Judiciary committee votes 9-5 to reject Bork

WASHINGTON — Judge Robert Bork's embattled nomination to the Supreme Court suffered its worst setback yet on Tuesday as the Senate Judiciary Committee voted 9-5 to recommend his rejection and a key Southern Democrat and a fifth Republican joined the opposition.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., the committee chairman, said he didn't see "any reasonable prospect that Judge Bork will be confirmed."

President Reagan insisted at the White House that he would not give up the fight. But his spokesman said "it's tough" to win now. And Tom Korologos, a lobbyist brought in by the White House for the Bork fight, said, "I'm not kidding anybody; I'm not sure it's over but we're in trouble."

The committee outcome had been expected. But the decision by formerly undecided panel member Howell "Heflin," D-Ala., was unexpected. His support was coveted by both sides.

"I must vote no," he said, adding that he was following the old adage, "When in doubt, don't."

Some Democrats were openly urging Reagan to find a replacement nominee.

But Senate Republican Whip Alan Simpson of Wyoming said he had talked with Bork on the telephone and quoted the nominee as saying, "I do hope they'll vote" in the full Senate on the appointment.

SEN. JOSEPH BIDEN Says confirmation unlikely

Bork also said, "I am not despairing one bit. I have a good life. Don't anguish about me," Simpson said.

The Judiciary Committee recommended that the full Senate reject the nomination when it comes up for a vote, probably within two weeks.

Before the vote, Reagan rejected all talk of giving up. "There's no backing off. I'm going all-out," he said.

Even as Reagan made his pledge to fight on, the nomination suffered another setback when Sen. Robert T. Stafford, R-Vt., became the fifth Republican senator to announce his opposition.

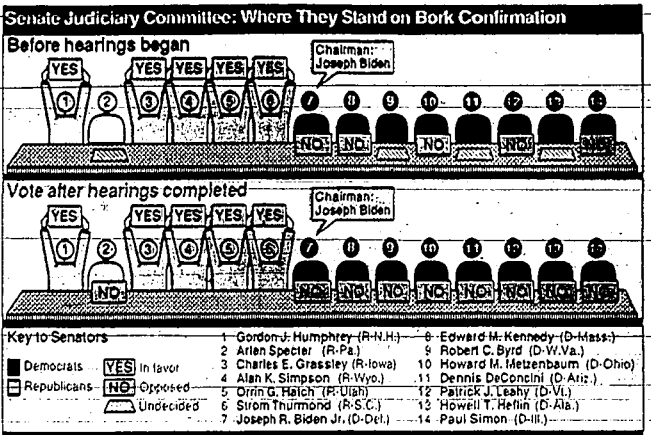

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said after the committee made its decision: "We're disappointed but we're pushing ahead." He conceded, "It's tough. There's no doubt about it."

The committee vote fell roughly along party lines, with Sen. Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania the only Republican to join eight Democrats in recommending rejection of Bork's nomination. The committee's five other Republicans were on Bork's side.

Before its final vote, the panel voted 9-5 against sending the nomination to the full Senate with a recommendation that it be approved.

Heflin's decision was particularly damaging to Bork's chances for confirmation, since White House officials were hoping to use a "yes" vote from the former Alabama Supreme Court justice to attract other conservative Southern Democrats to Bork's side.

A few hours after the committee vote, Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., said he will vote against Bork's confirmation. "No single issue is really the problem," Ford said in a statement issued through his office and later read from the Senate floor. "The problem is that this man either is not now — or was not in the past — responsible and candid in stating his views and making his decisions."

The committee debate mirrored arguments made for weeks.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., urged Reagan to withdraw the nomination. "Let's begin again," he said.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said, "Judge Bork is wrong on civil rights, wrong on equal rights for women, wrong on the right to privacy and wrong on freedom of speech. And President Reagan is wrong to try to put him on the Supreme Court."

But supporters praised Bork's in-

Farm credit rescue passes

WASHINGTON — The House approved 365-49 a rescue package Tuesday that would send $2.5 billion to the Farm Credit System and set up a pool of farm-mortgage loans to be used as backing for securities sold to investors.

"We must push forward, the farmers of America need this," Agriculture Committee Chairman E. (Kika) de la Garza, D-Texas, told the House.

He urged lawmakers disgruntled over details to put aside their concerns pending negotiations with the Senate, which currently is fashioning its own version of a Farm Credit System bailout.

The House version would authorize $2.5 billion in federal aid over five years to the 70-year-old network of cooperatives that has lost $4.8 billion since 1985 but remains the nation's largest farm lender.

It consists of 12 districts around the nation with 37 banks that lend funds to cooperatives and provide long-term mortgage and short-term production loans to farmers and ranchers through hundreds of local associations.

Besides providing $2.5 billion in federal aid, the bill would require restructuring of some problem loans and restructure the Farm Credit System itself. The 37 banks would shrink to no more than seven.

The measure would authorize $5 million over five years in matching grants to spur mediation between farmers and bankers and provide borrowers with a new array of rights such as access to documents and information and the "right of first refusal" to repurchase their foreclosed property.

The Farm Credit System has asked for $6 billion.

The aid would be offset on the federal budget through the sale of loans held by the Farmers Home Administration, according to the blueprint.

The chief focus of controversy, however, remained the so-called secondary market, known as the Federal Agricultural Mortgage Corp. (Farmer Mac), that would pool farm mortgage loans and use the pool to back securities that would be sold to investors.

It would be similar to such already existing secondary markets in home mortgage loans as the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae) and the Federal National Home Mortgage Corp. (Freddie Mac).

Efforts to win House approval sputtered two weeks ago when questions about the secondary market were raised by two chairmen, Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., of the Energy and Commerce Committee, and Rep. Ferdinand L. St Germain, D-R.I., of the Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee.

Before Tuesday's floor debate, de la Garza agreed to additional provisions fashioned by the Dingell and St Germain panels. The lawmakers described their alterations as financial safeguards and said they would buttress the system and protect taxpayers.

The Reagan administration has repeatedly opposed establishment of a secondary market, saying it would prove too tough a competitor for the Farm Credit System and thus weaken it in the long run.

Killer quakes may hit anyplace

LOS ANGELES — People outside quake-prone California and Alaska have no reason to feel smug.

Scientists warn that killer earthquakes once rocked the Midwest, East Coast and possibly the Pacific Northwest, and likely will do so again.

The potential is there at any given time to produce a catastrophe almost anywhere in the country, said David R.iggs, director of the U.S. Geological Survey. "The only difference is the events are better understood in California because they are more frequent there."

"Earthquakes are a national problem," he said during a telephone interview from USGS headquarters in Reston, Va.

"Earthquakes have occurred in a great many of our states significantly large enough to produce some damage."

Giant and large temblors occur far less often elsewhere in the nation than in California and Alaska, where the sparsely populated Aleutian Islands are often rocked by quakes measuring 7 on the Richter scale.

But Central and Eastern states "don't have the requisite resistant construction practices, so a lot of those places could be in for a worse disaster when they do have an earthquake," said seismologist Kate Hutton of the Cali-ornia Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

Riggs, USGS seismologist Tom Heaton in Pasadena and seismologist Lynn Sykes of Columbia University's Lamont-Doherty Geological Observatory in Palisades, N.Y., said four regions outside California and Alaska are most likely to be shaken by destructive temblors sooner or later:

- The central states, where four quakes of up to 8.6 magnitude on the Richter scale ruptured the New Madrid, Mo., seismic zone during the winter of 1811-12. The quakes were the largest in recorded history in the contiguous 48 states. They killed several dozen people, toppled cabins, snapped trees. Temporarily reversed the flow of the Mississippi River, caused some damage in Chicago and Cincinnati, and cracked pavement and rang church bells as far away as Washington, D.C., New York and Boston.
- The East Coast, which was rocked by a quake approaching magnitude 7 near Charleston, S.C., on Aug. 31, 1886, shattering buildings in South Carolina and killing about 60 people.
- The Nevada-Utah-Montana seismic zone, which have been shaken by 1969 Heben Lake, Mont., shock that Sykes said killed about two dozen people in landslides.

Senate votes to cut off all imports from Iran

WASHINGTON — Congress moved toward approval Tuesday of legislation slamming the door on all imports from Iran, with backers saying that while it may have little practical effect, such a ban would send a signal of outrage over Tehran's behavior in the Persian Gulf.

The Senate voted 93-0 for a bill that would immediately ban all imports from Iran — primarily oil — unless President Reagan certifies that the ban would harm U.S. interests. In that case, the president could delay the effective date of the cutoff by up to six months.

The House debated a similar measure and was expected to vote overwhelmingly in favor of it later in the day. The two versions differed slightly, so further action still would be required before the bill is sent to Reagan, who had not yet taken a position on the legislation.

"It is outrageous to learn that American dollars have been flowing into the Iranian war machine," which has been laying mines that threaten the lives of U.S. servicemen, said Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., a sponsor of the import ban.

The House version also gives the president authority to enter into negotiations with other countries to convince them to ban Iranian imports. The ban would last until Iran halts belligerent acts against Gulf shipping.

The overwhelming support for shutting down U.S. imports from Iran reflected frustration on Capitol Hill about events in the gulf, where the administration has committed U.S. military force to escorting oil tankers against the wishes of many in Congress.

But even backers of the bill said it was largely symbolic and that they expected it to have little economic impact on Iran, since oil not bought by the United States can be easily sold elsewhere.

"It would be more a profound moral statement than an effective cutoff of their exports," said Paul Freedman, acting undersecretary of commerce for export administration. He cited previous U.S. efforts banning Libya's oil exports which he said met with no success.

The legislation was spurred by news that a U.S. oil imports from Iran have more than doubled this year as oil companies try to build up stockpiles in anticipation of problems in the gulf, where shipping has been plagued by Iranian attacks.

AIDS education booklet puts stress on morality

WASHINGTON — Once again challenging the nation's top health officer, Bennett told a news conference Tuesday that he issued a guide to AIDS education that focuses on condoms and emphasizes the teaching of morality and sexual restraint as the best safeguard against the deadly disease.

Unlike Surgeon General C. Everett Koop's own pamphlet on AIDS, Bennett's booklet takes a dim view of condoms as a disease preventive, saying they "can and do fail."

It also contends that "promoting the use of condoms can suggest to teen-agers that adults expect them to engage in sexual intercourse.

"This is not moralizing; it is realism," Bennett told a news conference.

His 28-page booklet, "AIDS and the Education of Our Children," suggests that schools ordinarily can wait until sex education courses at the junior high level to teach youngsters the facts about AIDS and how it spreads.

Koop has said that frank instruction about AIDS "should start in early elementary school." And he has urged men who engage in any high-risk sexual activity to wear condoms from start to finish during intercourse.

No power to police churches, IRS says

REV. JERRY FALWELL Antiforgance has vanished

WASHINGTON — The Internal Revenue Service said Tuesday it lacks authority to properly police the tax-exempt status of churches, and the Rev. Jerry Falwell said the PTL sex scandal has caused such public concern that television ministers will be forced into policing themselves.

"The arrogance we have all been guilty of in the past is over," Falwell told a congressional hearing that was called in the wake of the sex-and-payoff scandal in the PTL ministry. "We are all naked before the public now," and those (ministers) who deserve to survive, will," he added.

The Lynchburg, Va., evangelist, who presides over a $100 million-a-year ministry built around the "Old Time Gospel Hour" and temporarily heads the PTL as well, said a new code of ethics being developed by National Religious Broadcasters will help assure contributors that their money is not being squandered.

"People vote with their checkbooks," Falwell said, guessing contributors would be influenced by assurances that the minister soliciting their donations had agreed to make full financial disclosure.

Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, called the hearing before his House Ways and Means oversight subcommittee to find out whether there is widespread abuse of the tax-exempt status of churches and religious organizations, especially those heavily involved in television. He repeatedly denied he was conducting an investigation.

The one-day session was prompted by disclosures that Jim Bakker, defrocked head of PTL, was paid millions of dollars in salaries by the ministry, that PTL had never paid tax on such unrelated enterprises as an amusement park, and that some religious organizations may be using tax-deductible contributions for political purposes.

Lawrence B. Gibbs, the IRS commissioner, said his agency has no evidence that there is widespread abuse by religious organizations. About 25 of the nation's estimated 400,000 churches are being audited, he said. Gibbs added, however, that the law leans so far to avoid excessive government interference with religion that the IRS simply has no way of knowing if "some ministries are cheating."

"Under current law the service is limited by the information it presently receives from churches and the restrictions on our ability to audit churches," Gibbs said.

Gorbachev calls for input

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev said Tuesday all countries in Europe should be included in talks designed to cut the numbers of conventional weapons and troops on the continent.

"The whole of Europe is interested in a reduction of troops and armaments," Gorbachev said. "For this reason, there should be no, so to speak, European supermajorities, including from among neutral and non-aligned countries."

Gorbachev made the remarks at a Kremlin dinner in honor of visiting Finnish President Mauno Koivisto. A text was distributed by the Tass news agency.

In negotiations in Vienna, NATO and Warsaw Pact nations are trying to draft an agenda for discussions about the reduction of their conventional forces in Europe.

Among other things, the two military alliances have disagreed on whether the talks should include only their 23 member nations, or all 35 countries that took part in the Stockholm Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

Philippine troops on alert

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Troops in full battle gear guarded President Corason Aquino's offices Wednesday as he convened her Cabinet after government television reported the military uncovered a plot to disrupt the meeting and take her hostage.

Soldiers raided suspected hideouts of military mutineers Tuesday night in different sections of Manila, and 14 people were detained for questioning.

Hundreds of troops were deployed around the presidential palace, and the leader of August's failed coup attempt said in a television interview that he is planning more rebellions.

Aquino convened the meeting as scheduled Wednesday. Sources at Malacañang Palace said the main item on the agenda was the communist rebellion.

Fire threatens observatory

By The Associated Press

A brushfire in San Diego County continued to burn out of control Tuesday, and firefighters dug a fire line around the Palomar Observatory and 400 homes.

Meanwhile, firefighters in Northern California gained ground on stubborn blazes while their colleagues in Oregon worked to strengthen fire lines in a rugged wilderness area.

On Palomar Mountain, a brushfire swept out of control across the peak's west side after destroying 9,000 acres in northern San Diego County. About 25 homes were evacuated, authorities said.

About 1,000 firefighters established a defensive perimeter around the famed observatory and 400 homes near the mountain top.

The observatory and the homes are "threatened by the fire but are not in imminent danger," California Department of Forestry Captain Charley Smith said.

Refugee boat sinks; 50 dead

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — A wooden boat carrying more than 100 refugees sank Tuesday in shark-infested waters off the coast of the Dominican Republic, killing at least 50 people, authorities said.

Authorities rescued 32 people but 68 others were missing when the boat overturned in heavy waves about five miles off the northeast coast as it was headed for Puerto Rico.

The survivors were treated at two hospitals for exposure from the sun and other injuries, police said.

Eugenio Cabral, head of the Civil Defense in the Dominican Republic, said "There are many dead, more than 50."

California's quake damage tops $125 million estimate

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The amount of damage done by last week's earthquake and its aftershocks will go higher than the $125 million estimate given President Reagan for federal disaster assistance, officials said Tuesday.

"We know there's more out there. This is the minimum figure," said Keith Harrison of the state Office of Emergency Services.

The quake and aftershocks damaged or destroyed 10,619 buildings, according to preliminary estimates submitted to Reagan in support of a request for federal disaster aid.

In anticipation of the presidential disaster declaration in Los Angeles and Orange counties, federal, state and local agencies were preparing to open one-stop disaster assistance application centers, Harrison said.

"We are securing locations and getting ready to get set up and running," he said. "We've asked for Small Business Administration loans, housing assistance and family grants."

"The type of assistance available won't be known until the Federal Emergency Management Agency and Reagan make the declaration, Harrison said, adding he expected a response within a matter of days.

"When signing the disaster request on Monday, Gov. George Deukmejian said he may call a special session of the Legislature, which is in recess until January, to approve state relief funds for the battered counties.

In Whittier and Alhambra, two of the areas hardest hit by the quake, authorities Tuesday were asking the owners of severely damaged buildings to demolish them as soon as possible.

The top problem facing quake-struck communities is housing for the nearly 1,500 people left homeless by last Thursday's 6.1 magnitude quake and Sunday's aftershock measuring 5.6 on the Richter scale.

"It is the toughest problem in this disaster because we don't have enough low-income housing in this city," said Red Cross spokesman Ralph Wright. "There are in excess of 1,400 people in our nine shelters."

Shelter populations increase daily as more buildings are condemned, he said.

Bennett told reporters that conditions can "help reduce the risk, but they-by-no-means-can-be-relied upon."

Without mentioning Koop by name, he added, "People who have thought or who have been suggesting that condoms will provide an adequate safeguard against the spread of AIDS are, I think, now admitting either to overstatement or mistake."

The two officials have carried on a year-long public debate over how to stop the spread of AIDS.

Koop was in Europe and unavailable for comment. James Brown, a spokesman for the Public Health Service headed by Koop, said the surgeon general has no plans now to change his report on AIDS, but was awaiting the results of a UCLA study on condoms and spermicides. Koop might change his advice if the study warrants it.

AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome — is spread through the exchange of contaminated body fluids, including semen and blood. Most victims are homosexual men; but intravenous drug abusers who share needles also can contract the disease.

As of last month, only 17,756 of the 41,825 Americans diagnosed with AIDS were still alive.

tellect and integrity, and said he was the subject of unfair criticism.

"The nation will be ill-served if the Senate rejects this remarkable man," said Simpson.

Sen. Orrin Hatch — himself mentioned as a possible substitute nominee — said, "If we politicize the judiciary of this country... we will lose one of the most valued liberties and freedoms."

Reagan was described as angry at the mounting opposition to Bork as he promised to maintain the fight for the nomination.

"There's no backing off. I'm going all out," Reagan was quoted as telling Senate Republican leaders a few hours before the Judiciary Committee began its meeting.

However, the president also acknowledged, "Our work is cut out for us. We have a lot to do before the floor vote."

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., admitted after the White House meeting that he was "as all-out" as short a few days ago, according to my count of the 100-member Senate.

"I think he's angry about it," Dole said said of Reagan. "He feels personally bad about some of the Republicans, I must add, and some of the Democrats who have politicized this confirmation. I think he used the words that 'he has taken a lot of the dignity away from the entire process.'"

Dole added, "We haven't given up."

In an interview on NBC, Dole said he planned to talk with Bork on Wednesday.

"I'm going to continue to check the undecided Republicans and Democrats and hope to have a better count for the judge sometime tomorrow (Wednesday)," said Dole. The Kansas senator said if he finds that there is an "overwhelming count in the Senate against Bork," then I think the judge has to make a judgement whether or not he wants to... have his name drawn through the debate for two or three weeks."

Before Stafford's announcement, the president previously had lost GOP Spectator Bob Packwood of Oregon, John H. Chafee of Rhode Island and Lowell P. Weicker Jr. of Connecticut.

Just two Democrats — David Boren of Oklahoma and Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina — have said they will vote for Bork. Democrats outnumber Republicans in the Senate, 54-46.

Stafford said in a Senate floor speech, "At this time in our history,

One of the provisions attached as part of the package fashioned by Dingell and other Democrats on the Commerce and Banking Committee would limit loans to those involving farms no larger than 960 acres or $1.5 million, whichever was larger. It was hailed by proponents as a way of confining loans to family farmers.

Rep. Edward Madigan, R-Ill., the top Republican on the Agriculture Committee, said that limitation took him by surprise. "This is being sprung on us and I don't know whether such a thing is in the bill or not," he said.

"Such a thing is in the bill and I suggest the effect will be very beneficial," Rep. Richard H. Lehman, D-Calif., said.

While the vote was overwhelming, some urban lawmakers said 90 percent guarantees of secondary market securities contained in the bill represent more federal subsidies for the farm sector on top of billions of dollars in direct aid.

Farm Belt lawmakers, however, said the measure was vitally needed.

"Creation of a secondary market for agricultural loans could be the most significant credit advance in the history of the Midwest," Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, said.

Supporters welcome back Hansen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. George Hansen, released last week from federal prison, was toasted as "a modern-day American patriot" Tuesday night by 300 cheering conservatives who gave him a welcome-home party on Capitol Hill.

Hansen, who was convicted in 1984 on four felony counts of filing false House financial disclosure forms, jokingly advised his supporters:

"Don't take the government's advice on filling out a form, and if you take the government's advice, don't sign the form."

Hansen's supporters, many of whom wore yellow ribbons on their lapels, burst into applause when Lee Bellinger, chairman of the non-profit Conservative Action Foundation, urged Hansen, R-Idaho, to return to Congress.

Bellinger gave Hansen an Uncle Sam T-shirt and a plaque which reads: "The conservative movement honors Congressman George Hansen and welcomes him back to the arena of public policy to continue the battle for freedom, justice, free enterprise and an American defense second to none."

"You are a prisoner of the liberal establishment, a victim of a growing trend in the American political system in which selective enforcement of the law is being used to stifle freedom of speech and independdent action," Bellinger told Hansen.

George Hansen and his wife, Connie, at welcoming party

James Carey of the Conservative Network, which co-sponsored the party, called Hansen a "modern-day American patriot." Among his supporters at the party at the GOP's Capitol Hill Club were about 18 mostly conservative Republican members of Congress. They included House Minority Whip Trent Lott, R-Miss., and Sens. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and Steve Symms, R-Idaho.

Hansen was released Oct. 1 from a medium-security federal prison at Petersburg, Va., after serving nearly one year of a five- to 15-month prison term. Although he has been nominated for president by the Populist Party, Hansen said he is undecided about his future political plans.

Hansen was convicted of failing to record $334,000 in profits and loans, including transactions involving Texas financier Nelson Bunker Hunt, on financial disclosure forms required by the 1978 Ethics in Government Act.

Hansen, who has consistently protested his innocence of wrongdoing, was the first public official to be prosecuted under the law.

He says he believes he was imprisoned in retaliation for his outspoken attacks on the Internal Revenue Service, the Justice Department and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Hansen lost an appeal of his conviction before the Supreme Court, was reprimanded by his House colleagues and lost a bid for re-election to an eighth House term in the 1984 elections.

When he was released from prison, Hansen told reporters that "it's not outside the realm of possibility that I will seek office (but) it's not outside the realm of possibility that I won't, either."

Meantime, he said Tuesday, he will write a book about his prison experiences and travel on the lecture circuit.

Spring Canyon blaze nearly beat, crews say

By The Associated Press

Crews made the final links in the reinforced break line surrounding the remote Spring Canyon Fire on Tuesday, and fire bosses expected to declare the blaze once again contained by nightfall.

"We've had better conditions today than we've had in a couple because the wind is down," Targhee National Forest spokesman Dennis Oaks said.

Some 300 firefighters have been strengthening the lines since the fire, declared contained just a week ago, erupted under high winds last weekend and spread from 800 to 2,160 acres in the rugged, high-country terrain near Palisades Reservoir.

"Those fire lines seem to be pretty solid," he said.

To the west in Idaho's central mountains, 200 firefighters continued gaining ground on the southern flank of the 41,000-acre Deadwood Summit Fire, and Boise National Forest spokesman Greg Spangenberg said fire bosses may be able to declare that key portion of the blaze contained by Thursday.

"There was a little spotting on the south end and they got to it right away and other than that it looks pretty good," he said.

Crews had break line along about two-thirds of the southern flank of the 64-day-old fire, the state's largest of the season, but they were only trying to quell the flames that had raged outside of the Frank Church River of No Return Wilderness.

The bulk of the lightning-caused fire, burning inside the wilderness between Deadwood Summit and the Middle Fork of the Salmon River, will be allowed to continue burning naturally under a containment strategy until rain or snow finally douse the flames.

The Deadwood Summit Fire had been burning naturally for two months before winds sent it flaming outside of the wilderness last weekend. At one point, fire raced across five miles of forest in just an hour, routing 13 hunters and destroying a campground at Dagger Falls.

No structures were immediately threatened by the blaze, but, Spangenberg said, "With such an erratic movement on Saturday, we don't know what's threatened anymore so we've taken precautionary measures. We're not predicting anything with that crazy fire now." Crews and equipment have been posted around structures in the wilderness area to protect them in case the fire takes off again, he said.

Jones' office rules market factors main culprit in gas price increases

BOISE (AP) — Attorney General Jim Jones said Tuesday that a preliminary review of recent gasoline price increases in Idaho did not reveal "suspicious pricing practices."

But while Jones said the rise in gas prices can largely be explained by market factors, he would not rule out the possibility of "isolated" or "illegal price fixing" in the state.

The attorney general said his office began an investigation after receiving a number of inquiries about gas price increases in recent weeks.

"People are wondering whether the prices are justified by market conditions or whether there is collusion amongst suppliers," Jones said. "We began looking into the matter several weeks ago and have determined that market factors are primarily responsible for the increased price of gas at the pump."

He said a U.S. Justice Department attorney "who keeps a fairly close eye on Idaho gas markets" agreed with that conclusion.

Jones said the major factor behind recent increases appears to be the rise in world oil prices. "So long as tensions are high in the Persian Gulf, I don't suspect that we will see any relief for motorists at the local service station."

A study by Jones' office of wholesale gas prices at the Boise pipeline terminal from Aug. 13 to Sept. 24 indicated an increase of 4.92 cents per gallon. The wholesale price of regular gas on Aug. 13 was 64.92 cents, and on Sept. 24 was 69.17 cents.

When 23.6 cents in federal and state taxes were added to the terminal price, the actual wholesale cost of the gas on Sept. 24 was 92.77 cents per gallon, Jones said.

The price differential between the wholesaler, retailer and customer is not extraordinary, although it is toward the higher side of a range that federal officials consider to be acceptable markup, the attorney general said. "This would not completely rule out anti-competitive factors in the marketplace, but at this time there do not appear to be any surface indicators of such factors."

Jones said wholesale prices at the end of the study period were almost exactly the same as those charged on Feb. 19, 1986, when he wrote to major oil companies asking them why local retail prices were averaging more than $1.20 a gallon.

Prices quickly dropped to well under $1 a gallon after Jones revealed his action, but the attorney general said consumers should not expect a similar decline this time.

"The precipitous fall in prices at that time was fully justified by market factors," he said. "Conditions are different today because the wide variation between retail and wholesale prices isn't there."

A number of the complaints received by Jones' office pertained to the difference between the prices of regular and unleaded gas. He said while there no longer is any market reason for unleaded gas to cost more than regular, higher prices for unleaded had become customary with Boise-area retailers.

"This type of pricing practice, while not justified by wholesale market costs, is not illegal unless done as a result of concerted action among dealers," Jones said. "In many other markets in Idaho retailers charge the same price for unleaded regular as they do for leaded regular."

He said wholesale prices at the Boise terminal were consistently among the highest of the 11 cities surveyed — during the six-week period, but only an average of 1 cent above those in Salt Lake City, where the Boise pipeline begins.

Time-of-day surcharge in dispute

BOISE (AP) — Mountain Bell Telephone, "bombed" by customers after a charge was imposed for Time-of-Day service provided by an independent company, says it is backing completely attempts to restore the service free of charge.

But Mountain Bell spokesman Steve Guerber said Tuesday neither the company nor its regulators can force the Time-of-Day service to be provided free without a waiver from U.S. District Judge Harold Greene, the man who ordered the breakup of the national Bell telephone network four years ago.

Guerber said that original order barred the telephone company from continuing to offer special services like Time-of-Day if they would compete with independent companies.

The debate over Mountain Bell's role in offering the service erupted last week when Ad-Time Inc. of Salt Lake City began charging callers 29 cents plus toll charges for its Time-of-Day service offered on the Mountain Bell system in larger Idaho cities.

"It was not a profitable situation, with telephone costs rising and calling declined," Ad Time President Dick Reinholdt said. Ad Time Inc. initially offered the time announcement free by adding advertisements with the recording.

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission is looking at ways to include the Time-of-Day calls in the free information call allowance a telephone subscriber receives each month.

Merchandise hold has owners irate

MOSCOW (AP) — Moscow pawn shop owners and second-hand dealers say they'd be put out of business if the City Council passes an ordinance that would require a 15-day hold on merchandise.

The ordinance, proposed by Moscow Police Chief David Cameron, is designed to keep closer tabs on stolen merchandise that passes through pawn and second-hand shops.

"If you pass this, wait a year and let me sell my business and I'll find something else to do," Aaron Fiedler, owner of DJ's Discount, told City Council members Monday night.

Vernon Gregg, owner of The Little Pawn Shop, said he would move his business out of the city if the ordinance passes.

Shop owners say only a minuscule portion of their merchandise turns out to be stolen, and that they already cooperate with the police.

Gorbachev offers West an opportunity

Mikhail Gorbachev has undertaken the most far-reaching revamping of the Soviet system in over half a century. While the Soviet Union remains a closed communist society, Gorbachev has challenged a whole series of ingrained practices and attitudes — from strictly centralized economic management to a militarized country of foreign affairs — which have been the basis for Soviet policy since Stalin's time. In foreign policy, he has introduced new concepts and flexibility into Soviet diplomacy.

Yet the West has not come to terms with these changes. Instead, it has generally adopted a "wait-and-see" attitude to the reforms. Whatever 7½ wisdom a year ago, such a policy no longer provides a viable strategy.

Because the Soviet Union is a global power, Gorbachev's initiatives demand an active response by the United States and its Western allies. We should begin by welcoming and encouraging the reformist inclinations that Gorbachev has set in motion and actively engage the Soviet Union in an effort to resolve key points of tension.

A purely reactive Western approach to the new Soviet policy is not an acceptable option, we believe. The new course chosen by Gorbachev — and Western responses to it — will affect the ways in which the Soviet Union carries out its role as a superpower. A more subtle and flexible Soviet diplomacy will present new challenges to the unity of the West. Failure to respond actively would sacrifice the diplomatic initiative to the Soviets and squander a rare opportunity to build a new relationship between East and West.

So how should the country and its allies respond to the Gorbachev challenge? We believe there are important opportunities for new agreements on arms control and other security issues, on economic issues, on regional issues and on human rights. These new opportunities exist because, on many issues, the Soviet Union is moving toward long-standing Western preferences.

Gorbachev's revamping of the Soviet system is likely to lead to further moderation of the use of Soviet power.

The Soviet leadership seems to recognize that serious economic and technological deficiencies jeopardize Moscow's international position, and that reversing these trends requires not only major economic modernization but also many new foreign-policy approaches.

These changes, while only in their beginning stages, present both opportunities and challenges which the West cannot ignore.

Consider the changes in Soviet policy under Gorbachev:

In arms control, Moscow has adopted NATO's "zero option" and agreed to dismantle all medium-range missiles. In addition, the Soviets have moved toward U.S. positions on verification, including on-site inspection. They have also raised the prospect of conventional-force reductions in central Europe that would cut Warsaw Pact forces more than NATO's. And the Soviets have accepted the principle of deep reductions in strategic weapons, including the heavy land-based missiles in which the Soviets have been dominant.

Behind these Soviet arms-control proposals lies a more fundamental and far-reaching reduction in the Soviet military's role and influence in the highest policy-making councils, and Gorbachev has made clear to the military that they have to accept spending restraints and greater openness in the dissemination of military information.

In trade policy, Gorbachev has emphasized joint ventures that could reduce Soviet autarky and expressed an interest in cooperating with such major international organizations as GATT. These policies are directly associated with his far-reaching reforms of the domestic economy.

In human rights and cultural policy, Gorbachev has displayed a degree of openness and tolerance unthinkable just three years ago. In emigration, for example, he has sharply increased the numbers of Soviet Jews, Germans and other groups allowed to leave the country. While glasnost has a long way to go, it has clearly led to progress on human rights, which remains a major concern of the West.

In regional policy, Gorbachev hasn't yet made a significant effort to scale back existing Soviet global commitments. But he has given a new priority to the military expansion of Soviet interests in the Third World that was the case with his predecessors.

In the Middle East he has shifted the traditional military and ideological emphasis to one of diplomacy, shocking many Western observers in the process.

How then should we respond to these changes, which have moved Soviet policies closer to some of America's important interests. Together with the prospects of a Soviet-American INF treaty and summit by the end of this year, they highlight the need for the United States to tackle a wide range of problems in East-West relations.

We urge that the United States initially focus on these key issues:

• Security issues. The United States and its NATO allies should intensify talks with the Warsaw Pact aimed at reducing conventional forces and eliminating offensive forces, particularly those that can be used in a first strike.

• Both sides need to move rapidly to conclude an agreement on deep cuts in strategic offensive nuclear forces. At the same time, both sides need to find ways to strengthen the ABM Treaty and to ensure that any research on strategic defensive systems is consistent with the preservation of the treaty.

The West should push for a rapid conclusion of the global Geneva chemical-weapons negotiations, including the establishment of an international verification regime.

• International economic issues. Except in a precisely defined area of strategic technologies where we need tighter, more efficient controls expanded East-West trade is in our interest. The West should welcome Soviet efforts to develop the legal foundation for a system of equitable joint ventures.

• Human rights. The West should welcome increased glasnost while continuing to make clear to the Soviet government that its observance of internationally recognized standards of human rights is the mark of a civilized power and a condition for truly collaborative relations between the Soviet Union and the West.

The West should insist that the Soviet Union fully live up to the commitments it undertook in the Helsinki Final Act to encourage the free movement of people, ideas and information across international boundaries.

• Regional issues. In Afghanistan, the West must continue to make clear that Soviet occupation of that country poses strict limits to genuine collaboration between the USSR and the West.

In other areas of conflict that could lead to possible superpower confrontation — such as Central America, southern Africa and the Persian Gulf — the West should intensify discussions aimed at clarifying interests and creating conditions for greater stability.

In the Arab-Israeli dispute, for example, the United States and Soviet Union should work together to advance a peace process which guarantees the territorial integrity and interests of all states and parties. We shouldn't be afraid of Soviet help in solving the intractable problems of the Middle East — we should welcome it.

The West must have no illusions about the need to balance Soviet power, but neither should it overlook opportunities to encourage the Soviet Union to be a more responsible and integrated member of the international community.

Some in the West worry that Gorbachev's economic reforms will simply strengthen the Kremlin in the long run. But Soviet economic and social problems will not be quickly solved. In the meantime, greater openness and pluralization should be welcomed for the own sake as well as for the effect they can have in moderating the way Soviet power is used.

Joseph Nye is a professor of government at Harvard University and co-chairman of a bipartisan task force on Soviet "new thinking." John Mroz is president of the Institute for East-West Security Studies, which sponsored the study.

Tactic embarrasses Idaho newspapers

The amount of advertising a business places in a newspaper should have nothing whatsoever to do with how much news coverage that business gets in that same newspaper. And if Bob C. Hall, executive director of the Idaho Newspaper Association, doesn't have that engraved on his soul, then he should resign and make room for someone who does.

Hall is, in effect, the head lobbyist, doubling as an ad salesman, for many of Idaho's newspapers, including this one. He has been both the best and the worst person ever to hold that job. He has been the best in that he is bold and creative. He has been the worst in that he breaks a lot of china.

And never more so than now. He has been strong-arming Idaho corporations, writing letters saying that Idaho weekly newspapers might not run corporate press releases if the companies don't advertise more in weekly newspapers.

And of course, that clumsy threat carries with it the corollary — that the papers will print the press releases if the corporations advertise more heavily.

Either arrangement is unethical. Ethically, press releases should be considered strictly on their news merits and for no other reason.

You expect beginning press agents for corporations to misunderstand that fact and to try to muscle publicity into a paper. But you don't expect a seasoned representative of newspapers to turn the sleazy tactic on its head and try to muscle advertising into the papers.

After this blunder, what do the editors of Idaho say to the next publicist who comes through the door trying to buy news space?

What an embarrassment for the newspapers of Idaho.

Letters/Working together can help Magic Valley economy

Representatives not on hand

Sept. 29 CSI held a conference on economic development, "The American Seminar III" including a teleconference of many leading Americans, governors and former governors, presidents of major companies, presidents of universities, colleges, directors of firms like General Motors and Sears, and many others representing a broad spectrum of professionals. Over 70 persons from local chambers of commerce, mayors, commissioners, council persons were invited. The purpose was to gather leaders — those interested in bettering the economy in South Central Idaho. Twenty showed up. One mayor, three from chamber of commerce, three legislators, several from the educational field and speakers from Region IV Economic Development.

Where were our representatives? The idea was to form a rapport with the South Central Idaho community of eight counties, to create a plan of working together. The leadership is there to help our local leaders if they'll just realize the importance of programs like this to the local towns. Are our business men and women and the public in general in South Central Idaho satisfied with the economy? If not, are you telling it to your representatives? Have you passed on your ideas to your council person, mayor, chamber of commerce or commissioners? Do it! They can't help if they don't know the problem. Get a little involved yourself or it won't work. Join your chamber or business association and be active.

Have your kids had to leave the area in order to get work and make a living? Have you tried to sell your home the last couple of years? Have businesses in your town closed and now you drive many miles for services? Are you attracted to just get by in your business?

We need an upbeat economy. We need to work and plan together at whatever level. Can you imagine the improvements that would occur with 70 representatives of southland government all paddling in one direction instead of splashing about in their own? The governor is pushing, the Department of Commerce is working hard, the college and chambers are offering help so I say let's try again. We must work together. It's fun, exciting and beneficial.

Letter does a disservice

In regards to the letter of Gary M. Nielsen of 10-1-87, I feel that he has done a great disservice to the people of Twin Falls, the Magic Valley, and to Dr. Newcomb. Mr. Nielsen stated that "to positively test for AIDS would cost about $300." According to MVRMC, they charge a $130 handling fee to test for AIDS. The health department charges according to a sliding scale from $0 to $18 depending on income and circumstances. According to one study, the cost of the "Eliase" test could be as low as $1 per person when large volumes are done.

Where does Mr. Nielsen come up with $300? According to the Red Cross at this time there is no way that one's relatives can donate blood and a certain person be designated to receive it.

As to cost effectiveness, 90 percent of AIDS patients end up on Medicare. The cost of AZT (a medication for AIDS patients) runs $1,000/month or $12,000/year. If Dr. Newcomb's questionnaire sends only one person from getting AIDS, the questionnaires will have more than paid for themselves.

Recently in St. Louis, some children got into the garbage bin of a laboratory and were exposed to AIDS. Dr. Newcomb's bill would have prevented this from happening.

I feel that Dr. Newcomb's bill provides answers to many of the problems AIDS has caused us and in a very wise and cost-effective way. Mr. Nielsen: "Let's be realistic" and let our facts straight.

Watch man from Missouri

In no way am I in accord with the Times-News editorial of Oct. 4 and I say to one and all keep your eye on the man from Missouri. His name is Gephardt and by the grace of God he's a Democrat. For all of you who are tired of the present occupant of the big house along side of the Potomac, the man with the Cheshire Cat Syndrome (even when he is out of sight the silly grin remains), let's give them a good house cleaning. Most of them have been away from their homes a heap too long.

To those who care to remember, Missouri produced another Democrat not too long ago. The year was 1922 and it was spring and the crocus bulbs on the east side of the house weren't the only things starting to bloom. Each morning promptly at 4 a.m., a slightly built man, a recent veteran of "The war to end all wars" would embark on a dusty old Dodge roadster on a campaign trail that was destined to leave his name in history books forever. Carefully placing a Cudahy 3 lb. lard pail laden with a pair of fat sandwiches and a wedge of gooseberry pie on the seat beside him, he set forth to battle all the pathos in Jackson County.

On one such morning when the sun was barely two hours old and the blue jays were scolding in the thickets he pulled into the yard of a tractin old farmer by the name of Scoggins.

Now Scoggins was a hard worker and had a place he was almighty proud of, and each morning after church he liked to climb to the top corner pole of his coral fence to sit and survey his kingdom so to speak. And of course there was old Herkimer. Old Herkimer, well-he was a big old black Minora rooster, who after crowing loudly from atop the post always left a deposit on top of the post if you get my meaning.

This particular morning the politician (and that's what he was) seeing that Scoggins wasn't coming down, proceeded to scale the coral fence. As he climbed up, ward one hand clamped down on the top of the post from whence old Herkimer had recently flown down to you see?

About an hour later Scoggins slumped down on the porch steps and spoke to Ms. Scoggins: "You know the little feller that was just here, didn't rightly get his name, think it was Harry sumthin or a ruther, said he was rummer feller of Jackson County. Rekin maybe I'll vote for him. All the time he was slappin me on the back and saying what a fine place we had he was wiping old Herkimer's droppin on the back of my overalls. Now I figger ifen a feller has got nerve enuff to do that when you awatekin him, he never tellen what he might do ifen you warn't enuff."

Did the politician win the election? Oh yes and a whole lot more and I for one have always maintained that this man, Harry S. Truman, was the last human being to occupy the White House.

And I say once more, to wit — Keep your eye on the man from Missouri.

Solution offered to deficit

I am publishing this story of one federal department that is a complete monopoly and doesn't want anything done now to change it: The Federal Highway Administration.

I have been concerned about the huge federal deficit and find that no one in the federal government is taking any action to substantially reduce it. I made a proposal to do so in 1984. Senator Symms indicated some interest, but had some questions.

Those questions were resolved. The Federal Highway Administration also showed some future interest.

Complete opposition to my plan came from Joyce J. Walker in the executive office of the president. Where she and Mr. Stockman obtained a copy, I do not know. Several people in the government either ignored my plan or passed the "buck" to someone down the line.

"Well, as President Truman once said: 'The buck stops here.'" So now to the current situation. Steve Symms sent me a letter on Jan. 20, 1987. Since I had not had a reply, I wrote to him on June 29, 1987. When no reply came I made a person-to-person call to him.

When it was ignored, I called his personal secretary asking when was going to get a reply to my June 29th letter. She had one of the staff, Chris Sandlund, call me. He called back and said he didn't have any copy of the senator's letter of Jan. 20th or my letter of June 29th. I told him I thought it was ridiculous to run a senator's office that way, but I would send him a copy of each.

Also, that in a similar situation in another senator's office, the staff man was really there to protect the Federal Highway Administration and destroyed my letter when it was received. Loyal federal employee, but to whom? Well, finally after more follow up, I received "Steve's" letter of Aug. 6, 1987. He may have been angry about my comments to his staff, if they told him. In any event, he has now become a "states rights" man. I am also for states rights, but not when we have such a large federal deficit and need the interstate available for defense of our country.

Now the current situation. I have always been a strong supporter of President Reagan in every walk except the huge federal deficit. Joyce J. Walker in the executive office of the president may have been responsible for taking the action in sending the letter to me referred to above.

I have always supported my good friend "Steve," until now. He was about 15 years of age when President Eisenhower came to office in 1953, and so probably is not aware that the president needed the Interstate System as a military project.

He knew that the Germans could have won the war with their "outboard" used as military roads during the war. He established the Interstate Systems to protect this country if ever invaded. Why it was turned over to the states instead of the Federal Highway Administration is beyond my comprehension. I guess it was "states rights" pressure. I am going to publish all this material to reverse that trend and to reduce the federal deficit.

Since the Interstate System was set up primarily as a military defense project, the Defense Department should also contribute to the reduction of the deficit. That will be discussed in another story about another federal monopoly.

I hope I will get the support of everyone who reads this material even though several people in the federal government will be upset.

Thanks to everyone who reads it.

U.S. alerted to Iranian buildup; Coast Guard to send forces

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. military forces in the Persian Gulf have been alerted to a continuing buildup of Iranian gunboats around Kharg Island amid fears Iran may be planning to expand attacks on shipping and oilfields, defense officials said Tuesday.

The Coast Guard, meantime, plans to send a small number of patrol cutters to the Persian Gulf to assist U.S. forces there, the sources added.

The officials, who demanded anonymity, said U.S. intelligence agencies "have been working overtime" trying to keep track of the boats at Kharg Island — one of Iran's main oil-loading ports — in the northern gulf and to divert Iran's intentions.

Last weekend, Iran sent about four dozen small gunboats streaming westward across the gulf from Kharg toward a Saudi Arabian offshore oilfield, according to the sources. The vessels reportedly turned back without mounting an attack after they were spotted by an AWACS radar plane and intercepted by Saudi Arabian jet fighters.

Saudi Arabia has denied that any confrontation occurred. But the Iranian naval activities were sufficiently unusual to prompt several U.S. warships to break off from a convoy in the southern gulf and steam northward, according to reporters aboard the command ship LaSalle.

"The Iranian ship count at Kharg is now exceptionally high," said one source. "We don't know what they're doing, but there is real concern that something is up. There are probably at least 80 small boats of various types there now."

"There is some debate as to whether the Iranians were just testing the Saudis for a response over the weekend," added a second official. "But whatever they were doing then, they're still massing in the area now."

"Our surveillance is now almost constant," added another source.

Meanwhile, defense sources said a "handful" of patrol cutters, small airplanes and helicopters would soon be sent to the gulf in what would be the Coast Guard's most distant deployment under Defense Department direction since the Vietnam war. The Coast Guard is a Transportation Department agency.

Soviets reject meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has again rejected a suggestion that its defense minister travel to Washington for meetings with Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

Weinberger, hoping to break a deadlock over arrangements for such a session, has now suggested consultations with Soviet Defense Minister Dmitry Yazov be held in New York City next week, Defense Department spokesman Fred Hoffman said.

Hoffman said Weinberger made the suggestion in a letter to Yazov on Monday but no reply has been received.

Should Yazov accept such an invitation, it would set the stage for the first meeting ever between the top military leaders of the United States and Soviet Union.

The effort to arrange the meeting began in earnest last month after Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze signaled Kremlin interest in such a session.

Weinberger, who had originally proposed one-on-one talks with Yazov's predecessor in April 1986, immediately renewed that invitation on Sept. 22.

Chief Pentagon spokesman Fred Hoffman insisted "no final decisions have been made." The Coast Guard declined comment beyond acknowledging in a statement: "There has been a recent review of Coast Guard capabilities that has potential use in the current situation (in the Persian Gulf)."

The defense sources said, however, the patrol vessels would be used to help guard large barges that have been leased to serve as floating bases for Navy mine-sweeping boats.

The sources said the Joint Chiefs of Staff had decided the use of Coast Guard vessels would free larger Navy frigates to concentrate on searching for Iranian boats suspected of sowing mines in the gulf.

All of the larger patrol cutters are armed, albeit lightly.

The Coast Guard was heavily involved in supporting the U.S. Navy during the Vietnam war, maintaining patrols along the South Vietnamese coastline. More recently, Coast Guard cutters were sent to the island of Grenada for temporary maritime patrol duties following the U.S. invasion there in 1983.

Unlike the Navy's frigates, destroyers and cruisers, the Coast Guard's patrol cutters are not considered combatant ships, and thus many of them include women among their crews.

Warner Siems, a Coast Guard spokesman, declined comment when asked whether any Coast Guard boats might sail to the gulf with women aboard.

to breach at a meeting, but defense sources have said the Pentagon chief is interested in discussing such things as future arms control efforts and the size of conventional forces in Europe in addition to enforcement of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty.

Weinberger is an avowed hardliner who has repeatedly accused the Soviets of violating the ABM treaty, which limits the deployment of defensive systems against nuclear missiles.

Silence is debated in high court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on Tuesday heard competing assessments of a New Jersey moment-of-silence law, alternately portrayed as an attempt to enhance public school decorum and as an effort to promote organized school prayer.

The justices' questions during an hour-long argument session, however, indicated they might refrain from ruling on the law's constitutionality due to a procedural flaw in the case.

The law, which says students may use the silent moments "for quiet and private contemplation or introspection," was struck down by a federal appeals court.

It ruled the law was aimed at promoting group prayer, and therefore violated the constitutionally required separation of church and state.

School-sponsored prayer sessions have been banned by the Supreme Court since 1962.

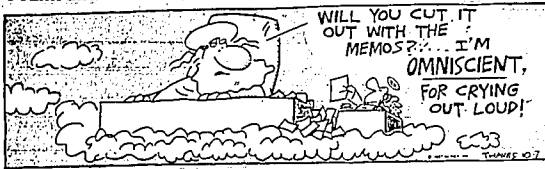

About half the states have similar moment-of-silence laws. Most, like New Jersey's, do not mention "prayer" specifically.

Washington lawyer Rex Lee urged the court to resolve an issue of "great national moment" by telling states such laws are valid.

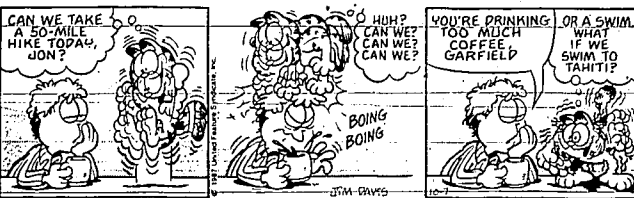

"If there is any way to decide it, it ought to be done," Lee said after conceding that the right of his clients, two New Jersey legislators, to appeal the law's invalidation is "a close question."

PROBATION IN BOSTON.
A Boston man named John Augustus, in the 1830s persuaded the courts to release young offenders into his custody instead of sending them to prison. That was the start of the penal wrinkle called "Probation."

Boxing records of a fight on Sept. 29, 1946, at Lewiston, Maine, show Al Couture knocked out Ralph Walton in 10-1/2 seconds, including the 10-second count. You figure Al jumped the bell?

One part of penance tends to be especially obedient to the authority of police officers, district attorneys, judges, Defense lawyers call that type an "authoritarian personality", and try first to challenge same offi- juries. Typical authoritarian person- ality tends to think the defendant wouldn't be in trial if not guilty.

England's Anne: Always a princess

LONDON (AP) — Princess Anne was unruffled when two inmates of a women's prison psychiatric unit began shouting at her during a royal tour: She just went up to them and calmed them down.

Colin Allen, governor of Holloway prison, said the 37-year-old daughter of Queen Elizabeth II handled the situation magnificently during a three-hour tour of the prison in north London on Monday.

The unit contains the most seriously disturbed inmates at Holloway. The princess insisted visiting it during her tour, saying she wanted to see all aspects of life in Britain's largest women's prison.

There were some catcalls when the princess, accompanied by prison staff, entered the unit, and two women prisoners started shouting incoherently.

Princess Anne went up to the women, talked to them and very quickly they calmed down, Allen said.

Atlanta turns out for Taylor's Passion tour

ATLANTA (AP) — Several thousand people packed a department store here to stare at Elizabeth Taylor and get a whiff of her latest business venture.

Taylor sauntered up to a purple platform during a promotional tour for her perfume, Elizabeth Taylor's Passion, to field questions from the throng gathered Monday at the downtown Macy's.

The 55-year-old actress later held a private get-together in an upstairs dining room for fans who shelled out $200 for an autographed one-ounce bottle of the perfume.

One fan, Betsy Wright, was brief in describing her impression of Taylor: "Her heels: high. Her ring: big. Her waist: thin," she said.

BARBARA MANDRELL Advocates organ donation

Woody Herman still in critical condition

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Big band leader Woody Herman, three-time Grammy winner, remained hospitalized in critical condition Tuesday, a hospital spokesman said.

The 74-year-old jazz great was admitted to Cedars-Sinai Medical Center last week because of congestive heart failure, emphysema and pneumonia.

"There's no change to report in Woody's condition," hospital spokesman Ron Wise said Tuesday.

Herman climbed to fame and wealth in the 1930s and for half a century was known as the leader of a rotating group of musicians whose furious pacing won them the collective name of the "Thundering Herd."

He made headlines in August when he was heavily evicted from his Hollywood Hills home for non-payment of rent. He had lost title to the house in an Internal Revenue

Donation cause gets help from Mandrell

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country singer Barbara Mandrell sang "Happy Birthday" to Tennessee's youngest heart transplant recipient as part of an effort to call attention to the need for organ donations.

Jonathan Jones celebrated his second birthday Monday, six months after an April 11 transplant that doctors say saved his life.

The boy was given a birthday cake and a red tricycle at the luncheon where Mandrell sang and announced plans for a dinner show Nov. 24 to benefit organ transplant research at Vanderbilt University Medical Center in Nashville.

The singer said a doctor told her last spring about Jonathan, telling her the boy would probably die without a transplant.

"When he said that to me, he did not know that I had a little boy 18 months old," Mandrell said. "Until something hits you close to home, you don't really get involved."

Mandrell is known for her country hits including "I Was Country When Country Wasn't Cool" and "Sleeping Single in a Double Bed," and for her television variety show in 1980 and 1981.

Sponsors hope the dinner show will bring Vanderbilt as much as $150,000 for research and family recruitment, while raising public awareness of the need for organ donation.

Harold Ramis says it's time for recognition

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Harold Ramis, who helped write "Animal House" and other comedies and played Bill Murray's sidekick in "Stripes" and "Ghostbusters," said it's about time he was recognized as a comedy actor in his own right.

"I was tired of playing best friends to funnier guys," Ramis said while talking about his role in "Baby Boom," where he finally has the leading funny-guy role opposite Diane Keaton.

He says his experience as a co-writer of scripts came in handy during filming, when he was asked to ad lib. He plays Keaton's live-in boyfriend when she inherits a baby girl.

Working with the baby — actually year-old twins — was the toughest part of the movie, Ramis said. The girls had a special handler called the "baby wrangler," but there was still a lot of down time waiting for them to follow the script.

"You can't feed them little bits of hot dog or fish like when you train an animal," he said.

Nurse accidentally cuts off newborn's thumb

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A nurse snipping tape that held an intravenous needle in a newborn baby's hand accidentally cut off the tip of the infant's thumb, officials said.

Jessie Michelle Eason was only 15 hours old when the top of her right thumb, almost down to the knuckle, was cut off Monday at Bayfront Medical Center, relatives said.

Dr. Osama Suliman, a St. Petersburg plastic surgeon, sewed the thumb back together in a 45-minute operation. But he predicted Monday that the chances of success for the replant were only 10 to 15 percent. It will be two or three days before the outcome is known, he said.

Switching together the tiny blood vessels in the thumb was impossible, Suliman said.

"The only way it will heal is if the blood vessels grow back," he said. "This is an unfortunate incident that has occurred, and we are very sorry," said Bayfront spokeswoman Maxine Michael. "Bayfront will continue caring for the mother and baby, and at this point there's no further information to be released."

She declined to identify the nurse who cut the baby.

Carol Eason, 22, gave birth Sunday to Jessica, who was about three weeks premature. Mrs. Eason's husband, Ethridge, said hospital officials had been "bending over backwards. It shouldn't have happened. But we're all human. No one's perfect."

Mrs. Eason, who also has a son, was moved to a private room and insisted on keeping the baby with her, the family said.

Literature gets gift with new Proust manuscript

PARIS (AP) — Marcel Proust's admirers have had a balmy week with the arrival in bookstores of a new manuscript of a volume of the monumental "Remembrance of Things Past."

The newly discovered manuscript, which Proust revised on his deathbed, creates questions about major portions of the end of the masterpiece and may force scholars to reinterpret the multivolume novel.

Proust's works became public property Monday with the expiration of copyrights, ending the 50-year-old monopoly by the French publisher Gallimard.

Four editions of the masterpiece are being published, ranging from inexpensive paperbacks to luxury sets.

Gallimard, which has controlled the work since it appeared in installments between 1913 and 1927, is putting out four heavily-annotated volumes in its Pleiade collection, which has been the standard Proust reference.

Critics say the most exciting work is "Albertine Disparue," a lost manuscript from "Remembrance of Things Past" that is heavily revised. It is 250 pages shorter than the original, which was called "The Fugitive" and published in 1925, three years after Proust's death.

The 238-page "Albertine Disparue" forces a new look at major portions, especially the end of "Remembrance of Things Past." It is published by Grasset and annotated by Nathalie Mauriac, Proust's 31-year-old grandniece, who is the granddaughter of the writer Francois Mauriac.

"Proust changed the place where the character Albertine died," Mauriac told The Associated Press. "That one note gives the whole work an entirely different ring."

In this version, she said, "he reconciles art and passion."

Proust has long been considered one of the most gifted and eccentric of 20th-century writers.

He wrote "Remembrance of Things Past" in bed at night in a cork-lined room in one of the French capital's most elegant neighborhoods. It is a complex study of the human heart and psyche, and a celebration of art.

The novel is filled with striking metaphors and sense imagery, such as the sweet taste of a maitre d'hotel cooking the narrator's entire childhood. It has fascinated generations of literary scholars, linguists and psychoanalysts.

More than half a dozen scholarly journals and literary reviews treating various aspects of Proust's life and work are to be issued before the end of the year.

The manuscript of "Albertine Disparue" came to light by sheer luck. After the death of her grandmother, who was Proust's niece, Nathalie Mauriac and her parents came into the possession of several large cartons filled with papers.

"My father went through them twice, and it was only as he was about to pack them up and put them in the cellar where they would have been forgotten for another 50 years that he found the revised manuscript," she said.

Proust was a brilliant and obsessive stylist who rewrote his convoluted sentences up to 15 times.

"We have copies of his very own books which he marked up, crossing out words and even whole sentences," Ms. Mauriac said.

He often would remove dozens of pages and insert them somewhere else. Experts assume that was his plan with "Albertine Disparue."

Proust corrected the manuscript as he lay dying, Ms. Mauriac said, and scrawled this final message on an envelope containing the revisions:

"On the back of this envelope which contains so many working papers, be careful. The back of the envelope is also a working paper."

For Ms. Mauriac, the changes are structural and would have forced Proust to alter the rest of the novel.

"He simply ran out of time," she said.

College cancels its parade

ST. CLOUD, Minn. (AP) — St. Cloud State University will celebrate homecoming this weekend without the traditional homecoming parade.

The parade Saturday was canceled by organizers who cited drunkenness and rowdiness by some students along the parade route in past years.

Margaret Vos, head of the planning committee, said incidents re-

Teacher beats student to death

BEIJING (AP) — A woman teacher was given a suspended two-year prison sentence for beating a 13-year-old student who later died of his injuries, an official newspaper reported.

Monday's edition of China Women's News, seen Tuesday in Beijing, said the teacher also was placed on three years probation and fined $420.

The report said Wang Xiaoping, a teacher in Niucun village, Shanxi province, hit Duan Yongjun on the hand after he reprimanded him for singing in class and he denied it. When he denied singing a second time, she beat him on the back with a plank, it said.

That night, Duan began vomiting and felt pains in his head, shoulder, back and hand, the report said. He received medical treatment but died, it said.

Man confesses, gives murder plot new twist

MARSHFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Police investigating the killings of seven members of a rural family turned their suspicion from a slain 14-year-old to his wounded uncle after learning that the boy was left-handed while the murder weapon was found in his right hand, officials said Tuesday.

A Missouri Highway Patrol investigator said the uncle, James E. Schnick, admitted during a two-hour interrogation Monday that he was responsible for the shootings on the morning of Sept. 25.

"As far as I'm concerned, it's a confession," Sgt. Tom Martin said. "He told us he did it."

Schnick, 38, of rural Elkland, barefoot and wearing bib overalls and a T-shirt, was taken to court Tuesday on charges that he murdered his wife and six other relatives.

Schnick shook while he stood on crutches before Webster County Associate Circuit Judge Daniel Max Knust, but quietly answered "Yes, sir," when the judge asked if he understood the seven first-degree-murder charges filed against him Monday.

Earlier, Schnick had claimed that he killed his nephew, Kirk Buckner, in a struggle after the youth killed Schnick's wife, Julie, 30. The Schnicks' two children were unharmed.

Deputies then went to the Buckner farm, about five miles away, and found the bodies of Kirk's mother, Jeannette, and three brothers, Dennis, 8, Timmy, 6, and Michael, 2. Later, Kirk's father, Steve Buckner, Mrs. Schnick's brother, was found dead along a road between the two farms.

Schnick was wounded, and police found a gun in Kirk's right hand. Officials said Tuesday that suspicion turned from Kirk to his uncle after they learned that Schnick's wounds were minor, and that the teen-ager was left-handed.

Webster County Sheriff Eugene Fraker said there also were questions about how the gun ended up in Kirk's hand after he suffered the bullet and stab wounds that killed him.

"It's pretty hard to pick up a gun when you're dead, in either hand," the sheriff said at a news conference.

Fraker said no single piece of evidence led authorities to charge Schnick, although several things had emerged in the 10 days since the killings.

"Daily it became more doubtful that our first assumption was correct," said Fraker, who earlier had said authorities were "as sure as we could be" that Kirk Buckner was the killer.

Retrial ordered for racial suit

ATLANTA (AP) — A federal appeals court Tuesday overturned a judge's ruling that there were "vestiges of segregation" in Alabama colleges and universities.

The three-judge panel of the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ordered the case sent back to the U.S. District Court in Alabama for new proceedings before a different judge.

The court said U.S. District Judge U.W. Clemon should have disqualified himself from deciding the case because he "actively participated in the very events and shaped the very facts that are at issue in this suit."

The panel also criticized both sides for failing to settle the matter out of court.

The court did not discuss the merits of the suit, the racial discrimination claim taken up by the Reagan administration against a college system, and apologized somewhat for its decision.

"This court is not impervious to the burden that disqualification at this juncture places on the court system, the litigants and the people of Alabama. We recognize that new proceedings before a new judge will exact a not inconsiderable cost in time, energy and legal fees. But the intensity and complexity of this litigation, however, is a measure of its significance," the court said.

Uncircumcised may face higher AIDS risk

NEW YORK (AP) — Uncircumcised men face an increased risk of catching AIDS from an infected sexual partner, as do men with syphilis, genital herpes or genital warts, new studies show.

"There is a very strong association between lack of circumcision and susceptibility to AIDS infection," Dr. William Cameron of the University of Manitoba in Winnipeg, Canada, said Tuesday.

That conclusion comes from a study of 357 men in Nairobi, Kenya, who visited clinics for treatment of sexually transmitted diseases. Cameron reported at the Interscience Conference on Antimicrobial Agents and Chemotherapy, a meeting devoted to research on infectious diseases.

His colleagues included Francis Plummer of the University of Nairobi and Peter Piot of the Institute of Tropical Medicine in Antwerp, Belgium, both of whom are recognized as authorities on AIDS in Africa.

Cameron also reported that diseases such as syphilis, genital herpes and genital warts that cause ulcers, or open sores, on the genitals can increase a man's risk of catching AIDS from sexual contact with an infected woman.

Such ulcers can allow easier passage of the virus into a man's bloodstream, Cameron said.

A second study presented at the conference underscored the importance of genital ulcers in transmission of disease.

Dr. Thomas Quinn of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore and the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md., reported Tuesday that a study of more than 4,000 people visiting sexually transmitted disease clinics in Baltimore also showed that genital ulcers increased the risk of getting infected with the AIDS virus.

Infection "was strongly associated with a history — or laboratory evidence of — sexually transmitted diseases," including herpes, syphilis and genital warts, Quinn reported.

"Ulcers are important, but lack of circumcision makes a person more susceptible to genital ulcer disease," he said.

He said that while genital ulcer diseases and the lack of circumcision might be partly responsible for the heterosexual spread of AIDS in Africa, the most important factor was contact with prostitutes.

10 candidates file bids for 4 council seats

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Ten candidates have filed nominating petitions seeking election to one of four seats open on the Twin Falls City Council.

Among the candidates are the incumbents, Gale Kleinkopf, Doug Yollmer, Erik Andersen and Jack Miller.

Thomas Condie, Arthur Frantz, Bob Bopp, Robert Geesen, Donald McMurrian and Marie Beams also filed petitions by the deadline Tuesday afternoon.

Miller said he decided Friday that he would seek re-election. The other incumbents had earlier announced their intention to seek another term.

"I think I could really make an impact," added Miller, who operates a construction business.

Condie is an accountant, who's firm had audited city finances annually between 1969 and last year. Condie has also served in a public capacity as a member of the city planning and zoning commission and parks and recreation board.

Frantz said he retired from his dentist practice last week and hoped to "contribute something to civic service."

Frantz served on the planning and zoning commission for seven years.

McMurrian, who manages a country band, said he is wants to become more involved with the community.

He represents people from "all walks of life," said McMurrian, who was defeated two years ago for a council seat.

Bopp said the biggest reason for his candidacy is because the four incumbents went against the vote of the people who rejected consolidation of the police and fire departments, which he is not calling good or bad. He wants to give the public a choice.

He would also like to serve the community, said Bopp, who ran unsuccessfully for council in 1985. Bopp served as the city fire chief until his retirement.

Beams, who owns of World of Wheels, said he wants on the council because he is "a viable citizen," who would like to represent the blue-collar worker not making much money.

Beams is a members of the Citizens for a Better Community group helping raise funds for the city pool.

Geesen, a teacher at St. Edwards Catholic School, said he believed the south side of the city, in which he resides, should have more representation on the council. He added that he believed in children and wanted more recreational facilities for them in addition to the pool.

City residents have until Oct. 23 to register to vote in the Nov. 3 election, said City Clerk Jewel Chandler. City residents can register at the Twin Falls County Courthouse or at City Hall.

Sugar beet group calls meeting to discuss contracts

Amalgamated seeks price scale change; professional negotiator slated to speak

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The Idaho Sugar Beet Growers Association is meeting with its farmers Thursday to explain its position in slow-moving negotiations with Amalgamated Sugar Co. over the price of a crop that has become a mainstay for farmers in a depressed farm economy.

Sugar negotiations have been moving slow as molasses this year after Amalgamated proposed changing the 20-year-old scale used to determine the price paid to producers. The company also has proposed changing the schedule of payments and voiding grower contracts if the U.S. government jerks the sugar price-support system out from under the industry.

The growers association has scheduled a meeting for its members with the growers, professional negotiator John Bushnell at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Burley High School auditorium. This is the first year the association has hired a professional negotiator.

"Sugar beet farmers aren't the only people anxiously awaiting the settlement. The Minidoka County School Board indicated at its Sept. 21 meeting that they will wait until the dispute is settled before planning a plant facilities levy election. "I think we need a plant facilities levy, but I think we should wait until after harvest and see how the economy is," said Minidoka Trustee Russell Holland at that School Board meeting.

The sugar company has a "participating" contract with its growers. Under a participating contract, growers' prices are determined in part by market ups and downs and the price farmers get is determined by the price Amalgamated gets for its sugar.

One stumbling block is an Amalgamated proposal to reduce per-ton payments of about $2, adding up to a total $8 million drop for Amalgamated's Idaho and eastern Oregon growers.

And while negotiations through the summer have produced proposals—counterproposals—among changes in the issues dividing the company and its growers, Amalgamated's proposal to reduce its payments is still a sore point for growers, says Tom Garrard, president of the Cassia County Sugar Beet Growers Association.

"They've changed a little bit and some new ideas have crept in," Garrard says. "But we still don't feel the figures justify any change in the scale."

The growers have asked to look at Amalgamated's books and have commissioned the University of Idaho to produce a study on grower costs.

Those moves were taken because growers questioned Amalgamated's study, justifying its reduced payment schedule.

"Their proposals, their ideas, their thinking, we just can't agree with," Garrard said. "In fact, we feel the figures perhaps bear it out the other way."

"To solve this, we need to document costs and asked to see their books," Garrard said. "That's why we went to the University and that's why we got an unbiased, fair figure on our part."

Garrard is also worried about sending the wrong signal to Washington, D.C., at a time when the Reagan Administration is targeting the sugar program for extinction.

"It's the only government program that's meeting the goal set for it and yet the Reagan Administration is trying to get rid of it," Garrard said. "If we send a signal back to Washington that the growers are growing it for less, that the supports are too high, that may defeat the whole sugar program."

Kimberly indicated it was not a new record.

William Galkin of the Kimberly weather office said records there show there was also no September moisture in 1916, 1961 and 1964.

Normal for September, a major harvest month in southern Idaho, is 5.1 inch, according to records at the Kimberly station.

The total precipitation for the calendar year through Sept. 30 is 6.29 inches, which is just .13 of an inch below normal. However, for the water year of Oct. 1, 1986 through Sept. 30, Galkin reports the total precipitation stands at 7.96 inches, and this is 1.24 inches below average. This includes the unusually light snow fall last winter.

At the same time, the past month • See DRY on Page B2

September, water year register drier than usual

TWIN FALLS — Not only was the month of September below normal in precipitation, but the water year which ended Sept. 30 is 1.24 inches below normal in the local area.

The U.S. Weather Service in Boise describes September conditions for the state as generally below normal in precipitation with above normal temperatures. This resulted in "extreme drought conditions" for parts of southwestern Idaho and moderate to severe drought conditions scattered over the remainder of the state.

While September saw no measurable precipitation this year, the U.S. Weather Service records at

INS foresees trouble with aliens returning

By JANE ROBISON

TWIN FALLS — About 3,000 seasonal agricultural workers could be prevented from returning to the United States and Idaho, in particular, next year unless the Immigration and Naturalization Service changes its rules, an INS official said Tuesday.

"We've seen the problem coming for quite some time, but the bureaucrats in Washington didn't understand it," said Marvin Mohrman, INS district director in Helena, Mont.

The problem is that illegal aliens who applied and received temporary residency status cards are now in jeopardy of losing that status. A backlog in the paperwork has slowed the issuing of permanent cards. Meanwhile, the temporary status cards expire six months after the date issued.

Mohrman said since most of Idaho's seasonal workers return to Mexico for the winter, it means that • See ALIENS on Page B2

Dr. David Stafford performs the operation which will deaden the feeling in a small area of the quarter horse's foot

Horse aid: Leg surgery blocks pain of as-yet incurable navicular disease

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The operation was over in about an hour. When Zitar, an 8-year-old quarter horse from Pocatello, awoke in the recovery room at a local veterinary clinic, he would likely be free of pain from navicular disease in his right hoof.

"It's a major source of chronic lameness in the front feet of horses and quarter horses are particularly susceptible because of the way they bear weight," says Dr. David J. Stafford of the Stafford Equine Medical Center on Kimberly Road.

Stafford says he doesn't know of anyone in the area doing the operation. He says he receives patients from several states.

Dr. Gustave Fackelman of Tufts University in Watertown, Mass., was one of the pioneers in the operation a half dozen years ago, says Dr. Karl White, a horse surgeon at Washington State University in Pullman.

Stafford says he has been working on developing it for his practice for two years. He has done 35 to 40 of the procedures.

The surgery involves removing the nerves to the navicular bone from the normal location above the hoof and then drilling a hole in the first phalanx bone and placing the severed nerve inside of it and sewing the hole up.

This bone placement eliminates a painful overgrowth that has been a side effect of some navicular surgery, Stafford said.

"The operation only deadens the feeling in an area about the size of a quarter in the rear area of the foot. The operation doesn't get at the underlying cause of navicular disease, which is a subject of controversy in the veterinary world," says White of the University of Washington.

Since the horse is insensitive in part of his foot, the owner's eyes have to take the place of the horse's nerves, says White. Following surgery, the owner should be on the lookout for foot problems.

"A horse can run a nail right through and not feel it," says White.

Stafford and White say the operation is a last resort when navicular disease has not responded to medical treatment such as giving the horse

Washington, tribes join Swan Falls fray

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An organization representing Indian tribes in the Northwest says it disagrees with Attorney General Jim Jones on the Swan Falls water rights agreement.

The Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission and the State of Washington recently filed an 11th hour intervention with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission on the Swan Falls issue. The intervention was prompted by concern about the effects of agreement on the fishery in the Columbia River Basin.

"We want to know what kind of effect the Swan Falls agreement will have on the rest of the Pacific Northwest," says Bill Frymire, Washington assistant attorney general.

will do everything in his power to turn back the intervention, Frymire says Washington's intervention is not adversarial.

"Our intervention protects our rights and doesn't cause a problem for the State of Idaho," he said.

The move comes just when the House is in the final stages of approving a bill that would, in part, validate the Swan Falls agreement.

The House Energy and Commerce Committee approved the bill Tuesday.

The fish commission says the agreement doesn't provide enough water for the fishery in the Snake River. The fish commission was created in 1977 to protect the Yakima, Nez Perce, Warm Springs and Umatilla tribes' fish interests.

1984 Swan Falls agreement between Idaho and Idaho Power stemmed from a court decision favorable to IPC that threatened to cripple irrigated agriculture in southern Idaho and tie up water right applications for years.

The agreement guarantees the utility a minimum flow for its hydroelectric dams and controls future water use for development and farming through a screening scheme administered by the state Department of Water Resources.

But FERC, which licenses hydroelectric dams, has yet to approve the agreement though it has had 2 1/2 years to make a decision.

FERC's fears of getting into a precedent-setting issue has been cited as a reason for the delay. But Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, has said he told FERC not to act because he thought a legislative solution could be worked out to end the impasse.

Congressional action is seen by Idaho's delegation and Jones as a way of sealing the Swan Falls issue.

Jones questioned the right of the fish commission and Washington to intervene on Swan Falls. He objected if the Swan Falls bill passes, it will knock out the fish commission and state of Washington interventions.

"It is not a power project relicensing, he said. "It's a proceeding initiated to give the power company protection regarding its existing license and give the state protection so people don't leverage federal against state law," Jones said.

The State of Washington would reconsider its position if the Swan Falls bill passes, says Frymire. "We disagree with the attorney general's argument on Swan Falls," said Rob Luthrop, fish commission policy assistant. There are significant flow problems • See SWAN on Page B2

5 hospitalized after crash

JEROME — Five persons were being treated at St. Benedict's Family Medical Center Tuesday night following a grinding two-car accident on South Lincoln Street in Jerome.

Jerome police were still investigating the accident at press time.

It occurred about 8 p.m. in front of Smith's Food King store at the south entrance of Jerome.

Jerome city officer Bud Machamer said five persons, including three adults and two juveniles, were taken to the hospital in Jerome with injuries, some serious. He said one vehicle had stopped to pull into the shopping center lot where the Smith's store is located, and the second vehicle crashed into the rear of it. Both were severely damaged. Ambulances were called from Jerome and Twin Falls.

Machamer said charges are pending and added he was not able to release names Tuesday night because families of some of the injured were still being located.

Shootings destroy windows

TWIN FALLS — Windows in businesses, homes and vehicles were shot out Monday night in Twin Falls by pellets believed to have been fired from moving vehicles.

Several thousand dollars damage resulted to victims, including heavy losses to several businesses where large windows were damaged.

Police reports show the vandalism occurred in downtown and residential areas of town, and the first reports were as early as 9 p.m.

Wells Motor Co., at 236 Shoshone St. W., reported $800 damage involving a show room window and the window in a car parked near the building.

Valley Christian Supply at 762 Main Ave. N., listed damage at $900 after someone shot through windows in the store. Rex Restaurant on Blue Lakes Boulevard North reported $400 in damage.

Other instances included vehicles and homes in the Flier-Avenue, Park Street and Heyburn-Avenue areas. Police are asking persons who may have information that would assist in identifying the vandals to notify the department.

Man enters innocent plea

TWIN FALLS — Kirk Christiansen, 39, of Twin Falls, pleaded innocent Monday to two felony drug charges during arraignment in 6th District Court.

Christiansen was arrested Sept. 14 and charged with possession of a controlled substance, (cocaine) with intent to deliver, and a second count of possession of marijuana in excess of three ounces.

He was released earlier on $20,000 bond which was continued by the court Monday pending setting of a trial date in district court.

Utahn killed in accident

BURLEY — The victim of a fatal traffic accident near Malta was identified Tuesday by Cassia County officers as Charles H. Bourne, 62, of Garland, Utah.

Lt. Jim Higgins of the Cassia County Sheriff's department, said Bourne had been working in the area. He was traveling north on the Raft River Road, which is also known as the old U.S. Highway 30.

Higgins said Bourne was about 3.5 miles south of Malta at 7:15 a.m. Monday when his small 1986 pickup truck struck a horse on the highway.

The horse was thrown into the windshield and Bourne was pronounced dead at the scene due to massive head and chest injuries.

Damage to the pickup truck was estimated at $6,500. The horse, owned by Lance Udy of Malta, was also killed.

Utah Demos endorse GOP Hatch to fill vacancy on Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anticipating the Senate would reject Robert H. Bork's nomination, two prominent Utah Democrats, Rep. Wayne Owens and former Salt Lake Mayor Ted Wilson, have endorsed GOP Sen. Orrin Hatch for the vacancy on the U.S. Supreme Court.

Owens said Hatch, considered a conservative, is fully qualified for the court and has a judicial temperament.

"Once he got out of this political environment, he would probably be a lot more moderate than some now think," he said Tuesday.

Wilson, seen as the likely Democratic standard-bearer to challenge Republican Gov. Norm Bangert's 1988 re-election bid, echoed Owens' sentiments.

"Hatch is not really the right-wing zealot some see," Wilson said, adding that putting Hatch on the public list would create new opportunities for Democrats in Utah.

"It would pull the cork out of the Utah political bottle," said Wilson, who was in Washington on business for the University of Utah's Hinkley Institute of Politics.

"We (Utah Democrats) will be glad to endorse him. It would be a lot of fun."

In Utah, state Republican Party Chairman Craig Moody acknowledged that if Hatch went to the high court, "It would really put us in a bind here."

"He's the head of our ticket. He brings in a great deal of money — money that can be used to help other Republican candidates — and he'll definitely have a coal effect," Moody said.

"We have many challenges next year, and we can't afford not to have a coal effect. That would hurt us."

However, although Hatch was considered as a nominee to the high court before President Reagan settled on Bork, Moody, Wilson and Owens said they did not realistically expect Hatch to be selected in the wake of a Bork failure in the Senate.

Indeed, Wilson and Owens said three other Mormons — Judge Clifford Wallace, of the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals; Elder Dallin H. Oaks, a former Utah Supreme Court justice who is now a member of the church's Council-of-the-Twelve; and former Solicitor General Lee R. Lee, now a law professor at church-owned Brigham Young University — may be among the top candidates.

Hatch himself, representing a state that is 70 percent Mormon, once served as a church bishop in Pittsburgh and remains active in the faith today.

Meantime, Moody said conversations he's had with Republican Party leaders in Washington, D.C., lead him to believe that Howard Baker, a former U.S. senator and now Reagan's chief of staff, wants the appointment.

"I've also heard the name of Paul Laxalt," Moody said. Laxalt, a former GOP senator from Nevada, is a close friend of the president.

Lawmaker rips utility merger

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Utah Power and Light President Frank Davis says his company has met its commitment to Idaho legislators, but state Senate Republican Floor Leader Mark Rick's of Rexburg is not satisfied.

At issue is whether UP&L kept up its part of a March agreement with lawmakers that it would investigate a possible merger with Pacific Power and Light to drastically reduce utility rates in eastern Idaho.

Idaho Power has among the lowest electric rates in the nation.

Although UP&L looked into a deal with Idaho Power, the company ultimately announced a merger with Oregon-based PacifiCorp that officials said would cut rates 5 percent to 10 percent for customers of both utilities over the next five years.

"You told us to do something and we are trying to do something," Davis told Rick and other government leaders.

A bloc of lawmakers from eastern Idaho introduced a resolution last winter calling for a vote in the region on whether consumers wanted Utah Power or Idaho Power to serve them. They withdrew the measure after getting assurances the two utilities would discuss the sale of Utah Power's service area to Idaho Power.

vasodilators to alleviate the problem. "True navicular disease is not responsive to medical treatment," Stafford says. The way the disease is diagnosed is when the problem is not responsive to medical forms of treatment, he says.

The surgery is performed on both sides of the pastern and it takes about 15 minutes per side to do the job.

Stafford works quickly while Zitar is under general anesthesia breathing 12 times a minute. The gelding is strapped to a custom-made operating table with a hydraulic lift.

was near normal in temperatures. The average temperature for the entire month was 60.2 degrees, which is .07 of a degree below normal. The average maximum or daytime temperature reached 78.7 degrees and the minimum average was 41.67 degrees.

The warmest day in the month was Sept. 1 which recorded a high of 94 degrees and the coldest night was Sept. 17 when the mercury dropped below freezing with a 30-degree low.

Galkin said that marked the end of the growing season and the end of 149 days of frost-free growth for crops and gardens. The last spring day on which a freezing temperature was reported was April 21.

The outlook for this month, according to reports from the U.S. Weather Service in Boise, is for about normal temperatures and precipitation in southern Idaho.

In Magic Valley the high temperatures are expected to range from 60 to 70 degrees through October and lows will be in the 30s. The weather service says residents of Magic Valley can look forward to between one-half and two-thirds of an inch of precipitation.

The Wood River Valley and Camas Prairie should see daytime October temperatures in the 60 to 65 degree range, dropping to the mid-20s to mid-30s at night. Precipitation there is expected to be from .75 of an inch to 1.20 inches for the month.

In the mountain areas of eastern Idaho precipitation could reach as high as 1.25 inches, the weather service says.

lems on the Snake River and something needs to be done, he said.

The (Swan Falls) bill doesn't resolve the issue. It creates a process," Lathrop said. The fish commission wants to be actively involved in it, he said.

Jones questioned why the fish commission and the State of Washington got involved in the issue at such a late hour.

The State of Idaho and IPC filed significant papers in the Swan Falls issue in mid-May 1987, Lathrop said. "Those are the first papers that really dealt with the issue at all," he said.

The Swan Falls bill has evolved through a number of versions since Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, introduced the legislation last January. The Idaho Wildlife Federation objected to the original version forcing harm to fish and wildlife at Deer Flat.

The latest one says federal agencies and IPC should come to an agreement to study the impact of stream flows on fish and wildlife resources. The study would then be submitted to Congress.

FERC would have to issue a decision on Swan Falls specifying that the agreement is not inconsistent with IPC's hydroelectric licenses, the bill says. Another provision directs FERC to say the agreement is not imprudent with reference to a section of the Federal Power Act pertaining to interstate electricity sales.

There is a section pressuring legal protection for fish and wildlife in the Snake River habitat and existing water rights.

And the bill preserves the right of Gov. Cecil Andrus to get involved in the negotiations regarding fish and wildlife studies to be done by federal agencies and IPC.

their cards will expire and they will be prevented from returning next spring unless something is done.

The effects Idaho more than any other spring because most of the workers return home to Mexico, Mohrman said.

Idaho Senators Jim McClure and Steve Symms wrote a letter to Rick Norton, INS associate commissioner of examinations, this week and urged changes in the rules.

"Immediate action is necessary to avoid a situation that will be difficult or impossible to control," said the senators in a prepared statement.

Mohrman said Washington officials were meeting Tuesday to try and resolve the problem.

"Basically, we just need a rule change to allow them to be admitted next year with the expired card," he said.

Mohrman said Magic Valley farmer George Grant, president of the Snake River Farmers Association, first brought the problem to the attention of INS officials. Grant said Monday he thought the problem could be resolved.

When we designed the procedure it took about one hour on each side. Obviously I have got it down," says Stafford.

The foot is elevated with a nylon rope. Coral Stafford, his assistant and wife, shaves the area where the 1½-inch incision will be made and then she sprays the surgical area with disinfectant.

A tourniquet is wrapped above the pastern. "This removes the blood from the surgical field so the very precious little nerve can be isolated without trauma. Otherwise, you can't see it," Stafford says.

The leg is draped in a sterile plastic wrap and a small cut is made in the material where the incision will be made.

When Stafford isolates the milky-colored nerve, he cuts it and drills a 1½-inch hole into the first phalanx bone and places the nerve into the hole and sews it up.

To get to the other side of the leg, Zitar has to be flipped over while still under anesthesia. Definitely, not a one-person job with a 1,100-pound horse. Stafford's other assistant Joe Martinic helps do the flipping and assists in other aspects of the operation. Before Zitar is put in the recovery room, Stafford wraps the incision in a surgical-sock to keep down swelling and prevent infection.

Ten minutes after the last stitch is tied Zitar is awake and recovering in a padded room. He will be released from the hospital the next day and with post-operative care, the owner can be back in the saddle in 21 days.

The operation costs $350 to $600. White of the University of Washington calls the operation a "reasonable technique." Whether the operation should be done depends on the severity of the problem, the value of the horse, how the owner expects to use the animal and how capable the owner is, the doctors say.

State, federal agencies squabbling over 2 seized aircraft

BOISE (AP) — A dispute between the state and the U.S. Attorney for Idaho over who should receive two seized airplanes has convinced the Idaho Department of Law Enforcement chief to drop out of a joint drug enforcement task force.

Idaho Law Enforcement Department Director Mack Richardson said Monday the state is quitting because of a "breach of trust" by U.S. Attorney Maurice Ellsworth.

Richardson said Ellsworth reneged on an agreement by federal authorities to give the state a $144,000 twin-engine Beechcraft Duke and a $19,500 single-engine Piper 12.

But Ellsworth contends no deal was made and said the state planned to use the Beechcraft to ferry Gov. Cecil Andrus, not for anti-drug operations, as required by law.

The planes were seized in April from Linus W. Bowman of Idaho Falls over alleged drug transactions, according to a civil warrant filed in U.S. District Court in Boise. Under federal law, such property can be confiscated and used for law enforcement purposes.

The forfeiture of Bowman's planes has yet to be validated by a court. While no criminal charges have been filed against him, Bowman is under investigation by a federal grand jury.

Richardson claims members of the task force, which is headed by Ellsworth, said in April the state could have the planes. In the Bowman case, the task force included the state, the Bonneville County sheriff's office and five other federal agencies.

"We wanted those aircraft and we were told we could have them and all of a sudden we had the rug pulled out from under us," Richardson said.

"There was some discussion. There was never any agreement regarding the airplanes," Ellsworth said. "I would never agree to anything like that until the litigation is complete."

"Their proposal was basically to make it (the Beechcraft) an executive aircraft for the governor," Ellsworth said. "Mack Richardson said there was no pressurized aircraft in the state fleet and the governor wanted it."

The governor had no comment in the matter, Andrus press secretary Marc Johnson said.

Ellsworth said the planes would likely be sold and the money divided among task force members.

Ed Courtney, resident agent for the DEA in Boise, said he approved the request, as did the northwest regional supervisor in Seattle.

The request, which said the planes would be used for law enforcement, was forwarded last month to the Department of Justice's asset forfeiture office. A final decision on the distribution of property, should a court turn it over to the government, would be made by the Justice Department.

Campaign reaches its goal

BOISE (AP) — Idaho First National Bank has reached the goal it set for new loans and deposits over the past six months to trigger its donation of $500,000 to an Idaho "Economic Action Fund."

The "Idaho Wants You" campaign, kicked off statewide in early May, promised contributions to economic development from Idaho's largest bank equal to one-half of 1 percent of all opening balances for new deposits and loans generated from May to October, up to a maximum contribution of $500,000.

Bob Lane, Idaho First president and chief executive officer, announced on Tuesday that the goal had been reached. The bank held simultaneous news conferences at Boise, Twin Falls, Idaho Falls, Pocatello, Coeur d'Alene and Lewiston.

"We've done something very few, if any, banks in the country have ever done, and that is to take our Economic Action Fund message door-to-door to households throughout the state," Lane said in a press release.

Idaho First's seven-member Economic Action Council, made up of business and civic leaders, will distribute the money contributed by the bank. Lane said the group was reviewing applications for grants and selecting recipients.

The first recipient, named Tuesday, was Friends of KUID-TV Inc. The application was submitted by Russell Spain, manager of the public television station in Moscow. KUID will share the grant of more than $8,000 with public TV outlets in Boise and Pocatello.

The three stations will use the money to produce 36 30- and 60-second television spots urging Idaho residents to enjoy their own state first on vacations.

Lane said the council would give highest priority in approving other grants to those proposals that would create jobs, where other funds are not already available, and to requests that leverage the grant money to create spinoff benefits for other businesses.

"We were confident that we'd make the half-million-dollar goal of the Economic Fund on schedule," Lane said. "Actually, we beat it by a few weeks, something that really reflects positively on all the people of Idaho and their sincere interest in economic development."

Maneuvers for evasion lead to crash

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Two F-16 aircraft collided almost head-on over the Nellis Range last July while flying evasive maneuvers during a low-level bombing mission, according to an Air Force investigation report.

The report obtained by the Las Vegas Review-Journal does not assign blame for the crash, which cost the lives of the two pilots flying the $10 million aircraft.

A second report from an independent board of investigators is due out next week.

The report was prepared by a board of safety inspectors and released by the Air Force Inspection and Safety Center.

The investigation determined that the crash occurred when the two pilots lost "situational awareness" and became confused in the simulated combat environment.

"Killed in the crash were Indian Springs, Nev. were Maj. Michael Lotti, 42, a wing instructor, and Capt. Alexander Rupp, 29, his student.

Both were experienced pilots with thousands of hours of flying time in the F-16 jets.

Lotti and Rupp were part of a team of four F-16 pilots who flew a simulated low-level attack mission the morning of July 24.

Senate condemns Soviet Union missile tests near Hawaii

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted 96-0 Tuesday to condemn the Soviet Union for "utter disdain" of international standards of behavior in firing test missiles at a Pacific Ocean target zone near Hawaii and said the exercise increased the risk of nuclear war.

The non-binding "sense of the Senate" resolution was adopted after critics failed in repeated attempts to soften its harsh language.

It calls for an "immediate apology to the American people" and for assurances "that tests this near U.S. territory will not occur in the future."

Sponsored by Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., the resolution said that the Soviet missile tests last week involved "probable new violations" of the unratified SALT II arms control treaty between Washington and Moscow.

In its operative paragraph, the resolution declares that Congress "condemns the Soviet Union for its actions that demonstrate an utter disdain for civilized and acceptable standards of international behavior and demands a public and immediate apology to the American people as well as assurances that tests this near U.S. territory will not occur in the future."

It calls for President Reagan to report to Congress on the incident within 10 days and to provide details of Soviet responses to U.S. diplomatic protests.

The resolution was attached as an amendment to a pending State Department spending bill which authorizes $3.6 billion for the 1988 fiscal year which began Oct. 1, far less than the $4.7 billion President Reagan had requested.

In debate, Wallop and other senators contended that the tests were an apparent practice for a nuclear strike on the United States and said that if there had been even a slight mistake the dummy missiles could have fallen on populated areas of the Hawaiian Islands, not in the Pacific.

The Pentagon said last week that the Soviets aimed a powerful light — possibly a laser beam — at two U.S. planes observing the splash-down of the dummy missiles, "disturbing" the eyesight of a co-pilot on one of the planes for 10 minutes.

The resolution called that "interference with national technical means of verification" provided for in the unratified SALT II treaty and said that and the other "prohibit SALT II violations are 'inconsistent with improving relations between the two countries and indicate a contempt for the objectives of arms control.'"

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., had attempted to modify the amendment but was thwarted in a series of parliamentary maneuvers by Wallop.

Then he and all other senators who were present voted to approve the original language.

In other action, the Senate voted 98-0 to link the future provision of defense articles or services to the Peoples Republic of China to a presidential certification that the Chinese government is "acting in good faith and in a timely manner to resolve human rights issues in Tibet."

Soviets to inspect Utah site

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet experts will visit U.S. chemical weapons facilities next month in Tooele, Utah, the State Department announced Tuesday.

"We are pleased that the Soviets have finally accepted our invitation," spokesman Charles E. Redman said.

The Soviets had refused to join experts from other nations in visiting the facilities in 1983. The Nov. 19-20 tour will include an inspection of a chemical weapons bunker and procedures for destroying old chemical weapons.

"An important element of our program includes the destruction of existing and aging stockpiles," Redman said.

He rejected Soviet charges that U.S. plans to produce a new form of chemical weapons this year could scuttle talks in Geneva on an international ban on chemical weapons.

The State Department official said the U.S. effort to develop new binary weapons was a "modest modernization program." He said the aim was a safer and more flexible deterrent.

Redman said the United States was not trying to match what the Soviets have done, but simply to "raise serious doubts in the minds of the Soviet leadership as to the utility of initiating chemical warfare."

The Soviets announced in April that they had halted production of chemical weapons. U.S. production stopped in 1969. Initial steps will be taken in December to develop binary weapons — those using two chemical agents that become lethal only when combined.

Soviet Lt. Gen. Anatoly Kuntsevich said Monday at a press conference in Moscow that "the U.S. binary program creates serious obstacles, if it does not torpedo altogether, the negotiations" in the Swiss city.

The next session is due to begin Nov. 30.

President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev agreed at their first summit meeting in Geneva in November 1985 to intensify talks on chemical weapons and on halting their proliferation to other countries.

The two sides have held six rounds of talks since then on chemical warfare and two rounds on nonproliferation.

New FBI director back in hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director designate William S. Sessions, victim of a bleeding ulcer, suffered a relapse that sent him back to the hospital Tuesday and forced indefinite postponement of his swearing-in, FBI officials said.

Sessions, a former federal judge, was hospitalized for observation and treatment in San Antonio, Texas, where he had returned after being released from the George Washington University Medical Center here last Saturday.

"Judge Sessions is believed to have experienced more bleeding, which is not uncommon in these cases," Dr. Richard Ruble, Sessions' private physician, was quoted in an FBI statement.

Burpee nominated to head SAC unit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has nominated one of the key aides to the Joint Chiefs of Staff to head the Strategic Air Command's 16th Air Force, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

Assuming he is confirmed by the Senate, Lt. Gen. Richard A. Burpee will succeed Lt. Gen. James E. Light Jr. in the job.

Light, who will retire next Feb. 1 after more than 37 years of active-duty service, has commanded the 16th Air Force at March Air Force Base, Calif., since August 1983.

Burpee, 55, a native of Delton, Mich., now is director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He would retain his rank of a three-star general in the new job.

Sandinistas begin pullout; Ortega raps Reagan conditions

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The government has begun pulling its troops out of three war zones in northern Nicaragua in preparation for a 30-day, unilateral cease-fire, the Sandinista newspaper Baricada reported Tuesday.

President Daniel Ortega left to address the United Nations in New York after saying President Reagan's new conditions for ending aid to the Contra rebels could destroy peace efforts in Central America and lead to U.S. military intervention.

Ortega is to address the U.N. General Assembly on Thursday.

"The United States is working against the Central American pacification plan and that is why we are going to the United Nations to obtain the support of the international community and the United States itself," Ortega told reporters during a brief stop in Mexico City.

"Up to now, Nicaragua and the Central American governments have been working for peace, but it all depends on the attitude the U.S. government takes and allows us Central Americans to work along the road toward peace."

Ortega went to the Mexican capital and then boarded a commercial jet for New York.

The unilateral cease-fire declared by his leftist Sandinista government takes effect at midnight Wednesday. It will last until Nov. 7, the deadline for implementing key provisions of a regional peace plan signed by the presidents of Nicaragua, Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador and Costa Rica.

Ortega declared the partial truce last Wednesday and said it would permit any Contra to turn in his weapons and take advantage of a standing government amnesty.

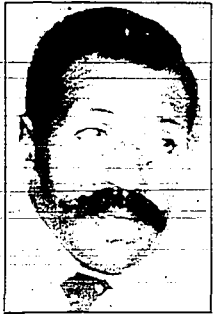

Contra leaders have called the cease-fire "unacceptable and ridiculous." They said they will keep up their 5-year-old fight to overthrow the Sandinistas, who seized power in July 1979 in a revolution that ended 42 years of rule by the rightist, pro-American Somoza family.

The Sandinista government refuses to negotiate with the Contras. It says it will talk only directly to the United States, which it blames for the continued insurgency.

Ortega is scheduled to outline the conditions for ending Contra aid in a speech Wednesday at the Organization of American States. The conditions reportedly include negotiating with the Contras and moving up elections scheduled for 1990.

Speaking to reporters after the opening of a national reconciliation conference on Monday, Ortega said Reagan's stance is "dangerous, out of touch with reality" and could "create a new military situation where the intervention of American troops cannot be ruled out."

The regional peace plan, signed Aug. 7 in Guatemala City, calls for cease-fires, democratic reforms and an end to foreign aid.

COL. SIVITVENI RABUKA
Ethnic Fijians to govern

Coup chief calls Fiji a republic

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — Military coup leader Col. Sivitveni Rabuka formally declared Fiji a republic Tuesday and proclaimed the right of the "indigenous Fijian race" to govern this South Pacific island nation.

Rabuka said Fiji would have a new constitution to guarantee the political dominance of ethnic Fijians over the larger Indian community.

Under the constitution that took effect when Fiji gained independence from Britain in 1970, Fiji was a parliamentary democracy and Queen Elizabeth II was head of state.

"I hereby proclaim that as from this day forth Fiji is declared a republic," Rabuka announced at Tuesday-midnight on army-controlled Radio Fiji. "I reaffirm the indigenous Fijian race is empowered with the land and right to govern themselves for their advancement and welfare."

The declaration came 24 hours after Rabuka's talks broke down with the queen's representative, who led an interim government between two coups, and with the leaders of Fiji's two rival political parties.

On May 14, Rabuka toppled the ethnic Indian-dominated government of Fiji, 2,000 miles northeast of Sydney, Australia.

Cease-fire commission to be set up

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The government and leftist rebels agreed Tuesday to form a joint cease-fire commission, but did not manage to settle issues of the 6-year-old civil war that has taken an estimated 65,000 lives.

Minutes after the limited agreement was announced, guerrilla leaders were casting doubt on the commission's ability to create an effective cease-fire in accordance with the peace plan adopted by Central American presidents Aug. 7. They said the two sides still had "very distant positions" on the matter.

The war began in October 1979. Human rights groups say most of its victims have been non-combatants.

President Jose Napoleon Duarte said he would ask the armed forces for a unilateral cease-fire if the commission could not accomplish a truce, but indicated soldiers would be authorized to return fire.

"This government will never impede the armed forces from complying with their constitutional duty to defend and protect the sovereignty, the territory and the security of the state," he said.

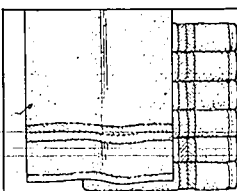

The Sandinista military, which receives extensive U.S. aid, is widely considered to have gained the upper hand and has little desire to make concessions to the guerrillas.

Agreement on forming the commission was announced in a joint statement read to reporters outside the Vatican Embassy early Tuesday by Monsignor Arturo Rivera Damas, Roman Catholic archbishop of El Salvador, after a 15-hour negotiating session.

Iraq threatens retaliatory air blitz on Iranian cities

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq threatened on Tuesday to answer the latest Iranian missile attacks on Baghdad by blitzing Iranian cities with air raids, artillery and new long-range missiles that can reach Tehran.

Later in the day, it said Iraqi jets raided a "large naval target," usually meaning a ship. There was no immediate confirmation of the attack, which the Iraqis said occurred at 6:30 p.m.

Two missiles hit the Iraqi capital Monday night and early Tuesday, killing or wounding an unspecified number of people. Iran had fired two dozen Soviet-made Scud-B missiles into Baghdad beginning late last year, but these were the first attacks since Feb. 13.

A Cypriot vessel was burning out of control Tuesday off Iran in the Persian Gulf, where Iran and Iraq have been at war since September 1980. Iraqi warplanes set it ablaze Monday during raids on two Iranian oil terminals in which four other tankers were damaged. Maritime salvage executives in the gulf area said 15 tugboats tried to extinguish the fire, but finally gave up and the crew abandoned ship.

About 380 commercial vessels have been attacked by both sides since the war began. The Shining Star is the first total loss reported.

Government newspapers in Baghdad said the military would make the first use of a new type of Iraqi-manufactured missile to attack Iranian cities, indicating Tehran would be the main target.

They said the missile's range was just over 400 miles, which means it could reach the Iranian capital of 6 million people from Iraqi territory.

Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency quoted the Revolutionary Guards minister, Mohsen Rafiqdoust, as saying Iran had improved the performance of surface-to-surface missiles such as those that exploded in Baghdad, whose population is 6 million. He did not elaborate, but warned of more attacks.

Rebel wants reform, not power

The Los Angeles Times

MANILA, Philippines — Rebel army Col. Gregorio Honasan said in a taped TV interview Tuesday that he wants President Corason's government to remain in power, but demanded that it be cleaned and made strong.

Honasan, 36, who led an unsuccessful attempt to seize power Aug. 28, said, "I am not in favor of any other government except the present one, dispensation properly managed, only reconciliatory, competent and devoid of vindictiveness.

His statement, which was aired on the private television channel 7, appeared to indicate a change in mood toward the Aquino government.

Honasan denied having links with the CIA or with a Nationalist Provisional Government claimed to have been established by another rebel officer, Lt. Col. Reynaldo Cabaatuan, a supporter of former President Ferdinand E. Marcos. Honasan, who is still at large, said that Mrs. Aquino should face up to the challenge instead of blaming the Marcos regime for current problems.

He said the Philippine situation was deteriorating and the nation was "losing a lot of lives daily because of (her) inability to address the (Communist) insurgency and the peace and order problems." The interview has further embarrased the government, which has been unable to find Honasan, and forced chief Gen. Fidel Ramos has said that the longer Honasan evades arrest, the more the public loses confidence in the ability of the government to enforce authority.

Chinese arrest 60; brace for more

LHASA, Tibet (AP) — About 60 people shouting the name of Tibet's exiled god-king marched Tuesday to a government office, where armed Chinese security forces quickly arrested them, herded them into trucks and drove them away.

The marchers, believed to be Buddhist monks in street-clothes, did not resist arrest. About 2,000 bystanders made no attempt to help them or four monks who were arrested at about the same time in the Jokhang Temple square, where pro-independence protests last week left at least 14 people dead.

The Chinese government has sent 1,000 armed police to Lhasa, capital of the remote Himalayan region. of 2 million people, said a source in the local Public Security Bureau.

The troops are to guard against further unrest on Wednesday, the 37th anniversary of the day China occupied Tibet, said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Tibetans and Chinese questioned on the street said they expected the anniversary to be quiet because of fears that police would fire on protesters.

Western witnesses said police fired last Thursday on demonstrators who burned a police station and vehicles in the temple square.

Western doctors in Lhasa said eight Tibetans were shot to death and one unidentified Chinese was stoned to death. Authorities said six Chinese police were killed. It was not known if the Chinese was one of the six.

There was a smaller, less violent protest on Sept. 27 that resulted in about two dozen arrests. Tuesday's march was the first protest since Thursday.

About 100 marchers raised their fists and chanted the name of the Dalai Lama, Tibet's former civil and religious leader, who fled to exile in India after a 1969 uprising against Chinese rule. China annexed Tibet in 1950.

The marchers did not wear the saffron robes usually worn by monks, but they came from the direction of the Drepung monastery, one of three leading monasteries whose members led the independence demonstrations last week. The monastery is about five miles west of Lhasa.

Western witnesses said a few were arrested quietly on the way and that others left the march.

About 60 marchers continued to the gate of the Tibetan regional government office. About 100 security forces carrying submachine guns and automatic pistols immediately herded them onto trucks.

Stocks take record plunge

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices plunged Tuesday, carrying the Dow Jones industrial average down nearly 100 points in a record drop.

The plunge came as investors were unnerved by interest rate worries and a handful of pessimistic forecasts.

"Despite the slide, many analysts said they still believed Wall Street's bull market was alive."

The Dow Jones average, which tracks the movement of 30 blue chip stocks, plummeted 81.55 points to 2,548.63. The drop wiped out the previous record for a one-day point fall in the closely watched barometer, reached Sept. 11, 1986. On that day, the average fell 86.61 points because of concerns about rising interest rates.

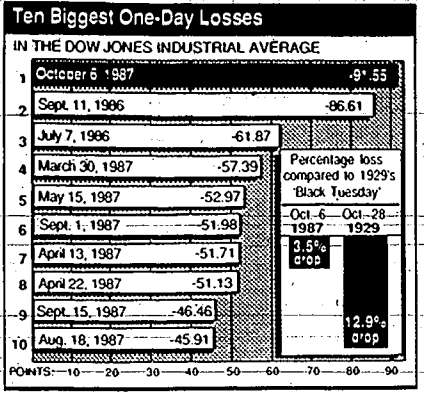

The same specter of rising interest rates started Tuesday's plunge.

Analysts said the market began the day with an eye on the falling Treasury bond market. Treasury issues "declined" partly because of trader worries that the Federal Reserve Board would tighten credit.

Stock investors in turn feared rising interest rates would eat into corporate profits.

There also were concerns that higher yields would make some bonds a more attractive investment than stocks and would entice money away from Wall Street, said Michael Metz, a vice president with Oppenheimer & Co.

"As the session" wore on, bond prices improved but the stock market's decline picked up momentum fueled by negative predictions for the market's performance.

Several analysts — led by Robert Prechter of the Elliott Wave Theorist newsletter — said the market had reached its near-term high and would now decline.

Investors responded with selling that was exacerbated by computerized trades. "This thing fed on itself," said Lewis Smith, an analyst with Bear Stearns & Co.

Smith and other analysts, while calling investors nervous, were not overly concerned by Tuesday's plunge and issued their own predictions for the market.

"It's not the beginning of a great big decline," said Smith. "This is the final touch" to the market's correction, or pause in its climb, that began in August, he said.

Leading the New York Stock Exchange most active list Tuesday was Tennessee, which rose 1 3/4 to 61 1/4, amid speculation it might be a takeover target.

Among the big losers were IBM, which plunged 5 1/2 to 151, Digital Equipment, which fell 3 1/4 to 194, Dupont, down 4 1/4 to 118 1/4, Merck, which skidded 7 to 201, Philip Morris, off 4 to 113 1/4, and CBS, down 4 1/4 to 21 1/4.

Advancing issues included Penn Central, up 1/4 to 5 3/4, and Lockheed, which picked up 1/4 to close at 56 1/4.

Declining issues outpaced advancers by a margin of about 4 to 1 on the NYSE, with 1,322 stocks down, 326 up and 321 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 176.6 million shares, against 159.65 million in the previous session.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 208.94 million shares.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed stocks fell 4.46 to 178.98.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrial stocks fell 11.44 to 372.02, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 8.86 to 319.22.

Charles R. Carlisle, deputy director-general of the 96-nation General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, or GATT, praised the newly negotiated accord as a "balanced agreement" which he said could help provide a model for trade liberalization talks now under way in Geneva.

The talks have been slow in getting going, Carlisle conceded that there was "some skepticism about how far we can get in this negotiation prior to the change in American administrations" after next year's presidential elections.

It is expected to take the Reagan administration and Canadian officials several weeks to put the document in final form. "Obviously, there is going to be controversy on it, just as there is in Yeutter claimed that his original remarks had not been for public consumption, but rather were aimed at U.S. editorial writers who he said had "downplayed the constructive role" in the talks by Peter Murphy, the chief U.S. negotiator.

Trus-Joist sues over treatment of planks

BOISE (AP) - An Oregon company botched the preservation of laminated wooden planks that were to be used in the decks of two U.S. Navy minesweepers, according to a federal lawsuit filed in Boise.

Trus-Joist Co. contends in the suit filed Monday in U.S. District Court that McCormick & Baxter, Creosoting Co. of Portland breached its contract to preserve 251 of Trus-Joist's Micro-Lam laminated wooden planks.

But Trus-Joist alleges in the lawsuit that after the treatment, the planks were "black, dirty and oily," and that their surfaces could not be glued or painted. Peterson rejected the shipment and Trus-Joist could not use the planks for any other purpose, the complaint says.

The Celion treatment was supposed to preserve the wood but make it appear untreated, and to leave it "clean, glueable and paintable" for finishing once installed on the ship.

The Celion treatment was supposed to preserve the wood but make it appear untreated, and to leave it "clean, glueable and paintable" for finishing once installed on the ship.

Trus-Joist requested damages from McCormick & Baxter for negligence and breach-of-contract-to-be determined by a jury.

Spicy chicken

These 3 party dishes pack a surprise twist

As the centerpiece for stylish — and easy — dining, chicken has a lot to recommend it. A mild and agreeable bird, it absorbs flavors readily and is compatible with a variety of seasonings.

When you buy it in convenient, fast-cooking cuts, such as wings and boned breasts, it speeds meal preparation and offers versatility.

Breads are great on the grill, superb in salads and handy in casseroles. Wings make nifty appetizers. Another bonus: chicken is a low-calorie protein source.

So next time you want to serve an impressive party supper and keep the cooking simple, think chicken and try one of these dishes. Chef Blake Swihart developed them for easy entertaining. Each uses a convenient cut of chicken in combination with other convenience foods. You'll find that each recipe offers a special twist — something a little different than expected.

In Sonora Chicken Casserole, for instance, a pinch of cumin, some Monterey Jack cheese with jalapeno peppers and bottled salsa add piquancy to a layered arrangement of chicken, breast strips and chicken flavored stuffing. Hometown Hot Wings, Chef Swihart's version of the famous dish from Buffalo, uses a packaged Italian salad dressing mix as the flavor base for both the fiery sauce and the cooling blue cheese dip. And in the third dish — Fajitas de Chicken with Guacamole — salad dressing mix is combined with rum, lime juice and oil to marinate chicken strips and vegetables. It is also used to spice up guacamoles.

Although fajitas are traditionally made with steak, well-seasoned chicken makes a fine substitute. The fajitas should be served in rolled-up tortillas.

Any of these three hot 'n' spicy dishes can be offered with a cool pasta and vegetable salad to round out a fine and festive meal.

EASY ENTERTAINING TIPS

Chef and food consultant Swihart doesn't mind taking his work home with him. He entertains frequently, favoring backyard parties in good weather. To create a festive atmosphere, he recommends using lots of bright colors and dazzling patterns. Some suggestions:

- Buy an assortment of colorful serving bowls, dishes and platters at garage sales and flea markets. They don't need to match — the livelier, the better.

- To create easy salads full of different colors, shapes and textures, use frozen vegetables. Simply thaw mixtures, such as broccoli, cauliflower and carrots and combine them with lettuce or pastas and an Italian salad dressing. Add olive mixtures for extra contrast.

- To dress outdoor tables, buy odd remnants of fabric with beautiful floral prints, paisleys or other designs. Use iron-on tape to hem or seam the cloths quickly.

- To extend your picnic table for a large party, hinge two plywood planks together and place them on top of the table. In between parties, the table top folds for storage.

A greenhorn goes on cattle drive to Gooding Cow Camp

Calves are branded, given shots and castrated before being driven to summer range

By NANCY JOY JONES
Times-News correspondent

Some of us who were raised in the West aren't necessarily cowgirls (or boys). I know my adolescent love affair with horses lasted just long enough to dream I was Elizabeth Taylor in "National Velvet." After I really looked in the mirror, I went on to something else.

But the mystique of driving cattle through the open range was a very familiar part of growing-up, even though my actual experience was sitting in a car driving slowly through a "bunch" of cows that were in our way on the road.

Well, I've now seen it and experienced a bit of it firsthand.

A few months ago, Virginia Mink of Gooding offered to let me come and watch — as they — and other families drove their herds (see I'm a quick study) above Fairfield for summer range.

Implicit in the offer, was that I was welcome to help, but don't get in the way. She just knew I was a greenhorn.

We loaded the car with food for lunch and headed north. When I get nostalgic about things like this, I just look at my automatic shift and the cool air conditioning and know

Cowboy cookbook roams the West, Mexico, Australia

It's more than a cookbook for browsing. It's a history in itself. Now don't let that put you off, because some really good and interesting food goes along with all the lore.

The "Trail Boss's Cowboy Cookbook" is a fun addition to your cookbook shelf, and not only because it serves a good cause. The book is published by the Society for Range Management and the local proceeds help with range improvements, control burns, streambank habitat managements, etc. That's the good cause.

But one of the best reasons to buy the book is that it fits my own criteria of "the browse factor."

In fact, the browse factor here is much larger than I first anticipated. Recipes and notes from Western states I expected. The bonus is the recipes from every state, Mexico and that Career woman-turned-homemaker prefers bliss of kitchen

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Gayle Thompson has been a career woman. Until 1984, she was an operations officer for U.S. Bancorp, in Portland, Ore. But now she is a homemaker with the usual variety of domestic duties. Of the two, she says she enjoys working at home and trying out new things in the kitchen more.

"My mother calls me her 'nester,'" she says. "I've always been fairly domestic."

Thompson became acquainted with the kitchen at a tender age helping her mom bake cookies. "In fact, she needed the help, too, because I have two sisters and a brother," she says. She has her own three assistants now, to help with the business of baking. There is 7-year-old Aaron, 8-year-old Vanessa and 3-year-old Nathan. So far, the youngest, Scott who is just four months old, is no help at all in the kitchen. But Nathan is especially enthusiastic about cooking. "He'll put mom's apron on," she says, "and get out the measuring cups."

She says she never bakes a batch of cookies without at least two of them lending their hands with measuring and tasting the dough. "They're helpful. They know if they want cookies; it helps to get mother in the kitchen, and help her measure."

Their dad, Dr. Tim Thompson, pitches in,

"He's not afraid to help out in the kitchen. He does a lot of the cooking for us, because of the baby. It's a good role model for them," she says.

Gayle and Tim also work together on home canning projects. "We usually plan on doing it on a Saturday, and we don't get too much else done," she says.

A day and a half a week, she works as a receptionist in Tim's office. She says this gives her an opportunity to be around adults.

Thompson says people kept telling her it would be difficult to cope with four children.

"But, I don't think it's any different than having two or three," she says. "I've been very lucky. I haven't had any colicky babies. They have their moments, but don't we all?"

Actually, the Thompsons have two "babies." There's Scott, of course, and then there's seven-week-old Gretchen, a German shorthair.

While the children help with food preparation, next year Gretchen will do her part to assist Tim in hunting birds for the table. Gayle says Tim enjoys game bird hunting, and the couple is trying out recipes for cooking them, but adds that she is not a game eater. "Give me a chicken any day. The first time I ate pheasant, he said, 'Watch out for the buckshot as you eat it... We cook it, but I try not to eat too much of it. I don't want to eat any buckshot.'"

And, although she admits she is not real crazy about elk meat, she is giving it a chance. "It all tastes kind of wild to me."

Thompson has a recipe for elk stew, but she says she prefers to mix it with beef to tame the game down, so it is not overpowering.

ELK STEW

Serves 6-8
Cut up about 2 pounds of stew meat, and brown lightly in a 3 quart bowl; add:
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon pepper
4 carrots, sliced
1 onion; chopped

Cattle

 I'd never have made a great (or even good) pioneer woman. I know my fate would have been one of those lonely graves along the Oregon trail.

When you drive between Gooding and Fairfield there is one of the most glorious vistas any place. We turned right at the fork in the road where you would ordinarily head for the ski area. That was where the overnight and horse trailers had been left by the actual driving crew. We gathered more supplies and headed on.

I guess I never really thought about it, but those cows (calves and bulls too) get tired. And when they get tired, they act like a 2-year-old human child. They just stop and drop. Sometimes those that lagged behind were right in the middle of the road. They don't move over, so you just edge around and send back a truck to pick them up.

When we reached the site of the Gooding Cow Camp, lots of folks were waiting for us. They had put up makeshift fences and were cutting the bulls out of the big collective herd of cattle belonging to Gooding families. This annual drive has become a sort of reunion for the younger members of the families that no longer live in the area. They bring their husbands and children and reminisce about all the years they've been doing this. At one time I counted more than 30 people ranging in age from 4 weeks to 75 years.

During lunch, the fenced-in cattle were bellowing and still pawing the ground. Everyone ignored the bulls, but frankly they made me nervous. It was fun for about the first hour after lunch (as most jobs are) and then it got to be sort of routine as these real cowboys (and girls) roped the calves and drag them to center stage.

Some of the bulls didn't want to leave. Personally, if they wanted to stay, I'd have let them stay. Especially when they put their heads down and pawed the earth like in a Hemingway novel.
 Some of the cows got really upset and followed the calves, trying to save their babes from whatever fate awaits. And what awaited them: was not too pleasant (especially for the male calves).
 They were all branded (how do they keep all the different built calves separated in their minds when they're all jumbled together?) and given shots and notched in the ear. Then the junior cowboys jump on for a short, quick ride. Those calves want to get out of there!
 The one modern touch, to this generations-old activity, was a metal can with a propane burner keeping the branding irons hot.
 The whole day was a great experience. You know, I really think there are enough people in the world that would just love to see one of these latter-day cattle drives. I'll bet you could sell tickets. It's really that much fun.
 But if you go, just stand back and don't get in the way. This is for real, even if the day seemed like something out of a fun Western movie.
 Thanks to all of you at the Gooding cow camp. May I come along next year?

 1 1/2 teaspoon Morton's Tenderquick salt
 8 teaspoons salt
 2 teaspoons black pepper
 2 teaspoons garlic powder
 1 teaspoon cayenne pepper
 1 1/2 teaspoons cardamom
 3 teaspoons Accent or MSG
 1 teaspoon marjoram
 1 ounce (2 tablespoons) liquid smoke
 1 ounce (2 tablespoons) water
 Mix the ground jerky with the spices. Roll meat between sheets of wax paper to 1/4-inch thickness. Flip over and replace top sheet of wax paper with fresh piece. Then flip back over and remove other piece of wax paper and brush meat with liquid smoke and water.
 Then replace wax paper on both sides and bake in an oven at lowest temperature for 3 to 4 hours. When meat is cooked and dry, cut into strips.

 1 cup chopped pecans (I also liked leaving them whole)
 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 1 unbaked 9-inch pie shell
 1/2 cup dark corn syrup
 1 teaspoon vanilla
 2 cups milk
 Combine ingredients except pecans. Pour into pie shell and top with pecans. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 minutes or until set.
 Check with a knife in the center, if it comes out clean the pie is done.

 Cook for about 3 hours at 325 degrees. Stir occasionally. She serves this with corn bread or muffins, and a green salad.
 Tim takes this stew along on elk hunting trips. She says they cook it in advance and freeze it in bags that can be put into boiling water.
 To keep cholesterol down, she says she tries to buy the leanest meat she can find, and is careful to broil and barbecue more and fry a lot less. They buy a side of beef twice a year, eating it during half the week, and fish, chicken or pork for the rest of it.
 She buys two or three chickens at a time, when they are on sale, cuts them up and freezes the pieces on a cookie sheet. Then, after they are bagged, and put into the freezer, they can be removed all at once, or one at a time. The pieces don't stick together.
 Her microwave gets a fair amount of use, but more for heating things up than cooking whole meals. "It speeds up a lot of the things I've already got prepared... We freeze corn, and you can put your bag of frozen corn in the microwave for 2 minutes, rather than boiling it for 10 minutes."
 She says she does use it to bake potatoes, because it takes 10 minutes, rather than an hour. And, because her family likes microwave chicken which she makes often.

MICROWAVE CHICKEN
 6 chicken breasts, boned and skinned
 4 tablespoons butter or margarine
 1 teaspoon salt
 1 teaspoon pepper
 1 can of French fried onion rings
 1/2 cup grated Swiss cheese
 1/2 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
 Melt the butter or margarine, and add the seasonings. Dip chicken into melted butter or margarine, and lay it in a 9x13-inch glass dish, without stacking it. Cover with waxed paper, and cook in microwave on high for about 5 minutes. Turn chicken over. Top it with the mushrooms. Cover with waxed paper and cook on high for 4 minutes. Sprinkle with onion rings and the cheese, re-cover with waxed paper, and cook about 2-3 minutes more, until cheese melts. Serve with potatoes, rice or noodles and a green salad.
 "It's fast and easy," she says, "it's really good on a weeknight, when I'm working... to have the chicken thawed out. It takes at least 16-20 minutes. In fact, it takes me longer to set the table, than it does to have the chicken ready."

 Good with the microwave chicken or whatever, are...
PARSLEY POTATOES
 Serves 6
 3 large unpeeled potatoes, cut diagonally into about 1/2-inch thick slices
 1/2 cup butter or margarine
 1 medium sized onion, chopped - about 3/4 cup
 4 ounces chopped mushrooms
 1 cup fresh bread crumbs
 1/2 cup chopped fresh parsley
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1/2 teaspoon fresh ground pepper
 Heat oven to 375 degrees. Put 1/2 cup water over the potatoes in a shallow baking pan or cookie sheet. Bake for about 10 minutes, on lowest shelf in oven.
 At the same time, in a skillet on the stove, on medium heat, melt 3 tablespoons butter or margarine; add onion, and cook about 5 minutes - until onions are translucent. Add mushrooms. Cook for about 5 minutes longer, and then stir in bread crumbs, parsley, salt and pepper.
 With potatoes still in the oven, turn it up to broil. Four sauce on top, and flip the potatoes over twice. Broil for about 8-10 minutes, removing when they are fork tender and skins are soft. They will be slightly brown.

 Thompson says her kids like the following muffin recipe: "We eat them hot or cold - breakfast, lunch or dinner."
OATMEAL APPLE RAISIN MUFFINS
 1 egg
 1/4 cup milk
 1 cup raisins
 1 cup chopped apples
 1/2 cup oil
 1 cup flour
 1 cup quick oats
 1/2 cup sugar
 3 teaspoons baking powder
 1 teaspoon salt
 2 teaspoons cinnamon
 Beat egg very well. Then add the rest of the ingredients, stirring until just moistened. Fill 12 greased or paper lined muffin tins 3/4 full. Bake at 400 degrees for 15-20 minutes.
 "It takes about five minutes to mix up," she says, "it's really quick and easy."
 She says, in an effort to limit sugar, they do not have desserts every day, but her family does have four or five favorites. The recipe for one of them, she found on the side of Keebler Honey Graham Cracker box.

"Every time we go to a church or potluck, we have to take this dessert. In fact, we've tried it in various ways, because it's so good," she says.
KEEBLER BLUEBERRIES N' CHEESE SQUARES
 1 1/2 packages honey graham crackers
 1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted
 One 8-ounce package cream cheese, softened (not in the microwave)
 1/2 cup milk
 2 tablespoons powdered sugar
 1 can blueberry pie filling (or cherry)
 1 cup whipping cream
 2 tablespoons powdered sugar
 Put a mixing bowl and beaters into the freezer. Crush graham crackers until they are very fine crumbs. Put them in an 11 1/2 x 7 1/2 inch baking dish, and add 1/2 cup margarine or butter. Mix very well. Reserve about 1/2 cup for topping. Press into the bottom of dish. Refrigerate. While this is chilling, blend cream cheese (which has been softened on counter - doing so in the microwave makes it runny) with sugar and milk, until it is very smooth. Spread evenly over crumb crust. Pour pie filling right over the top of that. Return it to refrigerator. Remove empty mixing bowl and beaters from the freezer, and whip cream and sugar until very stiff. Spread it over the top of the blueberries, and sprinkle reserved crumbs over all. Refrigerate until ready to eat.

 "It's got a real good blueberry or cherry flavor. You don't really taste the cream cheese, because it's in with whipping cream. I've given out the recipe many times. Hopefully Keebler doesn't mind," she says.
 You saw it at the fair. Now come try The Somma Mattress at the THE OAK CREST 126 2nd St. E - 734-8954

Golf classic inspires former resident's praise
 Recently, I was invited back to my hometown to participate in some of the activities of the Latham Chrysler-Plymouth Dodge Celebrity Golf Classic held at the Blue Lakes Country Club and benefiting the CSI Foundation.
 The immense community effort exerted in this philanthropic three-day event reiterates the care and concern for the Magic Valley by its citizens. I have always admired this characteristic of my former residence.
 The generosity of Bob Latham and his son Bob Jr., in bankrolling this fund-raiser, is not surprising in view of their lifelong support of their community. They are fine examples of businessmen who give back to those who help them succeed.

 I must also add my kudos to Lee Wagner, KMVT general manager, who donated his time and considerable talent; Paul Wilkins, Blue Lakes Country Club manager, who so ably managed the complicated logistics, and the members of that private club; Dr. Joang Edwards, CSI professor and executive director of the CSI Foundation; Curtis H. Eaton, Twin Falls Bank and Trust, president of the CSI Foundation; Jerry Meyerhoeffer, CSI - president, the gracious celebrities who loved being in the heartland of America; and all the others who made this first annual Celebrity Golf Classic work.
 This alliance between CSI and the community is heartwarming and one of the many reasons so many of us have found life in the Magic Valley rewarding.

5 new All America winners evaluated

I evaluated the five All-America award winning vegetables for 1988 in the Ricks College's Research and Demonstration Garden this summer. As usual, most of these winners performed very well. However, there just does not seem to be anything you can do to get them to grow successfully in this cool climate.

The five new winners will be available for home gardeners to plant next spring. You will find seed offered in catalogs and on seed racks shortly after the first of the year. Here are my evaluations.

Honey-n-Pearl is a super sweet bicolored sweet corn. It is sweeter than ordinary sweet-corns, but not overly sweet like some super sweet varieties. Many of the super sweets are quite crunchy in texture. Honey-n-Pearl is more tender. Ears are large and filled to the tip. The mixed yellow and white kernels are very attractive. It is rated as 78 days maturity and ripens just ahead of the latest varieties which I plant, such as Jubilee. As with many other super sweet corns, it must be separated so that it is not cross pollinated by ordinary corn or it loses its super sweet advantage.

Cucumber Salad Bush is a slicing type which only requires 2-square-feet of space per plant. It is early maturing and a heavy yielder for the size of plant. It is resistant to several diseases which we are not usually bothered with in the Intermountain area. The fruit shape is not as good as some other slicing cucumbers which I have grown.

Two new hot peppers are All-America designates for next year: Mexi Bell is a bell pepper with a mildly hot flavor. It is early and produces a lot of large, nice looking fruit. It can be used much the same way you would use a long, green chili pepper.

Super Chili has a compact plant with dozens of 2-inch pointed fruit. It is early for a hot pepper, but I found that only about 1/2 of the fruit turned red before the first frost. Most people would rate this variety as very hot.

I planted Okra Burgundy under a fiber row cover and left it covered all summer in hopes of success. The row cover did improve seed germination and plant growth. It still was not warm enough to produce any edible fruit. The fruits mature so slowly that they are full of fiber. I would not recommend planting Okra in the Intermountain area.

Times-News correspondent

Homes aren't just inhabited by adults. In fact, the number of people under four feet living in an environment often equals or exceeds those of larger proportions inhabiting the same.

How can we make our homes places in which our children enjoy being raised?

Authors Linda Fox and Geri Brin offer some unique ideas in their book/catalog called "Kids' Stuff."

Their work is a cleverly composed combination of tips and ideas from educators, architects, designers, psychologists and parents that also incorporates practical solutions and sources to obtain the various suggestions presented.

Instead of dealing with the conventional sources of children's furnishings that the authors feel are often more "concerned with deals than with function and durability," they have presented parents with unusual outlets they wouldn't normally consider when purchasing items for their children.

Library shelving, colorful gym mats, school desks, lockers and chairs find their way into the book, supplying parents with some wonderful alternatives for their children's living needs.

"Kids' Stuff" is divided into eight sections — Environments, Surfaces for Work & Play, Storage, Eating, Sleeping, Seating, Lighting & Accessories, and Equipment for Indoors & Outdoors — which are composed of short explanations and comments by the authors and other experts that specify the needs of each category, followed by the catalog source to order the various items presented in each section.

In the Environmental chapter, parents are encouraged to not ignore the four fixed architectural elements of any room: walls, floors, windows and ceilings.

Kids love to sit on the floor, and their rooms should be places in which they feel comfortable doing that.

It's difficult, however, for any one floor covering to meet all needs; vinyl floors are easy to clean but often cold and clinical. Carpeting is soft and comfortable but not ideal for painting or clay-dough projects. A compromise of carpet squares to arrange over a wooden or vinyl floor, or tough plastic mats to cover certain work areas in fully carpeted rooms, allows children to have "the best of both floors."

Bright throw pillows in many shapes and sizes also add new dimensions to the floor area because they can be stacked and layered for sitting or spread out to form resting nooks.

Walls with light neutral shades are found to be best for children. Areas that are too bright can actually overstimulate them. Children themselves and their bright accessories supply all the active, vibrant color any room could ask for.

The ceiling is a large, relatively unused space in any room, but can be converted to stimulate, too, say the authors.

Softly-painted graphics, kites, model airplanes, posters, mobiles or even netted storage structures can add interest to the upper portions of a child's room. The storage section of the book is an organized parent's dream. The authors say "children like to put their possessions in places they can see such as open spaces like cubbies, cubes, bins, trays, totes baskets and shelves."

The ideas presented for storage are unlimited, ranging from bright contact paper or empty ice cream barrels stacked in a pyramidal fashion — anything that defines and separates they will enjoy. And let kids help decide where "all the stuff" will go. They'll be more likely to put it back there if they understand and feel part of the system.

Remember, too, that children will only use what they can easily reach. Even have them stretch for you to determine the highest level at which you should store their things. The catalog section of this chapter offers "some great 'grow-with-them' shelving that can be adjusted to different heights to suit your children's needs through the years.

In the work surface chapter are ideas for every child-sized table, play mat, desk, easel or blackboard imaginable. Children can be more creative when they are comfortable and have their "own space" in which to spread out. Dangling legs from high chairs placed at a kitchen table they have to ask permission to use and wait to have cleared, can be frustrating for them.

Hard plastic floor covers like those used under office furniture can be wonderful work surfaces for children and protect floors as well.

Different chairs are suggested to meet different needs: modular plastic and wooden hard-backed types, comfortably child-sized for working and drawing along with soft rocker or bean bag types that comfort and surround for reading and watching TV.

"Kids' Stuff" is a goldmine of practical ideas, and is available at the public library or by ordering through local bookstores.

Save a flower, dig it up

By The Associated Press

Tender summer-blooming bulbs such as dahlias, gladioli and tuberous begonias won't survive freezing temperatures and need to be stored properly if they are to flower again next year.

Dig up caladium, ismene and spider lily after leaves turn yellow. Store them at temperatures in the 50 degrees Fahrenheit range, with soil attached and tops on for 1-2 weeks. Then remove tops, shake off soil and store in a dry place in slightly moistened peat moss, sand, sawdust or vermiculite.

Canna, rhizomes, dahlia tubers and gladioli corms like cooler temperatures — 40-45 degrees F. Cut off canna stems at ground level after the first light frost. Dig clumps of rhizomes and let dry upside down for a few hours, then store in a cool, airy room with soil attached.

Dust corms with an all-purpose garden dust containing a fungicide and an insecticide to protect them from insects and diseases. Then store in a well-ventilated area neither very dry nor damp.

Sister upset that only blood seems to bind her parents

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are expecting our first child. My only sibling, an older sister, has no children of her own, but she's the stepmother to her husband's 5-year-old son, who lives with them.

My parents are well-off and are setting up a trust fund for my soon-to-be-born child. My sister is outraged by the unfairness of this since they have not done this for "her" child. He has always been remembered by my parents on birthdays and Christmases, and he calls them "Grandpop" and "Grandma," but he knows that they are not his real grandparents.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

Both sets of his real grandparents are living, and he frequently visits them as well as his real mother, who is remarried.

My sister refuses to see the difference in our situations, and insists that what is done for my child should be done for hers. My parents are upset by her anger, but have no intention of setting up a trust fund for the boy.

I agree with my parents, but find myself losing the affection of my sister, which I especially value at this time. Your views on this, please?

— TIERED OF ARGUING

DEAR TIERED: What your parents choose to do with their money is their business. Your sister surely knows this, and she should not be hassling you (or them) about it.

I can, however, understand her hurt and anger because her parents are treating her son like a second-class citizen.

In my view, a child is a child — birth, adopted, step or whatever. But then your parents didn't ask me.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's cousin (I'll call her Margaret) suffers from Alzheimer's disease.

Whenever we go there for a visit, we greet everyone with hugs and kisses — including Margaret. Abby, what makes me uncomfortable is that even though Margaret has no idea who we are, she is practically forced to return the hugs and kisses. The poor soul looks so bewildered, my heart aches for her.

I think it's cruel to put her on the spot this way. What do you think?

Great Margaret is a warm and friendly manner and wait for her reaction. If she is accepting and responsive, give her a hug. If she views you as a stranger, don't initiate inappropriate affection.

DEAR ABBY: I have been going to the same hairdresser for well over two years.

I tip her well, and up until recently I have been quite satisfied with her work, but a few months ago I began to notice that the operator next to her cuts and styles hair the way I would love to have mine done.

I admit I'm too embarrassed to tell her I'd like to try the other one.

— NEITHER HAIR NOR THERE

DEAR NEITHER: I understand your dilemma.

Tell your operator that you want to try the other girl "for a change" — then follow through.

Pitching duel in offing in AL opener

By JOHN NELSON
The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The parity seems to be Frank Viola and the Minnesota Twins' home-dome advantage.

"To have a legitimate shot, we've got to do well here," Viola said Tuesday.

Viola, the Twins' 17-10 left-hander, will face Doyle Alexander, Detroit's 9-0 right-hander, Wednesday night (6:30 p.m. MDT) when the two teams begin the American League playoffs.

The AL West champion Twins had baseball's best home record in 1987, 56-25, but they had the worst road record of any division or pennant winner in history, 29-52. The Tigers, meanwhile, were tied with Toronto for the best road record in the league, 44-37, and they were 4-2 this season at Minnesota.

"Viola gives the Twins a legitimate chance in a seven-game series because he can win two games for you by himself," Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson said.

In the best-of-7 format, the first two games will be in Minneapolis Wednesday and Thursday nights. The teams will take Friday off, and Games 3, 4 and 5 are set for Saturday, Sunday and Monday at Tiger Stadium. The teams would return to Minnesota for the final two games, if necessary. Viola actually could get three starts if the series goes the distance.

"The way I see it, we have two advantages," Viola said. "No. 1, we're not expected by anybody to do anything. And No. 2, we've got four games at the dome, and we have the best home record in baseball."

"The only problem is, the Tigers do pretty well here, too," Viola said. The Twins won the division with an 85-77 record. Detroit won the AL East with the best record in baseball, 98-64.

"No predictions," Tigers designated hitter Bill Madlock said, "because the Twins have a great club with some very good ballplayers."

And that is what the Minnesota players are hoping to prove.

"We're here," Viola said, "and now people can get to know us a little bit. That's all we wanted. The emotion is starting to come out now."

Viola has not watched a postseason game since 1984, when the Twins, Kansas City Royals and California Angels went into the last week of the season, each with a shot at the division title. The Twins wound up second, by two games, to Kansas City, with the Angels third.

"Since that year, I vowed not to watch another postseason game until I got into one," Viola said. "Oh, my wife would call me into the room every once in a while, wanting me to see a particular play. I've seen bits and pieces. Mostly I watched football games or something else. ... I wanted to be a participant, not a spectator."

Viola had an up-and-down 1988 season, finishing with a 16-13 record and 4.51 ERA. This year, Viola abandoned his slider and relied on a fastball and changeup to post the second-best ERA in the league, 2.90.

"I'm getting a little antsy," Viola said. "I need to get control of that."

St. Louis gets jump on S.F.

By BEN WALKER

ST. LOUIS — The St. Louis Cardinals were finally helped by one of their injuries.

Emergency starter Greg Mathews, told-four hours before the game he would start because of Danny Cox's stiff neck, blew away pressure and the Giants as the St. Louis Cardinals beat San Francisco, 5-3 Tuesday night in the opener of the National League playoffs.

The Cardinals, plagued by injuries all season and playing again with ailing first baseman Jack Clark, were not hurt this time. Mathews pitched four-hit ball for 7 1/2 innings and blooped a two-run single in the sixth for a 2-2 lead.

"When they told me I was going to start, I kind of froze. I couldn't believe it," Mathews said. "After that, it was, 'OK, let's do it.'"

Mathews, a second-year left-hander, responded coolly against the team that pounded him three times this season. His hitting-and-pitching show came two days after his last start in which he yielded two runs in two innings on the final day of the regular season.

"For Greg Mathews to throw 101 pitches and give us a lead into the eighth inning, it was quite a performance," Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog said. "I like his hitting a little bit, too."

"We didn't play that well," Herzog said. "We won mostly because of Mathews."

The largest crowd in Busch Stadium, 55,331, squirmed as the Cardinals had to hold on after Mathews left in the eighth. The Giants scored once and then loaded the bases against Todd Worrell before Ken Dayley retired Will Clark on a fly ball.

"(Mathews) was the difference," Giants Manager Roger Craig said. "He kept us off-balance with a changeup and a fastball that was good enough."

Mathews gave up three runs, two earned. He tied a season-high with seven strikeouts and walked one.

Worrell relieved after Mathews' first walk in 22 innings, to Robby

Thompson with one out in the eighth that snapped a string of 10 straight batters retired by Mathews.

Worrell, with a 7.95 earned run average in six games against the Giants this year, gave up a single to Jeffrey Leonard, an RBI double to Candy Maldonado and a walk to Chili Davis that loaded the bases.

Mathews, a second-year left-hander, and 38-year-old Rick Reuschel were settled into a 2-2 game when a blown rundown triggered the Cardinals' three-run sixth.

Dan Driessen doubled with one out and was then trapped when shortstop Joe Ufube grabbed Willie McGee's infield hit in the hole. But Uribe bounced a throw to second baseman Thompson for an error that allowed Driessen to reach third.

Terry Pendleton followed with an RBI single and Ford's single loaded the bases. After Tony Pena fouled out, Mathews reached out and hit a 1-2 pitch to center for a 5-2 lead.

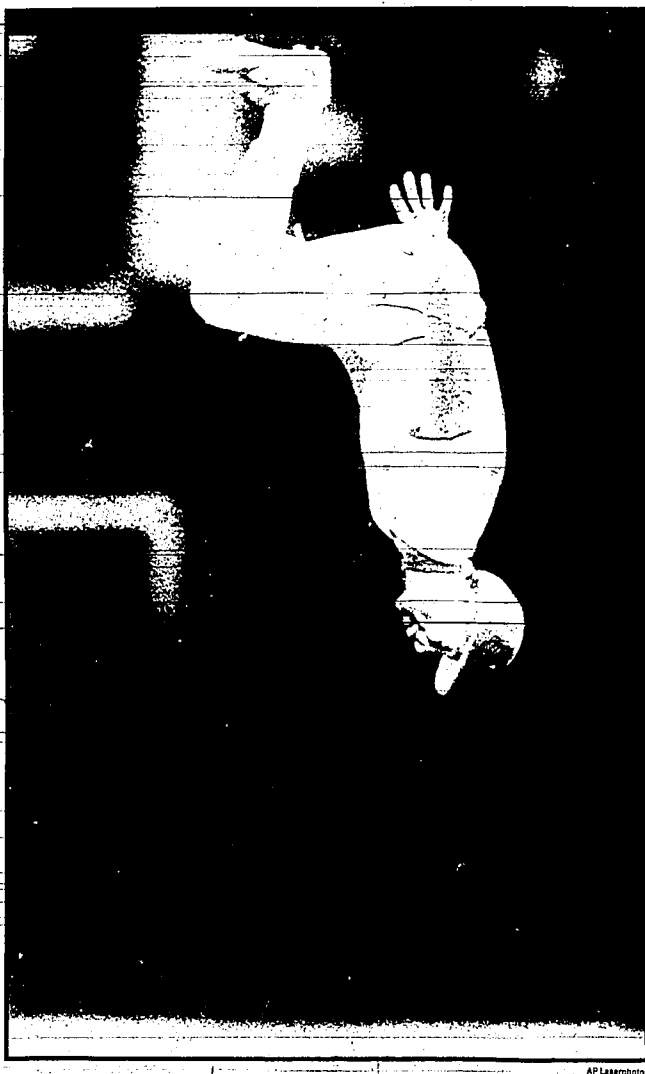

Mathews had gone 0-2 in three starts versus San Francisco this season, allowing 14 runs on 21 hits in 16 1/2 innings.

Leonard homered over the 414-foot mark in center field leading off the fourth for a 2-1 lead. Leonard, whose long fly out to center set up a run in the first, connected on Mathews' second pitch of the inning, ending a string of nine straight batters retired by Will Clark on a fly ball.

The Cardinals bounced back in their half of the fourth as Ozzie Smith opened with a one-hop triple off the fence in right-center field. Smith bluffed home on two shallow fly outs and then scored when McGee grounded a sharp single to left.

Cards come back to win

By PAUL LEBAR
The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Shortstop Ozzie Smith had seen it 51 times before, so he wasn't surprised when the St. Louis Cardinals overcame a deficit beat the San Francisco Giants in the first game of the National League playoffs Tuesday night.

"We played our game. We got the base hits when we needed them," said Smith, who tripled and scored in the fourth as St. Louis drew even 2-2 on the way to a 5-3 victory.

"Our pitching came through," Smith said. "We're going to take it one at a time. I see no reason to view this game any different than any other."

Cardinals reliever Todd Worrell, who relieved starter Greg Mathews in the eighth inning as the Giants rallied for their third run of the game, thinks the victory gives St. Louis the upper hand in the series.

"I've said all year that the first game of any series is the one that is important," Worrell said. "It puts the pressure on them. They're going to have to win tomorrow night or they're in trouble."

Second baseman Tommy Herr said the victory also served notice that the Cardinals can't be dismissed simply because slugger first baseman Jack Clark is sidelined with an ankle injury.

"We realized from all the commentary that we were not coming in as a favorite," Herr said. "I think they are selling us short a little bit. We've got a pretty good ballclub. We'd like to have Jack Clark in the lineup, but we've got some other pretty good ballplayers."

Center fielder Willie McGee, who had two singles, said San Francisco right-hander Rick Reuschel didn't have his best stuff.

"His pitches were a little high,"

NBC, CBS, ABC continue to show replacement games

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC, CBS and ABC will continue to televise NFL replacement games this weekend if the players' strike isn't settled, the networks announced Tuesday.

The networks are evaluating the strike games on a week-to-week basis.

Overall ratings for NFL games declined more than 20 percent during the first week of strike games, but network officials said the ratings were better than expected.

"That obviously affected our decision to continue televising strike games," CBS spokesman Mark Carlson said. "But another reason was that the games were better than expected. And we expect them to improve this week, even if the strike is still going on."

49ers, Raiders, Patriots reported ready to go back to work en masse

By The Associated Press
and the Los Angeles Times

San Francisco's 49ers veteran tight end Russ Francis returned to the team Tuesday, defying striking teammates, the club announced.

Another 10 striking 49ers are expected to return to the team Wednesday before the 1 p.m. deadline imposed by the NFL Management Council.

The striking players met at a Redwood City, Calif., hotel Tuesday afternoon for an update on Monday night's player representatives' meeting in Chicago where it was announced that 11 players had said they would return to the team.

Players representatives from the New England Patriots and the Los Angeles Raiders were quoted Tuesday as saying large numbers of their striking members would return Wednesday.

Co-player representative Keith Fahnhorst of the 49ers conceded that 11 players had announced they would cross over, but he refused to divulge their identities.

Players prepared to shelve free agency

By MARK ASHER
and MICHAEL WILSON
The Washington Post

The chief negotiators in pro football's 15-day players strike returned to the bargaining table late Tuesday after the National Football League Players Association agreed to drop a demand for a less-restrictive system of free agency if the owners come up with satisfactory offers on six other major issues.

"We're willing to negotiate on everything," said Boomer Easonon, the Cincinnati Bengals' player representative, after the 28-player

Monday until nearly 6 a.m. Tuesday in a suburban Chicago hotel. "If free agency is the only striking point and we've bargained on everything else and seen some improvements, we'll take it off the table."

It was unclear Tuesday night whether negotiations could be completed in time for the striking players to return for games Sunday and Monday or whether replacement teams would play for a second week.

The Management Council, the owners' negotiating arm, set a p.m. deadline Wednesday for striking players to return and be eligible for this weekend's games. A union official described that deadline Tuesday as being "indefinitely elastic."

John Jones, spokesman for the Management Council, said that for players to return in time for this weekend's games would be a tough deadline to meet. It would take extraordinary flexibility on the union's part for that to happen.

The players will "not" return "until there is a collective bargaining agreement," said Upshaw, who met one-on-one at an undisclosed site in the Washington area with Management go in last week voted to go in and the rest of us are hanging in there," he added.

Fahnhorst conceded that the announcement of the defections could cause some team devaluations, but he said striking players would not pick the year's headquarters on Wednesday.

Earlier, San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh said he would not intervene with the players coming back like he did last week.

"I wouldn't want to try it again," Walsh said. "We don't really have any other choice. If they want to come back, our doors have to be open."

Walsh said he did not expect any problems with merging the returning veteran players to the roster.

"We'll just isolate the squad we have now and begin to prepare our game plan for Atlanta," Walsh said. "Then, as players arrive, if any do, we would then integrate those into the 45-man unit."

"This is a strong enough 'B' team, so to speak, that our veterans could play with those people and not have a team in a favor of the newbies."

Meanwhile, in El Segundo, Calif., Howie Long and Bill Pickel, who walked in and out of the Raiders' camp last Friday, were back again Tuesday to stay.

The strike-breaking Raiders had the day off, but Long and Pickel worked out with Earl Leggett, defensive line coach.

Long and Pickel were the first Raider starters to report since the strike began two weeks ago.

Briefly in Sports

Regional volleyball here

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls High School will be the site of the first round of Region III Class A-1 high school volleyball tournament Saturday night.

Twin Falls, Minico, Burley and Pocatello will take part in the first round of competition Saturday, starting at 7 p.m. Pairings won't be determined until the end of the regular season Thursday, but Highland has already clinched the top seed in the region and will host the second round of the tournament on Tuesday, Oct. 13.

Region III will send its champion to the state A-1 tournament in Nampa later this month; while the regional runnerup will face the third-place team from Region II (the Boise area) for the chance to go to state.

CSI men's rodeo team wins

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho's men's rodeo team won big in its first competition of the 1986-87 school year last weekend in Pocatello.

CSI scored 470 points for a first-place finish in the Idaho State University Rodeo, held at the Bannock County Fairgrounds.

Ritchie Hamilton, Shawn Stokes and Alan Stutzman of CSI finished 1-2-3 in the bareback riding event, and the Eagles also dominated the saddle bronc riding with a 1-2-3 finish by Kenny Black, Carl Smith and Dan Mayer.

CSI's Destry Brown finished second in calf roping. Stutzman was fourth in steer wrestling and Norman Kerr roped with an ISU cowboy to take second in that event.

Rodeo Coach Shawn Davis said the CSI women's team also made a good showing with three members qualifying for finals in six out of seven events. Susan Shenton placed third in breakaway roping.

CSI's teams will travel to Provo, Utah, next weekend for the Utah Valley College Rodeo.

Benefit rodeo in Shoshone

SHOSHONE — A benefit rodeo will be held here Oct. 17-18 to help pay medical expenses for Benny Freeman, who was seriously injured in a truck accident last month.

The rodeo will be held at the Shoshone County Fairgrounds.

A dance will be held in conjunction with the rodeo on Saturday, the 17th, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Armory. An auction will be held during intermission.

Further information can be obtained by phoning Juanita O'Maley at 886-2469.

Mayor's Scramble scheduled

TWIN FALLS — The Mayor's Scramble, open to all interested, will be the final official competition at Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course this year, announced Professional Don Hamblin.

The scramble, a two-day event scheduled for Oct. 24 and 25, will begin with shotgun starts at 1:30 p.m. Oct. 24 and 10 a.m. on the final days.

Free beer and hotdogs will be served on Sunday. A potluck dinner and cocktail party will be held after the first round.

Cost will be $20 for men and $15 plus a dessert or salad for women.

No handicap is required and it is opened to all residents of Twin Falls. Pairings will be made for each day's competition.

Kelly finally gets contract

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — "One day at a time" finally got the best of Minnesota Twins Manager Tom Kelly.

Kelly, who in his first full season as a major-league manager took the Minnesota Twins to their first American League West title since 1970, on Monday agreed to terms on a one-year contract.

Kelly, at 37 the youngest manager in the majors, said the Twins "don't give more than one-year contracts to management personnel."

Kelly, who earned a reported $100,000 this season, said the Twins "did real nice by me."

Harriers take to area links on Thursday

By The Times-News

Magic Valley's cross country season reaches a crescendo Thursday with something in the area of 22 high school and five colleges participating in three meets.

The annual Twin Falls Classic, which includes all members of the Gem State and Southern Idaho Conference of the Boise area plus Nampa, will begin at 4 p.m. at Canyon Springs Golf Course.

Cross country

Jerome, which is observing homecoming this week, will entertain the Cross State Conference finals at Jerome Country Club at 5 p.m. in a meet that will again feature a "mighty mite" mile race.

CSI will be entertaining five teams in its invitation, scheduled for 4 p.m. at Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course.

The Twin Falls Classic is the major meet of the season this side of the state finals. It is the only time the Boise area Class A-1 teams see eastern Idaho's runners. It provides all the preparation and strategy for the state finals.

The Twin Falls girls appear the team to beat, fresh from winning the Gem State Conference title and the Boise Invitational.

Their major competition is expected to come from Highland and Boise. The Bruins have consistently beaten Highland all fall but coaches Jerry Kleinkopf and Duane Stands point to the return of Erin Porter as a case point in Highland's program.

"She's been fighting tendonitis problems all fall and really hasn't run this fall until last week. Highland has been staying close with four girls and since we feel that Porter might be their best individual runner, that could make the difference," Kleinkopf said.

Jennifer Hannah probably will go off as the favorite, having won the last two matches. But Kleinkopf again pointed out that other teams and individuals beyond the A-1 group have been invited.

"We believe this could be one of the strongest fields we've ever had individually," he noted, pointing out the strong Malad team and Sugar-Salem's Kristin Galbraith have been invited.

If everyone shows up, the A-1 entries will include Madison, Rigby, Skyline, Idaho Falls, Bonneville, Blackfoot, Highland, Pocatello, Minico, Twin Falls, Borah, Boise, Capital, Moridian, Centennial and perhaps Nampa.

The boys' division is expected to be a battle among Pocatello, Highland and Boise with previous scores and times indicating it could end that way.

Jerome rules as a prohibitive favorite in the boys' division of the Cross State finals and the Jerome girls could get some competition from Caldwell, Mountain Home appeared to be the team to beat earlier but due to injuries, the Tigers have lost so many runners they no longer are able to field a complete team.

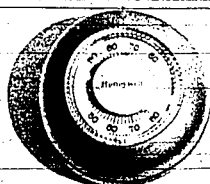

Jerome Coach Tim Dunne said all individuals are invited to participate in the "mighty mite" race which will cover a mile and head things up at 5 p.m.

"We had the first mighty mite race last year and everyone really enjoyed it," he said. "This year we're inviting anyone 13 or under to compete. It's just a fun thing."

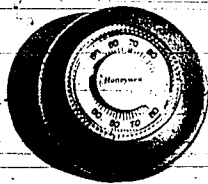

Competing in that one will be Caldwell, Mountain Home, Buhl, Wood River and Jerome. Shelley and South Fremont are not sponsoring teams this year.

The College of Southern Idaho men have been having some success in meet's this fall but this looks like a very strong field this time around.

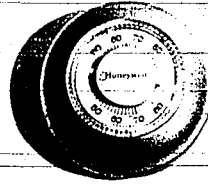

Participating will be teams from Ricks, Idaho State, Weber State, Boise State and Utah State.

"We told the builder we wanted four bedrooms, two baths and ten thermostats."

Only zonal electric heat allows the temperature in each room in your home to be set individually.

Unlike conventional fossil-fueled furnaces which subject your whole house to the whims of a single thermostat, zonal electric heat gives each room its own. The wondrous result is that people in different areas of the house can choose the temperatures most comfortable for them.

So everybody's happy. The baby's not too cold, you're not too hot and grandma's just right.

It also allows you the flexibility of turning the heat off completely in rooms you're not using, saving energy and money.

And because they have no flues, stacks, ductwork or piping, zonal systems also save space and installation costs. They're perfect when you need to add heat to a remodeled or newly-added room, too.

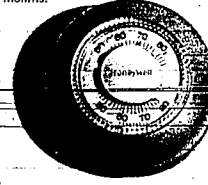

Financing as flexible as your heating system.

Finance your zonal heating system through Idaho Power and you can put nothing down, get low interest rates, pay as little as $15 a month and take up to 10 years to repay.*

For more information on comfortable, versatile zonal electric heat, call your electrical contractor or your local Idaho Power office.

*11 1/4% APR effective through December 31, 1987. Customers may choose monthly repayment schedules of 30, 60, 90 and 120 months.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"Old custom without truth is but an old error."

— Thomas Fuller

When dummy has a singleton, do you, as a defender, always take your ace when the suit is led? Most Easts would. And most would remain oblivious to the fact that they might have made an error.

West leads the club jack and dummy's singleton appears. Should East's ace be an automatic play? If East takes his ace "before it's lost forever," South has an easy time making game. East returns the heart king to South's ace and the play is quick. After declarer draws trumps and dumps dummy's two remaining hearts on the king and queen of clubs, the defenders get two more winners in diamonds but South has his 10 tricks.

East gets two tricks for one if he deliberately sacrifices his ace of clubs at trick one. After East's well-reasoned duck (he wouldn't duck if he could see three more quick winners), South wins his club queen. However, he never enjoys any discards on either clubs or diamonds, and regardless of how South struggles, the defenders always get two hearts and two diamonds for one down.

When taking an ace is certain to provide two winners for the enemy, it's a good time to consider a possible duck.

ANSWER. Three spades. A minimum in RCP; however, the double fit in spades and diamonds justifies a move toward game.
