Brokers agree to partial WPPSS settlement

The Associated Press

SEATTLE — Wall Street brokers that sold $2.25 billion in bonds to build two nuclear power plants that were eventually abandoned, prompting the biggest municipal bond default in history, have agreed to settle a lawsuit for $92 million.

The settlement by underwriters, if it is approved in federal court, is only partial. Other remaining defendants include the Washington Public Power Supply System and 88 Northwest utilities that signed on to build the plants, the Bonneville Power Administration, various officials, planners and construction firms.

"It's a good settlement with the underwriters, based on their level of culpability in the case," Paul Bernstein of New York, a lead attorney for the plaintiffs, said Friday. "I want to get quite a bit more from the other defendants."

However, a WPPSS bondholder disagreed.

"I think that's a darn poor settlement, to let them off the hook," said Bill Nugent of Port Angeles, an original founder of the National 4-5 Bondholders Committee. "After all, they got two and a quarter billion of our dollars."

Junius Hoffman, a court-appointed settlement master, announced the settlement late Thursday. The settlement will involve four major Wall Street brokerage firms and as many as 200 smaller underwriting firms.

Herbert Wachtel, lead attorney for the underwriters, said Friday the underwriters did not admit to any guilt in the settlement, but that legal costs were mounting, especially with the prospects settlement could be years away.

"Under all these circumstances, it seemed prudent and reasonable to settle," he said.

Wachtel said the agreement would not threaten the economic well-being of any of the firms. The largest "payoff" by any "one" firm would amount to no more than a few million dollars, said spokesman for several large brokerage houses.

Wachtel said it will be weeks or months before U.S. District Judge William Browning of Tucson, Ariz., reaches a decision on the proposed settlement. Meanwhile, Browning, who has had jurisdiction of the case for 2½ years, has set a trial date for Sept. 1, 1988.

The lawsuit stemmed from the biggest default in the history of the municipal bond market. With "interest" the $2.25 billion in bonds amounts to $7 billion.

The money was used to finance construction of WPPSS nuclear plants No. 4 at the Hanford nuclear reservation in Eastern Washington, and No. 5 at Satsop, west of Olympia. Construction was terminated by 1983, when each of the plants was less than 25 percent complete, and there was no foreseeable need for the power they would produce.

Plaintiffs alleged fraud, negligence, misfeasance and interference with contract rights.

Four major brokerage firms agreeing to the settlement are Merrill Lynch & Co., Salomon Brothers,

Pope carries call for unity across land

The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Pope John Paul II told Jewish leaders Friday that future generations must learn about the Holocaust so that it happens "never again," then reached out to fellow Christians in a joint prayer for unity.

After a day of reaching out to other faiths first in Miami and then in Columbia, S.C., the pope arrived late Friday in this heavily Catholic city, where he was welcomed at the airport by a jazz band playing "When the Saints Go Marching In."

"In a strongly worded speech in South Carolina, the pontiff blamed the breakdown of families on "a false notion of individual freedom."

On the run

College of Southern Idaho cross-country coach Rick Neill watches his team during drills at a Thursday practice. Today the team is in Berkeley for its first fall meet, against Idaho State University and Ricks College. The team is composed of three women and 13 men.

"America: you cannot insist on the right to choose without also insisting on the duty to choose well," the pontiff told an ecumenical prayer service. "Already there is much breakdown and pain in your own society because fundamental values, essential to the well-being of individuals, families and the entire nation, are being emptied of their real content."

After the service, the pope headed for New Orleans, the third of nine cities he is visiting on his 10-day U.S. tour. Before leaving the Columbia airport, he met briefly with former President Jimmy Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, for a private chat.

Once on the ground in New Orleans, where he was given a rousing welcome by the Olympic Brass Band, the pope quickly got into a limousine that took him to the residence of Archbishop Philip M. Hannan to spend the night.

GAO says arms control lax

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The State Department should improve its procedures for licensing the sale of weapons and munitions so that none of the material goes to terrorists or unfriendly nations, the General Accounting Office said Friday.

The Office of Munitions Control can take a number of steps to do a better job of licensing, including checking with other government agencies about potentially damaging information, according to a report by the congressional watchdog agency.

The report was prepared at the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, which has been investigating procedures for selling weapons overseas.

That entire process has come under renewed scrutiny in the wake of the Iran-Contra affair, in which weapons were secretly sold to Iran and secretly shipped to the anti-Nicaraguan guerrillas.

The State Department licenses sales made privately by U.S. firms, while the Defense Department oversees deals by the U.S. government, most of which are done as part of either the Foreign Military Sales Program or the Military Assistance Program.

The GAO study found that OMC procedures are so lax that "export license applications data and information were not routinely checked for accuracy or veracity."

The GAO study found that the OMC workload has increased sharply in the past decade, from $3.3 billion in fiscal 1977 to $14.9 billion in fiscal 1986. During that time, the staff has remained about the same, 30 people. The OMC office has sought more staff, but budget restrictions have blocked those plans.

During the past fiscal year, the GAO said, the OMC approved about 90 percent of the applications, but 30 percent of the approvals came within a month.

"In some instances," the GAO noted, the OMC issued 32½ licenses worth $16 million to an unidentified company which had been denied export privileges by the Commerce Department.

The GAO recommended that the OMC should check more closely with other government agencies, should seek more help from U.S. embassies overseas, and should automate its review process.

Kennedy rips Bork's record

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Debate over Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork grew more strident Friday as Sen. Edward M. Kennedy delivered a stinging speech attacking the judge's record and President Reagan called such criticism "irrational and totally unjustified."

With Senate Judiciary Committee set to begin confirmation hearings Tuesday, Kennedy said Bork "must not become the point man" in Reagan's plan "for an ideological coup on the Supreme Court."

The Democratic senator from Massachusetts told a Georgetown University Law Center audience the nomination was "a concerted plot to wrench the court from its moorings," and concluded — Bork must be stopped by the Senate.

Reagan, meantime, used his signing ceremony for a proclamation of National Hispanic Heritage Week to call Bork a champion of individual rights.

"The highly charged rhetoric that is coming from the ranks of those opposing Judge Bork is irrational and totally unjustified," he said.

Reagan said the U.S. Court of Appeals judge "has a superior intellect, high moral character and is a champion of individual freedom, and any suggestion to the contrary is pure politics, if politics can ever be pure."

In other developments:

- A poll sponsored by civil rights organizations and a public employee union concluded that respondents viewed Bork's record, they expressed "61 percent to 16 percent disapproval."
- The polling firm said resistance to Bork centered on his positions on civil rights; privacy and individual freedom, and big business vs. the individual.

- Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, ranking Republican on the Judiciary Committee, said retired Chief Justice Warren Burger will testify for the nominee at the hearings.
- It is unusual for a retired justice to testify at confirmation sessions. Thurmond said Burger's testimony should carry great weight because the former chief justice "is certainly not considered an extremist."
- White House Chief of Staff Howard Baker, a former Senate Republican leader, said "it's remarkable to me that so many senators have not yet made up their mind. I think that's because Judge Bork is so — tentatively opposed by 'liberal groups'."
- He said Bork likely has a slight but comfortable lead, but "I'd also

County veterans' office changes bring varied responses

By PAT MARGANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The reorganization of the Twin Falls county veterans' office the first week of September has evoked response. Some good. Some bad.

Two community veterans leaders are saying that the county is required to give preference to hiring a veteran when filling any job, but failed to do that, ironically, when filling the veterans' service position. They also say that veterans' services should not be linked to welfare services.

State law and an Oct. 21 letter from Attorney General Jim Jones stated that all state-county and municipal governments should give hiring preferences to veterans.

Jones said he wrote the letter after several inquiries to his office and the state veterans' office. Basically, the law says that if two people with the same qualifications have applied for a job and one is a veteran, the veteran should be given preference.

In his letter, Jones stated that a section of the code "requires all public officials who are authorized to select or hire employees to strictly observe" the veterans' preference when filling vacancies or selecting new employees.

Disabled veterans are to be given additional preference.

Failure of public entities to follow the law amounts to a misdemeanor, Jones told the Times-News, but anyone with a grievance would probably find it more productive to seek civil action.

"In addition, an applicant who was unjustifiably denied a veterans' preference might have a cause of action for employment discrimination under the "civil rights statutes," Jones wrote in the letter.

Randy Russell, a disabled veteran who formerly served as a volunteer veterans' officer, said the commissioners should follow the law or "let's take it off the books." As it is now, "There's no one who's more qualified for the job than yours truly," he said.

But Twin Falls County Commissioner Chairman Judy Felton said the commissioner consulted the attorney general's office about the reorganization and "they did not feel we have done anything wrong."

The gripes of Russell, who had applied for the county veterans' job, "did not carry much substance," she added.

There has been another reaction.

Cheryl Ringenberg, the new veterans' officer, said the reaction has been mostly favorable to the commissioners' decision to make the job full-time instead of part-time.

"After an article in the Times-News about the reorganization, more than 50 people contacted Ringenberg, who has an office in the Courthouse, in the course of few days.

The commissioners initially planned to hire another part-time officer to replace Jerry Dunlap, who resigned last month after several years at the job. Dunlap had worked part-time for Twin Falls County and for Jerome County.

After receiving more than 60 applications for the part-time job, the commissioners switched gears, made the veterans' officer position full-time and put Ringenberg, a non-veteran with no experience in veterans' affairs, in the job. Ringenberg had aided Welfare Director Juanita Alger and worked

Senate denies funds for cancer treatment center at INEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. Senate committee has denied an appropriation request for nearly $10 million to convert an idle reactor at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory into a cancer treatment facility.

The Senate Appropriations Energy and Water Subcommittee recommended against a $9.9 million House appropriation package for the Department of Energy's Boron Neutron Capture Therapy program. The bill said the new appropriation was not necessary because DOE had agreed to reprogram funds elsewhere in the budget to the cancer treatment program.

But the bill contains support for converting the Power Burst Facility into an experimental brain tumor treatment center. The therapy involves loading a brain tumor with a boron compound, then hitting it with a controlled neutron beam.

The therapy, which kills tumor cells but not brain cells, could treat the more than 5,000 people who are annually diagnosed with the tumors.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, who was author of the portion of the bill on the BNCF, was assured by DOE it would reallocate $9.9 million from other programs in its 1988 budget to fund the program.

The INEL will use $5 million of the funds slated to dismantle the PBF to convert it into a neutron source needed for the treatment.

"They tell me, and I am assured and believe the reprogramming will not be controversial. It's money they would have taken out of the budget anyway," McClure said. "I was eager to accept the bargain."

But Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, who pushed hard to get the funds in the House appropriations bill, said he was disappointed. "I have confidence that the senator can deliver," he said. "But I would have been more comfortable having the United States Congress direct those funds."

Stallings said Congress will still have to approve the reprogramming, leaving many chances for a roadblock for the funds.

"You never know with the kind of personalities you have with these committee chairmen," he said.

He said DOE had made commitments on the Multimegawatt-Terrestrial program only to have it die because of lack of congressional and bureaucratic support.

"I think without legislative pressure those agencies can't be depended on," Stallings said.

McClure is putting most of his efforts in the DOE appropriations bill in getting approval for initial funds for two New Production Reactors. An NTR, estimated to cost $4 billion and require 4,000 to 5,000 workers during construction, would produce materials needed to manufacture nuclear weapons.

UP&L official says line sale won't work

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Power Company's proposal to buy out Utah Power & Light's eastern Idaho lines would not be practical for UP&L's customers or stockholders, a UP&L official said.

Idaho Power proposed the buyout when UP&L announced it would merge with the Portland, Ore.-based PacifiCorp.

UP&L's three-state service area is an integrated generation, transmission and distribution system. UP&L President Frank Davis wrote in a letter to Idaho Power President Bob O'Connor.

There is no practical way to sever a portion of the distribution system without adequate compensation not only for those facilities but also for all generation and transmission facilities, wherever located, dedicated to supplying service to our Idaho customers," Davis said.

He said any other arrangement would "penalize" UP&L customers and stockholders and the transmission system could not be changed without "jeopardizing the integrity of the entire system."

It is also significant that a transfer of our Idaho system would have a detrimental impact on the remainder of the Company's system with regard to qualification and entitlement to beneficial transactions with the Bonneville Power Administration, Davis wrote.

He said the merger with PacifiCorp was the best way to keep Idaho power rates low.

"An integral element of that merger is a commitment for substantially lower rates for Utah Power customers without any diminishment in the quality or reliability of service."

Davis said the company's conclusion is that the Idaho part of its system "cannot be sold."

Idaho legislators who wrote to the Public Utilities Commission asking that the UP&L-PacifiCorp merger be blocked until Idaho Power can bid on the Idaho system will meet with UP&L officials Tuesday.

UP&L is to present its first written proposal to PUCs within 30 days. Shareholders in both companies will vote on the merger within two months.

Idaho Power officials say they're still interested in taking over UP&L's Idaho service area and are awaiting a breakdown of UP&L's investments in coal-fire plants in Utah which provide eastern Idaho's power.

Judge upholds dismissal decision

POCATELLO (AP) — Sixth District Judge George Hargraves has upheld the decision of a magistrate judge to dismiss a pornography complaint against the Front Page Bookstore in Pocatello.

But city officials said they were considering further appeals.

Hargraves, in a written decision, rejected the city's argument that it had pursued a valid prosecution against a corporate entity, affirming Magistrate Howard Armstrong's ruling that the city erred by not issuing a formal citation to a specific person.

"It does not appear in the record that any arrest was made by city law enforcement officials and appellant concedes that no citation was issued and the matter was processed upon a sworn statement," Hargraves held.

The city took the bookstore to court after the local

Salvation Army commander filed a citizens complaint, alleging the Front-Page was guilty of displaying and distributing obscene materials.

Armstrong through the case out because only the corporation was named in the complaint and it was not in existence at the time the alleged obscenity violation occurred.

The city has since refiled pornography charges against specific individuals at the Front Page and two other bookstores. Those cases are still pending.

City Attorney Ivan Legler said he intends to discuss Hargraves' ruling with Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones to explore the possibility of filing an appeal with the Idaho Supreme Court.

"Obviously, we're disappointed by the decision, but reasonable minds can differ at any time," Legler said.

Research job to Shreeve

MOSCOW (AP) — Jeanine Shreeve, University of Idaho chemistry department chairman, on Friday was named the school's associate vice president for research.

Ms. Shreeve, 54, begins her new job Oct. 1 and will also serve as dean of graduate studies and director of the University Research Office.

She succeeds Arthur Gittins, who is on sabbatical leave at the University of Maryland. Her annual salary will be $76,400.

"This is a key administrative role for research at the University of Idaho. We were fortunate to have a top candidate from among our own ranks. Dr. Shreeve is not only a world-renowned scientist but a proven research administrator," said Thomas Bell, vice president for academic affairs and research.

Ms. Shreeve came to the university in 1961 as an assistant professor in chemistry. She has been a department head since 1973.

Attorneys seek interview recording

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Attorneys accused multiple killer Paul Ezra Rhoades have asked a district court judge for a second tape recording and transcript of a police interview with Rhoades a week after his arrest.

Attorneys made the request to 7th District Judge Larry Boyle after gaining access last week to the original tape and transcript of the interview, conducted by Bonneville County Sheriff's Deputy Clyde Burgess while Rhoades was still being held in the Elko County, Nev., jail on April 1.

Burgess' original tape and transcript were introduced last week during a pre-trial hearing for Rhoades, 30, who has been charged with first-degree murder in the Bonneville County killings of school teacher Susan Michelbacher and convenience store clerk Nolan Haddon last March and the Bingham County killing of convenience store clerk Stacy Baldwin in February.

During that hearing, Burgess told the court he also recorded the interview with Rhoades on a separate machine for the Idaho Falls Police Department. It is that recording and a transcript of it that the defense has asked for.

Rhoades is scheduled to stand trial early next year for the slayings. But before then Boyle has a number of defense motions to rule on.

Among them was the petition from attorneys to bar as evidence in the trial any statements Rhoades made to police during the initial days after his arrest.

Attorneys contend Rhoades was under the influence of drugs during that period.

LORNE GREENE
Dies of pneumonia

Greene: 'Ben until the end'

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Lorne Greene, who for 14 years played the firm but gentle father to "strapping" sons as Ben Cartwright on television's "Bonanza," died Friday with his wife and three children at his side. He was 72.

Greene died at Saint John's Hospital, where he underwent abdominal surgery Aug. 19 for a perforated ulcer. While recovering, he developed pneumonia, at times requiring an oxygen tank to help him breathe.

"The cause of death is listed as respiratory arrest followed by cardiac arrest," said Saint John's spokeswoman Mary Miller. She said Greene died at 1:14 p.m. MDT.

Greene's wife, Nancy, and children Charles, Linda and Gillian were with him when he died, she said.

Services will be held Monday at Hillside Memorial Park in Culver City, said aide Roxanne Lawrence.

A barrel-chested man with white hair, bushy black eyebrows and a deep, resonant voice, Greene tried different television roles late in his career, playing a detective in "Griff," a space commander in "Battlestar Galactica" and a fire chief in "Code Red."

But he remained most closely tied to his image as a widower in the old West, the patriarch who rode herd on a trio of headstrong sons — Adam, Hoss and Linc — and was played by Pernell Roberts, Dan Blocker and Michael Landon.

"He was Ben Cartwright to the end. He was ready with no complaints," Landon said after the announcement of Greene's death.

"The last time I saw him he couldn't speak. I took his hand in mine and held it. He looked at me and then slowly started to arm wrestle like we used to and he broke into a smile and nodded and everything was OK. I think he wanted me to know everything was OK."

Greene's condition had improved just last weekend, but on Thursday he suffered a setback and was returned to the intensive care unit where he died.

The "Bonanza" series made Greene a multimillionaire and he invested in real estate and ran a string of thoroughbred horses in Southern California. He also became known in recent years for a series of dog food commercials for television.

He once built a replica in Arizona of the Ponderosa ranch house set from "Bonanza," complete to a staircase that led to nowhere. But unlike the sometimes stern, humorless Cartwright, Greene was full of good spirits and often joked with his co-actors.

Greene was a little-known actor and former newscaster in 1959 when he was cast for "Bonanza." After a shaky start, the series zoomed in popularity and was seen by an estimated 400 million people in 80 countries.

After 14 years on NBC it was canceled in January 1973, but the 431 episodes will be seen in reruns for many years to come. Roberts quit the show in 1966 and Blocker died May 13, 1972.

Marine demoted for shirking duty

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — Marine Sgt. Robert Stufflebeam was demoted from the rank of staff sergeant to sergeant as punishment Friday for his convictions on two counts of dereliction of duty.

A military jury, which convicted the former Moscow Embassy guard Thursday evening, gave Stufflebeam no prison sentence, after deliberating about 1½ hours.

The court-martial judge, Marine Lt. Col. E. Dean Clark, had ruled earlier Friday that Stufflebeam be credited with 64 days on any sentence the jury recommended. The 54 days represents time spent by the Bloomington, Ill., native under arrest or restriction.

7-state teacher strikes: from hopes to violence

By The Associated Press

Negotiators trying to settle a four-day teachers' walkout in Chicago said Friday they were pinning their hopes on a weekend bargaining session, while shoving matches and other violence broke out on picket lines in Elizabeth, N.J.

In all, teacher strikes in seven states — Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Washington — disrupted education for nearly 720,000 students.

Schools were open in Boston, but a strike by unionized bus drivers forced 27,000 students who rely on buses for transportation to find other means to get to class.

In Chicago, federal mediators scheduled new talks for Saturday, the first since bargaining broke off Tuesday. Many of the 430,000 students in the nation's third-largest school district were attending alternative education programs set up by city and private agencies.

Besides agreeing to return to the table, the school board pressed ahead with its contention that the strike is illegal and that the Chicago Teachers Union erred by filing a strike notice before mediation began.

Board attorneys have asked the Illinois Education Labor Relations Board to seek an injunction to force the 28,000 teachers and 12,000 employees from 20 other unions back to work. Robert Parkovitch, executive director of the labor relations board, said he expected to decide the matter soon.

Teachers contend there are enough savings to be found in the board's $1.88 billion budget to provide the 16 percent salary increase they want over a two-year contract, but the school board says the system can't afford it.

Tempers flared Friday in Elizabeth as 2,000 teachers, custodians, cafeteria workers and bus drivers continued to picket the city's 23 public schools in defiance of a two-day-old back-to-work order.

A striking custodian was struck by a car driven by a substitute teacher, and two shoving matches were broken up by police, said Police Capt. Michael Kucab. The custodian's leg was bruised but he did not require medical attention, and the driver was given a summons for failing to obey a police officer.

Both sides planned to meet with a state mediator Sunday night for more contract talks.

Teacher strikes continued in Detroit and seven other Michigan school districts. Richmond instructors being threatened with replacement got a vote of support from colleagues in 16 other districts.

AIDS victim, 10, blames himself for home being burned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ten-year-old Ricky Ray, one of three brothers infected with the AIDS virus, lies awestruck at night crying, blaming himself for the fire that destroyed the family's Florida home, his father told Congress on Friday.

"He believes if he hadn't tested positive, the house wouldn't have burned," said Clifford Ray.

Ray and his wife, Louise, recounted for the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee a story of threats and harassment that began when Ricky and his brothers Randy and Robert tested positive for the AIDS virus.

For a year, the boys were told to stay home from school. But when a federal judge ordered them back in classes last month, a student boycott was organized and the family received bomb threats and threatening telephone calls.

Still, the boys wanted to stay in school. Some of the children had started to accept them, Ray said, and they were feeling a little better. Then, their house, burned while the family was away.

"My oldest boy blames himself for the fire," Ray told the Senate panel. "He's had nightmares and stays awake crying."

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, peered over his glasses at 10-year-old Ricky, sitting in the audience with his two brothers and sister and a friend.

"This is not the children's fault," said Kennedy. "None of this is the children's fault."

Ray said his son is accepting that now, but the family remains at an undisclosed location in Florida trying to decide what to do next.

"We want to blend back into the woodwork, so to speak," said Louise Ray, mother of Ricky, Robert, 9, and Randy, 8 — hemophiliacs whose doctor says they picked up the AIDS virus from clotting agents given to control their hemophilia.

Joining the Ray family in support of bipartisan legislation being pushed by Kennedy to forbid discrimination against people who test positive for the virus was the boys' doctor and a Miami environmental lawyer who took on the Ray case after his wife read of their plight in a newspaper.

Dr. Jerry Barbosa, a hemophilia expert at St. Petersburg's All Children's Hospital in Florida, was asked whether — knowing what he knows now — he would recommend that the boys be tested for the AIDS virus.

"No sir," replied the physician. "I say no because of the blatant discrimination going around now."

The lawyer, William Earl, said

two other families with similar problems have come to him since he and his lawyer-wife took on the Ray case.

"My perception is that there are many other families who have been driven underground by fear and hysteria," Earl said.

"You have a total absence of leadership" from local elected officials, said Earl, accusing DeSoto County officials of "exploiting the situation" rather than trying to reason with a fearful community.

Officials dim hopes for summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials, seeking to dispel hopes for breakthroughs at a high-level U.S.-Soviet meeting next week, said Friday that preparations for a superpower summit are not on the agenda and that work remains on a pact to eliminate intermediate-range missiles.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze will see President Reagan on Tuesday and spend three days talking to Secretary of State George P. Shultz in the kind of meetings that have led to summits in 1985 and 1986.

Asked whether a long-envisioned summit in Washington later this year would be discussed next week, Rozanne Ridgway, the assistant secretary of state for European affairs, said, "I wish I could step on it and make it stay stepped on. This is not a meeting about a summit."

She said Reagan had invited Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to Washington and "it's for the general secretary to decide when he wants to come to the United States. As far as we're concerned this notion that somehow these three days next week are going to be talk about summits ... it's simply not part of our planning."

Since the invitation was extended last spring, "I am aware of not one word of exchange between the United States and the Soviet Union on the question of a summit," Ms. Ridgway told reporters at a State Department briefing.

At the same time, she did not rule out the possibility that Shevardnadze would raise the issue.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Friday of the summit, "That's not the purpose of the meeting. I wouldn't count on it."

Asked why he was expressing doubt about a summit announcement, he said his intention was "not to try to build expectations beyond what's reasonable."

Fitzwater, asked if the meeting would be deemed a failure if an agreement on a summit is not reached, replied, "I think that would be an unfortunate ... expectation to have."

Officials have said privately for months that if the United States and the Soviet Union reach agreement on a treaty to eliminate intermediate-range missiles, Reagan and Gorbachev could sign the pact at a meeting in Washington.

Libyan deal suspected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States said Friday it asked Libya not to send Soviet-made sea mines to Iraq. U.S. officials are concerned that Libya may have ignored the plea and exchanged mines for Iranian chemical weapons.

"We have conferred with several countries on the matter and have expressed to the Libyans through a third party the seriousness with which we would view such a development," State Department spokesman Charles Redman said.

Another official, insisting on anonymity, said the Soviet Union also asked the Libyans to refrain from going ahead with the deal. Libya is one of the Soviet Union's largest arms clients, and 5,000 to 6,000 Soviet-bloc military advisors are reported to be stationed in Libya.

The Soviets were said to have been concerned about the unauthorized transfer of its military technology by Libya and the spread of chemical warfare.

What's what

BLACK BROWN

Men prefer black-wallets, women brown. Why isn't known, but market research proves it.

Q-How tall does a building have to be before it qualifies as a "skyscraper"?

A. At least 20 stories. Or so some nameless authority once decreed.

Q. In throwing a knife, are you supposed to throw from the blade or from the handle?

A. If it's "blade-heavy," from the handle. If it's "handle-heavy," from the blade. Balance it on your finger. If it balances an inch from the tang on the blade side, it's blade heavy. If an inch from the tang on the handle side, it's handle heavy.

Women eat more hotdogs than men do.

DEPRESSION

If either your dad or mom suffered from that condition now known as depression, chances run 30 percent you do, too. If both did, chances run 70 percent you do, too. So say the medicos.

SCISSORS

Debate goes on over the difference between a scissors and shears. Scissors are smaller, that's all. Some authorities say shears have blades more than six inches long, scissors less. Will you buy that?

New Yorkers claim you can go out to dinner there every night of your life until age 65 without hitting the same restaurant twice.

Quite a success here.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Avoid any "flighty" company this evening. Be with people who are more practical minded and know what they are doing. Plan how to gain personal goals.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Get to the core of any work you have to handle which is important to your welfare. A smile will go a long way if you deal with a superior today. Relax and enjoy tonight.

King Juan Carlos of Spain issues Hispanics-only invitation

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — King Juan Carlos of Spain raised eyebrows among Santa Fe's minority "Anglo" population after saying he wants to have as many Hispanics as possible invited to his reception here later this month.

State Attorney General Hal Stratton said Thursday the king's wishes are "clearly discriminatory" and could violate state law.

There is no exception for foreign monarchs as far as equal protection is concerned," said Stratton.

Robert Dales, special assistant for international affairs for Gov. Carey Carruthers, said earlier this week that only Hispanics will be invited for a morning reception Sept. 29 with the king and Queen Sofia.

The king has expressed an interest in visiting Santa Fe for several years because of the 450-year-old bond between Spain and its former colony in the New World.

WALTER CRONKITE Sorry he forgot women

Cronkite speech omits Coast Guard women

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — Former CBS news anchor Walter Cronkite, long used to granting equal time to both sides, apologized after being reminded that men aren't the only ones in the U.S. Coast Guard.

In a speech Thursday marking the departure of the USS Barque Eagle for Australia, the veteran newsmen repeatedly referred to the "men of the Coast Guard."

"But as soon as the speech was over, someone on the podium spoke to Cronkite and he returned to the microphone.

"It was just reminded that somehow or other I had gotten through this little speech today referring to the men of the Coast Guard and not the women," he said. "And that is the worst mistake I perhaps have made since 9:30 this morning. It could be the worst I've made in my life. My apologies to the 16 percent of the Coast Guard who are women."

"This morning" was apparently a reference to a tardy airline flight that caused Cronkite to be late for the ceremonies.

Paz, Pieper awarded 1987 Ingersoll Prizes

CHICAGO (AP) — The 1987 Ingersoll Prizes have been awarded to Mexican author Octavio Paz and German philosopher Josef Pieper, the Ingersoll Foundation announced.

Paz will receive the T.S. Eliot Award for Creative Writing and Pieper will receive the Richard M. Weaver Award for Scholarly Letters, the foundation said Thursday.

The awards, which carry a cash prize of $15,000 each, recognize authors of lasting influence whose works affirm the moral principles of Western civilization, the foundation said.

Paz and Pieper were selected by a review panel consisting of foundation officials, writers and scholars, the foundation said. Paz and Pieper will be awarded the prizes at a black-tie dinner Nov. 6 at the Drake Hotel in Chicago, said John Howard, the foundation's president.

The Ingersoll Foundation is the philanthropic division of Ingersoll Milling Machine Co., Rockford, Ill.

Popcorn king turns 80, tells secret to long life

VALPARAISO, Ind. (AP) — On his 80th birthday, popcorn pundit Orville Redenbacher finally revealed his secret of success.

"There's no magic formula," he told well-wishers from his hometown where they threw him a celebration here. "I followed the classic, homespun formula: Never say die."

Many of the 400 well-wishers sported the red-tie-and-suspenders that have become associated with Redenbacher through the advertisements for his "gourmet" popcorn.

Redenbacher returned to Valparaiso Thursday from his home in Coronado, Calif., to preside over the city's 9th annual-Popcorn Festival on Saturday.

Redenbacher mingled with former neighbors and friends at the Porter County Exposition Center Thursday night and reminisced about the popcorn business he started there in 1951 and sold in 1974 to Hunt-Wesson.

Ben Vereen: Nashville makes recording easy

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Actor and dancer Ben Vereen, known for his roles in Broadway's "Pippin" and the television series "Roots," says being in Nashville is a "great opportunity" to help him boost his singing career.

"Nashville will listen," Vereen said. "God knows it's easier to record here. The musicians are more relaxed."

Vereen came here this week to record a movie theme song and an album for "Buy and Sell," an upcoming movie due for release next spring and in which he will appear.

He said launching a singing career has been difficult because people think of him mainly as an actor.

"If we come across a country song in the process (of recording the album), I'll take a stab at it, but whenever I do country it sounds like reggae," Vereen said.

Delamere takes murder clues to grave

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Lady Diana Delamere took her to the grave any secrets she possessed about the unsolved murder of her aristocratic lover, an English earl whose death scandalized colonial Kenya 46 years ago.

"With her death, history has been robbed of the last witness to the events surrounding the murder of her lover, Lord Erroll," author James Fox wrote in London's Daily Telegraph newspaper.

Lady Diana was 76 when she died of a stroke Sept. 3 in Ascot, England.

Their sexual exploits, drunken brawls and endless rounds of parties, interspersed with horse racing and big game hunting, shocked a community of settlers toiling to carve farmland from African bush.

When Erroll met Diana in 1941, he already had scandalized British aristocracy by eloping to Kenya with a married woman, Lady Idina Gordon, whom he later married.

She apparently did not mind his many love affairs: "Idina was only happy ... if all her guests had swapped partners, wives-or-husbands by nightfall," Fox wrote in his book.

The two were divorced amid rows about debt she ran up in her name.

By 1941, Erroll was the widower of an older and richer woman, Molly Ramsay Hill, who had supported him until she died of drink and drugs. Diana had been married for six months to Broughton, a 57-year-old divorced man who had signed a peculiar marriage agreement with her.

Broughton agreed not to stand in the way should Diana fall in love with a younger man, and to provide her with a comfortable income for at least seven years after a divorce.

On Jan. 24, 1941, Erroll's body, with a bullet wound behind the ear, was found jammed under the steering wheel of his car just outside Nairobi.

Diana had told Broughton the day before that she loved Erroll and wanted a divorce. The night that Erroll died, the three dined at Nairobi's exclusive Muthaiga Club, where Broughton toasted the union between Diana and Erroll with champagne.

Armed with reports of quarrels between Broughton and Erroll, police arrested Broughton and brought him to trial.

He was acquitted, and Diana later left him. He committed suicide the same year.

A month after Broughton died, Diana married Gilbert Coville.

Few people understood the attraction.

Coville, one of the richest men in Kenya, was a taciturn, lonely cattle rancher who would not even talk to women.

But he overcame Diana's rehabilitation-into society. Noted for being close-fisted, he indulged her passion for jewels and couture clothes. He bought her Djinn Palace, once Erroll's home.

In 1955. When he died, he left Diana estates worth millions of dollars.

Delamere's wife, Mary, sued Delamere for divorce in 1955, citing Diana.

Delamere and Diana were married and lived happily in Kenya until he died in 1979.

She was buried Friday in the side of a big tree in a small cemetery she built at Soyambur ranch, about 100 miles northwest of Nairobi.

Born Diana Caldwell, she was married to the man accused of the murder and was the last person who acknowledged seeing Erroll alive. She did not testify at the trial of her husband, Sir-Jock-Delves-Broughton, who was acquitted for lack of evidence.

Wellborn women, envious of her beauty and her attraction for men, cited her commoner background. To them, she was a scarlet woman who shamed society.

She was a striking beauty with cool, pale blue eyes and a mass of blond hair. Fox wrote in his book "White Mischief," which concluded that Broughton killed Erroll.

The victim was the Rt. Hon. Jocelyn Hay, 22nd Earl of Erroll, Baron of Kilmarnock and High Constable of Scotland. His slogan, "to hell with husbands," may have led to his death, Fox conjectured.

The earl, blond with movie-idol looks — was at the center of a small, wild-group-of-Britons who whooped it up in Kenya during World War II years.

Billy Carter inoperable cancer victim

ATLANTA (AP) — Billy Carter, brother of former President Jimmy Carter, has inoperable cancer of the pancreas, a spokeswoman for Emory University Hospital said Friday.

Billy Carter was en route to Atlanta Friday night to be with his brother, Emory University Hospital said. The former president and his wife, Rosalynn, canceled a meeting that had been set for Friday night with Pope John Paul II in Columbia, S.C.

Emory spokeswoman Catherine Grant confirmed that the 50-year-old Billy Carter underwent surgery to relieve a blockage of the pancreatic bile duct. The surgery found the cancer was inoperable. She declined to say what his prognosis was.

Carter's wife, Sybil Carter, said the surgery began about 8:30 a.m. She had said doctors planned to remove a malignancy from the lower portion of her husband's pancreas.

Protesters throw firebombs in Seoul

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Radical students hurled hundreds of firebombs and rocks at riot police Friday in vicious street fighting in Seoul. Thousands of students took part in protests across the country. "Down with the military dictatorship! Freedom!" masked students yelled as they pelted police at close range with firebombs that exploded in showers of blazing gasoline and flying shards of glass.

Hundreds of riot police fought back with tear gas and rocks. Pedestrians, some of them choking and crying from the stinging tear gas, ran along sidewalks, trying to escape the fighting. Police helped usher hundreds of people to safety. A dispute earlier Friday kept the National Assembly from convening a one-day session. Government and opposition lawmakers did not meet after delegates failed to agree on issues blocking drafting of a new constitution. Lawmakers said negotiations probably would resume early next week and an agreement would be worked out. Students demanding the immediate overthrow of President Chun Doo-hwan staged rallies at 40 campuses across the nation Friday, according to Yonhap, the Korean news agency. Large riot police detachments with armored cars surrounded several schools in Seoul where protests were held. Radical students have vowed to topple the Chun government despite his acceptance of opposition demands for direct elections and other reforms. Chun agreed to direct presidential elections after massive anti-government protests in June. The opposition says the present electoral college system favors the party in power, the Democratic Justice Party. Chun, a former general who took power in 1980 with military backing, says he will step down in February when his seven-year term ends. Radical students want Chun and other leaders put on trial for alleged abuses of power. Fighting raged at Yonsei University in western Seoul for more than two hours after students tried to march into the streets in a column with large banners denouncing the government and calling for an uprising.

Chad, Libya announce truce; bombings reported, denied

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — Chad and Libya announced a truce in their territorial war Friday, but it was soured almost immediately by accusations and denials of new Libyan air raids.

The cease-fire, sponsored by the Organization of African Unity, began at midday but Chadian radio reported new Libyan bombings and said: "The Chadian government was not mistaken about the perverse and perfidious nature of the Libyan regime."

Libya claimed its planes struck only in the morning. According to Chad's reports, Libyan aircraft raided Wour in northwestern Chad and the north-central town of Ounianga Kebir on Friday morning, then returned in the afternoon to bomb Bardai, a village near Wour.

agency, quoted "informed sources" as saying the last bombing run ended 15 minutes before the deadline, which the agency called "the time fixed by Libya to halt its punitive raids."

A statement issued in N'Djamena earlier said Chad accepted the cease-fire and Libyan radio, monitored in Cyprus, said Col. Moammar Gadhafi's regime also would observe it.

Libya hopes the truce will "put an end to Chadian suffering and help in finding a solution under the aegis of the OAU," the radio said.

Gadhafi has had military forces in northern Chad for years to support rebels fighting President Hissene Habre's government, but Chadian soldiers have nearly driven them out in an eight-month campaign.

Large riot police detachments with armored cars surrounded several schools in Seoul where protests were held. Radical students have vowed to topple the Chun government despite his acceptance of opposition demands for direct elections and other

E. German leader ends visit

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — East German leader Erich Honecker ended German visit to West Germany on Friday after triggering a surge of optimism that East Germany will one day abolish the guns and fences separating the two Germanys. His five-day visit included talks with Chancellor Helmut Kohl and other government officials and a tour of his home town of Wiebelskirchen. He later flew home from Munich, ending the first visit here by an East German Communist Party leader. Kohl accepted an invitation to visit East Germany at an unspecified date. The leaders of the two Germanys signed a scientific and technical cooperation agreement and agreed to boost bilateral trade. East Germany also agreed to relax its tight restrictions on the types of newspapers, books, records and tapes that can be brought into the country. In Bonn, government officials praised Honecker's surprise prediction that his country eventually will have normal border relations with West Germany. Politicians here took Honecker's words to mean that East Germany will at least lift shoot-to-kill orders given to border sentries to prevent escapes.

Stadium Blvd. still a point of contention

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls and Twin Falls School District agree on most everything to do with the proposed swimming pool, but they remain separated by a quarter-mile of blacktop.

That's the length of Stadium Boulevard, between Locust and Madrona streets, which the district wants to close part-time, but which the city wants to modify and keep open.

School Superintendent Carl Snow met again Friday with City Manager Tom Courtney to discuss plans for building a city pool on district property. Each administrator stated after the meeting that the street problem is not insurmountable, but that it remains the major obstacle to signing a lease and building the pool.

Snow said closing the section of Stadium, for the safety of 2,100 nearby high school and elementary students while school is in session, appears non-negotiable.

Courtney said that while the council favors closing Stadium part-time over closing it permanently, city engineers are exploring other alternatives to keep it open.

"We're still playing with it," Courtney said. "We would like to look at some alternatives for keeping the street open."

He expects to meet with school officials "early next week" to discuss the plans again.

As proposed, the pool would be built just north of the high school tennis courts, which sit on the northeast corner of Stadium and Locust. The district would extend a negligible lease for 50 years and the city would then build the pool and manage it.

But since the pool is expected to draw more traffic, the school board would like to barricade Stadium, at least between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. on school days, with one blockade just east of the tennis courts and another at Madrona.

"That's our main concern," Snow said. "If they (the school board) don't get the 8-to-5, I don't know if they'll approve it."

Indeed, trustees sounded immovable on this point Tuesday at their monthly meeting, saying they feared for students' safety if the road between the high school and Sawtooth Elementary isn't closed.

Trustees Gary Fay, Orrietta Sinclair and Steve Tolman each said they favored closing Stadium permanently, but that 8-to-5 closure could be a compromise.

From the other side, the City Council sounded equally disposed Thursday to keep Stadium open, by changing the way lanes are marked. A petition from 102 residents also testified against closing Stadium.

This sagebrush grubber is one of many types of antique farm machinery on display at the Twin Falls County Fair.

Machinery brings on the memories

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

FILER — Next-to-large, shiny, expensive and brand-new hay harvesters and four-wheel-drive tractors, Francis Egbert stands proudly over a display of antique, rust-covered farm machinery.

For the first time, the Twin Falls County Fair is displaying antique farm machinery ranging from one-row potato diggers to two-way disc plows.

Egbert picked much of the machinery from a farm south of Hansen and after the fair closes, he plans to donate much of it to the Twin Falls County Historical Museum.

But meanwhile, he's delighted about the stories other old-timers are telling about the machinery.

"I'd like to have a tape recorder here and record all the stories people have told me," Egbert said.

Egbert has a few of his own. Although he spent most of his life as an accountant, he grew up on a farm near Murtaugh and has used most of the 15 pieces of machinery on display.

"I've guided that down many a potato row," he said of a one-row planter. He especially remembers a sagebrush grubber, consisting of a long tongue, two iron wheels and a flat, triangular piece of metal to rip off sagebrush during the early days of farming in the Twin Falls area.

"I've never grubbed any, but I cleaned up a lot of the sagebrush after it was ripped up," Egbert said. "If you could ride this thing, you could ride any bronco in the county."

He and his father first used six horses to pull the three-foot-wide sagebrush grubber, but they gave up and bought a Caterpillar tractor to finish the grubbing when they were opening up their farm before the Great Depression years.

None of the machinery had engines, indeed they only had rubber tires. Most were designed for horse-pulling, back in the days when farming took a little more time and a lot less money.

"It took a little longer, but we didn't have interest payments," Egbert said. "I probably would have farmed all my life if I could afford a tractor."

The 67-year-old Egbert said he taught school before getting drafted for World War II and when he returned from the war, he couldn't afford to take over his father's farm. So he went into accounting until he retired a few years ago.

Friday afternoon, Egbert entertained a number of farmers who walked through the new equipment display with glazed eyes and wishful looks, but then stopped to exchange stories before the rust-covered antique machinery.

Several tall jokes roughly equivalent to "heck, this is modern-day equipment, isn't it?"

Indeed, one farmer said a couple days ago he was still using a one-foot-wide walking potato digger in his garden, but had trouble keeping his wife going straight down the rows in the tractor, according to Egbert.

The machinery also displays a somewhat remarkable progression of technology: No air-conditioned, heated cabs here, but one of the first two-way disc plows (a plow that can turn around and plow a furrow to the same side as the previous pass) did it there.

"They called it a coming and going plow," Egbert said. "They tell me it worked real well on sagebrush."

"The coming and going" plow still had one feature common to all the antique machinery: a metal, unpadded seat perched in the full glare of the sun, dust and wind.

"The exhibits have been popular enough to make Egbert want to make it a permanent part of the fair."

"Some people have said they came to the fair just to see this stuff," Egbert said.

Board: Happy with figures

FILER — Despite a drop in recorded attendance this year, Fair Board members are pleased with the numbers of people attending the Twin Falls County Fair.

Vice Chairman Emmett Harrison said the new fair manager, Dan Peters, wasn't sure how the fair used to count complimentary tickets, so he didn't even try.

Attendance figures show a drop of 2,873 during the first three days of the fair. Last year, attendance was 49,142 through the third day of the fair.

This year, however, attendance was recorded at 46,264.

"We just don't know what formula Tom (Tom Shouse, the former fair manager) used to count the extra people," said Don Kramer, board member.

"Nevertheless, board members said at a Thursday meeting they were pleased at the fair's popularity this year.

"Regardless of the figures, I think I've seen more people here than ever before," Harrison said.

The fair board also discussed setting up a bus route from Twin Falls to the fair next year, possibly using the Trans IV bus company or getting a company to sponsor the bus.

"We should be able to get a sponsor — it's been so popular in other areas," Peters said.

The fair continues today.

No charges filed in fatal accident

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Early morning sunlight and a jaywalking victim are among the reasons Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter cited Friday in declining to prosecute the driver in a traffic fatality.

An "unimpaired witness corroborated driver Ellen Anderson's statement that she was not traveling 'too fast' when she struck 85-year-old Lila Briggs.

Police videotape and witnesses also agree with Anderson's claim that sunlight hampered vision during the 7:41 a.m. accident.

Briggs, who was jaywalking across Filer Avenue Wednesday morning in front of her home when the accident occurred, died later that morning of her injuries.

Baxter wrote Director of Public Safety Tim Qualls explaining her decision not to prosecute Anderson for driving too fast for conditions, driving inattentively or vehicular manslaughter.

"There is no evidence that Mrs. Anderson was exceeding the (30 mph) speed limit," Baxter wrote after deputy prosecutors Rockne Lammers and Joel Horton reviewed the case. The "simple fact that an accident has occurred is not proof" Anderson drove at an "unsafe and inappropriate speed," Baxter wrote.

And without exceeding a prudent speed or driving inattentively, there was no "unlawful act" that is a prerequisite for charging vehicular manslaughter, Baxter wrote.

"Given the decedent's history of similar jaywalking behavior, her vision difficulties and her hearing difficulty, it would appear she may have been substantially responsible for the accident," Baxter wrote.

Anderson, 33, is the wife of state Sen. Larry Anderson, R-Twin Falls. Neither she nor her daughter, Laura, a passenger in the car, were injured in the accident.

Kent files objection with Supreme Court

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Arlo Kent versus Twin Falls County has moved to the Idaho Supreme Court.

On Wednesday Kent filed with the court an objection to a request by the county to dismiss his appeal.

Kent, a mechanic and one-time legislative candidate, is appealing the July 13 dismissal of his lawsuit against Clerk Dick Pence and Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter over alleged problems with the May 12 jail bond election.

Kent, who is representing himself in the action, said there would be no oral arguments before the justices on the county's request to dismiss his appeal.

He is confident the Idaho Supreme Court will deny the county's request and hear the case because it raises the question of whether voters in bond elections should be qualified electors, which he defines as registered voters.

Kent claimed the jail bond election was improper because Pence didn't register voters. On advice of its bond council, the county asked voters to meet age and residency requirements, Pence said.

Boise attorney Paul Penland, who represents the county officials, declined comment on the case.

In the request to dismiss Kent's appeal, Penland claimed the paperwork had not been filed within required time limits. Kent had filed both a notice of appeal in Fifth District Court and a request to appeal directly with the Idaho Supreme Court. Penland claims they were both filed late.

Hydrologist: Carry-over should be low

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Farmers in most of southern Idaho should have enough water to complete the current irrigation season, but carry-over will be very low, says Michael Beus, hydrologist with the Bureau of Reclamation in Burley.

He said the in-flow of water reaching southern Idaho reservoirs is low compared with the use of stored water. As a result, water users will need normal moisture during the winter season to pull them through the next farm year, Beus said.

American Falls reservoir, for example, is now at 16 percent of capacity with only 288,000 acre feet of water in storage. The reservoir's capacity is 1.67 million a.f.

Palisades, in the upper Snake River region, is at 40 percent of capacity, containing 478,000 a.f., while Jackson Lake, further up stream, is at 36 percent of its restricted capacity with reconstruction of the dam now underway.

Beus said Lake Walcott is filled at 95,000 a.f. and is maintained at that capacity for irrigation and power needs in the local area and to meet the needs of the older water rights.

"Although this year's irrigation needs are winding down," Beus said, "we expect to see a late season rush on water as soon as the potato and sugar beet harvests reach full swing."

"The long hot summer and fall weather has dried fields and most farmers will be wanting to put water on these crops before digging time," he added.

He said last winter's lack of snow left some question that all reservoirs on the Snake River would fill.

However, rain storms in May managed to bring the Jackson Lake up to current capacity, leaving only the small Ririe Dam reservoir below the full mark.

He noted that August was a dry month and did nothing to help the water situation in the southern part of the state.

The Idaho Agricultural Statistics Service in Boise reports August weather was ideal in southern Idaho for field work. Some fall seeding has been completed and the small grain harvest has only a

Eagle Springs fire warns of continuing danger to valley

By The Times-News
and Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — A small fire erupting Friday near Eagle Springs sparked warning from Sawtooth National Forest officials that wildfires still threaten all of Magic Valley.

Fires have also plagued the northern area of the Sawtooth National Forest this month, and a Twin Falls Forest Service spokesman is saying that 12 fires in the White Cloud Mountains are believed to have been intentionally set.

In the Magic Valley, Fire Management Officer Jack

Exon said he has never seen a greater potential for a disastrous wildfire than now in the Fairfield Ranger District. Burley District Ranger Jerry Green also rates his district as in extreme danger of wildfire.

With unusually dry conditions and no encouraging prospects of rain in Magic Valley, officials said there is potential for a spark to grow into a 10,000-acre blaze, as was the case with the Harrington Fork blaze last week.

The Eagle Springs fire on Deadline Ridge broke out about noon Friday and is presumed to have caused, although an investigation is continuing. Firefighters labeled the four-acre fire contained at 4:30 p.m.

That area is one mile south of Diamondfield Jack Ranger Station and three miles south of the Rock Creek Ranger Station.

Ranger Don Oman credited nearby firefighting equipment and a lull in the wind for the quick containment. A nearby bulldozer and two tanker trucks complemented two helicopters and virtually no wind in defeating the blaze.

Last week, an unextinguished campfire in the Harrington Fork Campground grew into a range fire raging across 10,600 acres and costing nearly $200,000 to fight.

All forest visitors are urged to take unusual precautions with open fires; stoves; and any mechanical devices capable of starting a fire.

In the White Clouds, no suspects are being sought in connection with a dozen fires reported in the Big Boulder-Creek drainages on Sept. 2, said Londen Gunter, a dispatcher at the Forest Service's Twin Falls headquarters.

A helicopter crew from Hailey was dispatched to the fires burning near the Livingston Mine in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area about 32 miles north of Ketchum, Gunter said.

Favorable conditions allowed 25 firefighters to quickly extinguish the blazes, he said.

Jerome open house days set

JEROME — Open house will be held at each of the five Jerome schools next week.

The project, sponsored by the Jerome Parent School Organization, gives parents an opportunity to meet their children's teachers, principals and other school personnel, as well as to see their children's school environment.

Open house will be held on three separate nights so that parents with children in more than one school will have the opportunity and time to visit each school.

On Tuesday Washington, Jefferson and Central elementary schools will be open from 7 to 9 p.m. This year elementary teachers are giving classroom presentations at scheduled times.

Presentations for grades one, two and three at Washington and Jefferson will be given from 7 to 7:20 p.m. and repeated from 7:30 to 7:50 p.m. Classrooms for grades one, two and three will be open with no schedule from 8 to 9 p.m.

The fourth grade presentation will be held from 8 to 8:15 p.m.; fifth grade from 8:20 to 8:35 p.m.; and sixth grade from 8:40 to 8:55 p.m.

Classrooms for grades four, five and six will be open with no schedule from 7 to 8 p.m.

On Wednesday parents of students attending Jerome High School may attend that school's open house from 7 to 9 p.m. Parents will meet in the cafeteria for a short orientation, then will move to their children's first period classes and continue with their schedules. Parents will need to bring their children's schedules with them so the open house can begin promptly at 7 p.m.

The junior high open house will be held on Thursday, also from 7 to 9 p.m.

Parents should meet in the cafeteria for a short orientation promptly at 7 p.m., then proceed to their children's first period classes. Here they will get a copy of their children's schedules and then proceed in 10 minute intervals to their children's classes. This year the junior high is also sponsoring a dance in the gym at the same time as open house to entertain students while their parents are busy "in school."

Special education teachers will also be available during the open house at each school. Barbara O'Rourke, director of special services, invites parents to meet the special services and talented and gifted office staff on Tuesday from 7 to 9 p.m. at Central Elementary.

Because of limited time, principals and teachers stress that this is not an evening for individual conferences about particular children, but rather an opportunity to meet teachers and to experience the classroom surroundings. Future conference dates will be set up for individual parent/teacher conferences.

As in the past, the Parent-School Organization will have an information and sign-up table at each school during open house week.

Fired Sacred Heart principal settles suit against school

BOISE (AP) — The former principal of Sacred Heart School has settled her lawsuit against school officials after her dismissal in May 1986.

Catherine Smith, who was hired as principal in November 1984, had claimed school officials were motivated by "calous disregard for the truth, rumors, gossip and innuendo" when firing her.

Smith sought reinstatement and more than $600,000 in damages in the lawsuit filed in 4th District Court.

The Rev. W. Thomas Faucher, pastor of the school, seven school board members and the school were named in the lawsuit which alleged breach of contract, denial of civil rights and damage to Smith's reputation.

Craig James, Smith's attorney, would not discuss the settlement but did say his client was "satisfied and pleased that the matter is resolved."

Smith still lives in Boise but is not teaching or working as a school administrator, James said.

Ryan Armbruster, Sacred Heart's Attorney, also declined comment on the settlement. Faucher was out of town and could not be reached for comment.

"As a result of the settlement, Sacred Heart School has agreed to review how contract renewals are handled as well as an overall review of the relationship among teachers, the principal, superintendent and school board," a news release issued by the Idaho Catholic Office for Information in Boise said.

Neither James nor Armbruster would comment on whether the review was a condition of the settlement.

Smith's dismissal drew protests from students and teachers. About 20 seventh- and eighth-graders walked out of classes on May 19, 1986.

Loggers rally for increased cutting

BONNERS FERRY (AP) — More than 1,200 cheering loggers and millworkers and their families filled the high school football stadium to overflowing to urge the U.S. Forest Service to increase timber cutting on federal lands.

Rally organizer Bob Graham said one purpose of the rally Thursday night was to collect still and video photographs to show the community's support in calling for increased access and timber cutting.

The Environmental Balance Committee, subcommittee of the Bonners Ferry Chamber of Commerce, is asking the Forest Service to sell a minimum of 45 million board feet of timber per year from the Bonners Ferry Ranger District.

The committee says the Forest Service plans to sell about 30 million to 37 million board feet, far less than the community's mill production capacity of more than 100 million board feet a year.

"The forest is a local business booster also advocates increased recreational access to Forest Service lands."

"The potential of this district is 76 million board feet," said Graham, who acted as master of ceremonies at the rally.

The 45 million board feet figure "will hopefully help sustain the mill capacity in Boundary County," he said.

"Forest management is not wise unless it fairly allocates those resources to all user groups," said State Rep. Steven Herndon, D-Sandpoint. It is not fair when lines are drawn in favor of "hurry critics," he added.

"This community deserves to be treated more fairly and to be given more thought from those who make those decisions for us," he said.

"I would always put Boundary County ahead of caribou and grizzly bear," said County Commissioner Chris Clark, referring to federal programs aimed at protecting those species.

Jail lawyer's arraignment delayed

CALDWELL (AP) — The scheduled Friday arraignment of Dean Schwartzmiller, the former state prison inmate who engineered the successful inmate suit over prison conditions, was delayed at the request of attorneys.

Officials said the arraignment would be reset in about two weeks, giving attorneys in the case time to prepare.

Canyon County Prosecutor Richard Harris announced this week that Schwartzmiller, labeled one of the "finest jailhouse lawyers" in the state prison system, would be tried again on charges of lewd and lascivious conduct with two minor boys in 1978.

Schwartzmiller won appellate court reversal of his conviction on those charges two weeks ago and his been free on $50,000 bond since then.

At the request of Harris, 3rd District Judge Edward Lodge appointed Deputy Ada County Prosecutor Jay Rosenthal to handle the case for the state.

Harris asked to step aside because prior to becoming prosecutor he considered representing Schwartzmiller in the 1978 case.

against him before deciding not to. Schwartzmiller was serving a 25-year sentence for his conviction when he masterminded the inmate lawsuit against the state Board of Corrections, charging unconstitutional conditions at the state's main prison south of Boise.

Although state officials have repeatedly claimed to have come out ahead in that suit, U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan put the prison under his scrutiny and ordered an end to overcrowding, increased security and better medical and psychiatric care.

Ryan's ruling forced the state to commit itself to a multimillion-dollar plan for a new maximum-security prison at a time when the Idaho economy has been flagging and tax receipts depressed.

Schwartzmiller, who had a previous sex-offense conviction overturned by the state Supreme Court, finally convinced the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last month that his rights were violated during the trial that sent him to prison in 1981 on the lewd and lascivious conduct charge.

Throughout his six-year battle to win his release, Schwartzmiller has maintained he was not a homosexual.

In addition to alleging bias against him during the trial, Schwartzmiller claimed he wrongly denied the opportunity to question two chief prosecution witnesses about criminal charges pending against them.

Battle against fires continues

By The Associated Press

An Army battalion was shifted from mop-up duties to the front lines of a huge Oregon forest fire Friday in the slow battle against wild blazes in the West, but only a slight chance of help from rain was forecast through the weekend.

California crews occupied by major blazes that have burned more than a half-million acres in the northern part of the state also had to pay attention to an arson fire in the south that had threatened homes.

California Gov. George Deukmejian declared a state of emergency for Colusa and Del Norte counties, bringing the number under the decree to 24 out of the state's 58 counties. California fires have caused 99 injuries and destroyed 98 structures, including 39 homes. Three firefighters have died in vehicle accidents, two blamed on dense smoke.

Altogether, 553,636 acres of California forest have burned since agencies of lightning storms began Aug. 28 and touched off 1,247 fires, the worst single series of fires in the state's history.

"It'll take at least 80 days for the timbered areas to come back and 100 years to harvest," said Bruce Bundick, a forestry official at Klamath National Forest in northern California. "For those old growth areas to return to the way they were, it'll take 300 to 400 years."

A total of 124,000 acres of Oregon forest has gone up in smoke.

Those fires plus blazes in Washington, Idaho, Montana, South Dakota, Wyoming, Utah and Arizona have charred 722,361 acres, or 1,128 square miles.

Elsewhere, a fire burned 14,000 acres of grass and forest at Hawaii Volcanoes National Park before it was contained late Thursday.

Montana firefighters had to scramble to fight a 100-acre blaze in the Kootenai National Forest. It "took a little longer to gather all the resources together to fight the blaze because nearly 4,000 Montana firefighters have been sent to other Western states," said Forest Service fire dispatcher Mark Vore in Libby.

A brush and grass fire in Arizona had blackened about 2,100 acres of the Coronado National Forest northeast of Tucson, officials said.

Firefighters working on it included inmate crews from two state prisons, crews from two Indian reservations and Forest Service personnel, said Forest Service spokeswoman Carrie Templin.

Rain clouds hung off the coast of northern California but there was only a 30 percent of light showers through Sunday at the Klamath, Trinity and Shasta national forests in northern California, said National Weather Service meteorologist Chris Fontana in Redding.

An inversion layer of warm air trapping cooler air near the ground partially lifted Friday, providing slightly clearer skies throughout most of California's Klamath River Valley.

But the lingering inversion held temperatures to the upper 40s and low 50s, far below normal. That slowed the spread of flames but forced the firefighters to breathe more smoke and carbon monoxide.

Huge fires in northern California continue to burn unchecked in the Stanislaus, Klamath, Trinity, Shasta, and Mendocino national forests.

A cluster of fires in the Klamath and the Shasta-Trinity areas were the top priorities. There were still 159 fires in the Klamath, where 131,865 acres had burned, and 71 in Shasta-Trinity, where 68,090 acres were charred.

"We need rain," said John Garland of the Forest Service in the Klamath. "That's the only way to break the pattern. There are a lot of firefighters praying for rain."

The papal visit

Jewish leaders heartened by tone of meeting with pontiff

MIAMI (AP) — Jewish leaders came away from their meeting with Pope John Paul II on Friday with praise for the pontiff's remarks, despite his failure to even mention his meeting with Austrian President Kurt Waldheim.

"It was a good morning. The symbols of friendship were strong," said Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum, director of international affairs for the American Jewish Committee.

In an hour-long meeting, Rabbi Mordecai Waxman called upon the Roman Catholic church to redouble its efforts against anti-Semitism. And he deplored "recent tendencies to obscure the fact that the Jews were the major target of Nazi genocidal policies."

The pope, in response, acknowledged that the "Shoah" — the Hebrew word for the holocaust — was a "ruthless and inhuman attempt to exterminate the Jewish people in Europe."

But he defended his predecessors, particularly Pius XII, who reigned during World War II, against accusations that they remained silent in the face of that massacre.

He said he was "convinced that history will reveal more clearly and convincingly how deeply Pius XII felt the tragedy of the Jewish people, and how hard and effectively he worked to assist them."

Henry Siegman, executive director of the American Jewish Congress, later took issue with the pope's reading of history. He said there was no evidence that Pius XII had ever specifically made public reference to the Jews as victims, and the Nazis as predators, in the Holocaust.

"That has pained us, that has grieved us and that is part of our bitter heritage from World War II," Siegman said.

The pope also said the Jewish people "have a right to a homeland, as does any civil nation," and that Palestinians have the same right.

Theodore Ellenoff, chairman of the American Jewish Committee, said most Jewish and many Israeli leaders would agree, noting that John Paul did not say that the Palestinian homeland should be in place of Israel or a danger to the Jewish state.

The pope's statement was "a metaphor of support for a human condition that has much pain and anguish. We don't see it as a political statement," Ellenoff said.

In recalling the common heritage of the Jews and Catholics, and their experiences as victims of discrimination and as immigrants to the United States, the pope sounded a "very comforting" call for a new era of relations between the two faiths, said Burton Levinson, head of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

Siegman noted that 10 years ago, the Vatican insisted that a delegation of American Jews remove all references to Israel from their public comments during a visit. The Vatican has not extended diplomatic recognition to Israel, citing disputes over Israel's borders and over the status of Jerusalem.

Mass set despite collapse

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Workers removed debris Friday from the outdoor altar site where two decorative towers collapsed in high winds, and church officials said the damage would not jeopardize plans for Pope John Paul II to celebrate Mass on Sunday.

"This is like our Good Friday, but resurrection comes and we believe in that," said a tearful Larry Stuebben, a priest who heads the Texas Papal Visit Committee. "When Sunday comes, it will be like an Easter Sunday, because there will be the sense of resurrection."

Workers at the site where gale-force winds downed the towers Thursday night dragged away several piles of twisted scaffolding with torn banners intertwined in the wreckage.

Stuebben said there appeared to be no obstacles to the Sunday Mass. "The altar is safe," he said.

But the tapestry-decorated towers will not be rebuilt, and a damaged helium-filled plastic balloon will not hover over the pope when he celebrates Mass, archdiocesan spokesman Dick Hemberger said.

Meanwhile, a priest said planners of the papal Mass were warned last week that the twin towers should have been better anchored.

"The suggestion was to shore it up more," said the Rev. David Garcia, chairman of a committee planning the papal Mass.

Garcia told reporters that an engineer, whom he declined to identify, had suggested making the 150-foot towers more secure, and that crews were trying to do so when the structures fell.

No one was injured in the collapse. Work crews cleared out moments before the collapse after a volunteer firefighter cried out that a storm was approaching, he said.

"The towers met specifications. It was just one of those freak winds that came out of nowhere," Hemberger said.

"The towers were supposed to withstand winds of 41 mph," assistant site manager Jim Smith said. "I don't know what the winds were. We are shocked by this, but this is not a total setback."

The towers fell over backward and scattered behind the stage, and did parts of about a dozen of the 14 smaller towers representing each of Texas' dioceses.

Sheriff Harlon Copeland blamed the collapse in part on a tapestry and corrugated plastic shields used as part of the stage's backdrop.

Wholesale prices hold steady during August

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Wholesale prices held steady in August, with a continued drop in food costs helping to offset rising energy prices, the government said Friday.

Economists said the report would calm fears of renewed inflation.
The Labor Department's Producer Price Index actually fell slightly from July, but the drop was insignificant after adjusting for seasonal variations.
The last time wholesale prices for finished goods did not increase was in November 1986.
"Some people would say that's no news, but no news on something like this is good news," said Dirk Van Dongen, president of the National Association of Wholesaler-Distributors. "It is the extent that our cost of goods sold stays flat, stability ripples through the system."
Similarly, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said it was "good news and is in line with our forecast that the pickup in inflation during the first half of 1987 would prove temporary."
The unchanged prices in August dropped the annual rate of wholesale price inflation for the first eight months of 1987 to 3.6 percent, down from 4.2 percent for the first seven months.

Food prices fell by 1.3 percent in August, continuing a decline of 0.6 percent in July and reversing sharp increases last spring.
Inflation at the wholesale level was also held back by a 1.8 percent decline in new-car prices as manufacturers provided dealers with earlier-than-usual incentives to clear showrooms for the 1988 models.
Energy prices rose 1.5 percent in August, the same rate of increase as in July. Gasoline prices one step below the retail level climbed 4.2 percent.
Putting aside the normally volatile food and energy categories, prices for a wide range of wholesale goods rose 0.3 percent in August, compared with a 0.2 percent increase in July.
"Excluding food and energy, inflation has been amazingly steady," said David Wyss, chief financial economist for Data Resources Inc., a forecasting firm in Lexington, Mass.

"We don't see much change in that trend," he said, adding that food prices are likely to drop a bit in response to the apparent easing of tensions in the Persian Gulf.
"Inflation is very tranquil," agreed Frank McCormick, senior economist for the Bank of America in San Francisco. He said the recent decline in the bond market was an overreaction to fears of inflation.
But Lawrence Chimrino, president of Wharton Econometrics in Philadelphia cautioned, "Don't take today's numbers at face value. One of the big pressures on inflation is coming from import prices, and this doesn't show up directly in the PPI."
The value of the dollar relative to other major currencies has fallen by close to 50 percent in two years. As the dollar falls, the price of imported goods rises and American exports become more competitive.

Despite the dollar's free fall, the nation's trade gap continued to widen in July, the Commerce Department said Friday. A 5 percent plunge in exports propelled the trade deficit to a record $16.5 billion, the fourth consecutive monthly increase.
The Producer Price Index for finished goods dropped in August to 297.2 from 297.8 in July and 288.1 in June. That means that a selection of products costing $10 in 1967 cost $29.72 last month, 6 cents less than they did in July; '91 cents more than in August 1986.
The drop in food prices was propelled by a 16.2 percent decline for vegetables, a 7.2 percent falloff in fruit prices and an 8.6 percent price drop for eggs. Bread and fish prices each fell about 4 percent. The only major food price increases were for pork, up 3.9 percent, and poultry, up 3.8 percent.

Price changes were mixed for clothing, with women's apparel falling 0.2 percent, men's wear up 0.8 percent and children's clothing up 1.1 percent.
The biggest non-energy price increases were for cosmetics, 2.9 percent, and jewelry, 2.1 percent. Home appliance prices were unchanged from July and furniture prices rose just 0.2 percent.
Raw material prices rose 0.4 percent in August, indicating the possibility that inflation might pick up later in the year. Crude oil prices were up 2.4 percent, cotton was up 2.7 percent and scrap aluminum increased 3.5 percent. However, natural gas prices were down 2.6 percent and tobacco fell 3.5 percent.
Consumer prices have been rising a little faster than wholesale prices.

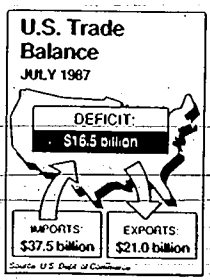

Stocks continue rally despite adverse news

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market ran up its sharpest gain in more than three weeks Friday, continuing the rally of the past two sessions despite adverse news on the trade deficit.
The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 32.69 points to 2,608.74, finishing the week with a net gain of 47.36 points.
Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 178.02 million shares, against 179.73 million in the previous session.
The Dow's gain Friday was its biggest since it rose 40.97 points on Aug. 20.
Before the market opened, the Commerce Department reported that the nation's trade deficit reached a record in July, with imports exceeding exports by $16.47 billion.
The news sent the dollar and bond prices slumping in early trading. But both began to recover quickly as the morning passed.

By late afternoon, prices of long-term Treasury bills showed gains of more than $6 for each $1,000 in face value, as compared to Thursday's close.
"Even at the outset, the stock market absorbed the trade news smoothly. Analysts noted that the market had several days to anticipate a poor trade figure, and said it appeared investors were happy just to have the report out of the way."
Eastman Kodak rose 1% to 101 1/4 in active trading. The company declared a 50 percent stock dividend, the equivalent of a 3-for-2 split, and raised its quarterly cash payout.
Other gainers among the blue chips included General Electric, up 1/2 at 81 1/4; International Business Machines, up 3/4 at 161 1/4; and Bell & Howell jumped 1 1/2 to 70 1/4.

Trade deficit widens again during July

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — The nation's trade deficit widened in July for the fourth month in a row, reaching a record $16.5 billion as imports rose and exports fell, the government reported Friday.
The Commerce Department said the July gap in merchandise trade increased 5 percent from the $15.7 billion recorded in June.
The new figures brought the trade shortfall to an annual rate of $168.7 billion for the first seven months of 1987, compared with the previous record level of $166.2 billion for all of 1986.
The July report again showed a long-awaited turn in merchandise trade accounts has yet to materialize, although the dollar has fallen more than 40 percent against other major currencies over the past two years.
A lower dollar generally means higher prices for foreign goods at home and lower prices for U.S. products abroad. But these changes have not yet brought the trade improvements many economists had expected to see long before now.
The July drop in exports was paced largely by a fall in shipments of manufactured American goods down to $13.8 billion from $14.5 billion in June.

The rise in imports, meanwhile, was due almost entirely to higher petroleum imports — up to $4.4 billion from $3.7 billion in June. Imported oil cost more in July than in June — an average price of $13.15 per barrel, compared with $12.75 the month before.
The United States retained a trade surplus in only one area in July, agricultural products, where exports surpassed imports by $535.8 million, up from the $105 million surplus in June.

The deficit with Japan fell in July, to $5.1 billion from $5.4 billion in June. But with western Europe, the deficit rose to $3.9 billion in July from $2.9 billion in June. With Canada it increased to $645 million in July from $551 million in June.
Friday's report triggered a fresh fall of the dollar-on-foreign-exchange markets.
"Terrible is the only word for the July trade deficit," said Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., a leading congressional voice on trade issues. And even U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter, the official, conceded the new figures were "a disappointment."
U.S. exports, which had grown in four of the six previous months, slipped 5 percent to $21 billion in July, the report said. Imports increased 2 percent to $37.5 billion, largely because of the price of foreign petroleum.

Third of job applicants lie about experience, study shows

The Associated Press
NEW YORK — A recent study found that a third of job applicants lied about their experience, and nine out of ten applicants may cost industry $30 million a year, researchers say.
When a questionnaire asked applicants if they had used or supervised somebody else using a fictitious piece of equipment, 76 of 221 applicants said they had, said Ron Pannone, supervisor of personnel research for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey.
Other studies of job applicants have found faking by up to 67 percent, said Pannone. Responses to biographical questionnaires can be so easily faked that the port authority does not use such forms in hiring, he said.
He and other researchers discussed lying by job applicants this past week at the annual meeting of the American Psychological Association.
"One way to combat falsification is to ask questions for which the correct answer is not obvious, Pannone said.
Such "empirically based" questionnaires are developed by extensive testing that finds correlations between a desired characteristic and answers to questions that seem unrelated. Those questions can then be used as a index for measuring the characteristic, without giving away the right answer.
Giving tests by computer could help circumvent another falsification problem: cheating by recruiters who want to help job applicants score high on biographical questionnaires, said psychologist Terry Mitchell, associate scientist in agent selection services at the Life Insurance Marketing and Research Association in Farmington, Conn.
Such practices may cost the life insurance industry $30 million a year or more, through investment in people hired through falsification who later fail on the job, he said.

A computer program designed to fight recruiter cheating is now being tested, said Mitchell.
The insurance association provides a biographical questionnaire used in hiring life insurance agents that is designed to predict success. About 75 percent of life insurance agents in the United States and Canada have filled out some form of it, Mitchell said.
Lying by applicants is usually not a problem with such empirically based questionnaires, and cheating by life insurance industry recruiters appears to be done by only a small but highly motivated group, he said.
Recruiters in any industry may cheat to get an applicant hired if they feel pressured by quotas and frustrated that applicants they favor are not passing such a test, Mitchell said.
Recruiters may catch an applicant on how to answer some questions, he said. To discover helpful answers on the insurance association's test, some recruiters have systematically filled out and submitted bogus answers to see how various answers affected the score, he said.
Other tricks include having "ringers" take the test in place of the applicant, copying from previous answer sheets that got high scores, or letting an applicant take the test repeatedly until he passes.
But a computer can frustrate copying from previous sheets by scrambling the order of questions or asking new questions based on answers to previous ones, Mitchell said.
It may also detect falsification if an applicant takes too long or too brief a time to answer a question.
To detect use of ringers, a computer might measure the time intervals between key strokes as a person types. The pattern of such intervals has been shown to differ between people, Mitchell said.

Don't forget to figure out 'standing' expenses for car

As a typical buyer of a new car in these, the top auto promotion months of the year, you carefully checked your auto's "running" expenses before you selected your model.
Gas and oil — these are the most obvious of your car expenses. They hit you every time you slide behind the wheel and are accepted topics of conversation with your fellow commuters at social gatherings.
The "running" costs for a typical driver amount to about 25 percent of the estimated annual $4,848 cost of running and operating a compact car — far from the biggest outlays.
The biggest outlays are for your "standing" expenses: depreciation, insurance, license, taxes, fees and the huge item of interest, both paid and lost. This accounts for the overwhelming balance of 75 percent of the total charges of your car, according to Hertz Corporation statistics. The "lost" interest is the money you would have earned if you had merely left your funds in a savings account.
Don't make the mistake of thinking you can recoup that interest "lost" on a cash purchase or down payment simply by making monthly "payments" into your savings account. That's what a U.S. government "how to" guide to car cost calculations actually advised. The U.S. government has now conceded the error and has withdrawn the "how to" from circulation; it "forgot" that if you hadn't withdrawn the cash you'd be getting interest on it and on your monthly "payments," too.
What's more, don't ignore your down payment just because it came in the form of the dealer's allowance to you for the trade-in value of your old car. That trade-in affects the depreciation expenses for your old car, not the new one. And, of course, you could have sold that old car, deposited the proceeds in your savings account and earned interest on it.

Both increases in purchase prices and in operating outlays outdistance the 162 percent rise in the overall consumer price index in the same 14-year period from 1972 to 1986. Most of the current-year increase in outlays stems from the rise in vehicle sticker prices, up 6.2 percent last year and from the category of insurance, license and fees, up 11.3 percent.
In fact, says Hertz, purchase price increases are the single most important element in the rise of overall car expenses.
Purchase price influences interest costs, insurance premiums, license, fees, taxes and the key factor of depreciation: the difference between what you pay for a car and what you get for it later when you trade it in.
The lease-and-purchase company's estimates include all these elements plus maintenance and repair expenses and gasoline, oil and other service station charges. True expenses are probably even higher than that.

$4,848 annually for a compact because the Hertz calculations exclude parking and tolls and such items as washing, polishing and any traffic fines.
Although both gasoline prices and car loan interest rates have plunged during the past two years, auto ownership and operating costs have continued to edge up — to 48 cents a mile in 1986 from 47.64 in 1985 and 46.67 in '84.
These are the latest figures for typical new cars — compact-sized models driven a normal 10,000 miles a year and kept for a usual five years. In 1987, expenses are headed up again — probably more than the 2 percent they increased in '86 and the 4 percent they rose in '85. This is, however, well below the double-digit increases of the 1970s and early 1980s.
With auto prices heading over higher, especially with the latest crises in the Persian Gulf that could impact the price of gas and oil, what should you do to keep your auto transportation costs under control?
● Get your mileage.
● Keep your car as long as possible. The longer you keep a car, the less it costs, because the big factor of depreciation is greater in earlier years, less later on.
● Pick the smallest, most fuel-efficient model that meets your needs to save on gas.
● Beyond the bigger models of those "hot" new "consumer trucks" so many of you are buying and, by doing so, reduce depreciation cost.
Sylvia Porter writes on matters of interest to consumers.

American industrialist joins Chinese in coal mine project

The Associated Press
ANTAIBO, China (AP) — Chinese officials and Armand Hammer, the American industrialist who has dealt with the Communist world since Lenin's day, opened a coal mine Thursday that is the largest joint U.S.-Chinese project to date.
Thousands of Chinese workers and their families attended the ceremony at the Antaibo coal mine in northern Shanxi province, China's coal heartland.
Hammer's Occidental Petroleum Corp., based in Los Angeles, has invested $200 million in the $650 million project to develop the biggest and most modern open-pit coal mine in China.
Other U.S. companies, cautious about making such large investments in China, are watching the venture closely.

"Of all the things I've done, I'm perhaps proudest of this achievement here in China," said Hammer, 89. "I think that I have done more for the open-door policy of Deng Xiaoping can work successfully."
Deng, the top Chinese leader, visited the United States in 1979 and invited Hammer to invest in China. Within months, the industrialist flew to Peking to discuss both the mine project and oil exploration.
The American-made his fortune in the 1920s mining Soviet asbestos under a deal worked out with Vladimir I. Lenin, the first Soviet leader, and has done business with the Kremlin regularly since.
Antaibo, expected to produce 15 million tons of anthracite coal a year, is in an arid valley about 230 miles southwest of Beijing.

Mud-brick homes of peasants dot the landscape.
Hammer brought several dozen guests to the ceremony, including Abigail Van Buren, who writes the "Dear Abby" syndicated advice column.
As they watched from a vantage point more than 300 feet above the mine, a section of the pit was blasted out by nearly 100 tons of explosives.
Shortly afterward, Vice Premier Li Peng pushed a button to begin automatic loading of the first railroad car from seven square miles.
Shanxi is China's main coal-producing region. Both underground and open-pit mines operate near Antaibo, whose development runs a rough course.

Plummeting coal prices in the early 1980s caused the other American partner, Peter Kiewit Sons of Omaha, Neb., to withdraw. The Bank of China provided replacement financing.
Coal now sells for about $20 a ton on world markets, down from more than $50 in 1979.
At a news conference in a new hotel near the mine, Hammer said his acquaintance with Deng had not meant special treatment for Occidental.
"We had all the difficulties one would expect," he said. "Many people said I would fail. They said I was attacking the impossible, but it worked. You saw it today."
Although the current coal market is the worst he's ever seen, Hammer said, he called it a "temporary condition." He said Occidental plans to discuss the possibility of two more open-pit joint ventures near Antaibo.

"We're using up oil faster than we can find it. The only practical alternative we have for heating is coal," Hammer said, predicting that coal prices will double in five years and quadruple in 10.
China's minister of coal mining, Yu Honggen, said contracts to buy Antaibo coal had been signed with companies in Hong Kong, Japan, Finland and Southeast Asia. He would not discuss prices.
Engineers from Hammer's company will direct mine operations for the first 10 years, their Chinese partners for the next 10 and Occidental for the last seven years the mine is expected to produce coal.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"Hope is brightest when it dwains from tears." - Sir Walter Scott.

When today's South discovered the foul trump break, he feared the worst. In a few seconds the dawn broke and lit a path to the winning solution.

After the defense had cashed three diamond winners for the club, it was won by dummy's queen. South was about to claim the rest when East discarded a club on a low trump lead from dummy.

Here's how Jim Musumeci of Athens, Ga., neutralized West's threatening trump holding.

WEST: ♠ 10 9 6 3 2, ♠ 8 4, ♠ K Q 10, ♠ J 4 2, ♠ A K 5, ♠ J 3 7 3, ♠ 9 6 2, ♠ A K 5.

ANSWER: Two diamonds. Not much of a suit, but bid it anyway. It keeps the bidding at a manageable level while you describe your distribution.

Bengals open tonight with frosh QB

By The Associated Press and The Times-News

Idaho State University, trying to rebound from a 2-9 season, will open the 1987 season with a new quarterback.

Jason Whitmer, a redshirt freshman from suburban Denver, is listed as the starter when the Bengals open their season tonight in Pocatello against Texas A&T.

ISU's returning starter at quarterback, Gino Mariani, reinjured his shoulder this fall after playing most of last year with a shoulder separation.

Bengal Coach Jim Koetter said, however, that the job is still open to Mariani on a week-by-week basis, "if Jason Whitmer keeps progressing and if Gino Mariani can throw the types of passes we want to throw in the game."

Mariani completed 207 of 415 passes last year for 2,599 yards, 19 touchdowns and 18 interceptions last season. He also started part of his sophomore season and has been the Bengals' punter for three seasons.

"The key is that we come out to execute our offense with consistency," said Koetter. "We can't have assignment breakdowns early in the game. How the offensive line plays will determine how well we move the ball. We have lots of big-play players in our offense."

Several questions mark about key personnel in the Big Sky Conference were erased last Saturday night.

One looming doubt was how Boise State University's new head coach Skip Hall could produce following the Broncos' losing record last fall. Hall and his team were up to the test as they battered Del-ware State, ranked 10th in the preseason NCAA Division I-AA poll, 34-13.

"The Broncos' stellar showing in their opening game revolved around tailback Chris Jackson who scored three touchdowns, including a 77-yard burst in the early second half, tying the school record for the longest run from scrimmage."

"That's how tough this offense is," Boise State quarterback Vince Alcaldie said. "I give Chris the ball on a simple dive play and he goes 80 yards - it can't be any easier than that."

Alcaldie, relegated to a second team during the dark days last fall, hit 19 of 27 passes for 214 yards. The Hornets rebounded to a 21-13 margin on a 72-yard bomb from quarterback John Lane to fullback

John Stone in the third quarter. But Jackson pulled out his third touchdown and kicker P.K. Wiggins hit two fieldgoals to dispel any thoughts of a comeback. Wiggins supplied 10 points to the Broncos effort for the game.

Boise State has an excellent chance to fine-tune its machinery with another non-conference battle tonight against Cal-State Northridge and a weekend off before taking on Weber State.

Another matter for speculation was how successfully Idaho quarterback John Friesz could guide the No. 2-ranked Vandals in their opening match against Mankato State of Minnesota. Friesz assumed the head quarterback spot with ease as Idaho dominated the Mavericks 31-17.

"He (Friesz) was in control," junior flanker John Juke said. Juke manipulated the defense himself as he caught seven passes for 131 yards.

Besides Friesz' admirable 338 yards passing, the Vandals sported a strong running game, with back Bruce Harris producing 88 yards rushing and two touchdowns.

Idaho takes on Central Michigan tonight and Portland State before traveling to Flagstaff against the Lumberjacks.

Perhaps the biggest issue to be resolved is how much damage Nevada-Reno will wreak on the rest of the Big Sky this year. While the Wolf Pack was idle on Saturday, the first part of that answer will come

T.F. rolls over Minico 35-0 for first victory

By LARRY HOVEY Times-News writer

RUPERT - Twin Falls' reconstituted line got the offense going and the defense threw a shutout Friday night when the Bruins reached out of an O-2 season to nail the Minico Spartans 35-0 in a Gem-State Conference high school football game.

Bruin junior running back Steve McLaughlin romped for 134 yards in 23 plays and senior quarterback Joel Jund hit 10 of 18 pass attempts - four each to Shane Newton and Nick Brunkow - as the Bruin skill people took advantage of the new offensive line to hit the Spartans right where they live - the defense.

Twin Falls scored early on a blocked punt, added another off a drive in the first half to seize control.

After that it was a matter of confidence building and nothing went wrong for Twin Falls the rest of the night.

All of which came as a major relief to Bruin Coach Jon Jund, who noted "we knew if we didn't get this one, we were in trouble."

Minico Coach Ron Jones was at a loss to explain the what happened.

"I believe we were overconfident at the outset," he said. "All I can say is that Twin Falls came here to play football tonight and we didn't. We gave up that quick touchdown and that hurt but at halftime I still believed we could do it. Obviously we couldn't.

There were definite major plays for the Bruins in the early going. The biggest came when Tony Hughes broke through to block Minico's first punt of the night, the ball rebounding into the end zone where Kip Teske fell on it. Ted Smack added the first of three kicking conversions.

Twin Falls then rolled 45 yards on its next possession as McLaughlin scored the first of three straight touchdowns. And then came perhaps the major plays.

Canadian hands steal show in 3rd round at Filer rodeo

By BRAD BRELAND Times-News writer

FILER - It was a night that some cowboys call a career at the third performance of the Twin Falls County Fair and Rodeo Friday night.

Canadian cowboy Tony Currin had both the best times in the calf roping and was runnerup in the steer wrestling.

Currin, who was traveling with his brothers, Mike and Ron, took the calf roping lead away from Mike getting the best time of the evening.

D.R. Daniels led early in the event with a time of 20.44 seconds, but Mike Currin took the lead from him clocking an 11.21. Tony Currin, the only other hand-getting a time in the event, won the battle with a 10.83.

Currin was virtually unchallenged in the steer wrestling pacing the group of cowboys in the event with a 6.80. That was with Mike Roy, one of the two Roy brothers in the event, went after his steer.

The time of 6.47 gave him the fastest of the evening, but overall, he trails Alan Stutzman of Twin Falls who clocked a 6.17 on Thursday.

The bareback riding competition had one of the closest contests of the night. Joy Kirkland had a ride of 75 setting the pace, but Colin Murnion from Jordan, Mont., took the evening's best score with a 77 aboard Glancey.

The saddle bronc event was as equally exciting as the three top cowboys in the event had scores of 75, 74 and 73.

John Smith, another Canadian, had the top score followed closely by Dave Appleton and Jack Nystrom. The team roping event came down to a Filer and Arizona pair of cowboys for the top time of the night.

The Arizona team came out on top, roping their steer clean in 7.66. Filer hands, Ron and Eric Kasel, took the runner-up spot for the evening in 9.20.

Buddy Guiden's ride of 77 in the bull riding event was good enough for the top score of the night, but overall, he sits in second place after Wacey Cathey's ride of 81 Thursday night.

Top cowgirl Charmayne James remained the only rider to eclipse the 17 second mark in the rodeo.

Katrina Akers, a Texas cowgirl, had the fastest time of the evening with a 17.54 followed closely by Carla Sparks with a 17.76.

Gee leads No. 5 Hornets to 22-6 romp over No. 4 Huskies

By RON GATES Times-News writer

OAKLEY - Oakley running back J.D. Gee romped for 95 yards and a touchdown to lead the fifth-ranked Hornets past fourth-ranked Hansen 22-6 in a Magic Valley Conference opener for both teams.

Hansen, which came into it with a 2-0 record and ranked fourth in the latest Associated Press poll, fell behind the Hornets for good five minutes into the second quarter.

Oakley defensive back Jeff Nelson picked off a pass and returned it to the Hansen eight-yard line. Two plays later, quarterback Laine Martin plunged four yards to score.

The Huskies were unable to capitalize in a first-quarter played almost entirely inside the Oakley 40-yard line. Hansen had one drive end on downs at the 11 and another on a fumble at the Hornet 13.

"Our offensive line didn't want to block in the first half," said Oakley assistant Neal Wyatt. "But they did a much better job after halftime."

Hansen lost 10 yards on three plays to open the second half and the intimidating rush of tackles Joe Schaeffer and John Wells forced a center snap to go out of the end zone for a safety. The resulting free kick covered just 28 yards and the second Hansen miscue in a 30-second span cost the visitors seven more points.

Gee, a 5-foot, 10-inch, 165-pound senior, saw his best day in the end zone for a 48-yard touchdown on the first play after the kick. This time Dan VanTassel's kick was good.

Hansen halfback Kyle Allen, whose 101-yard rushing on 17 carries accounted for most of the Husky offense, topped Gee's effort with a twisting 61-yard run off tackle for his team's only score.

Nelson, whose interception set up the first Hornet TD, scored the winner on a 14-yard run 1:45 from the end.

"That's a good football team," added Wyatt, "but the young Huskies' Gee's running is what set up Nelson and VanTassel. They had a linebacker keying on him and he was overplayed enough on misdirection plays to free up the others."

"Not to take anything away from Oakley, I thought they had one legitimate drive and we handed them three scores," said a disappointed Hansen Coach Ray Berryhill. "You can't make mistakes against a team like Oakley."

The loss dropped Hansen to 2-1 for the season, while Oakley improved to 3-0.

Richfield rallies thrice to top Bulldogs, 22-18

By The Times-News

RICHFIELD - Laine King batted a Mike Steidley pass out of the hands of Rockland end Ruben Figueroa at the 8-yard line with no time left Friday to preserve top-ranked Richfield's 22-18 victory over the third-ranked Bulldogs in the Sawtooth Conference football opener for both teams.

A few minutes earlier, King had led in a 39-yard pass from Richfield quarterback Barry Ward that set up the Tigers' third come-from-behind touchdown of the game. King beat Figueroa, the Bulldogs' defensive back, on that play as well.

The victory improved Richfield's season record to 2-0-1 and gave the Tigers a leg up on their strongest opponent for the conference championship. Rockland, ranked third in the latest Associated Press eight-man football poll, is now 2-1.

Richfield had to erase a 6-0 first-half deficit and then twice fell behind in the second half. The Tigers came back to tie the game at 12 on Ray Stein's 60-yard run from scrimmage in the fourth quarter and take the lead on Ward's conversion pass to King. Rockland got the lead back 18-14 on a 70-yard pass from Mike Steidley to Brad Fillmore with 7:09 left in the game.

Rockland appeared to have the game won when it forced Richfield to give the ball up on downs on the Bulldogs' 11-yard line. But a Figueroa fumble recovered by Richfield's Spencer King with 1:19 left set up the final drive. Ward scored the winning TD with 58 seconds left and added a conversion pass to Laine King.

Sun Valley announces increases in prices

By BARBARA NEWBERT Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY - The price of a one-day lift ticket for adults to ski Bald Mountain has gone up to $30, a $1 increase over last winter's fares.

Sun Valley Co. officials announced this week the new price schedule for the 1987-88 winter season. One third of the lift passes will see a slight increase this year, with the remaining 21 of 32 categories receiving no increase at all.

"We forecast our ski lift pricing in anticipation of our operations in operations costs next season so we are passing this on to the consumer," said Sun Valley Co. general manager Wally Huffman.

Sun Valley Co. has made no major improvements to the lift or mountain facilities this year. A major remodeling was done to the Sun Valley Lodge Terrace and kitchen facilities at the lodge, however.

The Season ID Card and the Idaho Card for weekend users remains unchanged at $125 and $35 respectively. However, rates for daily passes under these programs have increased.

With the Idaho Card, users will now pay $17 per day for Bald Mountain rather than $16 charged last winter. Rates on Dollar Mountain remain at $13 per day with the card.

As in past years, Sun Valley Co. has outlets available in the Twin Falls and Boise areas to purchase various discount passes prior to the ski season. The exact dates and places have yet to be established, but Idaho Card passes should be available sometime in November.

Glenns Ferry upends Kimberly's crew, 14-6

By The Times-News

KIMBERLY - Senior tailback Jon Hartway rushed for 117 yards and three touchdowns as Glenns Ferry upended Kimberly 14-6 Friday night to lead Glenns Ferry to a 14-6 Canyon Conference victory over Kimberly in the league opener for both teams.

Quarterback Duncan Farris' 11-yard touchdown run in the second quarter snapped the Bulldogs' string of defensive scoreless quarters at nine and left Kimberly at 2-1 for the season, the same record as the Pilots.

A swarming Glenns Ferry defense limited Kimberly to 145 yards total offense, effectively containing the Bulldogs' versatile senior quarterback Matt McKinlay with its pass rush.

Kimberly had scored first when Sid Morris capped a six-play, 37-yard drive with a 1-yard run in the first quarter. The PAT attempt failed, however, and after Farris scored Glenns Ferry's first touchdown, Hartway's kick gave the Pilots a 7-6 lead.

Hurtado scored the Pilots' second touchdown when he covered an errant center snap in the end zone with 3:41 remaining in the third quarter. Hartway's conversion kick made it 14-6.

Glenns Ferry, which began the season two weeks ago with an 18-0 loss to Rimrock, has given up just two touchdowns in its last two games, including a 33-7 victory over Shoshone last week.

NL: Cards win Round 1 in extra innings

NEW YORK (AP) — If St. Louis winds up winning the National League East in a close race with the New York Mets, Terry Pendleton and the Cardinals won't remember Friday night's victory as the one that sent them on their way.

The Cardinals, held to one hit through 4½ innings, struck for three runs in the ninth and then beat the Mets 6-4 in the 10th Friday night.

"This will wake us up," said Pendleton, whose two-run homer capped the two-out rally in the ninth. "We never thought we were dead."

Instead, St. Louis took the Mets' bases away and insured it will leave New York still in first place. By winning the opener of three-game series in front of 51,795 fans, the Cardinals increased their lead to 2½ games and ended a five-game losing streak to the Mets.

Moreover, St. Louis won without Jack Clark, who is nursing an injured ankle. But Pendleton filled the slugger's role, and his 11th home run of the season off Roger McDowell triggered a celebration by his teammates near home plate.

"I thought it was a good sinker," McDowell said. "This is definitely a feeling that we didn't want to have at this point."

Cincinnati 4 San Francisco 3

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dave Parker and Dave Concepcion each had two-run doubles Friday night as the Cincinnati Reds beat San Francisco 4-3 in the opener of an important three-game series with the National League West Division-leading Giants.

Left-hander Dennis Rasmussen, 21, scattered five hits over six innings to help the second-place Reds put within four games of San Francisco. The two teams will play each other four more times in their final 21 games.

It was the first time the teams had met since the Giants swept a four-game series in Candlestick Park in August to move within a game of the then-division-leading Reds, who eventually fell out of first place Aug. 19.

Giants second baseman Chris Speier hit Rasmussen's third pitch of the game over the left-field wall for his 11th homer. But Cincinnati quickly wiped out the deficit against left-hander Dave Dravecky, 9-10, who had won his last four decisions.

Concepcion doubled with one out in the bottom of the first. Tracy Jones reached on an infield single and both runners scored on Parker's double to the wall in left-center.

San Diego 11 Houston 0

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Stan Jefferson went 4-for-5, driving in four runs, and Eric Show pitched a four-hitter for his third shutout of the year as the San Diego Padres battered the Houston Astros 11-0 Friday night.

The Padres jumped on Astros starter Mike Scott, 15-11, for seven runs in the first two innings. Scott allowed six hits, walked five and did not record a strikeout as he lost to the Padres for the third time in five starts this year.

San Diego has beaten the Astros 10 times in 14 meetings.

Chicago 8 Montreal 4

CHICAGO (AP) — Keith Moreland's two-run home run and solo homers by Leon Durham and Ryne Sandberg led rookie Les Lancaster and the Chicago Cubs to an 8-4 victory Friday, snapping the Montreal Expos' five-game winning streak.

The loss dropped the third-place

Expos to 2½ games back pending the outcome of Friday night's game between first-place St. Louis and the runner-up New York Mets.

Pittsburgh 4 Philadelphia 2

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — R.J. Reynolds and Bobby Bonilla hit solo home runs as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 4-2 Friday night.

Doug Drake, 8-11, gave up four hits, but only one — a line single to right field by Mike Schmidt in the second inning — until the eighth.

Los Angeles 5 Atlanta 2

ATLANTA (AP) — Fernando Valenzuela pitched a four-hitter and Mike Marshall keyed a three-run sixth inning with a two-run single as the Los Angeles Dodgers downed the Atlanta Braves 5-2.

Valenzuela 12-13, had a shutout until Atlanta rookie Jeff Blauser hit a two-run homer in the seventh. Valenzuela struck out six and walked four.

Boston 9 Baltimore 3

BOSTON (AP) — Rookie Todd Beuzenberg's third home run in four games touched off a four-run Boston rally in the fourth inning, leading the Red Sox to a 9-3 victory over the struggling Baltimore Orioles.

Beuzenberg, who had three hits in the game, led the score 3-3 with his first deep into the right field stands as the Red Sox came from behind for their fourth straight win.

Jeff Sellers, 7-7, allowed eight hits before leaving in the ninth as the Red Sox handed the Orioles their first straight loss. Calvin Schiraldi finished up.

Beuzenberg's homer, his fourth of the season, came off losing Baltimore starter John Habyan, 4-5. Spike Owen then singled, John Marzano was hit by a pitch, and Ellis Burks beat out a bunt single to lead the bases.

Marty Barrett singled across the winning run and reliever Mike Kinnebrew walked Wade Boggs, giving another score. Mike Greenwell's sacrifice fly produced the fourth run of the inning for a 6-3 Boston lead.

Jerome 32, Am. Falls 14

AMERICAN FALLS — The American Falls Beavers gave the top-ranked Jerome Tigers a scare Friday night in a nonconference high school football game.

The top-ranked Tigers, trailing 14-11 at half, outscored the Beavers 22-0 in the second half and breezed to a 32-14 non-conference encounter.

American Falls quarterback Matt Nelson had the hot hand in the first half hitting on 10 of 19 passes for 149 yards.

Jerome's defense cooled off the Beavers' attack stopping the running game cold. At the end of the contest, American Falls had minus 24 yards on the ground.

Joe Oatler keyed the Jerome comeback rushing for a pair of touchdowns in the second half.

North Gem 34, Camas County 22

FAIRFIELD — Fifth-ranked North Gem rolled up a 28-16 halftime advantage and held off Camas County in the second half for a 34-22 victory in the Sawtooth Conference high school football opener for both teams.

Keith Greenwood scored two touchdowns to pace the North Gem attack, while Camas County had two touchdowns from Zane Peters and two from Andy Frostenson.

The Trojans rolled up an 18-0 halftime lead. Hagerman's score came late in the game.

For the game, Burley had 341 yards total offense, including 85 yards rushing by King and 86 yards by Mike Russell. Rodriguez completed 9 of 16 passes for 172 yards.

Buhl tops Trojans 40-0 in non-league matchup

Castleford 27; Shoshone 2

WENDELL — Eric Beem ran for three touchdowns and the Buhl Indians dominated throughout in planning a 40-0 white-washing of the Wendell Trojans Friday night in a nonconference high school football game.

So impressive were the Indians, however, that Wendell Coach Shawn Corrigan said "Actually, I felt we played pretty well. We held them inside the 20 four times in the first half. But they're a very good football team and we just couldn't hold them out all night."

Buhl broke on the scoring in the first quarter when it recovered a blocked punt in the end zone. Joe Ramos booted the first of four conversions.

Beem took over for two touchdowns in the second quarter, scoring from the three and 45-yard lines before a 20-yard pass from Casey Boyer to Don Conrad made it 28-0 at intermission.

Beem scored another drive with a two-yard drive in the third quarter and Brad Armitage would it up with a 30-yard scamper in the fourth. The last two kicks failed.

The win was the first football victory by Castleford over Shoshone in at least 20 years.

The Indians took a 2-0 lead on a second-quarter safety, but the Wolves rebounded in the third quarter on a 65-yard run by Ruiter. The conversion attempt failed, but the Wolves tallied again on a 20-yard pass from Ed Hildeson to Shane Wiggin. Harold Goodwin's kick made it 13-0.

Castleford scored twice in the fourth quarter, once on a 27-yard interception return by Mike Dorow and again on a 4-yard run by Ramos.

AL: Twins thump Indians 13-10 in OT

CLEVELAND (AP) — Dan Gladden, the 18th and last hitter used by Minnesota Manager Tom Kelly, responded with a three-run homer just inside the left-field foul pole Friday night as the Twins overcame an early 7-1 deficit to beat the Cleveland Indians 13-10.

"I was out of bodies," Kelly said. "I didn't have anybody else. I was getting ready for (pitcher Steve Carlton to pitch him).

Gladden's homer was the 20th hit for the Twins, who started the night with a 2½-game lead over second-place Oakland in the American League West.

Gladden had entered the game as a pinch-hitter in the 10th inning and broke his bat on a groundout to first. "I came back and used a different model bat, and that was the story," Gladden said.

Gladden has been bothered by a hamstring injury the past two weeks and has been playing sparingly as a result.

"It's nice to be able to contribute to the cause. I knew I might have a chance to go in."

The homer came on a 1-0 pitch from Don Gordon, 0-3, Cleveland's fifth pitcher.

Tim Lauer, whose two-run pinch single had tied the game in the ninth, hit a one-out single off Gordon in the 11th. Second baseman Tommy Hinz then threw wildly to second on Chris Piltz's ground ball, and one out later, Gladden hit his sixth home run.

"You can't give a good club four outs. We should have won the ballgame," said Cleveland Manager Doc Edwards. "With a 7-1 lead, you should put the game away."

Twins' second baseman Chris Speier hit Rasmussen's third pitch of the game over the left-field wall for his 11th homer. But Cincinnati quickly wiped out the deficit against left-hander Dave Dravecky, 9-10, who had won his last four decisions.

Instead, St. Louis took the Mets' bases away and insured it will leave New York still in first place. By winning the opener of three-game series in front of 51,795 fans, the Cardinals increased their lead to 2½ games and ended a five-game losing streak to the Mets.

Moreover, St. Louis won without Jack Clark, who is nursing an injured ankle. But Pendleton filled the slugger's role, and his 11th home run of the season off Roger McDowell triggered a celebration by his teammates near home plate.

"I thought it was a good sinker," McDowell said. "This is definitely a feeling that we didn't want to have at this point."

Irish, Michigan meet in early test of strength

By HERSHEL NISSENSON
The Associated Press

College football

Having disposed of their season-opening games with ease, top-rated Oklahoma and runner-up Nebraska face more formidable opposition on a Saturday that also includes a meeting between Notre Dame and Michigan, and the two winningest teams in college football history.

It's time to play a team like this and not get where we are," Oklahoma Coach Barry Swenson says of the visit by North Carolina on the heels of the Sooners' 69-14 rout of North Texas State last Saturday. "We have to play an entire football team for an entire game."

Meanwhile, UCLA Coach Terry Donahue is anxious to see how his third-ranked Bruins will do when they visit Nebraska.

"I'm kind of looking forward to our team playing a team like Nebraska because it will be a good yardstick to see where we're at," says Donahue, who is so excited about facing the Cornhuskers that he even ended a sentence with a preposition.

Because of his low-key style, it is hard to tell whether Nebraska Coach "Calm Tom" Osborne is excited about facing the Bruins. However, he does venture that "this is the most talented UCLA team we've played since I've been the coach here."

That may not mean much since Osborne's three previous encounters with the Bruins have been lopsided in Nebraska's favor - 40-13, 42-10 and 42-3.

Friday's clash will mark the first time that two of the top three teams in the Associated Press poll have played in Lincoln, and Osborne says the game "certainly would have to be up in there" among the most important nonconference games in Nebraska history.

In other games pairing members of the Top Twenty, No. 16 Notre Dame visits ninth-ranked Michigan and No. 11 Penn State, the defending national champion, enters taino No. 19 Alabama under the lights.

Elsewhere, fourth-ranked Auburn plays host to Kansas in night game, No. 5 Ohio State is at home against West Virginia, No. 6 LSU entertains Fullerton State at night, eighth-ranked Florida State visits East Carolina for a night game and No. 10 Clemson is at Virginia Tech. Seventh-ranked Miami is idle.

In the Second Ten, 12th-ranked Washington entertains Purdue, No. 13 Arkansas meets Mississippi in Jacksonville, No. 14 Tennessee visits Mississippi State, No. 15 Arizona State is at Illinois at night, North Carolina State at No. 18 Pitt at night and Oregon State at No. 20 Georgia. Michigan State, No. 17 team, is not scheduled.

Oklahoma is 14-0 against Atlantic Coast Conference teams, including a 41-7 romp over North Carolina in 1980 when the Lawrences Taylor-led Tar Heels were 7-0 and ranked No. 6 in the nation.

"They are better than the team we played in 1980," says Carolina

Coach Dick Crum, who not only saw his team embarrassed in its only setback that year but, after being addressed by the wrong name several times, had to inform Switzer that he was Dick Crum, the North Carolina football coach, not Danny Crum, the Louisville basketball coach.

"We feel good about going out there to play them. It's a challenge. I know we are the underdog, but so what. Someone has to be the underdog."

Donahue says UCLA needs a balanced attack to beat Nebraska. "What you have when you play a team like Nebraska, they shut down your running game and make you throw," he says. "When you get into a throwing game, they come after you. They get you coming and going and you can't survive."

Donahue also is concerned that "when you play Nebraska, you play smashball." Translated, that means "primarily an emphasis on the running game, making it real physical."

It promises to be very physical in Ann Arbor when Notre Dame and Michigan square off before the 73rd consecutive 100,000-plus crowd in Michigan Stadium.

Michigan's 676 victories are the most among major colleges, with Notre Dame second at 651. However, Notre Dame's winning percentage of .765 is tops, with Michigan second at .742.

The Irish were 6-6 last season in Coach Lou Holtz's debut and the fact that they lost five games by a total of 14 points - including a 24-23 loss to Michigan, which scored two touchdowns six seconds apart in the third period - isn't consoling at all.

"What's important to this team is that we're not going to be satisfied with just playing well or coming close," Holtz says. "This is the 100th anniversary of football at Notre Dame and Notre Dame has a great reputation because of its commitment to excellence."

But a commitment to excellence doesn't mean coming close. "Commitment to excellence means being successful."

Terry Andrysiak, Notre Dame's new quarterback, will try to get the ball as often as possible to All-American wide receiver Tim Brown, who also plays some at running back and returns kicks. Michigan has an offensive sparkplug in tailback James Morris, who has rushed for 2,690 yards in three seasons and earned 1,172 to overtake Butch Woolfolk at the top of the "Wolverines" list.

En route to the 1986 national championship, Penn State "embarrassed" a previously unbeaten Alabama team 23-3 last year in Tuscaloosa.

"This is not a 'grudge' match," says Alabama Coach Bill Curry, who replaced Ray Parkins this year and won his opener 38-8 against Southern Mississippi. "All I've ever heard from the players is that they got whipped and were embarrassed and want to avoid a repeat performance."

Cornback Gene Jelks says, "The thing I remember about the game up there two years ago (Penn State won 15-17) is that Penn State really controlled the game. And last year, down here, they controlled the game again. So we have to be prepared if we want to change things around."

Briefly in Sports

Johnson leads Portland LPGA

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - Chris Johnson sank birdie putts on four of the first six holes en route to a 5-under-par 67 Friday and a one-stroke lead after the first round of the $225,000 Cellular One-Ping Golf Championship.

Jan Stephenson, seeking her first LPGA victory since breaking three ribs in an auto accident four months ago, was tied with Patti Rizzo for second at 4-under-par 68.

Jane Geddes, Sherri Turner, Cindy Hill and Kim Shipman were two shots back at 3-under-par 69.

Johnson, 29, opened her round with a 40-foot birdie putt and was five under through 10 holes on the par-72, 6,233-yard Columbia-Eggewater Country Club course.

The former University of Arizona star, who lives in Tucson, struggled with bogeys on the par-4 11th and par-6 12th holes. But she sank a 12-foot birdie putt on the 15th and a 30-footer on the 16th to regain the lead for good.

Stieb wants out of Toronto

TORONTO (AP) - Dave Stieb may seek "divorce" from the Toronto Blue Jays after being dropped from the starting pitching rotation for the American League East pennant drive, his agent said.

To tell a starting pitcher of Dave Stieb's stature to go to the bullpen is as much as telling him to go home," Bob Lamonte said. "Taken in that light, we could be talking about a divorce here."

Stieb was informed Thursday by Manager Jimmy Williams he would not be among four starters during the pennant drive.

Stieb, Toronto's second winningest pitcher at 13-8 this season, is 0-3 in his last four starts and was knocked out in less than three innings in his last two outings.

AL forms expansion committee

DENVER (AP) - The American League has formed an expansion committee, its first step toward adding teams in more than a decade, a Denver newspaper reported today.

The move was disclosed Thursday by league president Bobby Brown at the end of a quarterly meeting of the 26 major league owners at Toronto, the Rocky Mountain News said.

It followed the National League's decision to form an expansion committee, independent of major league baseball's Long Range Planning Committee.

But Brown downplayed the move, saying it should not be construed as a "major step," but rather, a sign of baseball's commitment to expansion.

Commissioner Peter Ueberroth fended off questions about the significance of the AL move. But he acknowledged, "I think that gives you (expansion cities) a much better run."

Those cities, including Denver, have been waiting several years for a signal.

Bosworth to sue NFL

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) - The agent for $11 million rookie linebacker Brian Bosworth of the Seattle Seahawks says he plans to file a lawsuit against the NFL next week as Bosworth can wear No. 44, his old college number.

"The National Football League is very inconsistent with its rules," Gary Wichard told the Morning News Tribune of Tacoma. "I think they got real satisfaction doing it to Brian."

"They must think he went against the establishment with the supplemental draft. They want to show Brian who's boss. I have my attorneys working on this right now."

Bosworth refused to criticize the NFL on Thursday after being forced to switch from No. 44 to 55 by league officials, League rules say linebackers must wear numbers in the 50s and 90s.

Bosworth will wear No. 55 when the Seahawks open their regular season at Denver Sunday. Coach Chuck Knox has named Bosworth as a starter.

E. Washington hires Fort Lewis mentor

College basketball

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) - Fort Lewis College's Bob Hofman, basketball coach of the year last season in the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference, was named Friday as the new head coach at Eastern Washington University.

EWU athletic officials confirmed Hofman's selection at a press conference during a Big Sky Conference kick-off golf tournament at a course near the Cheney campus.

Hofman, 37, whose career record is 192-74, inherits a team coming off a 6-23 season and entering its first

College basketball

They replaced Joe Folda, who was fired July 31 after he admitted violating NCAA rules. His appointment to the $34,000-a-year job is pending approval by the EWU Board of Trustees.

"I always wanted the opportunity to be 'Division I head coach,' and all of my players have always been aware of that," Hofman said

Thursday night. "Even if the timing is bad, my intentions have always been the same."

"And when I was hired at Fort Lewis, they told me in no uncertain terms that they didn't want me around here for eight years. They wanted someone who was ambitious and who would work hard for another opportunity, and they always said they would support me 100 percent when that opportunity came along."

Hofman, who has been at Fort Lewis in Durango, Colo., for four years, led the Raiders to a 21-6 record and their first RMAC title a year ago. He spent two years as an assistant at the University of Colorado and also led Fairview High School in Boulder to the state championship in 1981.

Hofman was selected from among five finalists including University of Washington assistant Ken Smith, Hawaii assistant Rich Glas, Alabama-Birmingham aide Mike Hanks, and Pepperdine assistant Tom Asbury, who withdrew from consideration.

Upshaw accuses NFL owners of union-busting

Pro football

WASHINGTON (AP) - Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, on Friday accused management of "plain and simple union-busting" and said management has scorned his efforts to reach a compromise on a new contract.

"The two sides were scheduled to meet Saturday afternoon at an unspecified site."

Since the collective bargaining agreement expired Aug. 31, the sides have met for only 4 1/2 hours. The NFLPA on Tuesday set a strike date of Sept. 22, immediately following the second week of the regular season.

"We have made every effort possible to avoid a strike, but what we get from the other side is total resistance, no compromise, take it or leave it," Upshaw said. "They said accept our position or go on the street."

Jack Donlan, chief negotiator for the NFL Management Council, said, "Compromise is inherent in our proposal. One of the ways to avoid a strike is to negotiate and we've had continued difficulty getting the union to the bargaining table."

Upshaw said he met with the AFL-CIO Friday morning to discuss putting together a plan that would provide for support of the players "when and if it comes to it."

On Thursday, after a meeting of their executive committee, NFL owners said they would continue operations even if there is a walkout, using free agents in order to field teams.

"It's interesting that they say that they will continue to hold games for the integrity of the game," said Upshaw, who talked to management officials before the owners' meeting. "That just goes to show you that they really believe in the game as the public."

"If these guys are quality players, why weren't they on the team in the first place? And what will they call the thing they hold in San Diego at the end of the year? The Scab Bowl instead of the Super Bowl?"

America's Cup committee chooses San Diego for 1991

Yachting

SAN DIEGO (AP) - The next defense of the America's Cup will be held in San Diego in 1991, Cup officials announced Friday, although they acknowledged that a legal challenge could capsize plans for yachting's most prestigious race.

The timing and format of the race might change radically if the New York Supreme Court upholds a challenge by millionaire New Zealand banker and yachtman Michael Fay.

Fay is demanding in a suit that the San Diego Yacht Club meet his entry in an early match race for the America's Cup off San Diego or forfeit the trophy recaptured by skipper Dennis Conner in Australia this year.

The vote of the seven-member committee designated by Sail America and the San Diego Yacht Club to select the cup defense site was unanimous, but officials admitted they were wary of the outcome of Fay's challenge.

"If the court decides the San Diego Yacht Club-Sail America foundation must accept the challenge, all aspects of the match would be reconsidered," said Gerald Driscoll, chairman of the America's Cup committee.

Tom Ehnman, head of Sail America, the syndicate managing the next America's Cup race, said that included the site.

But San Diego Mayor Maureen O'Connor displayed confidence at the news conference Friday where the announcement was made.

Yachting

It's a proud day for San Diego, said Ms. O'Connor. "We've said all along that we felt we earned the right to be the site, and we had the ability to show the world we could put on the best America's Cup race in San Diego."

Pressed by a New Zealand reporter on the validity of Fay's challenge, Ms. O'Connor shot back: "We'll see you in court."

The cup finals are scheduled for the first week of May, with preliminary races in the weeks before. The committee has 18 challenges in hand from nine nations, and Ehnman said he expects to receive a 19th challenge from Canada.

The deadline for entries is Oct. 31 and each must be accompanied by a $25,000 entry fee.

Last February, Conner skipped the San Diego Yacht Club entry Stars & Stripes to a 4-0 victory over Australian defender Kookaburra III, returning the cup to the United States. Conner beat Fay's entry, Tom Magg, to reach the America's Cup finals.

Announcement of the next race site has been scheduled for Sept. 2, but was delayed by a temporary restraining order obtained by Fay from the New York Supreme Court.

The yacht club and Sail America were freed from the restrictions of the restraining order Wednesday, when the New York Supreme Court allowed it to expire and Fay withdrew a request for an extension. Under terms of the Deed of Gift, the New York Supreme Court is the sole arbitrator of legal disputes involving the America's Cup competition.

The legitimacy of Fay's challenge, however, remains unresolved. Justice Carmen Beauchamp Garrity has set a Sept. 18 deadline for submissions of papers in the case and will issue a ruling after reviewing the arguments.

Fay has challenged the San Diego Yacht Club to a match race next year between boats with a 90-foot waterline. The so-called J-class sloops are roughly twice the size of the 12-meter yachts that have been the norm in America's Cup competition since 1968.

He claims the challenge is valid under a literal interpretation of the 100-year-old Deed of Gift, the document governing America's Cup competition.

Officials linked to the cup defense have denounced Fay's actions as unsportsmanlike, saying it would strip the regatta of its international character by limiting the competition to two countries.

They claim the Deed of Gift is a "living document" subject to amendments and changes of interpretation in order to accommodate innovations in sailing technology as well as to preserve the international spirit of the event.

Conner, whose $16 million campaign was managed by Sail America, is the first person to lose the cup and win it back. He was the skipper of the American defender Liberty when he lost to the Australians in 1983.

Until Conner's loss, New York City had been home for the cup since the New York Yacht Club schooner America won the first race around the Isle of Wight off Great Britain 84 years ago.

But committee members last month turned away their bid without consideration, saying San Diego deserved first crack at hosting the event.

Campbell captures world grand prix hurdle championship

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The big check that Campbell won at the Mobil Grand Prix Final Friday will help make his wedding day a little a little more special.

It won't, the American hurdler said, help make up for an earlier jilting, nor wipe away the feeling that track is wallowing in too much cash.

"Money is tearing the sport apart. People forget why they are running." Campbell said after nipping U.S. teammate Greg Foster in the 110-meter hurdle final to take the season title in that event and top the overall men's standings.

Together the two crowns were worth $35,000.

Campbell was left off the U.S. team to the World Track and Field Championships in Rome this month after failing to win a spot during the American national trials earlier this summer.

The world indoor champion in the 60-meter hurdles and the co-holder with Foster of the world's best time in the 100 hurdles this year, 13.19, Campbell said he should have been in Rome.

"Something has to be done about the TAC system," he said, referring to The Athletics Congress, the U.S. governing body for track and field.

"There is no way I should have been left at home."

On a chilly, windy night in Brussels, no world records were set or even threatened. But a sell-out crowd witnessed most of the best of track and field complete in the windup to a six-month, 16-meet tour.

Campbell nipped Foster by 0.1 seconds, winning in 13.35 seconds.

Merlene Ottey of Jamaica won the women's 100 meters in 11.09 and clinched the overall women's season championship. She also won $35,000.

"I'm going to invest it in government securities," Ottey, who finished third in the world championship 100, said.

World-100-meter record-holder Ben Johnson of Canada and Carl Lewis of the United States continued their indirect duel in the sprints.

Each won his part of a 200-meter double-header: Lewis took the Grand Prix race in 20.31 seconds, with world 200 champion Calvin Smith of the United States fourth.

Johnson, who beat Lewis in winning the 100 in a record 9.83 seconds at the world championships in Rome, won his special 200 in 20.76.

Abel Bills of Somalia, the world 1,500-meter champion, won his race but missed a try at the world record in the distance by more than two seconds. He was clocked in 3:31.80, with American Jim Spivey second at 3:36.87.

Other winners at the Grand Prix Final included Danny Everett of the United States in the men's 400, at 45.28 seconds; Jackie Joyner-Kersey of the United States in the women's long jump at 23 feet, 2 1/4 inches; world record-holder Stefka Kostadinova of Bulgaria in the women's high jump, at 6-6 1/4;

Sabine Busch of East Germany in the women's 400, at 54.28; and Arturo Barrios of Mexico in the men's 5,000, at 13:22.34.

The hurdlers, along with American long-jumper Larry Myricks, entered the meet at Heysel Stadium tied for the overall lead, at 45 points apiece.

Myricks finished third in the long jump, behind teammate Mike Powell and Robert Emmiyan of the Soviet Union.

"I'm thrilled with the Grand Prix, but the world championships were another story," Campbell said.

He suggested that world track authorities set up a 12-member panel to review rosters for future world championships and make sure all the top stars are present.

"That may not work for the Olympics," Campbell said. "But for the world championships, where you want to have the best of the best, don't leave your best at home."

"While saying he was thankful for the big payday — "It will help with my wedding," he said — Campbell said that too many top stars are competing only to get as much money as they can from the $763,000 Grand Prix circuit and individual meet promoters.

"I run about a third of my races for free," Campbell said. "I bet there are some who haven't run a free race in months. Kids have to be able to look at us and not ask whether he's running for the sport or for the money."

Lewis's victory was won at the end of the 200, not the beginning. He trailed midway through the race but caught up with the leaders in the stretch on his long stride took over, and beat Thomas Jefferson of the United States by .08 seconds.

It was the second time in four nights that Johnson and Lewis had run the same distance at the same meet but in separate races. They competed in a split 100-meters at Rieti, Italy, on Tuesday.

Johnson said he could envision racing head-to-head against Lewis "maybe next summer in Europe," prior to the Seoul Olympics.

Lewis, who skipped the 200 in Rome to compete in the 100 against Johnson, said the Canadian's stocky build should not prove a hindrance to his success in the 200, a distance Johnson says he plans to concentrate on next year.

Graf, Navratilova gain finals

NEW YORK (AP) — Steffi Graf turned backed a determined challenge by Lori McNeil on Friday to move into the finals of the U.S. Open tennis championship while Martina Navratilova coasted past Helena Sukova.

Top-seeded Graf downed No. 11 McNeil 4-6, 6-2, 6-4 in a thrilling semifinal at the National Tennis Center.

Navratilova, seeded second, reached her fifth straight Open final in just 53 minutes as she eliminated No. 6 Sukova, who lost to Navratilova 6-3, 6-2 in last year's Open final.

"I was really focused and really concentrated the whole match," said Navratilova, who will seek her fourth Open title against Graf on Saturday. "I played one bad game. I could have broken her to go up 3-love (in the second set), but I missed some chances."

Sukova, who beat Navratilova in the finals of the Eastbourne grass championships in June, won only 31 of 91 points in the semifinal at the National Tennis Center.

"I tried everything, but nothing worked," Sukova said. "She was confident and she hit her shots. I think she felt no pressure. I helps when you feel no pressure — you do whatever you want and it works."

"Two weeks ago, I wouldn't have given myself too many chances to win," said Navratilova, whose only tournament victory this year came at Wimbledon. "Now I feel pretty good about my chances."

zen in 1981.

The last time Navratilova failed to reach a Grand Slam final was 1984, when Sukova beat her in the semifinals at the Australian Open.

The loss snapped Navratilova's 74-match winning streak.

Stefan Edberg and Anders Jarryd of Sweden won a fifth-set tiebreaker over Americans Ken Flach and Robert Seguso to capture the U.S. Open men's doubles title Friday in a match that lasted 3 hours and 44 minutes.

The 7-6 (7-1), 6-2, 4-6, 5-7, 7-6 (7-2) victory gave the top-seeded Swedes their second Grand Slam doubles title of the year. They also won the Australian Qubles championship in January.

The 66 games were the most played in the men's doubles final since the tiebreaker was introduced in 1970.

Chiles admits being fined

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Rangers owner Eddie Chiles said Friday that baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth had fined the club for violating his policy on drug abuse in the case of pitcher Steve Howe, who has a history of drug-related problems.

Chiles said that Ueberroth had met with him and Rangers President Mike Stone and "he did levy a fine."

Chiles, who earlier denied he had been fined, declined to disclose the amount, which reportedly was $250,000, the maximum Ueberroth has the power to fine.

"If any numbers are put out, I think that's the commissioner's responsibility. That's up to the commissioner."

The commissioner's office has said that it does not announce details of any disciplinary action in such cases.

Ueberroth levied the fine against the Rangers for violating an unwritten rule that repeat offenders returning from drug rehabilitation remain in the minor leagues for 60 to 90 days to determine if they had controlled their problem.

"If the commissioner wants to do it, I won't question the commissioner's power," Chiles said of the fine.

When asked if he was resigned to paying it, Chiles said "you've got to give me time to think about these things," he said.

Chiles said the fine is an issue between ownership and the commissioner and doesn't necessarily involve the team which is on the West coast in a series against the California Angels.

Howe, 29, who was making a comeback after his latest episode with drugs, was signed by Texas to a minor-league contract with the Oklahoma City 89ers on July 12 and was called up by the Rangers on Aug. 6.

He had been out of baseball for more than two years because of cocaine use.

Trevino rides birdie binge into lead

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Lee Trevino, still laughing all the way to the bank as a part-time player on the PGA Tour, went on another birdie spree Friday to take a one-stroke lead after two rounds of the $500,000 Bank of Boston Classic golf tournament.

Trevino, who will be 48 on Dec. 1, shot a 4-under-par 67 on Friday for a 38-hole total of 133, nine under par for the 7,110-yard course.

Trevino passed 1967 money leader Curtis Strange, the first round co-leader who had a 69 for a 36-hole score of 134.

The touring pro continued to assault par as the starting field of 166 was trimmed to the 70 low scorers and then the cut came at 2-1, one stroke under par for the final two rounds in the chase for the $90,000 winner's purse.

Tied at 136, two strokes back, were tournament defending champion Gene Auers, Clarence Rose, Jay Haas, Larry Rinker, 1985 U.S. Amateur champion Sam Randolph, Steve Pate and Wayne Grady.

Paul Azinger, second to Strange on the 1987 money list, led a group at 136 that also included first-round co-leader John Mahaffey, who slipped six strokes to a 71, and Buddy Gardner.

Rick Dalpo, seven shots out of the lead on Friday, had a 65 on Friday to join six others at 137. The group of seven at 138 included Ray Stewart, a 33-year-old Canadian fighting to retain his PGA card.

Stewart shared the opening-round lead but managed only a 73 on Friday.

Unranked Steve Jones, who took a fat 77 Thursday, tied a 63, one stroke off the course record, to just make the cut at 141.

Major casualties included Bobby Wadkins, former U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin, Bob Gilder, Tom Shaw, Mark Lye and J.C. Snead.

Trevino, a winner of $3.3 million whose last victory was in the 1984 PGA, had five birdies against one bogey on Friday.

"The hole keeps getting in the way," Trevino quipped. "I feel very comfortable. If I play the same way the next two days, I can win."

Strange, winner of a record $697,000 this year and closing in on the $3 million career mark at age 32, said he "didn't play as well" as on Thursday, but warned, "I'm in shape for the next two days."

"It was just one of those days, not too bad, but not too good," Strange said after a three-birdie, one-bogey round.

Although not too happy with his round, Strange was in high spirits as he told of taking batting practice and chugging flies with the Baltimore Orioles before Thursday night's baseball game with the Boston Red Sox at Fenway Park.

"I went to see Ray Knight," he said. "And before I knew it, I was in full uniform and shagging fly balls in left field against the Green Monstars." Fenway's famed left field wall. "After about 20 minutes they talked me into getting into the batting cage and taking a few swings."

Big Sky

as Nevada-Reno hosts Eastern Washington this weekend.

The newest addition to the Big Sky, Eastern Washington broke a 7-7 deadlock in the third quarter to defeat Augustana, a Division II school from South Dakota.

The Eagles capitalized on a 95-yard scoring drive followed by a 2-yard score by Tony Johnson.

Idaho State and Montana also were idle this week.

Northern Arizona, third on the Big Sky coaches' poll, responded to a quick 7-0 lead by Northern Colorado with two Donri Roberson touchdowns and three field goals by Mickey Penfolar to take a 44-17 victory in Greeley.

The Lumberjacks have a week off before hosting Montana.

Weber State completely stalled Western State's offense through most of the game as the Wildcats chalked up a 40-10 win over the NAIA school.

Weber allowed Western no first downs and just 52 yards total offense in the first half. Wildcat quarterback Jeff Carlson went to the air for 317 yards and running back Sean Sanders supplied four touchdowns, while tying a school record for rushing TDs in a single game.

On Saturday, Weber travels to Long Beach State, the team that dismantled Montana State 51-15 over the weekend.

The Bobcats scored with a Rob Stolz touchdown in the second quarter and a 3-yard run in the final period, but the 49ers ran the rest of the show, including a 44-yard sprint by "The Chief" Roberts in the first quarter.

Montana State hosts Sam Houston State this week.

The ISU-Texas A&I game will be broadcast over Twin Falls station KTFI-AM, starting at 7:30 p.m. The Idaho-Central Michigan contest will be broadcast by KX 22.7 FM in Twin Falls and by KBAR-AM in Burley, starting at 5 p.m. MDT. The Boise State-Cal Northridge contest will be broadcast by Boise radio station KBOI-AM, beginning at 7 p.m.
