Crews contain Harrington blaze

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

SOUTH HILLS — The Harrington Fork fire was declared contained at 6 p.m. Friday after about 350 firefighters built 16 miles of fire line Thursday night and Friday, stopping the fire after it consumed slightly more than 10,000 acres and some crucial winter habitat for deer.

Calvin Bird, leader of firefighting efforts, said there's a "world of difference" between Thursday, when the fire blossomed from 4,000 acres to almost 10,000 acres, and Friday. "It's looking really encouraging," Bird said. "We're anticipating control tomorrow night."

Firefighters are continuing to put out hot spots along the fire lines, and five crews are planned to be released today.

Bird, head of an 18-member fire management team from Cedar City, Utah, estimated the cost of the fire up to Friday night at $100,000.

The Rock Creek road, which has been closed since Wednesday night, was re-opened Friday night, but the Forest Service is still cautioning people to stay away from the fire area because of heavy fire traffic.

The fire started at Harrington Fork campground, burned along the canyon and up the ridge into the Dry Fork drainage. Thursday the fire burned primarily in a south-easterly direction, but with a wind shift it moved north Thursday.

The fire burned some U.S. Bureau of Land Management land and private land to the north and consumed some range fencing.

Despite a persistent wind, Bird said the containment of the fire wasn't as hard as some fires he's fought.

"The wind blew all last night — typically that doesn't happen," Bird said. "We're still concerned about the wind," although he breathed a sigh of relief when the wind dropped late Friday.

The National Weather Service was predicting high clouds, 75 to 90 degree temperatures and 5 mph to 10 mph winds today. Temperatures for the rest of the weekend will be in the mid-70s to 80s with sunny skies.

The fire didn't get into much dense timber, instead burning mostly sagebrush, grass, aspen and mountain mahogany. That made the fight easier, along with the gentle terrain the fire was burning on.

"The Rock Creek canyon is typical of the terrain we fight on," said Bird. "Once we got that controlled, the rest of it went pretty quick."

The quick containment of a fire this size is unusual, said Art Selin, fire information officer for the Sawtooth forest.

"It's not typical for a fire that size to lose its steam that quick," Selin said. "It's primarily due to the fact it didn't get into timber."

If the fire got into lodgepole pine, it would have gotten real big, Bird said.

The fire did destroy some crucial

The lightning strikes that ignited the West ignited off Friday but exhausted firefighters had their hands full with nearly half a million acres of brush and forest fires, including a blaze within Yosemite National Park.

Up to 1,000 Army troops and even a small number of federal surveyors and secretaries prepared Friday for crash firefighting operations that would double their joint-jointly 20,000 firefighters, some from as far away as the East Coast, who were trying to contain the worst rash of fires in a decade.

Most of the scorched earth was in California, where 375,000 acres were blackened, and Oregon, where that would double to 700,000 acres.

"We've got a lot of tired people out in the hills," said Ray Naddy, a spokesman for firefighters in Oregon.

About 18,000 people were forced to flee the flames, all but 1,000 of them in California.

The Pentagon said Friday evening that nearly 1,000 soldiers from Fort Ord, near Monterey, Calif., would be trained Saturday and be deployed Sunday, said Maj. Larry Loengle, a Pentagon spokesman.

"They will be deployed to mop-up operations to free regular firefighters to hit the hot spots," said Tom MacKenzie, an Army spokesman in San Francisco. Dick Thomas, a spokesman for the Bureau of Land Management in Phoenix, Ariz., said the agency gave physical examinations to secretaries, surveyors and other employees to see who was qualified to join the battle in California.

The fire in Yosemite National Park, which started Thursday, had grown to 100 acres Friday afternoon. The major battle, however, involved a 100,000-acre fire that was burning toward the Jury acquits Dallas of escape charge

The Associated Press

BOISE — Claude Lafayette Dallas, the convicted game warden killer who eluded authorities for nearly a year after fleeing the Idaho State Penitentiary in March 1986, was acquitted late Friday of escaping.

A jury of eight women and four men returned the verdict after 5½ hours of deliberation. Three of the women jurors were crying as jury foreman Dan "Egghorn" handed the verdict to the bailiff.

Fourth District Judge George Carey said quickly "I won't keep you in suspense. Mr. Dallas, you've been acquitted. The statement was greeted with a gasp from Dallas supporters in the courtroom, including his mother Jennie Dallas.

"You have had a long, hard night," Carey told the jurors, "from the looks on your faces, a traumatic night."

Dallas, 37, serving a 30-year sentence for the 1981 slayings of Idaho Department of Fish and Game officers Curley Elms and Bill Pogue, had argued his escape was justified because he believed prison guards would try to kill him during a riot at the prison, which he thought was imminent.

"There seemed to be a lot of skepticism about why we were even at this trial," Dallas attorney Lance Churchill said. "Mr. Dallas had reason and justification under the law to leave that institution."

The jury deliberated for about three hours, took a two-hour dinner break, then began considering again at 7:30 p.m. MDT whether the former wilderness trapper's claim that he feared being killed by guards justified his escape from the Idaho State Penitentiary.

"The facts and the law are clear that the defendant did escape," Prosecutor Jim Carlson told the eight-woman-four-man jury.

But Churchill contended Dallas had no other choice in the face of reports from other inmates that some guards had said they would make Dallas their first target in a riot — a riot he believed was imminent.

"Mr. Dallas' situation was the people who were supposed to protect him in this institution were threatening his life," Churchill argued.

Silkworm missile firing report renews worries about threats

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Reports that a Silkworm missile was fired into the troubled Persian Gulf renewed concerns Friday within the Reagan administration about threats to shipping even as a U.S. diplomatic drive to end the Iran-Iraq war picked up some steam.

White House and State Department officials could not confirm immediately that the anti-ship missile was fired from Iranian-held territory in Iraq. But presidential spokesman Merlin Fitzwater stressed the potential danger to U.S. operations in the gulf.

"We continue to be concerned about the Silkworms, particularly as they threaten United States naval escorts and U.S.-flagged vessels in the gulf, but I wouldn't issue any threat," Fitzwater said in Santa Barbara, Calif.

American warships are shielding tankers from Kuwaiti threats were put under the protection of American units and the U.S. flag. Attacks on shipping have escalated since Iraq resumed its "tanker war" with Iran last Saturday, ending a 45-day arms embargo, or other international sanctions.

The deadline was lifted for a visit to Tehran beginning next Thursday by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

He said in New York that Iran had agreed to discuss with him implementing the cease-fire resolution approved July 20 by the U.N. Security Council. But an Iranian spokesman, Amir Zamani, said his government wanted to take up other issues as well — thereby suggesting Tehran was not about to give Perez de Cuellar the "definitive yes" demanded by the State Department.

In the meantime, Edward P. Djerejian, a deputy assistant secretary of state, will hold talks next Thursday and Friday in Geneva with Yuri Alekseyev, a Soviet deputy foreign minister.

A U.S. official, who demanded anonymity, said Djerejian intended to focus on American demands for a speedy withdrawal of more than 110,000 Soviet troops from Afghanistan.

Nation's jobless rate holds line, remains at 8-year low for August

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The unemployment rate held steady in August at 6 percent, remaining at its lowest level in nearly eight years, the government said Friday.

At the same time, economists said it was still high by historical standards for this far into an economic expansion.

The number of Americans working as measured by the Labor Department's household survey swelled by a seasonally adjusted 54,000 to a record 113.1 million.

However, the civilian labor force, which includes those working and those actively looking for jobs, grew by a similar 351,000, leaving the August unemployment rate identical to the July rate and down from 6.8 percent a year ago.

The number of jobs workers fell last month to 7,221,000, down 9,000 from July and the lowest number since March 1980, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

Over the past 15 months, the jobless rate has gradually edged down from 7.2 percent without a single upward movement. The last time the unemployment rate was lower was in November 1979, when it stood at 6.9 percent.

The recovery from the 1981-82 recession now is 58 months old, tying the record set in 1975-80 for the longest peacetime expansion.

The proportion of the population employed rose to record 61.8 percent, up from 61.6 percent in July.

However, Labor Statistics Commissioner Janet L. Norwood told the Joint Economic Committee of Congress that the pace of employment growth, especially in factory jobs, is slower than during the previous 1976-78 expansion.

Ruby Oswald, chief economist of the AFL-CIO, said 6 percent is clearly a big improvement from where we were earlier in this decade, but it is still relatively high compared with any recovery in the postwar period.

An alternate rate that includes 1.7 million unformed members of the armed forces stationed in the United States in the calculations also remained unchanged in August at 5.9 percent.

Pointing to this alternate rate, White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said in Santa Barbara, Calif., total employment rose by 370,000 workers.

"The employment to population ratio rose to another record high of 62.2 percent," Fitzwater said. "Jobs are the best economic barometer there is, and the meter reads, 'Excellent.'" wildfire habitat, said Stu Murrell of the Idaho Fish and Game.

"It was a key deer winter range, as a starter," Murrell said. "The Dry Creek area winters a large number of deer — 10 got into some of our more important habitat and also sage grouse habitat."

Bow-hunting season starts today and the Forest Service is recommending hunters go into the South Hills from the west side near Shoshone Basin, Murrell said.

Don Oman, district ranger for the Twin Falls district, said the Forest Service will be working with the Fish and Game Department to rehabilitate the burned area this fall.

The Forest Service has put together a team of specialists to coordinate rehabilitation efforts, Oman said.

"They'll be flying and driving the area and assessing what needs to be done," Oman said. "We'll be doing whatever needs to be done this fall."

Murrell said total rehabilitation could take a long time.

"Sagebrush is a long-term proposition to bring back," Murrell said. "We're looking at 15 to 20 years, even with a good rainfall."

The Harrington Fork fire is the largest this season in the Sawtooth National Forest. A larger fire, the 18,200-acre Deadwood Ridge fire, is burning in the Frank Church-River of No Return wilderness but the Forest Service is letting it burn because of an estimated $2 million to $3 million containment cost.

Twelve men-coated, but small, fires in the White Clouds have been controlled, Selin said.

At the Harrington fire camp, at Bozetter campground, Bird said the biggest problem he faced on the Harrington Fork fire was a lack of manpower. He came in Thursday night, but didn't have the crews necessary to fight the fire because of several large fires in California and Oregon.

"Usually within four hours we have eight to 10 crews," Bird said. "This one took 30 hours."

Ironically, the Sawtooth Interregional Suppression Crew was in California when the Harrington Fork fire broke loose, said Ron Stoleason, Twin Falls District Supervisor.

Bird said he had one crew, comprised of about 20 firefighters, working Wednesday night flanking the fire. Thursday he had two crews and Thursday night had seven contained, six crews completed the containment.

Those crews dug two-to-three-foot fire lines, setting fire lines toward the fire. The fire crews worked from Harrington Fork, around the flanks of the fire and to the apex of the burning.

But lack of manpower wasn't the only problem Bird faced.

Dallas

"He had no choice but to do what he did."

Judge Carey, in instructing the jury before deliberations began, reiterated an earlier statement that general dissatisfaction with the prison or "vague threat of future danger" would not support acquittal on the grounds of duress.

Carlson argued the only threats, if any were ever made, were vague at best and he challenged the claim that a riot was imminent.

"I don't know what this threat really is," he said. "Somewhere, somehow, sometime, something's going to happen. It's just for the rumor mill at that institution. It's not evidence to be considered."

Dallas, 37, already serving 30 years for killing Fish and Game officer Conley Elmer and Bill Pogue in 1981, contended his escape on March 30 last year was justified because he feared guards would kill him in a riot to avenge the officers' deaths.

Already administratively punished by losing a year's worth of good-time against his original sentence, Dallas faces another five years in prison if convicted.

Two and a half days of testimony in the case ended Friday morning with prosecution and defense witnesses directly contradicting each other about the prospect for a riot last year.

Backed up by current and former inmates, Dallas, 37, said he believed a riot was imminent when he cut his way through the perimeter fences and fled. His inmate legal counselor Dean Schwartzmiller, who was released last week after six years, called March 1986 "the most tense time I spent in that institution."

But Corrections Director Al Murphy, completing the prosecution's rebuttal case, said nothing could have been further from the truth.

"It was probably the quietest period I've had in the 18 years I've been in corrections," Murphy told jurors.

Inmates testifying on Dallas' behalf said the only reason there was not a riot was that they decided the prison administration wanted one and they would not oblige.

As for claims that Dallas was the target of specific threats against his life, Murphy said, "He never had a threat. He never was in trouble. He never had a problem in the yard ...

Mt. Dallas never had a threat to his life. He never should have felt he was threatened."

A former inmate who lived on the same cell tier as Dallas and a former prison employee both testified that they heard prison officers say they wanted to see Dallas dead and would use a riot as an excuse to kill him.

But those officers, called as witnesses by the prosecution, denied the claims.

Thomas McMurtrey, who was an officer at the prison until this spring, conceded that "everybody's got their favorite inmate they'd like to see dead," but he said he never heard any comments to that effect about Dallas.

Dallas was on the FBI's Ten Most Wanted list for nearly 10 months as he eluded authorities after his escape. He moved from San Francisco to Nevada to Mexico, where he had plastic surgery, to Eugene, Ore., before going to Southern California where he was captured last March 8.

of public and private payrolls, released at the same time as the household survey, the economy has added nearly 2.8 million new jobs in the past year, according to them in August. Service jobs continued to account for most of the growth.

The largest portion of them were in business and health services, up 90,000 from July, and in finance, insurance and real estate, up 25,000. Employment in retail trade dropped by 23,000 in August, the first decrease of this year.

Manufacturing jobs also dropped off, by 5,000, ending six months of steady growth.

Ma. Norwood said the economy has produced nearly 14 million jobs since November 1982, but only about 1 million have been in manufacturing, which has still only regained about 45 percent of the jobs lost during 1981 and 1982."

The number of people working part time because they could not find full-time jobs dropped by nearly 250,000 in August. But, the total, 5,282,000, was still nearly 80,000 more than in June.

These partially unemployed workers are disproportionately black and female," Ms. Norwood said.

"The made was a problem, they're very narrow and very slow and very confusing," Bird said.

"New fires are cropping up, the sleepers that have been smoldering, and then the wind comes along and we've got a fire," said Jerry Abstrom of the state's fire information center, set up by the California Department of Forestry and the U.S. Forest Service.

Firefighters also contended with 13,000 acres ablaze in Idaho, but let an 18,000-acre fire burn by itself in a wilderness area near Cascade. Smaller fires were burning in Washington, Montana, South Dakota, Wyoming and Arizona.

No rain was in sight for most of the affected area over the Labor Day weekend, and authorities saw a long haul ahead.

They will be fighting some of them until the snow flies," said George Leonard, associate chief of the U.S. Forest Service, said in Boise.

This is one of the worst fire situations that we have had in more than 20 years in these states," Forest Service Chief Dale Robertson told a news conference in Washington.

He said the lightning strikes have almost stopped, and those reported overnight did not hit timber areas.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, in an interview released Friday, acknowledged that the Iran-Contra affair has strained White House relations with Congress.

In a question-and-answer session with USA Weekend, a newspaper magazine published by the Gannett Co. Inc., Reagan was asked whether the principle of checks and balances was damaged because administration officials failed to inform Congress of activities involving the sale of arms to Iran and the diversion of profits to Nicaraguan rebels.

"You don't get any argument from me there," he replied. "The relationship (shared) between the Constitution created among the legislative, judicial and executive branches is strained whenever members of one branch don't deal in a straightforward manner with members of another."

Meeting with Shevardnadze likely

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan will likely meet with Eduard Shevardnadze when the Soviet foreign minister travels to Washington later this month to hold talks with Secretary of State George Shultz, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Friday.

"We haven't announced a meeting, but I think it's fair to say that such a meeting would be likely," Fitzwater told reporters. Shevardnadze is scheduled to hold talks with Shultz on Sept. 15-17 amid improving prospects for a superpower agreement on eliminating intermediate-range nuclear weapons from Europe.

There has been increasing speculation about a possible third summit between Reagan and Soviet General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev late this year, although U.S. officials have indicated there would be virtual agreement — on an arms control pact before that could happen.

Reagan held summit with Gorbachev in Geneva, Switzerland, in November 1985, and in Reykjavik, Iceland, last October.

word for it, but there are moments."

Reagan and his wife, Nancy, were nearing the end of their summer vacation Friday — a day they spent very much like the earlier days of this 25-day respite from Washington, dining and horseback-riding together.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said that Reagan also "attended to routine paperwork" and that the president planned to chop wood on his 688-acre ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains.

The Reagans will return to Washington on Sunday, with a stop en route to pay tribute to Republican Party figure A.J. Landon, who soon will celebrate his 100th birthday.

Reagan has a busy schedule in September, although Fitzwater said the president had no particular plans for Monday, Labor Day.

"That's re-entry day," the spokesman said.

Engine failure ruled out

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Transportation Safety Board said Friday that its investigators have examined the engines of the Northwest Airlines jet that crashed in Detroit and found no evidence that they caused the accident.

Engine failure on the McDonnell Douglas MD-80 jet, which crashed Aug. 16 and killed 156 people, was one of the early theories investigators were looking into as a cause of the disaster.

"There was nothing in the disassembly of the right or left engine that would indicate an internal failure prior to impact," NTSB spokesman Alan Pollock said. Investigators are examining indications that the crew of Flight 255 had not properly set the aircraft's flaps for takeoff.

Airlines see 700% rise in consumer complaints

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers filed 6,822 complaints about U.S. airlines with the government in August, nearly a sevenfold increase over the same month a year ago, the Department of Transportation announced Friday.

Northwest Airlines had the worst record of the carriers examined, accounting for 1,685 of the complaints, while Continental Air Lines ranked second with 1,343 and Eastern Airlines third with 913.

In August 1986, the department registered 1,041 complaints against American carriers, while in July 1987 the total was 5,995.

The department attributed many of the problems to two factors: the airline mergers in recent months and their resulting problems, and the publicity being focused on airline problems.

"But a spokesman for the airline industry added another explanation: the need for more airports and an expanded, modernized air traffic control system.

"We need more capacity in the system," said Stephen Hayes, spokesman for the Air Transport Association. "The airlines are growing in response to demand, but the airports-and-air-traffic system are not growing to keep pace."

Overall, the department reported receiving 7,280 complaints about the airline industry, including problems with U.S. and foreign carriers, travel agents, tour operators and other companies.

The greatest number of complaints — 3,311 — were about flight problems such as cancellations or delays. Problems with lost, damaged or delayed baggage ranked second at 1,134. Ranking third were the 892 complaints of ride-or-unhelpful employees, inadequate cabin services or other customer service problems.

United Airlines was fourth on the complaint list with 607, followed by Trans World Airlines with 606 and American Airlines with 398.

Northwest also had the highest ratio of complaints per 100,000 passengers, with 47. Continental ranked second with 39. TWA had 27, Eastern 24 and Pan American World Airways 23.

Delta Airlines, subject of a Federal Aviation Administration examination because of a string of incidents, accounted for 183 complaints and a rate of four complaints per 100,000 passengers.

The department announced Wednesday that by the end of the year, the 14 largest airlines will be required to report each month on delays and mishandled luggage.

Congress is working on legislation that would have more extensive reporting requirements.

Research worker develops AIDS after handling virus concentrate

WASHINGTON (AP) — A laboratory worker with no other known exposure to the AIDS virus has become infected, apparently the first such case involving a research worker, federal officials said Friday.

The infected worker, who handled highly concentrated amounts of the virus, apparently became contaminated with the virus more than a year ago but there are no indications he or she yet has symptoms of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, they said.

"The worker has no known risk factors and investigators are unsure how the individual came to test positive for the disease," said a brief statement issued by the National Cancer Institute and its parent agency, the Department of Health and Human Services.

"The laboratory in question produced and worked with highly concentrated AIDS virus unlike the concentration found anywhere outside a laboratory and a mishap in laboratory procedure is one avenue being explored by scientists," said the statement.

"Because of the many variants of HIV (AIDS virus) in nature, it is considered unlikely that the individual was infected from a source other than the laboratory," the statement said. "How the infection occurred is currently being investigated."

Jim Brown, an HHS spokesman, said the department believes there was no reason for laboratory workers to be unduly alarmed by the incident.

"We believe lab workers are safe following the (safety) procedures that are in place," Brown said.

Dr. Peter J. Fischinger, deputy director of the cancer institute, said in an interview that the worker was employed either at the National Institutes of Health, in Bethesda, Md., or at a Washington, D.C., contractor for one of the NIH units.

Fischinger said that because of privacy considerations he had no information on the identity of the worker, his or her age or sex, or the job the worker performed.

Officials said said more specific information was not immediately available because health investigators working on the case are concerned with breaching legal confidentiality requirements protecting people who become infected with the virus.

Fischinger said at least a half dozen laboratories at the NIH, including some at the cancer institute and the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, and a similar number at various contractor firms handle concentrated AIDS virus.

U.S. medical team: Private help needed for Vietnamese programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. medical team that went to Hanoi to discuss Vietnamese programs to rehabilitate war wounded believes there should be a favorable American response to Vietnam's request for assistance.

"We're going to make a positive recommendation," said Fred Downs, a Veterans Administration official and member of the study group. "We believe there should be some aid."

At the same time, he made clear that any assistance that does result from the survey would come from private organizations, not the U.S. government, which has no diplomatic relations with Vietnam.

Downs, who heads the VA's prosthetics and sensory aids service, joined two other rehabilitation experts on a four-day trip to Vietnam last month. They talked with foreign ministry and health officials and toured a center near Son Tay where artificial limbs, orthopedic devices and other rehabilitation equipment are produced and fitted.

The panel was sent under an agreement worked out in Hanoi earlier in August by retired Gen. John W. Vessey Jr., President Reagan's special emissary.

The pact called for Vietnam to resume help in accounting for the 776 Americans still listed as missing in Vietnam during the Indochina war. The United States pledged to look into some of Vietnam's "humanitarian" concerns.

The medical team was led by Dr. Carlton Savory of the Hughston Orthopedic Clinic, Columbus, Ga., and included Dr. Larry Word, an expert on non-government organizations involved in international relief efforts. Their report is expected to be in Vessey's hands by the beginning of next week.

Private American groups have talked with Vietnam about humanitarian issues over the past decade, but this was the first official medical mission. There was a special element to Savory's and Down's expertise: both are Army combat veterans of the Vietnam war.

In telephone interviews Thursday, the two would not discuss the specific points in their report, and State Department officials have declined to answer questions about the mission pending review of the findings.

Little change in valley's unemployment rate

By The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley jobless rate nosed up negligibly during August, as early harvest activity began. The seasonally adjusted mark for Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding counties rose 1 percentage point to 6.6 percent, the Idaho Department of Employment said Friday.

The state's unemployment rate hovered at 6.4 percent, showing no movement from July. Both rates remained well below the national figure of 6 percent.

August's small increase in the Magic Valley rate was not considered a significant change, said Lon McDonald, state labor force analyst based at Twin Falls.

It was a product of offsetting factors. Annual layoffs at potato processing plants, such as Universal Frozen Foods, still occur in off-peak months. However, seasonal jobs also were beginning to open up, boosting employment.

Placement activity at the Twin Falls Job Service

(office) has been brisk this month," McDonald said. "Openings have existed for seasonal workers at local processing plants and in the early farm harvest activities."

Some area businesses also have had openings for jobs due to the return of high school and college students to their classrooms, the analyst said.

Department of Employment figures show 2,109 workers off the job in the three-county area and 34,362 people out of work.

At 6.6 percent, the unemployment rate during August was 1 percentage point below the year-ago level.

"I would look at that rate as maintaining a good level, a good ratio of employed to unemployed," McDonald said.

This summer, Magic Valley joblessness has been higher than the state's overall rate, reversing its previous trend. "I think part of the reason is the farm sector," he said. "We're the most dependent on agriculture of any region of the state."

Statewide, the jobless rate remained steady as the work force expanded by 2,300 to climb back above the 430,000 level for the first time this summer. Total employment increased by more than 2,000 to more than 407,000.

But August's performance continued well below levels of last winter, when the labor force hit a record 440,600 and employment stood at 413,000.

The Idaho rate now stands four tenths of a point above the decade-low of 5.9 percent recorded in June.

August's job situation in Idaho presented a mixture of competing events.

"Many of the food processing plants returned to full operation last month especially in southwest and south central Idaho," department analysts said. "The fresh pack houses were active as the harvest of the 1987 onion and potato crops got under way. ... But two major firms in eastern Idaho remained closed during the month."

Nu-West Industries reopened the old Conda phosphate mine and processing plant in Soda Springs, hiring several hundred new workers, but that move was offset by layoffs of workers with the closure of Buttrey's food stores in Pocatello and Boise. ... Impending layoffs at the Cyprus Thompson Creek molybdenum mine in Challis and the Tupperware plant in Jerome will not show up in the state figures until later this year.

Average unemployment so far this year has been less than 6 percent. Barring unforeseen drastic increases, Idaho's 1987 average will be the lowest this decade.

On Friday, the Idaho Employment Department also released last month's forecast, saying it had overestimated the number of Idahoans at work by nearly 7,000. It pulled back the figure to 405,200.

August unemployment rates for Idaho's regions, along with changes from July, were:

- Idaho — 5.4 percent, no change.
- Magic Valley — 5.6 percent, up 1 percent.
- Pocatello area — not available.
- Idaho Falls area — 4.2 percent, down 0.3 percent.
- Cassia County — 5.3 percent, down 1.3 percent.
- Ada County (Boise) — 3.8 percent, down 1 percent.
- Lewiston area — 6.4 percent, down 1 percent.
- Panhandle (Coeur d'Alene) — 7.1 percent, down 2 percent.

Developer meets deadline for new preliminary permit

By JANE ROBINSON Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A developer of the proposed Dike Dam hydroelectric project near Glenna Ferry has refilled for a new preliminary permit under the name Snake River Hydroelectric Corporation, federal officials said Friday.

Burt O'Keefe, of Mutual Energy Corporation in Sacramento, Calif., filed for a new preliminary permit on Sept. 1, the deadline date when the original permit expired.

The $100 million, 66 megawatt hydroelectric project was originally filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission as Dike Dam Hydroelectric project by Glenna Ferry farmer David Barnhill.

Barnhill first proposed the project three years ago and hired O'Keefe to develop the site. But six months later, Barnhill and O'Keefe parted company, and the project stalled.

Barnhill contacted O'Keefe last fall and asked him to become re-involved with the project. Barnhill, O'Keefe and Dale Mahon, a Sacramento lawyer, were partners in the Dike Dam project.

The three had until Sept. 1 to complete the application for a federal hydroelectric license. Otherwise, the three-year preliminary permit expired, said Sharon Hyland, a public information officer with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

No application for a license was filed, Hyland said.

But the application for a new permit was filed by O'Keefe, she said.

"It was filed under a new name, but it appears to be a very similar application," Hyland said Friday.

Hyland said the application does not mean the permit will be granted.

The Dike Dam proposal was to build a 100-foot high dam with a 12,500 acre foot, seven-mile long reservoir about 15 miles downstream from the Wiley Dam site being considered by the City of Tacoma, Wash.

The 66 megawatt project would produce an estimated 400 million kilowatt-hours annually, O'Keefe said earlier.

Barnhill, contacted Thursday, said he understood O'Keefe filed an application to extend the permit for a year, but he was not sure of the details.

O'Keefe could not be reached for comment.

The Dike Dam project is also part of a Chapter 11 reorganization filed in Bankruptcy Court by Barnhill. A bankruptcy court judge in February allowed Barnhill the time to try and develop a hydroelectric project on his land.

Bennett: A fair trade-off

By MARK PRATTER Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — K. Lynn Bennett, the new manager for the Shoshone district of the Bureau of Land Management, traded views of Washington D.C. monuments for Idaho sagebrush. He says he is happy for the change.

"I just wanted to get back in the West," says Bennett, who was chief of the Bureau of Range Management in Washington since 1983.

K. LYNN BENNETT
New BLM district manager

The 46-year-old Bennett was associate district manager for the Burley BLM district in the 1970s and he brings a quarter-century of BLM land management experience to his new job.

District manager jobs are sought-after positions in the BLM. In the Shoshone district, Bennett oversees 1.6 million acres of public lands that run the gamut from grazing areas, recreation spots, such as Magic Reservoir, renowned geologic features such as the Great Rift, and wilderness study areas including the Little Wood River and Black

Butte. Bennett replaces acting district manager John Ideo, who becomes associate district manager and chief of the division of resources in the Shoshone district. Ideo will supervise staff involved with mineral resources, recreation and wildlife.

Bennett, who has a Bachelor's degree in range management from Utah State University, has only been in Shoshone a week but he has gained a few impressions looking around the district.

He is already thinking about the possibility of continued drought next summer. In a good water year the BLM may sell extra forage at the end of the grazing season. "But this year we are going to look real close at that," he says.

The dry grasses may be needed to supplement the forage that sprouts in the spring, he says. "My feeling is that agriculture in general is best-served by a well-managed resource," he says. "This means protecting the soil and trying to keep cheat grass under control."

Cheat grass often wins the battle for survival in competition with other plants.

"With repeated burnings we've kind of set up a situation where cheat grass expands. If that comes up, we lose the seed source for other native species," he says.

Bennett says he likes the Shoshone district's green striping program where beneficial grasses such as crested wheatgrass are planted in strips 100 to 300 feet wide. This helps wildlife facing a loss of winter range and provides a buffer in range fires.

Five miles of greenstrips will have been planted by the end of this year in the Sid Lake area 20 miles east of Shoshone and toward Bliss along the railroad tracks.

BLM hopes to greatly expand green striping in the coming year.

Bennett went on a tour of Magic Reservoir this week. He says it was tough to look at it when the water was so low but his impression was the area needs a lot of attention. He says he supports the proposed recreation plans BLM has drafted for the area.

He says it is too early for him to comment on the environmental concerns the BLM has raised about new hydroelectric projects on the Snake River, including the A.J. Wiley project near Bliss.

Bennett says he recognizes the importance of public lands to local communities within the

Firefighters' training in freeze

By DAVID LEWIS Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Additional training for Buhl's volunteer firefighters may rest on obtaining general revenue funds tied up in federal court.

Volunteer firefighters told the Buhl City Council Tuesday that a freeze in the coming year's budget means they can't train only two times a month instead of four.

Volunteer Randy Mittelstaedt said the drills are needed to "keep current." He hinted that some firefighters may drop out because of the lack of training. "Who's going to replace them?" he asked.

The council approved a $1.63 million 1987-88 budget after a public hearing. Thirty chairs were set up for residents, but only three firemen, the fire chief and some other city officials attended the meeting.

The new budget gives $113,019 to the Fire Department, a 17 percent increase over last year.

Volunteer firemen will get $5,000, the same amount they received this year. They had asked for $8,000.

What put a bite into the budget this year was a jump of $17,860 in firemen's retirement payments. The retroactive increase was mandated by the state Legislature. "We were caught by surprise," said Councilman Terry Lechner. He said other funds had to be used for the unexpected expense.

Mayor Claude McKercher said federal general revenue sharing funds were earmarked for the Fire Department. About $2,600 was expected.

But according to an Association of Idaho Cities newsletter, $180 million in funds is being held up by the U.S. Justice Department which is filing an appeal on the matter in a Washington D.C. federal district court. The program ends this year.

BLM organizes volunteer clean-up

By MARK PRATTER Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Washing machines, water heaters, bricks, chairs, diaper boxes, concrete and old record player by an animal skeleton.

Piles of trash. Enough in one spot to fill a couple of pickups and it goes on and on littering U.S. Bureau of Land Management and Idaho Department of Lands range on the north rim of the canyon east of the Perrine Bridge.

BLM and the Idaho Department of Lands say the budget just doesn't allow cleanup work or regular patrols of the area. As part of Federal Lands Cleanup Day on September 12 BLM is organizing its first volunteer effort to remove some of the debris.

The area is popular not only with trash dumpers but with recreationists such as horseback riders, hikers, trailhike riders. And the bullet-hole riddled water towers show they offer opportunities for people seeking something to aim at for target practice.

But the BLM is hoping to change that part of the recreation by removing the rusted hulks, says Donita Cotter, BLM recreation planner in BLM's Shoshone District.

"People interested in helping with the cleanup should head north across the Perrine Bridge and take the first right. Volunte ers will gather there at 8:30 a.m. and be assigned a BLM crew leader. Groups will be assigned specific areas within the 6,000 acre area. The BLM advises volunteers to wear work gloves and bring water.

The trash will be bagged and hauled to the Jerome County Sanitary Landfill at Flat Top Butte. BLM will also bury as many large piles of trash as possible at the Snake River Rim Recreation Area.

Ray Coats and Francis Egbert, who live by the Shoshone Falls power plant, have volunteered the use of a front-end loader. Bill Hamm, who has a lava rock operation in the Shoshone area, is donating the use of a state bed truck for the cleanup. And the Schrak family of Twin Falls construction is throwing in the free use of a bulldozer for the day.

"Every little lava depression has a couple of pickup loads of trash. It's frustrating. It's pretty disgusting," says Cotter of BLM.

BLM, IDL and the Jerome County Sheriff know the dumping has gone on for years and they try to catch offenders when they can.

"The dumping situation has stabilized for the moment but the real test will be at the end of deer hunting season, says Bob Cordell, BLM's Hills Area Manager. If there are a lot of deer carcasses out there then BLM will know it is losing ground, he says.

"Solving the dumping problem is going to take more than an annual cleanup day," says Cordell.

Writer's ploy changes stadium's beer policy

DENVER (AP) — A newspaper columnist who arranged for two teen-agers to buy beer at Mile High Stadium won changes in the concessionaire's beer policy, but he also received a warning from police that he could have faced charges.

Denver Post columnist Woody Paige wrote in Friday's edition he had been advised of his rights by police and told they were "studying the charges against me" because he asked the minors to buy the beer, though he instructed the youths not to drink it.

Authorities said, however, that neither Paige nor The Post would be charged.

ARA Leisure Services, which sells food and beverages at Mile High, changed its beer service policy after Paige revealed Tuesday that two 17-year-old high school students bought beer 10 times at Sunday's Denver Zephyrs baseball game without being challenged.

The new policy includes requiring IDs from any person purchasing beer, regardless of how old the individual looks, said Joe Pitone, an ARA vice president.

Vendors also will no longer roam the stands hawking beer, ARA officials announced before

Thursday's Denver Broncos-Minnesota Vikings professional football game.

As a result of the new policy, three vendors slight for selling beer to people younger than 21, and six underage fans were charged with possession of beer, authorities said.

In an interview Friday, Paige said he acted on his own and without authorization from the newspaper in asking the teen-agers to buy the beer. He said he instructed them to put the beer under their seats after the purchase.

He said Denver police Detective Marcus Chavez, who works in the Department of Excise and Licenses, advised him of his rights Thursday.

"ARA is trying to shift the responsibility and attention away from its unlawful actions, and the city seems determined to protect its hindmost part," Paige wrote in Friday's column.

Paige charged that ARA's attorney was "trying to use a red herring — me — to relieve his company's blame."

Pitone on Friday denied the charge but declined comment on the issue. "I'm not trying to do anything to Woody," he said.

Chavez said he advised Paige of his rights because he did not know what his investigation into the matter would reveal. He said Friday he had checked with the district attorney's office and no criminal charges would be filed against The Post or Paige "since there was no criminal intent on his part."

"I am sorry if his feelings were hurt," Chavez said. "But I could only do my job. I wanted to ensure the protection of his rights, and it's a mandatory requirement to advise a person of his rights even if there's a remote chance he could be charged."

Chavez said if any charges are made, they would be brought against ARA. He added that Paige should have advised authorities before asking the teen-agers to buy the beer.

Post Editor David Hall said he supported Paige's actions in asking the teen-agers to buy the beer.

Hall disagreed with authorities' statements that Paige should have alerted them before asking the teen-agers to buy the beer.

"That's just their embarrassing way of admitting they weren't doing their own job," he said.

Ex-police chief faces one 2-year sentence

COEUR DALENE (AP) — Former Pocatello Police Chief Ronald Lee Sterley faces a single two-year prison term after a single Idaho Supreme Court ruled he could be sentenced on only one of two cocaine-related charges.

Sterley was convicted in December 1986 on charges of delivery and conspiracy to deliver cocaine. Each conviction carried a two-year penalty.

His lawyer, Allen Bowles of Moscow, appealed, citing both the double conviction and use of recorded telephone calls as evidence.

In choosing between the two charges Thursday, First District Judge Watt Prather decided on a two-year indeterminate sentence on the delivery charge and dropped the conspiracy charge.

Bowles asked that the sentence be reduced, but Prather refused, calling drug trafficking by a police chief a "hypocrisy of the greatest order."

Sterley, who has been free on bail during the appeal, will be in a threatening situation if he is sent to prison, Bowles said.

"The position of a law enforcement officer going to the pen does create some threat of harm," Bowles said.

He suggested instead that Sterley serve 120 days at the North Idaho Correctional facility at Cottonwood or perform community service, such as talking to high school students about the affect of drugs.

Kootenai County chief deputy prosecutor Mike Kane said that would send "a very bad message."

"The example of someone as a police officer engaged in these criminal activities would give a bad impression on young and impressionable minds," Kane said.

Kane said Sterley never admitted wrongdoing and blamed his son, Tony Sterley, who pleaded guilty to possession with intent to deliver cocaine and was sentenced to two years in jail.

Higher education schools ask for more funds

MOSCOW (AP) — Idaho's three four-year universities and one college are seeking $24.6 million in additional funding next year, with almost half of that for the University of Idaho.

The budget requests likely will rise even above that, however, because they do not include amounts sought to give employees a cost-of-living wage increase.

The Idaho Board of Education will review the requests and prepare its own budget package at a

Sept. 15-17 meeting in Boise. It then will submit the package to Gov. Cecil Andrus.

The institutions' requests include:

- University of Idaho: $82.4 million; that reflects a requested increase of $11.45 million or 16.16 million above the current base of $70.9 million.
- Boise State University: $41.59 million, an increase of $6.99 million or 20.2 percent. BSU now operates on a budget of $34.59 million.
- Lewis-Clark State College: $7.846 million, an increase of $1.9 million or 24.5 percent above the current budget of $5.95 million.

The budget is a product of guidelines established last year by the state board. A key instruction called on institutions not to include a request for cost-of-living salary increases. That could be taken up by the board itself or later in the process when Andrus submits his budget request to the 1988 Legislature.

This year's Legislature approved one of the largest budget increases for higher education in recent history. But doing so again might be difficult in light of anticipated tight state finances.

"There will be a lot of talk about that at the board meeting," ISU President Richard Bowen said. "I think the board will spend a good deal of their time discussing what is a reasonable request to make."

Marijuana plants are seized Funds

RUPERT — Minidoka County Sheriff's deputies Friday found a garden of suspected marijuana plants at a house southwest of Rupert after receiving a telephone tip.

Rudolfo L. Mancias, 29, was arrested at the home and was charged with manufacturing a controlled substance. He was being held on $10,000 bond in the Minidoka County Jail, said Lt. Randall White, chief of criminal investigations for the sheriff's police.

Officers obtained a search warrant based on the tip and went to the Mancias house in a subdivision, about 1 1/2 miles west and one-mile south of Rupert.

After entering the property, they seized 38 plants in a garden at the rear of the house, White said. They appeared to be cultivated, he said.

Mancias offered no resistance to the three sheriff's deputies and one Rupert officer serving the warrant.

Mancias' most likely will be arraigned in Fifth District Magistrate Court at Rupert on Tuesday. Manufacture of a controlled substance is a felony charge.

of the withheld general revenue sharing funds in the near future," the report said. McKercher said it's possible the government will drop the appeal and revenue sharing for firefighting expenses will be obtained.

Mittelstaedt called fire service "hazardous," but said he enjoyed being a fireman.

"It seems we're not appreciated and that bothers me. The $6 per hour — I get paid the $25-per-month I pay for insurance. It's mainly a matter of principle," he said. He called the department one district. He and his wife Beverly are looking for a house in Shoshone because he wants to be close to the district offices. Their daughter Becky has started in the ninth grade at Shoshone High School.

When Bennett lived in the Washington area he liked to visit Civil War battlefields and fish in Chesapeake Bay. Bennett says he is looking forward to casting for trout in some of the good holes at Magic.

Bennett says his early impressions from what he has seen so far is that the Shoshone district has been putting the right emphasis on things.

"My impression is that the district in the past has done a real good job. We have a really good staff of professionals doing a real good job. I wouldn't want to change it. I want to continue the emphasis on (improving) Magic and continue the shrub restoration and green stripping," Bennett says.

Little change in valley's unemployment rate

By The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley jobs rate moved up negligibly during August, as early harvest activity began. The seasonally adjusted rate for Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding counties rose 1 percentage point to 5.6 percent, the Idaho Department of Employment said Friday.

The state's unemployment rate hovered at 5.4 percent, showing no movement from July. Both rates remained well below the national figure of 6.6 percent.

August's small increase in the Magic Valley rate was not considered a significant change, said Lon McDonald, state labor force analyst based at Twin Falls.

It was a product of offsetting factors. Annual layoffs at potato processing plants, such as Universal Excess, are still well in effect early in the month. However, seasonal jobs also were beginning to open up, boosting employment.

"Placement activity at the Twin Falls Job Service

(office) has been brisk this month," McDonald said. "Openings have existed for seasonal workers at local processing plants—and in the early farm-harvest activities."

Some area businesses also have had openings for jobs due to the return of high school and college students to their classrooms, the analyst said.

Department of Employment figures show 2,109 workers off-the-job-in-the-three-county area and 34,362 people at work.

At 5.6 percent, the unemployment rate during August was 1 percentage point below the year-ago level.

"I would look at that rate as maintaining a good level, a good ratio of employed to unemployed," McDonald said.

This summer, Magic Valley joblessness has been higher than the state's overall rate, reversing its previous trend. "I think part of the reason is the non-farm sector has been coming back faster than the farm sector," the analyst said. "We're the most dependent on agriculture of any region of the state."

Statewide, the jobless rate remained steady as the work force expanded by 2,300 to climb back above the 430,000 level for the first time this summer. Total employment increased by more than 2,000 to more than 407,000.

But August's performance continued well below July levels of last winter, when the labor force hit a record 440,600 and employment stood at 418,000.

The Idaho rate now stands four tenths of a point above the decade-low of 5.0 percent recorded in June.

August's job situation in Idaho presented a mixture of competing events.

"Many of the food processing plants returned to full operation last month especially in southwest and south central Idaho," department analysts said. "The fresh-pack houses were active as the harvest of the 1987 onion and potato crops got under way... But two major firms in eastern Idaho remained closed during the month."

Northwest Industries reopened the Old Condo phosphate mine and processing plant in Soda Springs, hiring several hundred new workers, but that move was offset by layoffs of workers with the closure of Bultrey's food stores in Pocatello and Boise.

Impending layoffs at the Cyprus Thompson Creek molylbenum mine in Challis and the Tupperware plant in Jerome will not show up in the state figures until later this year.

Average unemployment so far this year has been less than 6 percent. Barring unforeseen "drastic" increases, Idaho's 1987 average will be the lowest this decade.

On Friday, the state Employment Department also revised last month's forecast, saying it had overestimated the number of Idahoans at work by nearly 7,000. It pulled back the figure to 405,200.

August unemployment rates for Idaho's regions, along with changes from July, were:

- Idaho — 5.4 percent, no change.
- Magic Valley — 5.6 percent, up 1 percent.
- Pocatello area — not available.
- Idaho Falls area — 4.2 percent, down .8 percent.
- Canyon County — 5.8 percent, down 1.8 percent.
- Ada County (Butte) — 3.8 percent, down .1 percent.
- Lewiston area — 6.4 percent, down .1 percent.
- Panhandle (Coeur d'Alene) — 7.1 percent, down .2 percent.

Developer meets deadline for new preliminary permit

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A developer of the proposed Dike Dam hydroelectric project near Glens Ferry has fulfilled for a new preliminary permit under the name Snake River Hydroelectric Corporation, federal officials said Friday.

Bart O'Keefe, of Mutual Energy Corporation in Sacramento, Calif., filed for a new preliminary permit on Sept. 1, the deadline date when the original permit expired.

The $100 million, 66 megawatt hydroelectric project was originally filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission as Dike Dam Hydroelectric project by Glens Ferry farmer Donald Barnhill.

Barnhill first proposed the project three years ago and hired O'Keefe to develop the site. But six months later, Barnhill and O'Keefe parted company, and the project stalled.

Barnhill contacted O'Keefe last fall and asked him to become re-involved with the project. Barnhill, O'Keefe and Dale Mahon, a Sacramento lawyer, were partners in the Dike Dam project.

The three had until Sept. 1 to complete the application for a "federal hydropower license. Otherwise, the three-year preliminary permit expired, said Sharon Hyland, a public information officer with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

No application for a license was filed, Hyland said.

But the application for a new permit was filed by O'Keefe, she said.

"It was filed under a new name, but it appears to be a very similar application," Hyland said Friday.

Hyland said the application does not mean the permit will be granted.

The Dike Dam proposal was to build a 100-foot high dam with a 12,500 acre foot, seven-mile long reservoir about 15 miles downstream from the Wiley Dam site being considered by the City of Tacoma, Wash. The 66 megawatt project would produce an estimated 400 million kilowatts annually, O'Keefe said earlier.

Barnhill, contacted Thursday, said he understood O'Keefe filed an application to extend the permit for a year, but he was not sure of the details.

O'Keefe could not be reached for comment.

The Dike Dam project is also part of a Chapter 11 reorganization filed in Bankruptcy Court by Barnhill. A bankruptcy court judge in February allowed Barnhill the time to try and develop a hydroelectric project on his land.

Bennett: A fair trade-off

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — K. Lynn Bennett, the new manager of the Shoshone district of the Bureau of Land Management, traded views of Washington D.C. monuments for Idaho sagebrush. He says he is happy for the change.

"I just wanted to get back in the West," says Bennett, who was chief of the Bureau of Range Management in Washington since 1983.

K. LYNN BENNETT
New BLM district manager

The 46-year-old Bennett was associate district manager for the Butley BLM district in the 1970s and he brings a quarter-century of BLM land management experience to his new job.

District manager jobs are sought after positions in the BLM. In the Shoshone district Bennett oversees 1.6 million acres of public lands that run the gamut from grazing areas, recreation spots such as Magic Reservoir, renowned geologic features such as the Great Rift and wilderness study areas including the Little Wood River and Black

Butte. Bennett replaces acting district manager John Ideo, who becomes associate district manager and chief of the division of resource management. Bennett, who has a bachelor's degree in range management from Utah State University, has only been in Shoshone a week but he has gained a few impressions looking around the district.

He is already thinking about the possibility of continued drought next summer. In a good year the BLM may sell extra forage at the end of the grazing season. "But this year we are going to look real close at that," he says.

The dry grasses may be needed to supplement the forage that sprouts in the spring, he says.

"My feeling is that agriculture in general is best served by a well-managed resource," he says. This means protecting the soil and trying to keep cheat grass under control.

Cheat grass often wins the battle for survival in competition with other plants.

"With repeated burnings we've kind of set up a situation where cheat grass expands. If that comes up we lose the seed source for other native species," he says.

Bennett says he likes the Shoshone district's green striping program where beneficial grasses such as crested wheatgrass are planted in strips 100 to 300 feet wide. This helps wildlife facing loss of winter range and provides a buffer-in-range fires.

Five miles of greenstrips will have been planted by the end of this year in the Sid Lake area 20 miles east of Shoshone and toward Bliss along the railroad tracks.

BLM hopes to greatly expand green striping in the coming year.

Bennett went on a tour of Magic Reservoir this week. He says it was tough to look at when the water was so low but his impression was the area needs a lot of attention. He says he supports the proposed recreation plans BLM has drafted for the area.

He says it is too early for him to comment on the environmental concerns the BLM has raised about new hydroelectric projects on the Snake River, including the A.J. Wiley project near Bliss.

Bennett says he recognizes the importance of public lands to local communities within the area.

Firefighters' training in freeze

By DAVID LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Additional training for Buhl's volunteer firefighters may rest on obtaining general revenue funds tied up in federal court.

Volunteer firefighters told the Buhl City Council Tuesday that a freeze in the coming year's budget means they can train only two times a month instead of four.

Volunteer Randy Mittelstaedt said the drills are needed to "keep current." He hinted that some firefighters may drop out because of the lack of training. "Who's going to replace them?" he asked.

The council approved a $1.63 million 1987-88 budget after a public hearing. Thirty chairs were set up for residents, but only three firemen, the fire chief and some other city officials attended the meeting.

The "new budget" gives $113,019 to the Fire Department, a 17 percent increase over last year. Volunteer firemen will get $6,000, the same amount they received this year. They had asked for $8,000.

What put a bite into the budget this year was a jump of $17,850 in firemen's retirement payments. The retroactive increase was mandated by the state Legislature.

"We were caught by surprise," said Councilman Terry Lechner. He said other funds had to be used for the unexpected expense.

Mayor Claude McKecher said federal general revenue sharing funds were earmarked for the Fire Department. About $2,600 was expected.

But according to an Association of Idaho Cities newsletter, $180 million in funds is being held up by the U.S. Justice Department which is filing an appeal on the matter in a Washington D.C. federal district court. The program ends this year.

"Idaho city officials should not expect to receive any."

BLM organizes volunteer clean-up

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Washing machines, water heaters, bricks, chairs, dumpster boxes, concrete, an old record player by an animal skeleton.

Piles of trash. Enough in one spot to fill a couple of pickups and it goes on and on, littering U.S. Bureau of Land Management, and Idaho Department of Lands range on the north rim of the canyon east of the Perrine Bridge.

BLM and the Idaho Department of Lands say the budget just doesn't allow cleanup workers or regular patrols of the area. As part of Federal Lands Cleanup Day on September 12 BLM is organizing its first volunteer effort to remove some of the debris.

The area is popular not only with trash dumpers but all types of recreationists such as horseback riders, bikers, trailbike riders. And the bull-hole riddled water heaters show they offer opportunities for people seeking something to aim at for target practice.

But the BLM is hoping to change that part of the recreation by removing the rusted hulks, says Donita Cotter, BLM recreation planner in BLM's Shoshone District.

People interested in helping with the cleanup should head north across the Perrine Bridge and take the first right. Volunteers will gather there at 8:30 a.m. and be assigned a BLM crew leader. Groups will be assigned specific areas within the 5,000 acre area. The BLM advises volunteering to wear work gloves and bring water.

The trash will be bagged and hauled to the Jerome County Sanitary Landfill at Flat Top Butte. BLM will also bury as many large piles of trash as possible at the Snake River Rim Recreation Area.

Ray Coats and Francis Egbert, who live by the Shoshone Falls power plant, have volunteered the use of a front-end loader. Bill Hamm, who has a lava rock operation in the Shoshone area, is donating the use of a stake bed truck for the cleanup. And the Schrank family of Twin Falls construction is throwing in the free use of a bulldozer for the day.

"Every little lava depression has a couple of pickup loads of trash. It's frustrating. It's pretty disgusting," says Cotter of BLM.

BLM, IDL and the Jerome County Sheriff think the dumping has gone on for years and they try to catch offenders when they can.

The dumping situation has stabilized for the moment but the real test will be at the end of deer hunting season, says Bob Cordell, BLM Bennett Hills Area Manager. If there are a lot of deer carcasses out there then BLM will know it is losing ground, he says.

"Solving the dumping problem is going to take more than an annual cleanup day," says Cordell.

Writer's ploy changes stadium's beer policy

DENVER (AP) — A newspaper columnist who arranged for two teen-agers to buy beer at Mile High Stadium won changes in the concessionaire's beer policy, but he also received a charge.

Denver Post columnist Woody Paige wrote in Friday's edition he had been advised of his rights by police and told they were "studying possible charges against me" because he asked the minors to buy the beer, though he instructed the youths not to drink it.

"Authorities said, however, that neither Paige nor The Post would be charged."

ARA Leisure Services, which sells food and beverages at Mile High, changed its beer service policy after Paige revealed Tuesday that two 17-year-old high school students bought beer 10 times at Sunday's Denver Broncos baseball game without being challenged.

The new policy includes requiring IDs from any person purchasing beer, regardless of how old the individual looks, said Joe Pitone, an ARA vice president.

Paige also will no longer roam the stands hawking beer, ARA officials announced before

Thursday's Denver Broncos-Minnesota Vikings professional football game.

As a result of the new policy, three vendors at Mile High Stadium were cited Thursday night for selling beer to people younger than 21; and six underage fans were charged with possession of beer, authorities said.

In an interview Friday, Paige said he acted on his own and without authorization from the newspaper in asking the teen-agers to buy the beer. He said he instructed them to put the beer under their seats after the purchase.

He said Denver police Detective Marcus Chavez, who works in the Department of Excise and Licenses, advised him of his rights Thursday.

"ARA is trying to shift the responsibility and attention away from its unlawful actions, and the city seems determined to protect its hide-most part," Paige wrote in Friday's column.

Paige charged that ARA's attorney was "trying to use a red herring — me — to relieve his company's blame."

Pitone on Friday denied the charge but declined comment on the column. "I'm not trying to do anything to Woody," he said.

Chavez said he advised Paige of his rights because he did not know what his investigation into the matter would reveal. He said Friday he had checked with the district attorney's office The Post or Paige "since there was no criminal intent on their part."

"I am sorry if my feelings were hurt," Chavez said. "But I could only do my job. I wanted to ensure the protection of his rights, and it's a mandatory requirement to advise a person of his rights even if there's a remote chance he could be charged."

Chavez said if any charges are made, they would be brought against ARA. He added that Paige should have advised authorities before asking the teen-agers to buy the beer.

Post Editor David Hall said he supported Paige's actions in asking the teen-agers to buy the beer.

Hall disagreed with authorities' statements that Paige should have alerted them before asking the teen-agers to buy the beer.

"That's just their embarrassing way of admitting they weren't doing their own job," he said.

Ex-police chief faces one 2-year sentence

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Former Potlatch Police Chief Ronald Lee Sterley faces a single two-year prison term after the Idaho Supreme Court ruled he could be sentenced on only one of two cocaine-related charges.

Sterley was convicted in December 1985 on charges of delivery and conspiracy to deliver cocaine. Each conviction carried a two-year penalty.

His lawyer, Allen Bowles of Moscow, appealed, citing both the double conviction and use of recorded telephone calls as evidence.

In choosing between the two charges Thursday, First District Judge Watt Prather decided on a two-year indeterminate sentence on the delivery charge and dropped the conspiracy charge.

Bowles asked that the sentence be reduced, but Prather refused, calling it "hypocrisy of the greatest order."

Sterley, who has been free on bail during the appeal, will be in a threatening situation if he is sent to prison, Bowles said.

"The position of a law enforcement officer going to the pen does create some threat of harm," Bowles said.

He suggested instead the Sterley serve 120 days at the North Idaho Correctional facility at Cottonwood or perform community service, such as talking to high school students about the effect of drugs.

Kootenai County chief deputy prosecutor Mike Kane said that would send "a very bad message."

"The example of someone as a police officer engaged in these criminal activities would give a bad impression on young and impressionable minds," Kane said.

Kane said Sterley never admitted wrongdoing and blamed his son, Tony Sterley, who pleaded guilty to possession with intent to deliver cocaine and was sentenced to two years in jail.

Higher education schools ask for more funds

MOSCOW (AP) — Idaho's three four-year universities and one college are seeking $24.5 million in additional funding next year, with almost half of that for the University of Idaho.

The budget requests likely will rise even above that level, however, because they do not include amounts sought to give employees a cost-of-living wage increase.

The Idaho Board of Education will review the requests and prepare its own budget package at a

Sept. 15-17 meeting in Boise. It then will submit the package to Gov. Cecil Andrus.

The institutions' requests include:

- University of Idaho: $82.4 million. That reflects a requested increase of $11.45 million or 16.16 million above the current base of $70.9 million.
- Boise State University: $41.59 million, an increase of $6.99 million or 20.2 percent. BSU now operates on a budget of $34.69 million.

Idaho State University: $35.37 million, an increase of $4.17 million or 14 percent. ISU's current budget is $31.2 million.

Lewis-Clark State College: $28.45 million, an increase of $3.9 million or 19 percent above the current budget of $24.55 million.

The budgets are a product of guidelines established earlier this year by the state board. A key instruction called on institutions not to include a request for cost-of-living salary increase. That would be taken up by the board itself or later in the process when Andrus submits his budget request to the 1988 Legislature.

This year's Legislature approved one of the largest budget increases for higher education in recent history. But doing so again might be difficult in light of anticipated tight state finances.

"There will be a lot of talk about that at the board meeting," ISU President Richard Bowen said. "I think the board will spend a good deal of their time discussing what is a reasonable request to make."

Marijuana plants are seized Funds

RUPERT — Minidoka County Sheriff's deputies Friday found a garden of suspected marijuana plants at a house southwest of Rupert after receiving a telephone tip.

Rudolfo L. Mancias, 29, was arrested at the home and was charged with manufacturing a controlled substance. He was being held on $10,000 bond in the Minidoka County Jail, said Lt. Randall White, chief of criminal investigations for the sheriff's office.

Officers obtained a search warrant based on the tip and went to the Mancias house in a subdivision about 1 1/2 miles west and one mile south of Rupert.

After entering the property, they seized 38 plants in a garden at the rear of the house, White said. They appeared to be cultivated, he said.

Mancias offered no resistance to the three sheriff's deputies and one Rupert officer serving the warrant.

Mancias most likely will be arraigned in Fifth District Magistrate Court at Rupert on Tuesday. Manufacture of a controlled substance is a felony charge.

of the withheld general revenue sharing funds in the near future," the report said. McKerscher said it's possible the government will drop the appeal and revenue sharing for freighting expenses will be obtained.

Mitteltadt said that fire service "hazardous," but said he enjoyed being a fireman.

PAPAL VISIT: SEPTEMBER 10-19, 1987

Visit sparks interest in priesthood

DETROIT (AP) — The pope's U.S. visit next month is already inspiring more interest in the priesthood in some parts of the country, according to spokesmen for several of the nation's dioceses, which are scrambling for successors to an aging clergy.
-In Detroit, where Pope John Paul II will end his nine-day visit Sept. 19, a $300,000 advertising campaign to recruit new priests, launched just before the visit was announced, has been rescheduled to coincide with his appearance.
'We're trying to get out of it what we can,' said the Rev. John West, archdiocese vocations director.
Using the same advertising firm, N.W. Ayer, that creditably widely praised ads for the U.S. military, the archdiocese has purchased radio and television spots, billboards, and full-page newspaper and magazine ads that extol the virtues of priesthood.
'We're looking to collar a few good men,' reads the caption on a full-page ad featuring a priest, a dean, and young men — one white, one black and one Hispanic.
'We're getting two or three times as many inquiries (into priesthood) than we normally would,' West said. 'Some aren't even Catholic.'
Some dioceses say they are still reaping the benefits of the pope's 1979 visit, although interest hasn't necessarily translated into more priests.
'Within a year we doubled our number of seminarians from 10 to 20,' said the Rev. Phil Krueger, vocations director for the archdiocese of Des Moines, Iowa.
Since that initial jump, enrollment has averaged 16 students, six above normal, he said.
'That's a lot for our little rural diocese,' he said, adding that new seminary students "who were in fifth and sixth grade when the pope came still make mention of it."

New '700 Club' show debuts

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — The Rev. Pat Robertson's Christian Broadcasting Network unveiled a revamped "700 Club" show Monday, featuring Robertson's son as a co-host and a new $60,000 set decorated in a Southwestern motif.
'It was really time for a change,' Terry Heaton, the show's producer, said after the first broadcast, "It's a breath of fresh air for us."
Timothy B. Robertson, who replaced his father as a co-host of the religious talk show, said "The 700 Club" was overhauled with limited resources to keep the program from stagnating.
The Christian Broadcasting Network has been hurt recently by evangelical scandals and Pat Robertson's venture into presidential politics.
Contributors to the Virginia Beach-based network have fallen more than 20 percent this year compared with 1986, when CBN raised a record $130 million, said Tim Robertson, the network's president.
'We're going to be very happy if we hit $100 million,' in 1987, he said.
Robertson said network officials had braced for a 10 percent cut in contributions because of the public's interest in the Republican presidential nomination.
But he added that officials were unprepared for the backlash against television evangelists that came with reports that Rev. Jim Bakker paid hush money to conceal an extramarital affair and a claim by Rev. Oral Roberts that he would die unless he raised $8 million.
The network laid off 470 employees in June. At the same time, the Robertson told viewers they projected a $28 million loss by the end of 1987.
Heaton said Pat Robertson may appear occasionally as a guest on "The 700 Club." He made his farewell appearance as a co-host on Aug. 14.
Tim Robertson was joined Monday as a co-host by Ben Kinchlow, a program regular for 12 years, and Susan Howard, former actress on CBS-TV's "Dallas."

Rust draws 4-year term

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Supreme Court convicted Mathias Rust on Friday and sentenced him to four years in a labor camp, saying the West German teen-ager flew a single-engine plane to Red Square to promote himself, not world peace.

Judge Robert Tikhomirov and two lay people convicted Rust on all three counts stemming from his astonishing flight May 28 to the seat of Soviet power. The 19-year-old pilot flew at low altitude across more than 500 miles of Soviet territory protected by sophisticated air defenses.

when the sentence was read.

Western diplomats have said the Soviets might expect Rust before he serves time, but officials gave no indication this would happen.

Any visit by a high-ranking West German official or the 70th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution next month, could provide an opportunity for the Soviets to release Rust and rid themselves of an embarrassing issue.

In West Germany, politicians said they hoped for clemency.

"It could have been worse," said Alfred-Dregger, parliamentary leader of Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Christian Democratic Party. Dregger added that Rust "is not a criminal" and he hopes the Soviet decision is not final.

Hans-Jochen Vogel, leader of the opposition Social Democratic Party, called the sentence "very harsh."

"Rust was most of all governed by adventurist intentions," Tikhomirov said in a half-hour statement delivered to a packed courtroom. "He was striving for popularity and self-advertisement."

Rust reddened slightly during the statement but showed no emotion otherwise. His mother, Monika, who testified on his behalf Wednesday, stiffened

Manila police arrest brother of coup leader

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Police arrested the brother of the man who led last week's coup attempt and seized arms Friday at a building said to be owned by opposition leader Juan Ponce Enrile.

In other developments Friday:

- President Corason Aquino-year-old-insurrection would be the Sigma Security and Protective stepped up following the mutiny led
- Guerrillas on Negros Island, 330 miles southeast of Manila, killed sugar baron Serafin Gatulao and two bodyguards. Communist rebel leaders had said attacks in their 18-expressed opposition to suspending civil rights or declaring martial law.

Police said they seized a dozen handguns and rifles, an M-203 grenade launcher, hand grenades, land mines and thousands of rounds of ammunition from the basement of

Col. Gregorio Honasan, who remains at large.

Defense Secretary Rafael Ileta suggested that some officials might be fired in the interest of unity, but

Kenya keeps Burundi leader under wraps

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Deposed Burundian leader Jean-Baptiste Bagaza was placed under tight wraps by his unwitting Kenyan hosts upon his arrival in Nairobi Friday, as the Kenyans tried to decide how long he should stay.

Kenyan sources say Bagaza hoped to go to Rwanda, Burundi's northern neighbor, en route home, but the government in Rwanda does not appear to want him.

Renegade troops led by army Maj. Pierre Buyoya announced Thursday they had seized control of Burundi, a former Belgian colony, and set up a ruling junta while Bagaza was attending a summit meeting of French-speaking nations in Quebec.

The new rulers closed the east-central African country's airport and borders and cut off all communications links. Radio Burundi broadcast a communique from the Burundi army supreme office declaring Buyoya the new leader.

There were no reports of damage or injuries in the coup, which could not be independently verified.

Bagaza left Canada and flew to Paris, where he boarded an Air France commercial flight for Nairobi. He arrived in the Kenyan capital about noon Friday and was taken to a VIP lounge at Jomo Kenyatta International Airport.

Korea labor unrest grows

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Police fired tear gas Friday to break up a street protest by 3,000 striking taxi drivers in the capital, and elsewhere clashed with workers occupying the nation's largest shipyard and a Daewoo car plant.

In Seoul, the cabbies, unhappy with a labor-management agreement reached Thursday, hurled rocks and welded wooden clubs in a battle with riot police. About 50 drivers were arrested.

About 12,000 taxi drivers in the capital remained on strike Friday despite the agreement, which gives them a 5.6 percent pay hike. The drivers are demanding they be given a standard monthly salary instead of the current daily payment that is based on the number of fares.

In the southern port of Ulsan, police fired more than 500 rounds of tear gas in a series of clashes with workers at the Hyundai Heavy Industries Co. shipyard.

TEST FOR VIOLENCE

Scientists experimenting on prisoners have come up with an odd finding: Convicts especially prone to violence, they say, have abnormally high levels of male hormone in their saliva. Some prison bosses are seriously considering a spit test for parole candidates.

Every fisherman ought to know it's against the law to use goldfish for bait.

There's also such a condition as fear of money; evidently, it's called "chromatophobia." Not nearly as common, that one, as the fear of no money, which has too many names to list.

SLOW GROWTH

Q: How fast do stalactites grow?
A: An inch a century typically.

Q: Does that girl whose real name is Wendy Hamburger still work for the Wendy's Hamburgers chain?
A: No, sir, she quit after three months when ordered to work an extra shift on a holiday. If she'd stayed one more month, she'd have lasted as long as the national average for fast-food workers. Four months. Annual turnover runs 300 percent.

MOTHER ICE

You know how various nationalists speak of their homelands through it were a parent? Mother Russia? The Fatherland. The Eskimos speak of the great polar cap that way — "Mother Ice."

Q: You said Walter Hunt invented the modern safety-pin, but you didn't say what his total earnings were for that bright idea?

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: After a slow start at getting your usual Saturday chores finished, you will have a great day for amusements. This is a good day to contact some friends you haven't seen lately.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Put aside unimportant chores and work on your personal wishes. Drive with great care to avoid a serious accident.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Stop worrying about a new project and handle personal problems. Get your marketing done early today.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Be more sure of yourself in business matters. A little trip to a new place can be tremendously profitable today.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Concentrate on handling important business matters, and don't be annoyed if an associate is delayed.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Postpone a dull job until this evening. Meet with partners today and accomplish a great deal. Drive with the utmost care.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Rather than seeking out pleasures today, direct your energies toward profitable business activities. Enjoy the home scene.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Meet with friends early and get into mutually pleasing recreations. Don't let anyone undermine your efforts.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Forget dull business tasks and concentrate on making your home more attractive and comfortable.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Accurate communication with others is extremely important today. Be understanding when it comes to family.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Don't get upset over a secret worry which you can do nothing about at this time. Listen to expert advice.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 18): Avoid a depressing person this morning. Seek out cheerful persons who will excite your lively mood.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20): You are inspired to do something unique which will be good for you and your family. Be pleasing to your mate.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY — he or she may be reared, to a degree, by an older person who might not have a clear understanding of children. Make sure that your progeny attends schools with modern teaching techniques. An exceptionally brilliant mind is indicated. Active sports are a must here.

Populist presidential nominee: Hansen

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Former Idaho Congressman George Hansen will be the Populist Party's nominee for president during its convention this weekend in St. Louis, but Hansen will not be there to make the acceptance speech.

Hansen, who is completing a federal prison sentence in Petersburg, Va., stemming from violations of financial-disclosure laws, also might not even accept the nomination.

He said in a recent interview he was not interested in running for the presidency on a third-party ticket and that he wanted to work back in the mainstream of the Republican Party.

John Scoresby, an aide to Hansen, has said the former seven-term congressman from the 2nd District has not ruled out another run for his old job.

Neither Scoresby, a party spokesman, nor a Hansen spokesman could be reached Friday for comment.

Hansen is in the final months of a sentence he started last year for violating federal personal-finance disclosure requirements.

The Populist Party also reportedly is considering Col. Oliver North as a possible vice-presidential candidate. The party's convention official nomination of Hansen is scheduled for Sunday.

The party, apparently, is not holding Hansen's code-of-ethics violations against him, according to a news release. It said many other members of Congress made similar mistakes, but Hansen was singled out for prosecution.

"Most believe this was done because of Mr. Hansen's principled defense of traditional values and individual liberties, rather than the prerogatives of uncontrolled big government," the release said.

"Unlike (President) Ronald Reagan, George Hansen believes that patriotism involves more than fancy speeches and symbolic gestures."

In an interview a few days ago, Hansen said it was unlikely he would accept. "I'm a Republican and I feel there're only two ways to get elected president, and that's through one of the two major parties," he said.

Hansen said several other third parties, such as the American Party, have approached him about running for president, but he has declined their support.

Payette forest fires now under control

By The Associated Press

For the first time in days, Idaho firefighters gained ground on Friday on nearly a dozen range and forest fires.

After battling dozens of lightning-caused fires from a Tuesday night lightning storm, officials of the Payette National Forest said Friday afternoon all were under control or contained. Exceptions, were one large fire and several smaller ones in the Frank Church River of No Return Wilderness area, which were being allowed to burn naturally.

"Things are looking really good on the Payette," said information officer Dave Olson, with all the lightning-caused fires contained or controlled.

Overall, 110 major fires were being controlled in Idaho by about 600 firefighters. Together, they have covered about 13,000 acres. The state's largest fire, the 36-day-old Deadwood Reservoir fire, 29 miles east of Cascade, remained at about 18,000 acres.

It is not being fought because of the estimated $2 million to $3 million cost of containing it.

Olson said the 600-acre Mann Creek fire on the edge of the wilderness also was being allowed to burn.

Stallings crowned

REXBURG (AP) — Sallianne Stallings, daughter of Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, has been named Miss Rexburg Upper Valley 1987.

But Miss Stallings, who won the annual pageant last weekend, said having a congressman for a father had nothing to do with winning the crown.

Miss Stallings came in second in the Miss Rexburg pageant last year, and in 1985 was first runnerup in the Miss Idaho National Guard contest.

Sho-Ban taking FMC back to court on hiring

FORT HALL (AP) — There's no settlement in sight in a hiring dispute between the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes and FMC Corp., and the two will be back in tribal court on Oct. 12.

Fort Hall Business Council Chairman Marvin Osborne said FMC has brushed aside attempts to settle the dispute over compliance with the tribal agreement requiring Indians to be given preference for jobs at company operations on the reservation if all other factors are equal.

The October hearing is on FMC's appeal of a July tribal court order barring future hiring for operations on the Fort Hall reservation without first offering the jobs to tribal members if they are qualified.

That ruling was overturned in federal court on a petition from FMC. But according to the tribes' law and order code, such disputes occurring on the reservation must go through the tribal court system first. Osborne said the tribes will take the case as far as necessary.

Osborne said he does not think FMC is taking the tribal court decision seriously, and FMC's Pocatello plant manager Harvey Herbert acknowledged that the company is ignoring the tribal court ruling.

Herbert said FMC has been trying to reach settlement with the tribes, and he pointed out that the hiring agreement expired Aug. 1 and no attempts have been made by the tribes to renegotiate it.

He said FMC feels it has a responsibility to employ tribal members but must also honor its contract with the Manufacturers Union.

"I don't understand how they can say we're not taking it seriously," Herbert said. "We've been in tribal court with them and will go again."

He said FMC filed a parallel suit in federal court to have the tribal court's injunction on hiring set aside because the injunction was hampering business.

"We were starting a new process and needed to hire some people," he said, contending the tribes want more than just preference in hiring. "They want preference in promotion, in training and in layoffs as well. That violates our union contract."

The business council claimed FMC violated the Tribal Employment Rights Opportunity agreement by not giving tribal members an opportunity to fill jobs opening up at FMC operations on the reservation.

Activist urges jury trials in civil cases

POCATELLO (AP) — Conservative activist Ron Rankin has joined the battle between an eastern Idaho businessman and Idaho First National Bank, threatening an initiative drive to require jury trials in all civil cases.

Rankin, traveling the state to build public support for his proposal, said he would rather the state Legislature revamp the law to mandate jury trials in civil suits.

"We'd rather not have to get the 37,800 signatures, but we're ready to do it," he said. "Who do you know that doesn't want the right to a jury trial?"

Rankin's campaign on behalf of the Kootenai County Property Owners Association was prompted by the continuing legal battle between David Steed and Associates Inc. of Idaho Falls and Idaho First.

The bank has started foreclosure proceedings on the company because of failure to repay a loan and Steed has sued the bank for breach of contract, conspiracy and fraud.

But the company's bid to win a jury trial on its suit was denied by a district court judge, who also slapped a gag order on the parties involved in the case.

The proposal being pushed by Rankin's organization would require juries to decide all cases, criminal or civil, that go to trial, and it would be retroactive to 1983, granting a jury trial to any litigant in a case that case that was denied one during that four-year period.

Rankin claimed the proposal already has the backing of the Idaho Rural Council, and he said he expected additional support from other statewide organizations that would assure his ability to secure the signatures needed to put the issue before voters if the Legislature fails to act.

Rankin claims his organization has been successful in 11 of the last 14 issues it took on.

Rice plans to give NFL one more try

By FLYNN McROBERTS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Though he was released by the New York Jets last week, former Bruin grid star Mike Rice said Thursday he plans on "sticking with it" in hopes of either landing a spot with another team this year or waiting until next season.

"I have no plans yet. I'm still kind of waiting around," said Rice, who is back in Twin Falls after the Jets dropped him from their roster last Thursday. "Possibly I could still get a tryout (with another team) before the season starts. My agent is looking into it."

An eighth-round draft pick for the Jets, Rice was trying to unseat New York veteran punter David Jennings, who outlasted free agent Tom O'Connor for the Jets' punting job.

Asked if he was satisfied with his preseason performance, Rice said, "I really wasn't. I kicked more than I ever had — six drills a day — and that took awhile to get used to." Rice, an all-Big Sky Conference pick at both punter and receiver,

Rice selected to Big Sky Conference silver anniversary all-star squad

BOISE — The Big Sky Conference has announced its silver anniversary football team, marking 25 years of league competition with recognition of its greatest players, among whom are Twin Falls' Mike Rice.

The team, consisting of 25 players on offense and 25 on defense, was selected in a vote of Big Sky athletic administrators and members of the media that cover the league.

Rice, a 1983 graduate of Twin Falls High School who went on to Spokane Falls (Wash.) Community College and the University of Montana, was named along with Idaho State's Case deBruin as one of the outstanding punters in the Big Sky's first quarter-century.

The offense was led by former University of Idaho fullback Ray McDonald, who was the lone unanimous selection on the entire ballot. He was joined in the backfield by former University of Nevada-Reno runningback Frank Hawkins, Boise State's Cedric Minter, Weber State's Lee White, Montana State's Don Hass and Idaho State's Merrill Hoge.

Quarterbacks selected for the team included Idaho's Ken Hobart and former Boise State signal caller Jim McMillan.

The offensive line included former Idaho center John Yarno, Montana's Brian Salonen and Steve Okoniewski, Montana State's Jon Borchardt and Larry Rubens, Nevada-Reno's Derek Kennard and Greg Rea, Weber State's Jim Schmieding and Boise State's Mark Villano.

The five wide receivers selected were Idaho State's Ed "The Flea" Bell, Boise State's Don Hunt, Idaho's Jerry Hendrix and Eric Varber, along with Northern Ari-

Though he hasn't heard anything from other squads, Rice said his agent is "in contact with quite a few teams."

"A lot of teams are having punting troubles right now," he said. "So if you're on their list, they might call you."

If he doesn't get another offer, Rice said he will wait until next season rather than trying for a spot in the Canadian Football League.

"I'm really not a CFL player ... their punters and kickers are mostly Canadians," he explained. "And their receivers are short and fast."

Referring to the Jets' decision to cut him, Rice said, "I kind of saw it coming — just from how I did in that second game."

In that contest, against Tampa Bay, Rice kicked "a couple of low ones where they got some pretty good returns."

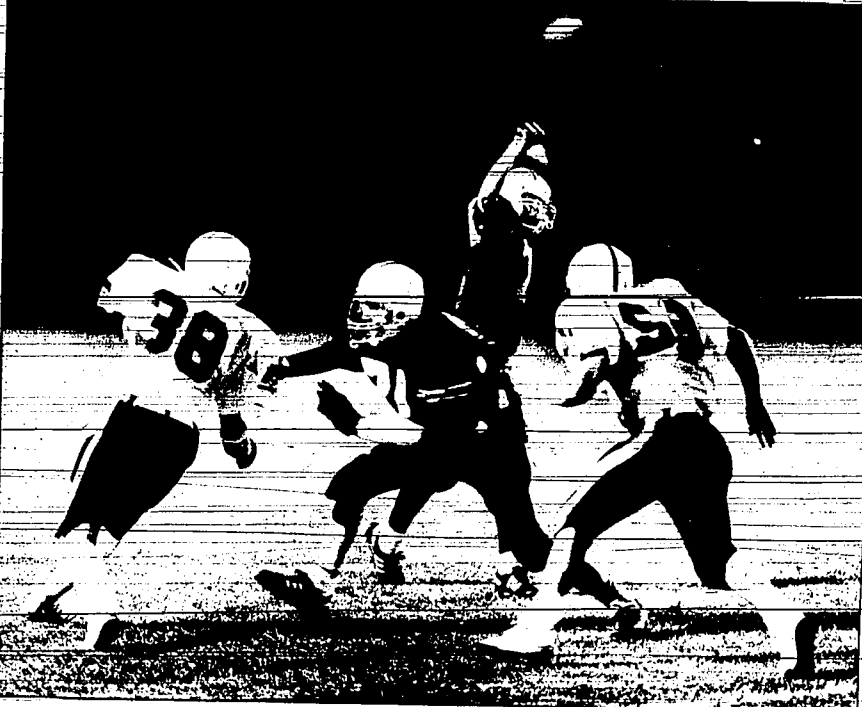

But he's not discouraged. Said Rice: "I plan on sticking with it. (At least) I don't have any family to support."

JEROME — When the Gooding Senators sit down to watch tape of their Friday night loss to Jerome, they might think their film man accidentally kept hitting the rewind button.

It was no accident: in an otherwise hard-fought defensive battle, the Senator defense — watched Tiger quarterback Lon Rutherford connect four times for four touchdowns with the same receiver, John Gourley.

And on three of those strikes, Gourley ran virtually the identical pattern — almost out down the left side of the field.

The result: a 27-0 nonconference Jerome victory.

For Gooding Coach Jeff Jeffries, the difference was simple. "We couldn't keep up with Gourley. We just didn't have that kind of speed," Jeffries said of the Tiger wide receiver who won the 100-meter dash at last spring's Class A-2 state track meet. "There's no substitute for speed."

In front of bleachers packed with both Gooding and Jerome fans, Gourley engaged each of the four passes that reached him and took all of them in for touchdowns, including a 48- and a 52-yard burst in the second half.

"The damaging duo of Rutherford and Gourley saved the Tigers from suffering the same embarrassment that they inflicted on Twin Falls last week with their 42-14 thumping of the Bruins. As an A-3 team playing an A-2 squad, Gooding had nothing to lose."

"I was pleased with how we did defensively, 98 percent of the game," Jeffries said. "Four plays cost us the ballgame."

Travelling Rutherford's four TD tosses to Gourley aside, the Senators plugged Jerome's running attack by holding fullback Jay Ostler to just 54 yards on 19 carries.

"They took Jay out of our offense," Jerome Coach Joe Mattie conceded. "But we took advantage of that; we used him as a decoy."

Perhaps Friday's performance will put some order back into the polls.

Powerful Grizzlies roll over MHS, 42-28

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

RUPERT — It was anything but easy for defending Class A-1, Division II champion Skyline Friday night as the Grizzlies were forced to hold off a fourth-quarter Minico charge for a fourth Gem State Conference football victory.

The victory gave the Grizzlies, ranked second in the latest Associated Press prep poll, an early-season advantage in the race for a playoff berth in the A-1 Division II playoffs.

Bruins shut out by Poky, 7-0, in Dome

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — The Pocatello defense knocked aside a fourth-down pass from the three-yard line to preserve a 7-0 Gem State Conference victory over the Twin Falls Bruins in the closing minute and 44 seconds Friday night.

The defeat, the second in two outings for Twin Falls, came after the only consistent offensive effort the Bruins were able to muster against the Indians: But the defeat wore heavily on Twin Falls Coach Jon Jund, who saw his team lose a succession of fumbles, a critical fourth-down gamble and a pass interference call — all of them to officials' decisions.

Two of the fumbles caused Jund to protest they were actually incomplete passes and the officials ruled a Pocatello fumble on the Indian 21 in the third quarter never happened.

Twin Falls tried a fourth-and-foot later in the third quarter and appeared to have made it easily only to have the ball marked for a loss. But the big call was a pass interference penalty that kept alive Pocatello's scoring drive in the closing minutes of the first half.

Jund said that the interference was not immediately obvious on the sideline and he noted, "We clearly had the first down on our fourth-down gamble. We were across the 20-yard line and they marked us behind it. The other call that annoyed me was when we got the interception and they gave us a face mask to take away."

"But we played 40 percent better than we did last week. I thought we played some great defensive football at times," Jund said. "We got killed at offensive tackle in the first half, but we made some changes there and things improved in the second half. But offensively we were totally inconsistent again and we will continue to be until we can generate some kind of ground attack."

The loss put the Bruins in a hole as far as gaining a spot in the Class A-1 Division II playoffs is concerned. To get to state, Twin Falls will have to defeat both Highland and Bonneville and hope the Indians lose to both of those teams. The Bruins had a lot of trouble in the first half as quarterback Joel Jund was two for 15 with an interception during that span and Twin Falls ended the half with 47 total yards. The offense sputtered at times in the second half, but showed marked improvement with 112 yards, most of those coming on a fourth quarter drive that carried from the Twin Falls 20 to Pocatello 17 before ending in an interception.

The Bruins forced a punt and then made their last big push. A 32-yard pass to Vince Brunkow was the big gain as the Bruins moved to the faithful four and two to the Indian 3. Jund tried a flat pass to Shane Newton, but a Pocatello defender arrived at the same time as the ball reached the goal line.

Pocatello won it with a 63-yard drive that covered eight plays and took advantage of two major penalties against the Bruins. The pass interference call gave Pocatello a first down at the 30 before the Bruin defense stiffened.

Indians beat Filer Wildcats big — 46-16

By BRAD BRELAND

BUHL — It lasted for three hours, but for Filer, Friday night's nonconference contest against Buhl must have seemed like an eternity.

Last time the Buhl Indians scored 40 points was in the 1980 season when they beat Gooding 52-6.

Friday, they scored 40 points in the first half.

The fifth-ranked Indians scored 20 points in the first quarter and tacked on another 20 in the second, as Buhl retired Filer 46-16.

The Skip Hall Era will get under way at Bronco Stadium tonight

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

The Big Sky Conference kicks off its 25th season this weekend, with six teams in action, mostly at home against smaller schools.

The first conference game doesn't come until next week, when new league member Eastern Washington plays preseason favorite Nevada-Reno.

Today, Delaware State is at Boise State, Eastern Washington hosts Augustana of South Dakota, Mankato State is at Idaho and Weber State hosts Western State. Montana State travels to California for its opener with Long Beach State and Northern Arizona is at Northern Colorado.

The Boise State-Delaware State game is scheduled for 7 p.m., while the Idaho-Mankato contest will start at 8 p.m. MDT. KLIK-AM in Twin Falls will broadcast the BSU game, while KEZJ-FM in Boise and KBAR-AM in Burley will broadcast the Idaho game.

The last time Idaho played Division II Mankato State, the Vandals romped to an easy 46-7 victory. This time around, Coach Keith Gilbertson is trying to warn his team, 8-4 last season, that Mankato is improved.

Their program, like their players, has matured a lot," he said. "They're bigger and they're stronger and they're faster. They know more about what they are trying to do and are better at it. Their program has come a long way in two years."

Gilbertson will unveil a new quarterback, John Friesz of Sachonish, Wash. Mankato plans to start Greg von der Lippe, who played last season as a wide receiver.

Also making his debut will be new Boise State coach Skip Hall. He succeeded Lyle Stetsch after Boise State was 5-6 last season, its first losing football year as a four-year school.

It's Hall's first head coaching assignment after years as an assistant under Don James at University of Washington.

He said after eight months of planning and practice, he will be happy to start the season.

"I think our players are ready to tackle and block someone besides another Bronco," he said. "A key in the first game will be trying to get some questions answered about the team."

Delaware State was ranked 10th in the first Division I-AA football poll.

Starting at quarterback for the Broncos will be Vince Alcalde, a senior who played sparingly last season. But starting offensive tackle, Kim Hilliard, a 6-5, 265-pound junior, has a bad back and was listed as questionable for the opener.

Injuries also have taken their toll at Weber State, which like Boise State is coming off a disappointing season last year.

Coach Mike Price said injuries have struck particularly hard at the Weber cornerbacks. Senior free safety Joe Hargrove was critically injured in an auto accident before fall drills started. Strong safety Darren Benbow and junior rover David Mossman are sidelined with knee injuries.

"I think we'll be okay against Western State because they run the wishbone and don't throw very much," said Price. But he said he will be more concerned next week when the Wildcats travel to Long Beach State.

"It will be interesting to see how we do against the wishbone because we haven't played the wishbone in four or five years," he said.

Price also will introduce a highly recruited junior college transfer for running back, Fine Unga, and he will be joined by Sean Sanders.

Referring to the Jets' decision to cut him, Rice said, "I kind of saw it coming — just from how I did in that second game."

In that contest, against Tampa Bay, Rice kicked "a couple of low ones where they got some pretty good returns."

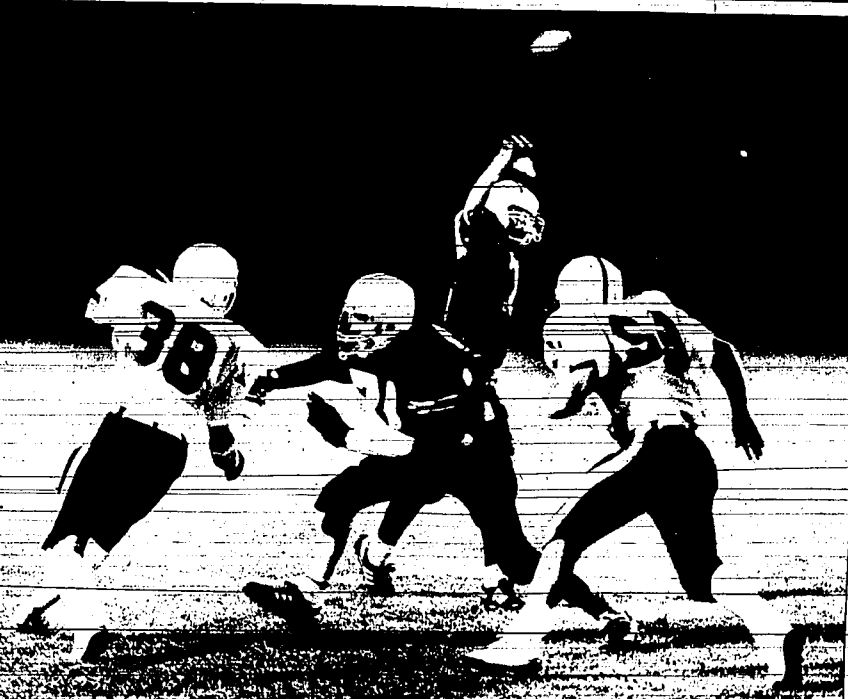

But he's not discouraged. Said Rice: "I plan on sticking with it ... (since) I don't have any family to support."

Jerome's Lon Ruhter launches a pass as Gooding's B.J. Adamson (38) and Jay Bevercombe (59) are kept safely away

Jerome shuts down Solons' offense, 27-0

JEROME — When the Gooding Senators sat down to watch footage of their Friday night loss to Jerome, they might think their film man accidentally kept hitting the rewind button.

It was no accident: in an otherwise hard-fought defensive battle, the Senator defense watched Tiger quarterback Lon Ruhter connect four times for four touchdowns, with the same receiver, John Gourley.

And on three of those strikes, Gourley ran virtually the identical pattern — slant-outs down the left side of the field.

The result: a 27-0 nonconference Jerome victory.

For Gooding Coach Jeff Jeffries, the difference was simple. "It couldn't keep up with Gooding. We just don't have that kind of speed," Jeffries said of the Tiger wide receiver who won the 100-meter dash at last spring's Class A-2 state track meet. "There's no substitute for speed."

In front of bleachers packed with both Gooding and Jerome fans, Gourley snaggged each of the four passes that reached him and took all of them in for touchdowns, including a 48- and a 52-yarder both in the second half.

The damaging duo of Ruhter and Gourley saved the Tigers from suffering the same embarrassment they inflicted on Twin Falls last week with their 42-14 thumping of the Bruins. As an A-3 team playing an A-2 squad, Gooding had nothing to lose.

"I was pleased with how we did defensively. 96 percent of the game," Jeffries said. "Four plays cost us the ballgame."

Translation: Ruhter's four TD tosses to Gourley aside, the Senators plugged Jerome's running attack by holding fullback Jay Oatler to just 54 yards on 19 carries.

"They took Joy out of our offense," Jerome Coach Joe Mattie conceded. "But we took advantage of that; we used him as a decoy."

"Perhaps Friday's performance will put some order back into the polls.

Powerful Grizzlies roll over MHS, 42-28

RUPERT — It was anything but easy for defending Class A-1 Division II champion Skyline Friday night as the Grizzlies were forced to hold off a fourth-quarter Minico charge for a 42-28 Gem State Conference football victory.

The victory gave the Grizzlies ranked second in the latest Associated Press prep poll, an early-season advantage in the race for a playoff berth in the A-1 Division II playoffs.

Minico, which trailed 22-0 early in the game, rallied to take a 28-28 lead with 1:30 left.

Bruins shut out by Poky, 7-0, in Dome

POCATELLO — The Pocatello defense knocked aside a fourth-down pass from the three-yard line to preserve a 7-0 Gem State Conference victory over the Twin Falls Bruins in the closing minute and defense penalty that kept alive 44 seconds Friday night.

The defeat, the second in two outings for Twin Falls, came after the only consistent offensive effort the Bruins were able to muster against the Indians. But the defense held heavily on Twin Falls. Coach Jon Jund, who saw his team lose a succession of fumbles, a critical fourth-down gamble and a pass interference call — all of them to officials' decisions.

"Two of the fumbles caused Jund to protest they were actually in the complete passes and the officials ruled a Pocatello fumble on the defensive football at times," Jund said. "We got killed at offensive tackle in the first half, but we made some changes there and things improved in the second half. But offensively we were totally inconsistent again and we will continue to be until we can generate some kind of ground attack."

The loss put the Bruins in a hole as gaining a spot in the Class A-1 Division I playoffs is concerned. To get to state, Twin Falls will have to defeat both Highland and Bonneville and hope the Indians lose to both of those teams.

The Bruins had a lot of trouble in the first half as quarterback Joel Jund was two for 16 with an interception during that span and Jund spurted at times in the second half.

"We're bigger and they're stronger and they're faster. They know more about what they are trying to do and are better at it. Their program has come a long way in two years."

Gilbertson will unveil a new quarterback, John Friesz, of Shohomish, Wash. Mankato plans to start Greg von der Lippe, who played last season as a wide receiver.

Also making his debut will be new Boise State Coach Skip Hall. He succeeded Lyle Stetehich after Boise State was 5-6 last season; its first losing football year as a four-year school.

It's Hall's first head coaching assignment after years as an assistant under Don James at University of Washington.

He said after eight months of planning and practice, he will be happy to start the season.

"I think our players are ready to tackle and block someone besides another Bronco," he said. "A key in the first game will be trying to get some questions answered about the team."

Delaware State was ranked 10th in the first Division I-AA football poll.

Starting at quarterback for the Broncos will be Vince Alcalá, a senior who played sparingly last season. But starting offensive tackle Kim Hilliard, a 6-5, 260-pound junior, has a bad back and was listed as questionable for the opener.

Injuries also have taken their toll at Weber State, which like Boise State is coming off a disappointing season last year.

Coach Mike Price said injuries have struck particularly hard at Weber cornerbacks. Senior free safety Joe Hargrove was critically injured in an auto accident before fall drills started. Strong safety Dar-

Buhl — It lasted for three hours, but for Filer, Friday night's nonconference contest against Buhl must have seemed like an eternity.

Last time the Buhl Indians scored 40 points was in the 1980 season when they beat Gooding 52-6. Friday they scored 40 points in the first half.

The 10th ranked Indians scored 20 points in the first quarter and locked on another 20 in the second, as Buhl routed Filer 46-16.

The Big Sky Conference kicks off its 26th season this weekend, with six teams in action; mostly at home against smaller schools.

The first conference game doesn't come until next week, when new league member Eastern Washington plays preseason favorite Nevada-Reno.

Today, Delaware State is at Boise State; Eastern Washington hosts Augustana of South Dakota, Mankato State is at Idaho and Weber State hosts Western State. Montana State travels to California for its opener with Long Beach State and Northern Arizona is at Northern Colorado.

The Boise State-Delaware State game is scheduled for 7 p.m., while the Idaho-Mankato contest will start at 8 p.m. MDT. KILX-AM in Twin Falls will broadcast the BSU game, while KEZJ-FM in Boise and KBAR-AM in Burley will broadcast the Idaho game.

The last time Idaho played Division II Mankato State, the Vandals romped to an easy 46-7 victory. This time around, Coach Keith Gilbertson is trying to warn his team, 8-4 last season, that Mankato is improved.

Their program, like their players, has matured a lot," he said. "They're bigger and they're stronger and they're faster. They know more about what they are trying to do and are better at it. Their program has come a long way in two years."

Coach Mike Price said injuries have struck particularly hard at Weber cornerbacks. Senior free safety Joe Hargrove was critically injured in an auto accident before fall drills started. Strong safety Darren Benbow and junior rover David Moesman are sidelined with knee injuries.

"I think we'll be okay against Western State because they run the wishbone and don't throw very much," said Price. But he said he will be more concerned next week when the Wildcats travel to Long Beach State.

"It will be interesting to see how we do against the wishbone because we haven't played the wishbone in four or five years," he said.

Weber also will introduce a highly recruited junior college transfer running back, Fine Angus, and he will be joined by Sean Sanders.

Hannah, Leavitt lead Bruins, Jerome to wins

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls senior Jeany Hannah kicked off her final cross country season Friday by romping to victory in the annual College of Southern Idaho high school cross country invitational meet.

Hannah, clocked in 2 minutes and 26 seconds — some 90 seconds better than her previous time on this course — also handled the early challenge of Sugar-Salem's Kristin Galbraith. It was a meeting of state champions from last year's state finals and Hannah won by about 150 yards over the Sugar-Salem sophomore.

Hannah led Twin Falls to the girls' team title with 18 points, followed by Jerome at 37 and Minico with 65. There were the only complete teams competing.

In the boys' division, Jerome's freshman Glenn Leavitt, who also played football against Gooding Friday evening, led from start to finish and was second all the way by junior teammate Stan Les.

The Tigers had six men in the top nine to win rather handsily although Twin Falls coach Jerry Kleinkopf expressed some optimism with his conquerors — getting third from John Covanor and 10 and 11 from Steve Rutherford and Kelly Williams on.

"On the basis of what we've seen in practice, we should have two men — both out with injuries today — who should have been in the top 10 today," he said.

Twin Falls' girls had five of the first eight places with Galbraith not counting in team final standings.

Hannah's victory came after some mid-course battling with Galbraith. Hannah led for perhaps the first mile with Galbraith surging into the lead in the middle mile.

"She sped up," Hannah explained of the lead change. "I thought at first I'd just stay up with her and then — over there, I decided I gotta do it and I took off."

Kleinkopf said Hannah experimented a little with "surging" and that seemed to break up the race for her a little.

"It's something we learned about at a clinic this summer," Kleinkopf said. "It actually is simply running an erratic race. It has to do with reaching oxygen debt levels."

Evert gets 1,200 career victory at the U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Evert's record collection got larger on Friday.

Evert became the first woman to win 1,200 matches with a 6-0, 6-1 victory over Brazilian Niagra Dias in the second round at the U.S. Open tennis championships.

Martina Navratilova is second with 1,057 victories.

"I didn't realize that was a record until I heard it from the guys," Evert told reporters. "I am always surprised when I hear the statistics."

"It was Evert's 90th Open singles victory, more than any man or woman."

"I've set a lot of records which I know will be broken," Evert, an Open semifinalist every year since 1971, said. "Martina has already broken some — but I'd like to hold onto a few of them. It would be nice to have some after I retire."

A soft-spoken Indian and a little-known Australian also made news at the Open on Friday.

Unseeded Ramesh Krishnan used his crafty touch to beat No. 10 Joakim Nyström, while qualifier Mark Woodforde won three tiebreakers to eliminate No. 12 Tim Mayotte.

The 26-year-old Krishnan kept Nyström off balance with a mix of off-speed groundstrokes, angled volleys and backhand passing shots in a 6-4, 7-6, 6-2 victory.

"The average guy seems to respond to big booming serves and smashes," said Krishnan, whose father, Ramanathan, was a semifinalist at Wimbledon in 1960 and 1961. "But you have to realize there are other ways of getting your message across."

Woodforde, who won three qualifying matches to get in to the main draw, stunned Mayotte 7-6, 7-6, 3-6, 2-6, 7-6 on an outside court at the National Tennis Center. The tiebreaker scores were 7-2, 7-5 and 7-5, respectively.

"I'm playing fairly tight tennis in tiebreakers," said Woodforde, who reached the third round of a Grand Prix tournament for the first time this year. "In the first set, as the games went by, I knew if I could get to the tiebreaker I'd have the advantage because I won the first two."

Also advancing to the third round were No. 5 Miloslav Mezir and No. 14 Emilio Sanchez.

In women's play, No. 5 Pam Shriver, No. 10 Manuela Maleeva, No. 11 Lori McNeil and No. 13 Sylvia Hanika won second-round matches in straight sets.

No. 16 Wendy Turnbull was upset by Anna Novotna of Czechoslovakia.

In night matches, No. 2 Stefan Edberg of Sweden beat Dan Goldie of McLean, Va., 6-7 (7-4), 6-4, 6-2; 6-4, and No. 3 Mats Wilander of Sweden defeated countryman Johan Carlsson 6-2, 6-3, 6-1.

In a late match in the women's draw, No. 7 Zina Garrison beat Terry Phelps 7-6 (7-2), 6-3.

Krishnan had split two previous matches with Nyström, losing in the second round of the 1984 Open and winning a third round match at Wimbledon in 1986.

Utahns top hard-Fought Idaho Open

KETCHUM — The granddaddy of Idaho tennis tournaments has a bigger future this year.

The Idaho Open began its preliminary rounds Friday morning trying to eliminate more than 500 players by Monday night. That's a record for this or any other tennis tournament ever played in Idaho.

There is competition in 34 different singles and doubles events, but the spotlight is on the hard-fought men's and women's singles, where defending champions Rob and Susie Fought of Ogden, Utah, are the top seeds.

The Foughts took this tournament by storm last year. Rob, a former singles player at Brigham Young University, was seeded third a year ago and best top-seeded Mark Scribner of Hayden in the finals.

Sue Fought worked her way through two seeded players and defeated then-Borah High School senior Tracy Binder for the women's championship.

Last year, Scribner was the only Idahoan to make it as far as the men's open semifinals. This year the Foughts must fight a mostly Idaho crowd. Scribner, the head pro at Elkhorn and Woodside, is seeded second, followed by Warm Springs pro Chris Langdon and Andy Nords of Salt Lake City. Boise's Nacho Larracochea is the fourth seeded, followed by Rick Matheson of Caldwell and Tim Orie of Boise.

On the women's side, Warm Springs assistant pro Tracy Carpenter is seeded second behind Susie Fought, followed by Idaho Open champ Carrie Osborne of Boise. Jackie Scribner of Ketchum and Tracy Binder, an Idaho state high school champion.

Langdon and Mark Scribner, the defending men's open doubles champions, are the top seeds in their division this year. Osborne and Anna Gauger of Boise are seeded first in women's open singles this year in the absence of the defending champions, Mary Ann Robbins of Twin Falls and Bobbi Kirschmann of Boise. Langdon and Carpenter are seeded first in open mixed doubles.

The men's and women's open singles finals are scheduled for 10:30 a.m. Monday at Warm Springs, with the semifinals scheduled for noon and 9:30 a.m. Sunday, respectively. The men's open doubles final will be played at 3:30 p.m. Monday, preceded by the women's open doubles final and the mixed open doubles final at 1:30.

Wide-open field eyes M.V. Am title

TWIN FALLS — A new champion will be crowned when the Magic Valley Amateur Golf Tournament has its annual renewal at Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course this weekend.

Steve Meyerhoeffer, who won the title last year, is not available to defend because he has turned professional. However, Stat Ballard, Twin Falls, who won the event two years ago is returning along with a few other former champions.

The tournament field of 228 players was filled more than 10 days ago, reports Host Professional Don Hamblin. He noted a waiting list was started, but very few cancellations have been received.

"The waiting list is something over 30 and we hate to leave people out — but if we would add that many it would throw the whole flow of the tournament off," Hamblin said. "It filled so quickly this year that some golfers who had played 10, 15, 20 years in a row weren't able to get in. I suppose that means it will be even earlier next year as people start remembering."

Despite the big turnout, the smallest flight is the championship, which has drawn just 24 players and most of them from Magic Valley. A couple of players from Utah and Nevada will compete for the title.

But the better-known names remain the same with Steve Ballard and Burley contributing the majority. Burley's contingent is headed by former champion Glenn Blakeley along with Terry Spickman, Mike Ceriello, and Ken Huizinga. Two newcomers from Mini-Cassia land will be Brad Church of Burley and Denny Strampson of Paul.

The Twin Falls team is headed by Ballard along with local favorites such as Perry Hanchev, Dave Driscoll, Jim and Kevin Packard, Jim Purves, Doyle Dugger and Dave Rasmussen.

The tournament will offer its usual satellite competitions and social hours.

Saturday's opening round will be followed by a hamburger fry and social hour for the field. The first round also will establish the competitors for the 10-man elimination derby for each flight. The third, fourth and sixth flights will have their derbies Saturday afternoon.

The sixth flight, in fact, will have the qualifying in-gross and the championship, first, second and fifth flight derbies are scheduled for Sunday.

Joyner-Kersey wins long jump gold; Thompson dethroned in decathlon

ROME (AP) — Jackie Joyner-Kersey of the United States won the women's long jump for her second gold medal of the meet and Ingrid Kristiansen of Norway ran away with the women's 10,000 meters at the World Track and Field Championships today.

On a stormy day at Olympic Stadium, the championships also saw Daley Thompson's decade-old reign as the unofficial "World's Greatest Athlete" come to an end.

That Thompson had completed a marathon and not won.

Sigfried Wentz of West Germany was second at 8,461, with Pavel Tarnovsky third at 8,376.

At the end of the two heats of the 1,800 meters, the final event in which Thompson finished next-to-last in his half, the three medalists went up to the Briton and shook his hand. Then all four men, winners past and present, clasped hands and saluted the cheering crowd.

People are used to seeing me perform at my best," Thompson said in an interview with the BBC, monitored in London. "This was one of those rare times when I didn't and the consequences were that I finished where I did ..."

"Now I know what it's like to lose and it will never happen again."

Jürgen Schult of East Germany won the men's decathlon with a throw of 226 feet, 6 inches, with 40-year-old John Powell of the United

Soviet Union second at 23-5/8 and Heike Drechsler of East Germany third at 23-4/8.

"My body is hurting," said Joyner-Kersey, who won the heptathlon gold medal Tuesday. "It was tough jumping" in the swirling winds.

Drechsler injured her left knee on her fourth jump and passed on her two tries. She walked over to Joyner-Kersey, with whom she shares the world record of 24-5/8 and shook hands.

States taking second at 217-3. Pan American Games champion Luis Delsa of Cuba was third at 216-7.

Powell's silver medal was surprise. He had not had a throw in the best 20 of a year coming into the championships.

The first gold medal of the day went to Bulgaria's Gina Zagrecheva, winning the women's 100-meter hurdles in 12.34 seconds.

Joyner-Kersey won the long jump at 24-1/4, with Elena Belevskaya of the Soviet Union second at 23-5/8 and Heike Drechsler of East Germany third at 23-4/8.

AL: Twins open up 3-game West lead

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - Billy Beane, in his first major-league at-bat of the season, hit a two-out single with the bases loaded in the 12th inning Friday night that lifted the Minnesota Twins over the Milwaukee Brewers 2-1.

Beane, recalled from Class AAA Portland on Sept. 27, hit the first pitch from Dan Plesac over the outstretched glove of shortstop Dale Sveum.

Gary Gaetti was hit by a pitch from Plesac, 5-6, leading off the 12th. Pinch-hitter Tom Nieto singled and the Twins led 2-1.

Brewer's first baseman Greg Brock dropped a throw from second baseman Paul Molitor on Tom Brundum's ground ball.

Plesac struck out Steve Lombardozzi and got Tim Lander on a pop up before Beane's single.

Juan Berenguer, 6-0, pitched four innings for the Twins, which gave Minnesota a three-game lead over Oakland in the American League West.

Twins starter Frank Viola took a six-hitter and led into the ninth but left after Rob Deer's leadoff double. Berenguer got one out before

Fed, major banks push up key rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve, flexing its inflation-fighting powers under new Chairman Alan Greenspan, raised its discount rate on Friday for the first time in three years.

The action prompted major U.S. banks to boost their prime lending rates.

The Fed increased its discount rate, the interest it charges on loans to U.S. financial institutions, from 5.5 percent to 6 percent, the first time this key lending rate has been increased since April 1984.

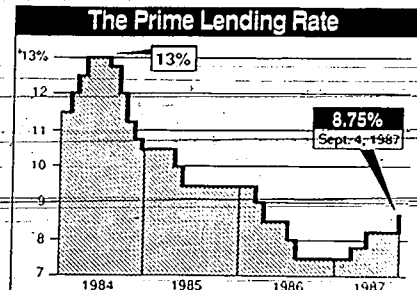

Major banks immediately followed the Fed's move by raising their prime lending rates by one-half percentage point as well as 0.75 percent, the highest level for the prime rate since March 1986.

These interest rate increases followed three weeks of turmoil in financial markets as investor worries over inflation spurred by the falling U.S. dollar had sent a variety of interest rates to levels not seen since early 1986.

Analysts predicted that consumer interest rates on everything from credit card purchases to home mortgages will be headed higher now.

Later Friday, the Veterans Administration announced that it was raising its maximum interest rate for federally backed VA mortgages one-half percentage point to 10.5 percent, effective on Tuesday.

The Fed action on the discount rate had not been unexpected although there was some surprise that the increase came less than one month after Greenspan succeeded Paul Volcker. Many economists had been predicting that Greenspan would take more time to learn his new job before making any dramatic change in Fed policies.

Greenspan, a respected conservative economist who had been chairman of President Ford's Council of Economic Advisors, won easy Senate confirmation although some questioned whether he would move as quickly as Volcker to impose a tight-money policy if it appeared that inflationary pressures were growing. During the eight years as Fed chief, Volcker was praised for doubling inflation.

This shows Greenspan is willing to do what it takes to fight inflation and he was getting a bum rap from people who said he would be unwilling to slow the economy in an election year, said Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm.

The Reagan administration, which at times in the past had criticized Volcker's tight-money policies, voiced support for the discount rate increase, saying it would help keep alive the recovery, already the longest peacetime expansion.

The administration concurs with the action of the Federal Reserve Board in raising the discount rate in order to maintain steady economic growth with low inflation, a presidential spokesman, Martin Fitzwater said in Santa Barbara, Calif.

should keep consumer prices from rising higher than the administration's latest forecast for this year, an increase of 4.8 percent. This gain is still well ahead of the 25-year low of 1.1 percent for last year.

The Fed announced its decision shortly after the government reported that unemployment held steady at an eight-year low of 6 percent in August as the number of working Americans swelled by 354,000 last month.

Some economists saw a direct link between release of the unemployment report and the Fed's announcement, saying the central bank was showing that it was prepared to cool down economic growth to make sure that a tight job market and wage pressures don't start pushing inflation higher.

Other analysts said that an even greater factor in the Fed decision was a renewed slump in the value of the dollar over the past three weeks. Higher interest rates in this country tend to bolster the dollar because they make dollar-denominated investments more popular with foreigners.

An increase in the discount rate, which is the rate the Fed charges to make loans to financial institutions, is the most dramatic move the central bank can make to signal its intentions to push rates higher. The last increase in the discount rate occurred on April 6, 1984, when the rate was increased from 5.5 percent to 9 percent.

Stocks continue late summer slide

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market suffered another sharp setback Friday, continuing its late-summer slide in the face of new increases in interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial fell 38.11 to 2,561.38, bringing its loss for the week to 92 points.

That surpassed the previous week's 70.15 decline as the biggest weekly drop of the year.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange slowed to 129.07 million shares from 165.20 million Thursday, with many market participants getting a head start on the long Labor Day weekend.

But many investors still seemed to be unsettled by the latest sequence of events, and leery of carrying large stock positions into the weekend.

In addition, rates jumped Friday in the short-term money market, which had been relatively steady while long-term bond rates were moving up in recent days. Yields on 3-month to one-year Treasury bills increased by 15 to 30 basis points, or hundreds of a percentage point.

Bank stocks were mostly lower. Citicorp dropped 1/4 to 60 1/4; Chase Manhattan 1/4 to 39 1/4; Chemical New York 1/4 to 38 1/4, and J.P. Morgan 1/4 to 46 1/4.

Some individual issues bucked the downward takeover news speculation.

G. Heileman Brewing led the active list, up 8 1/4 to 42 1/4. Bond Corp Holdings Ltd. of Australia made a $38-a-share bid for the company. Rexham gained 4 1/4 to 49 1/4. On Thursday a group led by investor Asher Edelman said it had a 6.9 percent stake in the company and might seek to gain control of it.

Elsewhere, Atlas Corp jumped 7 1/4 to 39 1/4. The company said it expects to earn about $2 a share in the current fiscal year following a restructuring program to concentrate on its gold producing business.

Golden Nugget, which plans to buy back as many as 10 million of its shares for $13.25 apiece, rose 1/4 to 13 1/4.

Fitzwater said the Fed action to 13 in active trading.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 2 to 1 on the NYSE, with 501 up, 1,075 down and 407 unchanged. The exchange's composite index lost 1.76 to 177.77.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges, totaled 153.89 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrial stocks fell 4.46 to 370.14, and S&P's 600-stock composite index was down 3.95 to 412.92.

The NASDAQ composite index, the over-the-counter market, dropped 1.88 to 446.48. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 354.42, down 1.88.

Since that time, the rate has been cut seven successive times, with the last reduction occurring a year ago on Aug. 20, 1986 when it dropped from 9 percent to 5.5 percent.

There had been speculation that the Fed would boost the discount rate last spring because of an even sharper plunge in the value of the dollar. However, Volcker and other Fed policy-makers decided to announce a slight "smoothing" of credit which succeeded in stabilizing the dollar's value until three weeks ago, when a surprise widening of the U.S. foreign-trade deficit for June put renewed downward pressure on the dollar.

Major banks did boost their prime lending rate twice in the spring in response to the turmoil in financial markets.

Friday's increase in the prime rate was led by two large New York banks, Chase Manhattan and Chemical Bank, but many banks in other cities soon followed suit.
