Craft allegedly laying mines

U.S. attacks Iranian ship

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A U.S. military helicopter attacked an Iranian ship in the Persian Gulf on Monday after discovering it laying underwater mines, the White House and Pentagon said.

The Pentagon said the stern of Iranian ship "Iran Ajr" was set on fire. The fire was extinguished but the ship was left "dead in the water," said Fred Hoffman, the Pentagon's spokesman.

The White House said the United States acted "in accordance with existing rules of engagement."

Marlin Fitzwater, the White House spokesman, said U.S. forces "took defensive action" when the Iranian ship was discovered laying mines in international waters 50 miles northeast of Bahrain.

The attack was outside an area where a British tanker was attacked earlier Monday by Iranian gunboats.

Pentagon sources who asked not to be named indicated the confrontation occurred around 11 p.m. local time in the gulf, or about 4 p.m. EDT.

The incident was the first American military action against Iran since Aug. 5, when a Navy F-14 Tomcat fighter fired two missiles at an Iranian jet that was judged to be "hostile." Both missiles missed. The episode was the closest that the two countries have come to combat since the United States started escorting refueled Kuwaiti tankers in July.

Hoffman, appearing at a Pentagon briefing Monday night, indicated at least two American helicopters were on patrol from the frigate USS Jarrett when they spied the Iranian ship. One of the helicopters opened fire with 7.62mm machine-guns and 2.75-inch rockets after observing the Iranian ship laying mines.

"The location is in international waters at a spot frequently used by commercial vessels, both those of the United States and of other neutral nations," Hoffman said.

He said the attack occurred at night, and the helicopters were able, using night-vision devices, to identify objects being dropped over the side of the Iranian ship as mines.

"Acting under the rules of engagement as ordered by the commander of the Middle East Task Force, the

ABA attorneys challenge Bork's 'extreme views'

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — American Bar Association lawyers challenging Robert H. Bork's fitness to serve on the Supreme Court are concerned about his "compromising constitutional principles," ABA officials revealed Monday night.

The disclosure came at the end of a long day and evening of testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee, during which Bork was attacked by civil rights leaders as "a protector of privilege and power" but defended by four former attorneys general as a man of rarely rivaled legal distinction.

The ABA testimony was submitted by Harold R. Tyler, head of the association panel that reviewed Bork's record for more than two months. Tyler told the committee four of the 15 panel members believe Bork "is not qualified... because of his concerns as to his judicial temperament."

Tyler said that by "judicial temperament," the dissenters meant "his compassion, openness, his sensitivity to the rights of women and minority persons or groups, and comparatively extreme views respecting constitutional principles."

Tyler said a fifth member of the panel voted "not opposed" to Bork. He said that according to ABA standards "not opposed" means the candidate is found to be minimally qualified but not the best available candidate.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, attacked the integrity of the four dissenters. He said they based their opposition to Bork on "political reasons" because they were allied with "liberal causes and organizations that have bitterly opposed Judge Bork."

Tyler said he believed all members of the panel "were proceeding in good faith and voting their consciences."

It was previously disclosed that the panel voted 10-5 in finding Bork well qualified — its highest rating for prospective justices. The large number of negative votes is unusual for a Supreme Court nominee.

when he was interviewed by the ABA prior to Bork's confirmation as a federal appeals court judge.

The names of those who expressed negative views on Bork were not revealed.

Monday's lengthy hearing was generally low key. But as the hearings stretched into the evening there was an angry exchange between Sen. Howard Metzenbaum,

Reagan sets 24-hour deadline for cease fire

The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — President Reagan confronted Iran at the United Nations on Monday with a demand that it "clearly and unequivocally" accept a cease-fire in its Persian Gulf war with Iraq or face a worldwide arms embargo spearheaded by the United States.

Reagan set a new deadline of 24 hours for Tehran to accept the cease-fire resolution approved unanimously July 20 by the U.N. Security Council.

Referring to the speech Iranian President Ali Khamenei was scheduled to deliver Tuesday morning to the 42nd U.N. General Assembly session, the president said: "I take this opportunity to call upon him clearly and unequivocally to state whether Iran accepts 598 (the resolution) or not."

"If the answer is positive, it would be a welcome step and major breakthrough. If it is negative, the council has no choice but rapidly to adopt enforcement measures."

Reagan urged the Soviet Union to join the U.S.-led effort to end the war, which enters its eighth year Wednesday, and to stop spreading

"the false accusation that somehow the United States — rather than the war itself — is the source of tension in the gulf. Such statements are not helpful."

The president said he ordered a Navy buildup in the gulf to protect oil shipments of strategic importance to the economies of the free world "and to prevent the domination of the region by any hostile power."

"When the tension diminishes, so will our presence," he said.

Before taking the rostrum, Reagan met privately with U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, who returned to New York last Wednesday after two days of talks in Iran and Iraq on the cease-fire resolution.

A senior administration official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the president told the U.N. secretary-general that he is "skeptical about Iran's intentions" in regard to the Iran-Iraq war.

The official said Perez de Cuellar replied that "Iran feels they have already made concessions" — and that "Iran gave no definitive answer on a cease-fire" during his recent trip.

Plane crash, electrocution take 4 lives

By BARBARA NEWERT and BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News writers

HAILEY — Four persons died in Blaine County late Monday in a tragic pair of events.

Three people were killed when a light plane that officers believed was carrying a Channel 7 news crew crashed just southeast of the Hailey airport. The news crew had flown to Hailey after a 7-year-old boy was electrocuted as he played in an Idaho Power Co. substation Monday evening.

Blaine County Deputy Sheriff Gene Ramsey said the bodies of three persons had been located at the scene of the plane crash a mile from the Friedman Memorial Airport runway and on a hillside between Hailey and Bellevue.

A range fire, started by the crash was keeping officers from recovering the bodies at 11 p.m. Ramsey said the victims included two men and one woman. He said the plane, a 1976 Cessna 210 was owned by the Boise Air Service and was believed to have been carrying a Channel 7 television crew that flew to the area earlier in the evening.

Ramsey said it left the Hailey airport about 9:30 p.m. and it was not known if it was returning to Boise or circling the area.

Station officials for KTVB Channel 7 in Boise said their crew had not returned as of 11:30 p.m. and they were waiting for further information from Blaine County authorities as to whether or not their crew was involved.

FAA officials in Burley said there was no flight plan filed by the pilot.

Bureau of Land Management and Blaine County rural fire crews were attempting to control the fire so recovery and identification of the victims could be made.

Earlier in the evening two Hailey children found their way into an electrical power substation in the Curtis Subdivision in Hailey and one of the children died of electrocution when he fell across two transformer lines.

Hailey police said the older boy, age 7, was killed instantly and his younger brother, age 5, became frightened and ran home with minor burns.

Hailey city officers were investigating the fatality Monday night and attempting to determine how the children happened to get into the fenced power installation. The name of the victim was not released Monday.

Officers said the parents of the two children reside near the electrical substation in the Curtis Subdivision. Officials at Blaine County Medical Center said the younger child was treated in the emergency room and released.

City officers Dean Biggs and Jim Allen said the two boys had apparently crawled under the fence into the substation and were playing there when the accident occurred about 7 p.m. The older boy, Biggs said, had climbed into the transformer area when he apparently slipped and fell across two transformer lines and was electrocuted.

The younger boy was standing on the ground and officers said he was

IPC rejects Bliss development, leaves Tacoma on its own

By MARK PRATTER Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Power Co. won't participate with the city of Tacoma in a project to build a hydroelectric dam at Bliss, said a company spokesman on Monday.

"We can't justify spending a bunch of bucks for half a project," said IPC's Larry Taylor.

IPC held some preliminary discussions with Tacoma about developing the A.J. Wiley project together. "We couldn't reach agreement on fundamentals to proceed to more formal negotiations. I don't think it ever got to money," Taylor said.

Whether Tacoma will continue to develop the project without IPC is up in the air. A Tacoma City Light spokesman could not be reached for comment on Monday.

The project has encountered stiff opposition from leading Idaho politicians who says Idaho resources should be developed for the state's benefit. The state Department of Fish & Game and some citizens object to it on environmental grounds.

Taylor says IPC won't oppose Tacoma's efforts. But three persons had been located at the scene of the plane crash a mile from the Friedman Memorial Airport runway and on a hillside between Hailey and Bellevue.

IPC once tried to develop the site on its own but the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission turned down the license, saying the power wasn't needed.

City Light is now trying to get the license.

The site could not be set aside for future use because the Federal Power Act says site banking isn't allowed. Once FERC grants a license, the licensee has to begin construction within a specified period, he says.

In April 1985, IPC had to abandon a license for a hydro dam on the North Fork of the Payette River because it hadn't started construction, Taylor says.

The company recently pulled out of a project to study a new power line to the Southwest rather than invest $250,000 in the project. The company didn't think the study was proceeding fast enough. IPC is now mulling construction of a $100 million power line to the Southwest, either on its own or with Washington Water Power and Montana Power, IPC says.

Taylor said the decision on the Wiley project had nothing to do with the power line pullout.

However, Taylor says the company is being more conservative about how it spends its money.

"An important source of revenue for the company comes from out-of-state power sales. In recent years off-system sales accounted for as much as $68 million in revenue. But the drought and a glut of electricity in the Northwest have pinched IPC's off-system sales to the lowest point in a decade. This year the hydro-oriented helicopter engaged the Iranian ship, setting its stern ablaze," Hoffman said.

 "The fire appears to be out and the ship is dead in the water. Our ships and aircraft are standing by to render such help as may be needed."

Fitzwater, the White House spokesman, said the United States has "previously communicated with the Iranian government the way in which we would respond to such provocative acts which present an immediate risk to United States ships and to all ships."

"United States forces acted in a defensive manner and in accordance with existing rules of engagement," Fitzwater said.
 The Pentagon's statement indicated only one of the U.S. helicopter pilots was injured. Pentagon officials, who asked not to be identified, said both of the helicopters might have participated in the assault.

Hoffman said the helicopters were about 15 miles from the Jarrett when they observed the activities of the Iranian vessel. It was only after the air crews were sure that the ship was dropping mines over its side that the crews asked for and received permission from Rear Adm. Harold Bernsen to fire, the spokesman said. Bernsen is the commander of the Navy's Middle East Force, the Navy battle group that operates inside the Persian Gulf.
 "It wasn't a snap judgment," Hoffman added.

Hoffman declined to identify what type of American helicopter mounted the attack, but it appeared the aircraft was a specially equipped Army copter assigned to the Special Operations Forces. A Special Operations aviation unit has been in the Persian Gulf to augment the firepower on U.S. Navy warships.

Hoffman also declined to say how many American helicopters were in the air, beyond saying it was more than one. The Jarrett is believed capable, however, of supporting only two helicopters.

Hoffman said he didn't know if any warning shots were fired or any attempt made to establish communication with the Iranian ship.

But on Capitol Hill, aides to Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas said they had been told by the White House that radio contact was first established with the Iranian ship which was told to cease and desist mine-laying activities.

When there was no response to the order a warning shot was fired, the aides said. They said they had been told that only when that measure produced no response did the attack begin.
 Hoffman said he did not know whether there were any Iranian casualties.
 He said the incident occurred "very near an anchorage that we ships use off Bahrain." He said the helicopter acted after "careful observation" and after officials were satisfied the ship was laying mines.
 "And it was clearly hostile intent," he said.

"Planting mines in international waters far from Iran is a violation of international law and an indiscriminate, unjustifiable threat to the shipping of all nations," Hoffman said.
 Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said the United States "had every right to take the action that apparently we did, which is to stop the mine-laying by stopping the ship."

"So I would say that we acted prudently and well within our rights under international law," Nunn told United States Radio Network.
 "This is just an instance where the Iranians obviously got caught," Nunn said.

Hoffman declined Monday night to say whether additional American warships had been dispatched to the area or to say whether any attempt would be made by U.S. forces to capture the ship.

He also declined to say whether any efforts had been made as yet to locate the mines believed to have been dumped overboard by the Iranian ship.

Hoffman described the Iran Air as an amphibious landing craft, much larger than the small shows that ply the gulf's waters.
 The Pentagon spokesman said it appeared the British ship Genie Brezee, was attacked by an Iranian ship about 20 miles to the north of Bahrain. That would place the British vessel closer to the scene of the American confrontation than originally thought.

 utility will be lucky to make $20 million on off-system sales, the company said.
 IPC is looking at a number of ideas to set up an exchange of power with utilities in the Southwest. This offsets the need to build new generating facilities, according to utility experts. But first IPC would have to build the new line to the Southwest because existing lines don't have the capacity for firm power sales.
 Taylor said he was not aware of any legal problems that blocked an agreement with IPC on Wiley.
 But state Public Utilities Commissioner Joe Miller said the decision not to proceed on Wiley had to do with the inability of the parties to legally structure the agreement as hoped for.

 One of the attractions of the Wiley project for IPC, was the ability of Tacoma to obtain tax exempt financing for the project, IPC said. The two utilities were discussing Tacoma building the project and IPC running it and buying some of the power when it needed it.
 There was no pricetag on the A.J. Wiley project but Tacoma has said if another utility were to build the dam, the utility would have to borrow $200 million.

City Light says one of the reasons it needs the project is because it wants to hold the line on BPA power purchases. Tacoma regards the public power marketing agency as a weather vane in the political winds, says Garth Jackson, City Light's project manager for Wiley. Tacoma also needs more power to meet an expected 2 percent per year growth in electrical load, he says.
 Wiley is one of a number of expansion projects City Light has on tap, mainly in Washington. The dam would generate an average of 55 megawatts per 24 hours. Tacoma is also considering a hydro project on the North Fork of the Payette River here with Seattle City Light, the Associated Press reported.

 D-Ohio, one of Borik's harshest critics, and former Attorney General William French Smith.
 Metzger said "you can walk down any street and find women who are worried about Borik's position on privacy rights."
 "What you have done is propagandize that issue," Smith said. "It borders on dishonesty and it borders on lying to the American public."

 "Propagandize my eye," Metzger shot back.
 Smith, who served as attorney general in the Reagan administration, said "Judge Borik neutrally and fairly applies the law to the facts at hand. He does not approach a case by asking which side 'deserves' to win."

 But earlier Mayor Andrew Young of Atlanta said Borik is "a protector of privilege and power rather than opportunity and freedom."
 Had Borik's views prevailed in the United States, and particularly in the South, Young told the committee, non-violent protest might have been undermined with harsher racial conflict the result.

 slightly burned by the flash the accident created.
 Neighbors said they heard a noise and saw a flash of light. The accident shorted out two 25,000-volt transmission lines, cutting electrical service to customers from Hailey to Sun Valley for about one hour.
 Larry Taylor, Idaho Power Co. information officer in Boise, said because of the fatality involved, restoration of service probably took a little longer than usual. He said he did not have full details of the accident Monday night, but his company would also be investigating it.

 "As far as I know, we have never had any problems with children playing in the power station prior to the Monday night accident," he said.
 He said there were two fuses and one transformer blown-out in the substation that provides power to a large area of the county.
 He set the time of the power outage at 6:47 p.m., but said he did not have a report on when all customers were back in service.

Hydro proposal has residents steamed

SHELLEY (AP) — Four years ago, a survey team made an unannounced visit to Ted Harder's farm.

They began laying out stakes that showed where a more than one-mile-long diversion would alter the course of the Snake River through the middle of his potato field and into a turbine to produce electricity.

Ted and his son Doug decided not to stop them, and allowed them to place red survey marks on their houses and farm buildings that showed where the water level would be once a dam is constructed downstream from their riverside home.

"They've never once come to us as a landowner and said let's resolve this," said Harder. "They just had the attitude 'We're going to go through you.'"

Idaho Falls has proposed building its fifth hydroelectric plant on the river at Harder's farm. The Shelley project is the first in which the city has faced significant opposition.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission has conducted a hearing and public meeting in Idaho Falls on the proposed nine megawatt hydroelectric plant, estimated to cost $40 million. Already environmentalists, federal and state wildlife agencies, irrigators and Shelley area residents have lined up in opposition. Harder is at the front of the line.

"I don't want to see them turn it down to Idaho Falls," he said. "I want to see them turn it down for any city."

Idaho Falls Mayor Tom Campbell said city leaders would be shirking their responsibilities to ratepayers if they did not study the site, which he described as the last good hydroelectric dam site between Idaho Falls and American Falls.

"We don't know where we are on the project," said Campbell. "Until we know what the cost per kilowatt hour is we won't know whether we will move ahead."

But even if Idaho Falls decides not to build the project, other cities, including Tacoma and Seattle, Wash., and Shelley have expressed an interest in it.

"We're a little reluctant to engage in a conflict with these people because we might end up on the same side," Campbell said of project opponents. "If it's licensable, somebody will take a shot at the project. If it's going to be built by someone they might find that Idaho Falls is more reasonable, more willing to make compromises, than someone else," he said.

That is little solace to Harder and other residents who live along the river and will lose land or the idyllic landscape that makes their homes attractive.

"I don't want to sell," said Harder. "My father and brother bought the property in 1943. I was raised on it, my son was raised on it and he was hoping his son could be raised here, too."

Kent Carlson, Harder's neighbor, built his home by the river in 1974. He fishes and boats with his family on the stretch that will be most altered by the dam and diversion.

The channel in front of his house would narrow and lush cottonwood trees would be left high and dry to wither and die. It also would destroy the winter home for 15 eagles and hundreds of waterfowl, said Carlson.

"If they sacrifice my lifestyle for 36,000 people in Idaho Falls then it's no better than South Africa," said Carlson. "I consider Idaho Falls a foreign government. I don't get the right to vote for Mayor Campbell but they can come down here and threaten my way of life."

Kaiser Engineering is conducting a feasibility study for the city that is expected to be completed in October. It will tell city officials if the project can be built economically.

But before the city can move ahead with the project, it will need to get approval of two-thirds of city voters in a bond election and approval from FERC and the state.

Harder and other critics argue that the plant is not needed because of a surplus of power in the Pacific Northwest. But Campbell said if the cost is reasonable, the city would use the power from the Shelley project to stabilize its rate base.

Currently, the city buys most of its power from the Bonneville Power Administration. "With one stroke of the pen they can raise our rates," Campbell said of BPA.

Groups upset over Panhandle plan

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Neither environmentalists nor timber industry representatives are happy with the Panhandle National Forest's final, long-range management plan, and say they'll appeal.

The guidelines for nearly 2.5 million acres of forest projects that timber sales will double in volume and the amount of roadless territory on the forest will shrink by about two-thirds during the next 50 years.

Joe Hinson of the Intermountain Forest Industries Association at Coeur d'Alene said the targeted cut of about 280 million board feet per year isn't enough.

In Sandpoint, Panhandle Environmental League coordinator Michelle Britton said her group will appeal the plan in conjunction with the Inland Empire Public Lands Council. Appeals must be filed with the Chief of the U.S. Forest Service within 45 days. If an administrative appeal is denied, it can be pursued in the courts.

The forest plan will be revised after 10 to 15 years, and some of its long-range predictions may change. During the last 10 years, timber harvest from Panhandle Forest lands has averaged 235 million board feet per year, while the Forest Service has offered sales totaling 289 million board feet per year, the plan states.

During the next 10 years, the Panhandle Forest plans to offer for sale an average of 280 million board feet per year. That will increase to 350 million board feet per year in the following 10 years.

The timber sale volume is projected to increase to 544 million board feet per year after 50 years.

That is the amount federal forest-owners think they can produce on a sustained basis, assuming intensive management of forest stands and spreading out harvesting and management to presently undeveloped areas, said Panhandle Forest planning team leader Gerry Houder.

The Panhandle Forest includes about 858,000 acres of land in roadless, undeveloped areas of 6,000 acres or more. In the next 10 years, the agency plans development — road building or harvesting or both — on about 190,000 of those acres.

The plan recommends that about 156,000 acres be included in con-gressionally designated wilderness areas, including an additional 17,585 acres in the Salmo-Priest area (9,440 acres already included in wilderness), 23,912 acres in the Scotchman Peak area, 26,658 acres in the Selkirk Crest area, and 78,527 acres in the Mallard-Larkins area.

These amounts fall short of acreages proposed for wilderness by pro-wilderness groups but exceed the amount supported by the timber industry.

The Panhandle Forest contains about 6,000 miles of forest roads. The plan projects that 1,760 miles of new roads will be constructed in the next 10 years and 6,000 miles of new roads will be built over the next 50 years.

Idaho ACT scores slip

BOISE (AP) — The performance of Idaho students on a national college entrance test slipped this year after recording a significant improvement a year earlier, officials announced Monday.

But the composite score for Idaho students remained above "the national average on the ACT assessment administered by the American College Testing Program."

The four-part multiple choice test is the one used predominantly in the western states. It was taken by more than half this year's graduating seniors in Idaho.

Results of the Scholastic Aptitude Test, taken by a much smaller percentage of students in the West, were to be released Tuesday by the College Board in New York.

State Schools Superintendent Jerry Evans expressed some disappointment at the decline in the test scores, but he said it was still a little early for the revitalized drive for excellence in education to have had an effect.

In addition, in-state tests administered to all eighth and 11th grade students have shown continued academic improvement over the past three years.

Committee approves gondola money

WASHINGTON (AP) — Half the money needed for Kellogg, Idaho's long-awaited Gondola Transportation Project has been tentatively approved by a Senate Appropriations subcommittee.

The measure sponsored by Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, would provide up to $6.4 million for the gondola project, but only after investors come up with the rest of the needed money.

For that, Kellogg plans to sell up to $8 million in gondola revenue bonds approved by city voters last year. Gondola Committee Chairman Bernard Goodson said other ways of raising the additional capital also are being considered.

Crisis in American law stirs debate over Bork nomination

WASHINGTON— Behind the bitter debate over the nomination of Robert Bork to the Supreme Court lies a crisis in the law.

As members of both the legal left and right have been claiming for a decade, and as the current clash of their opposing views affirms, a longstanding consensus about the proper method for interpreting the Constitution has broken down.

There have been other periods when the consensus in American law was fractured, and they have sometimes led to results that are now acclaimed — most notably the 1954 ruling in Brown vs. Board of Education that segregation in public schools is unconstitutional. But in the current situation, the right is venting deep frustration built up over a generation and has provoked a response from the left that, in turn, has led both sides to anger and incivility. All this encourages, and sometimes amounts to, disrespect for the law itself.

The breakdown of legal consensus has also pushed the right into an activism of reaction, even as it deplores the judicial activism of the left. In 1985, Charles Fried, who is now the Reagan administration's solicitor general, said at a seminar of the Manhattan Institute for Policy Research, "I think by now there is a large measure of agreement that many significant, yet misguided, policy trends developed in the law during the mid-1960s." Fried said that "growing institutional paralysis — a kind of celebration-of-self-hatred for national values and institutions — was fed by the emergence of what many have called the 'new classes,' a class in which lawyers and judges played a large role."

Fried, judges were among the worst offenders. Judicial activism, he said another time, represented "an attitude" that led to "lawlessness."

Fried came to Washington, first as deputy solicitor general and then as solicitor general, "to do something about this terrible drift." During this century the post he assumed has, perhaps, best represented the American commitment to the rule of law.

Court justices count on the solicitor general to look beyond the government's narrow interests, to help guide them to the right result in each case and to pay close attention to the case's impact on the law.

From the start, the Reagan administration has put heavy pressure on the solicitor general's office to advance the president's agenda. As the first Reagan solicitor, Rex Lee, put it after he was hounded from office, "There has been this notion that my job is to press the administration's policies at every turn and announce true conservative principles through the press of my briefs. It is not. I'm the solicitor general, not the pamphleteer general."

In the 1985 Supreme Court term, Fried, whose legal scholarship has won him a reputation for politeness and verve, abjured parts of the legal world by spurning standard practices of legal reasoning to try for results in a large number of Reagan agenda cases. For example, in an important 1982 voting-rights case, the Supreme Court found that the solicitor general had misrepresented legislative history and had taken one sentence out of context from a lower-court opinion in order to justify the government's position.

The left has its own critique about what has happened in the law during the past generation, and why the transformation of the solicitor general's role was predictable. The Critical Legal Studies movement argues that the law is ultimately defined less by abstract principles than by the political and moral views of judges and lawyers who apply and interpret those principles.

Ironically, by their disregard for settled law and practice, the lawyers on the right who most hate C.L.S. thinking now provide its best supporting evidence. So does the descent of the debate about the Bork Supreme Court nomination into almost pure politics. While both sides cite high principles to argue why Robert Bork is right or wrong for the court, the lack of a mainstream view on constitutional law means that politics are the main grounds on which the conflicting sides actually contend.

The inability of scholars and judges to articulate legal principles that clearly transcend politics has tended to reduce respect for the law as a vehicle for solving social problems and to encourage many Americans to believe that they, too, are constitutional lawyers able to decide the day's hard cases. According to a 1986 NBC News poll, a majority of Americans want the chief justice of the United States should be elected, overlooking the value of having the nation's highest judge removed from politics.

In the Reagan years, the president himself has encouraged this view of the law. While the president's responsibility as chief executive sometimes may require him to articulate why he views the law as he does, Reagan's support for a long list of actions can be read as promoting disrespect for settled law, as expressed in statutes or expounded by the Supreme Court. For example, he backed tax exemptions for segregated schools in the Bob Jones case, endorsed an extremely narrow reading of court decisions in favor of affirmative action and applauded his administration's call for the overturning of Roe vs. Wade only two years after the landmark decision supporting a constitutional right to abortion was strongly reaffirmed.

A powerful signal about the Reagan outlook came from Attorney General Edwin Meese, when he lectured in 1986 about the dangers of submitting to government by judiciary. To the amazement of many legal observers, Meese declared that the Supreme Court's interpretations of the Constitution do "not establish a 'supreme law of the land.'" In effect, he invented a new axiom of constitutional law: If the Supreme Court hands down a decision with which the executive branch disagrees, then officials in the executive should simply treat their own views as authoritative.

American law has survived previous periods of bitter and widespread antagonism about it — the long bleak period of law before and after the Civil War, for example, and the conservative blockage of New Deal legislation in the 1930s.

But following each crisis in the law, leading scholars and judges have sought rebuilding legal consensus, as is now required. The American system of government is set apart by a need for the consent of the governed; the law is the compact between the people and their representatives. The Supreme Court must force consensus as it interprets the laws made by Congress and enforced by the executive branch. If not, the court encourages disrespect for the law. The current problem reaches far beyond the Supreme Court. Practices of the Reagan Justice Department (abergast's longtime observers of the department; the important federal Court of Appeals in Washington has been transformed into liberal and conservative factions that nastily go at each other; judges, lawyers and scholars increasingly treat the law as a forum for clever debate, instead of as a tool for solving problems in human affairs, using accretory, misleading language that, as each side sees the other, divides the legal world between legal terrorists on the right and nihilists on the left.

Until the profession begins to heal its divisions, it will continue to explode in feuds and controversies. They will draw unusual attention and undermine the law. And rather than contributing to social order, the law will continue to drive Americans apart.

Letters/ Moon's anti-communism may be reason for all the frenzy about him

Let's examine brainwashing

There is a considerable amount of frenzy and hysteria being exhibited against anyone who shows the slightest interest in the religious and political views of Rev. Moon. They would have you believe that Rev. Moon is a very dangerous man. And that you must avoid all contact with him, or you may be brainwashed into believing all sorts of horrible things.

But one thing you must remember about Rev. Moon. He is extremely anti-Communist. And just perhaps that is the reason for the frenzy.

But let's forget Rev. Moon for the moment. Let's concentrate on the word "brainwashed." Especially as it pertains to religious beliefs. And all religious beliefs. It is my opinion that a considerable amount of brainwashing is necessary to obtain adherents to every religious belief in the world.

We will start with the Protestant Christian belief, and the brainwashing that is necessary before you can become an avowed member of the Christian Church.

The story starts out with a vague description of an event, which supposedly took place two thousand years ago. As pure fantasy, you will never read anything that can top this part of the story.

But as the story continues, the product of this event was the birth of a baby boy, who was named Jesus Christ. Nothing much is heard about Jesus Christ until about 30 years later.

The story continues with the narration of several episodes that must be accepted as truth by every Christian: Jesus Christ changed water into wine at a wedding; Jesus Christ produced food for five thousand people; immediately!

He restored sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, speech to the dumb. Instantly! Leprosy? No problem. Just get in line and one touch and you are cured. And for an encore, Jesus Christ can and does bring dead people back to life. Including a man named Lazarus, who has been dead for four days. Whose sister has said his body is stinking. No problem. Jesus Christ walks into the tomb, and moments later, Lazarus walks out!

Don't think! Don't ask questions! Jesus Christ was said to have done these things. Isn't that enough?

The gist of it, Jesus Christ was promising his people some form of eternal life, and that he would die, but later he would return, and all people living and dead at that time who believed in him would go to heaven. All non-believers would go to hell.

Look around you today. The brainwashing ing still goes on, and the faithful still expect Jesus Christ to appear any day now.

The sad fact about this entire fabricated story about Jesus Christ, is that a multi-billion industry has been built up around it, and nobody, but nobody is going to rock the boat of the gravy. I say, more power to him. I, for one, like anti-Communist.

MELVOURNE FRYE
Twin Falls

Introducing new question

I see my recent letter has ruffled some sensitive nerves. In reference, to the response by Mr. Tranmer, Sept. 18.

In checking the documentation of the case, I find that my memory was correct and there were two Mo's involved in this case, one apparently an employee of the State of Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, and another a employee of the office of prosecuting attorney, Twin Falls County.

I suspect, however, that the one with Baxter's office is the ruffled party. Me thinks the lady doth protest too much.

I do, however, find that I must take exception to a couple of points where Tranmer's has grossly misquoted my letter.

First Ms. Tranmer, in the first sentence of her letter, used the phrase, "His assertions that the prosecutor's office was in the habit of using witnesses who would perjure themselves." The truth is I made no such assertions. If Ms. Tranmer had paid attention to what she was reading she would have realized that the statement I referred to was a clarification of a earlier editorial regarding Ms. Baxter's routinely taking weak cases.

The statement I made was, "I will leave it up to the public how routine these instances are." Getting an assertion that Baxter's office makes a habit of using perjured witnesses out of that takes considerably more imagination than I possess. I went on to state that "I will only state that Ms. Baxter has, on at least one occasion, personally taken a very weak and poorly prepared case to court." It still takes a real good imagination to get anything about habitual perjured witnesses out of that.

The second exception that I must take is to Tranmer's statement in her second sentence that, "I can assure the public that Ms. Baxter nor anyone in the prosecutor's office ever saw the witness who intended to commit perjury." I suppose that it is possible that Tranmer was misinformed by the paper, or more likely that she simply did not express herself properly. I have not heard of the prosecutor's office having any psychic on their payroll who can read the mind of a witness, perjured or otherwise, in order to tell what his intentions are; therefore Ms. Tranmer can't assure anyone any such thing.

I do believe, however, that in the vast majority of cases perjured witnesses intend to commit perjury. Perhaps what Ms. Tranmer intended to say was that neither Ms. Baxter or anyone in her office intended to use perjured witnesses. You will find by reading my letter that although I mentioned Ms. Baxter intentionally using perjured witnesses as one possible explanation, I did not say that was the case.

In fact, I specifically said I did not choose to believe that was true. What I did say was that Ms. Baxter did use perjured witnesses, and further that if she had studied her files on the case she would have known that her witnesses were lying.

I stand by my words and am prepared to prove them. The evidence was in her files that her witnesses were lying, that's where I got it.

I am still not prepared to say whether Ms. Baxter intentionally used perjured witnesses, or whether she simply didn't do her homework. Unfortunately, Ms. Tranmer's letter doesn't help answer the question, it only serves to introduce the additional question of whether Ms. Baxter prepares her own cases or is it possible that she has her staff do it for her?

One thing that has been bothering me is that whatever else Baxter is, she is not stupid and if she had studied the file she would have known the witnesses were lying.

This has tended to lead me to believe that she didn't prepare her cases.

Now we have a third possibility, did Ms. Baxter have Ms. Tranmer brief her on the contents of the file? After all, Ms. Tranmer in a letter of four sentences managed to make probably false statements in sentences one and two, and to assure us that God would get him for that in the future.

I can assure all that the defendant in this case will stand forth for judgment before the Lord with a clear conscience in this matter when the time comes. After all, only two people on the face of this earth know for sure whether the defendant in this case was guilty or innocent, the defendant himself, and his accuser. I think that by this time most people have figured out that the reason I can speak for the defendant in this case with authority is that I am his lawyer.

While I am on the subject of Ms. Baxter I would like to respond to Mark Stubb's challenge to The Times-News to produce their evidence that the police control what cases Ms. Baxter prosecutes, by saying that although I don't know what proof The Times-News has and although as a loyal Republican I hate to take issue with our general committee chairman, my evidence of this fact is Ms. Baxter's own statement to me that "I only prosecute cases the police recommend."

A WAYNE FRANDESEN
Twin Falls

Call it 'Wheel of Justice'

I am writing in regards to your editorial of Sept. 10, 1987, and Mr. A. Wayne Frandesen's letter of Sept. 9.

I feel that it is about time that someone from the "other side" expresses their opinion concerning K. Ellen Baxter. It is very obvious to myself, as it is to anyone else who is involved in the criminal justice system, that the whole legal procedure should be called for the game it really and truly is, "The Wheel of Justice."

Like Vanna White, K. Ellen Baxter and her co-hosts turn the letters to determine the fate of the so-called "accused." One thing we all must realize is that the future of the prosecuting attorney is decided by the taxpayers of Twin Falls County. The main measure which determines the success of the prosecuting attorney is by the percentage of convictions obtained out of any given number of criminal complaints.

If the percentage is high enough, the chances of re-election are all but certain. That basically is as it should be, but in many cases the actual fact of whether the accused is guilty or not is pushed aside and the main objective becomes putting together a "script" to convince the jury that he/she is guilty, or better yet, to convince the accused that there is no possible way he/she can possibly be found not guilty. Result — plea bargain.

A plea bargain results in the same way as the jury as it gives the prosecutor another conviction. The way the prosecutor's office justifies the plea bargain arrangement is to state that it is much less expensive than going through a costly trial. This, of course, is a true statement as if everyone who was accused went to trial, the cost factor would be astronomical.

On the other hand, many of the defendants who plea bargain go to prison and have they gone to trial, many of them would have been found not guilty. Either way, the taxpayer pays the bill and the bill is not by any means cheap. Last time I heard it cost somewhere around $20,000 per year to incarcerate one inmate.

It is quite understandable why Ms. Baxter would like to impanel a grand jury. By doing so, the burden of proof is no longer necessary when it comes to binding a defendant over for jury trial.

I think much of the credit if not all, for bringing the whole thing with the grand jury to a head, should be given to Michael Wood of the public defenders office. Mr. Wood saw what serious and devastating consequences could result from the impaneling of a grand jury could bring. I think Mr. Wood should be commended for the "guts" it took for him to fight the same system he himself, is a part of. Let us not forget that Mr. Wood gets his paycheck from the same source that Ms. Baxter gets hers. From the taxpayer.

Ms. Baxter stated that because of your editorial "clearly injures us in our occupation as prosecuting attorneys." If anyone has been injured in their occupation, it is Mr. Wood.

Anyone who is currently awaiting trial and has Mr. Wood representing him, is well aware of the declining working relationship between the public defender's and the prosecuting attorney's office.

In closing, I would like to state that I am presently being held in the Jerome County Jail and I am a Twin Falls prisoner. I have been in custody since May 23. I am accused of kidnapping and assault. I am not guilty and I will hopefully prove this at my trial on Nov. 17, 1987. The alleged victim was my girlfriend with whom I was living with from January 1987 until May 23, 1987.

It is my understanding that the prosecuting attorney is considered to be the highest law enforcement officer in the county. If justice is supposed to be the main goal of the system, I would like to know why I have at no time since my arrest been questioned by the police, prosecutor's office, sheriff's office nor any other law enforcement officer?

It is quite obvious to me that Ms. Baxter is only interested in the rights of the accused and not the rights of the accused. It seems that the motto of the Twin Falls Prosecutor's Office is "Guilty until proven innocent."

Whatever happened to "Innocent until proven guilty"?

In all honesty, I must say that in my 44 years on this earth, I have had many brushes with the law and some of them resulted in convictions. However, none of them were of a violent nature.

Keep up the good work and tell it like it is.

Strikes continue at Nevada site

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Nearly 2,800 union workers remained off the job at the Nevada Test Site and a secret Stealth aircraft base Monday, honoring picket lines of striking culinary workers and bus drivers.

More than 600 culinary workers, who began their strike last Tuesday, lined up over the weekend for $50-a-week strike pay and free groceries. No new negotiations were scheduled. About 120 Las Vegas-Reno-Tonopah Stage Lines drivers, who transport workers to the site, have been striking since Aug. 15.

Steve Leon, a spokesman for Reynolds Electrical and Engineering Co., the major contractor at both installations, said 2,788 union workers were absent Monday out of 2,995 scheduled to report.

A total of 8,300 Southern Nevadans work at the Nevada Test Site with hundreds more employed at the top secret Tonopah Test Range, an isolated base 200 miles northwest of Las Vegas where Stealth aircraft are based and tested.

Energy Department officials have acknowledged that the strike could delay projects at the two sites if it continues for some time. Much of the research for President Reagan's "Star Wars" or Strategic Defense Initiative program is also carried out at the test site 66 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

The workers refusing to cross the picket lines include steelworkers, mineworkers, laborers and others. They are used primarily for drilling vertical shafts and working mines in which nuclear weapons tests are conducted.

Reynolds has nine other labor contracts expiring Oct. 1, including pagers, carpenters, electricians, ironworkers, laborers, operating engineers, painters, plumbers, sheet metal workers and Teamsters.

The culinary union has been seeking a $1-an-hour across the board pay increase this year, 3 percent raises each of the next two years and increased benefits for the health and welfare fund. The company has countered with a wage freeze this year, a 2.2 percent pay increase next year and 3.2 percent increase in 1989. Leon said Culinary workers now earn from $8.65 to $11.27 an hour.

The last major strike at the test site was in 1970. The government was able to continue its testing program at that time.

Hahn to testify before grand jury in PTL probe

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jessica Hahn, whose 1980 tryst with evangelist Jim Bakker led to his resignation from the PTL ministry in March, was rushed into a federal courthouse today to testify before a grand jury investigating PTL.

The former church secretary said nothing as she was ushered past photographers and reporters by her attorney, Dominic Barbara. "After the testimony is over, we will have a statement," Barbara said. "We hope the testimony will be over this morning and we'll be out of here this afternoon."

Miss Hahn, of West Babylon, N. Y., arrived here Sunday, but Barbara told reporters she was too tired to answer questions. She has avoided publicity recently, awaiting the publication of an interview in Playboy magazine due out this week.

Barbara had said earlier his client would testify as a government witness with a grant of limited immunity from prosecution.

"Jessica clearly considers it her responsibility to cooperate with the government in its investigation," he said after she was served with a subpoena.

Miss Hahn, 28, has said previously that she agreed to accept $286,000 from PTL in exchange for her silence about the encounter with Bakker in a Florida hotel room, but she only received a small amount of the money before Bakker resigned and the payments were cut off.

Convicted murderer executed in Georgia

JACKSON, Ga. (AP) — Timothy W. McCorquodale was electrocuted Monday for the 1974 torture-murder of a runaway teen-age girl, a murder he claimed he couldn't remember.

McCorquodale, the fifth man to be executed in Georgia this year, was pronounced dead at 7:23 p.m. EDT, said prison spokesman John Siler.

McCorquodale, 35, was convicted of raping, torturing and then breaking the neck of a 17-year-old girl he had seen talking to a black man. McCorquodale and the victim were white.

The 270-pound McCorquodale gave a thumbs-up sign to his father and three family members, seated himself briefly in the chair and joked with the guards who strapped him in.

He requested a prayer, then made his final statement: "I would like to tell my dad and everybody with him that I love them very much. Stay strong in Christ."

As McCorquodale died, six hooded members of the Ku Klux Klan and a dozen other people demonstrated outside the prison in favor of capital punishment. Nearby, a dozen death-penalty opponents held hands and prayed.

A request for clemency from the state Board of Pardons and Paroles was rejected at an all-afternoon Monday, shortly after the Supreme Court, on a 6-2 vote, turned down one of the two appeals before it.

Later Monday, by the same 6-2 vote, the high court rejected McCorquodale's final appeal — a challenge of the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals' refusal Sunday to stay the execution.

McCorquodale was the 93rd prisoner to be put to death in the United States since the Supreme Court cleared the way for states to resume capital punishment in 1976.

McCorquodale was sentenced to die for the slaying of Donna Marie Dixon, a runaway from Newport News, Va., who had gone to "the Strip," a rough section of midtown Atlanta which several years before had housed the city's hippie community.

Parole Board Chairman Wayne Snow said the panel received a letter from McCorquodale Friday in which "he does show considerable remorse for what he's done."

Nevertheless, Snow said the board viewed the killing as "one of the most heinous crimes committed in the state" and decided against commuting the death sentence for that reason.

Gulf peace tied to roots

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — As the Iran-Iraq war enters its eighth year, the issue of who started the conflict has come into sharp focus because it could hold the key to ending the war.

A United Nations peace effort hinges on Iran's insistence that Iraq must be branded the aggressor before any cease-fire can be agreed.

Iran claims the war began on Sept. 22, 1980, when Iraq's air forces attacked military airfields. The next day, five Iraqi divisions stormed across the southern border and pushed into Iran.

But Iraq dates the conflict from Sept. 4, when Iranian artillery started shelling border towns in a dispute over the Shatt-al-Arab waterway which forms the southern boundary between the two long-antagonistic neighbors.

Iraq says it invaded as a response to the border clashes and Iranian hostilities.

Tehran's leaders told U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar this month that Iran will not observe the Security Council's July 20 call for a cease-fire until Iraq is branded the aggressor and its leaders are put on trial as war criminals.

Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz of Iraq declared after meeting Perez de Cuellar Sept. 15: "Iran started the war. Iran has intransigently insisted on the war for seven years. If anybody's going to be punished for that, it's the Iranian regime."

Many military analysts consider the Iraqi invasion as an attempt by President Saddam Hussein to take advantage of the turmoil gripping Iran in the aftermath of the 1979 Islamic revolution that toppled the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Iraq's Sunni Moslem rulers viewed the rise of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Shiite Moslem fundamentalists, their historical rivals, as a major threat. About 66 percent of Iraq's population are Shiites, like the vast majority of Iranians.

For decades rivalry existed between Iraq and Iran for supremacy as the dominant power in the strategic gulf region. Historically, the Arabs and Persian Iran have been divided on ethnic and religious grounds.

The shah considered Iran the guardian of the Persian Gulf and built up his military strength throughout the 1970s with aid from the United States. He also aided rebellious Kurdish separatists in Iraq fighting the Baghdad government.

Iraq, under a Baath Socialist Party, also had ambitions of becoming the regional power and standard-bearer of pan-Arabism.

When Iraq sought in 1969 to exercise its rights in the Shatt al-Arab, its only outlet to the Persian Gulf, the shah unilaterally abrogated a 1937 agreement that gave Baghdad sovereignty over the waterway.

Border skirmishes went on for years until Iraq and Iran signed the 1975 Algiers agreement. Iran agreed to stop backing the Kurds and Iraq agreed that the demarcation line in the Shatt al-Arab would run down the middle of the waterway.

Iran's failure to return small enclaves of territory it held along the border further north was deeply resented by the Iraqis and eventually was cited by Iraq as one justification for its invasion.

In 1977, with Iranian military strength growing, Iraq began its own buildup with aid from the Soviet Union.

The 1979 revolution and the fall of the shah pushed Iran into turmoil. Amid anti-Baath demonstrations, Khomeini called on Iraq's Shiites to revolt to "consign Saddam to the dustbin of history." There were attacks on Iraqi property in Iran and relations deteriorated rapidly.

Border skirmishes escalated through the summer and by August involved artillery exchanges.

On Sept. 7, Iraq accused Iran of shelling border towns from areas that it said had been designated Iraq territory by the Algiers agreement.

Ten days later the Iraqis abrogated the 1975 agreement and began mobilizing. On Sept. 22 Iraq struck unexpectedly to score a quick victory over the disorganized Iraqis.

The officer corps of the shah's military machine had been purged by Khomeini's fundam

Thousands decry alleged facism

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Thousands of people demonstrated nationwide Monday against purported fascist influence in the government and the assassination of a young leftist leader.

President Corason Aquino meanwhile ordered changes in military commands.

In Cebu City, about 350 miles south of Manila, the New Patriotic Alliance said it held the government responsible for the Saturday shooting of its national secretary-general, Leon Alejandro, "because of... (government) incapacity to defend our people."

Noel Tabasa, regional general secretary of the social activist organization, announced an "open break" with the Aquino administration, saying "it does not deserve support any more."

The alliance was one of many groups that joined street protests in February 1986 which helped drive Ferdinand Marcos from the presidency and brought Mrs. Aquino to power.

Alejandro was killed outside alliance headquarters hours after he announced plans to stage a rally Monday, the 15th anniversary of Marcos' imposition of martial law.

Reporters estimated that 10,000 people demonstrated in suburban Manila, denouncing "fascist influence" in the Aquino government and Alejandro's murder.

The protesters dropped plans to march on the presidential palace, to avoid a confrontation with police.

Demonstrators erected a large billboard on a jeep that depicted soldiers shooting civilians as Mrs. Aquino and President Reagan looked on.

Leftists and many other Filipinos accuse the United States of pressuring Mrs. Aquino into granting the military a greater role in national policy. The United States has denied applying any such pressure.

Alejandro's widow, Lydenia, told a rally her husband's death will inspire leftists to continue their struggle.

"His death shows... that the government of Cory (Mrs. Aquino) is like Marcos, it uses facism," she said.

Protesters chanted slogans vowing to "go to the hills" to join communist rebels. The Communist New People's Army has been waging an 18-year-old guerrilla war against the government.

Alejandro had been scheduled to speak at both those rallies.

'Genetic fingerprinting' introduced

The Los Angeles Times

LONDON — For the first time, a police force has used evidence gathered by a scientific technique known as "genetic fingerprinting" to formally charge a suspect with a serious crime.

After a highly unusual investigation that included taking more than 5,600 blood and saliva samples from adult males living in the immediate area of the crimes, Leicestershire County police on Sunday night charged a 27-year-old baker with the murder-rape of two teen-age girls.

The man charged, Colin Pitchfork, was held without bail after a brief court appearance in the city of Leicester, 100 miles north of London.

Although the technique has been questioned by civil libertarians, some forensic scientists view it as potentially the most significant breakthrough since the development of fingerprinting in solving crimes.

Pitchfork's arrest came nearly four years after the first victim died and nine months after police began taking serum samples in an effort to revive an investigation that had gone cold for the lack of clues.

"The system we employed turned him up," Detective Superintendent

Anthony Painter said. "We believed from the start that it was a local man."

Pitchfork lives in the village of Littlefork, one of three communities where police asked every male between 13 and 30 years of age to provide blood and saliva samples voluntarily.

Although 2½ years separated the killings, which occurred near the small Midlands village of Enderby, the technique of isolating elements of the genetic structure in blood — a structure said to be as individually distinctive as a fingerprint — supported police suspicion that the same man committed both crimes.

Genetic fingerprinting also led directly to the release of a 17-year-old boy initially charged with one of the murders.

The laboratory testing technique was first developed by a Leicester University geneticist, Alex Jeffrey, who focused his attention on a bodily substance called DNA — deoxyribonucleic acid — found in the chromosomes of all living beings but in uniquely different patterns.

The arrangement of the series of bands that make up the DNA is as individually specific as a fingerprint, with the chance of two persons having identical patterns estimated at between 30 billion and 100 billion to one, according to

Paper reports Gorbachev ill

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — A West German newspaper reported today that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev had to be hospitalized during his Black Sea vacation after suffering serious food poisoning.

The mass-circulation newspaper Bild, citing no sources for its story, said the Kremlin leader may have been the target of a poisoning attempt.

There was no Soviet comment on the report today. Gorbachev's motorcade was seen traveling to the Kremlin this morning.

The West German newspaper also said Gorbachev escaped an apparent assassination attempt in February, when authorities found a police car filled with explosives in Riga the day before he visited.

Illinois governor signs sweeping AIDS package into law

CHICAGO (AP) — Gov. James R. Thompson today approved a sweeping legislative package permitting health officials to trace AIDS victims' sex contacts, requiring AIDS tests of couples about to marry and giving the state limited power to quarantine AIDS victims.

Thompson also approved strict confidentiality measures for AIDS testing and treatment, a broad educational effort including AIDS education in grades 6-12 and mandatory testing of donated blood and tissue.

the public health while preserving the individual rights of our citizens.

"There are no easy answers or solutions to the problems associated with AIDS," he said in a written statement. "It is not easy to sort out which of our concerns are legitimate and which of our actions are truly appropriate."

Thompson's action capped a six-month debate over AIDS legislation that saw lawmakers threaten to oust the state public health director and homosexual men chain themselves to a fence at Thompson's Chicago home in protest.

Among the other provisions of the measures approved by the governor:

- Some people convicted of sex offenses must be tested for the AIDS virus;
- Hospitals must allow patients to designate blood donors of their choice;

— School officials, law enforcement officers and some state employees must receive AIDS education.

On Sunday, Thompson signed a related measure requiring high schools to teach sexual abstinence until marriage in health and sex education courses.

The governor had said previously he would sign the marriage-testing bill, but he was noncommittal about the remainder of the measures.

Dr. Bernard Turnock, the state's public health director, opposed mandatory testing and contact-tracing legislation. Such measures, he has said, would discourage voluntary testing, divert resources from more effective responses to AIDS and encourage bias in employment and insurance.

Turnock supported the legislation to require instruction in grades six through 12 on the prevention, transmission and spread of AIDS as part of a comprehensive educational health program.

AIDS cripples the body's defenses against disease, leaving a victim prey to life-threatening infections and certain cancers.

As of May, Illinois had 868 confirmed cases of AIDS.

Vaccine tests for humans planned

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — An AIDS vaccine developed by Dr. Jonas Salk, based on his work in preventing polio, may be ready for testing in humans in January, researchers at the University of California said Monday.

"This is a very long shot," Dr. Neil Flynn, head of the AIDS unit at University Medical Center here, said at a news conference. "What we hope for is a little bit of information" that will help AIDS victims in the future.

Leading researchers did not want to offer false hope or promises. In fact, with this treatment, "the subject could get worse," he said.

Flynn, accompanied by medical assistants and university officials, said the project was looking for volunteers to participate in the tests, in which a dead AIDS virus is injected into the patient's muscle, probably in the arm.

Volunteers, Flynn added, would participate "partially out of a sense of altruism. ... What we'd like is for this information to be viewed by as many people as possible who might participate."

Volunteers should be people who have tested positive for AIDS, but have not developed symptoms, he said. The program will require about 40 volunteers, and if authorities cannot find enough volunteer patients in Sacramento, which he estimated has about 700 AIDS victims without symptoms, the university would seek patients from the San Francisco Bay area.

The university hopes to begin testing by January.

University officials said the vaccine is the first to use the whole AIDS virus as it occurs naturally, and it will be the first to be tested in individuals already exposed to the deadly virus.

Salk's AIDS vaccine is based on his work that resulted in the first polio vaccine, using whole killed viruses.

It is intended to keep AIDS-infected individuals from progressing to the full-blown disease and may reduce their infectiousness, thus possibly slowing the spread of the disease.

Details of the tests were reported in The Sacramento Bee on Monday and earlier in The Davis Enterprise.

The vaccine requires approval by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration before testing can begin.

The UCD researchers, headed by Salk, have already worked with two batches of vaccine. They are testing a third batch, which they expect to have ready for further experimentation by the end of this month. As a model for their work, they have already developed a similar vaccine that was injected into infected rhesus monkeys late last month.

The monkeys appear unharmed by the vaccine and at least one animal's immune system has been improved.

"It's a start," said Murray Gardner, a UCD virologist and pathologist. "And meantime, we're setting the stage for doing the same thing in humans."

Gardner and Flynn plan to vaccinate 20 humans who have already been exposed to the AIDS virus but who still have functioning immune systems.

The 20 will be compared to 20 similarly healthy AIDS-infected individuals who will receive dummy injections.

Council approves plant operator's contract

By PAT MARCANTONIO
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Texas-based company will get more money for operating the Twin Falls City wastewater treatment plant.

But Operations Management International Inc. will be doing more work, said city staff.

The Twin Falls City Council approved a 10-year contract with OMI at its meeting on Monday.

In the new contract, OMI's base fee for one-year jumps to $1.3 million from $1.2 million in the present contract. That's about a 3 percent increase.

The primary reason for the increased fee is because OMI will take on the added responsibilities of a pre-treatment program required of the city by the Environmental Protection Agency, City Manager Tom Courtney said. City staff had previously worked on the program.

The length of the contract was also changed from 4½ years to 10 years, with annual fee reviews.

OMI proposed the increased length as a marketing tool to show the city has confidence enough in it to make a long-term agreement, Courtney said. But the city would retain the right to terminate the agreement at any time.

The only object of disension among council members was the question dealing with incentives for the company.

The present contract now requires OMI to return to the city 75 percent of the amount of difference between actual operating costs and estimated costs.

In the new contract, the rebate would be modified and placed on a schedule based on the amount of the difference between the two costs. If the difference is $25,000 or below, the city would receive the entire amount, for example: If the difference is $75,000 or more, OMI would keep it all.

Councilman Rick Carr said the modified version didn't give OMI incentive on the lower end of the scale. The city and OMI should share, maybe on varying percentages, any difference between the actual operating costs and estimated costs.

With a budget of $1.3 million, there is potential for large savings, of which the city should share with OMI, he said.

Courtney reported that OMI retained $113,000 to the city for the first 18 months of operations. But he didn't believe there would be any more large rebates because the contract has been "fined tuned." The only time there would be a large amount of difference is if OMI used a new technology to save on operating costs or if a large industry left or was added to the system, he said.

The majority of the council disagreed with Carr, saying they saw the schedule as an incentive.

Courtney added that OMI had wanted to get rid of the incentive clause altogether and raise the base fee. But the city wanted to keep it because it would benefit both parties.

The council voted unanimously to accept the new contract.

Mayor Doug Volmer said the arrangement with OMI was "working well."

In other business, the council adopted a resolution establishing a new salary schedule for city employees for the 1987-88 fiscal year. A 3 percent salary hike was included in the recently-adopted city budget. The exceptions are members of the City Council and Mayor.

With adoption of the resolution, the raises for the employees are

Wednesdays serving due Seniors schedule separate meals

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
 Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — Senior citizens in Hagerman remain divided over recent board action, with some seniors planning to leave the senior center to have their own meals at another location.

The first of these meals will be at noon on Wednesday at the Hagerman American Legion Hall. It will be cooked and served by Wanda Duncombe and members of the legion auxiliary. Duncombe was recently fired as site manager of the Hagerman Valley Senior Citizens Center.

Louise Elliot, a former member of the board of directors for the senior center, said Monday that many of the seniors do not want to go to the center anymore.

They are upset, she said, because four of the seven board members held a special meeting without proper notification of other members, and voted to fire Duncombe. A petition with 158 signatures, calling for the board members to resign, was ignored, Elliot said.

"The seniors felt they didn't have any say in what went on at the seniors' center," said Elliot.

Board member Elmer Beutler, who says he was excluded from the special meeting, says the petition now has 178 signatures from the 300 center members. A large percentage of those who signed the petition will have their Wednesday noon meal at the Legion Hall instead of at the senior center, he predicted.

Board Chairman Don Rathbun says notice of the special meeting earlier this month at which Duncombe's performance was discussed was handled properly and that attempts were made to contact all board members. He and other members declined to resign after the petition was presented Thursday.

At another special meeting held Friday, Mildred Clements was elected as an alternate board member in a divided vote. Board Chairman Don Rathbun last week asked her to fill the position vacated by Paul Kilas last spring, Clements said.

Monday, Clements said it is "real tragic" that seniors are leaving the center. Personality clashes and petty differences should not stop members from seeing the total picture and the common cause of the center, she said.

"It breaks my heart to see the center torn apart like this," said Clements. "My desire is to get unity in this community again."

The board members who fired Duncombe did nothing secret or underhanded," Clements said, adding, "I don't doubt their word."

Board member Faye Tupper, Duncombe's sister, said the seniors are "taking things into their own hands" because they were unable to recall their board of directors. The seniors' bylaws do not have a provision for recalling board members.

"They just, in effect, were told the board business was none of their business," Tupper said. "The whole thing is just a bad taste in everyone's mouth."

At the Thursday meeting, Dick Boyd, who coordinates services for seniors at the Area Agency on Aging, said mistakes may have been made but that seniors should "put these petty things aside."

County grand jury ready to start work

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — A grand jury of 16 persons was selected in Twin Falls Monday to hear testimony and evidence concerning drug cases in Twin Falls County.

Twin Falls Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter said Monday afternoon the 16 jurors were chosen from a 24-member panel. She indicated there was no problem in seating the necessary 16 unbiased individuals.

Baxter said she could not say when the grand jury would begin hearing testimony and evidence in the cases since grand jury activities are secret under state law until the investigative hearings are completed.

The jury was called after 5th District Judge Daniel Meehl signed an order last month for the jury investigation of drug-related cases in Twin Falls County. The first grand jury ever assembled at the county level handed down 21 indictments in June. However, all of the indictments were dismissed after the county public defender and other defense attorneys challenged them on grounds of improper jury selection.

The dismissal of the charges against those initially indicted resulted in a revamping of all jury selections in the county.

Under the grand jury system, jurors hear evidence and testimony on a number of cases during a single session and any indictments handed down result in immediately sending the cases into district court for trial.

Baxter and her deputy prosecutor, Joel Horton, originally adopted the system as a time and money saving means of handling a large number of similar cases without having to hold separate lengthy preliminary hearings.

Rupert sets $1,000 reward for bomber

The Times-News

RUPERT — The Rupert City Council set up a $1,000 reward fund Monday for the arrest and conviction of the person who used explosives to blow off the bottom portion of one leg of the city's water tower Saturday morning.

Mayor Bill Whitton said he wanted to set up the reward "so we can amoke out the individuals responsible for this." The council unanimously approved the reward at the beginning of its meeting Monday.

"As serious as it was to the health and well-being of the community, it is important we find them, not only so they can pay society but so they can pay for the damages," Whitton said.

The blast, apparently planned to topple the water tower, left the structure standing on three legs. It shattered windows in nearby buildings and drove shrapnel through the walls of a city building. Whitton said Monday a 10½ pound piece of metal was found a half mile from the explosion in downtown Rupert.

Officers in Rupert are continuing to probe the explosion. Police Chief Paul Fries said the investigation is moving slowly until tests are completed that may tell what type of explosives were used. He said there have been no arrests and no suspects are known in the case, but police are following up on some anonymous telephone calls.

"If we could come up with a motive for the blast, it would make our work easier, but right now we have no idea what the motive may have been," Fries said Monday.

He said it is also not yet known if the explosive was a plastic material or dynamite but this one through the tests being made at the Alcohol, Tobacco and Fire Arms Laboratory at Treasure Island, Calif., should determine.

Fries said there have been no further bombings or evidence of further damage discovered.

"We are trying to keep a constant patrol around town as much as we can in case there are other plans for explosions," the police chief said.

"If we can establish a motive, this would help in preventing further incidents," Fries said.

The blast occurred just before 2 a.m. Saturday when some type of explosive tore out a two-to-three-foot section of one of the steel supports of the tower, forcing city officials to drain the 42,000-gallon water storage tank to prevent collapse.

Fluoride study starts

The Associated Press

KETCHUM — The State Water Quality Bureau is conducting a study of high fluoride levels in geothermal water in the Ketchum area which have the potential of causing dental or health problems.

The normal fluoride level in the Warm Springs Creek aquifer is about 0.2 milligrams per liter. But fluoride levels measured in several public water systems and private wells at Warm Springs have exceeded the state's maximum contaminant level of 2.4 mg/l and some have levels greater than 5 mg/l.

While some fluoride in water is beneficial, drinking water with fluoride levels greater than 2 mg/l for extended periods of time can produce dental fluorosis in children, a brown staining of permanent teeth. Ex-posure to drinking water above 4 mg/l for many years can result in a serious bone disorder called "cripping skeletal fluorosis."

The fluoride is believed to come from geothermal springs coursing through alluvial sands and gravel. Fluoride concentration in water from Geyer Hot Springs has been measured at about 18 mg/l. The hot water has been used for decades for swimming pools and to heat nearby homes.

Through the Bureau's study, groundwater maps are being prepared to assess flow patterns around Geyer Hot Springs and Warm Springs Creek. The fluoride may also have an effect on fish egg development.

Results from the study will help local residents and developers cope with the fluoride situation.

Smaller gate cuts '88 rodeo dates

By PAT MARCANTONIO
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Instead of four days of rodeo, there will be only three at the 1988 Twin Falls County Fair because of poor attendance at some of the performances this year.

The Twin Falls County Fair Board voted unanimously on Monday to reduce the rodeo from four to three days. The meeting was held to organize the 1987 fair, held Sept. 8-12.

On Saturday the grandstands were almost filled to capacity, with more than 5,000 people in attendance in reserve all general admission seating, board member Don Kramer said. But the earlier part of the week was "downhill."

Preliminary figures showed that more than 3,200 people purchased reserved tickets for the Saturday night performance of the rodeo, compared with about 450 on Wednesday.

Rodeo attendance on Wednesday "looked good" only because children were allowed in year, which is comparable to last year, Fair Manager Dan Peters said.

The board had budgeted $50,681 for fair attendance, but Peters said the budget was inflated.

Eliminating the Wednesday night performance had been discussed previously by the board, but no action was ever taken. For the past two years, the board has been attempting to boost rodeo admission at the Wednesday and Thursday performances, traditionally the most difficult times to fill the grandstands.

The board had attempted to rope them into the event by changing rodeo producers and other promotions.

After the vote, Board Chairman Stan Snow requested a letter be sent to Rosser of Marysville, Calif., and the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association, informing them of the board decision. The PRCA sanctions the rodeo.

Council

Lewis said he needed the refrigeration unit to hold goods from trucks that had been wrecked. He didn't know what to do about the runoff and wanted to be given the opportunity to expand, he added.

Kevin Skinner, a nearby resident, urged the council to retain the three restrictions.

Council members said Lewis was automatically restricted from further expansion without a review by the zoning commission. They said also that when Lewis applies for a building permit, he will have to submit a plan to deal with storm drainage.

And in more council business, a new city motto was approved and will soon be showing up on city vehicles.

"People Serving People" was recommended by the City Employees Committee. It was selected by employees from more than 60 suggestions, said committee chairman Mick Turner.

Bob Maxwell, who works in the recreation department, received the thanks of the council and $100. The motto will be constant reminder of "what the employees feel about the community," Courtney said.

Man treated for wounds

TWIN FALLS — One man was treated for minor gunshot wounds and another was arrested for aggravated battery late Monday after an apartment house shooting in the south part of Twin Falls.

Twin Falls Public Safety Director Tim Qualls said his department was notified at 6:31 p.m. by Magic Valley Regional Medical Center that a gunshot patient was being treated there.

Qualls said Jose J. Arrajo, 24, who resides in Apartment 18 at 406 Gardener St., suffered gunshot wounds in the face during a shooting in his apartment. Arrajo was treated and released.

The man arrested in connection with the injury was identified as Erique Alves, 43, who resides in Apartment No. 8 of the same building. Qualls said no other individuals were involved in what prompted the disagreement had not been determined Monday night.

Along with the motto, the council adopted a statement of values prepared by the committee. The statement will be used as a policy for the city, he said.

Vollmer said, "We're proud of you and pleased you did this."

At the work session prior to the meeting, State Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls, reported that the skateboard ramp was ready for use at Frontier Field.

The total project cost $2,240, which was raised mostly through donations. There was a deficit because one donation had still not arrived.

The ramp, which was built by the skateboarders and adults, will be turned officially over to the city Oct. 3, Black said. There is also a meet scheduled on that same day.

Black reported the wooden ramp was already used extensively.

Council members congratulated Black and his committee on a "great job."

The committee to construct a ramp was appointed by the council after they banned skateboarding downtown.

In other business, the council members accepted a lone bid of $19,687 from Jac-Lyn Construction of Jerome for roofing the Harrison Street supply building. The estimated cost of the project had been $29,900.

CSI separated, Meyerhoffer said. CSI filed nearly as well before the state board as North Idaho College, the other state-supported junior college. The state board recommended a 16 percent increase in NIC's budget.

The total increase recommended for the two state junior colleges is $1 million. The spending plan wouldn't take effect until next July. The state pays about 40 percent of CSI's $2.8 million academic budget.

The breakdown of additional money recommended for CSI went this way:

- $42,000 more for the library;
- $90,000 for maintenance needs around campus, including leveling sidewalks and replacing bleachers in Expo Center.
- $111,500 to bring salaries in line with other junior colleges in the mountain states.
- $110,000 for University of Idaho courses aimed at keeping CSI faculty current. One of the courses is "The Psychology of the Adult Learner."

Meyerhoffer reviewed suggestions of marketing consultant Dennis Johnson.

Last year's CSI graduates who now attend the University of Idaho have an average grade point average of 2.9 out of 4.0, according to CSI. The same CSI class attending Idaho State University earned an average GPA of 3.1.

Reversal requires investors

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's bid for economic resurgence is being undercut by a lack of investors willing to take a chance on businessmen with innovative, home-grown ideas, but business leaders hope to turn that around later this week.

"It would surprise you how many firms in Idaho have good ideas but lack the financial means to put them in place," Idaho First National Bank Vice President Jerry Wray said.

"The problem in the past has been the entrepreneur has not known where to go," Wray said.

On Thursday, however, venture capitalist experts from around the country will converge at Boise State University for a two-day forum intended to open the world of venture capital to Idaho businessmen looking to expand their operations or launch new enterprises.

"One of the major ingredients in the recipe for economic success is venture capital," Commerce Director James Hawkins said Monday as he, Wray and BSU Business Dean Tom Stitzel outlined the importance of the venture capital issue.

"One of our responsibilities is to just tell the story," Hawkins said. "When you leave the state and look back there are people who just aren't aware of what we have in Idaho."

Meanwhile, Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus was in southeastern Idaho Monday for the groundbreaking ceremonies of the Idaho State University Business Incubator Center, where businessmen can tap professionals skilled in fostering growth.

"Economic development is not optional; it is essential," said Les Purce, director of the school's Research Park and Economic Development. "The goal will be to assist new business through the early years and then move them into their community to continue growth and provide jobs."

"We have needs for that money today," he said. "It's another important part of the recipe."

Valley life

Tanning tale turns out only half-baked

DEAR ABBY: I just received a letter from my daughter, Kathy, who is attending school in Provo, Utah. She related the following story that I found so horrifying, I want to share it with you so that you can warn others:

"A 17-year-old girl won a trip to Hawaii. She wanted a really nice tan for the trip, so last week she went to a tanning parlor. She'd never been to one before, so she asked how long was the maximum time she could stay in, and they said half an hour. Well, she wanted a really dark tan, fast, so she went to seven places and spent a half-hour in each - three and a half hours total!

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

"Well, this poor girl is now in Utah Valley Regional Medical Center. They estimate that she has about 26 days to live. She's totally blind, and they say it's as if she had 'microwaved' herself - it's basically the same principle. Anyhow, she just cooked herself from the inside out. And the worst part is, there's not a thing they can do for her. Not a thing! It's just tragic. Her poor family!"

Of course, the girl was foolish. But most of us do things that are foolish sometime in our lives, but we live to laugh about them. This girl will not. Please warn your readers, Abby.

You may want to verify these facts in Provo.

- ANITA HALDOCK, SPRINGFIELD, ORE.

DEAR ANITA: Thanks for writing. I wondered how they could estimate the number of days "this poor girl" had to live, so I called the Utah Valley Regional Medical Center in Provo and its spokesperson, Mr. Clark Cares, stated that there was no such patient in the facility, but that story had been circulating at the Brigham Young University. Joann, secretary to the medical director, said that she had just returned from Pocatello, Idaho, where she had heard the same story. In checking with The Provo Daily Herald, Rene Nelson told my staff that they had also heard that rumor, but were unable to confirm it.

Well, friends, so much for the "tanning" story.

DEAR ABBY: I am flabbergasted at your answer to "The Boxer Rebellion"! I can't believe you'd approve a 14-year-old girl wearing men's underwear as an outer garment. Have you ever looked at a man's boxer shorts? I have dozens of them, by different manufacturers, and every one of them has an opening in the front big enough to stuff a grapefruit through!

I sincerely believe that's half the trouble with our younger generation these days - parents not instilling in them a lot of the "old values," corny as that may sound. I'm with the parents on this one and believe the child will ultimately benefit from being taught to be feminine.

Boxer shorts as an outer garment on a 14-year-old girl? Gross, in my book!

And in the same column you suggest not turning on a washer-dryer until one knows where the cat is. Takes me four or five hours to find my cat sometimes. Why not just carefully check the machine to make sure nothing is in it that doesn't belong there? Might save a dog, or a parakeet, or whatever.

- WILLIAM W. GRIFFITH, SEVERNA PARK, MD.

Chevy sprints to top rating in EPA fuel mileage testing

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — For the third year in a row, the three-cylinder Chevrolet Sprint has captured the top rating in the annual gasoline mileage tests of the Environmental Protection Agency.

There was no change in the second spot, either, held by a Honda Civic.

The 1,875-pound Sprint Metro model was rated at 64 miles per gallon in city driving and 58 mpg on the highway, the same figures recorded for the Sprint ER last year. The Honda Civic CRX HF tested out at 50 mpg city, 56 mpg highway.

The Lamborghini Countach, a piston-hot sports car from Italy appearing on EPA's list for the first time, was rated at 6 mpg in the city, the lowest figure EPA has ever recorded, and 10 on the highway.

"Last year's biggest guzzlers, several Rolls-Royce models, appeared on the list again just ahead of the Lamborghini at 8 mpg city, 10 mpg highway.

There is no list of top domestic cars this year. EPA said it stopped producing one because of the increasing confusion over what a domestic car is.

Japanese carmakers Toyota, Nissan, Honda and Mazda now produce cars in the United States; sometimes in joint ventures with U.S. companies. Typically they ship major components such as engine and transmission from Japan.

These components are so costly that usually the value of domestic content, including labor, in the cars is a little over 50 percent. EPA requires a model to have at least 75 percent domestic content to be counted as a domestic car.

The same models are sometimes marketed by the foreign manufacturer and the public perceives those models as imports. Therefore, EPA finds it no longer beneficial to list strictly domestic models," the agency said in a statement.

In some years, the list of the best mileage ratings has been an all-Japanese affair, but not this year.

Ford's Festiva, made in Korea by Ford's 10 percent-owned affiliate, Kia Motors Co., was ranked fifth at 39 mpg city, 43 mpg highway. The car weighs less than 1,800 pounds and has the second-smallest engine, an 81-cubic inch four. The Sprint's 61 cubic inches is the smallest.

Counting series models sold as the Pontiac Firefly and the Suzuki Forsa, the Sprint captured seven of the top 12 positions.

EPA produces the mileage list as a byproduct of its testing of cars for exhaust pollution. Calculation of mileage is relatively simple once the exhaust gases have been analyzed, which EPA must do anyway.

At the bottom of the list, buyers of six of the thirteenth cars will have to pay the variable "gas-guzzler" tax imposed in the mid-1970s, when Congress required all cars to meet certain mileage standards. The Rolls and the Bentley escape the tax, however, because of a quirk in the law — it applies only to cars weighing less than 6,000 pounds, and they weigh more.

The Lamborghini bears the most tax, $3,860.

In the past, most of the cars taxed as gas-guzzlers have been very expensive luxury cars or high-performance sports cars. But this year's gas-guzzlers include models from Volvo, the Swedish manufacturer that has advertised its cars as safe and durable.

The Volvo 780, introduced during the 1987 model year, and the redesigned 740 and 760 models, are rated at 17 mpg in the city, 20 on the highway. That makes them subject to a $650 tax, said Fred Hammond, spokesman at Volvo's U.S. headquarters in Rockleigh, N.J.

"I don't think we're too happy about it," he said.

The cars are powered by 174-cubic inch, six-cylinder engines designed more for power (148-horsepower covered with 125-horsepower from a 173-cubic inch six in General Motors Corp. cars) and smoothness than for economy, Hammond said.

Here are the best, worst among 1988 models

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are the cars showing the best and worst gasoline mileage among 1988 models tested by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The first column, headed "Ur," shows the mileage in urban driving. The second column, "H," gives mileage in highway driving. The third column, "D," is engine displacement in cubic inches. The fourth column, "Cy," is the number of cylinders. The fifth column, "Tr," is the transmission type, manual or automatic, and number of gears. The last column is EPA's size classification of the car based on interior volume. Two-seater, Minicompact, Subcompact, Compact, Midsize or Large.

EPA warns that mileage can vary greatly according to driving habits and condition and the numbers should be used for comparison, not an indication of what a driver can expect in actual use.

All the cars in the worst group, except the Bentley and Rolls models, pay the gas-guzzler tax, a special excise levy on low-mileage cars. The Bentley and Rolls models escape the tax because of a quirk in the law — it applies only to cars weighing less than 6,000 pounds, and the Bentley and Rolls cars weigh more.

Incomes, spending both up in August

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Consumer spending, bolstered by brisk auto sales, jumped 1.5 percent in August, the biggest increase in six months, the government said Monday.

The Commerce Department said that Americans' incomes were also up in August but by a much smaller 0.5 percent, matching the moderate gain posted in July.

With the growth of spending far outpacing the growth in incomes, Americans dipped deeper into savings to make up the difference. Personal savings, the ratio of savings to after-tax incomes, fell to 1.8 percent in August, down from 2.9 percent in July and the lowest it has been since a 1.4 percent low in April.

Even with the low savings rate, the report showed the economy gaining momentum in the current July-September quarter because of the fast pace of consumer spending, which accounts for two-thirds of all economic activity.

The 1.5 percent jump in spending in August was more than double a revised 0.7 percent July gain and was the strongest surge in spending since a 2.3 percent increase last February.

Much of that strength came from higher auto sales, which were spurred by new incentive programs offered by dealers in an effort to whittle down a huge backlog of unsold cars.

The purchase of durable goods, including cars, climbed at an annual rate of $29.8 billion in August compared to a $2.1 billion rise in July. Purchases of non-durable goods rose $3.6 billion, little changed from a $3.3 billion July gain. Purchases of services, including housing, food and entertainment, were up $10.9 billion, compared to an increase of $16.6 billion in July.

The 0.5 percent rise in personal incomes matched the July increase and the April increase and continued the string of modest gains in incomes that have been occurring this year.

Analysts have expressed worries that the sluggish income growth coupled with higher inflation rates will force consumers to cut back on spending, but so far that has not occurred.

Wages and salaries, the key component in incomes, rose at an annual rate of $19.5 billion in August, up substantially from an $8.7 billion July increase. Much of the strength came in service industries, where the advance in payrolls at $9.3 billion was three times the July increase.

Manufacturing payrolls increased $3.7 billion in August, substantially improved from a small $300 million advance in July. The August increase in manufacturing was attributed mainly to higher hourly earnings with motor vehicles, primary metals and non-electric machinery leading the way.

Farm income fell by $6.7 billion in August cause in part by a $3.7 billion drop in government subsidy payments in August.

Disposable, or after-tax income, edged up 0.3 percent in August following a 0.4 percent July increase.

The various changes left left personal income at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $3.75 trillion while personal consumption spending, which includes virtually everything except interest payments on debt, climbed to an annual rate of $3.03 trillion.

Selling wave sweeps Dow below 2,500

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A late wave of selling swept stock prices lower Monday, carrying the Dow Jones Industrial average below 2,500 after an early rally failed to stand up.

Dow Jones' average of 30 blue chips, which lost 84.10 points last week, fell another 31.82 to 2,492.82, its lowest close since it stood at 2,485.33 on July 24.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 170.07 million shares, against 188.07 million in the previous session.

The session began amid widespread talk that the market was ready for a rally after a pullback of some 7 percent in the Dow Jones industrials since the average reached a record closing high of 2,722.42 on Aug. 25.

The Dow did, in fact, rise more than 20 points at the outset. But the bond market, strong in early trading, gave up its gains and headed lower as the session passed, and enthusiasm for stocks gave way to selling once the advance in bond prices faded.

"After the failure of the bond market and then the stock market to get a sustained rally under way, a lot of demoralization set in," said Hugh Johnson, an analyst at First Albany Corp.

"Though worries about inflation, Federal Reserve policy and other economic matters persist, Johnson said, "stock prices themselves have taken over as the focus of concern."

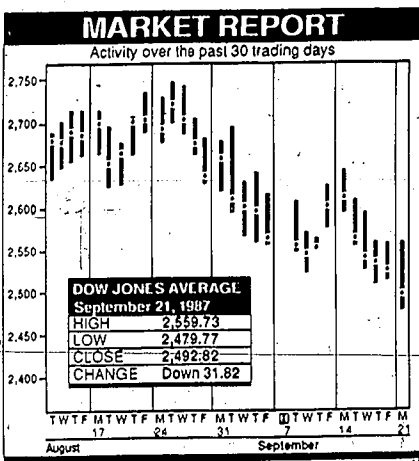

Analysts also noted that some popular individual stocks have lately taken a drubbing.

A case in point Monday was the Gap Inc., which tumbled 10 1/2 to 37 and led the active list on turnover of more than 3.6 million shares. Over the weekend the company said it expected to report lower earnings for the quarter that ends Oct. 31.

Also prominent among international Shares of The Limited Inc. another specialty apparel retailer, lost 1 1/4 to 34 3/4.

the tone for the market as a whole. IBM fell 4 1/2 to 150 1/2, down from a recent high of 175 1/2.

Newmont Mining dropped 7 1/2 to 94. Directors urged the company's shareholders to reject a $105-a-share offer by Ivanhoe partners, and declared a special cash dividend of $33 a share payable to holders of record at the close Oct. 1.

Pharmaceutical issues were broadly lower. Lilly fell 4 1/2 to 95; Merck 3 1/2 to 198 1/2; Marion Laboratories 3 1/2 to 30 1/2; and Abbott Laboratories 2 to 57 1/2.

On the plus side, North American Phillips gained 1 1/2 to 55 1/2. N.V. Phillips of the Netherlands raised its offer for the North American Phillips stock it doesn't already own from a $50 a share plus warrants to $56 a share in cash.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 2 to 1 on the NYSE, with 490-up, 1,048-down and 422 unchanged. The exchange's composite index dropped 2.11 to 174.25.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 197.12 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell 5.68 to 362.36, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 4.27 to 310.54.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market slumped 4.35 to 436.01. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 349.75, down 3.31.

Mail scams prey on everyone but particularly go for elders

When 68-year-old Agnes received notification in the mail that she could be an instant cash winner in the "Social Security $100, 000 lottery," she was overjoyed.

All she had to do was send $10 to join the organization sponsoring the sweepstakes and she would receive a silver-plated Social Security card and a statement of her Social Security records as well as the opportunity to win big money.

What a scam!

Despite the official-sounding name, the lottery was not affiliated with the federal government, although Agnes did not notice the fine print in the brochure mentioning that. She mailed her $10 check to the U.S. Social Security Administration. When the Social Security officer who received her letter figured out what had happened, he contacted Agnes and refunded her money. Otherwise, she would have been among the countless numbers of older Americans defrauded every day.

Nationwide reports of deceptive mail solicitations that prey on the desperation of older Americans have been overwhelming.

Sylvia Porter

Groups with impressive names are conniving people into sending money to aid in their fictitious fights against nonexistent efforts to disband programs such as Medicare and Social Security or participating in phony drawings and sweepstakes.

Shocker: The activities of many of these organizations are not criminal. Due to legal loopholes and the way many of these advertisements are worded, the solicitations are not considered technically fraudulent.

"All kinds of trash is being generated to mislead and confuse the public," John Trollinger, spokesperson for the Social Security Administration, explained.

"We are deeply concerned about... individuals and businesses whose solicitations and promotional practices are intolerably misleading and deceptive," Dorcas Hardy, commissioner of Social Security, said in a statement before the Select Committee on Aging of the U.S. House of Representatives in February 1987.

"These solicitations feed on the vulnerability of the nation's elderly and disabled and damage confidence in our Social Security system."

The level of sophistication of the schemes varies. For example, one phony mailing advertised an official-sounding "organization" giving away cash prizes. Individuals who sent in membership fees received a check for 8 cents. "Often it's not a legal wrongdoing. Ethically, it's another matter," Trollinger stressed.

Several members of Congress have begun to dig into the problem. Rep. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, introduced a bill in the House which would require all mailings that imply government affiliation to state clearly that the advertisement is not a government document or that the product is not endorsed by the government.

In the meantime, since you are not protected by the law, you must guard against these rip-offs.

If you receive any questionable literature and want to find out more, contact your local Social Security office and ask. Legitimate guides to Social Security or Medicare are often advertised.

Don't allow scare tactics to persuade you. Particularly common — and deceptive — are ads stating that your Social Security and Medicare benefits are about to run out and that you must act now to fight in the late '70s-early '80s, the financial status of Social Security was called into question, but an alert group of us fought and won that battle. The near future is secure.

The far future can and should be questioned. We must be willing to pay the taxes to support Social Security and Medicare. We must carry the burden of these benefits. If we agree to support the benefits, it will be a profound decision on our part. In the meantime, don't be fooled by fear campaigns.

Many of these swindlers are shrewd, of ten smart enough to stay just within the boundary line, so they can't be legally prosecuted. Be wary of brown envelopes that are marked "urgent" or "important" (federal information) or that refer to Social Security or Medicare. Some even have logos resembling government seals or slogans such as "Buy and hold U.S. Savings Bonds" on the envelopes.

Avoid phony companies that call themselves "document service agencies" and that promise to help you get official records or update your records (you can do that yourself). Typically, these intermediaries merely forward the paperwork you fill out to the Social Security Administration and you are left to deal with the problem on your own.

You can, for free, obtain a Social Security card, replace a lost card, check records, receive an estimate of your benefits, update documents and the like. Free brochures are also available at your local Social Security office.

ZCMI store is planned

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - The Foothill Village shopping mall will be the site of a new 25,000-square-foot ZCMI department store, company officials say.

The new store will become the mall's anchor tenant following the bankruptcy and closure Sept. 1 of Castleton's, Foothill's long-time primary business, said Keith Saunders, executive vice president and chief financial officer of ZCMI.

He said Friday that the ZCMI store will be part of a planned major expansion of the shopping center that will provide a total of 150,000 square feet of additional retail space.

The new store will be the 12th ZCMI store in the cooperative and the fifth located in Salt Lake County.

"The new ZCMI anchor will be a unique addition to both Foothill Village and the ZCMI chain," Saunders said.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"I have never found, in a long experience of politics, that criticism is ever inhibited by ignorance."
— Harold Macmillan.

South made an error in his play of today's no-trump game and North was ready with his criticism. Review the play and North's comments to see if you can spot where South went wrong.

East's heart queen went to South's ace and South tried a diamond finesse, losing to East's king. East reasoned that he couldn't beat the game by returning a heart, so he switched accurately to the queen of spades. South ducked and East continued with the jack of spades. South knew that East was capable of playing spades in this manner while holding the ace, so South covered the jack. West pounced with his ace and returned the suit, and the defenders chalked up a quick two down.

"You should have gone up with my diamond ace and finessed in clubs," criticized North. "When the club finessing wins, you can then give up a diamond."

"How does that double-dummy 'solution' solve my problem in spades, or for that matter, anywhere else?" retorted South.

And that was the crux of the problem. Why should South have reasoned that West had the ace of spades?

At trick one, East shows the queen of hearts. Next, he wins the king of diamonds and leads the queen of clubs (implying the jack), accounting for eight HCP. To make the game, South must assume that the club finessing will win. Ergo, if East has the club king, his pass precludes the spade ace. South therefore ducks twice in spades and the defenders get only three spades and one diamond.

NFL's players walk out over free agency

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — NFL players called their second strike in six years Monday night, putting their six-figure salaries on a line for the freedom to choose where they work.

"As of midnight tonight (Monday) the players of the National Football League will be on strike again, and that's really, really sad," Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, said in announcing the strike during halftime of the New England Patriots-New York Jets game.

"There's no way it can be averted. We've been forced into an action that's bad for the players, the fans and the owners."

The owners vowed to continue the season Oct. 4-5, after a one-week delay, with non-striking regulars and free agents who were told to report Wednesday, the same day the union planned to start picketing. The owners said they would honor requests for ticket refunds.

The issue was free agency. The union demanded that any player with more than four years' experience be free to choose his team; the owners insisted on some compensation for teams losing free agents, a system that has seen only one player change teams in a decade.

That was much different from the 1982 strike, which lasted 67 days and cost seven games of the 16-game schedule. That workout was over money, but since then the average player salary has risen from $90,000 to $230,000 a year.

"Free agency cannot be summed up in terms of dollars. It's not about money, it's about dignity and freedom," Upshaw said. "It's about who you work for."

There had been no talks since a meeting Friday between Upshaw and Management Council negotiator Jack Donlan, and no further negotiations were scheduled. The ball is in Gene's court," said Jim Conway, assistant executive director of the Management Council.

The two sides have met 19 times since first exchanging proposals April 20, and each has made just one counterproposal, both within the last two weeks.

Donlan said he offered concessions Friday on several issues, including pension and roster size, if Upshaw would delay the strike 30 days. But Upshaw said the only specific proposal was to increase rosters from 45 players to 49.

"For two weeks they refused to meet, they were too busy," Donlan said. "With seven days left they made their first economic proposal. It would cost $200 million and throw out the system that is working. We have a good system it's taken the players up to $300,000 a

LANCE SELLERS Bound for Cincinnati

Sellers gets a second chance with NFL Bengals

By STEVE ORUMP
Times-News sports editor

BOISE — Former Twin Falls High School football player Lance Sellers will leave this afternoon for Cincinnati where he will sign a free agent contract with the NFL Bengals within the next day or two.

Sellers, a linebacker, said Monday he signed a $1,000 agreement over the weekend with the Bengals, choosing the Cincinnati club over three other teams that had contacted him about playing for year. We don't want to throw that out."

A Management Council statement Monday said free agency was the only issue that could not be settled.

Although Upshaw told the players to expect a long strike, he said it should not take that long to settle the differences.

"I think you could hammer out a deal in a matter of a day, but it will take two or three days to do the language," Upshaw said. "If we started today, there would be no reason there couldn't be games Sunday. Even if we talked tomorrow."

Arbitrator rules owners conspired against players

By BEN WALKER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Baseball owners conspired to "destroy" free agency after the 1986 season, an arbitrator said Monday in a ruling which could force open the market for stars like Jack Clark, Dale Murphy and Cal Ripken Jr.

In his 16-page decision, arbitrator Tom Roberts wrote that the clubs' approach to free agency in 1985 was "not consistent with the existence of a free market" and that it violated the collective bargaining agreement between players and owners.

Roberts wrote that free agents "surely had a value at some price and yet no offers were advanced." He underlined "no" in his ruling.

Roberts also now will preside at hearings to find remedies to the situation, and the owners' chief negotiator, Barry Rona, said: "We want to comply and we will comply. But I can't tell a club to engage in free agency or not."

The decision affects Kirk Gibson, Donnie Moore and 60 other 1986 free agents, but it offered no remedies. Hearings on those remedies will begin this week.

"The arbitrator found that the clubs entered into a common scheme, the effect of which was to destroy free agency," said players' union head Don Fehr. "In other words, they coked the market. We will ask the arbitrator ... (to) make sure that it will never happen again."

Asked if he was surprised by the ruling, the union's associate general counsel, Gene Orza, said: "Not really. I think if 95 percent of the baseball fans understood what was going on, one arbitrator could figure it out."

Fehr said he expected to talk with Rona first, then meet with Roberts to begin the hearings. Fehr said he will seek remedies through money or new free agency opportunities for players already affected, along with punitive damages from the owners. Fehr would not say how much money the union would seek.

"One of the great difficulties I have with the decision is trying to figure out what it is we have to do different to be in compliance with the collective bargaining agreement," Rona said.

Rona said he held a conference call with all 28 major league owners Monday afternoon to inform them of the decision. "The response of the owners was to ask a few questions about what it means, what I thought the remedy stage would be and the impact on future cases," Rona said.

There was no immediate comment from Commissioner Peter Ueberroth.

While most team officials declined comment, Pittsburgh owner Malcolm Prince, who bought the P.

AL: Bell's RBI single lifts Jays into first place

BALTIMORE (AP) — George Bell finally solved "the only pitcher who gives me trouble," and lifted Toronto into first place.

Bell, who entered the game with a 2-for-35 lifetime mark off Mike Boddicker, singled for his third hit with one out in the ninth inning, giving the Blue Jays a 2-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Monday night.

The triumph, coupled with Detroit's 9-4 loss to Boston, enabled the Blue Jays to take a half-game lead over the Tigers in the American League East.

"I've got to give Boddicker credit," Bell said in a 30-second interview. "He's a great pitcher. I was a little lucky tonight."

"I gave him (Boddicker) the option of pitching to Bell, or walking him and facing (Ernie) Whitt," said Baltimore Manager Cal Ripken Sr.

"He decided he wanted to pitch to him, and if he walked him it was all right," Ripken said. "He's had great success pitching to Bell, except for tonight."

Boddicker took the loss philosophically.

"Sure he got three hits and the game-winner," Boddicker said. "But a 2-1 ballgame, I'll take that. I thought I pitched well."

Lloyd Moseby led off with a bloop double to left field on which Larry Sheets failed to make a diving catch and moved to throw on a sacrifice bunt by Tony Fernandez.

It was the third hit of the game for Bell, who started with a 2-for-35 lifetime record versus starter Mike Boddicker, 10-10, and increased his American League leading RBI total to 129.

Boddicker, bothered by muscle spasms in his back throughout the game, was replaced after Bell delivered and dealt the Orioles their 18th loss in 21 games.

The winner was John Cerutti, 11-4, the fourth Blue Jay pitcher who retired. Fred Lynn with the bases loaded in the eighth inning. Tom Henke finished up for his American League-leading 33rd save as five Toronto pitchers combined on a three-hitter.

The Blue Jays forged a 1-1 tie in the fifth, the run scoring as the Orioles turned an unusual double play.

Jesse Barfield opened the inning by beating out an infield chopper to third baseman Ray Knight, and raced to third on a double by Rance Mulliniks.

Rick Leach then hit a looping grounder over the bag at second, where shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. fielded the ball, tagged the retreating Mulliniks and then threw out Leach as Barfield scored.

Center fielder Mike Hart robbed the Blue Jays of a run in the third when he made a shoestring catch of Nelson Lirio's liner following a two-out double by Willie Upshaw.

George Bell had two of the hits off Boddicker. He was erased in a double play after singling in the second, and was stranded following a two-out double in the fourth.

The Orioles took a 1-0 lead in the fourth as Jim Dwyer extended his seven-inning run total with his 15th of the season.

The homer was the 200th for the Orioles, making them the first club to both hit and yield 200 homers in one season. Baltimore has given up 211, second only to Kansas City's record 220 in 1984.

Toronto starter Dave Stieb, making his first start since September 8, allowed only one other hit through the first seven innings — a single by Eddie Murray which extended his hitting streak to 14 games.

Jeff Musselman yielded the final Orioles hit in the eighth.

Boston 9 Detroit 4

BOSTON (AP) — Mike Greenwell triggered a four-run second inning with a leadoff homer and hit a sacrifice fly in a two-run fourth, leading the Boston Red Sox to a 9-4 victory over Detroit Monday night and knocking the Tigers out of first place in the American League East.

With the loss, the Tigers dropped a half-game behind Toronto, a 2-1 winner at Baltimore.

Boston's Al Nipper, 10-11, who was knocked out in the third inning after being staked to a 5-0 lead in the first in Detroit last Tuesday, got the starting nod when Jeff Sellers reported with a virus.

He responded with a strong effort, allowing eight hits over 7 1/2 innings. He was tagged by Alan Trammell's solo homer in the fourth and a solo shot by Tom Brookens in the seventh before exiting during a 7 1/2-inning flurry in the eighth. Trammell's 27th homer was Detroit's 210th of the year, a club record.

Greenwell put Boston ahead of Detroit by hitting a 2-1 pitch from Detroit starter Nate Snell, 1-2, for his 18th homer.

With one out, rookie Sam Horn singled and scored on a triple by Todd Benzinger, another rookie. Spike Owen followed with an RBI double, then scored as rookie John Marzano singled and Kirk Gibson fumbled the ball for an error.

After Trammell became the first Detroit shortstop to drive in 100 runs since Billy Rogell in 1934, Boston added two unearned runs in the half of the fourth.

With "Din Poetry" pitching, Marzano singled and was safe at second as Tom Brookens fielded Ellis Burks' grounder and threw wildly trying for a force play. After Marty Barrett sacrificed, Marzano scored on a wild pitch and Burks came across on Greenwell's sacrifice fly.

Burks, another rookie, singled for his third hit to start the third against Mark Thurmond, the third Detroit pitcher. Barrett and both runners scored as Wade Boggs doubled.

Brookens hit his 13th homer with two out in the seventh, but the Red Sox matched that run-in their half on a double by Horn, a single by Benzinger and an RBI single by Owen, his third hit.

Cleveland 6 Oakland 3

CLEVELAND (AP) — Brook Jacoby snapped a tie with a leadoff homer in the seventh inning and the Cleveland Indians went on to a 6-3 victory over the Oakland Athletics Monday night and denied Dave Stewart in his third attempt to become the major leagues' first 20-game winner.

Jacoby broke a 3-3 tie when he hit his 31st home run on a 1-1 pitch from Stewart, 19-12, who has lost his last three starts. Cleveland's victory broke a four-game losing streak while Oakland, second in the American League West, had a three-game winning streak snapped and fell four games behind the idle Minnesota Twins.

Doug Jones, 5-4, gained the victory by retiring the final 10 Oakland hitters, striking out seven. He struck out six out of the last eight batters.

Despite the defeat, Stewart pitched his eighth complete game, yielding eight hits, striking out four and walking none. The right-hander hurt himself, however, by throwing two wild pitches in Cleveland's three-run fourth inning.

Oakland took a 2-0 lead in the fourth when Carney Lansford singled and came home on Dwayne Murphy's sixth home run before Cleveland went ahead 3-2 in the bottom of the inning.

Brett Butler and Tommy Finzo single to set the stage for Julio Franco's run-scoring single.

Butler hit a solo homer and another scored on an error as the Indians scored two insurance runs in the eighth.

Seattle 5 Kansas City 1

SEATTLE (AP) — Rookie Mike Campbell pitched a seven-hitter for his first major league victory and Donell Nixon homered and drove in two runs as the Seattle Mariners beat the Kansas City Royals 5-1 Monday night.

Campbell, 1-4, who failed to win in seven previous attempts, allowed the only run on a leadoff homer in the ninth by Kevin Seitzer, his 15th. The right-hander struck out three and walked one.

NL: Tudor, Cards hold Mets at arm's length

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Vince Coleman is paid by the St. Louis Cardinals to get on base and then steal more of them. He's not expected to hit home runs.

But Coleman had his role reversed Monday night as he led the Cardinals to a 3-1 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Coleman failed to steal a base — in fact he was thrown out twice — but he connected for a game-winning two-run homer in the fifth inning.

"I'm just getting lucky right now," said Coleman, who also homered in a Cardinals victory on Sunday. "The ball has been down the heart of the plate."

The victory kept the Cardinals 2 1/2 games ahead of the New York Mets and pushed them four in front of Montreal in the National League East race.

Coleman's sudden power surge amused his manager, Whitey Herzog.

"He's smokin' the ball. I'm surprised they didn't check his bat for cork," Herzog said.

John Tudor, 8-2, pitched 7 1/2 innings and had a season-high seven strikeouts, and Todd Worrell led the last five outs for his 31st save.

"I thought I had a good changeup," Tudor said. "It was the key pitch for me tonight. I also had good location on my fastball."

Tudor praised his defense, particularly two early plays by second baseman Tommy Herr and center fielder Willie McGee. Herr snagged a line drive and turned it into a double play in the first inning, and McGee threw out Von Hayes trying for a double in the third inning.

"We played so well defensively it made up for the mistakes I made early," Tudor said.

David Green also homered for the Cards, who made the most of just three hits, all of them in the fifth inning.

Green's first homer in two years, leading off the fifth inning, was the first hit off loser Don Corcoran, 11-11, and tied the game 1-1. After Jim Lindeman singled, Coleman hit a two-run homer over the left field wall.

It was the second homer in two games for Coleman, but only his third of the season and fourth of his three-year career.

Coleman had never hit a home run over the fence in his previous two major-league seasons. He had an inside-the-park homer as a rookie in 1985.

Green had not hit a home run since Aug. 17, 1986, when he was a member of the San Francisco Giants. Green missed all of 1986 because of personal problems and signed with the Cardinals' Louisville farm club earlier this season.

The Phillies reached Tudor, who allowed eight hits, for four straight singles and were aided by an error in the third inning, but they could get just one run.

With one out, Von Hayes singled, but was thrown out trying for a double by McGee. Chris James followed with a single and went to third when Green bobbled the ball in right field.

Mike Schmidt followed with an RBI single and Lance Johnson also singled before Tudor got Glenn Wilson on a groundout to end the inning.

Pittsburgh 5 Montreal 2

MONTREAL (AP) — Doug Drabek pitched a five-hitter for seven innings and Barry Bonds two hits and scored twice, leading the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 5-2 victory over the Montreal Expos Monday night.

The Pirates were for the 12th time in 16 games, including five of eight against the top contenders in the National League East.

Drabek, 9-12, struck out eight and walked one before being replaced at the beginning of the eighth by Jeff Robinson, who recorded his 12th save with two innings of hitless relief. Montreal starter Bob Sebra, 6-15, gave up nine hits and four runs in less than four innings.

New York 7 Chicago 1

CHICAGO (AP) — Howard Johnson hit a record-setting grand slam and Darryl Strawberry stole two bases to join Johnson in the exclusive 30-30 club Monday as the New York Mets beat the Chicago Cubs 7-1.

Johnson's eighth-inning homer off Cubs' reliever Ed Lynch was his 36th of the season, setting a National League record for most homers in a season by a switch-hitter. He broke the record of 36 set in 1984 by Rip Collins of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Strawberry's two steals made the Mets the first team in major-league history to have two players with at least 30 steals and 30 homers in the same season. Strawberry has 38 homers and 30 steals, while Johnson has 36 homers and 31 steals.

Dwight Gooden, 15-6, pitched his seventh complete game of the season.

Idleness doesn't harm cream of AP poll

By HERSHEL NISSENSON

College football

Oklahoma, Nebraska, Auburn and LSU — the first three idle last weekend — held onto the top four spots in the Associated Press college football poll Monday while Miami and Florida State inched ahead of Ohio State, which slipped from fifth place to seventh.

Michigan State and Pitt fell out of the Top Twenty after two-week stays while Texas A&M and Iowa moved back into the rankings for the first time since the preseason poll.

Oklahoma, which returns to action on Saturday at Tulsa, received 53 of 60 first-place votes and 1,193 of a possible 1,200 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Nebraska, which visits 12th-ranked Arizona State Saturday, received the other seven first-place votes and 1,129 points.

Auburn, with a road game against Tennessee coming up, received 1,028 points. All three teams have 2-0 records.

LSU, following a 49-16 victory over Rice, remained No. 4 with 995 points.

Miami has been idle for two weeks — the Hurricanes meet 10th-ranked Arkansas in Little Rock on Saturday — but jumped from sixth place to fifth with 888 points. Florida State, a 41-24 winner over Memphis State, climbed from seventh to sixth with 869 points.

Ohio State's shaky 24-14 triumph over Oregon cost the Buckeyes two spots in the rankings, dropping them from fifth to seventh with 867 points. Ohio State visits LSU on Saturday.

Notre Dame's impressive 31-9 rout of Michigan State lifted the Fighting Irish from ninth to eighth with 788 points, which clinched a spot in the Top Twenty and goal to nip Georgia 21-20, slipped from eighth to ninth with 777 points.

Arkansas' 30-15 victory over Tulsa boosted the Razorbacks from 12th to 10th with 643 points.

The Second Ten consists of Tennessee, Arizona State, UCLA, Michigan, Penn State, Texas A&M, Alabama, Washington, Iowa and Georgia.

Last week, it was Alabama, Arkansas, UCLA, Tennessee, Arizona State, Pitt, Michigan State, Georgia, Michigan and Penn State.

Texas A&M returned to the rankings by defeating Washington 29-12 and Iowa made it back by crushing Iowa State 48-9 for its second straight victory after an opening-game loss to Tennessee in the Kick-off Classic.

Meanwhile, Michigan State's loss to Notre Dame cost the Spartans their place in the Top Twenty and Pitt fell out after a 24-21 upset at the hands of Temple.

Hallberg wins rain-delayed GMO

FRANKLIN, Wis. (AP) — Gary Hallberg says everything was right for him Monday to win the rain-delayed $600,000 Greater Milwaukee Open.

His good friend Robert Wrenn in his threesome and sister Debbie as his caddy.

And when she tapped him in the head with his 5-iron just before a key chip shot on No. 17, it woke him up.

"I couldn't believe it," Hallberg said. "I said Debbie, here I am, biggest hole of my life, biggest day of my life going, and you hit me in the head."

"And then I started thinking, it's a good thing she hit me in the head. It woke me up. It got me back into the game," he said. "I had some food on No. 15 before I bogeyed that hole and I think it slowed me down a little. Hitting me in the head was a key there, I think."

Hallberg dropped the chip shot, which he estimated at 105 feet, for a birdie on his way to a 6-under-par 66 and the $108,000 first prize in the tournament at the Tuckaway Country Club.

Hallberg, winning only his second enough today," he said.

Hallberg said playing with Wrenn, a former college teammate at Wake Forest, was a big help.

"It was a really positive round, playing with Robert," he said. "We went to college together and we've played a lot of golf together. Being paired with him this week was one of the reasons we played so well."

For example, he said Wrenn gave him encouragement on the key shot on No. 17.

"He told me, 'Chip it in,'" Hallberg said. "After I did, he looked at me and laughed and made some funny noises."

Hallberg — said — his — parents watched the final round, and that also helped him.

His sister, meanwhile, said that accepting an offer to work as a caddy this season has brought the two closer together.

"Basically, I'm just really happy for him," Debbie, 26, a 1983 graduate of Northern Illinois University, said of the victory.

The players' union filed the grievance on Feb. 2, 1986, and charged collusion. Others available after the '85 season included Don Sutton, Carlton Fisk, Danny Darwin, Phil Niekro and Tommy John.

At the time, Rona said, "There is no rule in baseball that requires a club to make an offer to a player."

Roberts began hearing the case last summer, but was fired by the owners Aug. 5, 1986.

Revitalized BSU offense near the top

BOISE (AP) — Boise State University advanced from 17th to 9th in the latest NCAA Division I-AA football rankings, even though the Broncos had the week off.

But it was the University of Nevada-Reno that once again was No. 1 in the I-AA rankings. This time the undefeated Wolf Pack led three Big Sky Conference teams in the top 20, with 2-0 Northern Arizona creaking the list at 14th after a 24-17 league victory over Montana last weekend.

Nevada-Reno thumped Cal-Davis 34-17 on Saturday for its 20th straight regular-season victory, staying atop the I-AA rankings for a second week.

The Wolf Pack led once again by Charvez Foger. The junior fullback leads the Big Sky and is second in the nation in rushing, averaging 152 yards per game.

Boise State tailback Chris Jackson also is among the nation's best running backs, ranked seventh in I-AA and second in the Big Sky after two games with an average of 115 yards per game.

The Broncos also boast the Big Sky's top-rated passer in Vince Alcalde. He is ranked fourth in Division I-AA, completing more than 65 percent of his passes for more than nine yards an attempt.

His passing figures are not quite as good as Idaho quarterback John Friesz is racking up the yards in his own way for the Vandals.

rates in October 1985, said in a statement that while the Pirates were disappointed in Roberts' ruling, the club would continue through the free agency system and trades and that re-entry free agents would not play a significant role.

"We remain committed to this independently chosen direction, which we feel has been very successful in the rebuilding of the Pittsburgh Pirates," Prine said.

Only two free agents, utilitymen Juan Beniquez and Dane Iorg, moved to different teams between the 1985 and 1986 seasons.

Said Beniquez, now with Toronto: "I was surprised. I thought maybe they would rule in favor of the owners. But I haven't been paying too much attention."

"I don't think it's real clear what it all means," said Gibson, the Tigers outfielder. "What the consequences of today's decision will be is what I'll be interested in."

Roberts noted that Kansas City looked at Gibson but "the interest of the Royals in Gibson suddenly cooled ... concurrently with a meeting of the owners at St. Louis, Mo., in October of 1985 and a gathering of the general managers in Tarpon Springs, Fla., during November of 1985."

"In 1985, however, no free agent received an offer at any price until and unless his former club declared a lack of interest," Roberts wrote, underlining "at any price." He said the "climate of the market had abruptly changed."

A similar grievance involving 1986 free agents, including Andre Dawson, Tim Lincecum, Jack Morris and Lance Parrish, is currently being heard by arbitrator George Niziol. That decision is expected in late November.

Clark, Murphy and Ripken will be free agents at the end of this season. The list also includes Jesse Barfield, Dave Righetti, Lou Whitaker, Mike Witt and Bruce Hurst.

Roberts gave his decision to Fehr and Rona, head of the owners' Player-Relations Committee, during a 1-hour 20-minute meeting Monday at the Plaza Hotel.

Fehr predicted the decision would help the union's case with the 1986 free agents. "It's enormously to our benefit. It certainly sets a precedent," Fehr said.

"I think and hope that when they (owners) examine this, they will say they can't do business as usual anymore," Fehr said. "Hopefully, they will follow the contract as interpreted by the arbitrator."

Gibson resigned with Detroit after the 1985 season when he did not receive solid offers from other teams.

"Obviously, I definitely agree with the decision," Gibson said from Boston, where the Tigers play the Red Sox Monday night. "Obviously, it's better that he ruled in the players' favor than the owners' favor."

Doug Baldwin, Gibson's agent, said "there was not the slightest in-

"Not one team asked, 'How many years?' or 'Would he like to play here?'" All got was 'None, no interest. Don't call us, we'll call you.'"

"It's arrogance. That's the word to pin on this," Baldwin said. "It was the most egregious slip in the face. They just decided, 'We're not going to play by the rules.'"

Moore's agent, Peter Rose, said he was not surprised by the decision. "Now they're up to the tough part," Rose said. "What does he (Roberts) do about it? I don't know if he has in his mind what he will do. I think it would be best for both sides to go back to the table and see if they can figure out some way of remedying it themselves without giving him (Roberts) the whole ball of wax."

Other free agents available after the 1986 season included Bob Horner, Rich Gedman, Ron Guidry and Doyle Alexander. Dawson left Montreal and signed with the Chicago Cubs and Parrish went from Detroit to Philadelphia, but both signed at lower salaries than offered by their original teams.

"I'm glad the players won. There's no doubt in my mind that there was collusion," Dawson said. "I'm really not interested in any compensation."

The players' union filed the grievance on Feb. 2, 1986, and charged collusion. Others available after the '85 season included Don Sutton, Carlton Fisk, Danny Darwin, Phil Niekro and Tommy John.
