Forces loyal to Aquino crush coup attempt

The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — Loyal troops backed by helicopter gunships and low-level bombing seized strongholds of mutineers Friday to crush the bloodiest coup attempt yet against President Corazon Aquino. Her only son was wounded.

On Saturday morning, 500 rebel troops surrendered at Camp Aguinaldo, the military headquarters that was the scene of the heaviest fighting, the military said. On Friday night, it said other 462 rebels had been captured.

Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, the military chief of staff, had told his subordinates Friday morning that only about 800 troops had taken part in the mutiny. It was not known how many still might be holding out.

Ramos had said "mopping up operations" were under way and he expected full order to be restored in Manila by Saturday.

The uprising centered in Manila but the commander of paramilitary national police in Cebu City, 350 miles southeast, backed the rebels, putting the mayor and provincial governor under house arrest.

Military and hospital sources said at least 25 people had been killed and 275 wounded, including Benigno Aquino III. Mrs. Aquino, 54, said her 27-year-old son was seriously hurt and three companions were killed when gunfire riddled their car near the presidential palace early Friday.

The mutiny began at 1 a.m. Friday, with attacks on the Malacanang presidential palace compound and other targets.

"The rebels did not appear to have widespread, popular support. When one group was chased away from the tall transmitter tower of government-run Channel 4 television station, hundreds of people poured into the streets, cheering the loyal defenders and shouting, 'Cory! Cory!' the nickname of the popular president.

Still, when three frightened rebels appeared from hiding in shrubbery near the tower, a few in

COL. GREGORIO HONASAN Assails 'personality cult'

The crowd shielded them and helped them escape, and no one tried to stop them.

Those killed during the uprising included two news photographers — a New Zealander and a Filipino — and numerous civilians caught in cross-fire.

President Reagan expressed "unqualified" U.S. support for Mrs. Aquino in the gravest crisis of her 18 months in office.

She ordered Ramos—who has put down several other coup attempts against her—to "terminate this mutiny immediately" and said no concessions would be given "these traitors."

Helicopter gunships and small propeller-driven bombers attacked the rebel-held Camp Aguinaldo and the assault was led by elite army units.

Military officials said the rebel leader, Col. Gregorio Honasan, fled in a helicopter before the assault. Early in the rebellion, he said Mrs. Aquino's government was weak and accused her of establishing a "personality cult."

Fellow Hi-Fi slayer given his last $29 Selby went to death with prayer, dignity

The Associated Press

POINT OF THE MOUNTAIN, Utah — Triple-killer Pierre Dale Selby, who turned a stereo store basement into a torture chamber, went to his death Friday with dignity and a prayer on his lips.

The clamor for Selby's execution, Utah's first in a decade, was matched only by the public's revulsion at his acts.

"I believe justice has been served," said Gov. Norm Bangert. "I hope and pray this will allow all those involved to put this tragedy behind them."

Selby, the most notorious of Utah's death-row inmates, was the first person executed in Utah in 10 years and the first to die by lethal injection in the state.

Strapped to a gurney and awaiting the injection of three lethal drugs, Selby bequeathed his remaining $29 to fellow Hi-Fi murderer William Andrews.

Asked if he had any final words, Selby, whose victims 13 years ago pleaded for their lives, said: "Thank you, I just want to say my prayers."

Before walking calmly to the execution chamber, Selby, who murdered three people and maimed two during a 1974 robbery of the Ogden Hi-Fi Shop, fasted, prayed, sang hymns and discussed religion with his Seventh-day Adventist pastor and a Roman Catholic priest.

Just before the Rev. Thomas Moersman left Selby, the inmate asked the priest to send a message.

Executions dissimilar as principal characters

Editor's note: Ten years ago, Bill Beecham, Associated Press chief of bureau in Salt Lake City, covered the execution of Gary Gilmore. Friday he watched Pierre Dale Selby die by lethal injection. The two events were as dissimilar as the killers.

POINT OF THE MOUNTAIN, Utah — The chapel-like quiet in the small chamber where Pierre Dale Selby was executed Friday morning stood in stark contrast to the noisy, violent firing-squad death of Gary Gilmore 10 years before.

Selby, who shot five people execution-style in the basement of an Ogden stereo shop, killing three, was injected with three chemicals and died peacefully.

He showed no emotion and with his last words thanked the Utah State Prison warden who then signaled for his death.

Gilmore, who killed two men and demanded to die for it, was shot Jan. 17, 1977, by five rifle barrels after the warden passed out cotton balls for witnesses to stuff in their ears.

Gilmore was the first person executed after the U.S. Supreme Court allowed states to resume use of the death penalty in 1976.

His death wish, punctuated by "See SCENE on Page A2

1:12 MDT, nine minutes after the injection began.

Late Friday, State Medical Examiner Ed Sweeney confirmed he had completed the state-mandated autopsy on Selby, and that the cause of death was consistent with drug overdose. However, he said he was not authorized to release further details.

Funeral arrangements were private, and Selby's Seventh-day Adventist pastor was not releasing details.

"I don't know if it's humane to take a life," said Department of Corrections Director Gary DeLand. "It is, if the ways being used presently, the only one that could go down as peacefully. There was a sense of calm."

Unlike Gary Gilmore who sought his firing-squad death a decade ago, Selby battled for nearly 13 years to save his life, filing appeals at every possible level of judicial review. His final petition to the U.S. Supreme Court was rejected only four hours before the execution on a 6-2 vote.

Andrews, 32, Jonesboro, La., is about six months behind Selby in the appeals process. He said Andrews had become more intense as Selby's execution approached.

"He appears to be more concerned somewhat anxious. His interest in this is a very personal one," said Utah State Prison Warden Jerry Cook.

In a dirt parking lot a half mile east of the prison, about 150 death-penalty opponents held lighted candles in silent protest while others cheered and released balloons at the news of Selby's death.

The two groups remained peaceful despite exchanging angry words when it was announced that the execution had taken place.

"It's such a cold state. For all the religion that's supposed to be here, I wonder where is the Christianity?" said Dede Larsen, mother of death-row inmate Ronnie Lee Gardner.

IDAHO FALLS — The U.S. Department of Energy has announced a three-year, $45 million program to clean up radioactive waste at the Idaho — National Engineering Laboratory.

The remedial program accelerating a testing and monitoring program at the INEL's Radioactive Waste Management Complex, officials said Friday. In June, the program detected minute amounts of plutonium in deep sediments and small levels of carbon tetrachloride in the Snake River Plain Aquifer below the site.

"These are signals we did not expect, so we are concerned," said Don Ofte, INEL manager.

Scientists will complete the geologic sampling program in two to three years rather than eight, Ofte said. Experiments that include reducting to test the feasibility of burning all or part of the more than 2 million cubic feet of transuranic waste that was buried at the site from 1954 until 1970.

"We have to do that with the whole site, it will be a very expensive bid time-consuming effort," said Ofte, who stressed that INEL officials do not consider the contamination a health hazard.

"We want to make sure that it's not a threatening situation in the future," he said.

About $400,000 has been spent to sample INEL wells since July, Ofte said a complete exhaustion of the waste could cost up to $1 billion.

Immigrants, refugees must take AIDS tests

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Public Health Service issued a regulation Friday requiring AIDS tests for all immigrants and refugees seeking to become permanent U.S. residents.

The regulation goes into effect Dec. 1 and means that AIDS blood tests will be required of all 600,000 people seeking to come to the United States annually or who already are here on temporary visas. The tests also would be required of the estimated 60,000 refugees who want to come to the United States each year.

People overseas who want to immigrate to the United States and who test positive for the AIDS virus would be ineligible to come here and foreigners who are already here

Scientists look seriously at humor

The Associated Press

LONDON — Men tell jokes because they have little else to say to one another. Extraterrestrials are too busy to contact Crocodiles contain clues to what causes cleft palates in humans.

By the next century, toothbrushes will be obsolete, huge tides will threaten to engulf Britain and new telephones will thwart obscene calls.

All the latest weird and wonderful breakthroughs in the world of science and technology are coming to light this week in Belfast, Northern Ireland, where the 156-year-old British Association for the Advancement of Science is holding its annual meeting.

Originally established to bring together the latest scientific findings, the association has been partly supplanted by professional journals over the years. But it remains an annual source of delight and fascination, and its proceedings fill whole pages of newspapers in August.

Humor was one of the more serious topics this year.

Jonathan Miller, a qualified physician and accomplished professional comedian, explained his theory that men tell jokes because their social awkwardness inhibits them from discussing more serious things.

"Women simply don't seem to require jokes in the same way men do," he told the 2,500 delegates in an auditorium at Queen's University, Belfast.

Christie Davies, a sociology professor at Reading University, revealed that there is a more or less fixed pool of ethnic jokes, which each country adapts to its own needs. In Britain it's the Irish.

Davies didn't think the jokes were racist, saying: "They are a kind of thermometer rather than causing heat in themselves."

Moving right along, Sir David Bates, professor emeritus of theoretical physics at Queen's University in Belfast, explained the absence of messages from outer space by saying the extraterrestrials were probably overjoyed engaged.

Bates conjectured that civilizations that are technologically ahead of earth are too intelligent to waste their efforts sending messages into space.

Then the conference moved on to teeth, with biologist Mark Ferguson of Manchester University predicting toothbrushes would be obsolete by the next century, thanks to anti-decay vaccines and mouthwashes containing genetically engineered bacteria.

He even imagined tinkering with dental cells to enable adults to grow new teeth whenever the old ones wore out.

Ferguson also reported he was experimenting on crocodile eggs to discover the cause of cleft palate, explaining that the palates of crocodiles and humans have some similar characteristics.

Iran takes tough line on its oil exports

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran does not want to do with the United States but will attack U.S. warships if they threaten Iran's vital exports, Iranian news media quoted President Ali Khamenei as saying Friday.

Prime Minister Hussein Musavi reportedly called for an all-out war effort to defeat Iraq in the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war and crush the "military expeditions of the U.S. and the agents of global arrogance."

Khamenei and Musavi both spoke Friday at the weekly prayer session at Tehran University, and their remarks were quoted by Tehran Radio, monitored in Nicosia.

Khamenei was quoted as saying that Iran does not want "to challenge the United States to a war in the Persian Gulf."

"If the objective of the American presence is to allow the Kuwaiti and Saudi Arabian regimes' oil to be

Warships mistaken for convoy

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Reported convoys of reflagged Kuwaiti tankers in the Persian Gulf actually may have been U.S. warships actually may have been U.S. warships deploying in the U.S. naval buildup in the region, shipping sources said Friday.

Sand-bearing winds during the last few days sharply cut visibility over the gulf and led to conflicting reports whether U.S. warships were escorting another convoy to Kuwait — the sixth one-way voyage since July 20.

The reported activity in the gulf could have been warships preparing to rendezvous with three tankers in international waters off Kuwait's loading terminal, other sources said. The Navy refuses to divulge ship locations or movements.

Pentagon officials said a nine-ship battle group headed by the aircraft carrier Ranger had arrived in the northern Arabian Sea outside the gulf.

Replacing the carrier Constellation in a previously announced turnover, the Ranger will provide combat air support for convoys, whether America or any other power stands in our way," he was quoted as saying.

The Islamic Republic News

Agency also monitored in Cyprus, quoted Khamenei as saying "Iran will retaliate without respect for the presence of U.S. warships in the gulf and without heed to the damage likely to be inflicted on them."

Khamenei's remarks appeared to be a warning to Iraq not to resume its air strikes on tankers carrying Iranian oil.

Iraq halted its ship attacks July 20, apparently under U.S. pressure, after the United Nations Security Council called for an immediate ceasefire.

Iraqi leaders have said they will not hold off hitting Iran's economic lifeline for much longer.

Pentagon officials in Washington, who also demanded anonymously, said the Iranian cargo ship St. Louis entered the gulf carrying two small mine sweepers and some fast patrol craft, and that two other warships had arrived to replace two scheduled to depart.

The London newspaper The Independent quoted European shipping sources as saying the U.S. Navy was considering putting large barges in the Persian Gulf for use as offshore bases for U.S. military forces.

Honasan was security chief for Gen. Juan Ponce Enrile, now a senator, until Mrs. Aquino fired Enrile as defense minister last November after an earlier attempted coup.

Enrile and Honasan played leading roles in the "civilian-military uprising that drove President Ferdinand E. Marcos into exile Feb. 26, 1986. Enrile also was defense minister under Marcos, but changed sides.

Enrile, who was president for 20 years, said he had nothing to do with Friday's rebellion. He and his wife, Imelda, live in Hawaii.

In Washington, presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater said the White House has no evidence that Marcos was involved.

After a long day of fighting, government forces regained control of the half dozen installations seized by the rebels. They included four television stations, part of an air base and the armed forces general staff headquarters at Camp Aguinaldo.

Ramos said loyal troops were sent to San Fernando, 40 miles north of Manila, to retake a national police camp seized by mutineers.

He said Honasan should surrender because "the cause he espoused is lost cause."

The military said 462 rebels were captured. Ramos told subordinate commanders earlier that about 800 troops took part in the mutiny, which would mean hundreds still were at large.

Those commanded by Brig. Gen. Edgardo Abenina in Cebu City flew the Philippine flag upside down at their garrisons, a sign of sympathy for the mutineers. They took over the second largest metropolitan area and confiscated weapons from private security guards.

Ramos announced late Friday that he would fire Abenina. In Cebu City, Abenina expressed sympathy for some rebel goals and frustration over what he called callousness toward soldiers by civilian officials of the Aquino government.

Whenever troops kill Communist guerrillas "soldiers and policemen are accused of violating human rights," he said, adding that more than 40 of his men were killed by Communist rebels this year but "one raised a finger." The Communist rebellion began in 1969 and continues.

Maj. Gen. Donald Snyder, U.S. commander at Clark Air Base, urged the 40,000-member U.S. military community to use caution until conditions are normal. He temporarily banned travel by U.S. military personnel and dependents to and from Manila and between the six American bases here.

The State Department advised American civilians living in Manila to stay at home.

Vietnam may have located MIA remains

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — U.S. military experts who met with officials in Hanoi about 1,778 Americans missing in action say the Vietnamese may have found the remains of three MIAs.

The U.S. military team also returned to Bangkok on Friday from simultaneous but separate talks in Hanoi about Vietnamese disabled in the war that ended 12 years ago. It is said to be the first American team to visit Hanoi since 1975.

A dispatch from the official Vietnam News Agency said the medical specialists visited a rehabilitation center in the Ba Vi district outside Hanoi.

The four military experts from the U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center said in a statement that Vietnam "has advised us that they have recovered three (sets of) remains which show some evidence of being those of Americans."

"But they are continuing their investigation concerning these remains and are not prepared to say with certainty that they are Americans," the statement said.

"They will advise us at a later time concerning their investigations. Vietnam last returned remains believed to be those of MIAs last Oct. 26, when it handed over three sets."

The four days of meetings in Hanoi focused on what the team called discrepancy cases, which the Americans consider the top priority. They are cases in which Washington says are strong evidence showing the Vietnamese knew what happened to the MIAs and include instances where Americans failed to emerge from prisoner of war camps.

two suicide attempts, created an intense sensation that ended with news of his execution flashed across a Times Square marquee.

Asked if he had any final words, Gilmore told his warden: "Let's do it."

Minutes before, as he was led from his cell, Gilmore had needed Selby and fellow "Hi-Fi killer" William Andrews: "Adios, Pierre and Andrews. I'll be seeing you directly."

Gilmore was shot in an old prison courtyard. He was hooded and strapped into a wooden armchair in front of a mattress that absorbed the bullets. Reporters were banned from that execution, but received details from a promoter who bought Gilmore's "life story" and "watched him die."

Gilmore reportedly listened to country-western music as he was driven by van to the cannery from his death row cell.

Four bullets — one of the men had a blank — hit Gilmore's heart. Yet it took two minutes for life to drain from his body. He was cremated, the ashes scattered from an airplane over Utah County farmland.

Gilmore, his wit at times as sharp as his temper, had told his lawyer to dump the ashes down the prosecutor's chimney.

Selby, handcuffed and in leg irons, didn't say a word as he walked the 100 feet from a holding cell to the execution chamber. He asked that some money be turned over to Andrews, thanked the warden and died saying his prayers.

The inmate was tightly strapped onto a brown vinyl-covered gurney, his arms spread at heavy right angles from his body, tubes for the deadly chemicals poking from his wrists.

Nine reporters, five friends invited by Selby, two public officials and several prison personnel saw the convict peacefully slip into death.

He was to be buried in Salt Lake City.

Waste

waste that emits low levels of radiation but decays slowly and lasts thousands of years. The INEL waste, which is primarily shipped from the Rocky Flats Plant in Colorado, is mostly equipment, gloves and clothing that has been contaminated by plutonium or americium.

The problem is only with the waste buried at the site before 1970. Since then, the INEL has stored the transuranic waste on the surface.

The remedial program is expected to employ an additional 60 people at the RWMC in 1988 and another 120 to 130 in 1989, said Jim Zane, manager of prime INEL contractor EG&G Idaho Inc.

A plan for the waste studies will be released within 30 days. It will be sent to the Environmental Protection Agency and the DOE will request the National Academy of Sciences to review its plan.

Core sampling earlier this summer uncovered trace plutonium in 110-foot-deep sediments, which lie above the aquifer at 580 feet. Scientists do not expect the radioactive material to reach the aquifer. They believe the plutonium, and organic compounds found in the aquifer in later sampling, were carried below the RWMC during floods in 1962, 1969 and 1981.

Measures have been taken to prevent further flooding, but Ote said he wants to make sure the scientists are correct about how the material was carried below the site. Additional tests will answer that.

Zane said the question is, "Is it something that went down some years ago or is it something that is leaking now?"

Gov. Cecil Andrus urged U.S. Energy Secretary John Herrington in July urging him to act more quickly on efforts to move the waste out of the state. Ote said the decision on the remedial program was made because he shares the governor's concern.

"You can't be in Idaho for more than a few days before you recognize the importance of the aquifer to the region," he said.

One of the INEL's greatest attributes is that it is the cleanest DOE site in the nation, Ote said. "We want to do everything necessary to keep it that way."

Zane said the speed of the decision and the amount of money DOE has allocated for the effort show how important the INEL is to the nation. Other DOE facilities, such as the Hanford Nuclear Reservation in Washington and the Savannah River Plant in South Carolina, have more serious contamination problems.

"To get this kind of attention on this problem is significant," Zane said.

"The results will be provided to consular officials... that disease reporting requirements of the country will be followed, and that a classification of (AIDS virus) infection will make them ineligible to receive a visa," the regulation said.

It said that applicants will receive counseling in the event of a positive test result.

The Supplemental Appropriations Act of 1987 signed by President Reagan July 11 required that the AIDS virus be added to the list of dangerous contagious diseases.

The AIDS tests already are required of the 2 million illegal aliens who are expected to apply for amnesty by next May 4 under the new immigration law.

Some 560,000 aliens who already have applied for amnesty will be tested later when they apply for permanent resident status, said Jervia.

Those applying for amnesty who test positive for AIDS will present a difficult problem for the federal government.

Under the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, they cannot be deported after voluntarily stepping forward in good faith to seek immigrant status, even though they test positively for AIDS.

However, they might be deportable at some later time, because the new law prohibits employers from hiring illegal aliens. Those seeking amnesty who test positively for AIDS will remain in illegal status.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, attacks the body's immune system, rendering it incapable of resisting other diseases and infections. It can inflict harm on both heterosexual and intravenous drug users.

Rescue workers gather around wrecked school bus, trying to free students trapped inside after collision

Florida bus-truck crash leaves 6 dead

BRONSON, Fla. (AP) — A school bus carrying handicapped children home from school was hit broadside by a tractor-trailer Friday at a rural intersection, killing six people and injuring 17.

The dead were believed to have been the bus driver and five children, said Levy County Sheriff's Department spokeswoman Ola Crews.

The truck, loaded with concrete blocks and traveling 40 mph, ran a stop sign, according to police and witnesses.

The school bus carried 19 handicapped children from the Williston Middle and Bronson Elementary schools, along with two adult aides and the driver, said Janice Zipperer, Levy County School Board secretary.

William Franco was driving about 100 yards behind the bus when the accident occurred.

"I saw the impact — the truck never slowed down," said Franco.

For about an hour after the accident rescue teams worked feverishly to extract children from the crumpled bus, which ended up in a ditch with the truck embedded in its side, said neighbor Troy Reid.

"They were using hacksaws around the windows to cut some of the people out," he said. "Also they were hooking up chains to the side of the bus and trying to pull it off."

Bodies lay under blankets, while helicopters and ambulances ferried away the 17 injured victims, including the truck driver, the two aides and 14 children, to Gainesville-area hospitals.

One victim taken to Shands Hospital was Lester Lee, a 17-year-old retarded boy who attended "Williston," said his aunt, MARY Edmondson.

"He can't see, he can't hear and he can't speak," she said. The boy was in surgery and she did not know his condition.

The boy's mother, Caroline Brown, was on her way to Tacoma, Wash., for the funeral of her brother, who was killed in an accident, Ms. Edmondson said.

"She doesn't know about her son yet," said the aunt.

When Lester's grandfather, Paul Brown, arrived at Shands, he collapsed with chest pains, said Ms. Edmondson.

Parents were meeting at Chieffland Elementary to learn the status of their children, school officials said.

Identifying the dead was difficult because the children did not carry identification, and teachers were brought to the crash scene to help the Medical Examiner's office, sheriff's officials said.

Bronson, with about 700 residents, is in Levy County southwest of Gainesville.

Airlines sign terms to cut late flights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under government pressure, six major airlines signed a consent agreement Friday requiring them to shift schedules to eliminate the number of chronically late flights at four of the nation's busiest airports.

"We were presented with a fait accompli," said a spokesman for Eastern Airlines, one of the six carriers.

Industry sources said the Transportation Department, in a campaign to reduce the soaring number of delays, has threatened the carriers with stiff civil penalties for flights that are repeatedly late.

Under the agreement announced by the department, the airlines promise to adjust schedules at four airports: Hartsfield, Atlanta, Chicago O'Hare, Dallas-Fort Worth and Boston Logan.

In addition to Eastern, the airlines that signed the agreement are American, Continental, United, USAir and Delta.

Piedmont Airlines also had been under government scrutiny as part of its probe into scheduling at the four airports, but department sources said the carrier was dropped from the discussions because its scheduling at the four airports did not raise causes for concern.

Under the consent agreement, the airlines must shift the schedules of their chronically late flights so that they arrive within 80 minutes of their scheduled arrival, time 50 percent of the time by November and 75 percent of the time by next April.

Some of those flights, the government has contended, have been arriving late 70 percent or more of the time under current scheduling.

The Transportation Department also has been examining scheduling practices at four other airports — New York's LaGuardia, Newark International, Denver Stapleton and San Francisco International — and is likely to seek similar agreements with air carriers there as well, industry sources suggested.

Gifts, letters, money pouring in for girl, 4

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The 4-year-old girl who survived the crash of Northwest Flight 255 has received more than 800 gifts and $77,000 in donations since the world learned of her ordeal, officials said.

In all, more than 12,000 pieces of mail have poured in for Cecilia Cichan at the C.S. Mott Children's Hospital and the University of Michigan Burn Center, where she was in far condition Friday.

"We're piled to the ceiling, so the post office is holding it for us until we can open some of this," said Dean Lidgard, administrative assistant at Mott hospital.

Cecilia was the only person aboard the flight to survive the Aug. 18 crash that killed 156 people, including her parents and brother.

"People are looking for a bright spot in this terrible tragedy and she is it," said Lidgard, who is coordinating the mailroom reception of Cecilia's letters and packages.

Cecilia's relatives have not decided what to do with the stacks of gifts, some of which have been taken to her bedside, Lidgard said. Because Cecilia is resting in the hospital's burn unit, only those gifts that will not affect the area's sterile environment are taken to her.

"The family comes in two or three times a day and they pick out the articles with the help of the nurses," Lidgard said. "Cecilia uses it and then they bring it back and bring her a few more items. Some day she'll see the outpouring that has occurred."

The mail has included get-well wishes from a group of U.S. Marines in North Carolina, a stuffed animal from a little girl in France and a balloon from pop singer Lionel Richie.

"Some little girl wrote 'when you're feeling better and come through my town, do drop by,'" Lidgard said.

Up to 10 volunteers are processing mail at hospitals, but are about one day behind in opening the mail, Lidgard said.

Mail also is coming to the hospitals for Lawrence Favio, who was injured when the vehicle he was driving was struck by a piece of debris from the plane. He was listed in serious condition Friday at the burn center.

So far, about $3,000 in donations have been sent to Favio, Lidgard said.

Lidgard said the outpouring of gifts and donations for Cecilia was greater than for any other patient during his 10 years at the hospital.

Cecilia, who suffered a broken leg and collarbone, cuts on her head and burns over 30 percent of her body, likely will undergo more skin grafts soon, said hospital spokeswoman Catherine Cureton.

She said some of the grafts performed on her right hand on Aug. 21 may not have been successful. It was not known when Cecilia would be released from the hospital, Cureton said.

Secord says Iran offered to assist raid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Iranians dislike the radical Lebanese who took American hostages and they offered to provide information for a U.S. raid to free the men, Richard W. Secord said in a magazine interview released Friday.

Secord, a retired Air Force major general who played a central role in the Iran-Contra case, said the Iranians told him they did not completely control Hezbollah, the Lebanese Shiite umbrella group.

Although the Iranians succeeded in securing freedom for some hostages, they said "they had to pay off the Hezbollah" to achieve results, he said.

U.S. officials have said they believe the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime has leverage over the pro-Iranian groups holding the hostages.

Secord, in an interview in the October edition of Playboy magazine, said Iranian officials also realized they would have benefited from a U.S. armed raid to free the hostages.

"They would have made speeches about the Great Satan, gone to prayers and had a wonderful time. At the same time, they could have rested assured that we had knocked off quite a few of those bastards that they couldn't stand either."

Secord, who handled logistical details of the Iran-Contra affair for Lt. Col. Oliver North, the former National Security Council aide, said the idea of cooperation leading to a raid was brought up as recently as last fall in a meeting between Americans and an Iranian delegation with ties to Hashemi Rafsanjani, the speaker of Iran's parliament.

But North and his superiors balked at the idea, Secord said, because cooperation with the Iranians was such a sensitive issue and because they thought they could get immediate results by negotiation.

In the interview, Secord also said: "North's superiors took advantage of his energy and non-stop work habits. He was like a mule — and you know how the Army treats mules. You load him up and load him up until pretty soon his back breaks. Then you eat him."

While North was physically courageous and good at bureaucratic infighting, Secord said, "I don't think he's real tough. ... Ollie is the kind of guy I would like to keep on tap — but not on top."

• Secord's primary motivation in selling weapons to Tehran was securing the release of the hostages, not opening lines of communication to the Iranians.

Reagan has said the latter goal was crucial. But Secord, asked if Reagan saw a geopolitical advantage in dealing with Iran, said, "That's too complex for the Reagan mentality. I don't think he could handle it."

• Members of an Iranian delegation that made a secret trip to Washington last year wanted female companionship "so their handlers made 44 calls to escort services until they got some girls to go to the Virginia hotel where they were staying."

• He said he learned about the calls because the room was bugged by the CIA, which was upset about having to pay for the telephone calls.

• Several meetings between Americans and an Iranian delegation known as the "second channel" were taped on videocameras and with audio recorders.

"I facilitated the taping for the CIA," Secord said. "The idea was to have an accurate record when the investigations came. As they always do."

Mark Belnick, an attorney for the Senate Iran-Contra committee, said he was unaware of any videotapes of meetings between the Iranians and the Americans.

• A meeting in Tehran in May 1986 between Iranian officials and an American delegation headed by Robert C. McFarlane, the former national security adviser, was poorly planned.

Reagan calls Bork strong law-and-order judge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan renewed his battle for Senate confirmation of Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork with a declaration Friday that "the purpose of criminal justice is to find the truth, not to coddle criminals."

Reagan pictured Bork, a judge on the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington, as a strong law-and-order judge during a meeting here with administration and law enforcement officials.

Illinois Gov. James Thompson, a former U.S. attorney, said the group, representing sheriffs, chiefs of police, state troopers and other law officers, unambiguously supported Bork.

"Nearly one-third of the Supreme Court's time is taken up with criminal justice, yet there has been little focus ... on Judge Bork's views in this area," Thompson said.

"We told the president that we would go from this meeting today to form a national group of law enforcement officers to lobby for Judge Bork," he said.

Reagan opened the meeting by saying: "I am particularly pleased to have your views on a matter that will have continuing impact on law enforcement, and criminal justice long after my administration leaves office."

"The Supreme Court has always had a critical role in the administration of criminal justice both at the state and federal level," Reagan said.

"And that's why when it comes to crime and safety of our citizens, it's so important for our courts to take a tough, clear-eyed look at the Constitution's purpose to establish justice and ensure domestic tranquility," he added.

Wright silent on Contra aid proposal

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright met with Nicaraguan Contra leaders Friday, then refused to say whether he would go along with their proposal to put U.S. military aid in control in case peace negotiations with the Sandinista government fail.

Six members of the civilian directors governing the Nicaraguan Resistance conferred with President Reagan in Los Angeles on Thursday and proposed that their aid be held in abeyance to show their commitment to peace.

Wright, a Democrat, met with directors of the Nicaraguan Resistance movement in a hotel at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. After the meeting, he held a news conference with the three — Alfredo Cesar, Alfonso Robelo and Aristides Sanchez.

Preservation of explorers' trail in dispute

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sections of the Lewis and Clark trail in eastern Idaho are being destroyed by clearing despite National Historic Landmark status, say a historian and an Idaho guidebook author.

But the timber company operating in the area strongly denies the charges and says it's doing everything it can to preserve the trail.

The trail of the early 18th century explorers that opened the West runs through the Clearwater National Forest. But the U.S. Forest Service says it is powerless to do anything about logging by the Plum Creek Timber Co. on private lands within the forest.

Plum Creek of Missoula, Mont. bristles at the charges. "Any allegations that we're uncaring, unfeeling toward the management of trail are fabrications," says Danny Sigars, Plum Creek unit manager. Sigars says the company is pursuing land exchanges with the forest service to preserve parts of the trail at Glade Creek Camp and Packer Meadow.

Cort Conley, author of "Idaho for the Curious," says miles of trail have been obliterated in the area of Rocky Point and the Powell Ranger Station.

Conley said it's too late for that stretch of the trail, that part of the trail is a "one-of-a-kind" remnant, it's gone.

He says it was important because it was the most intact part. The traveler could actually follow the footprints of Lewis and Clark, he says.

University of Idaho history Professor Carlos Schonberger, who specializes in the history of Idaho and the Pacific Northwest, says the "distortion" has occurred since last year when a timber class into the area from Moscow.

This summer when he took another class he found "on the far eastern end of the trail you could hear — chainsaws — all around. There were grapple skidders making a job in the middle of the trail," he says.

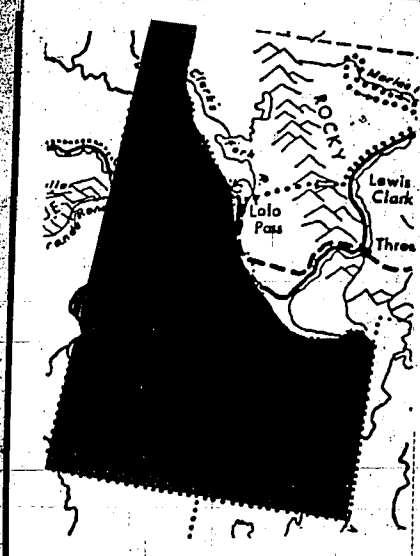

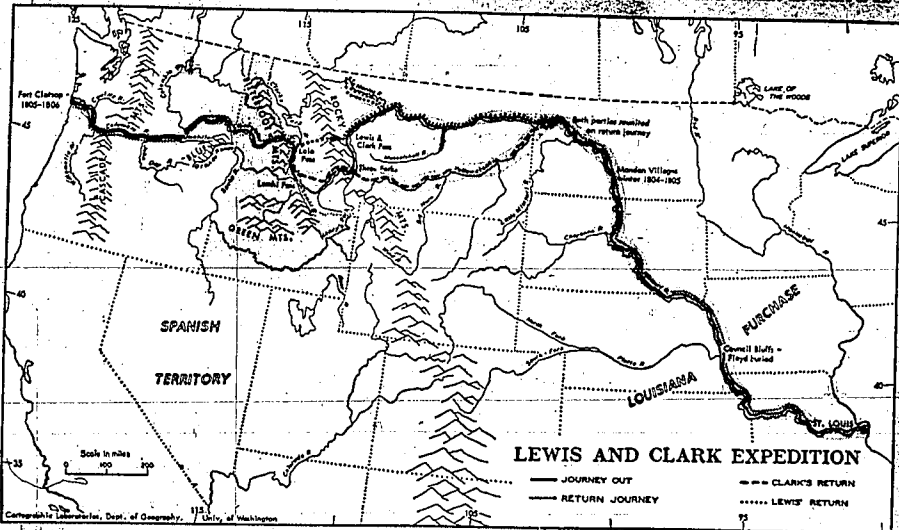

The trail has a rich history and the opening of the American West. Capt. Meriwether Lewis and Capt. William Clark were selected by President Thomas Jefferson to lead an expedition of the newly acquired Louisiana Purchase territory. The two explorers were the first to cross the continent from the mouth of the Mississippi River to where the waters of the Columbia River enter the Pacific Ocean, according to "Makers of American History: The Lewis & Clark Expedition 1804-1806" by G. Marcus Adams.

In Idaho Lewis and Clark used the Clearwater River for some 250 miles. The explorers, who suffered on the trail for three weeks both going up and coming down from the Pacific Ocean, according to "I Will Fight No More Forever," a history of the Nez Perce War by Merrill D. Beal. The trail is tortuous and follows ridge lines arranged in tandem, intervening canyons. Beal says it was with great difficulty that loaded horses could ascend hills and mountains, frequently slipped down.

CSI fitness trail nears completion

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "It's ready." That's the message Rotarian Tom Ashenbrenner and Karl Kleinkopf, College of Southern Idaho athletic director, each stressed this week in discussing completion of the new Fitness Trail at CSI.

"I think it's going to give the community a good feeling," Ashenbrenner said on the eve of completing construction.

teered between 2,500 and 3,000 hours to build the trail. "The people from CSI have a lot of Saturdays and Sundays in that" since construction began in early June.

Ashenbrenner shied away from estimating hours of contributions from Rotarians, but said about 60 or 80 helped out, to match the 60 or 80 CSI workers. In addition, Army Corps of Engineers helped remove dirt and eight to 10 full-time workers helped construct the trail through the Job Training Partnership Act, Kleinkopf said.

Rotary volunteered to organize a project and the trail at CSI seemed an admirable candidate, Ashenbrenner said.

"We wanted to do a community project that would benefit a wide range of people," Ashenbrenner said. "It's not for the needy or the tall, skinny or short — it's for everybody."

Rounding the clubhouse turn for completing the trail, Ashenbrenner said Rotary raised $60,000 to build the community project through donations ranging from $10,000 to $5. All of that will go toward the trail, with between $6,000 and $8,000 being held for future maintenance, he said.

Volunteers are invited to help finish laying the last 300 yards of bark on the 2.1-mile course today.

"Hopefully, this Saturday will finish it," said Kleinkopf, who estimated CSI workers have volun-

A ribbon-cutting ceremony has been tentatively pushed back beyond the second week of September because of the Twin Falls County Fair, Ashenbrenner said.

But that delay for officially opening the trail also allows for the arrival of three color-coded trail maps, Kleinkopf said. The maps will distinguish lengths of different paths on the trail and color-coded signal label general exercise stations and those designed specifically for senior citizens.

Eight of 40 stations sprinkled around the trail are designed specifically for the elderly, such as stretching stations, Kleinkopf said.

"It's for all ages of people, from 90 years old to 9 years old," Kleinkopf said. "We're making something for people of all ages to walk, jog or use the stations."

'Alarmist' AIDS policy controversial

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Quarantining certain AIDS patients and requiring blood tests before hospital admission or marriage are among controversial measures an auditor advocated Friday to halt the spread of that disease.

Gene Antonio's proposals, which one doctor labeled "semihysterical," go beyond what Idaho health officials support.

And his "alarmist" message led a Sun Valley church to cancel his appearance there Saturday night, forcing organizers to find another site for his presentation.

Nevertheless, Antonio's book, "The AIDS Cover Up?" has sold 200,000 through eight editions during the past year. A Twin Falls press conference Friday afternoon was part of his effort to shepherd AIDS toward being "a public health issue rather than a civil rights issue."

Antonio said blood testing before hospital admission would notify health-care workers of risks in treating those patients. He said this would prevent multi-million dollar lawsuits against hospitals failing to identify those patients.

He said "it's unrealistic" for health-care workers to put on full gowns, eye goggles and gloves when treating every patient to avoid AIDS, which is transferred through bodily fluids.

"It's not viable. It's a cop-out. It's medically dishonest," Antonio said.

While agreeing health-care workers needn't "gown up" for every patient, state Epidemiologist Charles Brokopp said his conclusion to test all new patients is one of the paths where Antonio diverges from customary practices.

"And we certainly don't recommend they do that for every patient," said Brokopp, who participated in a panel discussion with Antonio earlier this week, during a phone interview Friday.

Brokopp said gowning-up is only necessary to protect against possible exposure to bodily fluids.

"They don't need to completely gown-up to do a back rub," Brokopp said.

Antonio also advocates prurient blood tests for AIDS, just as for syphilis or gonorrhea.

But Brokopp said those tests are required in few states — not in Idaho — and cost too much for the one-or-two cases they would detect annually. He said the wrong population would be tested for a disease usually transmitted by homosexual men and intravenous drug abusers.

Prurient tests "offers only for very low-risk populations at times when our services are very limited to deal with the disease," Brokopp said.

He said he did agree with Antonio that AIDS appears uniformly fatal and that all people.

Hansen: Testing is inadequate

PETERSBURG, Va. (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. George V. Hansen, jailed in the Federal Correctional Institution here for a parole violation, claims prison officials are not doing enough to combat the deadly disease AIDS.

"If you don't have AIDS and you're jailed here, you could be exposed," Hansen, 51, told six reporters who met with him in his cell on Friday.

Hansen said a program prison officials wanted to test inmates for Acquired Immune-Deficiency Syndrome is inadequate.

Prison spokesman Jack Atherton said all inmates who enter and those who are discharged are given a mandatory AIDS test. The 60-day program was to have ended Aug. 15, but has been extended to Sept. 1, Atherton said.

Hansen said one problem with the test is it does not identify possible victims who were not tested prior to June 15.

Hansen said another concern of his is prison razors. Hansen said he grew a beard while in the Alexandria City Jail to prevent him from catching AIDS by shaving with razors passed among inmates.

"They say you can't get AIDS from razors, but in the film they show inmates here, it says you can get the disease from razor blades," said Hansen, who has grown a heavy beard. "They say you can't get it from mattresses, but why is it when an inmate is diagnosed, they burn the mattress in the cell?"

Last month, 37-year-old Horace Peterson died of an AIDS-related disease, while an inmate at the Petersburg facility. Three other inmates who tested positive for AIDS were taken to the prison's medical facility in Springfield, Mo.

Hansen, 53, is serving the remainder of a 15-month sentence for breaking federal financial disclosure laws while he was a congressman. He is to be released Oct. 1.

Hansen was released on parole last Dec. 19, but was arrested by federal marshals April 16 in Omaha, Neb., after reportedly violating his parole conditions. After being held in Alexandria while his case went before a parole hearing, he was transported to Petersburg on May 16 to finish his sentence.

Hansen also complained that he has been denied sufficient access to the media while at the prison. According to prison policy, inmates are allowed contact with the press every 90 days, but Hansen said one-month intervals are inconvenient when an issue needs immediate attention.

Sun Valley tests show water is not corrosive

The Times-News

SUN VALLEY — Sun Valley water isn't corrosive, says the city water and sewer district manager.

The question came up after Boise decided to test its water for asbestos — following a call for water studies by the Idaho Conservation League. Asbestos, a suspected cancer-causing agent, turned up in Boise water.

Sun Valley has some asbestos pipe in its 40-mile system and corrosive water could release asbestos fibers in the pipe, says Jack Brown, water and sewer manager.

"In fact the reverse situation is true. We are actually getting scaling of the pipe, the water is depositing rather than attacking the pipe," he says.

Despite the concern about asbestos in water, Dick Rogers, senior water quality engineer for the state Division of Environment, says there are no documented health problems from absorbing low-levels of asbestos in water.

Earlier this summer Sun Valley told the media it was testing for asbestos in water but it turns out the tests conducted by CH2MHill were only for corrosiveness, says Brown.

The next step is whether the city should test for asbestos, he says. That will be decided at a board meeting September 22, he says.

Twin Falls has no asbestos pipe in its 126-mile system, says Joe Koon, water superintendent.

Some communities went to asbestos pipe because it was cheaper in the short-run, he said. But in the long-run, more durable cast iron ductile iron pipe is cheaper. Koon says.

Activists call for catastrophic health-care plan

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The activist organizations Idaho Neighbors Network and Idaho Fair Share are calling on Idaho's senatorial delegation to support a U.S. House of Representatives catastrophic health-care plan.

"Senior citizens get medical care first and then get food," said Mildred Howard, president of the Idaho State Council of Senior Citizens and board member of INN. "To them it's really a matter of life and death."

She says senior citizens often have to sell their homes to afford two to three years of nursing home bills and then run out of money.

"There are parasites who take advantage of who's left, especially if they are women," Howard said. "Goodness knows who's out there, and goodness has nothing to do with who's left."

INN and Fair Share are not only joining forces with each other but also with more than 70 national organizations for a postcard campaign supporting amendments made in the House of President Ronald Reagan's catastrophic health care bill. They kicked off that campaign at a press conference at the Twin Falls city bandshell Friday.

Those changes include:

- Protection of family assets from nursing home bills. Gary Sandusky, of the Idaho Health Care Campaign (the name given the project of INN and Fair Share) says entire families can lose houses and savings to the point where they are living below the poverty line. Sandusky said he would like to see the bill protect $12,000 in savings and $950 a month in income.
- Having Medicaid pay for 80 percent of prescription costs. Howard estimated the average senior citizen spends 30 percent of his income on prescription drugs and people older than 75 often spend more 50 percent of their income on prescription drugs.
- Provisions so all out-of-pocket expenses of senior citizens below a certain income level will be paid.

Handouts from the Idaho Health Care Campaign say no more than 10 percent of United States citizens would benefit from the current catastrophic health care plan now before the Senate.

"The Catastrophic Health Care Plan as proposed by Ronald Reagan was inadequate at best," a press release says. "But amendments in the House of Representatives have made the bill an important step in improving America's health care."

"It does not meet the needs of the people," Howard said. "But it is better than nothing."

Idaho Health Care Campaign volunteers will be passing out cards in the Magic Valley area through senior citizens centers and at a booth at the Twin Falls County Fair, said Pam Ghossein, INN community organizer in Twin Falls.

"We need prescriptions so bad," Howard said. "A lot of people don't have anything to live on."

Soviets to let husband emigrate

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — An American woman apparently has won her eight-year fight to persuade Soviet authorities to allow her Soviet husband to emigrate, her congressman says.

House Majority Leader Tom Foley, D-Wash., said Soviet officials in Washington, D.C., had told him that Matvey Finkel will be given permission to leave his country with Susan Graham, his American wife, and their infant daughter.

"They are talking in terms of a year or so," Foley said Thursday. "I'm not ready to pop the champagne corks yet, but I'm very much convinced this is going to go forward. The Soviet Embassy's attitude is so positive, it would be extremely unusual for anything to check it now."

Anna Mae Graham of Spokane.

Ms. Graham's mother, said that she had talked with her daughter by phone in recent days and that progress had been made.

"I think I can't quite believe it, yet," said Mrs. Graham of Foley's comment. "I'm feeling like it's too good to be true. This is something we've waited for for so long."

Ms. Graham, 33, and Finkel, 37, met when Ms. Graham was a Whitworth College student in a Soviet exchange program. They were married in 1979.

She has lived in Moscow on and off since then. Twice, she and her husband were detained for demonstrating publicly against the Soviets' refusal to let Finkel emigrate.

"At one point, KGB agents picked me up on a Moscow street, drove her to the airport and put her on a plane out of the country."

Ms. Graham came to the United States late last year while pregnant with the couple's first child so the baby would be born an American. She returned to the Soviet Union in February with her infant daughter, Emily, who was born New Year's Day, then had to fight with authorities to have the baby recognized on official papers as a U.S. citizen.

Ms. Graham, Finkel, and their daughter plan to settle in Spokane until they decide about their future, Mrs. Graham said.

"Matvey is not going to have to have that sinking heart every time they leave, wondering if they will ever be back again," Mrs. Graham said.

"Now, we can all be together," she said.

Car break-ins, vandalism reported

TWIN FALLS — Some thieves tread on dangerous ground or don't care who they offend.

Police reports in Twin Falls Thursday showed someone broke into the vehicles owned by Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning.

Baxter reported loss of stereo equipment valued at $279.95 and damage to the dash of her vehicle at about $250. The incident occurred while her car was parked at her home at 138 Lakeway Drive.

Another theft was reported by Scott Kain. He said Thursday that someone broke into his vehicle and took two police scanner radio units valued at a total of $400. The theft occurred Wednesday night while the car was parked in front of the theater on Main Avenue North.

Two Jerome juveniles were arrested by Twin Falls city police on charges of malicious destruction in connection with $150 damage to a vehicle.

Police said Kirk Walters of Twin Falls reported the juveniles wanted a gun at him as he drove on Pole Line Road, and then followed him to the Magic Valley Shopping Mall where his camper window was shattered by a gunshot.

Another Twin Falls resident, Thomas Michael Candelario of 612 6th Ave. E., reported $451 damage to his vehicle. He told police someone used what appeared to be a key and scratched the side of car Tuesday night or early Wednesday while it was parked at his home.

Driver injured in careening truck

BURLEY — An eastbound potato truck careened across the median and the westbound lanes of U.S. Interstate 84, through the borrowpit, a fence and into a best field west of Burley early Friday, injuring its driver.

Scott Ellenberger, 32, of Burley was injured but didn't require hospitalization after the accident.

The accident started when his 1974 International pickup truck pulling a trailer blew its left front tire about 11:30 a.m. on a three-mile west of Burley, near the 850 West overpass.

Ellenberger's trailer, loaded with potatoes, overturned in the course of the accident and separated from the truck.

No other vehicles were involved in the accident.

Canoeist challenges North Fork

BANKS (AP) — Rounding a bend with frothy rapids, the North Fork of the Payette River bounds over boulders and pours through a large cleft created by two jagged rocks.

"The rapid is called 'Hounds Head' and for weeks now, a fraternal canoeist Nolan Whitesell, 35, has been making it his official welcome to the North Fork on Thursday.

Several kayakers led the way through the rapid, taming the whitewater with their paddles and oars. Then it was Whitesell's turn. Perched in the center of the bright red, custom-made canoe, he paddled madly to keep his bow centered in the rapid.

The waves inflated his boat, but Whitesell paddled his way through, and then pulled a 180-degree turn behind a rock and "edded out" next to the kayakers, who clearly were impressed.

Whitesell, who owns a custom whitewater canoe manufacturing business in Atlanta, Ga., laid eyes on the North Fork for the first time on Thursday. He had come to test his skills and, he hoped, lay claim to yet another river that no one believed was possible to run in a canoe.

"It definitely lives up to its reputation," Whitesell, 35, said of the North Fork, which also has world-class standing for its lengthy stretches of frothy hydraulics and technically challenging whitewater.

Some say it is the toughest whitewater run in North America.

"I've never seen anything like it," Whitesell said. "It's an impressive river. It's a lot choppier and it has more reactionary waves than what I'm used to. You have to be right on target because there's very little time for recovery."

Whitesell went to the North Fork with hopes of running the entire 16-mile whitewater section from three miles below Smiths Ferry to Banks. But after looking at the lower part of the run, Whitesell ruled out a complete run.

"I can't say it won't ever be done" on the Big Sandy River in West Virginia, he successfully negotiated a rapid called "Big Splat." "It's a 16-foot drop that dumps right on top of a rock."

He also soared over the Great Falls of the Potomac River near Washington, D.C., a 22-foot plunge. "It's all in the design," he said, referring to the canoe's broad bow and stern. "When the boat hits a wave, instead of splitting it in half, the boat kicks out on top of the wave."

Whitesell designed the 14-foot, 3-inch canoe himself. Made of a durable synthetic material, it contains air bags for flotation in its bow and stern. He rests against a seat in the middle, places his legs and feet under a harness.

Medicare to pay Butler's expenses

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — The $12,082 in medical expenses for his carotid artery, which supplies the blood to the head.

He has since been released on bail and returned to his church compound near Hayden Lake, Butler was a federal prisoner at the time of his treatments.

Butler, 69, underwent open heart surgery in Spokane on May 1, one week after he was arrested on federal charges alleging he and other white supremacists had conspired to overthrow the U.S. government.

Butler underwent a second surgery May 7 to remove a blockage in his carotid artery, which supplies the blood to the head.

He has since been released on bail and returned to his church compound near Hayden Lake, Butler was a federal prisoner at the time of his treatments.

Blaine Skinner, U.S. Marshal for the District of Idaho, said Friday the U.S. Marshals Service will pay Butler's medical bills not covered by Medicare because he was a federal prisoner at the time the expenses were incurred.

Skinner said the Marshals Service will pay a $520 bill for Butler's initial hospitalization at Kootenai County Medical Center, where he was taken after he was stricken with chest pains in jail on April 28.

Butler was transferred to Sacred Heart Medical Center in Spokane. His stay there totaled $5,995 — all but $1,084 paid by Medicare, Skinner said.

Medicare paid $2,739 of the $6,873 in doctors' bills for the two operations and treatment, the U.S. marshal said. The Marshals Service will pay the remaining $2,898, Skinner said.

Medicare paid $2,739 of the $6,873 in doctors' bills for the two operations and treatment, the U.S. marshal said. The Marshals Service will pay the remaining $2,898, Skinner said.

Executions brings survivor new life

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — After waiting 13 years for the court-ordered execution, Pierre Dale Selby's Friday morning lethal injection was the beginning of a new life for Cortney Naibitt, a survivor of Selby's bloody 1974 rampage in the Ogden-Hi-Fi Shop.

Selby's death was met with relief by many and grief by a few, but Naibitt said it would allow him to "get back into making something of my life."

Naibitt and Orren Walker survived the 1974 night of horror in the basement of the Ogden stereo shop. Naibitt's mother, Carol, and Walker's son, Mike, were among the three who died at Selby's hands.

Now 29, Naibitt suffers partial paralysis and emotional trauma from the brain damage wrought by a gunshot wound to the head. He also has a severe hearing loss that spelled the end of a 12-year appeals process that culminated in a flurry of unsuccessful petitions Thursday.

Gov. Vern Bangert, whose earlier statement that he would be disappointed if the execution were delayed formed the basis of Selby's eleventh-hour appeals, said he took "no joy or satisfaction in the death of another human being."

But in a statement from Laka Powell, Bangert added: "While the decision to take life is difficult, it was made fairly and judiciously. I believe justice has been served. I hope and pray this will allow all those involved to put this tragedy behind them."

infected should be counseled. But such "contact tracing" for people with AIDS antibodies is already in place.

Another Idaho law allows health officials to quarantine people with communicable diseases including AIDS. Brokopp said the law has been used to detain tuberculosis patients and AIDS patients spreading their disease.

But widespread AIDS quarantining is considered unrealistic because it would last a lifetime, Brokopp said.

While apparently agreeing with that philosophy, Antonio sounded more willing to lock up people spreading AIDS.

"They have to be prevented from doing so," Antonio said. He said quarantining is acceptable because the disease that ravages the body's immune system, and also cuts lifespan to years instead of decades.

"But their life will not be all that long," he said.

"These controversial statements raised the ire of doctors in the Ketchum area.

"He does quote things out of context," said Dr. Stephen Luber, who added that Antonio "raises questions in semi-hysterical fashion that is designed to cause fear rather than understanding."

On advice from Luber and another local doctor, the Rev. James Wilson said the Catholic Church of Our Lady would support Antonio's presentation set for tonight.

"In this field I am going to listen to the doctors and not a lay person," Wilson said. "They were very concerned he was alarmist and overstating the case and I took their advice."

Nancy Thorpe, a Hailey organizer, said the cancellation sounded like part of the cover-up.

"I really think that content of Antonio's speech had a lot to do with it (the cancellation)," Thorpe said.

Luber said he wasn't against Antonio speaking, but that he simply wanted to advise Wilson about Antonio.

"He could speak anywhere he wants, I couldn't care less," Luber said.

Thorpe arranged for Antonio to speak at Ketchum's Old City Hall at 7 p.m.

Antonio's Idaho appearances are sponsored by Christian Voice of Idaho, Concerned Women for America of Idaho, American Freedom Coalition of Idaho, Idaho Eagle Forum, Traditional Values Coalition of Pac-8, and Idaho Home Educators.

Trail

The Lolo Trail later became a National Historic Landmark but this doesn't protect it, says Karl Roehke, Clearwater National Forest archaeologist. The trail also includes the Nez Perce trail used by the Nez Perce in their flight from Gen. O.O. Howard during the Nez Perce war.

Roehke says the forest service has also impacted the trail, he says. "But Plumb Creek is not using the contents the forest service is," Roehke says. The forest service has to comply with federal legislation on public lands, he says.

Plumb Creek is cutting around 13 Mile Campsite and Parachute Hill, Roehke says. "The impression I get is maximum timber production," he says.

However, Plumb Creek has marked the trail and the company working with the Governor's Lewis and Clark Trail Committee to develop a multiple plan for the trail, he says. Plumb Creek is reducing the size of a gravel pit to preserve the trail tread along the edge, Roehke says.

"If it weren't for this company, Plumb Creek and Glade Creek Camp wouldn't exist," says Sigars of Plumb Creek, a subsidiary of Burlington Northern.

He says the company has 13 miles of logging around the trail.

The company is not responding to law and public pressure but is preserving parts of the trail because it is the thing to do, Sigars says. Plumb Creek is making the land trades with the forest service by choice, he says.

The exchanges won't be consummated until 1988 at which point the forest service will acquire one half section of Packer Meadow and associated timber and 100 acres at Glade Creek Camp, said Sigars.

Jim Fazio, chairman of the Idaho Lewis and Clark Trail Committee, says Plumb Creek is trying to keep skidders away for the area between Lolo Creek Pass and Glade Creek Camp. Asked if Conley's charges of obliteration of sections of the trail were true, Fazio said it is Plumb Creek's policy that "without tax breaks, the company cannot avoid cutting. Fazio, associate dean of U. of I. College of Forestry, says the most significant areas such as Glade Creek have been protected.

"But author Conley says the forest service hasn't been aggressive enough in protecting the trail.

And the lack of maps shouldn't keep people from taking advantage of the trail, he said.

With a bark surface the trail will have to be packed down during the next few days, through snow, Kleinkopf said. He did cost as the major factor preventing paving the trail.

"We didn't have $100,000 to put in asphalt," said Kleinkopf, who added, "orthopedic people will tell you it (bark) is better to run on."

Mormon head dedicates temple

FRIEDRICHSDORF, West Germany (AP) — Mormon Church president Ezra Taft Benson on Friday sealed into place the cornerstone of a new temple that will serve about 60,000 church members in Europe...

was helped to the cornerstone by an assistant. With trowel in hand, first Benson and then other church leaders spread mortar onto the top of the cornerstone.

European spokesman, said about 1,300 church members attended Friday morning's dedication service, which was only for Germans. He said 15,000 Mormons living in Europe — including 10,000 in Austria — are expected to attend the three days of dedication ceremonies.

The temple will serve an estimated 60,000 Mormons living in northern Europe, church officials say.

Intern learns trade in rural setting

By KRISTIN TUCKER Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD When Randy Foreman returns to Iliff School of Theology next month, he'll have the usual stories about how he has pleased his vocation church school classes he's taught, the youth retreat he led, meetings he attended and politics he's savored.

Foreman, age 36, has spent the summer as an intern with the Castleford United Methodist Church and the denomination's Small Church Center. It's been an intense, busy summer charged with a variety of roles and responsibilities — and a rare opportunity for Foreman to experience what it's like to pastor a small rural church.

Since his arrival June 1, Foreman has lived on a Castleford family farm, shared pastoral responsibilities with Castleford pastor Rev. Lura Kidner-Miessem, and worked one day a week in the Small Church Center in Filer.

Foreman is no stranger to rural life. He was raised in Moit, Montana, a town which he says "means Castleford look quite large." A year ago, "Divine Inspiration" and a call to the ministry took him to seminary in Denver, Colorado — a far cry from the rural churches he expects to pastor some day.

McConnell believes most seminarians do an inadequate job of equipping first-time pastors to face the realities of church ministry and small church life.

"There's a basic need to help seminarians better prepare to be in the trenches or rural churches," says McConnell, director of the United Methodist Small Church Center. "The whole church needs to take more responsibility for training pastors in more specialized ministries, including serving small, rural churches."

As part of his internship, Foreman has prepared a directory of resources for small churches, listing some 30 agencies offering support and assistance to people in crisis. How do you help a parishioner facing bankruptcy? What do you do about family violence? What support groups are available locally? Who offers bereavement counseling? What about legal assistance, or planning a program on rural issues?

These are among the questions answered by Foreman's directory, which will soon be ready for distribution through Magic Valley ministries, associations and the Small Church Center.

To research the directory, Foreman has visited dozens of local agencies, giving him a better picture of what resources are available in a rural area, and what resources are needed by rural parishioners.

McConnell says 65 percent of United Methodist Churches across the country are small (under 200 members), yet have small congregations comprise but 12 to 15 percent of the denomination's membership.

Small churches with small budgets tend to have small budgets that can't stretch to finance even a short-term intern program.

But this program makes sense to people, McConnell says, and contributions from families and churches funded this summer's intern program. "It was the easiest money we have ever raised," he adds. Foreman's work has been supervised through the Small Church Center and the Castleford Church, and McConnell hopes this is just the beginning. "We hope to expand the program both in terms of the number of seminarians brought here each year, and the length of time an intern will serve," he says.

Foreman will be heading for a quick trip to Montana soon, then returning to Denver for another year of learning. Like most seminarians, Iliff is located in an urban area and Foreman anticipates he will be feeling a bit of culture shock upon his return.

On his way out of town, he's looking forward to visiting on Twin Falls County Park. He has fond memories of his childhood visits to the annual fairs in Billings, and hopes the Filer Fairgrounds still embody that "country fair flavor" that he believes is missing from many fairs today.

Foreman sees the fair as a fitting end to his summer. "This has given me a gradual understanding of how rural life and ministry all tie together," he muses. "These are busy people at a busy time."

'Speaking in tongues' beyond words

NEW YORK (AP) — Like a ripe peach, you can't know its deliciousness until you taste it. That's one description given of that strange religious phenomenon — "speaking in tongues."

It has spread extensively among Christians these days, but it still baffles those who don't do it. It's also a mystery to those who do. They say it's great. And now that the practice has broken out of its Pentecostal confines and spawned "charismatic" in mainline denominations, curiosity about it grows the more, in churches and homes.

Just how does it feel and function in a person? Several participants recently were questioned about it at an Assemblies of God convention in Oklahoma City. Among their descriptions: "It's exhilarating, wonderful." "It brings the warmth of God's presence." "It's a divinely inspired language of prayer." "It's being carried beyond yourself."

With all the inner beneficence ascribed to tongues-speaking, even participants say they don't understand the stream of syllables they utter, but God does, binding them with him in adoration.

"It involves you with someone you're deeply in love with and devoted to," says Rev. Bill L. Williams of San Jose, Calif. "We don't understand the verbiage, but we know we're in communication." That awareness is beyond emotion, beyond intellect, he says.

"It transcends human understanding. It is the heart of man speaking to the heart of God. It is deep, inner heart understanding. It comes as supernatural utterances, bringing an intimacy with God."

Tongues-speaking is regarded a sign of baptism in the Holy Spirit, paralleling the first Pentecost recounted in Acts 2, when the spirit-filled apostles were understood by people of many languages.

Until recently, most historic churches held that the phenomenon, also called glossolalia, could only be practiced by the apostles, but it emerged anew in Pentecostalism about the turn of this century.

In the late 1960's, it began appearing in mainline denominations and now involves "charismatic" groups in Roman Catholic, Lutheran, Presbyterian, Episcopal, United Methodist and other bodies.

About 40,000 of them met in New Orleans in July, an ecumenical jamboree of tongues-speaking praises to God and evangelistic fervor. Church statistician David Barrett said the growing movement now totals 266 million worldwide.

"It's not just a novelty, but it builds up the church," says the Rev. James Falter of Shawnee, Okla., among those questioned at the Assemblies of God meeting.

Of tongues-praying, he says, "It's just a great exuberant feeling. The only way to understand it is to experience it."

The Rev. Billy Martin, of Farmington, N.M., says that in tongues-speaking, the Holy Spirit "takes the most unruly member of the body and controls it. You don't do it. The Spirit does."

The Rev. David P. Strickland of Memphis, says "it's an intensely personal, internal communion with God. You speak mysteries unto God."

"Since I don't understand the words, it has to be the Lord," said the Rev. Robert Teel of Tahomong, Okla., says "It helps our infirmities and builds up faith. The Spirit guides our prayers in utterances unknown to the human mind."

Asked if the experience is most moving the first time and later becomes more routine, he said, "It's great all the way. It's wonderful."

The Rev. Dick Champion of Springfield, Mo., editor of an Assemblies weekly, Pentecostal Evangel, says tongues-praying "is being carried beyond yourself. It's being lost in the presence of God."

"You reach a point where individual vocabulary can't express the praise, but the Holy Spirit uses your vocal chords to do it for you in ways that transcend your own understanding."

Julien Turnage, Assemblies information secretary in Springfield, says that sometimes when exhausted and under pressure, such prayer brings "a refreshing in spirit. . . I can deal with things I couldn't do before."

Guests view space shuttle booster motor at Morton Thiokol plant prior to three failed NASA test attempts

Malfunctions delay shuttle rocket test

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) - A critical first full-scale test of the redesigned space shuttle rocket will be postponed still further while engineers sort out problems that caused the firing to be aborted three times, officials said Friday.

In a joint announcement, NASA and rocket manufacturer Morton Thiokol Inc. said engineers will conduct several countdown dry runs to test systems that malfunctioned on Thursday. This work is expected to take most of Saturday.

A decision will be made Saturday night on a day for the test firing, the announcement said.

The statement said officials are working "at a measured pace and won't reschedule the test until they are satisfied that all problems identified yesterday are fully understood and have been resolved."

On Thursday, officials had said the test would be conducted on Saturday.

Thiokol engineers conducted three countdowns toward ignition of the test rocket on Thursday and were forced to stop short of the firing each time. Twice the countdowns were carried to within seconds before it was halted.

The announcement said the final test attempt failure Thursday was traced to a miscommunication between two computers which are part of the test stand equipment.

Two other countdowns were stopped by a broken water main—and by an electronic malfunction.

The space agency regards the test of the redesigned booster as essential for the space shuttle program.

The redesign corrects flaws in the booster that caused Challenger to explode on Jan. 28, 1986, killing the seven crew members. The new design has been tested in subscale firings but a full-scale, 1.2-million-pound rocket engine using the new design has yet to be tested.

Richard Truly, NASA's chief of space flight, said the failed test Thursday would not affect the space agency's plans to resume shuttle flights next June, though he said the schedule was tight.

Thiokol officials, who had hoped for a smooth test to help revive the reputation of the rocket manufacturer, said they were disappointed but not discouraged.

"We didn't have a problem with the (rocket) motor," said Allan McDonald, the Thiokol chief of the redesign effort. "We did have problems with plumbing and with some electronic systems."

The water system that failed and the ground control computer, that malfunctioned are not used in actual space shuttle flights. They are needed only for the ground tests.

A presidential commission that investigated the Challenger accident put the blame on a flawed rocket joint that allowed superheated gases to leak and caused a fuel tank to ignite.

The shuttle fleet was grounded while NASA and Thiokol conducted a $400 million rocket redesign effort.

The new design strengthens the rocket joint with a metal latch, added a third O-ring seal, used a new bonded insulation and put heaters on the joints to keep them warm in cold temperatures. Engineers also redesigned the cooling system in a joint that connects the nozzle to the rocket.

The new design is to be tested four times, at least, before the first shuttle flight, now set for next June 2. Three other tests are planned after the first flight, including one in which the rocket will be chilled to near freezing.

Forest Service cuts plans for log sale

BOISE (AP) - Amid allegations of illegal concessions, the Forest Service officials said Friday they have dropped plans for a possible timber sale in the Payette National Forest and defended actions in the Boise.

Earlier in the day, the Idaho Sportsman's Coalition accused the Forest Service of "outrageous and illegal" efforts to preclude consideration of roadless areas in both forests for preservation as wilderness.

Spokesman Ron Mitchell specifically cited the construction of a 14-mile logging road west and south of Deadwood Reservoir in the Boise National Forest and the marking of a timber sale in the French Creek Roadless Area of the Payette.

Claiming the Forest Service had broken faith with the public, Mitchell said both roadless incursions violated a 1983 federal appellate court decision barring any development in roadless areas under wilderness review with a full analysis of the impact and public review of any alternatives.

Mitchell said the coalition would take legal action to block the Payette timber sale.

John Hooper, McCall District Ranger in the Payette National Forest, said the helicopter timber sale once considered for the French Creek area was dropped two weeks ago.

"We were looking at some spruce bark beetle infestation," Hooper said in response to the coalition charges. "That's the only sale I know of that we were even considering, and we're no longer considering it. Because it's in the roadless area, by the time we got through the legal implications of it, the timber would no longer be salvageable."

Chuck Nelson, land management officer for the Boise National Forest, acknowledged a timber sale has been proposed for the Deadwood Reservoir area.

But, he said, "We've gone through the procedures for public involvement for that," and nothing illegal has occurred.

Mitchell said the existence of the road, apparently built in 1984 at a cost of over $350,000, effectively precluded further consideration of the Trail Creek area in the Boise for wilderness preservation.

That 7,000-acre area is part of the nearly 9 million acres of Idaho forest land currently under review for possible wilderness designations. Gov. Cecil Andrus has been assessing wilderness recommendations in anticipation of launching negotiations with Sen. James McClure to end the long-running debate over additional wilderness for the state.

Although Andrus said earlier this summer that light roads could be put into roadless areas to allow some logging as long as they could be obliterated later, Mitchell said the road in the Boise National Forest was a standard logging road "built to last."

He also charged the Forest Service with trying to mask the existence of the road by leaving it off a map they gave Andrus when he flew over the general area last week.

Mitchell said the actions in the Boise National Forest only underscore a stated federal policy of ignoring the appellate court ruling unless a public outcry occurs.

Batt drops re-election plans for Senate seat

LEWISTON (AP) - One of state government's most respected Republicans, veteran lawmaker Bill Batt, says he probably will not seek re-election to his Senate seat from Wilder next year.

"It's quite likely that I won't run," Batt said, explaining that he is "phasing out of politics."

"The Canyon County farmer and businessman has also resigned as Idaho's Republican national committeeman, one of the state's representatives in national party councils. The Republican State Central Committee will select a successor on Saturday in Boise.

"I'm not nearly as enthusiastic as I used to be," said Batt, who expressed some disillusionment with national politics.

Batt was among the few to voice reservations about the dramatic spending increasing the Legislature approved last winter at the urging of Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus amid optimism about the state's economic future. Batt contends the state's economic problems are far from over, calling the 1987 session an aberration. Government services will not be successfully shielded from continuing hard economic times, he predicts.

At 60, Batt has been in state government for nearly a quarter century, serving an initial two-year term in the House in 1966 before moving to the Senate. He was Senate Majority Leader for six years and President Pro Tem for two before winning a four-year term as lieutenant governor in 1978.

Four years later he fell 3,600 votes short of unseating Democratic Gov. John Evans and after two years on the sidelines returned to the Senate in 1985. He was Senate GOP Caucus Chairman in 1986 and Andrus is currently serving as chairman of the State Affairs Committee.

Bennett assures right-wing lawmakers

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) - U.S. Education Secretary William J. Bennett told conservative state legislators Friday they have a strong ally in the American public when pushing the Reagan administration's educational agenda.

"On almost every issue, the American people support what this administration has been saying about education," Bennett told about 900 conservative state legislators gathered for the annual American Legislative Exchange Council.

Bennett is one of several administration officials scheduled to address the national organization of conservative state legislators.

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole and Gov. John Sununu of New Hampshire, chairman of the National Governors Association, are scheduled to give speeches Saturday.

Pointing to a recent Gallup poll on education issues, Bennett said a majority of the American public favor higher standards, a greater say in curriculum, parental choice of schools for their children attend, school prayer and teacher certification.

"I have the notion that people who teach history should have studied history," Bennett said.

The only Reagan-backed issue that did not meet with favor in the Gallup poll was a question about courses on values. Bennett said that is because parents believe "courses on values are going to be trouble. Values are something that we can teach through example of teachers and parents."

When arguing for the Reagan administration's agenda for schools in their states, Bennett urged the legislators to remember their powerful ally.

"It is important for you to know that you have a very substantial ally behind you, the American people," Bennett said. Their common sense should guide lawmakers' school decisions, he said.

On another matter, Bennett said students need to be made aware of AIDS at an early age and with accurate information.

But Bennett said the deadly virus "just makes one more compelling reason to stress restraint" in telling students about sex.

It needs to be stressed to children, the best prevention is abstinence and restraint," he said.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome attacks the body's immune system and leaves its victims prey to a variety of ailments. The deadly disease is mainly transmitted through body fluids.

Convict loses trial bid

IDAHO FALLS (AP) - An Idaho Falls man serving a life prison sentence for a 1981 murder in Idaho Falls has lost a bid for a new trial in 7th District Court.

Judge H. Reynolds George rejected the request from Scott David Bean, 24, on Thursday.

Bean was convicted in 1982 along with William Caudill for the October 1981 stabbing death of Neal Walker of Idaho Falls. Walker's body was found in Freeman Park wrapped in a rug. He had been stabbed 15 times, and his throat was slashed.

Walker was 18 when he died. Both Bean and Caudill were 19.

Martin Stucky, Bean's attorney, argued Thursday that a deposition Caudill gave in February 1986 in which he said he lied at his trial was sufficient grounds to ask for a new trial or at least reconsideration of Bean's sentence. Caudill had testified that he watched as Bean did the stabbing.

Stucky said that if Caudill's trial testimony had been similar to the deposition, it could have resulted in Bean being convicted of a lesser charge, such as a second-degree murder or manslaughter.

But Bonneville County Prosecutor Kimball Mason told George on Thursday that the case against Bean involved "overwhelming evidence" from several witnesses, and Caudill's testimony was not crucial to Bean's conviction. He also argued that Caudill's deposition "doesn't say that Mr. Bean is any less guilty, it just says Caudill is more guilty than he testified at trial."

George made his ruling from the bench at the conclusion of the nearly one-hour hearing.

1-car rollover kills French student

AMERICAN FALLS (AP) - A French foreign exchange student who has been killed in a one-car rollover on Interstate 86 near American Falls.

Jean-Philippe Demanibus, 22, was eastbound on the freeway about 6:30 p.m. Thursday when his car went off the left edge of the pavement. He overcorrected and the vehicle rolled off the right shoulder, rolled several times and came to rest on its top, officials said.

Demanibus was pronounced dead at Harms Memorial Hospital in American Falls. His passenger was treated and released. Both were college students at Indiana, Pa., and natives of France.

Legendary director Huston dies in his sleep on set of movie

MIDDLETOWN, R.I. (AP) — John Huston, a restless talent who bucked Hollywood, drank hard and directed classic films including "The Maltese Falcon," "The Treasure of the Sierra Madre" and "The African Queen," died in his sleep Friday.

At 81, he was on the location of yet another movie.

In a long and adventurous career, the stuff of movie legend, Huston caressed with Humphrey Bogart and Ernest Hemingway, broke his nose in a fistfight with Errol Flynn, directed Clark Gable in his last film and unwittingly led Katharine Hepburn into an elephant stampede.

Huston won Academy Awards for writing and directing "The Treasure of the Sierra Madre," in which his father, Walter, also won an Oscar for best supporting actor. His daughter, Anjelica, wore an Oscar for "Frisz's Honor," which Huston also directed.

His 40 films encompassed the Tennessee Williams play "Night of the Iguana" and the elaborate musical "Annie."

"If there's a pattern to my work it's that I haven't made any two pictures alike. I get bored too quickly," he once said.

His battered good looks and rumbling voice led to a second career as an actor in films and commercials.

Huston, a longtime smoker who in later years was tethered to an oxygen tank, died in his sleep at a home he was renting here during the filming of "Mr. North," said Patty Rays, production coordinator for the movie.

"We will miss him a great deal," Stephen Haft, one of the film's producers, said in a telephone interview from the home. Haft said Huston's longtime companion, Marcella Hernandez, was with him when he died.

Huston had been released last week from a hospital in Fall River, Mass., three weeks after he collapsed due to pneumonia complicated by emphysema.

He had intended to co-star with his daughter in "Mr. North," which his son Danny is directing in Newport. Huston had to give up the role to Robert Mitchum, but intended to remain as executive producer.

This summer, Huston directed his last film, "The Dead," which he produced. "The Dead," based on a story by James Joyce.

His body was to be returned to Los Angeles for burial.

John Marcellus Huston was born Aug. 6, 1906, in Nevada, Mo. His father was then a utility company engineer, his mother a traveling reporter. He spent much of his childhood shuttling between parents, who split up when he was 6, and was placed in a sanitarium at age 12 because of an enlarged heart and a kidney ailment.

At the sanitarium, he recalled later, he was nearly smothered with care, but at night he sneaked out to swim, building his courage by plunging over a waterfall.

"Action, and the most vivid possible use of the immediate present, were his personal salvation; they have remained lifelong habits," said a friend, writer James Agee.

JOHN HUSTON Was working on "Mr. North"

At 17, Huston had broken his nose on the way to becoming lightweight boxing champion of California, and he later broke it again in a fight with Flynn.

He moved from boxing to the study of painting, but his zeal for life kept him moving. During one vacation in Mexico, he became an honorary member of the Mexican cavalry.

Huston worked briefly as a screenwriter, newspaper reporter for which Bogart won an Oscar, Huston and editor before joining Warner Bros. as a writer in 1935. He worked on such films as "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," "Juarez," "High Sierra," and "Sergeant York."

His first work as director was in 1941 with "The Maltese Falcon," which had been a box office failure twice before. Huston wrote a new screenplay from Dashiell Hammett's novel, and cast Bogart, Mary Astor, Sydney Greenstreet and Peter Lorre.

Huston spent World War II in the Army Signal Corps, making documentaries. "The Battle of San Pietro," an uncompromising look at the fighting in Italy, is considered a masterpiece of its type; another, "Let There Be Light," about combat-related mental illness, was suppressed until 1980.

After the war, Huston directed "No Exit" on Broadway, then returned to film.

Bogart, who became Huston's off-screen pal, worked with the director again in "The Treasure of the Sierra Madre," one of the first American movies made entirely outside the United States.

Thereafter Huston made pictures where he pleased, commanding fees upwards of $400,000.

He had a knack for getting good performances from "found" talent. In "Madre," two of the Mexican bandits were the real thing, as were the prostitutes and transvestites of "Under the Volcano" 30 years later.

Working on "The African Queen," for which Bogart won an Oscar, Huston once found himself moored in a small boat spot a hippo. Off-screen, he and Katharine Hepburn wandered into a herd of elephants and narrowly escaped death when the beasts stampeded.

However, Huston said nothing was as terrible as directing a drink and drug-ravaged Montgomery Clift in "Freud."

Huston's other directorial credits include "Reflections in a Golden Eye," starring Marlon Brando; "Key West" and "Beat the Devil" with Bogart; "Moulin Rouge," with Jose Ferrer; "The Man Who Would Be King," featuring Sean Connery and Michael Caine; and "The Misfits," featuring Marilyn Monroe and Gable.

In 1983, Huston received the Life Achievement Award of the American Film Institute.

Huston gave minimal direction to his stars. "He feels, for the kind of money we get paid, we ought to know how to do it ourselves," Michael Caine said.

However, he once twisted Lauren Bacall's arm to get just the right expression.

Perhaps his most famous direction was to Miss Hepburn during "The African Queen," when she was having trouble expressing the regality of missionary Rosie Sayer: "Eleanor Roosevelt. Let her be your model."

Bogart once said the 8-foot, 2-inch Huston "has more color and is more photogenic than 90 percent of the actors in Hollywood," and casting directors agreed.

Huston's first acting role was as a bishop in "The Cardinal." He played Min "Casino Royale," the corrupt father in "Chinatown" and appeared in "Battle for the Planet of the Apes," "Wilder Kills" and "The Wind and the Lion." He directed himself as Noah in "The Bible," his biggest money-maker.

In his later years Huston made his home at Las Galenas, south of Puerto Vallarta, which was so remote it could only be reached by boat.

He had become an expatriate in 1952, abandoning a Hollywood grippe by what he called the "moral rot" of McCarthyism. He moved to Ireland, the land of his ancestors, and became a Master of the Fox Hounds.

In 1964, he became a citizen of Ireland. The part I didn't like was that I had to go before an American consul and actually denounce the United States," he said. He found that "unpleasant, unnatural and uncalled for."

He kept busy despite emphysema, heart problems and frequent hospital stays, but he chafed at the tubes which linked him to an oxygen tank.

"I don't like any part of being bound. But I've never discovered an answer to that question of what does freedom really consist," he said in an interview with The New York Times. "If you aren't fettered by one thing, you're fettered by another."

"I'm not hungry or thirsty. I'm not in love. I'm just at the end of a piece of plastic tubing. And we're all hostages in one way or another."

He had five children, Anjelica and Tony by Miss Soma; Danny by Zoe Sallis; and Allegra and Fabio.

A first-hand look at a day of rebellion

EDITOR'S NOTE — Associated Press correspondent James W. Hatton was a witness to a stream of actions Friday in a military-rebel attempt to overthrow President Corason Aquino of the Philippines. Here is his account of a day of rebellion in Manila.

By JAMES W. HATTON
The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — For me, the day began at about 2 a.m. A telephone call from the office Friday told me another coup attempt was being made against the government of President Corason Aquino, and this time it appeared serious.

Soon afterward, I was standing beside the highway near the tall transmitter for Channel 4, the government television station.

The popping rattle of M-16 rifle fire and slower statter of heavier automatic weapons sounded in the gentle hills around the walled compound that houses the tower.

I started downhill, crouching slightly, trying to keep trees and bushes between me and the shooting. It took only a couple minutes to reach the compound and I edged along the wall toward several photographers.

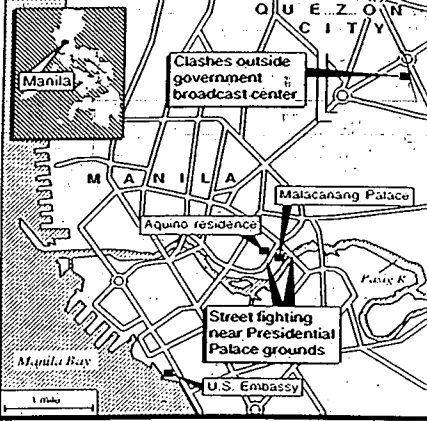

Just as I reached them, they picked up Robert McDonald of Newsweek who had been wounded. He was pronounced dead at a hospital.

For three or four hours there was sporadic firing from and into the tower compound. I saw several groups of three or four rebels, wearing green fatigue uniforms with no insignia, moving along the 9-foot-high wall.

Soon after dawn I saw about a dozen rebels crouched along the far side of the wall. Minutes later they began running, one at a time, across the asphalt road and diving into the safety of shrubbery around homes facing the compound.

Those who had crossed poured heavy fire at the compound to cover their running comrades. When all were across they disappeared, into the shrubbery or the crowds of residents who had jammed an adjacent access road.

Army Mutiny in the Philippines

Firing stopped. Hundreds of Filipinos raced up to the compound gates and began cheering "Cory! Cory!" the president's nickname. A man ran up with four large loaves of bread and tossed them over a side-gate. Soldiers inside cheered him.

Minutes later, three rebels rose from the shrubbery and, their eyes darting nervously, moved slowly toward the access road. Some in the crowd spotted the rebels before the young men had taken more than a few steps.

Five or six men ran up to the rebel troopers and grabbed their arms, using their own bodies as shelter. They hustled the youths along the sidewalk to a house half way down the block, where several other rebels were changing into their regular uniforms as a prelude to escape.

About half an hour later I reached sprawling Camp Aguinaldo in suburban Quezon City, where the rebels were said to be regrouping.

Everything was quiet. A couple of hundred people lined the street.

Dozens of journalists pressed against the massive iron gate, shouting questions at soldiers in lycrocrete pillbox that elicited no answers.

At midmorning, about 50 Scout Rangers marched up a side road toward the main gate. They stopped about 100 yards away, awaiting further orders.

After taking shelter from the already burning sun, they told a reporter they were pro-Aquino, from a camp about an hour's drive south of Manila.

Scattered shooting began shortly before 11:30 a.m. Shutters started coming down on shops that had done a brisk business in sandwiches, tiny cakes and soft drinks.

Firing intensified at about 1:20 p.m. and dozens of residents moved away to safety. For the next four hours, the pop of rifles and boom of heavy weapons told the progress of the battle across the base.

Residents took cover at first, but by late afternoon had become accustomed to the shooting and edged forward again. Before long, 300-400 had gathered across the intersection.

They watched intently as the first of three civilian firetrucks entered the post at about 4:20 p.m., then left a short time later in a convoy with other fire vehicles.

The three-story headquarters building could be seen burning. Plumes of gray-black smoke spewed into the air.

Then, just after 5 p.m., the air force arrived and the crowd fled again.

The pilot dipped the left wing of his propeller-driven trainer and began a sharp turn, his wingmate close behind. Seconds later they dove toward the rebel-held military headquarters.

The lead aircraft dropped a single bomb. It exploded behind the already burning building at Camp Aguinaldo, but it helped the pilots line up their target.

They returned at least three more times, dropping a total of about 10 bombs from the F-28s, aircraft from World War II known locally as "toro toros" because of their resemblance to the famed Japanese Zero fighter.

Then the pilots made two strafing runs, raking the area with fire from wing-mounted machine guns.

Union, mining firm confer but no deals

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The nation's largest gold producer met with the union of black miners for seven hours after firing 12,000 more strikers, but no deal was struck and the walkout entered its 20th day Saturday.

A working miner was reported stabbed to death and burned, bringing to seven the number killed in the longest and costliest strike of South African gold and coal mines.

Negotiators refused to answer questions as they left a Johannesburg hotel shortly past midnight, after only the second bargaining session since the strike over pay and benefits began Aug. 9.

Anglo American Corp. and the National Union of Mineworkers said in a brief joint statement that more talks would be held Sunday, bringing in the five other mining companies being struck.

It said without elaboration that the contents of Friday's discussions would be referred to union members.

Anglo American Corp. has fired 37,600 striking miners and threatened 19,000 more with dismissal unless they return to work. Another company, Johannesburg Consolidated Investments, has fired 4,800.

Cyril Ramaphosa, general secretary of the union; his deputy Marcel Golding; union president James Motlatsi; and six other officials met with Anglo's industrial relations manager, Bobby Godsell, and manpower director S.W. Van der Colff.

Last week, union representatives met with Anglo officials about reducing violence during the strike, which has resulted in 350 injuries, seven deaths and 300 arrests.

The one previous negotiating session was held Tuesday with the Chamber of Mines.

Protesters, Seoul riot police fight

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of protesters battled riot police in Seoul and in at least four other cities Friday after government banned memorial rallies for a striking worker killed in an earlier clash.

"Down with the military dictatorship of murder and violence," shouted students, workers and dissidents as they hurled rocks, bricks and firebombs at police in the worst political violence since massive anti-government riots in June. Police fired tear gas.

Thousands of people ran for cover as fighting erupted in streets packed with rush hour traffic in the Korean capital. Scores of people were injured and hundreds were arrested, but authorities declined to release total figures.

In the southern port city of Kwangju, about 1,000 workers began a sit-down protest at the big Daewoo shipyard Friday after police intercepted their funeral procession for Lee Suk-kyu, killed Aug. 22 in a clash between police and strikers.

The Labor Ministry reported 97 new strikes, increasing the total to 635. South Korea has been hit by 2,490 strikes since June as workers demand higher wages and greater rights after years of government-enforced labor discipline that effectively banned strikes.

Prime Minister Kim Chung-yul and Roh Tae-woo, head of the governing Democratic Justice Party, agreed Friday on the need to maintain law and order at all cost.

The main opposition Reunification Democratic Party said in a statement, "It is intolerable and foolish that the government intends to take strong action instead of apologizing for labor unrest for which it is responsible."

Police officials said 1,618 people were being investigated for allegedly inciting labor unrest and leftist agitation, but were not detained as yet.

Protesters in Seoul's working class district of Yongsongpo clashed with police as soon as the dissidents began yelling anti-government slogans.

"We want revenge!" yelled masked protesters bearing wooden sticks and iron bars as they blocked streets and fought police.

Black armored cars and at least 5,000 riot police in gas can combat fatigues and black visored helmets broke up the crowds with tear gas.

Clashes were also reported in Taejon and Chunchon. Peaceful rallies were reported in Suwon and Puyong near Seoul.

Rock-ribbed Minico crew blanks Burley

By LARRY HOVY
Times-News writer

More football — B3

BURLEY — Unveiling a rock-ribbed defense based on the bruising linebacking of Justin Bair and Steve Smith, the Minico Spartans debuted under new Coach Ron Jones with a 20-0 decision over archrival Burley Friday night.

The Spartans, getting their offensive spark from quarterback Jack Bagley and newcomer running back Jason Duncan, had some problems with the stubborn Bobcats offensively. But defensively, the Spartan unit owned the field.

"They played just like we thought they would," said Jones, who had expected linebacking to be the team strength this season.

The coach wasn't as pleased about the offense early on, noting, "It seemed to take us a long time to get the ball moving. Then when Jack went down, we had a little trouble again."

Bagley's availability for the game due to an ankle injury was questionable up to late this week. Then in the third quarter, he went down while retreating to pass — and stayed down.

Jones admitted thoughts of the season passed through his head before it was discovered it was the other ankle. After a quick tape job, he returned to duty and capped scoring with a 48-yard run on a keeper.

On the other side of the field, Coach Gary Hoxzey felt good about his defense. Offensively he wasn't so sure, but he confirmed that Minico's defensive unit had been impressive most of the time.

"We just didn't do much offensively," he said. "We had a couple of opportunities at the start of the game but we dropped a couple of well-thrown passes that would have been first downs. That might have turned the trick for us, I don't know."

"But overall I'd say the offense just didn't click but defensively we played pretty well," Hoxzey concluded.

After opening the game in a punt exchange, Minico's Craig Anderson gave his team the first scoring chance with an interception at midfield. It took the Spartans 14 plays to get the 63 yards

Edwards declares Cougars will rediscover offense

By BOB BLACK
The Associated Press

PROVO, Utah — Bob Jensen says Brigham Young has something to prove this football season. The Cougars, 8-5, finished 6-2 in the Western Athletic Conference and failed to win the league title for the first time in a decade. BYU's passing game sputtered at times, amassing "only" 2,827 yards.

It was the first time since 1978 that BYU failed to gain more than 3,000 yards passing and in four games the Cougars failed to score more than 10 points.

"I think we've got things to prove," said Jensen, a junior quarterback. "First of all to get our passing game back in order (and) get the respect there. Also, to win the WAC championship is always a goal, especially after losing last year."

Coach LaVell Edwards also says the Cougars, held to just a field goal in a 10-3 loss to San Diego State in a game that decided the WAC title, will resurrect a passing game that's given his team 10 straight titles and the national championship in 1984.

The Cougars are basing their hopes on Jensen, who led them to a 23-3 victory over Air Force in the last regular season game and assured BYU a berth in the Freedom Bowl against UCLA. BYU lost 31-10, but Jensen helped his team outpace the Bruins 221-85.

A key to Jensen's success will be the offensive line, which has four returning starters: junior tight end Darren Handley, 6-foot-2, 235 pounds; junior tackle Brian White, 6-4, 280; senior guard John Borgia, 6-2, 280; and senior center Brian Rodoni, 6-5, 270.

"The offensive line in our school is very important to our success," Jensen said. "With as much as we like to throw, we have to have protection."

"Last year, I think we were okay, but I'm saying this year we're better," he said. "I heard a lot of people say the difference between an average offensive lineman and a very good offensive lineman is just repetition."

Edwards said Rodoni injured his knee during fall drills and is expected to miss Wednesday's opener against Pittsburgh. His backup is junior Chris Bisho, 6-3, 255.

Junior guard John Hunter, 6-7, 280, and junior tackle Warren Wheat, 6-5, 282, are the only offensive linemen who are not returning starters, but each has lettered at least one season.

Edwards said his wide receivers, led by three seniors, will be about the same as last year, which should mean BYU will have no trouble catching the football.

BYU's top five receivers — including Mark Bellini — were among 24 lettermen lost to graduation. Bellini caught 46 passes for 839 yards and five touchdowns.

Senior wide receiver Rich Zayas is the top returning receiver. He caught eight passes for 176 yards and a touchdown. Senior tight end David Miles, six catches, 104 yards, has earned two letters and has started at wide receiver.

If the passing game slips into the doldrums this year, the Cougars will have to rely on an inexperienced backfield to move the ball, but coaches say the young backs make up in talent what they lack in experience.

One is Lakei Heimuli, who gained 966 yards last year and became BYU's all-time leading rusher with 2,710 yards. Just as

Embarrassed by loss

Strange tops series by 2 shots

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Curtis Strange has himself in position to win the lucrative World Series of Golf.

He also has himself in a tenuous position with the PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman. Strange, a two-time winner this season, was delighted to talk about the 12 one-putts that provided him with a 65 and the second-round lead in the World Series of Golf Friday.

"Any time I shoot 65 at Flamingo, I have to make a lot of putts," Strange said after opening up a two-shot lead at the halfway point of the chase for a $144,000 first prize.

But he was much less ready to talk about a Friday morning conference with Beman concerning Strange's reluctance to play in a new, multi-million dollar tournament in San Antonio.

The Nabisco Championships of Golf at the end of October, will offer a total of $3 million in prize money to 30 players.

Strange, however, said he has consented to play in three Japanese tournaments, in one of which he is the defending champion, at that time, at the end of October.

He was quoted in a published article as saying he would not play in the San Antonio tournament, which is being promoted as the season-ending climax to the PGA Tour. The winner could acquire as much as $535,000 from that one tournament.

In order to compete in foreign, conflicting events, however, he must receive a release from both the commissioner and the sponsor of the American tournament.

Strange acknowledged he conferred with Beman about the matter Friday.

Does he have that release? "That would be better answered by the commissioner," an on-guard Strange replied. Beman was not immediately available for comment.

World track meet provides Johnson with forum

ROME (AP) — When Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson ponders past performances in major world events, neither his own nor those of American rival Carl Lewis offer much reassurance for this week's World Track and Field Championships.

Despite being the 100-meter sprinter over the last two seasons, Johnson's medal box looks relatively empty, with only two bronze medals from the 1984 Olympic Games compared with Lewis' four gold medals from the 1984 Olympics and three from the 1983 world championships.

"That's the past," Johnson said when asked of his comparative failures in big meets.

As athletes continued to congregate for the nine-day championships, which open Saturday, organizers announced that the 10,000-meter run would be contested as a final with no preliminaries and also set tough standards for qualifying in the field events.

Nevertheless, talk centered on the clash in the 100.

The lack of gold medals doesn't worry Johnson, who says it counts more that he has beaten Lewis in their last four meetings, including one this year.

"I don't feel any pressure," Johnson said. "I'm ready to go."

In the earlier meetings with Johnson, "I definitely haven't been in best shape," Lewis said. "I wasn't as focused mentally so (the losses) have no bearing whatsoever" on Sunday's final.

The clash has also reignited rumors of animosity between the two.

"I really don't think it's a big deal," Lewis said. "Ben is trying to be the best in the world and so am I. ... Whatever he feels he has to do to attain that is his business; whatever I have to do is my business."

Johnson's business is to get a fast start, while Lewis will look to come back in the second 50 meters. Explaining his explosive start, Johnson was philosophical.

"When it comes, it comes," he said. "When it doesn't, there is nothing I can do about it."

Lewis is more methodical and deliberate in his approach, hoping for "a more smooth, a more accelerated ingrace, I have a strong finish."

Johnson, a 25-year-old Canadian, has threatened Calvin Smith's 1983 world record of 9.93 seconds several times, missing it twice by only .02 seconds.

Lewis, 26, has taken a low-key approach to his main test of the year.

"The ultimate goal is to see how many gold medals I can win," he said.

Lewis is also going in the long jump and the 400-meter relay. While a world record is the only thing that has eluded Lewis in his six-year international career, Johnson is still looking to make a mark with either a record or a world title. His only golds came in last year's Commonwealth Games, which were hit hard by a boycott, and the 1985 World Cup competition.

While the Johnson-Lewis duel dominates the pre-race hoopla, an outsider might well run off with the laurels.

"You cannot rule out anyone," Lewis said, mentioning fellow American Mark Witherspoon as a possible winner.

Other outsiders include Ray Stewart, who ran a wind-aided 8.89 in the Pan Am Games earlier this month, and Nigerian Chidi Inoh, who ran 9.92, again with too much wind, at Nairobi.

Titles, not times, will be important on Sunday, Lewis said.

The 10,000 final, originally scheduled for Monday, will be held Saturday night, in the same time slot that had been allotted for the qualifying heats, organizers said Thursday.

The qualifying heats were eliminated because of an insufficient number of competitors. The final will be held with 28 runners.

The tough automatic qualifying standards for field events were established by the meet's technical committee.

For the man, the standards are 7 feet, 6 inches for the high jump, 18-2 1/2 for the pole vault, 26-1 for the long jump, 55-3/4 for the triple jump, 68-11/4 for the shot put, 213-3 for the discus, 251-0 for the hammer throw, and 252-7 for the javelin.

The women's standards are 6-4 for the high jump, 21-7/4 for the long jump, 62-4 for the shot put, 205-1 for the discus and 210-0 for the javelin.

Any competitor meeting those standards — during qualifying competition, which begins Saturday, automatically will qualify for the final.

There must be at least 12 finalists in each of those events. If 12 do not meet the standards during qualifying, the next competitors in order, will be added to the field to reach that number.

Quarter-miler Innocent Egbunike of Nigeria was guilty of a dreadful mistake during the 1984 Olympic Games. He doesn't plan to repeat it during the World Track and Field Championships.

In 1984, Egbunike depended on strategy and it didn't work. Egbunike said, "I ran the way the crowd wanted me to run."

What the fans wanted to see, Egbunike said, was a fast early pace so that the winner had a shot at breaking the world 400-meter record of 43.86 seconds set by Lee Evans of the United States in the 1968 Mexico City Games.

Lendl favored in wide-open U.S. Open Championships

By THOMAS HILL
Newsday

NEW YORK — Forget momentarily that Ivan Lendl has won two consecutive U.S. Open Championships and that he has appeared in the last five finals. Organizers of the U.S. Open have, because they are saying this year's tournament is up for grabs.

Although Lendl, who has been ranked No. 1 by computer for two years, is the top seed for the second straight year, he is by no means a heavy favorite to win the tournament. In 1987, Lendl won the French Open but lost both the Wimbledon final and the semifinals of the Australian Open to Pat Cash. Lendl is the third-leading money winner on the circuit this year, behind Miloslav Mecir and Stefan Edberg.

With Steffi Graf's rise to the No. 1 women's ranking two weeks ago, the picture becomes even hazier. "It's the openest Open that we've had in a number of years," USTA president Gordon Jorgensen said at Thursday morning's Open draw ceremony. And he didn't just mean among the top seeds. Jorgensen thinks that the Open is open from top to bottom. "I think the rest of the world has made a dedication to tennis, and the results are showing."

Vittorio Selmi, tour director for the Association of Tennis Professionals, which compiles the rankings, agrees with half of the Open's new theory. "I think Lendl, being the French Open and having the runner up at Wimbledon, has asserted himself as the heavy favorite," Selmi said. "(But among the women), Steffi won the French Open very closely over Martina (Navratilova), and Martina won Wimbledon. That's more of a playoff to see if Steffi has got the edge over Martina."

But before anything significant is determined at the Open, the top seeds will have to avoid the seemingly inevitable early-round upsets.

That is where the draw ceremony comes into play. Open referee Gayle Bradshaw, with the aid of a sponsor-donated computer linkup, took less than an hour to randomly draw 224 numbers — each corresponding to an unseeded player — and fill out the brackets.

Lendl's first-round opponent will be South African Barry Moor, and second-seeded Stefan Edberg will face Derrick Rostagno of Brentwood, Calif.

Underdogs Mats Wilander plays an undermanned qualifier, and No. 4 Boris Becker will meet Tim Wilkison of Asheville, N.C., one of the last four American men in last year's Open.

Four-time Open champion John McEnroe — the eighth seed, drew Matt Anger of Pleasanton, Calif., as his first-round opponent. McEnroe's marathon Davis Cup loss to Becker last month as well as winning the first set over Lendl in the rain-soaked Volvo invitational earlier this month at Stratton Mountain, Vt., indicate that he has progressed in his attempt to come back from a six-month layoff last year.

Unlike many of the top players, Graf will have the advantage of facing a somewhat familiar opponent in her opening match. Bettina Fulco of Argentina, whom Graf beat, 6-4, 6-4, in an Italian Open quarterfinal May 8, will be Graf's first test. Second-seeded defending champion Navratilova drew Kate Gornert, of Rancho Mirage, Calif., as her first opponent. Third-seeded Chris Evert will face Susan Sloane of Lexington, Ky. Hana Mandlikova, the 1985 champion and fourth seed, plays France's Nathalie Herremh.

First-round matches begin Tuesday, and the Open continues through Sept. 13, the day of the men's final.

AL: Stewart hurls A's into first place in West

TORONTO (AP) — Dave Stewart won a pitching duel with Dave Stieb Friday night, enhancing his candidacy for the Cy Young award as the American League's best pitcher this season.

Stewart, 19-9, became the major league's first 18-game winner, allowing six hits in 7-2 1/3 innings as the Oakland Athletics defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 3-2. Dennis Eckersley got the last four outs for his 10th save as Oakland moved into a narrow lead ahead of Minnesota in the AL West.

Toronto — remained percentage points behind Detroit in the East. The club, 7-4, allowed only five hits, but Carney Lansford picked up three of them. He hit his 16th homer on Stieb's first pitch in the second, singled in the fourth and scored the winning run in the sixth after leading off with a double.

Pitching before an Exhibition Stadium audience of 32,266, Stewart went to the slow, winding pitch frequently when he was behind in the count and kept the Blue Jay hitters off balance.

"They had a left-hand hitting lineup in there," Stewart said. "That's my pitch to neutralize left-handed hitting. When they have eight out of nine guys in there who are right-handed, then I have to throw the forkball."

Baseball

"They (opposing batters) have to keep it in their mind that I'm getting ready to throw another one," Stewart said of the pitch. "And just a second off their timing is going to cause them to miss a fastball. So it's a balancing pitch; it keeps everything intact."

"He's not cutting the ball," said Toronto's Lloyd Moseby, who struck out twice. "He's not throwing a spitball. He's a good pitcher. You've got to tip your hat to him."

Lansford, replacing the regular clean-up hitter Mark McGwire, broke a 2-2 tie in the sixth when he doubled, moved to third on a long fly to right and scored on Dwayne Murphy's shallow sacrifice fly to center.

In the fifth, Alfredo Griffin doubled and scored on Luis Polonia's single. Tony Fernandez had an RBI single for Toronto in the bottom of the inning to tie the score.

Lansford hit Stieb's first pitch of the second inning over the left field wall, his 16th homer of the season and third in the last three games.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Chris

Boelo pitched a two-hitter for his first victory in a month and Greg Brock drove in the game's only run with a double Friday night as the Milwaukee Brewers defeated the Minnesota Twins 1-0.

Greg Gagne's one-out single in the first and Kent Hrbek's single in the seventh were the only hits allowed by Boelo and both runners were erased by two of three double plays turned by the Brewers. Boelo, 6-5, walked three and struck out eight en route to his first victory since July 28.

The Twins entered the game with a one-game lead over Oakland in the American League West.

Earlier Friday, Boelo's attorney entered an innocent plea on an assault and battery charge against the pitcher. The charge stemmed from a July 19 incident in which a parking lot attendant said Boelo punched him in the nose after the pitcher refused to pay to park.

Minnesota starter Les Straker, 6-9, allowed only six hits over seven innings and blanked the Brewers on three hits through the first five innings.

Milwaukee scored in the sixth, aided by a throwing error on Twins' catcher Sal Butera. Robin Yount singled to start the sixth and as he attempted to steal second, Butera took a pitchout from Straker and threw it into center field, allowing Yount to advance to third. Brock followed with a double to the wall in right center.

Boelo pitched out of a bases loaded jam in the first by striking out Dale Sveum. He then retired 10 straight hitters.

DETROIT (AP) — Ruben Sierra's two-run homer keyed a four-run eighth inning as the Texas Rangers beat the Detroit Tigers 5-3 Friday night.

The Rangers trailed 3-1 when Oddibe McDowell, leading off by Detroit first baseman Dave Bergman and scored on Sierra's 27th home run to shatter the left field fence on a 2-1 pitch from Jack Morris, 15-7.

Pete Incaviglia followed with a single and scored on a go-ahead double to the center field fence by Pete Avila. Brian Randel tied on a wild pitch and scored on a single by Larry Parrish.

Morris, falling in a bid for his fourth consecutive win, gave up five runs on eight hits in 7 1/3 innings. Despite the loss, the Tigers maintained a narrow lead over Toronto in the American League East.

Mitch Williams, 7-3, who relieved Jeff Russell in the sixth, picked up the win with two innings of relief. Dale Mohoric pitched two hitless innings for his 16th save.

Russell, making only his second start for the Rangers, gave up three runs on six hits in five-plus innings. Russell struck out six of the first 10 batters he faced.

NEW YORK (AP) — Alvin Davis hit a grand slam and Mickey Brantley homered and drove in four runners as the Seattle Mariners beat the New York Yankees 10-4 in a game that started 2 1/2 hours late because of rain.

Davis hit his fourth career slam in the sixth inning against reliever Charles Hudson, breaking a 3-3 tie. Brantley, who had a two-run double in the fourth, homered in the seventh off Hudson, 9-4, and added an RBI single in the eighth.

Reliever Mike Trujillo, 3-4, pitched 2-1/3 innings for the victory as Seattle ended a three-game losing streak.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Fred Lynn, who did not start because of a thigh injury, hit a pinch-hit home run with one out in the ninth inning Friday night, giving the Baltimore Orioles a 6-5 victory over the California Angels.

Lynn, the first batter after an 18-minute rain delay, hit a 3-1 pitch from reliever Chuck Lytle, 2-6, who had pitched 5-1/3 scoreless innings of relief.

Flinley had pitched 17 1-3 scoreless innings against the Orioles in his career before Lynn's homer, his 21st of the season.

Kansas City 9
Chicago 3
CHICAGO (AP) — Danny Tartabull homered in the first inning for his league-leading 16th game-winning hit and Charlie Leibrandt scattered 10 hits in eight innings, leading the Kansas City Royals to a 9-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox Friday night.

Leibrandt, 13-9, struck out six and walked two, retiring 11 consecutive batters during one stretch. The victory was Kansas City's third straight, its first under interim manager John Warden.

With two outs in the first, George Brett singled off Dave Lapanet, 2-2, and Tartabull hit his 23rd homer to put the Royals ahead 2-0.

NL: Gooden tosses 4-hit shutout at frontrunning Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Dwight Gooden pitched a four-hitter for his 15th major-league shutout and Howard Johnson hit his 32nd home run Friday night, leading the New York Mets to a 4-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

The Mets led only two hits in seven innings of Mike LaCoss, 11-8, who had retired 14 consecutive batters before Johnson led off the sixth inning with his homer into the upper deck in right field.

The homer also ended a streak of 20 straight shutout innings by San Francisco pitchers.

New York scored three runs in the ninth. Keith Hernandez had an RBI single, scored Lenny Dykstra from second and secured his hitting streak to 17 games.

Kevin McReynolds tripled to score Hernandez and Gary Carter followed with an RBI double. Gooden, 12-4 with a 2.86 earned run average, struck out six and walked four for his second shutout and fourth complete game of the year. The 22-year-old pitcher has a 51-10 record in night games.

New York ended a four-game winning streak by the National League West-leading Giants.

Chicago 6
Cincinnati 5
CINCINNATI (AP) — Ryno Sandberg's run-scoring single with two outs in the 10th inning Friday night scored Bob Dernier from second base, lifting the Chicago Cubs to a 6-5 victory over Cincinnati, the Reds' season-high seventh straight loss.

Dernier singled to right and stole second. After Manny Trillo walked, Sandberg singled "right off" of John Franco, 7-5.

Leo Smith, 4-7, pitched the final two innings, allowing one run, one hit, three walks and striking out three.

Smith walked Bo Diaz to the bases loaded in the ninth to tie the score 5-5. Eric Davis singled, Paul O'Neill walked and Buddy Bell was intentionally walked after a double steal to lead the bases with one out. After Diaz walked on a 3-1 pitch, Nick Esasky grounded into a fielder's choice and Kurt Stillwell struck out.

St. Louis 4
Atlanta 3
ST. LOUIS (AP) — Tommy Herr hit a pinch single with two outs in the ninth inning Friday night, scoring Lizing St. Louis over the Atlanta Braves 4-3, the Cardinals' third straight victory.

Herr, scratched from the starting lineup because of an inflamed foot, hit a 1-2 pitch from Gene Garber, 8-10.

Smith walked with one out and stole second. After Terry Pendleton struck out and Jack Clark was intentionally walked, Herr, hitting for Todd Worrell, singled to shallow left.

Soft fielder Ken Griffey's throw arrived at the same time as the runner, but Smith's rolling block slide prohibited catcher Ozzie Virgil from fielding it cleanly.

The Braves forced a 3-3 tie in the top of the ninth when Griffey hit his 14th homer of the season off Worrell, 7-6, leading off the inning.

Philadelphia 8
San Diego 1

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Mike Schmidt hit his 622nd home run and Don Carman pitched a nine-inning Friday night, peeing Philadelphia over the San Diego Padres 8-1 and snapping the Phillies' four-game losing streak.

Schmidt's two-run homer, his 27th, capped a four-run fifth inning and moved him into past Willie McCovey and Ted Williams into the all-time home run list. It was also Schmidt's 483rd homer as a third baseman, setting an National League record. He had been tied with Eddie Mathews.

Mathews hit four homers in the American League, and holds the major league record.

Pittsburgh 4
Houston 2

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Bob Walk pitched a seven-hitter over 7 1/3 innings to outduel Mike Scott and hit an seventh-inning RBI single to score the lead run Friday night, leading the Pittsburgh Pirates over the Houston Astros 4-2.

Walk, 6-2, won for the fourth time in his last five decisions as the Pirates won their fourth straight. Jim Gott finished for his fifth save.

With his score 1-1, Mike LaValiere and Al Rodriguez opened the Pirates' seventh with consecutive singles to center. With the first and third basemen charging the plate expecting a bunt, Walk bounded an RBI single up the middle, scoring LaValiere.

Third-quarter run lifts Kimberly over RR

By The Times-News

MALTA — Tim Moad dashed 20 yards on a reverse play with the game's only touchdown here Friday night as Kimberly defeated Raft River 9-0 in a non-conference high school football game that opened the season for both teams.

The victory avenged a 25-6 loss by Kimberly to eventual state Class A-4 champion Raft River in last year's season-opener.

The Bulldogs set up the game-winning touchdown after picking up a turnover deep in Raft River territory midway through the third quarter.

Despite the score, the Trojans had the edge in yardage, picking up 150 yards on the ground, 91 of them by Eric Talford.

Gooding 43 Wood River 0

GOODING — Gooding lived up to its pre-season billing Friday night, grabbing huge early lead and stretching that to a 43-0 white-washing of Wood River in non-conference play.

Quarterback Michael Simis and running back Nate Low opened the Gooding point parade with runs of five and 17 yards, respectively, to hand the Senators a 16-0 lead after one quarter.

Defensive end Brady Renner picked off an errant Wolverine pass and returned the ball 75 yards for the third Gooding touchdown and Kirk McCrae logged another interception 25 yards for six points on the ensuing series prompting Gooding Coach Jeff Jeffries to finish the contest with players off the bench.

Simis' conversion pass following Low's first-quarter touchdown was his team's only completion of the night as Gooding's powerful running game amassed 442 yards. Low gained 189 of those yards of 14 carries and Shane Bauges, who carried only nine times, contributed 115.

The Senator victory sets up a Sept 4 confrontation with defending state A-2 champ Jerome on the Tigers field.

Hansen 22 Jerome JV 0

HANSEN — The Hansen Huskies got the 1987 campaign off to a good start Friday night in posting a 22-0 non-conference win over the Jerome JV's in a non-conference game.

The Huskies speed accounted for two touchdowns and the defensive play of junior Chris Hill, who picked off three Tiger passes, paced a defense which limited the visitors to eight first downs, all after the game had been decided.

Running back Kyle Allen dashed 73 yards on scrimmage, then took Brian Hall's conversion toss as Hansen took the early lead. Bobby Frazier, junior speedster, scored on one-yard plunge, once each over the next two periods, as

Valley 26 Murtaugh 7

MURTAUGH — The passing combination of Dave Black to Jeremy Tubbs clicked for Valley as the Vikings upended Murtaugh 26-7 Friday.

The Red Devils drew first blood early when Larry Holstad ran 11 yards with a blocked punt. But Nate Huettig replied for Valley which took the lead for good on Black's first completion, a two-point conversion.

That marked the first of three scoring touchdowns that same day hooked up to open the second period. The third TD, good for 32 yards, was punctuated by Garth Anderson's four-yard run just before halftime.

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — The agent for Oregon quarterback Chris Miller, Atlanta's No. 1 pick in the NFL draft, demanded the Falcons trade his client after an eight-hour negotiating session with the team Friday.

"It's our gut feeling that it's over with," said agent Mike Blatt. "There are plenty of teams who want quarterbacks."

Blatt said he warned the Falcons that they were going to take their rights to Miller and waste them "because the longer the time goes, the less availability the player has to a team, especially after the third or fourth game."

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — University of Nevada-Las Vegas basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian on Thursday won his Nevada Supreme Court battle with the NCAA, which had been seeking his suspension for alleged infractions.

The state's high court upheld most of a Clark County District Court judge's ruling that the NCAA had violated Tarkanian's due process rights in 1977 when it ordered UNLV to suspend the coach.

The Supreme Court reversed part of the lower court ruling relating to legal fees and demanded that match fees in the long-standing case could be recomputed.

The NCAA had placed the basketball program on two years' probation in 1977, citing 38 recruiting violations. It also ordered that Tarkanian be suspended from coaching for two years. But Tarkanian obtained a court injunction and continued coaching.

The NCAA had contended that its efforts to penalize Tarkanian didn't constitute state action, in which due process guarantees would apply.

However, the Supreme Court said there was state action, since the NCAA, as a private, voluntary

Rimrock 18 Glenns Ferry 0

BRUNEAU — Marching in on three short touchdowns runs, Rimrock beat the Glenns Ferry Pilots Friday night in the teams' non-conference opener.

Raider runningback Brian Dean trampled in 1- and 2-yard runs in the first and second quarters, respectively, to give Rimrock a 12-0 first half lead.

Then a 4-yard pass from Dentry Jones to Scott Rice handed the Raiders their final 18-0 advantage.

"We made a lot of mistakes offensively," said Rimrock Coach Bob Murray. "We had 140 yards on 15 penalties compared to their 9 for 75."

Rimrock had 201 total offensive yards compared to 145 for Glenns Ferry.

Oakley 18 Declo 0

DAKOTA — In a sloppy contest dominated by defense, the Oakley Hornets thumped Declo 18-0 in both quarters in a non-conference season opener Friday.

After a 34-yard reverse by Jeff Nelson put Oakley on the scoreboard in the first quarter, J.J. Gee added touchdowns in both the second and fourth quarter to set the final mark.

With their kicker injured, the Hornets attempted to run for each extra point, but failed all three times.

Oakley took the victory despite making up 15 penalties for 110 yards versus Declo's 5 penalties.

But Oakley finished with 227 offensive yards compared to 28 for Declo.

Valley 26 Murtaugh 7

MURTAUGH — The passing combination of Dave Black to Jeremy Tubbs clicked for Valley as the Vikings upended Murtaugh 26-7 Friday.

The Red Devils drew first blood early when Larry Holstad ran 11 yards with a blocked punt. But Nate Huettig replied for Valley which took the lead for good on Black's first completion, a two-point conversion.

That marked the first of three scoring touchdowns that same day hooked up to open the second period. The third TD, good for 32 yards, was punctuated by Garth Anderson's four-yard run just before halftime.

Jim Hay said Atlanta isn't interested in trading Miller, "I haven't heard anybody in our organization discuss a trade."

Blatt boarded a flight for San Francisco after the meeting but Miller, who returned to Atlanta Tuesday night, said he would remain "a couple more days to see if anything else is going to happen."

Miller said he was disappointed by the development after returning with high hopes of signing Friday.

Murtaugh remains at home against a Canyon Conference opponent next for second straight week Friday when they host the Kimberly Bulldogs.

Shoshone 21 Wendell 14

SHOSHONE — Clint Sandy shook loose on a six-yard scoring romp in the second overtime Friday night and the Shoshone Indians defense stopped Wendell inches from the goal line on the last play of the game for a 21-14 victory.

Sandy's run came after the Indians opened their second chance with a four-yard run and an incomplete pass. When Wendell took its turn, Shoshone had just enough defense left to turn back the running onslaught.

The teams had traded pass interceptions in the first extra session. Shoshone threw the first one.

The Indians had made it look a lot easier earlier in the game when they exploded for a quick 14 first-quarter points. The first came on a scintillating 76 yard run by Dustin Seaman. On the first play after the kickoff, Shoshone recovered a Wendell fumble and immediately Sandy turned to Jim Messick for 33 yards and the second score. Mike Armistead converted both.

But Shoshone was unable to score after that and Wendell clamped back into the tie.

A Chad Ruffing to Dean Surplus 15-yard pass got the first touchdown but Shoshone saved the day when it stopped the conversion run.

In the final period, the same passing combination clicked for 40 yards and this time Ruffing hit Duane Packer with the tying two-point to bring on the overtime.

Filer 34 Castelford 12

FILER — The Filer Wildcats gave back most of a 14-point lead before the game was over but regrouped during the break on route to a 34-12 non-conference decision over Castelford.

Gary Moon found his way into the end zone with a fumble for a first-quarter score and junior quarterback Mike Brady hit Shane Blakeale for another touchdown to open the second quarter. The Cats converted on the latter for a 14-0 lead.

At that point Castelford, which thwarted their opponents attack for the rest of the half, pulled within two points on short runs by Shane Wiggins and Ed Hildreton.

Jared Conrad's 10-yard scoring drive gave Filer some breathing room after intermission and the Wildcats put the game out of reach on scores by Mike Madsen, who set up yet another score on the second of three interceptions, and Jason Draney — both of those on the ground.

Filer entertains Bull next week while Castelford hosts Shoshone in its Magic Valley Conference opener.

Buhl 13 Middleton 12

MIDDLETON — Jeff Howell blocked an extra-point attempt with 1:59 left and the Buhl Indians hung on to claim a 13-12 season-opening non-conference victory over the Middleton Vikings Friday night.

Even after Howell's heroics, Buhl had to battle off its back as the Vikings successfully pulled off an on-side kick and recovered near midfield. But the Indians took final possession with 36 seconds left after the Vikings' final fourth-down pass left them inches short of a first down.

Middleton drew first blood when Val Bennett went in from the eight with 3:30 left in the first quarter. Buhl stopped the conversion attempt.

The Indians did all their scoring in the second quarter, the first at the 8:24 mark when Casey Boyl hit Todd Barker with a 15-yard scoring strike and Joe Ramos booted the point-after. Buhl ended its scoring with 62 seconds left in the half on a 10-yard quarterback draw by Boyer.

Rockland 28 Camas 0

FAIRFIELD — Senior quarterback Mike Steidler threw three touchdown passes and ran 57 yards for a fourth while Rockland's defense limited Camas County to 82 yards in a 28-0 season-opening high school football victory here Friday.

Steidler's long run was followed by scoring strikes of 24 yards to Ruben Figueroa, 12 yards to Paul Permann and 8 Brad Fillmore as the Bulldogs rolled to a 28-0 halftime lead over the Mustangs.

Camas County's first scoring drive was a 29-yard interception by Ruben Figueroa.

Richfield 20 Hagerman 8

RICHFIELD — Richfield, the defending state eight-man champion, took on Hagerman in an 11-man contest Friday and came away with a 20-8 non-conference victory.

Barry Ward and Laine King hooked up on a 44-yard aerial in the opening eight minutes for a 6-0 Tiger lead, but relinquished that advantage midway through the second quarter when Hagerman's Matt Hazlett romped 55 yards with an interception followed by a Pirate conversion.

Miller was the 19th player taken in the draft and is the first quarterback the Falcons have drafted No. 1 in 12 years.

At Oregon, Miller set 13 school records, surpassing Dan Fouts and Bob Berry. He threw for 6,681 yards in 36 games and had 18 games where he threw for more than 200 yards. He threw for 42 touchdowns and rushed for seven.

As a senior, he was 12th in the NCAA in total offense with 2817 yards per game. His 2,603 passing yards, 216 completions, 60.7 percent completion rate and 2,549 yards in total offense were team season records.

because they didn't even budge on their figure," he said.

Blatt has asked for a $2.25 million contract for four years, while the Falcons are offering $1.6 million with incentives that could push it to $2 million.

Several other possible contracts of different lengths were rejected by both sides Friday.

Miller left the Falcons' Suwanee training camp this summer after negotiations stalled and had been in Eugene, Ore., practicing with Oregon players.

"I've been getting some good stuff done," he said. "I've been throwing to receivers instead of playing catch in the parking lot."

Miller was the 19th player taken in the draft and is the first quarterback the Falcons have drafted No. 1 in 12 years.

At Oregon, Miller set 13 school records, surpassing Dan Fouts and Bob Berry. He threw for 6,681 yards in 36 games and had 18 games where he threw for more than 200 yards. He threw for 42 touchdowns and rushed for seven.

Nevada upholds Tarkanian against NCAA

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — University of Nevada-Las Vegas basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian on Thursday won his Nevada Supreme Court battle with the NCAA, which had been seeking his suspension for alleged infractions.

The state's high court upheld most of a Clark County District Court judge's ruling that the NCAA had violated Tarkanian's due process rights in 1977 when it ordered UNLV to suspend the coach.

The Supreme Court reversed part of the lower court ruling relating to legal fees and demanded that match fees in the long-standing case could be recomputed.

The NCAA had placed the basketball program on two years' probation in 1977, citing 38 recruiting violations. It also ordered that Tarkanian be suspended from coaching for two years. But Tarkanian obtained a court injunction and continued coaching.

The NCAA had contended that its efforts to penalize Tarkanian didn't constitute state action, in which due process guarantees would apply.

However, the Supreme Court said there was state action, since the NCAA, as a private, voluntary association, gets its authority from a state university.

The Supreme Court also disagreed with the NCAA contention that Tarkanian didn't have a constitutionally protected property interest, saying the coach's annual contract with UNLV which began in 1978 establishes such a property interest.

The court also said that the suspension could have ended Tarkanian's coaching career and left him employed only as a physical education professor — and even that position could have been terminated without judicial intervention.

NCAA spokesman Dave Cawood said the organization would have no comment until it has a chance to re-evaluate the ruling. Tarkanian was out of the state and not available for comment, his office said.

In discussing Tarkanian's due process rights, the Supreme Court disagreed with the NCAA that the lower court erred in finding that the manner in which the coach was sus-ended violated those rights.

Tarkanian and UNLV hotly contested virtually all of the testimony which allegedly established "rule violations by Tarkanian, and they presented evidence directly contradicting the (NCAA) investigators' testimony," the court said.
