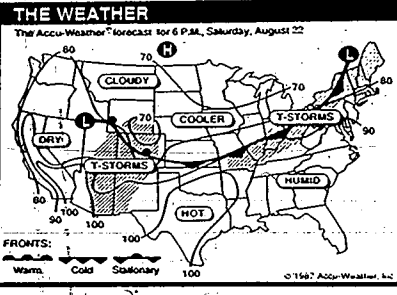

Lows Friday morning were mostly in the 40s to 50s in the upper 40s to mid-50s. The temperature range from 29 degrees at Bovill to a very mild 64 degrees at Jerome. Most highs were mostly in the 70s with low to mid 80s over the southeast.

The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 90 degrees at Caldwell and Payette, while Stanley again reported the coldest at 26 degrees.

The pollen count in Twin Falls Friday was 214 particles per cubic meter of air.

The agricultural outlook for Southern Idaho conditions for harvesting and drying will be excellent in the west and mainly good in the east today through Wednesday. No rainfall is expected in the west and only isolated light amounts will fall in the east. Irrigation demands will be near normal. Winds for spraying will be light and variable nights and mornings and mainly westerly around 10 mph afternoon today and Sunday.

The extended forecast for Southern Idaho — Monday through Wednesday, fair except isolated afternoon and evening thundershowers over the eastern mountains. Highs in the 80s. Lows in the upper 40s to mid-50s.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 109 degrees at Laughlin, Nev., Palm Springs, Calif., and Bullhead City, Ariz. The lowest was 37 degrees at Kalispell, Mont., and Truckee, Calif.

ver Creek for 100 years and Purdy has worked by the stream for half that time. He said the fish aren't as large as they used to be but seem more numerous. There are a lot of two and three pound trout and several five-pound German Brown trout, Purdy says.

In some areas, Purdy has erected electric fences to keep the cattle 10 to 15 feet from the Silver Creek. Whether this fence goes up, depends on whether the livestock manager to much use of the banks, he says. Bank erosion can add silt to the stream.

Purdy says he is conscious of the importance of keeping grass sections by the banks. They harbor the insects trout need to survive. He says his son is always after him to do more to protect the creek.

"I think we're all getting conscious of the creek. We're close to this way of life. I don't want to do anything to degrade the fish," says Purdy.

But the scientist sees something different from the rancher when he looks at Silver Creek.

"My real concern with something like this is runoff. I wouldn't want to see aerial (pesticide) applicators," says Saurh. He says he would be concerned about a mist of pesticides spreading over the creek.

Purdy says he has been doing some limited spraying with 2,4-D and Tordon to rid the range of Canadian thistle.

When Purdy says he sees no change in the water quality of Silver Creek, Saurh jokes that Purdy may be right so long as no one has the data to disprove him.

At lunch Saurh says the key question is how to weigh whether Silver Creek's water quality is better or worse. Scientists have to decide whether to look at the fish or the density of population, a benchmark of water quality, he says.

Saurh says EPA is discovering that unraveling environmental problems is so complicated that the agency is staging a back-to-the-basics movement.

Instead of relying on people with general environmental knowledge, the agency is depending more on experts in various disciplines such as chemistry and toxicology. This way each can apply specialized knowledge to the task, he says.

Former campaign manager says Hart might re-enter race

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gary Hart's former campaign manager on Friday fueled speculation that the one-time Democratic front-runner would re-enter the race for the 1988 presidential nomination, even though Hart relayed word through aides that "I don't have any intention of becoming a candidate."

Hart was quoted by a radio reporter in Ireland as saying on Thursday night that he had no intention of running, and then saying on Friday morning that he "will neither confirm nor deny" the claim.

Hart was the front-runner for the nomination until May 8 when he abandoned the race amid reports that he had been involved with Miami actress Donna Rice.

The suggestion that Hart might re-enter the campaign — as a long shot with a low-budget campaign — came from former campaign manager Bill Dixon, who offered his prediction Thursday in a radio interview in Madison, Wis., and repeated it in an interview with The Associated Press the following morning.

"I think it's clearly, perhaps even probable" he will be a candidate, said Dixon.

"Yes, I believe his candidacy is likely," said Dixon.

But another aide, Bill Shore, said that Hart told him in a trans-Atlantic telephone conversation late Thursday night that he was "very comfortable with my decision to withdraw."

Shore quoted Hart as saying, "Oh, no, no, no. You should be unambiguous with people who ask. I'm not a candidate and I don't have any intention of becoming a candidate."

Shore said Dixon spoke without having first talked with the former senator from Colorado, who was vacationing in Ireland with his son John.

Shore denied a report the former senator was cutting short his Irish vacation to return home because of the reports. Asked about Irish radio reports that Hart had left Europe, he said Hart had merely moved out of his vacation cottage to get away from the disturbance of the telephone.

Hart's swift political downfall last spring, barely a month after he formally entered the campaign, stunned the political community. His re-entry undoubtedly would generate comparable shock waves.

Already, there were expressions of skepticism and disbelief.

"I find it very difficult to imagine anyone looking square in the eyes of a water in Iowa and saying, 'You'd vote for Gary Hart because this Donna Rice thing doesn't mean anything, wouldn't you,'" said Art

Davis, a former Iowa state Democratic chairman.

In New Hampshire, former Hart aide Susan Calogari said the former senator's once-potent political organization has disintegrated, with officials joining other presidential campaigns. "If there were plans in the works, I think I'd be one of the first people to get a call and haven't heard anything," she added.

Dixon said that by his comments he wasn't trying to "float a balloon" by which Hart and associates could gauge sentiment among politicians and the public for a renewed campaign.

But one state party chairman, speaking on condition of anonymity, suggested that was precisely what Dixon was doing.

This official said he understood that Hart had intended to meet with a group of advisers to talk about the idea. That report could not be immediately confirmed, however.

Hart was running well-ahead-of-the-pack of Democratic contenders when he quit the race in May, and a poll taken for The Nation magazine last month indicated he would still be the front-runner if he re-entered.

In Alabama, the former head of Hart's campaign in that state said Friday he had started a petition drive urging Hart to renew his bid for the White House.

"If Hart would say he would run, I think he'd be back in the ball game," said Alvin Howard, who said he was circulating the petition among Hart's "hard-core" supporters in Alabama and would send it to Hart by early next week.

Howard said he believed people were not concerned about Hart's ties with Rice, adding "The perception I have in talking to people all over the country is that they think he was railroaded, that it wasn't important and that he shouldn't have got out in the first place."

Whatever the motivation behind Dixon's comments, the initial reaction from some of Hart's former supporters was negative.

GARY HART
Won't confirm or deny rumor
Hal Haddon, a Hart friend and former campaign assistant, said he did not think a new campaign was a good idea.
"I don't think the organization is there any longer to run any kind of a campaign," Haddon said.

Weinberger defends SDI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Casper W. Weinberger, in an apparent signal that he intends to authorize the acceleration of work on certain "Star Wars" programs, argued Friday that even a minimal defense against nuclear missiles would add to the nation's security.

The suggestion that Hart might re-enter the campaign — as a long shot with a low-budget campaign — came from former campaign manager Bill Dixon, who offered his prediction Thursday in a radio interview in Madison, Wis., and repeated it in an interview with The Associated Press the following morning.

"I think it's clearly, perhaps even probable" he will be a candidate, said Dixon.

vacationing in Ireland with his son John.

Shore denied a report the former senator was cutting short his Irish vacation to return home because of the reports. Asked about Irish radio reports that Hart had left Europe, he said Hart had merely moved out of his vacation cottage to get away from the disturbance of the telephone.

Hart's swift political downfall last spring, barely a month after he formally entered the campaign, stunned the political community. His re-entry undoubtedly would generate comparable shock waves.

Already, there were expressions of skepticism and disbelief.

"I find it very difficult to imagine anyone looking square in the eyes of a water in Iowa and saying, 'You'd vote for Gary Hart because this Donna Rice thing doesn't mean anything, wouldn't you,'" said Art

Helicopter's crash kills 3

WASHINGTON (AP) — A helicopter being used on a photography assignment crashed into the Potomac River on Friday, fatally injuring three passengers.

The pilot, Jack Turley, 37, escaped by apparently leaping from the plunging craft.

Dozens of people at a nearby marina saw the Bell Jet Ranger hover about 15 feet above the water and then suddenly plunge into the Washington Channel section of the river around 7:30 a.m.

Assistant Police Chief Isaac Fulwood Jr. said unspecified "mechanical difficulties" apparently caused the helicopter to crash.

One of the men killed, William Weems, 44, a freelance photographer, had leased the helicopter from Stewart Aircraft Corp. to take pictures for a brochure for the Arlington, Va.-based Summer Realty Corp., said Turner.

The other two victims were identified by hospital officials as Robert Arthur Joy, 46, of Washington, and Victoria Hinckley, 24, of Rockville, Md.

Tax overhaul reduces 1987 deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal budget deficit grew to $141.7 billion at the end of July, dramatically below last year's record level of red ink, the government said Friday.

At the same point in 1986, with two months left in the fiscal year, the deficit was $189.0 billion, 26 percent ahead of the 1987 pace. Although government spending is up 3.7 percent so far this year, revenues have increased by 10.6 percent, thus easing the deficit.

The Treasury Department said government spending stood at $84.3 billion for the first 10 months of this fiscal year and revenues totaled $70.6 billion, leaving a shortfall of $141.7 billion.

The improvement for this fiscal year, which ends on Sept. 30, is attributed to the overhaul of the tax code and a resulting one-time surge in revenue last April.

Because of the higher-than-expected tax revenues, the Reagan administration on Monday cut its estimate for the deficit this year from a forecast of $173.2 billion made last January when the president submitted his budget down to $158.4 billion.

That is well below last year's $220.7 billion record, but still above the $144 billion target of the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law.

The administration is warning that deficits will widen again in 1988 and 1989 unless Congress cuts spending.

The government spent $86.6 billion and took in $64.2 billion in revenue in July, for a monthly deficit of $22.3 billion, much higher than last month's deficit of $420 million.

July spending was 3.7 percent higher than a month earlier, but revenue was off by 22.6 percent from June, a month when quarterly tax payments from individuals and businesses swelled government receipts.

The deficit for May was $35.7 billion. It followed a record surplus in April of $38.7 billion.

In July, the largest spending categories were, as usual, the military, followed by Social Security, other programs in the Department of Health and Human Services and the national debt.

Alf Landon to fete birthday with Reagans

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan will help his wife celebrate her birthday Saturday, although it isn't her birthday, and help Alfred M. Landon celebrate his on Sept. 6, although that isn't Landon's birthday either.

The president will also go to Philadelphia to help observe the 200th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution on Sept. 17, which actually is the date on which it was signed in 1787.

Landon, the former Kansas governor who was the Republican presidential nominee in 1936, will turn 100 on Sept. 9. Reagan will visit him in Topeka, Kan., three days early because that way he can stop on his way back to Washington from his California vacation.

First lady Nancy Reagan's birthday was July 6, but two women who are long-time family friends of the Reagans regularly give her a birthday party during the Reagans' annual August visit to their ranch north of here.

Mrs. Reagan has given her birthdate as 1923, but records of Smith College, which she attended, show it as 1921, which makes her 66.

In Topeka, Ms. Arant said, the president will visit Landon at his home and speak briefly to members of the family and other guests. Landon, who was overwhelmingly defeated by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1936, is the father of Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan.

Break empties jail

LINDEN, Tenn. (AP) — A jail break emptied the Perry County Jail when both inmates escaped.

Jailer Harry Black said he went to the jail early Thursday afternoon to give prisoner Wayne Cotham awards for an ear infection when he said he was going to leave.

Cotham, 39, and cellmate James Potts, 20, left the jail. They remained at large Friday.

Bell set to cutover Sunday

By the Times-News

TWIN FALLS — More than 16,000 Mountain Bell customers in Twin Falls will have their telephone service upgraded early Sunday morning (8/23) as the company converts to Twin Falls office to a new Electronic Switching System (ESS).

Customers with 733, 734, 735, 736, 737 and 738 prefixes will be affected by completion of the more than $4.6 million project.

The most noticeable changes for affected customers will be a new dial tone and busy signal. Phones will also ring differently and customers will be required to dial all seven digits to complete a call.

Actual transfer of service from the existing mechanical switching system to the computerized electronic switching system will take place shortly after midnight Saturday night.

"Anyone on the phone at the time of the office's cutover will be disconnected for a short time since the change to the new system means a major move to the new equipment handling calls and C.E. (Gene) Hill, Idaho vice president and chief executive officer for Mountain Bell. "If customers are on a long distance call, or two digits to know when someone is trying to reach them when they're already on the phone or to transfer incoming calls to another number."

Construction on the project began in 1986 and, in addition to installation of the new computerized switcher, which was manufactured by Northern Telecom, the system includes replacement of some long distance equipment and an existing "frame." That piece of equipment is used to identify and sort the thousands of wires that lead to each location served by a telephone.

Hill said the new system will not only increase speed, accuracy and quality of handling phone calls in Twin Falls, but will also improve Mountain Bell's ability to identify service problems, meet repair needs and offer new services.

Other Magic Valley central offices currently scheduled for replacement in 1987 as part of the Technology Plus program are Eden-Hazelton, Glenns Ferry and Kimberly.

Buhl woman pays fine; police agree to reduce charge

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

BUHL — A Buhl woman who was charged with reckless driving when she attempted to rush an injured youth from her rural Buhl area home to the hospital says she has paid a $36 fine for a reduced charge.

Barbara Holesinsky, 41, aroused public indignation when she told her story of being stopped by police and handcuffed beside her car on the highway just west of Piler on July 13.

Holesinsky said she and the Buhl police agreed there was a misunderstanding over the incident and that she accepted a change of violation of the basic rule — traveling too fast for conditions.

"That's what I said all along," she said. "I told the officers at the start that if I deserved any kind of citation it was speeding."

Holesinsky said she was rushing a young man with a severely bleeding throat cut to the hospital, believing he may have suffered a severed vein. The youth was injured when his motorcycle crashed through a barbed wire fence. On the way to the hospital, she passed a police officer who had stopped to assist another motorist and told him she was in an emergency and needed an escort to the hospital.

A short time later, she said, a police car pulled onto the highway behind her with flashing lights. Thinking it was her escort, she continued toward the hospital, keeping just ahead of police car until the officer and another car forced her to the side of the road.

At that point, Holesinsky said, she had not had time to get the help she had thought, but rather was being chased by the officer.

Holesinsky said she doesn't object to the traffic infraction charge or the fine, but she is now wondering about the ambulance bill she has received.

"When they stopped me and without any questions put me in handcuffs, they also called an ambulance to take the young man to the hospital where I was handcuffed and detained by my car. I didn't want an ambulance and I didn't ask for one. I was taking the injured boy to the hospital to save time. I didn't want to wait for an ambulance or quick response unit. I was acting in what I felt was a life-threatening emergency situation," she explained.

"She said at this point she hasn't decided what to do about the ambulance bill, but otherwise she is declaring the situation closed.

In the weeks since the incident was publicized, Holesinsky said she has received hundreds of telephone calls and letters many of them from people who offered financial help to take the matter to court.

"I am not the type who wants to go to court unless it's absolutely necessary. It would have cost the taxpayers a lot of money and I am satisfied with the fact that I am accused of speeding. I was driving fast, believing the officer behind me was helping me get to the hospital," she added.

"It has been an experience that I will never forget."

Speed is of the essence when Green Giant workers grab ears of corn off a conveyor during the sweet corn pack

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

BUHL — Their hands move fast as lightning, grabbing shucked ears of corn and stuffing them into the mouth of a mechanical cutter. They're expected to snatch at least 4,800 ears an hour, but many of the hardhatted, hair-netted and earplugged workers standing along the conveyor will send 7,000 ears an hour to be stripped of their kernels.

During the sweet corn pack, the Jolly Green Giant is concerned more with speed, than muscle.

There's a mountain of green corn arriving from local fields on the back side of Green Giant Co.'s plant in Buhl. There are millions of cans and bags waiting to be filled in huge warehouses at both ends of the factory. And there are eight to 10 weeks in which to pack the season's yellow harvest.

The 1987 pack is churning at top speed now, about a quarter through its run, says Plant Manager Darrel McRoberts. By the time it's over, the factory's plant's 750 workers will have canned or frozen enough corn to fill 4.2 million cases of 12-ounce cans.

McRoberts opened the doors of the plant Friday to a tour from the Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce. The 30 visitors found themselves in a world where kernels and cobs were the main dish instead of their side tray.

The grabbing hands get their shot at the cobs at the front end of the processing line.

The ears already have lost their husks to a system of rubber rollers. Yet even the husks go to market. Plastic fingers-brush-excess kernels off the top of the cans and in seconds the corn is sealed inside.

The kernels are cooked in the cans themselves. After at least five days storage —

But the kernels are the valuable part of the vegetable. A mechanical system of revolving knives slices them off the ears, and the kernels are carried away for cleaning in a water-filled trough.

Once washed, the kernels parade by the thousands past the watchful eye of an inspector. If he or she finds any bits of husk or other non-kernel, a touch with a "vacuum wand" sucks them out of the corn stream.

At the Mexican conveyor belt, the inspection is more difficult. Two workers scan a bed of yellow corn mixed with red and green peppers.

The raw kernels and a special sugar-salt brine then are dropped into the cans that will go to market. Plastic fingers-brush-excess kernels off the top of the cans and in seconds the corn is sealed inside.

Australian, airline set a $1.3 million settlement award

HAILEY (AP) — An Australian man seriously injured in a 1983 plane crash near Hailey has accepted a $1.3 million settlement in his lawsuit against the airline, his attorney said.

Hailey attorney E. Lee Schlander said his client, Brian Ryan of Melbourne, Australia, agreed to the settlement with Sierra Pacific Airlines earlier this month and has been wired the money in Australia.

Ryan was seriously injured in 1983 when a Sierra Pacific DeHavilland Otter lost its tail section and crashed on Highway 76 north of Bellevue while en route to Friedman Memorial Airport. Ryan was on a business trip.

A Blaine County jury found the airline negligent in its maintenance procedures, and awarded Ryan $875,000 in 1984.

The airline appealed, but the judgment ultimately was upheld by the Idaho Supreme Court. Schlander said that his client had threatened another lawsuit against the airline and its insurer for failing to reach an agreement, despite the high court's decision.

Schlander said that he reached the $1.3 million settlement during negotiations with airline representatives in Los Angeles.

Hailey police find new headquarters

By BARBARA NEIWEIT
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY The city's police department has found a new home for its county officials announced last week their intention to build a new ambulance center at the site of the present police headquarters.

After an appeal from the city to the Blaine County School Board of Trustees, the school district granted temporary housing for the police department at its old school district office on Crox Street. That office is currently occupied by County Planning and Zoning Administrator Ed Nigbor under a rent-free lease. A similar arrangement was worked out for the city.

City Councilwoman Maryann Mix, who oversees the police department, said the location is only temporary and the city is exploring other possibilities for a permanent location.

Blaine County has given the city notice of eviction from its current police station south of the Blaine County Judicial Building on Walnut Street. Plans are in the works to build a new county-owned police department to make way for a two-story ambulance complex.

According to Ketchum architect Jim McLaughlin, the ambulance center was originally planned to be built at a location north of the Judicial Building.

Jones: Programs are stopping crime

The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — The five Crime Stoppers programs in operation in Idaho have proven to be highly effective ways to control crime, says Attorney General Jim Jones.

He called the programs "a meaningful and effective way" to bring the public into crime prevention and crime control.

"Citizen involvement is a key to any effective criminal program," said Jones. "Without citizen involvement and input, no crime prevention or control program can be entirely successful."

Jones remarks were prepared for a Friday meeting of the Twin Falls County Crime Prevention Council. It concluded a one-day seminar on Crime Stoppers programs.

Nationally, there are more than 600 Crime Stoppers programs, which provide a means whereby private citizens can provide information on criminal activity, but do not have to be identified.

Jones said through the end of 1985, Crime Stoppers nationally helped solve an estimated 92,000 felonies and helped recover $560 million worth of narcotics and stolen property.

An average of $6,000 in narcotics or stolen property has been recovered through each successful Crime Stoppers tip, with a payment of an average of $73 in reward money.

In Twin Falls, Jones said in the five-year period ended March 1 of this year, Crime Stoppers' tips resulted in the recovery of $1.2 million in stolen property and narcotics, with $7,750 paid out in rewards. He said 148 cases were cleared, 146 persons were arrested and most were successfully prosecuted.

Investigator calls Mini-Cassia a prime pot growing spot

By ADELL HARVEY
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — "Mini-Cassia is the hottest area in the state for marijuana production," says Jeffery Black, senior investigator and drug education officer for the Idaho Department of Law Enforcement.

Speaking to the 255 teachers in the Mini-doka School District at a special in-service seminar this week, Black said his department has taken more marijuana plants from this area than anywhere else in the state.

"We may be a rural state, but we're not immune to the drug problem," he said. He quoted statistics showing Idaho as 38th in the nation for marijuana production, but 13th when considered on a per capita basis. Idaho ranks fifth in the number of greenhouses, he said, and seventh in the number of arrests.

Black worked eight years in the Narcotics Department, three of them as an undercover street agent. For 16 months, he has worked with the U.S. Attorney's Office in IRS and FBI drug enforcement, working with smugglers — and international traffickers. He said it comes as an shock to most Idahoans to realize there is international drug dealing here. There are many Peruvians, Colombians, Chileans all investing in Idaho, but conducting their business elsewhere," he said.

According to Black, the first crack cocaine bust was in Teton County, "a little rural community." He said that bust came just six months after the first crack chase was made in Milwaukee. "Now it's in every city in Idaho," he said. "We're right on the edge, just a matter of weeks, for a major problem here in Idaho."

Black outlined the levels of drug use, symptoms and damages for the teachers, and dispelled many commonly held myths about drugs. "If we can convince just one generation of Americans they can grow up drug free, we can harness this thing," he said.

He said while the majority of users are in the age bracket between 28 to 50, the average age that most people begin marijuana use is 12½ years old. "What we have is a second generation of drug users," he said.

Children usually begin at the experimental level, then move up to "recreational" or "casual" drug use. "Recreational drug use is a misnomer," Black insisted. "Have you ever heard of recreational burglary or recreational embezzlement? It's a contradiction in terms. Kids need to know from a legal standpoint, drug use is a felony."

Black blames the media for much of the mythology that surrounds drugs. He cited a Weekly Reader survey that showed most children get their information and values from the media, especially television and films. "The media portrays marijuana as a recreational drug. It doesn't harm anybody," he said. "I've seen movies frequently show kids smoking pot, drinking alcohol."

He showed clippings from numerous national magazines which stated marijuana was "harmless."

However, Black pointed out earlier research was done on a much lower grade of marijuana, and only on the one chemical that was considered dangerous. "The one made up of 421 different substances, 61 of them fat soluble, and no research was done on these other chemicals," he said.

According to Black, today's more sophisticated marijuana grown in Idaho is 5 to 16 percent THC, the toxic chemical in THC.

The average of the chemical found in California plants is 9 to 11 percent. Black explained that half of even the very low rate of THC of 9 percent remains in the body for four to eight days, 20 to 30 percent of that

Watch those early morning phone calls

Bell set to cutover Sunday

By the Times-News

TWIN FALLS — More than 16,000 Mountain Bell customers in Twin Falls will have their telephone service upgraded early Sunday morning (8/23) as the company converts its Twin Falls office to a new Electronic Switching System (ESS).

Customers with 733, 734, 735, 736, 737 and 738 prefixes will be affected by completion of the more than $4.8 million project.

The most noticeable changes for affected customers will be a new dial tone and busy signal. Phones will also ring differently and customers will be required to dial all seven digits to complete a call.

Actual transfer of service from the existing mechanical switching system to the computerized electronic switching system will take place shortly after midnight Saturday night.

"Anyone on the phone at the time of the office's cutover will be disconnected for a short time since the change to the new system means a major move to the new equipment handling calls," said C.E. (Gene) Hill, Idaho vice president and chief executive officer for Mountain Bell. "If customers are on a long distance call, they should report the disconnection to the operator. If they are on a local call, they will need to redial that call when the system begins operating again."

Hill said such conversions in service normally take place early in the morning because of extremely low volumes of calling traffic.

The conversion of the company's sixth largest Idaho telephone exchange will increase the percentage of customers in the state served by a computerized ESS to more than 85 percent.

The Twin Falls cutover is the first to take place as part of a five year, $50 million program called Technology Plus. A total of 53 telephone exchanges will be replaced or upgraded throughout the Mountain Bell territory in Idaho as part of that service improvement project.

Several new services will be offered to customers served by the new Twin Falls switching equipment, including Mountain Bell's Custom Calling features. The features allow customers to dial their own three-way conversations, dial up to 30 pre-recorded numbers by using one or two digits, to know when someone is trying to reach them when they're already on the phone or to transfer incoming calls to another number.

Construction on the project began in 1986 and, in addition to installation of the new computerized switcher, which was manufactured by Northern Telecom, the system includes replacement of some long distance equipment and an existing "frame." That piece of equipment is used to identify and sort the thousands of wires that lead to each location served by a telephone.

Hill said the new system will not only increase speed, accuracy and quality of handling phone calls in Twin Falls, but will also improve Mountain Bell's ability to identify service problems, meet repair needs and offer new services.

Jones said through the end of 1986, Crime Stoppers nationally helped solve an estimated 9,200 felonies and helped recover $560 million worth of narcotics and stolen property.

An average of $6,000 in narcotics or stolen property has been recovered through each successful Crime Stoppers tip, with a payment of an average of $73 in reward money.

In Twin Falls, Jones said in the five-year period ended March 1 of this year, Crime Stoppers tips resulted in the recovery of $1.2 million in stolen property and narcotics, with $7,750 paid out in rewards. He said 148 cases were cleared, 146 persons were arrested and most were successfully prosecuted.

Investigator calls Mini-Cassia a prime pot growing spot

By ADELL HARVEY Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — "Mini-Cassia is the hottest area in the state for marijuana production," says Jeffrey Black, senior investigator and drug education officer for the Idaho Department of Law Enforcement.

Speaking to the 265 teachers in the Minidoka School District at a special in-service seminar this week, Black said his department has taken more marijuana plants from this area than anywhere else in the state.

"We may be a rural state, but we're not immune to the drug problem," he said. He quoted statistics showing Idaho as 38th in the nation for marijuana production, but

13th when considered on a per capita basis. "Idaho ranks fifth in the number of greenhouses," he said, "and seventh in the number of arrests."

Black worked eight years in the Narcotics Department, three of them as an undercover street agent. For 18 months, he has worked with the U.S. Attorney's Office in IRS and FBI drug enforcement, working with smugglers and international traffickers. It comes as a shock to most Idahoans to realize there is international drug dealing here. There are many Peruvians, Columbians, Chileans all investing in Idaho, but conducting their business elsewhere," he said.

According to Black, the first crack cocaine bust was in Teton County, "a little rural community." He said that bust came just six months after the first crack purchase was made in Milwaukee. "Now it's in every city in Idaho," he said. "We're right on the edge, just a matter of weeks, for a major problem here in Idaho."

Black outlined the levels of drug use, symptoms and damages for the teachers, and dispelled many commonly held myths about drugs. "If we can convince just one generation of Americans they can grow up drug free, we can harness this thing," he said.

He said while the majority of users are in the age bracket between 28 to 50, the average age that most people begin marijuana use is 12 1/2 years old. "What we have is a second generation of drug users," he said.

Children usually begin at the experimental level, then move up to "recreational" or "casual" drug use. "Recreational" drug use is a misnomer, Black insisted. "Have you ever heard of recreational burglary or recreational embezzlement? It's a contradiction in terms. Kids need to know from a legal standpoint, drug use is a felony."

Black blames the media for much of the mythology that surrounds drugs. He cited a Weekly Reader survey that showed most children get their information and values from the media, especially television and films. The media portrays marijuana as a recreational "drug that doesn't harm anybody," he said. "Teen movies frequently show kids smoking pot, drinking alcohol."

He showed clippings from numerous national magazines which stated marijuana was "harmless."

However, Black pointed out earlier research was done on a much lower grade of marijuana, and only on the one chemical that was considered illegal. "Marijuana is made up of 421 different substances, 61 of them fat soluble, and no research was done on these other chemicals," he said.

According to Black, more sophisticated marijuana grown in Idaho is 5 to 16 percent THC, the toxic chemical. The average of the chemical found in California plants is 9 to 11 percent. Black explained that half of even the very low rate of THC of 3 percent is in the body for four to eight days. 20 to 30 percent of that

One juror forces deadlock, mistrial in 'Fatal Vision' trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An angrily divided jury deadlocked Friday, forcing a mistrial in a $16 million lawsuit filed against "Fatal Vision" author Joe McGinniss by his subject, convicted murderer Jeffrey MacDonald.

JOE MCGINNISS

Five of six jurors in the federal civil trial favored giving the former Army Green Beret doctor his contractual share of royalties from the book, which told of his conviction in the bloody 1970 slaying of his pregnant wife and two small daughters, the jurors said later.

But they never voted on any of the complicated issues in the breach of contract suit after one juror declared at the outset that McGinniss should win on all counts and refused to deliberate, they said.

"It was five for MacDonald and one for McGinniss. I was for McGinniss," said Lucille Dillon, 66, a homemaker from Agoura. "There was incredible pressure on me to conform."

She said other jurors were unreasonably swayed by sympathy for MacDonald and feelings that McGinniss' book had been "unethical" in his dealings with the convict.

But jury forewoman Elizabeth Larré, 64, a retired social worker from Claremont, said Mrs. Dillon was wrong.

"There was an enormous assumption by (Mrs. Dillon) that we were in sympathy with MacDonald and we were going to give him the 'Earth,'" Mrs. Larré said. "I wasn't true."

She said the five never contemplated giving MacDonald any punitive damages and would have merely returned to him some $90,000 in royalties which were placed Kristen, at Fort Bragg, N.C., also contended that McGinniss short-changed him on his share of profits from the book and TV movie made from it.

U.S. District Judge William Rea, who flew back from a judicial conference in Hawaii to deal with the jurors, reluctantly declared a mistrial after they told him they could go no further.

Rea said a new trial could be scheduled in January unless the parties settle.

Both sides claimed a victory of sorts. McGinniss said jurors, through their deadlock, protected a writer's freedom to tell a story as he sees it.

"If the jury had said that writers don't have the right to do books as I do books, it would have been very scary," he said. "But that is not what they said. ... I'm happy. To me, it's as good as a win."

"The First Amendment still lives," said his lawyer, Lemuel Kormatin. "Writers can write the truth. Readers can read books they want to read. The mistrial has allowed this to continue."

MacDonald's lawyer, Gary Bostwick, said MacDonald, who is serving three consecutive life sentences, was "depressed" that verdict was not reached but encouraged by jurors' comments.

"I'm extremely ecstatic that five people looked at all the evidence we presented and were learning in the direction of several of our theories," Bostwick said.

"Certainly think MacDonald was deceived," said Mrs. Lane. "He had been deceived into thinking the book would portray him as he wanted and it did not."

Wrote book about murderer in escrow when his suit was filed. Jurors said they did not discuss MacDonald's contention that he had been shortchanged on royalties.

The unusual legal battle between the convicted murderer and the author who became his close confidant raised questions concerning freedom of expression, an author's actions toward the subject of a book and legal protections afforded by signed releases.

McGinniss obtained two signed releases from MacDonald before "Fatal Vision" was published in 1983. But MacDonald contended they were invalid because he was deceived into thinking the book would portray him as innocent. It concluded he was guilty.

MacDonald, 43, convicted in 1979 of the murders of his wife, Collette, and daughters Kimberley and

Idaho income passes $11,000, but still behind U.S. average

WASHINGTON (AP) — Per capita personal income for Idahoans moved over the $11,000 level for the first time in 1986, rising at a slightly greater rate than analysts had expected, the government reported.

But the modest 3.4 percent increase from 1985 was below the rate of increase in all but seven other states and nearly two full points below the national average increase, reflecting the continued sluggishness of the state's resource-based economy.

That comparatively poor performance, despite the infusion of some $100 million in federal farm subsidy payments last year, kept Idaho mired near the bottom of all the state in per capita income and increased the distance between the state and the nation as a whole.

The Commerce Department said income in the state last year averaged $11,223 for every man, woman and child, up from $10,854 the previous year. But Idaho still ranked only 45th among all the states, exceeding only Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, West Virginia and neighboring Utah. Mississippi was the only state in the nation with a per capita income below $10,000.

In an unrelated income report, the American Federation of Teachers said its annual survey of teachers' salaries nationwide showed Idaho salaries during the last school ranked 44th nationally.

The report said Idaho salaries averaged just under $21,500 with an average beginning salary of just over $14,200. But these figures do not reflect various salary improvements authorized this summer in the wake of a massive $29 million increase in state aid to public schools.

Nationally, per capita income rose 5.3 percent, increasing over $700 from 1985 to total $14,641 last year. That boost, greater than state economists had forecast, widened the gap between the national average and Idaho by nearly $400.

State economists had been expecting an increase in personal income of less than 3 percent in 1986, but they had also expected 1986 income to be higher than it eventually was.

As a result, per capita income last year fell over $200 short of the level analysts had expected. And unless the current sparks of renewed economic activity in the state heat up significantly, per capita income in 1987 will also fall short of projections.

The new government report followed an initial government estimate of total personal income for the state during the first three months of 1987. That estimate showed total income dropping 1.5 percent from the final three months of 1986, but an even greater decline had been forecast because state farmers did not receive the same kinds of huge government payments during the January-March period that they had between October and December.

Analysts also believed the unusually mild winter weather helped ease the decline by keeping unemployment at some of the lowest levels of the decade.

Editor named Andrus dedicates newest school coordinator

BOISE (AP) — Magazine editor Alan Minskoff of Boise has been named coordinator for the Idaho Commission on the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

Minskoff will maintain a calendar of bicentennial events and assist the commission in planning the celebration. The Constitution's 200th anniversary is Sept. 17 and events are planned throughout the state.

Funding for the project comes from the Idaho Centennial Commission.

Minskoff founded Idaho Heritage magazine, which ran between 1975 and 1978, and plans to publish a new magazine in the fall of 1988 called Idaho Annual. He also directed a project focusing on the Constitution, sponsored by the Idaho Trial Lawyers Association.

ANDRUS (AP) — "Above all else, Idahoans are willing to pay for the education of their children," says Gov. Cecil D. Andrus.

Andrus on Friday helped dedicate the new Centennial High School, which will relieve serious overcrowding in the Meridian School District.

The old Meridian High School was the state's largest, with nearly 2,400 students, causing double shifting and overcrowding. Andrus praised the commitment by local officials and area state legislators to support education, which he said was not an easy thing to do in the Meridian District.

The last session of the Legislature provided strong support for education and Andrus pledged an effort to get the same kind of support in 1988.

Idaho air guard headed for Norway

BOISE (AP) — Units of the 124th Tactical Reconnaissance Group of the Idaho Air National Guard will be taking a quick trip to Norway next month.

It's part of the Tactical Air Command's short-term tactical deployment exercise called Coronet Orion.

"The units will deploy 12 RF-4C Phantom II jets from Gowen Field at Boise to Bardufoss, Norway, from Sept. 3 to Oct. 2.

Group Commander Col. Ralph Townsend said during the 30-day exercise, every 10 days a new contingent of guardsmen will be flown to rotate the guard duty in place.

That will allow the maximum number to train in Europe without taking guardsmen away from civilian jobs more than 10 days.

While in Norway, the Idaho units will train with military elements of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and will be supported by Air Force units from Germany.

The 12 Phantom jets will fly non-stop from Boise to Norway, including refueling by a KC-10 tanker during the eight-hour flight.

In all, about 500 guardsmen will take part in the deployment, part of a larger program in which U.S.-based tactical air units will be sent to Europe, Alaska and the Pacific.

The Norwegian flying base Bardufoss is located 180 miles north of the Arctic Circle, strategically near the Russian border.

State stops firm's sales

BOISE (AP) — A Florida company and its principal officer have agreed to a state order forbidding them to improperly sell oil and gas lease interests in Idaho.

Belton J. Patty, director of the Idaho Department of Finance, said 4th District Judge Gerald Schroeder on Thursday entered a permanent injunction against Federal Petroleum Corp. and its president, Lawrence Gollin, both of Fort Lauderdale.

"That closed a case started three years ago over the sale of securities to Idaho residents, Patty said. The defendants consented to the permanent injunction without admitting or denying allegations in the complaint, Patty said.

The injunction bars Federal Petroleum from unlawful sales of unregistered securities, making untrue statements and omitting material facts in the sale of securities, and defrauding investors.

The lawsuit against Federal and Gollin was one of 40 filed by the department against 160 defendants, all alleging improper sales of oil and gas lease interests. Patty said with the Federal judgment, 30 of the oil and gas cases have been settled, two are pending, and the defendants in eight others have not been located.

Snake River teachers okay contract

THOMAS (AP) — A 1987-88 contract that gives teachers in the Snake River School District an 8.4 percent salary increase has been ratified.

The contract, ratified by the Snake River Education Association 81-1 Thursday, brings the total base salary to $14,800. Superintendent Blair Wilding said the 8.4 percent increase includes fringe benefits.

Couple's marriage hinges on whims of superpower politics

MOSCOW (AP) — Keith Braun, a 28-year-old American lawyer, and his wife, Svetlana, a Muscovite fired from her job in refrigerator design, watch superpower relations so closely as arms control negotiators.

For the young couple, a U.S.-Soviet diplomatic crisis hits home because the future of their marriage may depend on the ups and downs of superpower politics.

Svetlana was a student in super-low-temperature refrigeration at the Moscow Chemical Industry Institute in 1983 when she met Braun, of Southfield, Mich., who was visiting the Soviet Union on a three-week study tour.

On Aug. 9, 1984, they took a taxi to a shabby government building in northern Moscow called a "wedding palace" to be married in a standard, 15-minute state ceremony. They paid extra for music.

In the three years since, the Brauns have counted their time together in weeks.

Soviet officials have denied Svetlana, 24, permission to leave the Soviet Union, but they allow only occasional brief visits to Moscow by her husband.

The Brauns are among 10 U.S.-Soviet couples forced to live all or most of their lives half a world apart because the Kremlin has repeatedly denied permission to the Soviet spouses to emigrate. Most are young people who fell in love and married in the Soviet Union, then discovered to their shock they were not free to live where they chose.

"I've made five trips to Moscow since our marriage, each approximately only two weeks long," Braun said during his most recent visit. "And even those trips only happen by the grace of Soviet authorities."

The fate of the couples, known in superpower political jargon as "divided spouses," has become a highly charged issue in U.S.-Soviet relations, and American diplomats say they raise it at every opportunity in meetings with Soviet officials.

The Reagan administration has accused the Kremlin of violating human rights provisions of the 1975 Helsinki accords by not permitting husbands and wives to live where they want.

But despite U.S. pressure on behalf of the divided spouses, a top official of the Soviet Interior Ministry recently indicated the Kremlin contemplates little if any change in policy.

"It is, of course, a tragedy when a man and wife cannot live together," Rudolf Kuznetsov, head of the ministry's visas and registration department, told the New Times weekly. "But there may be serious grounds for denying a person an exit visa — say, his or her being privy to classified information."

He said there were "no obstacles" to marrying foreigners, but "on the other hand, a Soviet citizen may not be free to leave the country, or a foreign citizen to reside here."

The rationale and timing of Soviet authorities' in granting and withholding exit visas to Soviets who marry Americans can appear baffling.

On the eve of the 1985 Geneva superpower summit, 28 couples were living apart, according to U.S. statistics. Since then, many cases have been resolved, U.S. diplomats say.

Despite the reported progress, divided spouses say, Soviets who marry Americans may be subject to surveillance by the KGB secret police, lose their jobs and be treated as pariahs or even traitors by many of their countrymen.

They may be told their applications for exit visas have been refused for state security reasons, or they may be given no reason at all.

Any meeting of U.S. and Soviet diplomats raises spirits among the divided spouses, and the Brauns are hoping the September talks between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze in Washington will result in an exit visa for Mrs. Braun.

Last January, the shy, brown-eyed woman was fired from her 60-ruble-a-month (about $120) job in a refrigerator design bureau after being visited at work by two KGB agents.

"I had handed in a paper saying I was taking a few days off," she said. "When I came back, I was told they hadn't received anything and that I had been absent without leave."

Five written applications from Mrs. Braun for an exit visa have been rejected. On her last refusal, on June 2, she asked officials the reason, and was told only "Article 26."

That section of the new Soviet emigration regulations that went into force Jan. 1 lists all possible reasons for which a Soviet can be denied permission to leave.

"They're supposed to choose a category, a reason for refusal but in our case they haven't," Mrs. Braun said.

In the United States, Braun has campaigned for reunification of divided spouses by publishing a newsletter, People at Beverly Elementary School in Birmingham, Mich., have also written to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev on his behalf.

One 9-year-old told Gorbachev to put himself in the young attorney's place.

"How do you think it would be if your wife was in a country 6,500 miles away and not able to come to your country to live with you?" he asked the Soviet leader.

American lawyer Keith Braun and his Soviet wife, Svetlana, were married in 1984

To fight jet leg, Saudi prince has hotel install lights, court

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — People who travel a lot say there's not much you can do about jet lag — unless, of course, you're a Saudi Arabian prince.

Prince Alwaleed Bin Talal Bin Abdulaziz Al Saud recently paid a hotel on Hilton Head Island to install $4,000 worth of lights and a volleyball court for late-night play to help him and his family maintain their "natural body clocks" as they were set in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, said Tim McEneny, a spokesman for the Hotel Inter-Continental.

The prince's 20-member entourage left the island Wednesday night after an eight-day stay, McEneny said.

The hotel staff spent much of the time helping Prince Alwaleed, 29, his wife, 9-year-old son and 6-year-old daughter live and play as if they were still eight hours away in Riyadh, McEneny said.

This included serving dinner between 1 a.m. and 2 a.m.

Penn didn't get easy treatment, judge says

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sean Penn got a much longer jail sentence than many people who commit similar crimes, a judge testified in defending himself against charges that he handled the pugnacious actor with kid gloves.

"I didn't see how anyone can say Mr. Penn received preferential treatment when my colleagues typically give 30 days or less jail time for similar crimes," Presiding Municipal Court Judge George Trammell said Thursday at a hearing of the Mono County Board of Supervisors.

Penn was sentenced in June to 60 days behind bars for violating probation earlier this year by punching a movie extra on a film set and reckless driving.

The actor paid $80 a day to serve his term in Mono County's jail in Bridgeport, a small resort town. He was given court permission to break his sentence into segments so he could work on a film and was to return to jail Saturday.

On Aug. 6, the county Board of Supervisors ordered the investigation into allegations that Penn received preferential treatment.

Blind sailor might not make 2nd solo voyage

NEW YORK (AP) — Bessie by name, sea equipment salesman and the approach of autumn, Jim Dickson says he won't make a second attempt this year to become the first blind person to sail solo across the Atlantic.

"And, he said Friday, he doesn't know if he'll be able to make another attempt.

"That's really a question of money," Dickson said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

Dickson left Portsmouth, R.I., for Plymouth, England on Aug. 4, but was forced to detour south to Bermuda when his 36-foot yacht's satellite navigation system and autopilot, broke down on the trip's fifth day.

The journey was further delayed when Dickson had to ride out rough seas and heavy winds from Tropical Storm Arlene in the yacht, the Eye Opener. He said last week the yacht needed about $12,000 in repairs following the storm.

Actress-singer tuning to prepare for pope

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress-

singer Ann Jillian says she's rehearsing religiously for her role as a headliner at the Sept. 16 pageant that will precede a stadium-sized Mass by Pope John Paul II.

"I'm not just a blond actress doing an 'entertainment event,'" Jillian said Thursday during a news briefing at the Los Angeles Archdiocese.

"I've been a Roman Catholic all my life. I sing at my church every Sunday at 5 p.m. with the rest of the congregation."

Jillian, who starred in the TV series "It's a Living" and "Jennifer Slept Here," will join master of ceremonies Ricardo Montalban and others in the 90-minute extravaganza at Dodger Stadium.

Clark to become 63rd cast member of Opry

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — "Hee Haw" star Roy Clark will become the 63rd regular cast member of the Grand Ole Opry during special ceremonies Saturday.

"Saturday night I'll feel like a little kid on Christmas morning," Clark, 54, a singer-musician, said.

The ceremonies will be broadcast live on The Nashville Network on cable television. The Opry is a 62-year-old country music show.

S. African mine owners fire 4,000 striking black workers

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Mine owners fired 4,000 striking black workers Friday and one miner was killed in a clash at a mine in the first reported death of a striker since the miners' walkout began 12 days ago.

Also Friday, a bus carrying home striking black mineworkers crashed into a cliff face, killing at least 20 people and injuring 49, the South African Broadcasting Corp. said.

The National Union of Mineworkers said one striker was killed and at least 20 strikers were seriously injured in a clash with security personnel at the Libanon gold mine, about 40 miles southwest of Johannesburg.

Gold Fields of South Africa, which operates the mine, confirmed the death but disputed the union's account. The company denied that miners tried to strike and said security men fired at an "armed mob of 250 people" that stormed the gate of a hostel while under the influence of narcotics and of a witchdoctor. Gold Fields said a witchdoctor made incisions on the chests and foreheads of the attackers. The union said security guards fired lethal and rubber bullets. The company said the guards fired only rubber bullets. Another miner said the unidentified striker died after he was shot in the stomach. The company did not say how he died.

The walkout began Aug. 9 over wages and benefits against major gold and coal mines. The only previous fatality reportedly linked to the strike was the alleged slaying of a strikebreaker who was found dead in a hostel bed Aug. 11.

The union says more than 320 miners were injured and about 300 arrested during the strike.

The bus that crashed was going from Odendardrus, a mining town in the central Orange Free State, to Port Elizabeth on the southern coast, the broadcast said. The accident occurred near dawn Friday between Queenstown and Fort Beaufort.

"The bus flipped onto its side after smashing into the cliff face. The entire left-hand side of the vehicle was sheared off. There were bodies strewn across the road," said Jenny de Bruggé.

Death toll reaches 17 in worst mass murder in British history

HUNGERFORD, England (AP) — Two more people shot down in Britain's worst mass murder died of their wounds, bringing the death toll Friday to 17. That included the gunman, who killed himself at the end of the bloody day.

Arrangements began for the funerals in this normally peaceful market town, 60 miles west of London, where the massacre took place Wednesday.

Growing public outrage, meanwhile, chose television violence and "Rambo" movies as its first targets. The British Broadcasting Corp. said it put off showing a violent television drama about gangsters in deference to Hungerford's 5,000 residents.

An inquest began on 33-year-old Susan Godfrey, who was shot dead while picnicking with her children in a forest near Hungerford. Her death is believed to have been the prelude to Michael Ryan's shooting spree in the town itself.

After formalities, the inquest was adjourned until October. Myrtle Gibbs died late Thursday night of multiple gunshot wounds in the abdomen, said a statement from Princess Margaret Hospital in nearby Swindon. Mrs. Gibbs was confined to a wheelchair. Her husband Victor, 66, died trying to shield her when Ryan burst into the room with a semi-automatic AK-47 assault rifle.

Jan Playle, a 34-year-old magistrate's clerk, died Friday of head injuries. He was married and had two children.

Thirteen other victims remained hospitalized, two in intensive-care wards. Hungerford's citizens prayed for the victims, cleared away the broken glass, shot-up cars and blood, and turned to the problems of the survivors. A wreath lay on the steps of town hall.

Ryan, 27, shot himself after police cornered him in a school. He will be buried in Hungerford, where he lived with his mother. She was one of those he killed.

David Fairbrass, a cousin, said Ryan may be buried in the same cemetery as his victims, but that Ryan's 60-year-old mother Dorothy would be interred 25 miles away at Calne, where she was born.

The young gun enthusiast's motive remained a mystery. Investigations of his past revealed scant evidence of mental instability.

Newspapers described him as a loner who was bullied at school, but people who knew him said there were no outward signs of abnormality. Recent photographs showed a round-faced man with a thin mustache wearing a camouflage-colored floppy hat.

Fairbrass said his last conversation with Ryan came at a family wedding late last year and "he was quite outgoing. He was there with his mother. He was enjoying the day. He seemed quite jovial."

He said of his cousin: "We never saw any girlfriends. We didn't drink alcohol much and he certainly didn't take drugs or anything like that. He was quite articulate really, but a man of few words. You would not think he was strange."

Ryan was licensed to own five guns, and Fairbrass said his cousin once showed him a collection of antique swords. "He was generally interested in antiques," Fairbrass said. "He had lots of books. That interest could have perhaps led to his interest in guns."

Fugitive arrested by mountie

WHITEHORSE, Yukon Territory (AP) — A California businessman under indictment for illegally shipping $15 million of computer equipment to the Soviet Union was arrested by an alert mountie while on a fishing trip.

Charles McVey, who was flown to Vancouver, British Columbia, on Friday for extradition proceedings, had for several years returned from his refuge in Europe to fish at tiny, remote Teslin Lake, Canadian police said.

McVey, 64, had been on the 10 most-wanted list of the U.S. Customs Department's Operation Exodus project, which seeks to track down illegal exporters of U.S. high technology.

The former Villa Park, Calif., resident fled the United States shortly before March 1983, when a federal grand jury in Los Angeles indicted him on 23 counts of selling and shipping specialized computer equipment to the Soviet Union.

McVey is charged with using dummy companies to buy equipment such as minicomputers, satellite image processing gear and scientific equipment, based on a shopping list provided by the Soviets.

The indictment says the goods — $15 million worth — were diverted from 1977 to 1982 to institutes and military centers in the Soviet Union through a Swiss freight forwarder. If convicted on all counts, McVey faces more than 100 years in prison and a fine of up to $500,000.

A $1.2 million fine has already been levied against McVey by the U.S. Commerce Department, the second largest ever handed out under the U.S. Export Administration Act.

McVey was arrested Wednesday night in Teslin, near the British Columbia-Yukon border, said Cpl. Dan Fudge, who heads the Royal Canadian Mounted Police's two-man Teslin Lake detachment.

The 6-foot-3, 300-pound McVey surrendered peacefully when Fudge, recognizing him from a picture on file, made the arrest at a private residence in the village of 400 people about 110 miles east of Whitehorse, the mountie said.

Soviets claim U.S. violated test accord

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union lodged a complaint Friday with the U.S. State Department, claiming an underground nuclear explosion in Nevada violated an agreement limiting the force of such blasts, Tass said.

The official Soviet news agency said the Aug. 17 test exceeded the threshold of 150 kilotons agreed upon in a 1974 treaty between the two countries.

The Soviets demanded that Washington explain the violation and, at the same time, repeated a call for a total ban on nuclear-testing, Tass said.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev unilaterally imposed an 18-month ban on nuclear tests until Feb. 28. But the United States refused to go along with a halt in such testing, arguing that it needed to keep up with advances in Soviet technology.

The Soviet Union, in its statement to the U.S. State Department, said the Nevada test was preceded by a "propaganda campaign" about possible radiation fallout following a Soviet underground test Aug. 2.

Officials in Norway reported a small increase in the level of radioactive iodine in the air of Norway.

Jerome, Raft River, Richfield rated No. 1 in preseason poll

By The Associated Press

Defending state champion Jerome, Homedale, Raft River and Richfield have been picked by Idaho's sportswriters and broadcasters as the top teams in their respective divisions in the Associated Press preseason high school football poll.

Jerome was selected as the No. 1 team in Idaho in Class A-2 by the voters from AP member newspapers while Homedale was named the top team in A-3, Raft River in A-4 and Richfield among the state's eight-man schools.

Defending state A-1 Division I winner Meridian was ranked second in its division behind Coeur d'Alene.

the team it beat for last year's state championship.

In A-1 Division II, two-time defending state winner Skyline of Idaho Falls was rated second, behind arch rival Idaho Falls High.

The state's prep football campaign will begin this week, and the AP weekly poll will continue throughout the season. For the first time, the poll this year includes separate ratings for the two A-1 divisions. Idaho's 24 A-1 schools are split in two classes for postseason playoff purposes. Among the biggest schools, the Coeur d'Alene Vikings, 9-1-1 last season and winners of two of the last three state championships, got in good in the preview poll in part because Meridian has been split into two schools this year with the opening of Central High School.

Coeur d'Alene received six of 10 first-place votes and 40 of a possible 50 points to finish ahead of the Meridian Warriors, 11-0 in 1986, and Highland of Pocatello, 9-2 last year. Highland and Meridian tied for second place with 28 points. Meridian received three first-place votes and Highland one.

They are followed in the rankings by Boise, 8-3 in 1986, and Borah of Boise, 5-4 a year ago.

In A-1-Division II, Idaho Falls, 8-3 in 1986, was third, followed by Gooding, 6-4 last year, Grangeville, 7-3 in 1986, and Challis, 7-2 a year ago, tied for fifth place.

In A-2, two-time defending state champion Jerome, 10-2 in 1986, picked up seven of the 10 first-place votes, followed by Kendrick, 9-1 a year ago, and Wallace, which also finished 1986 at 10-2, holds down the second spot, receiving one first-place vote and 30 points.

Mullan at 7-2, last season was rated third while Melba at 8-2 in 1986 and Mackay, with a 6-3 mark last year, rounded out the division.

Among the eight-man teams, Richfield, perfect in nine games last season, got six first-place votes and 43 points.

In A-3, state winner Homedale, unbeaten in 11 games last year; got seven of the 10 first-place votes and 46 of a possible 50 points. The Trojans were followed by Malad, 11-1 in 1986, with two first-place votes and 31 points. Sugar Salem, 8-2-1 a year ago, was third, followed by Gooding, 6-4 last year, Grangeville, 7-3 in 1986, and Challis, 7-2 a year ago, tied for fifth place.

In A-4, Raft River, which finished the 1986 season with a 10-1 record, received six first-place votes and 41 points, followed by Kendrick, 9-1 a year ago, and Wallace, which also finished 1986 at 10-2, holds down the second spot, receiving one first-place vote and 30 points.

Mullan at 7-2, last season was rated third while Melba at 8-2 in 1986 and Mackay, with a 6-3 mark last year, rounded out the division.

Rusty Sewalt of Magnolia, Texas, flips a calf over during his performance in the call roping competition at Burley

Rodeo

Just 2 top spots change hands Friday at Burley

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

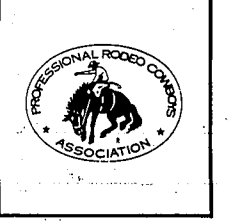

BURLEY There were two lead changes in the second go-round at the Cassia County Rodeo Friday night.

The two changes came in bareback riding and in saddle bronc riding competition where a Tennessee cowboy and an Oregon hand took the lead in their respective events.

George Messimier from Martin, Tenn., scored a ride of 78 on Bigfoot in the bareback event to take the lead. In the bronc riding, a ride of 82 by Rocky Steagall was the top score, beating Thursday night's first-go performance by Dixon Hamilton by four points.

Rhett Flocher, a cowboy raised in Rupert who now lives in Pocatello, scored a 77 in the bull riding, moving him into second place in that event. Flocher, who won the event in the Burley rodeo last year with a score of 84, trails Nebraska hand Kevin Smith by one point headed into tonight's final round.

Marty Melvin, a cowboy by Stewart, Okla., clocked a 5.1-second ride in the steer wrestling. Melvin's time was just a fraction of a second behind the leader, Jeff Green of Hoathville, La. Alan Berryessen of Cedarville, Calif., clocked a 5.2 in the same event, moving him into third place.

cowboys could rope their steers for a time Friday. Alan Bach of Modesto, Calif., and Jake Milton of Torrington, Wyo., moved into the second position in the rodeo with a time of 9 seconds flat.

A Texas hand, Jerry Alley of Del Rio, found himself in the No. 3 spot in calf roping after Friday's go. His time of 10.0 trails leader Brian Anderson and Billy Halley.

None of the barrel racers could break the 17-mark Friday. A pair of women broke it in Thursday's first go to a lead the event, Homedale's Lisa Davis at 17.11 is currently in third place.

The rodeo will conclude with the coronation of the queen at 8, to be followed by the final go-round at the Cassia County Fairgrounds.

In team roping, only two pairs of

Gooding leaders mostly stand pat in second round of rodeo Friday night

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

GOODING Action at the Gooding portion of the 1987 Southern Idaho Mini Series Rodeo Friday night saw the lead change in only one of seven events on the program. Announcer Vic Carman termed Thursday's team roping session, "pretty unspicacular" and when the first three headers failed to get a ropo over their animals' horns it appeared to signal more of the same.

Beating the futility, a California duo, Ernest Forsburg on the head and Ricky Green on the heels, were the only team to scored Friday, but became the only contestants to grab more than a one-go round win.

Forsburg and Green combined for a 6.2-second showing to easily eclipse the rodeo's previous best. Today's final round will present a serious challenge to that standard with National Finals Rodeo vets Jack Barnes and Clay O'Brien Cooper joining Caldwell's Dee Pickett and his partner in the field.

Another Friday highlight came when rodeo clown Randoe Mumma, an accomplished steer wrestler as well, proved pretty serious in his specialty. Mumms dropped his steer in 6.4

seconds, good enough to upend both six-time world champ Tom Ferguson - the first cowboy to surpass the million dollar mark in earnings - and current number one all-around poke D.R. Danil.

A handful of short four-second rides and two long fives though may keep prize money just out Munn's reach.

Unlike opening night a host of bareback contestants - six in all - stayed aboard their mounts. None beat out Thursday's first go-round victor Hank Davies, but NFR veterans Wayne Herman of Rapid City, SD and Veyo, Utah cowboy Bobby Bowler racked up 70 and 68 points, respectively, to lay claim to second and third in the overall standings. A stiff westerly wind played havoc with calf roping times. Seven of the best wranglers posted no time and the evening's best, a 10-fat clocking for Les Cochran - currently the events eighth top money winner - was a full second off the pace.

Will Bedke, a former top National High School finisher and an all-state linchbacker for Ondley High School two years ago, claimed the runner up spot in the second go-round at 11.9 seconds.

Blasting out of the chute, a bronc called Headlight carried fifth-ranked Montanan Bud Pauley to 71 points and the early saddle bronc lead. That advantage stood up until Kevin Small, appropriately a resident of Small, Idaho, edged Pauley by one point.

Small, the 1986 Wilderness Circuit titlist, stands knotted for third place overall heading into Saturday's finale.

Pocatello's Mary Agnes Aller put her horse through the girl's barrels in 47.5 seconds as the second of Lisa Davis' lead in that timed event. Aller was scarcely felled in Friday's injury challenged field. Bull riding capped the second performance with some good showings. Allen, Nebraska native Dan Lyons took that competition with a 73 go for third place overall while Odessa, Texas cowboy Keith Adams vaulted into fifth with a 71.

Rod Speelman, a Pocatello man, may have assured himself of the bull riding crown a day earlier with a splendid 61-point performance.

In a change of format, the rodeo moves to the afternoon for the decisive third and final go-round. As each entry participates in just one go-round per event, fans will greet an entirely new cast for the 2 p.m. windup.

Unhyped BYU QB Jensen has things to prove

By BOB BLACK
The Associated Press

PROVO, Utah - Bob Jensen says he's as good or better physically than any of Brigham Young's past quarterbacks, but he knows that doesn't mean much when it's other things that count the most.

"There are a lot of intangibles to being a real good quarterback," said Jensen, a junior from Fillmore, Utah. "There are a lot of guys in the world who can throw a ball through a brick wall."

Jensen, 6-foot-2 and 210 pounds, started for the Cougars in the final two games of last season and won the job for this season during spring drills. He pored over game films of past years, trying to pick up little things that set BYU's passing game apart from the rest.

"There have been a lot of good quarterbacks that have come through here. Jim McMahon's probably the best," Jensen said. He said McMahon, who led the Chicago Bears to a Super Bowl victory in 1966, has a "very great awareness on the field" that allows him to read defenses and spot receivers quickly.

"If I can do some of those things, it can help me become a better quarterback," Jensen said. However, Jensen said he isn't comparing his style to that of McMahon.

"I'm probably a little combination of them all," he said. "Physically, I'm just as good or better than anyone they've had here. There's nothing I can learn. There's a lot to running the offense around here."

He said the great quarterbacks "have that presence on the field, being able to buy time for yourself, throwing the ball in the right place at the right time, being a competitor, a leader and being able to come through in clutch situations.

"When it's third and three and the game's on the line - being able to perform under pressure," he said.

Jensen admits he feels pressure now but says it only motivates him. His first test came against Air Force in the final regular season game last year and he brought BYU's flagging passing attack new life, throwing for 288 yards and a touchdown in a 23-3 BYU victory.

In the Freedom Bowl, Jensen and current backup Mike Young helped BYU gain 221 passing yards against UCLA, but the Cougars lost 31-10.

"I think the games I did play were pretty high pressure," Jensen said. The Cougars, 8-5 overall and 6-2 in the Western Athletic Conference, had an off year last year by their standards, failing to win the conference title for the first time in a decade.

They begin this season Sept. 12 at home against Pittsburg, then play at Texas and Texas Christian. Coach LaVell Edwards, forced into an unfamiliar round game when the passing attack sputtered last year, once again plans, with Jensen at the helm, to make defensive backs miserable.

had to rally after Canada tied the score 3-5 with four runs in the third. Abbott yielded only three runs and one unearned run in 2.5 innings of relief before being taken out in the eighth.

Livingstone capped the first-inning uprising with a three-run homer over left-field wall. He also singled in the two go-ahead runs in the third.

Davis signed an agreement with officials of the tiny industrial town located some 18 miles east of Los Angeles in the San Gabriel Valley late Thursday at the Raiders' training camp in Oxnard. The new stadium could be completed in two years.

Cuba, the world champions, traded Puerto Rico 5-1, but sloppy fielding - and Antonio "Pacheco" leadoff homer in the bottom of the fifth gave them a 6-5 victory.

U.S., Cuba baseball clubs to meet again for Pan American Games gold

By BARRY WILNER
The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS - Get ready for Round 2 of U.S.-Cuba baseball at the Pan American Games.

Scott Livingstone hit for the cycle, driving in five runs, and one-handed pitcher Jim Abbott allowed three hits in relief Friday night as the United States edged Canada 7-6. The win assures the United States of a spot in the 1988 Seoul Olympic. Cuba advanced to the gold medal round with a stunning comeback defeat of Puerto Rico, 6-5.

The United States stopped the mighty Cuban team last Saturday in a sniping Cuba's 37-game win streak in Pan Am competition. Both teams won in similarly dramatic fashion in the semifinals.

Meanwhile, a top Cuban government official was issued a visa so he could attend closing ceremonies on Sunday.

Except for trips to the United Nations, the visit by Jose Ramon Fernandez is believed to be the first of the United States by a high-ranking Cuban since shortly after Fidel Castro took power in 1959.

The U.S. baseball team, 8-0, is seeking its first Pan Am gold since 1967. Cuba has won the last four.

In June they asked me to try to get a club good enough to go to Seoul, Korea, and tonight, we accomplished that," Coach Ron Fraser said. "We had to finish first or second to do it, and now we're assured of that."

The Americans scored five unearned runs in the first inning, but score 3-5 with four runs in the third.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"Fear has the largest eyes of all..." Boris Pasternak.

South has good reason to fear the loss of two heart tricks in the play of today's game.

A man with his eyes half-closed when the first club in dummy and drives out West's trump ace.

South leads a low diamond from dummy, hoping to insert his right, but East's nine forces him to win the king.

A better way to avoid giving East the lead is to make it impossible for East to win any diamond trick.
