Nicaragua OKs press to reopen

By JULIA PRESTON
The Washington Post

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — In a move to comply with a Central American peace plan, Nicaragua has authorized the immediate reopening of the opposition daily La Prensa free of censorship, the paper's directors and the government announced Sunday.

Publisher Violeta Chamorro said she was calling the staff back to work and hoped to have an edition on the streets by Oct. 1. The paper was shut June 26, 1986, following approval of $100 million in U.S. aid to rebels battling leftist rule here. Before that, it had operated under extensive prior censorship.

The move was the most significant in a series of actions by the Sandinista government to meet the terms of the peace accord signed in Guatemala Aug. 7 by the five Central American presidents. It calls for, among other points, freedom of expression in all five countries by Nov. 7.

"We now have freedom of the press in our newspaper. This is the peace accords at work," Chamorro said.

Vice President Sergio Ramirez said his government agreed to the move "as a goodwill gesture ... to help reunite Nicaraguans torn apart by war and conflict."

The government also has named a commission, as required by the peace pact, and headed it with the government's most influential critic, Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, to oversee implementation.

In addition, Managua allowed two Roman Catholic priests to return from exile. Last Sunday, it freed 16 Central Americans captured as mercenaries for the rebels, known as Contras.

The Contras, for their part, freed 80 prisoners Friday in what was described as a gesture in support of the peace plan. Of those freed in Costa Rica, only 20 returned to Nicaragua — where they received a cool, low-key reception.

So far, only La Prensa was reopened under the terms of a joint government-La Prensa communique that Chamorro read at a press conference. Other nongovernmental media, including the Catholic Radio, remain closed. But Ramirez said the government will discuss returning that station to the air "in the very near future and with the best possible will."

The Chamorro family, which has run La Prensa for more than 60 years, got permission to reopen after two days of intense negotiations with President Daniel Ortega, in which Costa Rican Foreign Minister Rodrigo Arias acted as a go-between, participants said.

La Prensa's directors struck the final agreement "yesterday" with Agrarian Reform Minister Jaime Wheelock, acting on behalf of Ortega.

Saudi tanker attacked

By RICHARD PYLE
The Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain — Iraq off its warships raided a ship off Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal in the northern Persian Gulf on Sunday after Iranian in a speedboat attacked a Saudi Arabian tanker in the Strait of Hormuz.

Iraqi jet fighters raided a "large maritime target," military terminology for a ship, a military spokesman said in Baghdad, the Iraqi capital.

The spokesman, quoted by the Iraqi News Agency in a dispatch monitored in Cyprus, said the raid at 8:30 p.m. scored "accurate and effective hits" on the unidentified ship.

Earlier Sunday, Iranians in a speedboat approached the 39,915-ton tanker Petroship B and sprayed it with machine-gun fire in Iran's first attack on shipping in 10 days.

The attack, in the southern end of the gulf, caused minor damage but no injuries, said a source close to the ship's owner, Petromin Tankers and Mineral Shipping Co., speaking on the condition of anonymity.

A report by the British Broadcasting Corp. said the sea raiders were Iranian Revolutionary Guards.

Arab leaders meanwhile set a November summit on Sunday to discuss whether to break ties with the Tehran government if it continues to ignore peace calls.

And in Moscow, the Soviet Communist Party daily Pravda accused the United States and its West allies of using the Iran-Iraq war to turn the gulf into a theater for naval exercises in near-combat conditions.

An Italian navy task force of three frigates on a supply ship entered the Suez Canal on its way to the gulf. Three Italian mine sweepers and a rescue ship delayed their passage.

The Petroship B continued to Jidda, a Saudi Arabian port on the Red Sea, with a load of kerosene and diesel oil, said the source.

Military sources said the Iranian assault on the Saudi tanker may have been retaliation for an Iraqi air strike on an Iranian ship at the Lavan oil terminal in the central gulf Friday night.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, said the Iranian navy intercepted four ships suspected of carrying war-related cargo bound for Iraq.

It said one vessel was escorted to Bandar Abbas, a port and naval base in the Strait of Hormuz, because its cargo was questionable. IRNA did not identify any of the ships.

Meetings in Tunis, Tunisia, foreign ministers from 17 of the Arab League's 21 members unanimously agreed that Arab heads of state should convene Nov. 8 in Amman, Jordan, to discuss the war and other security issues in the oil-rich Persian Gulf region.

The closed-door decision appeared to be at least a temporary setback for Arab governments favoring cutting off diplomatic ties with Iran's revolutionary government if it failed to comply with a U.N. resolution calling for a truce in the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

Paramedics to fortify county ambulance service

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Ambulance service reached a milestone in the eight-county region when Magic Valley Regional Medical Center proposed introducing paramedics to an emergency-services landscape otherwise barren of their medical expertise.

State-and-local-officials first analyzed whether Twin Falls County faced emergencies frequently enough to warrant hiring paramedics.

David Silbernagel, who oversees MVRMC's ambulance service, said he reviewed Idaho paramedic services in Pocatello and elsewhere before recommending hiring four paramedics. He and Jerry Decker, regional coordinator for state Emergency Medical Services, agreed the county probably can support paramedics.

But those comparisons were logged against services within fire departments, which firefighters double as medically-trained ambulance personnel. Such combinations are favored nationwide because of similar strategy, training and passions igniting both professions.

In addition, firehouses are sprinkled throughout cities for quicker response times and firefighters record less turnover because they are often paid better than ambulance workers.

Despite those advantages, Twin Falls County's decision to maintain a hospital-based ambulance service appears sound because property taxes approach a half-million dollars a year in counties supporting fire department services.

"I think the county has to look at its own resources," said Idaho Falls Fire Chief Doug Call, whose department pioneered Idaho paramedic care in 1972. Bonneville County is expected to contribute $491,000 to Call's ambulance service this year under a new taxing district, he said.

Nationwide, the International Association of Fire Chiefs estimates 60 percent of all fire departments handle emergency medical service. That figure rises for big cities, where about 80 percent of the fire departments in the 150 biggest cities handle ambulances, according to a study by the Journal of Emergency Medical Services.

Indeed, fire department-based emergency medical services evolved in Idaho Falls in 1972 and Pocatello in 1978. Yet Twin Falls County ambulance services — and the business losses they suffer — remain tax-free.

"And in the bargain, ambulance attendants housed at a hospital remain in closer contact with the doctors who treat patients, to observe care from start to finish.

"In my own opinion, they (hospital-based ambulance personnel) can see the patient contact (with doctors) around the clock," Silbernagel said. "Basically, it's an ongoing process where obviously, the fire department would bring them in and then leave."

"I think the physicians really want to be involved," echoed Twin Falls County Commission Chairman Judy Felton.

—And—Call—acknowledged, "That may be valid."

But Pocatello Fire Chief Don

Jones, who runs Bannock County's ambulance service, added that paramedics take hospital-training courses to brush up on medical procedures.

Paramedics must take at least 80 hours of continuing training every two years to remain certified, Decker said. Paramedics must also perform a minimum number of specific emergency procedures, including inserting intravenous medications and creating emergency airways for patients with breathing problems, he said.

"Basically, every two years their job is on the line," Decker said. "And I really admire them for it."

"They do their skills and maintain them," echoed Jones.

U.S. behind murder of leftist, rebels charge

MANILA, Philippines — Communist rebels charged on Sunday that the ambush killing of prominent leftist Lean Alejandro was part of a U.S. plot to reimpose military rule and enslave the future of American bases in the country.

President Corason Aquino's brother-in-law said he learned that Saturday's shooting of Alejandro, 27, secretary-general of the New Patriotic Alliance, may drive more leftists and social activists into the Marxist underground.

Hundreds of people attended a memorial service for Alejandro Sunday at the University of the Philippines, where he has been a student leader. University President Jose Abueva was among pallbearers who bore the body to the chapel.

Mourners, many weeping, sang "Bayan Ko," a national song, and "The Internationale," the world anthem of the worker movement, as the service ended.

The communist-dominated Central Luzon command of the National Democratic Front charged in a statement that Alejandro's death was part of a plot by the "U.S.-Aquino regime."

The statement accused the Aquino government, with American help, of pursuing "systematic fascism" against the people. These acts will lead to a higher state of injustice (such as) suspension of the writ of habeas corpus or imposition of military rule, whether formal or not.

Weapons are unclear in AIDS fight

By BARRY SIEGEL
Los Angeles Times

After a long day promoting her AIDS program of education and counseling throughout the state, the director of Oregon's health division stopped at an airport coffee shop in Medford one evening recently and ordered a slab of pie smothered in ice cream. Kristine Gebbie is a hefty woman and a powerful speaker. For 14 hours, she had been confidently laying out her position.

—As she ate, though, her conversation wavered. "I can make a good intellectual argument for education being what I will kick in the most with, education for behavior change," she said. "But, in fact, that's not been one of our strong points you everything you need to know about being fit and being in good body weight, and I'm still lugging an awful lot of pounds around that I shouldn't lug around, because I can't make my hands and my mouth match what my intellect knows about eating habits... "And yet here I am standing up and saying I think I can educate Oregonians to change their behavior spreading this virus. That hurts inside because I know I'm pushing what really makes sense, but I'm not really sure we can do-liver what goes with it, and that scares me. It doesn't scare me enough to say, so abandon education, let's go to the repressive control means. The risk of doing that are far too great for me. I can't get there, but I remain very uncomfortable."

Talks with health officers such as Gebbie, talking on the frontlines against AIDS, suggest a world nothing like the hard edges and absolute positions coloring the current public discussion. Their vision is more uncertain and shaded.

As public pressure mounts to impose tough coercive measures in the fight against AIDS, and President Reagan pledges to send the deadly disease "the way of smallpox and polio," state health officials are finding themselves squeezed in a tightening vise. Their firm consensus is that coercive measures such as mandatory testing won't stop AIDS. But they are no more sure that the voluntary measures they are pushing, such as education and persuasion, will do the job.

Until a vaccine comes along, they say, we can only hope to slow the spread. Quarantines, criminal sanctions and educational campaigns seem to the health officers only partly relevant.

"All this talk about testing is just touching the toenail of the problem," said epidemiologist Tom Betz, chief of communicable disease in Texas. • See AIDS on Page A2

Ambulance

Emergency Medical Technician call said. In Bannock County, Jones said two Pocatelto ambulances are staffed strictly with paramedics, although EMTs serve in Lava Hot Springs and Downey. Bonneville has 3,800 ambulance calls a year, while Bannock has about 2,600. Silbergabel said MVRMC responds to about 2,000 calls annually.

"Twin Falls is probably at the minimum" number of calls necessary to support paramedics, Decker said.

The speed of response is another yardstick by which to measure ambulance services. Quick Response Unit provides emergency coverage to rural parts of Twin Falls County, the same as in eastern Idaho counties.

But within city limits, where the lion's share of calls originate, fire departments have a strategic jump on MVRMC.

"In most places it's quicker. They're ideally located for a quicker response," said Twin Falls Fire Commander Phillip Clough. He commented strictly on strategic considerations and not on administrative or political reasons for locating the ambulance service.

Idaho Falls has five separate locations for ambulances within its boundaries, placing all emergency vehicles that much closer to patients before they occur. Pocatelto has two sites within the city and outlying ambulances in Lava Hot Springs and Downey.

By comparison, MVRMC ambulances are all dispatched from the hospital. Twin Falls Fire Department has three stationhouses.

And MVRMC ambulance attendants bank in the hospital's third floor at night, placing them further from their equipment during that shift than their fire department counterparts.

In addition, Call said that during cold winters with trouble starting engines, firehouses become a natural habitat for ambulances because hospitals usually don't have the space to keep the vehicles indoors.

Fire departments also apparently pay better. Pocatelto's paramedic salaries start at $23,400 a year, with nearly half again as much in benefits, Jones said.

"We feel the county needs the skills they possess (for the price)," Jones said. "It (turnover) is so stable, they (ambulance personnel and firefighters) work hand-in-hand on all emergencies."

Idaho Falls pays about $27,000 or $28,000 a year for paramedics, Call estimated.

MVRMC would not release salary rates, which Silbergabel said were competitive. Total salaries for its department with 15 EMTs and paramedics is budgeted at $211,897.

Another advantage with medically trained firefighters is their ability to switch duties to avoid burn-out in either job, although Silbergabel noted the same kinds of stress could mount in both jobs.

Still, Call said, "This is one area where the fire department has shown distinct advantage over other services. The big problem is when people start burning out, where do they go?"

"The two services are very compatible because of the dedication of firefighters wanting to help people," Clough said.

Cross-training also offers greater reserves for when extra ambulances are needed.

"It gives us more depth," said Jones, counting a total of five ambulances that could roll out of Pocatelto stations with firefighting EMTs, while only two are specifically staffed around the clock.

But never mind pros and cons. Twin Falls County mutes hypothetical advantages—with financial reality.

Bonneville and Bannock counties each began ambulance-taxing districts this year after paying for their services through county budgets. Bannock County is taxing about $470,000 of its $679,796 ambulance budget in 1988, said Commission Chairman Tom Katsilometes. Bonneville County will collect $491,000 of its $791,000 budget in taxes, Call said.

"We've had terrific support," Call said.

While showering nothing but praise on the service, Katsilometes said commissioners were against the taxing district because the city and county formerly applit taxes to provide the service.

"It's just an excellent, premier service in the Northwest," Katsilometes said. "The difference is now, the city is no longer willing to do that (provide property taxes).

Meanwhile, Twin Falls County residents pay no taxes for the hospital in general or the ambulance service in particular. And MVRMC has been losing an estimated $75,000 annually running the service.

MVRMC's ambulance service is budgeted at $244,652 in 1988, but that doesn't count equipment. County commissioners estimated last fall that it would cost them $600,000 to take over the ambulance service again.

While state law dictates that every county must provide ambulance service, cities are not so encumbered.

Commission Chairman Felton said, "When those people told us they were folding up their tents, we didn't receive a proposal (from the city)."

City Manager Tom Courtney said several reasons boiled down to one—the cost.

"There's a significant additional cost to the city," said Courtney, listing liability insurance and the need to hire more firefighters to staff the ambulances.

Furthermore, if the city provided ambulance service to the city, the county would still be responsible for a large county with little population, where the cost of running a second service would be prohibitive, he said.

"It just isn't practical to separate service areas," Courtney said.

Besides, Felton said commissioners are content.

AIDS

The only effective way to deal with AIDS, they say, is one that leads to profound changes in behavior on the part of millions, forever, involving deeply personal acts committed in private.

We do not know how to change behavior in this way, they say. We don't know how to do this even if we were willing to forgo fundamental civil liberties.

The health officials put their chips far more on the tools of education and persuasion than on coercion, but emphasize the significant limits of both.

The use of power and voluntarism crowd the thoughts of Thomas M. Vernon, executive director of the Colorado Department of Health. He has decided the promise of both are illusions.

"We cannot put our faith in either of them," he said. "We are not going to stop this epidemic in its tracks."

So looking to the future, health officials speak urgently about the need for a "maturity" and "rationality" in the American public, an acceptance and understanding that AIDS will not be solved soon. But they are deeply alarmed this will not be the public's response.

The number of AIDS cases will rise sharply over the next five years no matter what is being done today, as those already infected fall ill. From more than 40,000 AIDS cases now, the total is projected to rise to 270,000 by 1991. Health officers expect increasingly intense pressure from the public and politicians to do something to stop AIDS.

They worry that this will lead to unwise and ineffective overreactions, including statutes calling for widespread mandatory testing, breach of confidences and quarantines.

"This will really polarize the nation," said Betz. "It's going to get radical. There's nothing to do but count bodies—until—a vaccine is found."

The fear of overreactive measures, health officials acknowledge, already has created a pressure on them to act even if they are unsure what to do, in order to hold off something worse. Yet when they do act, they often draw fire and threats of non-cooperation from gay and civil rights groups.

Gorbachev

leaves hospital

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP)—Soviet Communist Party chief Mikhail Gorbachev suffered serious food poisoning during his Black Sea vacation and had to be hospitalized, the mass-circulation newspaper Bild reported Sunday.

Bild, citing no sources for its story, said the Kremlin leader may have been the target of an attempt to poison him.

It said Gorbachev escaped another apparent assassination attempt in February, when a police car filled with explosives was discovered one day before he visited Riga. Bild said Gorbachev had taken an unusually long vacation and had not been seen in public since Aug. 6. Kremlin officials, Bild said, had explained his absence as an extended vacation after hard work.

The newspaper said Gorbachev returned to Moscow last Friday, traveling from the Crimea by train instead of flying as usual.

Senate panel blasts attempt to reinterpret ABM Treaty

Idaho votes — B4

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration incorrectly claims it can unilaterally reinterpret the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty to allow expanded U.S. "Star Wars" testing, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said Sunday.

The attempt by the Republican administration to change the U.S. view of the 16-year-old treaty could affect Senate consideration of a possible treaty on intermediate-range nuclear weapons, the Democratic-controlled committee said in a 106-page report.

The report was the latest round in a long-running fight between President Reagan and congressional Democrats over the 1972 pact, which limits the variety and type of defenses that each superpower can deploy.

At issue in the battle is development of Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, known informally as "Star Wars." The administration wants to move from the existing interpretation to a so-called "broad" view of the ABM treaty, which would allow expanded testing of Star Wars.

Reagan has asserted that the executive branch has the right to unilaterally change how a treaty is interpreted, although he says he won't make such a change without consulting Congress.

Last week, however, the Senate split generally along party lines as it voted 68-38 to approve a proposal banning spending for expanded Star Wars tests that violate the existing view of the ABM pact.

While releasing the report, the Foreign Relations Committee also sent to the floor a resolution, sponsored by Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., that rejects the attempt to reinterpret the ABM pact.

This report underscores the profound constitutional issues which will surround Senate consideration of an INF (intermediate nuclear forces) agreement if the treaty power question is not resolved," Biden said in a statement released with the report.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz declined to indicate Sunday whether President Reagan would veto the bill if it eventually reaches his desk, saying only, "Let's see what he does."

Shultz said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" program that he and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze discussed the ABM treaty during their meeting last week and that the Soviets presented two items that "represented some shifting of their view."

"One was in terms of the things they would permit to be done while within the ABM treaty," he said. "They changed it a little bit, the character of those things. And the other was to say, alternatively, we each agree to abide strictly by the ABM treaty, as narrowly defined, during the period that we agree not to withdraw from it."

Shultz acknowledged that some things about the treaty remain to be worked out, noting that both sides believe the other side already is violating the agreement.

He didn't indicate if Reagan wants the broad interpretation because of Star Wars work or because it could be used as a bargaining chip in arms control negotiations.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said Sunday that the Senate measure merely insists that the Reagan administration stick to the traditional interpretation that it said it would stay with when it sought money for SDI.

"All we are saying: Live with your testimony unless you come back to us for further approval," Nunn said on NBC's "Meet The Press" program.

The Foreign Relations Committee's report came in the wake of a series of joint hearings it held earlier this year with the Senate Judiciary Committee.

'L.A. Law' takes 5 Emmys; NBC tops

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — "Promise," a stark drama about mental illness, won five awards at a long-winded Emmy ceremony Sunday, while "L.A. Law" won four awards to help NBC dominate the night.

NBC's "Golden Girls" won as best comedy for the second year, as the network won 16 of the 51 awards handed out Sunday. Its former president, Grant Tinker, won the Governors' Award from the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences.

CBS had 11 awards, including the five for "Promise," and ABC had four.

"L.A. Law," the slick series about high-powered lawyers, was honored as outstanding drama series in its first season. It also won a technical Emmy earlier, for a total of five.

Counting the technical awards distributed earlier, NBC won 32, ABC 19, CBS 15 and PBS 8. Fox Broadcasting, which carried the show for the first time, had none.

Running 20 seconds short of 4 hours, it was the longest Emmy program ever, running well past the 3 hours and 35 minutes of 1978's marathon.

James Woods, who portrayed the schizophrenic brother on the CBS "Hallmark Hall of Fame" presentation, won an acting Emmy, beating out costar James Garner, who was the executive producer.

"Promise" also yielded awards for director Glenn Jordan, supporting actress Piper Laurie and writers Richard Friedenburg, Tenney Flowers and Kenneth Blackwell.

"I never saw a crew work so hard and fell so much for a particular project," said Garner, who accepted the Emmy for outstanding special program.

Inversion layers help crews fighting forest fires in California, Oregon

By The Associated Press

Atmospheric inversion layers held fog and dense smoke close to the ground Sunday over forest fires in northern California and southern Oregon, slowing still out-of-control fires but hindering fire crews.

"As long as it's foggy and cool like it is now, the burning conditions are suppressed greatly," Doug Salyer, a spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service, said Sunday at Agness, Ore. "But it also holds the smoke in. For breathing conditions, it doesn't make it nice."

Hahn to testify about payoff to grand jury

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jessica Hahn is expected to tell a federal grand jury today about the financial settlement she reached with deposed television evangelist Jim Bakker after their 1980 sexual encounter.

The special grand jury is investigating the PTL ministry's operations under Bakker before he left under the cloud of his relations with Miss Hahn. A subpoena of PTL documents shows the criminal investigation will focus on the lavish lifestyles of Bakker, his wife Tammy, and their close aides.

Miss Hahn probably will meet with reporters before her testimony, said her lawyer, Dominic Barbara. "I'm sure she'll have something to say," he said.

Miss Hahn, 28, has said previously that she agreed to accept $265,000 in exchange for her silence about the meeting, but she only received a small amount of the money before Bakker resigned and the payments were cut off.

Barbara said his client would be testifying as a government witness with a grant of limited immunity from prosecution, although he has said she is not a target of the investigation.

"Jessica clearly considers it her responsibility to cooperate with the government in its investigation," he said after she was served with a subpoena.

Federal prosecutors have refused to comment about her testimony, citing Justice Department policy.

The inversion "keeps everything kind of cool," said U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman Kay McQuaid at Yreka, Calif.

Wary firefighters also have had to deal with annoyed bears.

A new run of lightning and arson fires in Arizona was quickly put down.

Firefighters had dug 40 miles of fire line by Sunday around Oregon's last out-of-control group of fires, the 40,770-acre Silver Creek west of Grants Pass, and had an additional 11 miles of natural firebreak, Salyer said.

"We need six more miles of hand-dug line to have containment," Salyer said, adding that probably would take at least two more days.

The fires in Oregon's Siskiyou National Forest were sparked by lightning three weeks ago. They burned unchecked until fires closer to towns in other areas of the West were brought under control.

In the Klamath National Forest in northern California, firefighters battled an out-of-control blaze that blackened 500 acres Sunday in the Angeles National Forest, 45 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles near Castaic.

spokesman Pat Irwin said, the acreage — burned — had climbed slightly from the 174,000 reported Saturday to 180,000 acres Sunday.

The increase was due primarily to firefighters' "burnout operations" to create charred areas the fires can't cross, she said.

The number of acres burned as of Sunday in the nearby Shasta-Trinity National Forest totaled 85,800 acres, and approximately 2,500 people remained in the firefighting crews, said Ms. McQuaid.

About 160 firefighters teams were sent home Sunday, Irwin said, adding that there has been more illness among crews that have been in the forests for long periods.

"A lot of it is related to working long hours for three weeks solid," Irwin said.

In Southern California, firefighters battled an out-of-control blaze that blackened 500 acres Sunday in the Angeles National Forest, 45 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles near Castaic.

Reagan to address U.N. on arms control, gulf war

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will address the opening session of the United Nations General Assembly in New York today, with arms control expected to be a key topic.

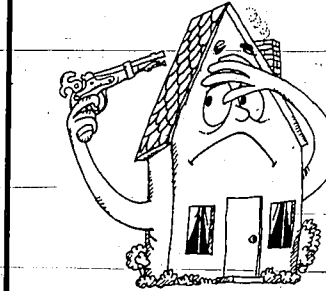

Reagan announced on Friday that he and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev were committed to signing a treaty to eliminate U.S. and Soviet armaments of land-based medium and short-range missiles, although details must still be worked out.

In his weekly radio address on Saturday, the president followed up with a pledge to "forge ahead toward another historic objective-cutting our strategic nuclear arsenals in half."

At the U.N. session, Reagan was also expected to discuss the situation in the Persian Gulf. The administration is pushing for a U.N. vote to impose sanctions backing up an earlier resolution calling for a cease-fire in the war between Iran and Iraq.

Silly questions plague Schroeder, other female candidates

By month's end, Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., plans to announce whether she will run for president.

A big question, because of her late start, has been whether she can raise enough money to be a durable candidate. "No dough, no go," she says.

But there is another question: If she runs, will she be subjected to the usual barrage of gender-related questions, questions no reporter would ask a man, Gary Hart notwithstanding?

The answer, of course, is yes. But if Schroeder does not run, it will not be because she can't handle silly questions. She can, because she, like many other female politicians, has heard them all her public life and is quite familiar with them. Public and press alike are legitimately interested in a candidate's children, in what baseball team he or she roots for or whether grandfather was a coal miner — although none of the above may have anything to do with how the candidate would govern. But female candidates are more likely to be asked what their husbands will do if they get elected, when they do their dishes or what their favorite recipe is. Yes, it still happens in 1987. Yes, silly, but it is serious as well, because it impedes women's progress toward equal treatment in many walks of life.

Schroeder, an attorney who graduated from Harvard Law School, usually has a comeback. Asked, for example, what it's like to be a woman running for president, she replied, "Do I have another option?" Schroeder might consider an option raised by Minnesota Secretary of State Joan A. Growe, who ran for the U.S. Senate in 1984 and lost to Republican Rudy Boschwitz. Growe told Schroeder that she wished that the day before she announced her candidacy, she had called in reporters and invited them to ask all their silly, irrelevant questions that day, since henceforth she would talk only about the issues. "I didn't do that," Growe said in an interview recently, "therefore, I answered silly, irrelevant questions throughout the campaign."

So did her 24-year-old son, who campaigned for her and who was interviewed by a radio reporter in a rural town five days before the general election. They talked about Growe's views on issues like farms and finances and finally, just as the interview was ending, the reporter said in all seriousness, "Tell me, David, will your mom have a nice, hot, cooked meal for you when you go home?"

Just this spring, a local reporter called Los Angeles City Council member Gloria Molina's office to ask why Molina had not talked about pregnancy during her special election campaign. Molina, who was elected Feb. 3, had her baby June 23. She hadn't known she was pregnant until after she started the campaign, and told the reporter she didn't think the matter was relevant. But he pressed on; didn't she have a responsibility to inform the voters because of the new demands on her time that might limit her ability to serve constituents?

While pregnancy mercifully is not permanent, motherhood is — but many mothers (and fathers) are permanently in the work force. Molina's aides point out that her colleague, Zev Yaroslavsky, has children he helps care for. How many times do you suppose Yaroslavsky is asked about divided attention?

Female politicians are, of course, not the only women who face these questions. Any woman trying to do anything different attracts the questions until she proves herself. "The difference," said Growe, "is that the silly questions female politicians are asked tend to be public."

REP. PATRICIA SCHROEDER
Quicks with a comeback

The media asks them and voters ask them through the media. Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., recalls that during her 1972 campaign for the Marin County Board of Supervisors, local papers ran letters to the editor accusing her of neglecting her two children. The teachers at her children's school wanted to respond that the children were in fine shape, thank you, but Boxer said to ignore such attacks.

The irony was that Boxer's opponent, who won in a close race, had the same number of children, held another job in addition to his post as a supervisor and had a wife who worked. But he was not accused of neglecting children. Boxer was later elected supervisor in 1976 and went to Congress in 1982; she said she has not encountered the silly questions since that first campaign.

Silly questions made the front pages in 1984 when Geraldine Ferraro became the first woman on a national presidential ticket. Should Ferraro and Walter F. Mondale kiss or shake hands when meeting, it was asked, and should Mondale, as the presidential candidate, go through a door first or should he let the woman go first? And, asked Mississippi's agriculture commissioner, could Ferraro bake a blueberry muffin? "Sure can," she replied. "Can you?"

Then what are the legitimate questions? Questioning personal finances is legitimate. Questioning ethics is legitimate. Questioning judgment is legitimate and that, and not adultery, was the question Gary Hart never understood.

Asking women questions the press would not ask men is where most candidates draw the line. Growe said that in her race for the Democratic nomination she was opposed by three men. She was the leading money raiser but the only one asked whether she could raise money. The inference was that a woman would be unable to raise the necessary amount.

After a decade in public office, Growe as a candidate for the U.S. Senate was also asked, "Are you tough enough?" Tough enough for what she was never sure, but men were not asked the same question.

Asking women questions that blacks would never be asked at the risk of racism is another measure of appropriateness.

Boxer agrees with Growe. Women, she said, ask only that their candidacies be treated like all candidacies. "All we ever wanted was a level playing field," Boxer said.

In the subtle guise of something that playing field, of focusing on issues and not personalities, the press may well ask

Schroeder whether she really knows anything about foreign affairs. "Despite Pat Schroeder's time in Congress, despite her work on the House Armed Services Committee, she's still going to get that question," said Assemblywoman Maxine Waters, D-Calif., who backs Jesse Jackson's presidential campaign.

What is really being asked, Waters said sympathetically, is "whether you have the brainpower, whether you are really smart enough to know how artillery and weapons systems and the military budget work? They (the questioners) make it look as though they're concerned with the issues, but it is not a question they ask men with the same intent," she added.

The first woman who runs for a particular office, just like the first female sportswriter in the Dodgers locker room or the first female firefighter on the force, gets the questions (and more). The next woman who runs for Senate in Minnesota or the City Council while pregnant may not get them; Pat Schroeder will, even though Shirley Chisholm sought the nomination more than a decade ago. Chisholm was so far ahead of her time that most young voters have never heard of her; back then, an outspoken black woman candidate was taken seriously by few outside her circle of close associates.

But the situation is improving, Los Angeles Councilwoman Joy Ficus said. "As there are more of us, we are treated more like elected officials, rather than males or females." There is room for much more improvement, the serious question in all this is when female candidates and female law students and female journalists and female anything can stop worrying about silly questions and get on with the matters at hand?

Letters

Anti-Bob Latham letter irks former employee

The copy of the Times-News I received on my door stoop at 6:45 yesterday morning brought to my view a very tasteless, poorly written and worded letter from Z. Maller.

Complaining about "once again," Bob Latham's establishment.

I am not a well known person hereabouts but have been in Idaho since my beginning. I was employed by Bob Latham for four years and have seen that man do many things for this community, his family and his employees. Not just self autos. He most likely has not pleased every last person that has dealt with him but like most of us I'm sure he tries.

Before you get too carried away in your disgust Z. Maller why not choose from these options:

1. Sell or give away that offensive TV that brings you those commercials.

2. Let me add that two years ago, I left Latham Motors at the age of 23 and being that age I wanted to see what was beyond the horizon and to tour this country of ours. I have been to 41 states and a good portion of Canada. I have gained many experiences and a few good friends. I have also returned to Twin Falls, Idaho to live.

3. It is very offensive to me to have people that write, being that I think I hope I am not being too libelous or in bad taste when I now announce that I am starting a fundraising drive to send Z. Maller back to Portland, Oregon. (if they want Z. back).

4. I will personally contribute $500 to this fund should Z. decide to return. Portland, Oregon is a great place but I reside in and defend Twin Falls.

Baxter doing the job; editorial out of order

I was upset over the Times-News 8-19-87 editorial, "Baxter's experiment will cost taxpayers." I felt, as did everyone I talked to, that K. and her staff's competency was being questioned. Anyone who knows and/or who has worked with K.

knows she does not take orders as to who or what to prosecute — from anyone — including the police department. That comment could be one of the tackiest ever printed in one of our local newspapers.

Your clarification of your comment on "routinely" taking weak cases into court in your 9-10-87 (Newspaper has right to comment on officials' activities) editorial was in itself very weak.

During the past 2 1/2 years I have worked on 22 Twin Falls County Magistrate (Gary Jullien) cases that were represented by K. Baxter, and to date have never lost a case. Mark Stubbs reported in his editorial of 9-16-87 that since June 1, 1984 only 42 out of 1,051 felony cases were not bound over because of lack of probable cause. Approximately half of those were refiled. Half of 42 is 21, divided by 3 years is 7 cases a year, divided by 3 deputies — that about 2.33 cases a year per deputy not bound over. K. Baxter has stated she has never lost a prelim. What does a prosecuting attorney and her staff have to do to get praised?

K. Baxter was elected and is paid to prosecute not write free editorials and fight with the newspaper. As a Twin Falls County taxpayer, I'm glad to have someone as capable and experienced as K. Baxter and her staff represent my best interests and hope all the negative publicity doesn't cause discouragement.

Airports, air traffic control inadequate

WASHINGTON — "The chief spokesman for the airline industry said today... Failure to modernize air traffic control will bring growing congestion and delay for airline passengers."

Sound like something out of today's headlines? The quotation comes from a Washington Star article of June 6, 1988. The spokesman was a former president of the Air Transport Association, Stuart G. Tipton.

Warnings of undercapacity in airports and in the air traffic control system are indeed an old theme and the public is now getting the message loud and clear. The U.S. air carriers are in business to meet the demands of the flying public. In recent years they have significantly increased their fleet and ground resources to meet that demand. But growth in the other two elements of the system — airports and air traffic control — has not kept pace. Now, after two decades of warnings, we have the real makings of an air travel "capacity crisis" in this country.

And the issue is not only one of delays and inconvenience to the public. There is also the issue of safety. Increased airport and airways ca-capacity can ensure the safe accommodation of growing air traffic. In spite of the terrible tragedy in Detroit, air transportation is safe. The industry's recent safety record — almost two years and more than 12 million flights without a single passenger fatality until the accident on Aug. 16 — is remarkable. But airline safety requires a constant redoubling of efforts. The airlines are doing that. One exemplar: Many assume that deregulation has resulted in cutting corners on maintenance. But airline expenditures on maintenance have increased by 55 percent in the past five years. Last year, the airlines spent $5.6 billion on maintenance — an increase of more than $500 million from the previous year.

William F. Bolger

Yet safety is a shared responsibility. Increasing capacity of the air transport system — with more air traffic controllers and more state-of-the-art equipment — is another means of improving safety as well as the best long-range approach to reducing delays. It is no good for the airlines to expand their capacity if airport and air traffic control capacity does not increase commensurately. And that is precisely the root cause of today's under-capacity problem.

Existing airports need more runways and improvements to current runways. Some new airports must be built. The Federal Aviation Administration's air traffic control system must be modernized and run more efficiently.

Senate aviation subcommittee Chairman Wendell Ford (along with Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd and Sens. Nancy Kassebaum and Frank Lautenberg) have introduced legislation to make the FAA an independent agency and to prohibit the appointment of the administrator to a fixed term. In addition, Sens. Daniel Inouye and Ted Stevens have introduced separate legislation that would create a federal corporation to manage the nation's air space.

More is needed. The Aviation Trust Fund should be taken "off budget" so that more of the fund's $6 billion unobligated surplus — money that the public has already paid in the form of ticket and cargo taxes — can be spent to improve the system.

Until capacity can be increased, interim steps are being taken. Such steps merely allow us to cope a little while longer within an inadequate system.

Zipf's Law helps in coping with 7-year-old's desktop clutter

WASHINGTON — The Divinity (a.k.a. Victoria Will) will soon be seven, which philosophers call the age of reason. "Fat lot philosophers know about young girls. I have shared a small desk with one for several years and now am sharing a huge desk, and she and I are wrestling with the intellectual problem of desktop tidiness.

For the Prodigy (a.k.a. the Divinity) and me this is a problem, because some afternoons after school we now sit across from each other at an old (new to me) "partners desk," one of those enormous constructions with drawers on each side. The top, on which an F-15 could land, can hold a lot of clutter.

Father favors tidiness. Daughter finds clutter congenial. And it turns out she is correct: Science proves that it is rational to have a messy desk.

In Discover magazine Hugh Kenner, professor of English at Johns Hopkins and a confirmed advocate of chaos, last year wrote a spirited defense of the messy desk. Kenner considers tidiness not only evidence of an unattractive character ("clean-deskers measure their vermouth with an eyedropper, walk their dogs by the clock, succor their spouses by the calendar"), but also a practice invalidated by the 80-20 rule, a.k.a. Zipf's Law.

Kenner says: Consider my desk. I take a reference book from a shelf and, knowing I will refer to it again soon, I leave it on my desk for now. And this letter inviting me to a conference. I'll leave it next to the book for now because I'll be referring to it when I make travel arrangements. These notes for the essay I'm writing — I turn to them frequently so I'll leave them here for now. The "for nows" accumulate and so does the stuff.

For Kenner, a messy desk is a matter of principle, not sloth. The principle is: What you need now you're apt to need again, and again. That is why the paring knife is left on the kitchen counter, and the nutmeg grater is not.

The principle pops up all over the place, as in our use of words. Kenner says we make more than 50 percent of our normal talk by recycling about 100 words. Feel inarticulate? Cheer up!

Shakespeare's words contain 29,066 different words, but 40 words make up 40 percent of the texts of his plays. James Joyce's "Ulysses" contains almost the same number of different words — 29,699 — but just 136 words ("the," "of," "and," "to," etc.) make up half the text. Such words are the utility infielders of discourse. We keep them handy on our desktops, so to speak. They illustrate this principle: Most of every activity uses only a small fraction of available sources.

The common words are like paring knives: They perform many functions. The rarely used words (Kenner's example: "colubiform," meaning snake-shaped) can be defined in a few lines. But in the large Oxford English Dictionary, an all-purpose word like "set" (get set to set the table with the dining set, then set the alarm so we can get out, etc.) requires an OED entry twice the length of "Paradise Lost."

Like the clutter on a cluttered desk, such words are the ones we reach for frequently. The clutter on our desks is the stuff we know it or not) "the principle of least effort."

That was expounded in 1950 by George Zipf, a Harvard philologist who became the ideologist of clutter. He established the rationality of the messy desk with this law: Frequency of use draws near to us the things that are frequently used, so some messes accumulate for good reasons.

Kenner says that intelligent secretaries have long known that files in heavy use should not be re-filed — that 80 percent of the action involves 20 percent of the files. But terolinguists such as Kenner because, as noted in the 1963 "IBM Systems Journal," the 80-20 rule applies, in turn, to the active 20 percent.

That is, if you keep 1,000 files, of which 200 bear most duty, then 20 percent of the 200 — just 40 files — get most of the use, as do eight of those 40, and two of those eight. Two files make for a tidy desk.

Victoria gets her way because her father thinks she is perfect in every way and it is becoming more so day by day. Unfortunately, Victoria consents only to one application of the 80-20 rule to her 175,000 Crayolas, pencils and other instruments of the serious business of being seven.

George Will writes for Newsweek.

Peres to urge Soviets to restore relations

JERUSALEM (AP) — Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said Sunday he plans to urge the Kremlin to restore diplomatic ties with Israel when he meets with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze this month.

Peres spoke in an interview with The Associated Press at his Foreign Ministry office on the eve of an 11-day visit to the United States during which he will meet with Shevardnadze at the United Nations.

"(Diplomatic relations) will surely be one of the topics," he said, adding "I think some of the changes have already started."

Peres, the 63-year-old leader of the left-of-center Labor Party in Israel's coalition government, said there had already been positive signs from Moscow.

But he also referred to the coming talks with Shevardnadze and a recent series of meetings between his aides and Soviet officials as a "disorganized dialogue."

"I think we have to organize it so the dialog will be fruitful, both for the mutual interests of our countries and peace in the Middle East," he said.

Peres indicated he would push for a more definitive Soviet stand on diplomatic relations, Soviet Jewish emigration and the nature of a proposed Middle East peace conference.

Peres declined to say if he would ask Shevardnadze to allow an Israeli delegation to establish a presence in Moscow.

It is the first official Soviet delegation to visit Israel since Moscow cut diplomatic ties after the 1967 Middle East War.

Pope supports Indian rights

Keeps promise to return to outpost before heading back to Rome

FORT SIMPSON, Northwest Territories (AP) — Welcomed by a drum song and a sacred fire, Pope John Paul II kept a promise Sunday by visiting this outpost, where he spoke in support of native rights and warned Indians not to let "instability" undermine their society.

"Once again, I affirm your rights to a just and equitable measure of self-governing along with a land base and adequate resources necessary for developing a viable economy for present and future generations," the pontiff said.

The 67-year-old pope, who had appeared drawn and tired in Detroit the day before, was in fine form Sunday, hugging babies, blessing women and reaching into the crowd to shake hands.

Following the Mass, the pontiff returned to Edmonton and stopped briefly Sunday evening before heading on to Rome.

A steady drizzle fell as the pope's plane arrived at an airstrip from Edmonton, Alberta, at the end of his 10-day U.S. tour. But the sky brightened and a rainbow appeared as he was greeted by Indian and Canadian officials.

At the settlement, on the banks of the mile-wide Mackenzie River, an estimated 4,000 Dene Indians huddled under white plastic raincoats in front of a 55-foot tope, which had been erected three years ago as a podium for a papal address and never dismantled.

The celebrations began even before the pope's arrival with the lighting of a sacred fire accompanied by a traditional drum song, the burning of sweet grass and the passing of a peace pipe.

John Paul had scheduled a stop here during a Canadian tour in September 1984, but could not land because of thick fog.

Thousands of Indian followers, whose Roman Catholicism was introduced here 140 years ago by French missionaries, were left bitterly disappointed, despite a statement the pope issued in support of native rights. The visit had been politically as well as spiritually important to the 15,000 Dene, who lay claim to 450,000 square miles where their forefathers hunted and fished.

The chair on which the pope sat during the Mass was made from moose antlers and hide.

Magazine: Hostages to be freed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — All foreign hostages in Lebanon could be released as a result of secret negotiations now in progress, the weekly magazine Ash-Shiraa reported Sunday.

Ash-Shiraa, which broke the story of secret U.S. arms sales to Iran, said the first to be freed would be West German hostage Rudolf Cordes and Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite. The report could not be independently confirmed.

No group ever claimed to have kidnapped Waite.

The magazine quoted an anonymous "highly informed source" as saying Waite and Cordes would be freed by the end of this month and the remaining 22 foreigners — including eight Americans — sometime later.

Waite, 48, the personal emissary of the Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, disappeared Jan. 20 after leaving a hotel in Moslem west Beirut for talks with kidnappers holding American hostages.

Cordes, 53, Beirut manager for the chemical firm Hoechst, was kidnapped Jan. 17 as he drove into Beirut from the airport, right after flying in from Frankfurt.

Besides the eight Americans, the other hostages are six Frenchmen, two Britons, an Irishman, an Indian, an Italian, a South Korean and two unidentified foreign men. Terry Anderson, 39, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, is the longest held hostage. He was seized in Beirut on March 16, 1985.

Ash-Shiraa said "local, regional and international parties" were negotiating with kidnappers for a package "deal" to free all the hostages, "especially the American and French." It did not elaborate.

It quoted the source as saying considerable progress has been made in efforts to free Waite.

"Something positive is expected so that he will be freed this month... as part of a deal under which the kidnappers will receive $5 million," Ash-Shiraa said.

Prime minister targeted for killing

DUBLIN, Ireland (DPA) — Plans by terrorists from Northern Ireland to assassinate Irish Republic Prime Minister Charles Haughey and his foreign minister, Brian Lenihan, were confirmed Sunday by Irish police, quoting secret papers found by Northern Irish police.

The Protestant Ulster Defense Association plans the killings to protest the November anniversary of the controversial 1885 Anglo-Irish Agreement, which gives the government of mostly Roman Catholic Ireland a voice in the affairs of Protestant dominated Northern Ireland, according to Irish press reports.

The Dublin Sunday World reported that the UDA also planned to assassinate former Irish Foreign Minister Peter Barry.

Security measures around the three leading politicians have been tightened and Irish police are combing the towns north of Dublin for the terrorists.

Northern Irish Protestants reject the Anglo-Irish Agreement because it was negotiated by Ireland and Britain without the Protestants' participation. It is aimed at improving the lot of the minority Catholics in Northern Ireland.

Pravda hails missile agreement with 'a flood of optimism'

MOSCOW (DPA) — The Soviet Communist Party newspaper

Pravda printed an editorial Sunday praising the nuclear missile accord and summit meeting agreed to last week by the Soviet and U.S. foreign ministers.

It was the first commentary in the Soviet press and followed a day of hesitant Soviet reporting on Friday's "agreement in principle" between Moscow and Washington to eliminate all of intermediate-range nuclear missiles in three to five years.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today will be quite interesting and profitable, but be sure not to get caught up in the details of any projects. Reason may conflict with emotion, so try to balance them and avoid trouble.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Analyze your work methods, and if you find room for improvement, follow through with it. Avoid an argument with a co-worker.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20): Watch your tongue in conversation today. Be very cautious driving, and avoid a possible accident. Improve your appearance.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Bring some harmony into your home and remove anything which might destroy that balance. Don't invite any guests in tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't daydream while driving, and be sure to obey all laws which apply to you. Just walk away from that boring person.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Gain the favor of those around you by showing you are thoughtful of your home and family and that you can spend money wisely.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Don't criticize friends today. Familiarity doesn't give license to be picky. Be cautious making, or changing, decisions.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Your mate may feel unhappy this evening, so be thoughtful and cheerful and the mood will quickly change. Don't run off on tangents.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Don't seek assistance in attaining your goals from friends who are also confused. You may find some obstacles in your path.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): A superior you counted on for help may not be available today, but bide your time and you'll find a better opportunity.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You feel confident about beginning a new enterprise, but if you don't change your present setup, you could lose a great deal.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Make sure you keep all the promises you have made scrupulously, or you could lose the favor of some very important people.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Today is not the right time to talk over a new project with a partner who is not likely to agree with you. Handle your correspondence.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY
If he or she will have a keen ability to formulate long term plans for goal attainment and then easily follow through with them. Teach your child early that he to be too fearful in reaching these goals. Rather, let the plans unwind by themselves or your progeny could encounter much opposition from others, which could ruin him or her.

Miss America: Up on AIDS awareness

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The newly crowned Miss America, 1988, Kaye Lani Rae Rafko, is a nurse who said Sunday she believes in mandatory AIDS testing but is not sure if she'll be allowed to promote safe sex in her new role.

Miss Rafko, 24, of Monroe, Mich., of Ukrainian ancestry in spite of her Hawaiian name, was quizzed by reporters during a Sunday morning news conference, while the other competitors were packing to return home.

Until she became Miss America on Saturday night, she was a registered nurse at a hospital in Toledo, Ohio, working with terminally ill cancer and AIDS patients.

Miss Rafko said she advocates mandatory blood testing for every one to halt the spread of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"Why not? We have blood tests," she said. "This is important. This is affecting everyone."

Miss Rafko also believes the public needs to be better educated about AIDS, especially that the fatal disease is said to be transmitted only through blood and semen.

"People don't understand the disease and its transmission, and I understand how they feel," she said. "But I have gone up to AIDS patients and held their hands without wearing gloves."

Miss Rafko hesitatingly looked at officials from the Miss America Pageant when asked if she would use her title to promote safe sex.

"I'm not sure about working with the Miss America program — what's within rules and regulations," she said.

Based on her medical background, though, she said: "I would say the best thing is abstinence. But you know that people are going to perform the sexual activity, and I think (it's important that) they're just well-educated on how to protect themselves."

Miss Rafko, who once considered becoming a nun, also hesitated when asked if, as a nurse working with the terminally ill, she believes in euthanasia.

"When a patient no longer has the ability to make a decision, then it should be up to the immediate family," she said. "I also think a new ruling should be set (so) when a patient is considered brain dead, then they should just pronounce the patient (dead) instead of continuing life support systems."

Elsewhere, Miss Delaware, Anne Marie Jarka, was asked if the judges picked the right woman to wear the crown.

"It's got to say something about her, if you know anything about oncology (dealing with cancer). It takes a special person to do that," she said.

In the Miss America Pageant, Miss Rafko won a preliminary swimsuit competition and performed a Hawaiian-Tahitian dance for the talent competition, wearing a grass skirt and bikini top and sporting a 16-inch-high headdress. She wore an elaborately beaded bride's dress for the evening gown competition.

After beating 50 other contestants to win the coveted crown, Miss Rafko briefly attended the Miss America Ball before being stuck around and talked awhile," she said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop and his wife dropped in on "The Golden Girls" and sat around a table with the stars of the popular NBC-TV show after the taping of a new episode.

Koop, who had given a talk on AIDS to television and movie executives earlier Friday, attended the 7:30 p.m. taping at the Ren-Mar Studios with his wife, Betty, publicist Pam Ruben said Saturday.

Koop also posed for pictures with Ben Arthur, Betty White, Rue McClanahan and Estelle Getty, who appear in the series as two widows, a divorcee and one of the women's mother.

Koop remarked that he can't get his wife to go out on Saturday nights because she likes to watch the show, but he doesn't mind because he also likes it, Ms. Ruben said.

Malcolm Forbes watches Liz Taylor try out the purple Harley Davidson Sportster he gave her

Taylor, Forbes: 'Good friends'

BEDMINSTER, N.J. (AP) — Magazine publisher and motorcycle enthusiast Malcolm Forbes gave actress Elizabeth Taylor a custom-painted purple motorcycle Sunday, and the two denied wedding rumors before taking a spin on it together.

"We're good friends, why complicate things with marriage?" said Forbes, as Miss Taylor nodded in agreement.

"The only engagement we have is to take this for a spin," she said of the gift, a 1988 Harley Davidson 883 "Fagger" which she described as "super."

Miss Taylor, who has been taking motorcycle driving lessons, clambered on back of the machine, behind Forbes. The two pulled down the driveway of his estate here, followed by some 50 members of Forbes' motorcycle club, "Capitalist Tools," and headed for a day of races at an English town track.

Forbes, who took the actress on her first motorcycle ride a few weeks ago, said he chose the color to match that used on packages of Miss Taylor's new line of perfume.

The logo for the new scent was painted in gold on the cycle's gas tank and fender. The two wore matching fringed red-leather jackets bearing the Capitalist Tools logo.

Forbes, a millionaire whose cycle collection includes many one-of-a-kind bikes, paid about $4,500 for Miss Taylor's motorcycle and another $500 for the paint job, his assistant David Stein said.

In return for the gift, Miss Taylor gave Forbes a ring of a silver, helmeted skull with ruby eyes. To mark the occasion of Miss Taylor's first ride, Forbes had given her a similar "biker" ring.

Town spiffs up for visit from namesake Duke

ATHOL, Mass. (AP) — Hedges have been trimmed and houses spiffed up for the first visit in 225 years by a duke from the town's namesake duchy in Scotland, and he's bringing along part of his own army of killed bagpipers.

The 10th Duke of Atholl and half of his 180 Atholl Highlanders, Europe's last private army, will swing down Main Street on Monday to honor the anniversary of the town's naming.

"This is one of the biggest events that ever happened here," said Charles J. Winn, chairman of the town's 225th anniversary committee. "It's not every day we get a duke."

The 53-year-old duke, Iain Murray, is the first Scottish nobleman to come to Athol since it was named by the son of the Second Duke of Athol in 1762, although the Eighth Duke once passed through on a train in 1928. No one knows why the second "I" was dropped from the town's name.

The duke's ceremonial army of Scottish farmers parade in full regalia around his 13th century castle twice a year.

The army was founded by Queen Victoria in 1862 to reward the duchy for its support of England. The volunteer corps doubles as a top-flight bagpipe band and aids in sea rescue missions.

Athol was named by Col. John Murray, a major landowner in town, who said the countryside reminded him of his homeland around Blair Athol Castle in the Perthshire Highlands of Scotland.

Leaders of the north-central Massachusetts town of 10,500 had failed to persuade previous dukes to visit for Athol's 160th and 200th anniversaries. Organizer William J. Wrigley said he flew to Scotland last fall to make a personal plea to the current duke.

He said the duke agreed to the trip as a reward for the Scottish farmers' years of service in the army. "Most of the army have never been outside of Scotland," said Wrigley. "It's a big deal for them."

The duke spearheaded a fund-raising campaign for the trip, with the farmers' help, but Winn said he believed they could afford to bring only half of them.

The duke opens the ceremonies Monday by performing the traditional American duty of dedicating a downtown parking garage. The Highlanders will march down Main Street in an evening parade following the 3rd Infantry Old Guard Fife and Drum Corps, the Colonial-garbed official ceremonial corps for U.S. presidents.

Sales: Bakkers took joke to heart

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Comedian Soupy Sales says his infamous television play of the 1960s, when he jokingly told children watching his show to send him the "green pieces of paper" from their parents' pockets, has had lasting influence.

"Jim and Tammy Bakker probably saw that show, and that's where they got the idea" for the PTL television ministry they founded, he said in a speech Saturday at his alma mater, Marshall University.

After Sales told station officials that he received $80,000 from the play, they suspended him for a week, he said.

"If I'd have received all the money people said they sent me, I wouldn't be here talking to you," he said.

Sales grew up in Huntington and received his bachelor's degree in journalism from Marshall in 1949. The comedian was born in 1926 in Franklin, N.C., but moved to Huntington when he was 9. It was in Franklin that Sales received the nickname Soupy — a play on his given name, Milton Supman.

By 3 a.m. she was ordered to bed by her chaperones, who warned her that she had to be on the beach by 6:45 a.m. for photographers.

"But I noticed that only my competition wardrobe was in the room. They had yet to move my other things," she said.

Mandela fighting TV film broadcast

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Black activist Winnie Mandela is trying to stop broadcasts of a television film about her marriage to jailed African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, her lawyer said Sunday.

Attorney Jamail Ayob said Mrs. Mandela was upset because the British producers of "Mandela" did not seek her permission or advice in making the movie.

The film is scheduled to be televised this week in about 30 countries, but not in South Africa. Arrangements were made for Home Box Office, a cable television company, to air the Sunday night in the United States and for Independent Television's Channel Four to show it on Thursday night in Britain.

The 2½-hour film was made in Zimbabwe last year by a British company, TVS Television.

Ayob said TVS told him it was not a violation of international

Botha courting ANC for negotiations

Los Angeles Times

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — As President Pieter W. Botha moves South Africa cautiously toward negotiations on the country's future, the government finds itself, quite unexpectedly, wooing the outlawed African National Congress as a key participant.

While some members of Botha's Cabinet continue to denounce the congress as a Communist-led band of terrorists threatening the entire nation, others implicitly accept the rebels' centrality in any negotiations, acknowledging that any talks without the participation of ANC supporters would be fruitless.

The release of Nelson Mandela and other imprisoned ANC leaders is under active consideration to give the negotiating process momentum, according to senior government officials, who say the only real question on the release now is when.

ANC supporters also would be encouraged to run in elections for black representatives on a proposed national council, which would begin the preliminary negotiations on a new constitution, even though the ANC was banned by the South African Parliament in 1960.

The Freedom Charter, the rebels' basic manifesto since its adoption in 1955, has been described recently by Cabinet members as "a good document" and a possible "point of departure," although it was banned for many years as subversive.

And the "slightest signal" of rebel interest in the proposed talks would be fully reciprocated, the government's principal negotiator said, in "the spirit of national reconciliation."

"If the ANC would exhibit any serious intention of becoming part of the peace process, I am sure the government would look very closely at future, the government finds itself, quite unexpectedly, wooing the outlawed African National Congress as a key participant.

lengthy interview reviewing the government's negotiating efforts.

If the ANC, which since 1961 has waged an "armed struggle" against minority white rule here, took up earlier proposals for a "suspension of violence," the government would look closely, warily, at matching moves, Van der Merwe said.

"In a process like this, one works a great deal with signals, over and above firm statements," he continued. "If the ANC said it (was) willing to suspend violence, it might not be enough for the government to legalize them, but it might be enough to start a process that could lead to something else."

With his mandate from Botha as the government's principal negotiator, Van der Merwe, 48, a political scientist and diplomat by training, has been sending more and more signals to the rebels' exiled leadership in Lusaka, Zambia, but getting "no positive signals" in return. "So long as their position is expressed in absolute terms, one doesn't get anywhere," he complained.

The government's signals have proliferated so rapidly in recent weeks that its critics in the opposition Conservative Party have accused it of "hastening the National (Party) sellout of the Afrikaner people and whites in general."

"Who would have thought that P.W. Botha would be the man to..."

bring in an ANC government? a Conservative member of Parliament said during a debate on reform measures this month. "But what else, other than a sellout, can these overtures by the National Party to the ANC mean?"

While its official position remains that there are many other leaders with equally valid claims to represent the country's black majority and that the ANC, through the violence of its prolonged "armed struggle," has disqualified itself from negotiations, government efforts to promote negotiations have effectively focused on drawing in the ANC's supporters, if not the organization itself.

"The ANC, being a banned organization, will not be able to participate under its own flag," Van der Merwe said, speaking specifically of elections to the proposed national council. "But there is an open invitation that any organization committing itself to a peaceful future is then welcome to participate in the political process."

"If the ANC would change its policy of violence and say, 'We accept the bona fides of the (negotiating) process, and we are willing to participate on the basis of peaceful negotiations,' the government would not be able to resist the pressure to legalize it."

Among those trying to promote a political dialogue to resolve the country's problems, there is a broad "assumption," Van der Merwe said, that "negotiations will have to take place with the African National Congress."

Final draft a surprise

Wilderness plan asks for more acres

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The final plan is out for southcentral Idaho's neighborhood national forest and one of the biggest surprises is that the amount of wilderness recommended has increased from earlier plans.

The U.S. Forest Service is recommending 50,330 acres more wilderness than in its draft of the plan for the Sawtooth National Forest, all of it in the Boulder-White Clouds near Ketchum, says Ed Waldapfel, Sawtooth spokesman.

The latest total is 270,706 acres, far less than the more than 700,000 acres of wilderness recommended by a coalition of environmental groups.

The forest service stuck to its draft when it came to the Smoky Mountains and didn't recommend them for wilderness, saying people feel the Boulder-White Clouds have the most outstanding wilderness qualities.

The coalition of environmental groups that drew up a 3.9 million acre wilderness proposal for the whole state has a soft spot in its heart for the Smokies. It is sure to howl like the volyneries that inhabit those mountains about this area being left out.

The Idaho Wildland Defense Coalition calls for 130,000 acres of wilderness in the Smokies, which begin about 20 miles northwest of Ketchum. A spokesman for the Idaho Conservation League, a member of the coalition, could not be reached for comment on Saturday.

The Sawtooth National Forest contains 2.1 million acres and its largest portion is bounded roughly by Highway 20

(Picabo) in the south, Highway 93 in the east (Arco), Highway 76 in the north (Clayton) and Highway 21 to the west (Idaho City).

How the forest service recommendations will be weighed by the politicians deciding the wilderness issue in Idaho is anybody's guess. The buzzword among the staff for U.S. Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, is that groups should target what areas they want designated, but not mention a specific amount of acres.

Still in the end, it is going to come down to acreage.

The forest service is talking about 270,706 acres of wilderness for the Sawtooth National Forest. That breaks down to the Boulder-White Clouds (190,350 acres), the Pioneer Mountains (61,911) and Hanson Lakes (18,445).

The shape of the plan reflects the public's view that the forest is mainly for recreation and all the environmental, fish and wildlife values associated with that, the forest service says.

But there is more to a forest plan than wilderness, although to the environmentalists that may be the most important part. The forest plan is a blueprint for the next 10 to 15 years. The plan can be appealed up to 45 days after its Wednesday release date (September 16).

In placing an emphasis on recreation, the forest managers recognize the reality of the widespread use of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area, which is part of the forest.

Since relatively little timber is harvested in the forest compared to the national forests in northern Idaho, the forest service isn't sub-

In the town's early days, water had to be hand-carried to its trees. These men were so excited over the growth of a tree, they climbed it to prove its strength

Explanations abound for town's layout

Was it the sun or water?

Little did the town planners know the confusion they were starting when they plotted the townsite of Twin Falls on the diagonal. Just try explaining to a tourist why Main Avenue East is across the street from Main Avenue South. But there was a method to their madness; the layout may have played a role in attracting the residents who first formed the town.

Among the most commonly heard explanation for the "layout" of the town is that it was done so each side of a building would receive the sun at some time during the day. Two 1905 newspaper accounts dispute that theory, however. If they are accurate, there were two reasons the original Twin Falls townsite is on a diagonal — and the sun had nothing to do with it.

On May 26, 1905, the Twin Falls Times related that John E. Hayes, who surveyed the Twin Falls townsite, "observed the direction of the wind closely and so surveyed the streets that the prevailing breezes would blow across the thoroughfares instead of sweeping them from end to end. He also took into consideration the lay of the land, with the result that the entire townsite can be irrigated without the slightest difficulty."

Another story two months later corroborated the first story, while enlarging on the irrigation aspect. It said that "in order to keep the ditches in the streets and at the same time secure the perfect irrigation of every part of the town the direction of the streets was made to conform with the slope of the land, so that one set of the streets run from northeast to southwest and the other from northwest to southeast."

It is rather difficult for people today, with the city's modern water system, to understand how important those irrigation ditches were to the development of the town. The town boasted a modern water works in 1905 with a well in the Rock Creek canyon that lifted water to a water tower located on the south corner of town. That water supply soon proved inadequate and the town struggled with the problems of using canal water for many years.

The ditches and headgates in the original townsite have long since become obsolete, and invisible, but at the time were vital to the success of the town. Without the ability to water the trees and lawns that were planted, the town would have had minimum ap-

Bombing evidence gathered; mayor asks for state aid

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Three law enforcement agencies are involved in the investigation of the bomb blast that tore a two-foot section out of a steel leg support and shattered windows in businesses early Saturday morning, but it may take a week before critical laboratory reports are received.

The city has repaired the leg damaged in the blast at 1:58 a.m. Saturday. Whitton said a welder cut jagged pieces off the water tower leg, welded a new section onto the leg and bolted it back down.

Rupert Mayor Bill Whitton said his city police force, the Idaho Department of Law Enforcement and the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms are involved in the investigation.

A state bomb investigator has been gathering evidence to be sent to an Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms laboratory in San Francisco. Whitton said he doesn't expect a report back for about a week.

Whitton declined to say whether investigators had any suspects in the bombing.

He is appealing for emergency aid. The city has just approved its budget and Whitton said Rupert doesn't have the money needed to recover.

"Number one, I've left word with the governor through several of his key people. I haven't heard," Whitton said. "I never heard back, but I hope there might be some state funding to help us through this time of emergency.

"We're going to put every effort into solving this. The City Council is meeting Monday night at five and I'm going to ask them to set up a reward fund," Whitton said.

Whitton didn't have an estimate of how much the blast would cost Rupert, but he did say it would run in the thousands of dollars.

After the blast, city workers dumped 42,000 gallons of water down storm sewers to prepare for repairs. The city has been supplying water out of its other water tank.

Whitton said cooler weather has lowered irrigation demands in the city.

"If this had happened a month earlier, we could have been in trouble," he said.

Whitton said he is considering recommending not refilling the water tank because of danger to downtown residents, but he has not made his mind up yet.

"We have not put water in it yet, but if we do, it'll be a slow and tedious process," Whitton said.

About 75 percent of the businesses with windows blown out in the blast have replaced or covered the windows, Whitton said.

Although the investigation isn't complete, Whitton said he suspects whoever set the explosion was trying to topple the 57-year-old tower.

"It was a very intense explosion in a very concentrated area," Whitton said. "It had to be someone who knew what they were doing."

If explosives had torn apart two of the tower's four legs, Whitton said, the tower would have fallen.

Filer gives school breakfasts a trial run

By DAVID LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

FILER — Breakfast will be served to Filer high school and middle school students on a trial basis beginning today.

Filer becomes the fourth area school district to serve breakfast. The program was introduced in Twin Falls High School last February. Breakfast is also served in the Jerome, Castleford and Richfield schools and is also being introduced in some schools in Cassia County.

The Filer School Board approved the trial program at its meeting last week.

Breakfast will be served for high school students, all junior high students and, on the elementary level, fifth grade students. If it's successful, the program will be expanded into elementary grades one through four on Oct. 12.

Bob McGrew, junior high school principal, said the breakfast program has been considered for years. It suddenly became important when the district moved its physical education classes at the junior high from the morning to the afternoon.

"When PE was in the morning children went out and ran around and got energized," he said. "Now we have straight class periods and teachers are finding out some students are evidently not eating out breakfast. By the second and third periods they are 'dozing off.' They're not as attentive."

He called breakfast "a good idea, that will start-off children with a nutritional program for the day."

School officials believe there is a direct correlation between good nutrition and attention span, regular school attendance and physical performance. They say breakfast is the most important meal of the day because it follows the longest period without food. The child is more alert and less fatigued, and there are fewer discipline problems.

If it proves a success, breakfast will be served throughout the year. If not, the program will be stopped.

According to an official from the Twin Falls Food Service, 130 students obtained breakfast after it was introduced, but the number dropped to 80 by the end of the school year.

The Filer school breakfast will consist of orange juice, choice of cereal or cinnamon roll, or a ham and cheese sandwich. Children can choose plain or chocolate milk. It will be served from 7:50 to 8:20 a.m.

Cost is 50 cents for students, 70 cents for adults. Those students eligible for free or reduced.

Council to review contract for sewage treatment plant

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council will review on Monday a contract with the company that runs the city wastewater treatment plant.

The council meeting begins at 6 p.m. at City Hall. The proposed contract would increase the base fee for one-year for Operations Management Inc. of Kingwood, Texas from $1.2 million to $1.3 million. That's about a 3 percent increase over the present contract, according to a staff report.

The primary reason for the increase is because OMI will take on the duties of a pre-treatment program required by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The present contract now requires OMI to return to the city 75 percent of the amount of difference between actual operating costs and estimated costs. In the proposed contract, the rebate would be modified and placed on a schedule based on the amount of the difference. For example, if the difference is $25,000 or below, the city would receive the entire amount. If the difference between the actual and estimated costs is $75,000 or more, OMI would keep it all.

In other business, the council will review a resolution setting salaries for city employees for the 1987-88 fiscal year. In the recently-adopted 1986 city budget, employees will receive a 3 percent salary hike. The exceptions are members of the City Council and Mayor.

A public hearing will be held on an appeal by Albert and Hazel Lewis of Twin Falls.

After denying the couple's request for a zone change from agricultural to commercial, the Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission issued a non-conforming building permit for expansion of their automobile repair shop and wrecker service located 1/4 mile north of Kimberly Road on 8200 Road East.

But the commission heaped on restrictions after protest from the neighbors. The couple is appealing to the council to remove some of the restrictions.

Kent Taylor, representing Canyon View Properties, has also sought a request for a one-year extension in which to file a final development plan for lots at the corner of Pole Linn Road East and Bridgeview Boulevard under a commercial planned-unit development designation.

The property owners also sought an extension in October 1986.

In other business, the council will review a proposed statement of values and city motto prepared by the City Employees Committee.

The council members will also consider bids for roofing the Harrison Street supply building.

Plan

The forest service says it will protect the same political pressures here.
The forest service wants a timber cut of 105-million board feet for the first decade. This averages 10.5-million board feet per year, a figure the forest service says is more than recent demand. Yet, the amount is a little more than half of what the service targets for timber sales regionally.
Road building raises the hackles of environmentalists who say it ruins the aesthetics of the forest, interferes with wildlife movement and adds to pollution problems by sending sediment into mountain streams. They also say the timber sales are not economical because of the amount of road building required to get the logs out.
The forest service says it is placing less emphasis on large timber sales that require extensive road building. For instance, a sale at Big Peak has been dropped from the final plan because it would require too much of it.
The forest service pledges to work with state fish and game departments in Idaho and Utah to keep roads out of key wildlife winter feeding and calving areas.
If the recommended wilderness areas are accepted by Congress, the use of mechanized equipment and vehicles would be banned there. And, the figures recommended by the forest service would more than double the amount of wilderness in the Sawtooth National Forest, bringing the total to 487,794.
More wilderness is not favored by the off-road vehicle interests represented by the Blue Ribbon Coalition. This group is as vocal and well-organized as many of the environmental organizations.
The forest service recognizes the off-road vehicle interests in its plan, saying much of the forest can be used by off-road vehicles. However, Cache Peak, an 11,200 acre area, can't be used by off-landers except for the Skyline Trail.
The forest service says in the semi-primitive but non-wilderness areas of the forest, off-road vehicle use will be permitted. These areas are the Smoky Mountains (171,465 acres), Lime Creek/Soldier Mountains (98,100 acres), Railroad Ridge (32,045 acres), Boulder Mountain Peak (6,940 acres), Trail Creek Area (25,110 acres), Third Fork (7,210 acres), Fifth Fork (7,200 acres), Cottonwood Canyon (8,130 acres), East Fork (14,000 acres) and East Fork Soliman (7,095 acres).
Other than the wilderness recommendations, a phrase in the plan about federal reserved water rights is sure to raise an eyebrow of U.S. Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho.
McClure is one of the power brokers in the wilderness debate. Gov. Cecil Andrus is refusing to tip his wilderness hand until he discusses his proposal with McClure. The two are due to sit down soon, according to aides.

The forest service says it will protect the forest's reserved water rights and acquire rights for minimum stream flow in streams critical to fisheries and other resources.
McClure says he is concerned about federal-reserved water-rights clauses and wants to ensure that Congress decides what they are before putting preservation legislation into effect. His concern stems from federal court decisions on the issue. A federal court in Colorado upset the water plans of the cities of Aurora and Colorado Springs because it went in favor of a federal-reserved water right in a Colorado wilderness area.
The Sawtooth plan places more emphasis on improving habitat along mountain streams and rivers. The forest service says it wants to improve anadromous fish passage in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area. Bettering the habitat of deer is another goal.
The forest service wants to build and reconstruct more trails, too. It calls for 11 miles per year instead of the current one mile.
A random sampling of letters to the forest service on the draft plan showed the public wanted more wilderness than the forest service was willing to recommend. And, the timber industry said the draft didn't provide enough flexibility for potential increases in demand for wood products.
One measure of whether the final plan satisfies the interest groups is in the number and origin of appeals filed.
Feelings about the Sawtooth National Forest run deep. Gene and Barbara Kurtz of Arco told the forest service that they see the White Clouds as "jewels in Idaho's treasury of wild places."

In other business at the meeting:
• The auditing firm of McMullen and McPhae was rehired for another year.
• School Superintendent Dave Tester said the district received 4,388 in federal funds for handicapped kindergartners, age 5. The money will be used to buy materials and supplies.
• The district has 47 new students this year. Earlier this month, trustees approved an emergency levy for the influx.
• The levy will raise about $67,000 to cover the costs of new textbooks, desks and transportation for the students.
• There are 1,143 students enrolled in Filer schools for the current term.
• The board went into executive session concerning personnel matters. No action was taken.

priced lunches are automatically eligible for breakfasts free or at a reduced price of 30 cents. Items can also be purchased separately.
High school students will be served in the cafeteria. Middle school children will have breakfast in a special room.
Trustees were concerned about the clean up afterwards, but McGrew said the custodial staff sees no problems. "We'll spend a couple of weeks and see how it goes. Once we work out the bugs we'll provide breakfast to the smaller children," he said.
In a flyer to parents the new program is announced as "School breakfast... School lunch... It's the best buy in town."

Blaine

for $50,000 worth of property.
Although voters approved passage of the override by a healthy 63 percent majority, the Blaine district, along with many parents in the county, has vowed to further change the state's equalization formula so that Blaine schools will receive more in direct state aid. A political action committee was formed last spring in Ketchum to help lobby the Legislature for more money.
Superintendent Dave Noonan, though, has said that changing the equalization formula significantly so that Blaine County wouldn't have to pass an override each year was "a long term process."
Under the present equalization formula, Blaine schools would receive essentially no state funding were it not for a "hold harmless" clause in the legislation that doesn't allow school districts to receive less funding than during the 1986-87 school year.

Currently, state funds account for only about 16 percent of the Blaine County School District budget, compared with close to 70 percent for most other school districts.

Lines open to Stallings' office
JEROME — Residents of Jerome and Lincoln counties are being invited to participate in a "Call you Congressman" program with U.S. Rep. Richard Stallings on Tuesday.
Residents of these two counties can call Stallings collect at his Washington D.C. office from 7-8:30 p.m. on that day. The telephone number is (202) 225-5591.
"As a congressman from Idaho's 2nd District, I am always looking for new ways to open up the lines of communication between myself and the people I represent. This call-in program, which has been very successful in other areas around my district, is a part of that effort," Stallings said.
Residents of Jerome and Lincoln county can use the free call to express an opinion on a legislative issue or ask for assistance, according to a press release.

Ogden rapes linked

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Two rapes and a criminal trespass incident are believed to have been committed by the same man who raped or attempted to enter the homes of three Ogden women last week, police say.
A 21-year-old woman reported she was awakened about 6 a.m. Sunday when a man put his hand over her mouth. "He told her not to look at him and do what he said and she wouldn't get hurt," said Lt. Bill Stettler.
The assailant took the woman out of her bedroom, where she was sleeping with her 3-year-old daughter, and raped her in another room, Stettler said. The man apparently entered the apartment through a kitchen window.
About one hour later, an 18-year-old woman was raped by a man who entered her apartment through a kitchen window and told her he had a weapon.
Both victims lived within five blocks of each other in an area on the north side of Ogden.

Kids: Just say no to peers

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Youngsters returning to the classroom this fall can avoid the problems of peer pressure by learning how to say no, advises the top researcher at a national youth organization based here.

With drug use and other antisocial activities on the rise among younger age groups, chances are that the kinds of situations today's boys and girls face are far different from the childhood pranks their parents remember, said Karen W. Bartz, director of research and development for Camp Fire Inc.

"Youngsters in fourth through sixth grades are particularly at risk and easily influenced because they want to 'fit in,'" Bartz said, adding that one of the biggest challenges facing them is the temptation to join peers in new experiences.

A study of early adolescence by the Search Institute found that fifth-graders were especially susceptible to dares from their friends and were often taunted or physically threatened if they did not comply, Bartz said.

Learning to say no, as difficult as that can be, is the most effective way for boys and girls to avoid trouble, Bartz said.

"Being assertive also helps youngsters gain confidence and a positive self-image. They learn that they can control their actions and still have friends," she said.

Grandkids rank third behind job, RV

DEAR ABBY: Our son is 3 years old. Our daughter is 5. My parents live one hour away — by car. I recently phoned and asked them to come and stay with their grandchildren for a weekend while we attend a convention in another city.

My mother immediately checked to see if the dates (two months away) were on their "RV group" weekend. Since we so rarely ask them to baby-sit our children, and the children love "Nini and Papa" so much, I was hurt, and wrote and told them so.

Mother wrote back, listing her priorities as follows: (1) Her job. (She sells real estate.) (2) Her favorite activity. (Taking RV group trips with her husband, who is retired.) (3) Her grandchildren.

Needless to say, I engaged a baby sitter. My parents are now saying that we should understand their need for freedom.

Abby, they have stayed with our children overnight only once in a year and a half, when we delivered the kids — never have they driven to our home to baby-sit for the evening.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

We have decided never again to ask them for anything. Are we right or wrong to feel as we do?

— THIRD PLACE BUT NO SHOW

DEAR THIRD PLACE: You are wrong. Some grandparents consider it a privilege and a joy to baby-sit their grandchildren.

Others do not. No matter how much the grandparents "love" their grandchildren, caring for them for a day, or a weekend, can be very tiring. Your parents have let you know that they are not available as sitters. It's their right.

Your resentment is unjustified and unbecoming.

DEAR ABBY: In response to your fidelity survey: My husband of six years told me a year ago that he had been unfaithful "once." I was devastated, and decided to "get even" with him, so I had a four-time affair with another man.

I told my husband about my affair some months later, and he was not the least bit jealous. He hardly reacted at all — as though he didn't care. I had expected him to harp on me about it like I still harp on him.

Let me tell you, Abby, his lack of jealousy hurt me as much as when I learned about his one-nighter.

Why didn't he react to my affair like I reacted to his? Does this show a lack of love for me on his part — or a lack of security on my part?

— FURIOUS IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR ABBY: "Mrs. Couch Potato" complains because her husband stays up half the night watching reruns and old movies on TV — then he comes to bed at 2 or 3 a.m. wanting to be "romantic."

You suggested that she talk it over with him while they're both wide awake.

It won't work. Talk is cheap. She needs action. I know a woman whose husband watches everything on TV continuously, including commercials. They have no time for romance at all.

She said that although her husband loves CBS' "60 Minutes" more than sex, he "defeats" the "silly" comments by Andy Rooney at the end of the program. So they have agreed to make love every Sunday during the last 30 seconds with Andy Rooney.

Class explores golden rule

TWIN FALLS — "The Golden Rule: A Universal Ethic" is the topic of a course on comparative religion which begins Wednesday through the College of Southern Idaho's Continuing Education Division.

Course instructor Harry Massoth said the study of the Golden Rule has particular relevance in today's world, where more and more people find themselves challenged by life in a multi-national, multi-racial and multi-religious society and where the major challenge is increasingly perceived as the evolution of such a society into a unified and peaceful world civilization.

"This class will serve both as a brief introduction to the major world religions and to their various teachings and applications of the Golden Rule," Massoth said.

"We'll also explore how this same idea, expressed as the 'law of reciprocity' in the biological sciences, is being rediscovered by psychologists and social scientists. We'll briefly review M. Scott Peck's book, 'A Different Drummer,' which outlines a particularly exciting philosophy of peacemaking based on the Golden Rule."

Guest speakers from a variety of backgrounds including Christianity, the Bahai Faith, the Fellowship of Reconciliation, and the Beyond War Movement will present different sessions.

The eight-session course meets from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Wednesdays from room 115 of the Shields Building. The fee is $25 and students can preregister in the Taylor Administration Building. For more information call 733-9554, ext. 363.

Registration will also be accepted the first day of class.

1221 Longworth Bldg.,
Washington, D.C. 20515
(202) 225-5531
In Twin Falls: 734-6329

House legislation:

① Sept. 16, House approves import quota bill. By a 263-156 vote, the House endorsed a bill to impose stiff quotas on textile, apparel and shoe imports. The bill imposes an annual 1 percent growth cap on some 185 categories of textile and garment imports, while holding 15 categories of shoe imports to 1986 levels. Craig: NO. Stallings: NO.

U.S. Senate delegates:

Jim McClure
Republican

In Washington:
U.S. Senate
Washington, D.C. 20510
(202) 224-2752
In Twin Falls: 734-6780

Steve Symms
Republican

In Washington:
U.S. Senate
Washington, D.C. 20510
(202) 224-6142

Senate legislation:

① Sept. 15, Senate abandons campaign financing reform. For an unprecedented seventh time the Senate failed—by a 61-44 vote to invoke cloture against a filibuster on a bill that would create a series of voluntary spending limits in Senate primary and general election races and limit the amount of money House and Senate candidates could accept from political action committees (PACS). McClure: NO. Symms: NO.

② Sept. 17, Senate reaffirms curb on SDI testing. The Senate voted 58-38 to retain a provision of the fiscal 1988 defense authorization bill that would restrict development of President Reagan's anti-missile strategic defense initiative (SDI). The provision would bar the administration from conducting anti-missile testing in space in violation of the traditional interpretation of the 1972 anti-ballistic missile (ABM) treaty, unless such testing was approved by Congress. McClure: NO. Symms: NO.

Man's slaying still a mystery

Daughter waits for break

POCATELLO (AP) — It's been almost four months since Brenda Walker's father, Donald Edward Smith, was brutally murdered and his body dumped in a gully northwest of Buhl.

His killer remains at large. For the Pocatello woman, the nightmare of her father's death—the 55-year-old Californian was struck on the back of a head with a blunt object — won't end until the person responsible is apprehended.

Smith's badly decomposed body was found on May 27, but it took a number of weeks to make a positive identification of the body which apparently had been in the gully for several weeks before its discovery.

Ms. Walker, the mother of Smith's two grandchildren, said efforts to find a suspect in the killing have led to dead ends in Idaho and in Colorado, where a hitchhiker who had been seen in her father's company was last seen.

It was in Denver that Smith's truck was found abandoned after being involved in a May 16 hit-and-run accident. Inside the truck, police found a blood-covered tire iron and a key to a Denver motel room. Some of the dead man's clothing was found in the room, but there was no trace of the suspect. Smith's 24-foot-long travel trailer has never been found.

The Pocatello last saw her father, a resident of Hemet, Calif., on May 11 when he came through Idaho to see her during a summer vacation.

He apparently stopped in Blackfoot, where Ms. Walker lived before returning to Pocatello recently. She was away from home on a fishing trip and her father drove on to Springfield, where he found his daughter.

Smith's ultimate destination was Vancouver, Wash., where he was planning to visit a sister.

It was at Springfield, in a tavern, where Ms. Walker last saw her father alive. The memory of that visit remains vivid as does the description of the man traveling with him when he left the area.

The hitchhiker was a black male about 5-foot, 10-inches tall and 160 pounds. He had short hair, was clean shaven and was wearing sunglasses.

"My father was a pretty friendly guy and although he warned me about picking up hitchhikers, he sometimes didn't follow his own advice," Ms. Walker said. "He was very vital, very energetic and thought he could take care of himself."

Ms. Walker noted that her father, who was about 5-foot-11 and 165 pounds, had been a boxer in the Navy.

The woman conjectured that her father, a recovering alcoholic, probably just wanted someone to keep him company on the trip.

Ms. Walker and authorities believe Smith was killed somewhere around Buhl. The killer then dumped his body and continued on his way.

The Pocatello woman did not suspect anything was wrong until she was contacted by her aunt who called to tell her that Smith had never arrived in Vancouver.

It was shortly afterward that Smith's body was identified, based on body tattoos and fingerprints.

Union targets St. Luke's Nurses

BOISE (AP) — Union organizers are attempting to get registered nurses at St. Luke's Regional Medical Center to join the United Food and Commercial Workers International Union.

If the union succeeds, St. Luke's would be the first hospital in Idaho to have a nurses union, organizers said.

The union also is trying to organize other hospital workers, but is concentrating on the nurses, said Jane Hawley, a St. Luke's nurse and a union organizer.

"I've been getting a lot of telephone calls from nurses at other hospitals about what we're doing," Hawley said. "They're just wanting to see what will happen."

Hawley said a successful union effort at St. Luke's could have a domino effect on other hospitals and cause nursing unions to spread through the state.

St. Luke's 600 registered nurses are being canvassed to find out if enough support exists to hold a union election, Hawley said.

If at least 50 percent of the nurses support the idea, an election will be held as early as October, Hawley said.

Hawley said a union is needed because St. Luke's nurses need to increase nurses' salaries, improve benefits and improve working conditions. A union would give nurses the collective bargaining power needed bring about the improvements, she said.

"I've been in nursing 25 years. An Albertson's checker with 2 years experience and without a college education makes $9.00 an hour. That's a $2 less than what I make," St. Luke's emergency room nurse

Robin Young said. "I don't feel nurses are paid commensurately to their education and responsibility."

St. Luke's management refused comment about the union drive, but Gilbertson issued a written statement acknowledging that some of the hospital's employees were disgruntled.

"Some of our employees have expressed concern about compensation, benefits and personnel practices," hospital President E. E. Gilbertson said in a written statement.

Part-time St. Luke's nurse, Patti Day, concurs with the St. Luke's philosophy and said she is opposed to the union because of "the potential for strike. As a nurse I couldn't do that (strike) to my patients, fellow employees or even to the hospital."

Pumpkin contest is one weighty matter

MOSCOW (AP) — Ten-year-old Kip Mayer of Genesee might be in second place in the pumpkin growing contest at the Latah County Fair, but he's one up on University of Idaho President Richard Gibb.

Last year, Gibb won the fair contest with a 176-pounder. In the process, he far surpassed Kip, who had entered a 68-pounder he felt sure would win.

Gibb, magnanimous in victory, invited the crestfallen Kip and his parents Dwight and Jody Mayer to his home for a "pumpkin-raising seminar."

This year, Gibb got blindsided by one of his own employees. Tajuana Cochnauer of Genesee, the UI's minority student coordinator, came out of nowhere with a 241-pound pale yellow giant, from New Jersey seed stock and nourished on Alaska fish fertilizer, that swept the competition.

Ms. Cochnauer entered her great pumpkin with Allan Robert Thielen, of Genesee, and gives additional credit to Miss the watchdog. A good-sized segment of Genesee had a hand in Ms. Cochnauer's and Thielen's triumph, since it took neighbors with a front-end loader and a truck to get the entry to the fair. She also had the opportunity to rub it in against Gibb, since she pulled up behind him at the pavilion when they entered their pumpkins, and Gibb helped her weigh and move into the exhibit-hall the pumpkin that best his 186-pounder.

Kip, a year older and wiser, trundled a 220-pound pumpkin to the fair to take second place.

Claude Dallas: Conditions superior at Nebraska prison

BOISE (AP) — Convicted killer Claude Dallas finds the conditions at a maximum security prison in Nebraska more favorable than at the Idaho State Penitentiary, his attorney said.

Dallas was transferred to the 700-bed prison in Lincoln early Friday. Idaho corrections officials said Dallas' transfer was a routine one for a high-risk prisoner.

Boise attorney Lance Churchill said he had talked to his client on Friday morning.

"He said he liked Nebraska a lot better," Churchill said. "He's got a lot more freedom there than he did here. They're letting him walk around with everybody else."

Churchill said when he visited Dallas at the Idaho prison after his acquittal, Dallas had been placed in a maximum-security isolation cell and was not allowed to mingle with other prisoners.

Corrections Director Al Murphy said the transfer should have come as no surprise.

"I said I was going to do that even before he was captured," Murphy said. "States have to get rid of high-risk prisoners. We do it all the time."

Murphy said Dallas was considered high risk because of his escape and denied that the transfer had stemmed from Dallas' recent acquittal on a felony escape charge. He said Dallas' transfer Thursday was kept secret for security reasons.

Dallas, who killed two game wardens in 1981, was captured March 8 in Riverside, Calif., after escaping from the Idaho State Penitentiary on March 30, 1986, and eluding authorities for almost a year.

This year on the lam included travels to San Francisco, Nevada and Mexico, where he had $3,000 worth of plastic surgery done on his face.

Dallas was acquitted of felony escape by an Ada County jury Sept. 6. The jury found that Dallas' life had been threatened repeatedly by prison guards, that he might have been killed in a prison riot, and that his escape was justified to save his life.

Churchill said Dallas was flown to Nebraska in a small airplane that seats eight people. He was accompanied by two prison guards, the pilot and Tim McNeese, executive assistant for the Department of Corrections.

The attorney said the flight departed about 10 p.m. Thursday, stopped in Wyoming for refueling and landed in Lincoln about 4:30 a.m. Friday. Nebraska prison officials said Dallas was booked into the jail at 4:50 a.m.

Churchill said Dallas' transfer might be expensive because of all the appeals pending in Idaho courts. He said he filed a habeas corpus action against the state prison in late August in an effort to regain Dallas' one year of good time that he had built up prior to his escape.

"The habeas corpus action also seeks relief for prison guards' treatment of Dallas, which is a moot point now that he's in Nebraska," Churchill said.

Dallas also may need to appear in Idaho court to defend himself in a civil suit filed against him by an insurance company that represents the estate of state Fish and Game officers Conley Elms and William Pogue, Churchill said.

Dallas also may need to appear in the appeal of his manslaughter conviction, Churchill said. "That certainly will require his presence at some point."

Dallas' escape trial focused on the state prison and corrections officer Lt. Wayne Nimmo, who had reportedly told other correctional officers that he intended to kill Dallas if given the chance. But Murphy said no changes — personnel or otherwise — were planned at the prison.

BSU fire forces an evacuation

BOISE (AP) — A fire that broke out Friday at Boise State University's Student Union Building caused more than $100,000 in damages and forced about 100 bowlers and pool-players to hot-foot their way outside.

The flames were sparked as a result of spontaneous combustion in a storage room next to the campus bookstore, said Renn Ross, an investigator for the Boise Fire Department.

Ross said rags stained with oil started the fire in the room, which was stocked with piles of paper, books, plastic folders and other school supplies.

The fire spread into the ceiling of the bookstore and spewed smoke into the building's recreational area and both cafeterias. Smoke even seeped into freezers and contaminated food, food managers said.

The fire was ignited about 11:41 p.m. Friday and was fully mopped up by 3:30 a.m. Saturday. It caused little structural damage, but extensive smoke damage and a lot of confusion.

When the fire ignited, about 100 people were forced out of the recreation center through the doors on the building's south side, said Greg Hampton, the facility's manager.

David Foster, 21, who watched firefighters douse the flames, said smoke billowed from the building.

"You couldn't see anything but smoke," he said. "Everything was back with soot."

Giants absorb second straight loss

The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Forget that a referee from the USFL kicked three field goals. Forget that Tom Landry made a questionable coaching decision. Forget that the Dallas Cowboys finally got a break and ended their longest regular-season losing streak since 1963 with a 16-14 victory over the New York Giants.

The important question on the eve of a threatened NFL players strike is: What's wrong with the Super Bowl champion Giants?

New York dropped its second straight regular-season game for the first time since 1985 on Sunday as Roger Ruzek kicked three field goals, including a 28-yard game winner with 5:12 to play, to end Dallas' six-game regular-season losing streak.

"I think they (the Giants) are going to find out you win the Super Bowl, the next year everyone is out there looking for you," said Dallas defensive tackle Randy White.

"Every week you play it's going to be tough."

This week was no exception. The Cowboys forced five New York turnovers, twice rallied to take the lead and then withstood a frantic last-minute New York drive that ended when Raul Allegre's 46-yard field goal attempt with six seconds to play sailed wide to the left.

"This is the greatest feeling in sports," said Dallas safety Bill Bates, whose second-quarter interception set up Dallas' only touchdown. "To beat the Super Bowl champions is a great feeling. Hopefully, no matter what happens Tuesday (the strike deadline), we can carry this into the regular season."

For the Giants, the prospects for 1987 suddenly are questionable.

They were embarrassed in losing to Chicago last Monday and their offense looked miserable against Dallas, putting together just one scoring drive and holding the ball just 18:18 in the game.

"This is not a nice feeling," Giants center Bart Oates said. "There is a bitter taste in my mouth. We knew if we didn't play well we were going to be 0-2 at the start of the season. There is anger here. There is disappointment. We didn't put enough pressure on them offensively."

The only pressure the Giants mounted came in the final minute after they stopped a fourth-down attempt by Dallas' Herschel-Walker and took over inside their 5-yard line with no time out. It was a coaching decision the Cowboy players said they favored, but one that would have been second-guessed had Dallas lost.

"When you lose six straight, you do crazy things," said Landry. "I suppose that was crazy."

For a while it looked very crazy as Phil Simms connected on five of nine passes to move the Giants to the Dallas 29 before Allegre missed his attempt at a game-winner.

"I was just trying to reach it," Allegre said. "Everything was perfect. I just missed it. I'm not going to make any excuses."

Trailing 14-10 midway through the third quarter after a 69-yard interception return by Terry Kinard set up a 1-yard touchdown pass from Simms to Mark Bavaro, Dallas closed the gap to one point when Ruzek hit a 43-yard field goal.

With the New York offense sputtering at every opportunity, Dallas took the lead by driving 66 yards in 11 plays to set up Roger Ruzek's 28-yard field goal.

Little hope remains of averting Tuesday NFL player walkout

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — NFL teams played what could be their final games of 1987 Sunday, 48 hours away from a strike that seemed inevitable unless someone could "pull a rabbit out of a hat."

There was hardly a hint of optimism as 26 of the league's 28 teams took the field under the shadow of the second strike in six years and the fifth since 1968. It will start when the other two teams, the New York Jets and New England Patriots, complete their game Monday night.

"My agenda now is to prepare for a strike," Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, said at union headquarters in Washington, where picket signs were ready for Tuesday's walkout.

No new talks were scheduled, and the two sides were unable even to agree on their disagreements. The owners claimed the players' demand for free agency was the sole issue that couldn't be resolved easily; the union said the owners were stalling on a vast range of issues.

Owners, meanwhile, were going ahead with plans to play games with free agents. Several teams claimed they had nearly full rosters signed to resume play in two weeks, with the fourth week of the season.

"I'm still working on the theory that we might be able to pull a rabbit out of a hat," Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, said Sunday. "I don't think it's likely, but I have to keep thinking that way."

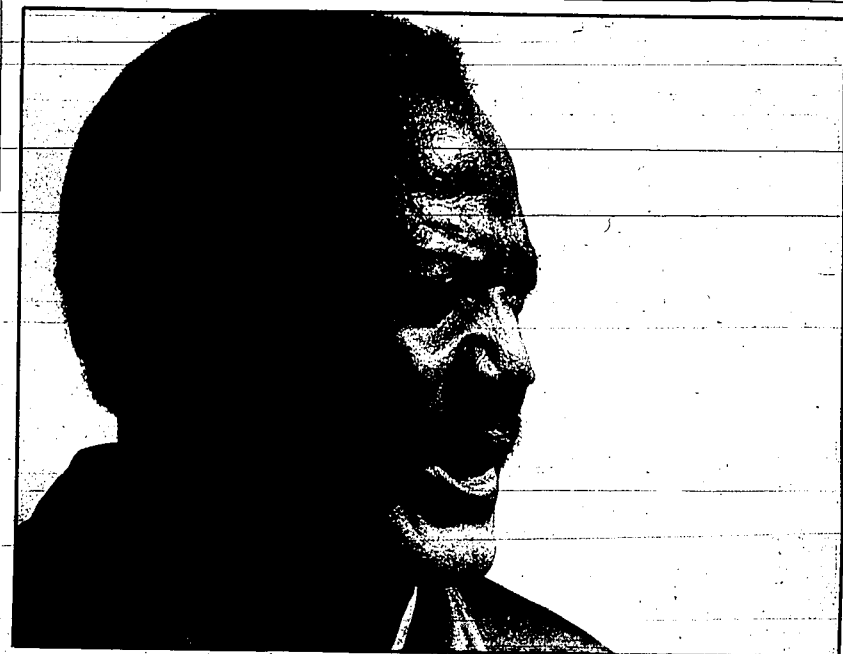

But Upshaw saw no rabbits on the horizon following the most recent meeting, an informal three-hour session between the two chief negotiators Friday. At those talks, the union rejected Donlan's request for a 30-day extension of the strike deadline in return for concessions on issues other than free agency.

"We need someone to make the deal," Upshaw said. "Obviously, when Jack talked to me, it was just part of a grand plan. ... We've met one-on-one eight or 10 times. I'm not going to meet with him one-on-one again if he's going to be vague and general."

The versions of these informal talks were symbolic of the chasm between the sides.

The Management Council said Donlan offered concessions on pension, roster size and other issues; Upshaw said he heard nothing specific that could make him postpone the strike deadline.

At 51, Brown still running

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In the days of million-dollar salaries in rushing, some of the greatest stars never got to share in the money that's now available.

He was an athlete who led the National Football League in rushing eight of his nine seasons and still holds the record for lifetime carries and career average per carry.

Yet James Nathaniel Brown retired from football 21 years ago making $75,000 a year, an amount that is just above the current $50,000 minimum NFL salary.

Brown, in Twin Falls this week and to participate in the Latham Chrysler-Plymouth Celebrity Golf Classic ended his three-day run at Blue Lakes Country Club Sunday afternoon.

Sunday's closing four-person scramble was won by comedian Sammy Shore and his amateur crew of Donna Shields and Denny and Corky Curtis of American Falls. They had a 58 along

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Amid promises of bigger and better things next year, the first annual Latham Chrysler-Plymouth Celebrity Golf Classic ended its three-day run at Blue Lakes Country Club Sunday afternoon. Sunday's closing four-person scramble was won by comedian Sammy Shore and his amateur crew of Donna Shields and Denny and Corky Curtis of American Falls. They had a 58 along track and lacrosse.

Strangely enough, he was recruited by Syracuse University for lacrosse, but chose football instead, rushing for over 2,000 yards and 25 touchdowns.

In his first year with Cleveland, Brown's running ability helped the team do a virtual turnaround.

In 1966, the Browns finished with a record of 5-7 and in 1967, Brown's first year, the club won the championship of the old Eastern Conference with a 9-2-1 record. That year, Brown rushed for 942 yards.

Now, the former NFL great does his talking with prisoners instead of with the football.

He is the executive director with a program called Vital Issues.

Brown works with the rehabilitation of inmates in prisons across the United States.

"It's the greatest thing you can do," said the 51-year-old Brown, who explained that his group contacts the head of the corrections department in prisons all over the U.S.

In their work, Brown said, there are eight parts of the rehabilitation program. They deal with things the prisoners face outside prison walls. The group suggests ideas on goals and job skills as two examples.

"It's all done by interaction," said Brown, adding that a monitor in the interaction inside the prisons starts the discussions and watches from that point.

"The group is now working on getting new contracts for this year."

Besides his work with Vital Issues, Brown also works with Ocean Productions, a independent film producer.

"We specialize in low-production films featuring minorities," said Brown.

Ocean's first release out on videocassettes soon. It'll be a biography on Brown's NFL career.

Brown is no stranger to the film industry. He's been in 17 feature films with the one most noteworthy being The Dirty Dozen, which was

Fumbling Broncos settle for 17-17 tie with Pack

By RICK GANO
The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Rain, mud and turnovers kept the Denver Broncos in a game-long slide Sunday. And when Rich Karlis missed a 40-yard field goal in the closing seconds of overtime they had to settle for a 17-17 tie with the Green Bay Packers.

"It's a miserable field position. We didn't protect—the ball—it was Coach Dan Reeves after three interceptions and three fumbles."

"We turned the ball over too many times. We made too many mistakes to win the game," he said.

Denver's Dennis Smith recovered a fumble by the Packers' Kenneth Davis with 1:06 left at the Packers' 35. On second down, Broncos quarterback John Elway picked up his own fumble and ran 14 yards to the Packers' 23 with 13 seconds left. But Karlis' kick on the next play sailed wide left.

"I thought I had a pretty good place picked out to kick from but the grass was long all over. They haven't cut it for about a week," Karlis said. "Those conditions were the worst I ever, it was really a nightmare."

The Packers' Al Del Greco also missed a 47-yard field goal in overtime on Green Bay's first possession.

"Nobody likes a tie, but I'll take it over a loss any day," Green Bay Coach Forrest Gregg said. "If we would have lost it would have been devastating the way we've been struggling."

The Broncos are 1-0-1 and the Packers 0-1-1 with a players strike looming Tuesday.

With 1:16 left in overtime, Packers linebacker Brian Noble stopped a Broncos drive by intercepting Elway at the Green Bay 24 and returning it 10 yards. But Davis fumbled the ball right back on the next play.

"We're definitely not satisfied with a tie but we didn't lose," said Noble.

"It's a game we could have won and probably should have won. It was fun to play in those conditions."

Elway, who was intercepted three times, led the Broncos on an 18-play, 80-yard drive that consumed over eight minutes of the final quarter and tied the score at 17. Elway was 30 of 48 for 285 yards. Green Bay rookie Don Majkowski, making his first start, threw for 133 yards.

Blue Jays beat Yankees to trim Tigers' AL East lead to 1/2 game

NEW YORK (AP) — George Bell again got the big hit for Toronto, and the Blue Jays won a big game Sunday that tightened up the American League East race.

Bell and Nelson Lirio hit two-run homers as Toronto beat the New York Yankees 6-2 and pulled within one-half game of division-leading Detroit, which lost to Milwaukee 11-4.

Bell's 46th homer, tying Oakland's Mark McGwire for most in the majors and Orlando Cepeda for most ever in a season by a Latin player, put Toronto ahead 2-0. It came with the Yankee Stadium scoreboard showing Detroit losing, and after he had been brushed back and struck out by rookie Al Leiter in the second inning.

"Nothing bothers me," said Bell, who took a called strike in his first at-bat after he thought he had called time.

"Big games, big situations, he likes those," Toronto Manager Jimmy Williams said. "If you take everything into consideration, it was a big home run."

New York Manager Lou Piniella, whose team split the four-game series with Toronto, generally liked what he saw in Leiter's second, major-league appearance.

Cardinals throttle Cubs to gain some breathing room in NL East

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The heat of a title race aside, John Morris had his own inspiration while leading the St. Louis Cardinals to a 10-2 victory Sunday over the Chicago Cubs.

"I know he's up there looking down at me," Morris said after returning two hours before the game from his father's funeral. "He's right up there saying, 'That's the way to go, Johnny.'"

Morris said he would dedicate the remainder of the season to the memory of his father, who died Wednesday night.

"It's been a very, very difficult situation. I was very drained," the St. Louis outfielder said. "When I saw my name in the lineup, I said, 'OK.'"

Morris responded to his challenge by driving in a career-high four runs with two singles and a groundout.

"I'm very thankful that Whitely (Horzog) threw me right back in there," Morris said. "I think he was doing me a favor by not letting me sit around and not letting me feel sorry for myself."

Morris' hits provided the spark for the Cubs' comeback, as they home run by Vince Coleman, who knocked in three runs.

"I hit that one pretty good," Coleman said of his 395-foot drive into the bleachers in left-center.

NL: Mets drop a game on Cards in 14th

PITTSBURGH (AP)—You might not know it by the standings, but the Pittsburgh Pirates are fighting for a pennant these days. Just ask the New York Mets.

Barry Bonds tripled and scored on Andy Van Slyke's sacrifice fly in the 14th inning as the Pirates rallied from four runs behind to hand the New York Mets a costly 9-8 loss Sunday.

The victory was the Pirates' second in a three-game series in which each game was decided by one run. The Mets fell 2½ games behind National League East-leading St. Louis, which beat Chicago 10-2.

"We're not trying to be spoilers, we're just trying to find out where we fit as a contender," said Pirates Manager Jim Leyland, whose team lost 17 of 18 to the world champion Mets last year. "In the not-too-distant future, we want to be in the race ourselves."

The Pirates have won 11 of their last 14, including four of seven in the last week against the top three teams in the NL East.

"We can't win it, and we don't care who wins it, but we're letting everybody know we're in a pennant race," Leyland said.

Baseball

With one out in the 14th, Bonds hit a shot down the right field line that momentarily stilled Darryl Strawberry, allowing Bonds to stretch the hit into a triple. Jose Lind was intentionally walked before Randy Myers replaced Bob Ojeda, 2-5, who had limited the Pirates to a run over four innings.

Van Slyke then lofted a fly ball to medium range in left field against the Mets' drawn-in outfield, allowing Bonds to score easily. The loss was Ojeda's first in six career decisions against Pittsburgh, which is 6-10 against the Mets this season.

Expos 4-1 Sunday.

Schmidt hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning, giving him 626 for his career and 487 as a third baseman, one more than Eddie Matthews.

Gross, 9-14, struck out seven and walked three as he won for the first time since Aug. 16. He was relieved in the eighth by Steve Bedrosian, who got the last five outs for his 39th save.

Los Angeles 5 Atlanta 3

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Ralph Bryant had three hits, including a two-run single that highlighted a four-run first inning, as the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Atlanta Braves 5-3 Sunday.

Rookie Tim Lincecum, 3-1, struck out four, walked one and allowed five hits—in six innings before Alejandro Pena pitched the final three for his sixth save.

Houston 3 San Diego 2

HOUSTON (AP)—Pinch-hitter Jim Pavankovic lined a bases-loaded

Cincinnati 10 San Francisco 6

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Nick Esasky's grand slam homer capped a six-run ninth inning rally and lifted the Cincinnati Reds to a 10-6 victory Sunday over the San Francisco Giants.

The Reds, who entered the ninth trailing 6-4, snapped the Giants' seven-game winning streak and pulled to within eight games of first place. The Giants' magic number for clinching the National League West remained at six.

Cincinnati began its winning rally with a leadoff single by Barry Larkin. Kal Daniels, who previously had a double and two homers, lined a one-out single to right-center, and Jeff Treadway followed with a run-scoring single.

AL: Morris fails to hold Detroit's lead

DETROIT (AP)—The Milwaukee Brewers, frustrated by two days of good pitching, took it out Sunday on Detroit's best pitcher — Jack Morris — while bombing the Tigers, 11-4.

The defeat cut the Tigers' lead to one-half game over Toronto in the American League East. The Blue Jays on Sunday beat the Yankees, 6-2, in New York.

The Brewers exploded for five home runs, three of them off Morris, in overturning a sweep of the three-game series.

Dale Sveum, Robin Yount and Paul Molitor hit the home runs off Morris. Bill Schroeder hit one off Eric King and Glenn Braggs hit one off Jeff Robinson.

"We felt confident because we had some guys swinging the bat pretty good, despite the fact we'd lost two games," Milwaukee Manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "Early, Morris didn't have his good stuff today. Later, he got it, but he made a couple of mistakes."

Morris, 18-9, who has given up 39 home runs — second only to the 42 of Minnesota's Bert Blyleven — was in trouble from the very first pitch. "I felt like," said Morris, who was starting with three days rest rather than his normal four for only the second time all season. "I felt very good, actually. It was one of those days when I thought I had very good stuff and still got waxed."

Eagle defense dumps Saints, 27-17

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The Philadelphia Eagles finally played Coach Buddy Ryan's "46" defense the way he invented it.

The Eagles intercepted three passes, made three sacks and recovered two fumbles in a 27-17 victory over the New Orleans Saints Sunday.

Randall Cunningham threw a pair of touchdown passes to help overcome a first-period 10-0 deficit, but Ryan's defense stole the day.

The defense held down Rueben Mayes, one of the NFL's most gifted runners, with 20 yards on 13 carries. It held the Saints to 220 yards total offense and 32 on the ground.

Since taking over the Eagles' job before the 1986 season, Ryan has been screaming that his young team will win when it learns his style of defense and puts points on the board.

The last Philadelphia TD was a Ryan special, a sack that gave linebacker Seth Joyner the ball for an 11-yard TD run.

"For a year and a half, we were probably the only defense in the world that hadn't scored," Ryan said. "I think all our defensive linemen played well."

NFC East

Ryan said cornerback Royne Young's return last week after a concussion meant his young team a feeling of security in the secondary.

"It sure gave me a feeling of security. But we're still not as aggressive as we'd like to be," Ryan said.

Philadelphia strong safety Russell Gary said the Eagles' defensive corner Norman Braman chose over Ryan, said he knew the Saints would have a hard time running the ball.

"It wasn't just stopping Rueben Mayes, it was stopping the entire Saints' run offense," he said.

Mora said the game turned because the Eagles took away the Saints' early momentum.

"They made the plays and we didn't. We can't expect to play that badly and expect to win. ... We were just beaten by a better team," he said.

The Eagles trailed 10-0 after the first period, but a 30-yard field goal by Paul McFadden and Cunningham's 19-yard touchdown pass to Mike Quick and 25-yard pass to Kenny Kauter triggered their first victory of the season against an opening loss.

The Saints failed in a quest for their first 2-0 start in the 21-year history of the franchise.

Cunningham's go-ahead touchdown pass to Jason with 22 seconds left in the half was subjected to an instant-replay judgment because the Saints claimed he had one foot out of bounds.

Ralph Morecroft, the replay official, said, "I could not positively dispute his (the official's) call. That's as simple as it is."

In the third quarter, a fumble recovered by Charles Crawford led to another 30-yard field goal by McFadden and a 20-10 Philadelphia lead.

The Saints had built a 10-0 lead in the first period on a 45-yard field goal by Morten Andersen and a 6-yard touchdown pass from Hebert to tight end John Rice, capping a five-play, 16-yard drive.

Axers earn 24-17 win over Montana

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP)—It wasn't pretty, but Northern Arizona University football Coach Larry Kentera says "a win is a win" and he'll take it.

College football

The Lumberjacks overcame some early mistakes and used Greg Wyatt's 267 passing yards and Charles Matthews' two touchdown runs to beat Montana 24-17 in the Big Sky Conference opener for both teams here Saturday night.

"Montana gave us a tough time," Kentera said. "We got ourselves in trouble early with a turnover and we had to play catch-up and that's not a situation you want to be in."

Wyatt completed 16 of 27 passes as Northern Arizona posted its second victory in as many starts.

Cleveland whips Steelers

CLEVELAND (AP)—Mark Malone honestly didn't believe he was throwing the ball that poorly.

The Pittsburgh quarterback was intercepted five times Sunday, including four times in his young half, as the Steelers lost to the Cleveland Browns 34-10. Three of the interceptions came on odd deflections.

"I came in and felt like I was throwing the ball well," Malone said. "The last interception was a good play by (linebacker Clay) Matthews. The other four — you're looking at three deflections and a great play."

The game was tied 10-10 in the third quarter when Cleveland's Mike Johnson intercepted Malone at the Steelers 23-yard line. Malone's pass hit receiver Louis Lipps in the hands, but Lipps dropped it as he was pulled down by defender Frank Minnifield.

Before the ball hit the ground, it hit Lipps in the foot and bounced high enough for Johnson to grab it.

CSI harriers win; netters third

By The Times-News

The College of Southern Idaho's men's cross country team finished first in a meet in Missoula, Mont., Saturday, while Idaho State's volleyball team placed third in a tournament in St. George, Utah.

The Eagle harriers defeated the Community College of Spokane (Wash.) and the University of Montana in the men's division of the Montana Invitational meet Saturday in Missoula. CSI got a 1-2 finish from sophomore Robert McGovern, who covered the 4-mile course in 20 minutes, 59 seconds, and from Todd McKay, who turned in a 21:19.

In St. George, the CSI volleyball team lost twice to Eastern Arizona College College and finished behind EAC and host Dixie College in the Dixie Invitational Tournament. CSI finished the day 2-2 Saturday, including two losses to EAC and victories over the College of Eastern Utah and Dixie that improved the Eagles' season record to 14-9.

Second-string QB rallies Vikings past Rams

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Wade Wilson figured he had seen "two-minute Tommy" pull out enough games that he could do it himself.

Remember two-minute Tommy (Kramer)? Wilson asked rhetorically.

"Remember Tommy's ability to bring us back from a deficit in the last two minutes of a game? I accomplished that today and I feel really good about it," Wilson said Sunday after he rallied the Minnesota Vikings to a dramatic 21-16 victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

As Kramer, recuperating from a neck injury, watched from the sidelines, Wilson guided the Vikings 80 yards in the waning moments. With 30 seconds on the clock, he hit Hassan Jones for the 41-yard touchdown pass for the

NFC Central

It was the third touchdown pass of the afternoon for Wilson, who also threw for three scores in the Vikings' 34-19 opening victory over Detroit last week.

"I think the coaches have a little more confidence in me now," said Wilson, mostly a backup in his previous six NFL seasons. He was the 210th player selected in the 1961 college draft and was getting just his 12th NFL start.

"I relish any chance to play," he said.

Wilson, who completed 17 of 38 passes for 285 yards, had thrown touchdown passes of eight yards to Carl Hilton and 46 yards to Anthony Carter in the opening half, but was frustrated by the Rams in the second half until the closing minutes of the game.

Wilson and the Vikings seemed on their last gasp when they faced fourth-and-16 at their own 25 with 2:10 remaining. But, using the same play they'd later go for in the winning touchdown, Wilson hit Jones for a 20-yard gain.

Moments later, Jones got behind Los Angeles cornerback LeRoy Irwin and hauled in the winning pass at the Rams' goal line.

"We kept playing with that never-say-die attitude and good things finally happened for us," Jones said.

The Vikings improved their record to 2-0, while the Rams dropped to 0-2 as their offense sputtered and stalled again.

Rams Coach John Robinson said, "We're off to a horrible start. I don't think we're a very good football team right now."

"Our offense didn't play well. But the things we want to happen will happen; we're confident of that."

Although the coaches and players were asked about the possible playoff strike, most said they were simply waiting to see what will happen.

CHICAGO (AP) — Walter Payton and Neal Anderson, the old and new of the Chicago backfield, each rushed for a touchdown Sunday, with Payton also catching a 9-yard pass for another score to lead the Bears to a 20-3 victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Payton's touchdown, a 1-yard drive, gave the 33-year old veteran a record 107th NFL rushing touchdown, breaking a tie with Jim Brown. But Payton, the NFL's all-time rushing leader, gained only 24 yards in 15 carries.

Anderson, 23, broke a 27-yard touchdown in the second quarter, while gaining 115 yards in 16 attempts to lead a sputtering Bears offense guilty of two fumbles and two interceptions.

The Bears clinched it when Mike Tomczak hit Payton with the 9-yard touchdown pass with 3:20 left in the game after Tomczak had connected on a 46-yard pass to Willie Gault.

Midway in the first quarter, James Wilder caught a short pass from Steve DeBerg but fumbled and Chicago's Mike Singletary recovered on the Chicago 22-yard line.

The Bears, helped by a 49-yard pass interference penalty against Rod Jones, put together a 78-yard march to take a 7-0 lead on Payton's touchdown. It took Payton four attempts from the 5-yard line before scoring.

DeBerg completed 18 of 36 passes for 195 yards before leaving late in the fourth quarter in favor of rookie Vinny Testaverde, who made his NFL debut and completed one of four passes for 14 yards.

Kelly engineers comeback win

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — After so many near-misses, Jim Kelly showed he can hit the bulls-eye.

Kelly, who led a Bills fourth-quarter rally that erased a 10-point Houston lead and made the Bills 34-30 winners over the Oilers Sunday, could read minds when he threw an interception as the Bills trailed 27-20 with six minutes left in the game.

"You probably thought not again when I threw the interception in the fourth quarter," said Kelly, who knows Bills fans are used to the team's many near-misses over the past few seasons.

"In my heart and in my soul, I wanted that ball back so badly so I could show the fans, my teammates and all the reporters that Jim Kelly has a winning spirit and that I'll do whatever it takes to win."

After the Oilers turned Kelly's interception into a field goal that gave them a 10-point lead, the Bills broke with tradition. He engineered the kind of come-from-behind victory seen infrequently by Bills fans.

In the game's final five minutes, Kelly moved the Bills 80 yards to

AFC East

Robb Riddick's 2-yard touchdown run. They came a 54-yard drive that ended with Kelly's 10-yard scoring pass to Ron Harmon with 57 seconds to play.

Kelly, who hit on 26 of 43 passes for 293 yards and three touchdowns, was the game's star. But the Bills were sparked just as much by a third-quarter fight. Bills defensive end Bruce Smith and linebacker Darryl Talley, and Oilers offensive tackle Doug Williams were ejected from the game.

"I don't know if it was a turning point, but the crowd got into it," Bills Coach Marv Levy said. "We had a great defensive series immediately after that. I think that did it."

Oilers Coach Jerry Glanville was angry about the brawl. "Players have to be smart enough to walk away from scuffles," he said.

Glanville was also upset his team didn't bear down when it led by the lead, saying "We can't keep an NFL team in the game and beat them. If they learn from

Miami 23 Indianapolis 10

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Dan Marino's mastery of Indianapolis continued with 254 yards and three touchdowns passes Sunday as Miami extended the NFL's longest victory string against one team to 14 games with a 23-10 triumph over the Colts.

Marino, who has never lost to the Colts, twice victimized rookie safety Freddie Robinson, who missed tackles at the Indianapolis 16 and 2-yard lines which allowed the Dolphins to score.

The Dolphins, who haven't lost to the Colts since 1960, took a 16-point lead on Marino's third touchdown pass, a 10-yarder to Mark Clayton midway through the third quarter. His earlier scoring passes were for 18 yards to rookie Troy Stadford and six yards to Jim Jensen.

Backup QB Campbell directs Falcons over Redskins, 21-20

ATLANTA (AP) — Scott Campbell didn't even figure to make the Atlanta Falcons' roster when training camp began.

He stuck it out and finally got his chance Sunday, throwing for two touchdowns to spark a 21-20 upset of the Washington Redskins.

"Funny things can happen," Campbell said, alluding to making the roster when the Falcons were unable to sign No. 1 draft choice Chris Miller.

Campbell got his first start as a Falcon when Dave Archer failed to generate any offense in last week's season-opening 48-10 loss at Tampa Bay.

"We were embarrassed last week so we wanted to play better today," Campbell said. "It may be the most fun I ever had in a football game. It's a great gratifying thing for me."

The Falcons gained the victory on Gerald Riggs' second touchdown run with 6:47 remaining.

The victory margin came as a result of a botched extra point try after the Redskins scored second touchdown; a bouncing snap by Jeff Bestie couldn't be handled by holder Eric Yarber.

NFC West

"After we went through what we did last week, this makes this victory even better," Atlanta Coach Marion Campbell said. "Scott Campbell gave us the spark we were looking for."

"We had some tough things happen to us," Washington Coach Joe Gibbs said. "All of us share in this loss."

Campbell completed 17 of 34 passes for 271 yards.

Campbell threw a 19-yard scoring pass to Floyd Dixon in the first quarter and came back with a 23-yarder to Stacy Bailey in the third.

Campbell also completed 3 of 6 passes for 49 yards, including a 33-yarder to Dixon on a third-and-10 situation, in Atlanta's winning 80-yard drive that started with 11:40 to play.

Atlanta, giving the San Francisco 49ers a stunning 27-26 NFL victory over the Cincinnati Bengals.

Rice outmanned rookie cornerback Eric Thomas in the end zone to make his dramatic game-winning catch. A tactical error by the Bengals, 1-1, gave Montana the chance for his game-winning third touchdown pass.

The Bengals were protecting a 26-20 lead and had the ball with 64 seconds to play at their own 45-yard line. Quarterback Boomer Esiason ran the times, losing 20 yards in the 49ers' use of their time. The Bengals then took a delay penalty with six seconds left, putting the ball on the 30, and choose to run on fourth down rather than punt.

James Brooks was stopped for a 6-yard loss on the play, stopping the clock on the exchange. That left Montana two seconds to work his magic.

He lifted the ball to Rice, who went up and cleanly caught it in front of Thomas. The rookie cornerback also had been burned twice in the game for touchdown bombs.

Ray Wersching's extra point with no time left on the clock gave the 49ers, 1-1, the victory.

Seahawks take season-opening loss out on hapless Kansas City, 43-14

SEATTLE (AP) — Dave Krieg passed for three touchdowns and fullback John L. Williams had the first 100-yard rushing game of his NFL career Sunday as the Seattle Seahawks defeated the mistake-prone Kansas City Chiefs 43-14.

The loss came a week after the Seahawks were routed 40-17 by Denver in their season opener.

Tom Johnson kicked a team record five field goals, from 34, 25, 46, 27 and 49 yards for Seattle, 1-1. Johnson also missed a 39-yarder.

The Chiefs fumbled four times, including three times in the third quarter as the Seahawks got 20 points to break open the game after leading 17-7 at halftime.

Krieg had touchdown passes of nine and 17 yards to the Daryl Turner in the second-quarter, and also passed two yards to tight end Mike Tice for a score in the third quarter.

In a unique strategy, first-year Kansas City Coach Frank Ganzer brought in nine-year veteran quarterback Bill Kenney in place of starting quarterback Todd Blackledge in long passing situations.

Blackledge passed 10 yards to Carlos Carson for Kansas City's touchdown in the second quarter.

Kenney threw a fourth-quarter interception for Kansas City's fifth turnover of the day. Kenney passed 10 yards to Carson for a touchdown with 1:07 to go.

The 226-pound Williams easily outperformed Kansas City rookie fullback Christian Okoye, a second-round draft choice who is from Nigeria. Williams rushed 15 times for 112 yards, including a 1-yard touchdown run in the third quarter.

L.A. Raiders 27 Detroit 7

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rusty Hilger passed for 234 yards and one touchdown and Marcus Allen rushed for 79 yards and another score Sunday as the Los Angeles Raiders overcame a 7-6 halftime deficit to beat the Detroit Lions 27-7.

The outcome left the Raiders with a 2-0 record while the Lions, who blew numerous scoring opportunities, fell to 0-2. Los Angeles has allowed just seven points in its two games.

Hilger, who completed 20 of 39 passes, put the Raiders ahead for good with a 14-yard scoring pass to Dokie Williams at 2:14 of the third quarter.

after Williams recovered Karl Bernard's fumble of the second-half kickoff at the Detroit 23-yard line.

Allen, who carried 22 times, scored on a 1-yard plunge with 11:33 left to make it 20-7.

Los Angeles got its final points on a 1-yard run by Vance Mueller with 1:57 remaining.

San Diego 28 St. Louis 24

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Lionel James returned a punt 81 yards for a touchdown and ran seven yards for another score Sunday as the San Diego Chargers beat off the St. Louis Cardinals 28-24.

San Diego grabbed a 28-0 halftime lead, converting two St. Louis turnovers into 14 points, with Chargers linebacker Billy Ray Smith producing an interception and a fumble recovery.

But St. Louis quarterback Neil Lomax, who completed 32 of 61 passes for 457 yards and three touchdowns, rallied his team to all of its points in the second half.

Lomax's 17-yard TD pass to Stump Mitchell with 1:48 remaining completed a 10-play, 80-yard drive and was the fourth straight scoring drive for St. Louis.

The Chargers were bottled up at their own 6 when Gary Anderson misplayed the ensuing kickoff. San Diego couldn't make a first down and Rolf Mojsisjenko punted from the end zone, with the Cardinals taking over on the Chargers' 32 after a 19-yard return by Vai Sihakema.

Lomax hit Jay Novack on the San Diego 12, then connected with Earl Ferrell to take the Cardinals to the 5. Lomax then threw three incompletions and, on fourth down, a wide-open Ferrell dropped a pass at the goal line.

James' 7-yard touchdown run, the final score of the first half, came with 1:28 remaining in the second period. The scoring play was preceded by Smith's interception of Lomax, with the Chargers' linebacker picking off the ball at the St. Louis 12 and returning it five yards to set up James' second touchdown.

The 5-foot-6, 170-pound James returned the punt for the touchdown after the Cardinals failed to make a first down on their first possession.

PITTSBURGH (AP) - You might not know it by the standings, but the Pittsburgh Pirates are fighting for a pennant these days. Just ask the New York Mets.

Barry Bonds tripled and scored on Andy Van Slyke's sacrifice fly in the 14th inning as the Pirates rallied from four runs behind to hand the New York Mets a costly 9-8 loss Sunday.

The victory was the Pirates' second in a three-game series in which each game was decided by one run. The Mets fell 2 1/2 games behind National League East-leading St. Louis, which beat Chicago 10-2.

"We're not trying to be spoilers, we're just trying to find out what it's like to be a contender," said Pirates Manager Jim Leyland, whose team lost 17 of 18 to the world champion Mets last year. "In the not-too-distant future, we want to be in the race ourselves."

The Pirates have won 11 of their last 14, including four of seven in the last week against the top three teams in the NL East.

"We can't win it, and we don't care who wins it, but we're letting everybody know we're in a pennant race," Leyland said.

With one out in the 14th, Bonds hit a shot down the right field line that momentarily eluded Darryl Strawberry, allowing Bonds to stretch the hit into a triple. Jose Lind was intentionally walked before Randy Meyer replaced Bob Ojeda, 2-6, who had limited the Pirates to a run over four innings.

Van Slyke then lofted a fly ball to medium-range right field against the Mets' drawn-in outfield, allowing Bonds to score easily. The loss was Ojeda's first in six career decisions against Pittsburgh, which is 5-10 against the Mets this season.

Philadelphia 4

MONTREAL (AP) - Kevin Gross homered and pitched a five-hitter for 7 1/2 innings, while Mike Schmidt set an all-time record for home runs by a third baseman as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Montreal

Expos 4-1 Sunday.

Schmidt hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning, giving him 626 for his career and 487 as a third baseman, one more than Eddie Matthews.

Los Angeles 5

ATLANTA (AP) - Los Angeles Angels pitcher Steve Bedrosian, who got the last five outs for his 39th save.

Atlanta 3

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Ralph Bryant had three hits, including a two-run single that lifted Atlanta Braves 5-3 Sunday.

Rookie Tim Belcher, 3-1, struck out four, walked one and allowed five hits in six innings before Alejandro Pena pitched the final three for his sixth save.

Houston 3

SAN DIEGO 2 HOUSTON (AP) - Pinch-hitter Jim Pankovita lined a bases-loaded

single to left in the ninth inning, giving Houston a 3-2 victory over San Diego Sunday, snapping a four-game winning streak for the Padres and a five-game losing streak for the Astros.

Cincinnati 10

SAN FRANCISCO 6 SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Nick Eassey's grand slam homer capped a six-run ninth inning rally and lifted the Cincinnati Reds to a 10-6 victory Sunday over the San Francisco Giants.

The Reds, who entered the ninth trailing 6-4, snapped the Giants' seven-game winning streak and pulled to within eight games of first place. The Giants' magic number for clinching the National League West remained at six.

Cincinnati began its winning rally with a leadoff single by Barry Larkin. Kal Daniels, who previously had a double and two homers, led off with a single to right-center, and Jeff Treadway followed with a run-scoring single.

Texas 2

CALIFORNIA 1 ARLINGTON, TEXAS (AP) - Darrell Porter drew a bases-loaded walk with one out in the 10th inning, and Steve Howe won in relief as the Texas Rangers beat the California Angels 2-1 Sunday.

Seattle 5

CHICAGO 3 CHICAGO (AP) - Carlton Fisk singled home Ivan Calderon for his 16th game-winning hit to trigger a four-run fifth inning and rookie Jack McDowell won his second straight start as the Chicago White Sox defeated the Seattle Mariners 5-3 Sunday.

Boston 6

BALTIMORE 3 BALTIMORE (AP) - Todd Bon-inger hit a two-run homer on an 0-2 pitch from Tom Niedzier in the ninth inning of the second game, giving the Boston Red Sox a 6-3 victory over Baltimore and a sweep of Sunday's double-header.

Oakland 7

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Mark McGwire had four hits, and Oakland got some help from a rare error by Willie Wilson to beat the Kansas City Royals 7-6 Sunday and sweep their three-game series.

Axers earn 24-17 win over Montana

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) - It wasn't pretty, but Northern Arizona University football Coach Larry Kentera says "a win is a win" and he'll take it.

College football

The Lumberjacks overcame some early mistakes and used Greg Wyatt's 267 passing yards and Charles Matthews' two touchdown runs to beat Montana 24-17 in the Big Sky Conference opener for both teams here Saturday night.

AL: Morris fails to hold Detroit's lead

DETROIT (AP) - The Milwaukee Brewers, frustrated by two days of good pitching, took it out Sunday on Detroit's best pitcher - Jack Morris - while bombing the Tigers, 11-4.

The defeat cut the Tigers' lead to one-half game over Toronto in the American League East. The Blue Jays on Sunday beat the Yankees, 6-2, in New York.

"The Brewers exploded for five home runs, three of them by Morris, in averting a sweep of the three-game series.

Dale Sveum, Robin Yount and Paul Molitor hit the home runs off Morris. Bill Schroeder hit one off Eric King and Glenn Briggs hit one off Jeff Robinson.

"We felt confident because we had some guys swinging the bat pretty good, despite the fact we'd lost two games," Milwaukee Manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "Early,

Ryan said cornerback Roynell Young's return last week after a contract dispute gave his young team a feeling of security in the secondary.

"It sure gave me a feeling of security. But we're still not as aggressive as we'd like to be," Ryan said.

Philadelphia strong safety Russell Gary said the Eagles' defensive coordinator Norm Maclean and Ruben Mayes, one of the NFL's most gifted runners, with 20 yards on 13 carries. It held the Saints to 220 yards total offense and 32 on the ground.

Since taking over the Eagles' job before the 1986 season, Ryan has been screaming that his young team will win when it learns his style of defense and puts points on the board.

The last Philadelphia TD was a Ryan special, a sack that gave linebacker Seth Jones the ball for an 18-yard TD run.

"For a year and a half, we were probably the only defense in the world that hadn't scored," Ryan said. "I think all our defensive linemen played well."

Cleveland whips Steelers

CLEVELAND (AP) - Mark Malone honestly didn't believe he was throwing the ball that poorly.

The Pittsburgh quarterback was intercepted five times Sunday, including four times in the second half, as the Steelers lost to the Cleveland Browns 34-10. Three of the interceptions came on odd deflections.

"I came in and felt like I was throwing the ball well," Malone said. "The last interception was a good play by (linebacker Clay) Matthews. The other four - you're looking at three deflections and a great play." The game was tied 10-10 in the third quarter when Cleveland's Mike Johnson intercepted Malone at the Steelers' 23-yard line. Malone's pass hit receiver Louis Lips in the hands, but Lips dropped it as he was pulled down by defender Frank Minnifield.

Before the ball hit the ground, it hit Lips in the foot and bounced high enough for Johnson to grab it.

Green Bay used first-half turnovers for a 14-3 lead before Elway brought the Broncos back in the second half.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"A thought which does not result in an action is nothing much, and an action which does not proceed from a thought is nothing at all."

— Georges Bernanos.

A lazy man's defense consists mainly in making the play that appears not to cost a trick. Often there is a hidden cost, today's hands offers a good example.

East wins his diamond ace and when South's king drops, a diamond return is very attractive. Not only does it force South to use a trump, but it doesn't give away a trick — well, not an immediate trick.

If East follows this course of least resistance, South ruffs the diamond return and crosses to dummy's trump king to take a losing club finesse. Back comes another diamond, not to force another trump, but it doesn't hurt. South draws the trumps, collecting six trump winners to go with four clubs to total 10 tricks.

East beats the game if he makes the winning play at trick two. The bidding marks South with an excellent trump suit, one that should survive the forcing game. Therefore, East's best chance is to play for two spade winners before dummy's clubs are ready to run.

Instead of returning a diamond, East should shift to the spade jack at trick two. Dummy wins but the game loses. When West gets in with his king of clubs, he returns a spade and the defenders enjoy two spades, a club and a diamond for one down.

Running shoes are beginning to look like something from space, like these Nikes, and indeed they are light years beyond of the sneakers of old. Times-News photo/ANDY ARETZ

Sneakers - The old basic's gone high tech

By JOHN ZILLY
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Recently, as greater numbers of Americans discard diets heavy in fat and begin to explore the mysterious world of exercise — especially running, many have discovered that shoes we used to call "sneakers" have come to look more like galaxy-traveling spaceships.

Indeed, technological advances in shoe manufacturing have replaced fathomable words like canvas, rubber and tread, with jargon like air bladder, gel pad, compression moulded EVA (ethylene vinyl acetate), double density polyurethane, carbon, slip last, board last, curve last, straight last.

Suddenly, it seems, scientists and engineers are building athletic shoes in "hopes" of space-exploration-like performance, sometimes with a space-shuttle price.

Is all this exploration just snappy gimmickry, or are the shoes really better for running?

"Sure, some of it's hype," says David Fitzgerald of the Elephant's Perch in Ketchum. "But the shoes are better now, no question."

Fitzgerald points to three specific improvements in the new space-age running shoes: fit, cushion from road shock and protection from injuries.

Bob Rosso, owner of the Perch, says that the most important thing is to get the correct shoe for your foot. It's also important to remember that not every shoe fits all feet. "Some shoes are definitely more popular than others, but there isn't a single shoe that's right for all people," he says.

"Many people begin running and after several weeks, begin experiencing pain," Rosso says. Often, he says, the problem stems from an overload of training inflicted on an unprepared body. However, "many times people just have the wrong shoes for their feet."

Indeed, Rosso says that not everyone needs the most expensive, full supporting running shoe. "As long as the shoe has the support you want, buy it." This is especially true, he says, with lighter runners who impact the road with less force, thus needing slightly less protection.

To demystify some of the current athletic shoe jargon, here are some definitions: "slip last" and "board last" describe how the upper part of the shoe fits your foot. A slip last shoe gives the foot a better, sock-like fit while a board last shoe provides more support.

"Straight last" and "curve last" describe the sole of the shoe. A running shoe over-is-the-sole-actually-curved like a banana or straight?

Most of the other confusing jargon deals with the touch-down unit, or sole, of the shoe. Air bladders and gel pads are the latest high-tech devices that help protect the foot from the ground. Both are lightweight.

EVA and polyurethane are good sole materials although both break down more quickly than shoes containing air or gel. The latter materials are more resilient over the long haul, meaning the sole material won't break down as easily.

The best way to fit a shoe properly, Fitzgerald says, is to take a look at the heel of the shoes you use now. If, heel is worn down on the outside edge, you want a curve lasted shoe with extra support on the outside heel area. If the heel is worn on the inside edge, a straight lasted shoe with a good arch support is best.

Cushioning is the difference between an inexpensive and an expensive shoe, says Tom McGuirk, a spokesman for Nike. "Most shoes with EVA supply cushioning initially, but it breaks down very quickly," he says.

If you are a heavier runner, a board lasted shoe with lots of support and good cushioning may be a good alternative.

The final fit test for running shoes is just that — how they fit. Try on several pairs of shoes and walk around the store, probably one will feel better than the others.

You will find that running shoes retail for as little as $20, or as much as $120. Becky Holland of Ozzie's shoes in Ketchum, says the advantages of top-of-the-line shoes are "motion control, especially around the ankle, and incredible cushion" from road shock.

Unless they are on sale, don't expect to get a good pair of shoes for less than $29. But you don't necessarily need to spend $120 to purchase a top-of-the-line shoe — many can be found in the $64 to $80 range. Spending more often means a better fit, but not always. You may find a $35 pair that fits better than anything else.

For heavy runners, runners just starting out, or runners prone to injury, buying a shoe that has cushion and support is crucial. Look for shoes that have an air bladder, which will provide cushioning for a longer period of time.

Now that you've spent $80 or more on a running shoe, what can you do with it besides run? Can you wear it to aerobic class? "When people find out how comfortable running shoes are, they wear them around for everything and wreck them for running," Rosso says. Running shoes, he says, "definitely have a life span."

Too many people hurt themselves by running in old shoes or using running shoes in other sports. With most, 500-800 miles of running usually pounds much of the life and most of the support out of shoes.

Holland says that 3-6 months is generally the maximum life span for running shoes.

Running shoes are specifically designed for forward movement, not lateral movement," says Fitzgerald. "Technically, you should have a different pair of shoes" for different activities, whether it's running, aerobics, basketball or racquetball. If you use a running shoe for racquetball, chances are your foot will roll off the shoe since running shoes aren't built for quick side to side motion. Court shoes are generally heavier than running shoes and have more support on the sides of the shoe to facilitate lateral movement.

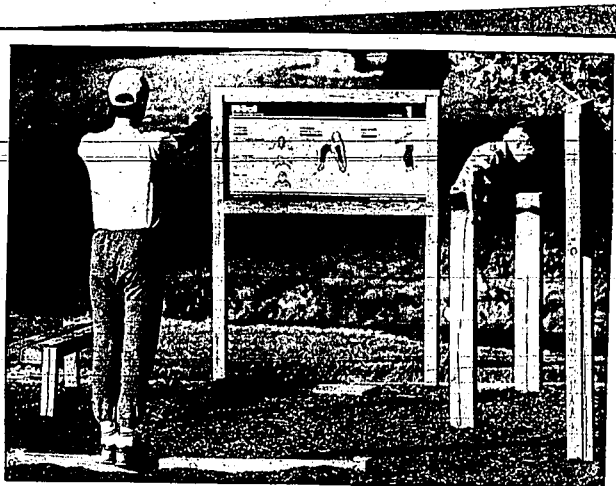

So, although many people use running shoes for a variety of activities, Rosso says that it's "definitely a compromise."

Many physicians now advise patients to make walking, not running, their exercise of choice. The two major differences between walking and running are the angle and intensity of each foot strike. Shoe companies have caught the walking wave and designed shoes specifically for walking. However, Fitzgerald says that "there aren't a lot of huge differences" between walking and running shoes. "Walking shoes are designed for a shallower angle of impact, or gait," he says.

Holland concurs, saying that "running shoes make excellent walking shoes."

If you want a pair of shoes for walking, then, the same rules apply: select a pair, either specifically running or walking, that fit your particular feet.

Then go to it.

CSI trail: A step beyond running

By KRISTIN TUCKER
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — On Wednesday at 5:30, a ribbon will be cut across the new fitness trail at the College of Southern Idaho. But hundreds of Magic Valley residents are already well-acquainted with the 2-mile course, descriptive signs and exercise equipment.

All summer, the maintenance crew of the College of Southern Idaho, youth employed through the Job Partnership Training Act, and members of the Twin Falls Rotary Club, have worked together to lay out the course. The Rotary club raised approximately $50,000 to purchase the exercise apparatus, design the trail, and to provide funds for on-going maintenance.

The trail, especially scenic on these fall evenings when the sun casts an amber glow on the wooded track, winds throughout the northeast corner of the CSI campus. Exercises can begin at either end of an exercise station behind CSI's Vo-Tech Building B, or the station between the Art complex and the parking lot for Frontier Field. Both locations offer parking. The exercises at these ends are designed to be used at the beginning or the end of the workout.

In between is a 20-station system with 32 exercises and five pulse monitoring checks. Each station has complete directions and apparatus for the exercise, plus instructions for varying the exercise for different fitness levels. The course is designed so that warm-up and stretching exercises come first, then

New-age answers to running queries

By David L. Costill
Los Angeles Times

If you're a runner, or if you're thinking about taking up the sport, this article will bring you some useful information about nutrition, footwear, injury prevention, running workouts, weight loss and runner's high.

I'll answer the questions I'm asked most frequently. I think you'll be surprised by some of my answers, even if you're a veteran runner. Although the questions have been around for years, the answers contain information from some of the latest scientific research. I hope this will inspire some of you non-runners to try the sport. If you already love your running workouts, I hope these answers will help you get even more from your mileage.

Will running improve my health and increase my longevity?

Running won't take you to the fountain of youth. However, it's an aerobic activity that has proven positive effects on the heart and circulatory system, thereby reducing your risk of heart disease. A consistent running program is no guarantee that you'll live longer, but it will improve your quality of life. Here are some of the health benefits of a running program:

- Your circulatory system becomes more efficient. Blood moves through the body more quickly and easily, making oxygen — the body's fuel for energy — more readily available to the cells. A fit runner feels healthier because she has more energy, not just during her run but also for life's daily activities.

Quick takes

Fish oil — Its benefits have a flip side

Consumers taking fish oil supplements with meals should be aware of the potential for Vitamin E deficiency, according to scientists at U.S. Department of Agriculture's (U.S.D.A.) Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging at Tufts University. Fish oil has attracted increasing attention for its apparent ability to prevent blood from clotting and to lower blood triglycerides and therefore to lower our risk for coronary artery disease.

In tests with mice, fish oil reduced Vitamin E levels far more than corn oil and could have a similar effect on human diets. Mice that got diets containing 5 percent fish oil needed "six to seven times more Vitamin E in their feed to maintain the same plasma levels" as did mice that got diets containing 5 percent corn oil, according to the researcher Simin N. Meydani.

Absence of Vitamin E in humans is associated with infertility, degenerative changes in muscle or vascular abnormalities. Vitamin E loss in the elderly could be particularly troublesome since aging itself appears to increase the requirement for Vitamin E, the researcher said.

Scientists tinker with fat compositions

Speaking of fish oil, scientists at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale are experimenting with a combination of beef and fish oil as a way of reducing levels of harmful saturated fats in beef and other red meats.

In one experiment, Health magazine reports that the researchers injected omega-3 fatty acids, the element in fish oil that is thought to produce its heart protecting effect, into the stomachs of 12 cows for 60 days. In the end, though, the fish oil only replaced 1 percent of the saturated fats in the meat. However, the experiment is considered a success.

Down Under diet sense brought north

An Australian company has brought sound and sensible commercial weight loss to America with a 1,000-calories-per-day program, according to the National Council Against Health Fraud Newsletter.

The newsletter reports that the Jenny Craig Weight Loss Centers combine support, encouragement, portion control, menu planning, light exercise and nutrition and behavioral education as the method for weight reduction. Current Diet Review (CDR) reviewed the program in Carlsbad, Calif., and found it to be worthwhile. CDR's only concern was that 1,000-calories-a-day is below the 1,200 usually recommended. Yet CDR said the regimen provides sufficient carbohydrates to avert ketosis, a condition of disturbed carbohydrate metabolism.

To do for you

"To do for you" is a calendar listing health-related activities, events and education. Information should be submitted by Thursday for publication in the following Monday's Reach section. Mail notices to The Times-News, P.O. Box 246, Twin Falls, 83303, or deliver to our office at 132 Third St. W.

Swing into fitness with dance classes

TWIN FALLS — Several dance and exercise classes begin soon through the College of Southern Idaho Continuing Education Department.

Western Swing I meets for the first time today from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at New Beginnings, 590 Addison Ave. The fee is $30.

Stretch and Strength, a moderate exercise class to improve posture and muscle tone, begins Tuesday in the CSI gym. The class meets from 7:15 to 8:15 p.m. for 10 sessions and the fee is $18.

Tan Dance for Adults starts Wednesday and meets for 12 sessions at New Beginnings, 590 Addison Ave. The fee is $20.

Beverly Hackney, who holds a master's degree in dance theater and has taught for many years in Twin Falls, will be the instructor for these classes. For more information, call 733-9554, ext. 363.

Clinic offers breast cancer screening

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital will offer a free "Breast Cancer Detection and Education" seminar on Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Twin Falls Clinic lobby.

Dr. Jerome Rees will lecture on information for women about breast cancer and the means available for early detection. For more information, call 733-3700, ext. 344.

Brush up on your sign language skills

TWIN FALLS — Beginning and continuing sign language classes will be held Tuesday through November 24 at the College of Southern Idaho. The Pidgeon Signed English is a mixture of ASL and English and is the most common form of signing between deaf and hearing adults.

The beginning class will be held Tuesdays from 7-9 p.m. in room 107 of the Shields Building. Instructor is Jan Coleman.

The continuing sign class also will be held Tuesdays from 7-9 p.m. in room 108 of the Shields Building with instructor Julie Mitchell.

Cost of either class is $35 and pre-registration is required. Call 733-9554, ext. 317 or 363.

Free introductory yoga class offered

TWIN FALLS — A free introductory class in integral yoga, a scientific system that integrates the various branches of yoga, will be held Wednesday at 7 p.m. For location, and additional information contact instructor Jennifer Fish, 733-4218.

Get the better of grief, transform it

TWIN FALLS — A transformational workshop for women to release and transform grief will be held Friday at 7 p.m. to Sunday at 2 p.m. at a cabin near Pettit Lake in the Stanley-Basin. Facilitators of the workshop will be Joan Dalton Boyd and Judy McAllister, therapists at the Relationship Place in Twin Falls.

Registration is limited to 16. Tuition is $100; a $26 nonrefundable deposit ensures participation.

For information and arrangements, call The Relationship Place at 733-2044 or Katie Poole, 543-5126.

If you're a runner, this Bud's for you

KETCHUM — The Bud Light Ketchum 10-Mile Run will be held Saturday starting at The Elephant's Perch on Sun Valley Road, up Trail Creek around to Sun Valley, Elkhorn and back through Ketchum to the finish.

T-shirts will be given to all finishers and prizes will be awarded. Entry fee is $10. Pre-registration is required by Thursday at 6 p.m. Call 728-3497.

Cancer program teaches how to cope

TWIN FALLS — The American Cancer Society "I Can Cope" program will begin Sept. 28 and will run for eight consecutive Mondays from 7-9 p.m. at the First Baptist Church, Shoshone St.

Individuals will learn more about cancer, how to deal with the effects of its treatment, the feelings they have about this disease and about community resources available to them.

The program is sponsored by the Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital and Magic Valley Regional Medical Center; there is no charge.

Childbirth refresher class scheduled

TWIN FALLS — A prepared childbirth refresher class for persons who have previously attended a childbirth course will be held at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center on Sept. 28 from 7-9 p.m. in the Women's Health and Education Center conference room located on the second floor.

Childbirth preparation and medical center procedures will be reviewed. A film, a discussion on sibling adjustment and a tour of the labor/delivery unit will be included.

The fee is $5 and participants must pre-register by calling the Women's Center at 737-2900 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. weekdays.

Learn to recognize kids' drug abuse

TWIN FALLS — "Alcohol, Drugs and Your Kids" will be the topic of the New Life for a New You (Living Single Support Group) when it meets at 7 p.m. Sept. 28 in room 109 of the Shields Building at the College of Southern Idaho.

J.C. Smith, outreach coordinator for HCA Walker Center, will provide information on how to recognize alcohol or drug abuse in your children and how to stop the progression of substance addiction. Information on the problem in Magic Valley will also be shared.

For more information call the Center for New Directions at 733-9554, ext. 361.

Rim to Rim run set for October 3rd

TWIN FALLS — The 1987 Rim to Rim Run will be held Oct. 3 at 10 a.m. Sponsored by The Times-News and conducted by the Magic Valley YFCA, the 7.5 mile race begins with registration from 9-9:45 a.m. at the Blue Lakes Country Club. Parking is available at the top of the North Rim; a Trans IV bus will transport to the Country Club.

T-shirts will be awarded to entrants upon completion of the race. Entry fee is $11. Age groups range from 13 to over 60 with divisions for men and women.

Information is available at the Magic Valley YFCA, 733-4384.

Don't run? Then how about a climb?

KETCHUM — The Baldy Mountain Hill Climb will be held Oct. 3 beginning at 10 a.m. The annual 2-mile run, hike, crawl up the West Springs side of Baldy to the top is a fundraiser for the Junior Nordic Ski Team.

Abused aren't destined to same fate

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — A widespread belief that most parents who were abused as youngsters are destined to harm their own children is unfounded, according to two Yale researchers.

"Adults who were maltreated have been told so many times that they will abuse their children, that, for some, it has become a self-fulfilling prophecy," writes Edward Zigler, a Yale psychology professor, and graduate student Joan Kaufman.

"Many who have broken the cycle are feeling like walking time bombs," fearing that they someday may harm their children, the two said.

Zigler, a respected child development expert, and Kaufman recently reviewed more than 40 articles in professional literature concerning child abuse research and found fault with many of the studies' methodologies. For example, some were not based on groups representative of the study population, and some failed to use control groups to make comparisons, they said.

The studies reported widely differing rates of abused children who became abusive parents — from 18 percent to at least 90 percent, the researchers wrote.

Using some of the studies as a base, Zigler and Kaufman estimated that between 25 percent and 35 percent of abused children maltreat their own offspring, and reported their estimate earlier this year in the American Journal of Orthopsychiatry.

They relied heavily for their figure on one 1984 study that found that 34 percent of severely abused mothers physically abused their children. "Since the sample in that study concerned mothers they considered to be highly at risk for abusing their children, the psychologists said they reasoned "that the intergenerational hypothesis will be tempered in less than one-third of all cases when more representative populations are samples."

An estimated 5 percent of parents in the general population abuse their children, Kaufman said.

"It is important that we not give the impression that abuse doesn't have bad effects. It does," she said. "Abuse can be devastating to one's sense of self. In fact, abused children are six times more likely to become abusive parents than parents in the general population."

A contributing factor to child abuse is the prevalence of corporal punishment in America, Zigler said.

"About 97 percent of parents report that they spank or hit their children. In Sweden, it is against the law for anyone to spank a child, including parents," Zigler said. "Obviously, although the law is practically unenforceable, Swedish legislators are trying to give parents a message."

The researchers pinpointed several factors that apparently steer abused children away from later harming their own children.

"Parents who did not repeat the cycle of abuse tended to have more extensive support from family and friends and were more openly angry about the abuse they experienced as children," Kaufman said. "Not only could they describe that abuse in great detail, but they were determined not to abuse their own children."

The non-abusive parents also reported that at least one of their own parents was loving and did not abuse them as children, or described a current spouse or lover as supportive.

Counseling and therapy also helped, Kaufman said.

Zigler said he became interested in learning more about the topic when a family court lawyer told him a client was denied custody of her children in a divorce case solely because she had been abused as a child.

"The judge had the mistaken notion that, even though she had never abused her children, she would inevitably do so," he said.

A history of abuse has also led some people to decide not to have children, Ms. Kaufman said.

"We were aware of one woman who was professionally counseled that abuse was a cycle that would inevitably and unwittingly repeat itself," she said. "She reluctantly decided she would remain childless so the cycle would stop with her."

Car seats for rent, sale

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Regional Medical Center is offering car seats to the community for sale and for rent.

For $15, an infant seat (for babies weighing up to 20 pounds) can be rented for a nine-month period. A toddler seat (for children weighing between 20-40 pounds) can be rented for the same fee. Booster seats for children weighing between 40-55 pounds (about 10 years of age), are available for purchase for $15.

The Car Seat Program, made possible through donations from the community and through government grants, is administered from the Volunteer Service Department.

Dorothy Miller, director, advises that anyone wanting to rent an infant or toddler seat or anyone wanting to purchase the new booster seats should call 737-2006 for an appointment or for additional program information.

The Car Seat Program is located on the 5th floor of the medical center and office hours are 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays.

Reluctant exerciser: What about pollution?

By The Los Angeles Times

The thing I like best about scientists is that when you come right down to it they think exercise is always of time. That's why they're always coming up with new findings like the recent news from the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico that says toxicologists there have found that people who exercise outside in this polluted air of ours are doing more harm than good to themselves.

I really like the sound of that. Here's my favorite part — not only are exercisers who run outside playing Russian roulette with their lungs, they are at such a high risk that, in all likelihood, they are doing more harm to themselves than people who don't exercise at all.

The study was launched six months ago because the Los Alamos scientists suspected that pollutants, like nitrogen dioxide, not only affected our breathing in some way, but could cause real harm — for example, lung lesions. After only six months of testing, they decided that they had been right. When we run or walk fast and breathe faster, the more we filter out the pollutants the way it should and that condition can cause lung lesions. The conclusion: We probably shouldn't run in polluted air.

To figure out what harm pollutants did to humans, the folks at Los Alamos took some rats, about 100 of them, and they got them "athlete condition."

Then they took these Rambo-like rats and exposed them to nitrogen dioxide-laced air. They had some of them rest and some of them exercise. The ones who exercised developed lung lesions after just 15 minutes of exercise.

Trail

A less strenuous workout, designed especially for seniors can be found on the 1.4 mile inside loop, forming a walking course that includes 8 exercises and pulse checks along the way. Walkers and joggers might not want to stop at each station, but they can still take advantage of the soft track surface which is designed to prevent impact injuries.

It's a whole-body approach, a "get fit" trail, says Karl Kleinkopf, CSI athletic director, along with former Olympic athlete Dick Fosbury (the Fosbury flop); helped design the trail.

Kleinkopf says some have been confused about where to start and in what order to do the exercises, but he hopes this confusion will be cleared up once maps are placed along the routes which will allow exercisers to better choose the route to fit their needs.

Kleinkopf advises first-time users to walk the trail before pursuing any of the exercises and follow physical therapist Julie Ellis recently practiced the trail, and they offer a few words of caution to would-be users:

"There's no such thing as a perfect program for all people," says Tom Wagner, a Twin Falls physical therapist. Wagner and fellow physical therapist Julie Ellis recently practiced the trail, and they offer a few words of caution to would-be users:

body," Wagner says. There is a higher risk of injury for people who are just beginning to get in shape, as well as those who have a history of problems with their back, knees, ankles or shoulders.

Look at the exercises, know yourself, and don't push yourself through every exercise, advises Wagner. Use common sense. Examine each station and ask yourself if the exercise is appropriate for the needs and weaknesses of your body.

The route is set for, for example, places undue stress on knees, he says. Crossing high bars hand-over-hand can strain shoulders. Sit-ups should be done with knees bent instead of the straight-leg position depicted on the trail's signboard.

Exercises for seniors have received good reviews from participants as well as local health professionals. Jan Mitteldeier, instructor of CSI's popular "Over 60's and Getting Fit" program has already recommended the 8-station course for her classes. "Any reasonably fit senior person can do the program with a few cautions," she says.

The new trail is still soft enough — especially immediately after being irrigated — that users should be cautious to prevent ankle injuries. But with use, the trail will compact to provide an ideal running turf, Kleinkopf says.

It's not the ideal place for walking pets, who tend to leave debris that is a nuisance for human exercisers.

Nor do trail designers recommend using the trail after dark. Portions of the trail are unlighted, and most of the trail is in quiet, secluded areas.

For exercisers, it's an ideal location that takes them away from traffic, along a scenic trail that follows the coulee through campus.

Relax - Superwoman doesn't exist

You're exhausted. You've been working all day long but the dishes are still stacked in the sink, the front room is in shambles, the bathroom is grimy, and there's punch spilled all over the kitchen floor.

Now imagine that the door bell rings. For most women, that means panic — a strained "just a minute" and a wild scramble to fix anything that is fixable within a few short moments.

Then the ultimate humiliation. You have to answer the door. Someone is going to see the destruction. You've failed again. You keep trying to be the perfect housekeeper but you never make the grade.

If you've experienced feelings similar to these you're like millions of other women. Your house is an extension of you. When your house is chaotic, you're chaotic. When your house is in order, you feel okay inside.

"But those feelings of 'okayness' are fleeting because your house and the people in it are in constant motion. You spend your life pushing back things that come floating out. Nothing stays in order very long.

Elizabeth captures the devastating effect this "house in motion" has on her self-esteem: "I can't relax when I'm in the house," she says.

"Whatever it is fixed, running, or perfect means there is something wrong with me. It's personal."

Like many other women, Elizabeth feels guilty for never being able to complete the housework, a feeling that is especially acute when outsiders are around. "I feel guilty all the time when people come to the house," she says. "I know what's wrong with the house. They may never know the wallpaper is peeling or that the light switch cover is off but I know. I know I haven't done my job."

If you're like Elizabeth, you may feel guilty on two counts. Observes Jean Fitzpatrick, author of the article, "The Dirty Truth About Housework: 'In your mind you may hear reprimands from your mother — didn't she teach you to keep a spotless home for the sake of your family's health and happiness, not to mention your own self-respect?"

"As if her voice didn't haunt you enough, there's also the media role model of the eighties to live up to — the woman who can do everything," continues Fitzpatrick. "She has a briefcase in hand, not a toilet brush. She doesn't chase dustballs in the hallway; she goes to exercise class."

"But she also doesn't leave tasks undone. In her perfectly managed life, everything is under control. So it goes without saying that her house is as immaculate as her perfectly tailored suit. Why can't you measure up?"

Women need to wipe that guilt right out of their minds, Fitzpatrick suggests. Not by dragging out the vacuum cleaner, but by doing some emotional housework. It's time to discard other people's ideas about housework and to think about housework in the context of your own life. Here are tips she suggests:

- Forget the "superwoman" myth. Despite what the TV commercials of glamorous, energetic moms would suggest, juggling work, home, and taking care of children is not a breeze for anybody.

- And, when you talk about mothers who work at outside jobs, "you're really where the rubber meets the road" because these women are pressed to the limit, says Fitzpatrick. "The only way women can meet these challenges is to plan carefully and, above all, compromise."

- Forget what your mother taught you. "Your mother probably never, ever, left a single dirty dish in the sink overnight," Fitzpatrick observes. "She probably never oversteuffed her laundry hamper so that the lid wouldn't close, either."

Traditionally, home cleanliness has been a measure of character, says Fitzpatrick: "The home economics movement of the late nineteenth century... elevated the American housewife to the role of family health engineer in charge of domestic germ warfare. And after World War II, women's magazine preached to the brides of returned GIs that family togetherness depended on their own immaculate housekeeping."

In short, Fitzpatrick says, "your mother's ideas about housework were very much a product of her age. You probably don't have the time or the inclination for her pursuit of perfection, especially if you're holding down a job."

It's important to give up trying to live up to your mother's standards. Instead, set your own — find a workable compromise that fits your own life. Maybe your mother's standards worked for her, but nowhere is it carved in stone that they are valid for all eternity.

And when you're feeling especially guilt-ridden about housework, observes Fitzpatrick, it might help to remember that today even your mother may be having second thoughts about the virtues of constant cleaning.

Not expecting perfection is the key to making peace with housework, says Fitzpatrick. "You can't have every job done to military inspection standards every day."

"You may never get around to organizing your kitchen drawers; your son may not learn to be a crack bed-maker; and your husband — may forever fail to notice the cobwebs in the corners when he vacations. But you'll be free from guilt if you learn to be satisfied with what you do accomplish."

Next week: More on housework

All-nighter bottles can lead to tooth decay

By The Associated Press

Permitting an infant an all-night bottle containing milk or juice can set the stage for serious dental problems, warns a specialist in children's dental care at New York University Medical Center.

The problem is known as "nursing-bottle caries," according to Dr. Peter Catapano Jr., clinical associate professor of pediatrics at the center and a pedodontist (child dentistry specialist). "At night, salivary flow, which provides a kind of natural self-cleaning-of-milk-or-juice-lessness. If a baby is put to bed with a bottle containing milk or juice, the teeth are continuously coated with a medium in which decay-causing bacteria will thrive," he explained.

The result is that by the age of 1½ or 2, caries — decay — has appeared in the front teeth, sometimes progressing to the back teeth as well. Removing the teeth can cause maldevelopment of the jaw, so root-canal treatment may be necessary.

"In a child of this age such a procedure is very difficult and may be traumatic," said Catapano, who also directs the pediatric dental clinic at Bellevue Hospital Center. He noted that a 2-year-old cannot sit still and must be sedated, sometimes with general anesthesia. "In addition, there may be other orthodontic problems later in life," he added.

"As in many health matters, he advised, simple prevention is preferred to complex cure. From the moment an infant's teeth begin to erupt, parents should be sure that a bottle left in the crib all night contains only water. Soft drinks — even sugarless ones — are not an acceptable alternative, since they contain acids that damage teeth.

Catapano added that in non-fluoridated areas, fluoride supplements are advised from birth — and that beginning at about age two, a child's teeth should be brushed regularly. Resistance to brushing can be avoided if, from birth, parents gently clean a baby's gums with a soft cloth or gauze, at the same time talking pleasantly and soothingly.

Running

Research has shown that a vigorous running program usually lowers the level of low-density lipoproteins (LDL) contained in your blood. "I say 'usually' because some runners don't experience this drop in LDL for reasons researchers don't understand. LDL, known as the "bad" cholesterol, sticks to the arterial walls and can cause heart disease and death. This decrease in LDL levels is most significant in those who run 50 to 100 miles a week, but some lowering of LDL levels occurs with more moderate weekly mileage.

- The level of high-density lipoproteins (HDL), the "good" cholesterol, usually increases in the blood if you have a vigorous running program. Experts believe that HDL has a cleansing effect on the arteries and removing plaque that builds up on arterial walls, thereby reducing your risk of heart disease. Again, this effect is most significant if your mileage reaches 50 to 100 miles a week, but some increase occurs with less strenuous programs.

- A regular running regimen will make your legs stronger and firmer. Running stresses the leg muscles, and your body responds by increasing muscular strength and endurance to compensate.

Will running help me lose weight?

When you run, you burn about 100 calories per mile, no matter what your speed. Whether you walk a mile in 20 minutes or run it in 6, you'll burn about the same number of calories. So if you run 3 miles a day, a common distance for recreational runners, you'll burn 300 calories.

Running will help you lose weight because it has a remarkable effect on your metabolism. Depending on how long you run, you need for energy — another way of describing your "metabolism" — is increased even after you've finished exercising. If you run for 20 minutes, this increased metabolic need lasts for a relatively short time, but research has shown that marathoners burn more calories for as long as 12 hours after a race or hard training session.

Also, keep in mind that the scale won't accurately reflect your loss of body fat. You'll gain muscle mass as well as burn fat, and since muscle weighs more than fat, your body weight might not change. A better way to monitor your success is to look at your body in a full-length mirror. You'll see that you appear stronger and firmer; especially in your legs, hips and buttocks.

I hear a lot about running injuries. What can I do to make sure I don't get hurt?

It's not an exaggeration to say that 100 percent of runners are injured at some point. Running is a high-impact sport. When you run, your feet strike the ground with a force three times your body weight. However, a little common sense can prevent debilitating injury.

I think risk of injury is high at two points in a running program. First, when you're a beginner, your chance of injury is great. The cardiovascular system adapts more quickly to exercise than the muscles, bones and connective tissues (ligaments and tendons). A beginner may feel as though he or she has the cardiovascular fitness to run more than her other body parts can handle without breaking down. For this reason, I suggest that all beginners start out walking. After two weeks, begin sessions of intermittent running and walking for a mile-and-a-half to two miles. Alternate training days to give your body plenty of time to rest and physiologically adapt to the training program.

The second most likely time for injury is when you increase your weekly mileage. As you become more fit and enthusiastic about your running program, you may start to set tougher goals for yourself. But by doing too much too soon you're asking for injury. Your muscles, bones and connective tissues need time to adapt to additional training stress.

Should runners follow a special diet?

Glycogen is the body's carbohydrate energy supply during exercise. It's stored in the muscles, and the body draws on these sugar reserves while you run. If you don't eat enough of the type of food your body needs to build up these stores, your muscles will become low in glycogen, and you'll feel sluggish and heavy during your run.

Complex carbohydrates, foods high in fiber and low in sugar, are the best source of glycogen. I recommend that all runners follow a diet that consists of 60 percent complex carbohydrates. Fresh fruits and vegetables, whole grain breads and cereals and grains such as rice, wheat germ and barley are all excellent sources of complex carbohydrates. In fact, a diet that consists of 55 percent complex carbohydrates 15 percent protein and no more than 30 percent fat — with less than 10 percent saturated fat — is recommended by the American Heart Association.

What about dietary supplements?

Women runners should take iron and calcium supplements. These nutrients are important to you for several reasons.

- Calcium: Aerobic exercise stimulates the body's ability to absorb calcium, thus making your bones stronger. However, you must first have calcium available for your bones to absorb. Dairy products, such as low-fat or skim milk, cheese and yogurt, are excellent sources of calcium. The Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA) for calcium is 1 gram or 1,000 milligrams. Two 6-ounce glasses of skim milk and 1 ounce of cheddar cheese will give you a total of 850 milligrams of calcium.

- Iron: Women runners have a tendency toward iron deficiency. Iron is an essential component of hemoglobin, which carries oxygen in the blood, and myoglobin, which transports oxygen in muscle tissue. A deficiency in iron can cause anemia, which certainly is counterproductive to your desire for aerobic fitness.

Without an adequate oxygen-transport system, you'll tire and sluggish during and after a run. An iron-rich diet includes beans, lean beef and whole-grain cereal. Iron supplements can reduce a deficiency, but take them with caution. I recommend that iron supplements be taken under the direction of a physician, since prolonged iron overload can cause health problems. If you're taking iron, your daily dose shouldn't exceed the RDA of 18 milligrams.

How much water should a runner drink before and after a workout?

It's not necessary to drink a lot of water immediately before running, but you should rehydrate when you return from a workout and drink plenty of water during the rest of the day. Don't gauge your water intake by how thirsty you feel after your run because human thirst is not a good indicator of dehydration. By the time you feel thirsty, you're already very low in fluids. The color and quantity of your urine and your need to urinate are better guides. If the urine is dilute and appears clear, you're taking in adequate water. However, if your urine is dark yellow and low in volume, you may be dehydrated and should increase your water intake.

How should I warm up for my run?

Run at a slow, relaxed pace for the first seven minutes. When you begin to sweat, gradually increase your running speed. I recommend that you do your stretching exercises at the end of your workout when your muscles are warmest.

What's the best time of day to run?

You should run at a time that's enjoyable and convenient for you, even if you're one of those crazy runners who likes to work out at 5 a.m. You'll be more likely to stick with your running program if you run when you feel like it.

ENLARGEMENTS

When considering enlargements of your favorite negatives, remember that each film size has its own limitations. For instance, a disc negative is pretty small, so to enlarge it to even 3 1/2" x 5" is going to be out of the question. The larger the negative, the more you can enlarge and the better the quality. As a rule, discs should not be enlarged past 5" x 7", 110's are also best when no larger than 5 1/2" x 7 1/2" negatives can be enlarged up to poster size, but are best no larger than 11" x 14".

Dress for success, not excess during your interviews

By The Los Angeles Times

Their resumes may be perfect, their credentials impeccable, but job candidates still face a crucial test: the interview. Many job-seekers, wise to the ways of the working world, work as hard to appear competent, expert, interested and well groomed as they once did to get A's in school. These self-presentation tactics do earn high marks from employers, but only up to a point.

Psychologist Robert A. Baron recruited 73 undergraduate students to participate in a series of mock job interviews. Both men and women acted as interviewers; the job candidates were two women selected in advance by Baron. Candidates varied their behavior and demeanor by using or omitting positive nonverbal cues — smiling frequently, maintaining eye contact and leaning forward in an attitude of polite interest. Sometimes they also wore a modest but detectable amount of perfume.

After the interview, the students rated the job candidates' competence, potential and intelligence. The students also answered questions designed to test how well they remembered specific information about the candidates.

Baron found that it was possible to have "too much of a good thing." Each tactic — the perfume and the positive cues — helped candidates when they used them alone. But when used together, the tactics actually reduced ratings given by men, although, not those given by women. At the same time, men also remembered less information about the candidates than women did.

One possible explanation for this pattern is that men reacted more negatively to these tactics because they found themselves distracted, which threatened their effectiveness as interviewers. Women, in contrast, were able to concentrate on the candidates' less superficial qualities.

Scoliosis: Periodic screening a must

The Associated Press

All children from the age of eight through adolescence should be screened periodically to detect the first appearance of scoliosis, an abnormal curvature of the spine, advises an orthopedic specialist at New York University Medical Center.

"Early detection is important because most cases identified before the spinal abnormality is extreme can be successfully treated without surgery," said Dr. Gordon L. Engler, clinical professor of orthopedic surgery at the center, and a specialist in scoliosis and spinal deformities.

While many states require scoliosis screening in public schools, the NYU physician stressed that parents also should be alert for its first signs: "Look for an elevation of one shoulder, an abnormal protrusion of one scapula (shoulder blade), an abnormal alignment of the waist or prominence of one side of the pelvis."

Scoliosis usually appears first at about age eight and is seen throughout the rapid growth years of adolescence; rarely, it can begin in adulthood. It can occur in the upper (thoracic) or lower (lumbar) region of the spine; in both instances, the vertebrae begin to rotate, forcing the spine to curve laterally. In 75 percent of the cases, the cause is unknown. Girls are eight times likelier to be affected than boys, and a genetic factor is believed to play a role.

If spotted early and treated properly, the gradual curving of the spine can usually be halted without surgery, and later cardiac and respiratory problems can be avoided.

For some children with minor scoliosis, only periodic observation is required. When treatment is necessary, it — most often — involves wearing a brace for up to three years. The brace forces the spine into correct alignment, and allows it to grow straighter," said Engler. He added that the Milwaukee brace, which encases the back and comes up under the chin, has been largely replaced by a newer, less visible, underarm brace which can be worn under ordinary clothes.

About 15 percent of scoliosis patients may need corrective surgery. Such surgery involves implanting one or more stainless steel rods alongside the spine and attaching hooks to the vertebrae which pull the spine into correct alignment. Chips of bone, taken from the pelvis, are also packed around the affected vertebrae. Over a period of several months, the chips cause the curved spinal segment to fuse in the corrected, straightened position.

"Traditionally, we were able to surgically correct the curvature but unable to derotate the vertebrae," said Engler. "Now, we have techniques and equipment which enable us to correct both the lateral curvature and the rotational deformity." With the newer devices cosmetic results are far superior and, in some instances, no cast or brace is required in the post operative period, he added.

Cut impact: Land midfoot

NEW YORK (AP) — Roll onto your midfoot and heel when landing from a jump during aerobic dance, suggests the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau. It says a Pennsylvania State University study found that aerobic dancers who landed only on their toes hit the ground harder than those who rolled onto their whole foot. The researchers suggest instructors emphasize complete foot involvement during jumping since this would lessen foot strike force and thus reduce the potential for injury.
