Virgil Jennings has enlarged one holding pond and constructed another at his 136-cow dairy north of Shoshone

Dairymen solving problems with runoff

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Southern Idaho dairy farmers are reading between the lines of new regulations to control dairy and feedlot runoff and coming up with their own solutions to the problem.

Nervous, confused and suspicious best describes the attitude of the industry, much of which is concentrated in the Magic Valley, say dairy farmers and industry experts.

Dairy operators seem to be aware of the law and agree with its goals but instead of following the permit requirement, at least locally, some are choosing to expand their runoff holding ponds but not sign up for a permit.

Virgil Jennings who milks 136 cows north of Shoshone is one who falls in this category.

"I am trying to comply in my own way and others are," he said.

Jennings says he doesn't think his dairy falls under the permit requirements. But even so he has enlarged one holding pond and put in another at a cost of $2,500, he said.

Jennings said one of the reasons he is not asking for a permit is if

EPA came out to his dairy "who knows what they would do."

He says the dairymen he talks to feel if they get on a government list, they will be harassed.

Some of the dairy operators' attitude is colored by past experiences with government inspectors.

Jennings says as a Grade A dairy he is already subject to inspections from the government.

"I deal with one in Jerome that works with me not against me," he said. But this is not always the case for other dairy farmers, he said.

"If I ship quality milk, I shouldn't be harassed about little things that are costing me money," Jennings said.

Despite his skepticism, Jennings says he plans to talk to Mike McMasters at the state Division of Environment in Twin Falls.

EPA held hearings and informational meetings on the regulations last year but apparently these didn't make the government's case sufficiently clear.

So when EPA sent out 2900 letters asking dairy and feedlot operators to apply for permits, only 100 replied, according to EPA.

Reagan silent on possible strike at Iran

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With the White House accusing Iran of an "outrageous act of aggression," President Reagan met with advisers Friday and declined to say how the United States might respond to the missile attack on a U.S.-flagged tanker in the Persian Gulf.

The White House and the Defense Department both said they believed the "empty tanker," the Sea Isle City, was hit by a Silkstorm missile as it approached a refueling pier near Kuwait's Al-Ahmedi oil terminal.

Iran is known to have Chinese-made Silkstorm missiles in its arsenal.

The Pentagon said 16 men were injured in the attack, although the Kuwaiti health ministry said there were 18, including two who were treated on board.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters, "Iran has committed an outrageous act of aggression against a non-belligerent country, Kuwait, and a U.S. flag vessel operating commercially and peacefully."

The president, questioned by reporters after a meeting with Soviet students, said, "I cannot and will not discuss what our future action might be. We are in discussion with the government of Kuwait."

The State Department administration officials said intelligence reports indicated that Stinger missile parts found on Iranian patrol boats captured by the U.S. Navy on Oct. 8 were part of a shipment supplied by the United States to Afghan guerrillas. The New York Times reported in its Saturday edition.

The officials discounted reports that the Afghan rebels had sold some of the missiles to Iran. They said that according to Afghan commanders, Iranian troops took the missiles in a skirmish with the guerrillas near the Afghan-Iranian border. The Times reported.

Fitzwater said Reagan met with his national security assistant, Frank C. Carlucci, and other advisers and received "a full update on the attack," but no decisions were made.

"As in all such cases, we are examining the full range of diplomatic and other options available to us," he said.

At the Pentagon, officials who asked not to be identified said the debate about a military response to the attack had been clouded by Kuwaiti expressions of concern.

"They don't seem to want to tie themselves any closer to us; to appear that they're pulling completely inside our military umbrella," said one official. "They've got cold feet, even though these missiles are hitting ships inside their territorial waters."

The Pentagon sources also said Kuwaiti military forces detected the Iranian missile in flight and tried unsuccessfully to shoot it down with a small missile of their own from the island of Faylaka.

Barefoot Jessica rescued from well

The Associated Press

MIDLAND, Texas — Eighteen-month-old Jessica McClure was rescued Friday night from an abandoned well by workers who spent 2 1/2 days drilling through solid rock to reach her as the nation waited anxiously to learn her fate.

Barefoot, caked with dirt and strapped with gauze to an immobilizing backboard, Jessica was hoisted by cable out of the shaft just before 7 p.m. MDT to the cheers of her parents, neighbors and rescue workers.

She had been in the well nearly 58 1/2 hours.

"They brought her out feet-first. They had put Vaseline on her to get her through the hole," said Police Sgt. Jeff Haile. "She was very alert, very bright-eyed. They got her through with no scratches. She's fine."

"I didn't have any dry eyes," he said. "I'm relieved and am glad it's over."

The toddler, who had gone without food or drink since plunging into the narrow well Wednesday morning in her aunt's backyard, appeared alert as she rubbed her eyes in the glare of floodlights.

ABC, NBC and CBS-TV all interrupted their prime-time shows to televise the final minutes of the rescue, and CNN carried long live reports throughout the ordeal.

Family, town — A4

Jessica was rushed to a waiting ambulance for a one-mile drive to Midland Memorial Hospital, where she was held in serious condition for a preliminary examination in the emergency room.

Dr. Carolyn Rhode said the girl suffered no broken bones or cuts severe enough to require stitches, but could have circulation problems with her right leg, which was wedged alongside her body in the narrow crevice so that her foot was next to her head.

The child weighed 21 pounds six weeks ago, but had dropped to 17 1/2 pounds and was 10 percent to 15 percent dehydrated, Ms. Rhode said.

"It's a matter of rehydrating her and observing her and observing patches of skin that suffered from lack of blood circulation," she said. "I think considering the length of time she was in there and the position she was in, she's a very spunky girl."

"She will have a considerable amount of emotional trauma," Ms. Rhode said. "Right now, she's exhausted."

A deafening shout of jubilation rose from the crowd of onlookers as

Tax hike to combat deficit wins approval

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Disregarding the threat of a presidential veto, the Senate Finance Committee approved an $11.6 billion deficit-reduction tax increase Friday that will fall mainly on higher-income wage earners, telephone users and corporations.

The measure would raise Medicare taxes on about 8 million people who will earn more than $45,000 next year, take away a major tax break for defense contractors and toughen rules requiring corporations to pay a share of their taxes in advance.

The bill was approved on a 13-7 vote. Republicans John Chafee of Rhode Island and John Heinz of Pennsylvania joined the 11 Democrats in voting for the bill. It includes several provisions that were in a $12.3 billion increase that the House Ways and Means Committee adopted on a party-line vote Thursday night.

"We have a responsibility in Congress to move" despite President Reagan's insistence that taxes not be used to cut the deficit, said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, the Finance Committee chairman. "There have been repeated attempts to negotiate with the president but he has chosen not to do that."

Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon, senior Republican on the panel, said any decision on raising taxes should be delayed until it becomes clear what other committees in Congress are doing to cut spending. "I am sure of the veto," Packwood commented as recently as Thursday, Packwood added, "and I think I am sure that Congress could not override it."

Biopsy, perhaps surgery facing first lady today

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — First lady Nancy Reagan will undergo a biopsy today and have her left breast removed if a suspicious lesion turns out to be cancerous.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the lesion, which "might represent an early stage of malignancy," showed up in a routine mammography that Mrs. Reagan underwent on Oct. 5.

The first lady took the news stoically, the spokesman said. Referring to her husband's bouts with colon and skin cancer, she commented, "I guess it's my turn."

She said Mrs. Reagan, 66, had skin cancer removed from her upper lip in late 1985.

The Reagans arrived at Bethesda Naval Hospital by helicopter at 5:04 p.m. MST, and Mrs. Reagan was taken to the presidential suite.

Reagan and Richard Davis, Mrs. Reagan's step-brother, spent some time with the first lady at the hospital Friday evening. Reagan returned to the White House about 6:45 p.m. MST and waved to reporters and well-wishers.

"She's fine," Reagan said, responding to shouts from reporters. Asked whether he had any advice for his wife, Reagan replied, "No, just kind words."

Elaine Crispin, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, said Reagan would "tuck her in and make her comfortable" at the hospital Friday night.

Smoke pall proves a bonanza for 'nuclear winter' studies

The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The dark pall of smoke hovering above giant forest fires recently yielded a scientific bonanza for researchers studying whether nuclear war would plunge Earth into a freezing "nuclear winter."

The conditions that existed in southern Oregon and Northern California were as close as one is likely to see to conditions one might expect after the use of nuclear weapons, said Bernard Zak, atmospheric program coordinator at Sandia National Laboratories in Albuquerque, N.M.

The fires yielded "at least 10 times as much data" as last year's controlled brush fire in the San Dimas Experimental Forest northeast of Los Angeles, said Zak, a physicist funded by the Defense Nuclear Agency.

"Fire and smoke began to approach the regional scale we expect to see after a nuclear war, although certainly they didn't come anywhere close to the global scale," said Richard Turco, a Marina del Rey atmospheric scientist.

Turco helped develop the theory that smoke from cities bombed during even a limited nuclear exchange would block sunlight long enough to freeze the Northern Hemisphere, possibly wiping out crops and causing mass starvation.

Scientists said information gathered from the fires hasn't been analyzed, but will be used to help determine if the nuclear winter hypothesis is correct.

"We haven't found anything that's tending to knock the props out from under it," said University of Washington atmospheric physicist Lawrence Radke.

Turco said information collected from the fires also will help researchers studying acid rain, depletion of Earth's protective ozone layer and the "greenhouse effect" warming of the atmosphere.

The fires, still smoldering 1 1/2 months after being ignited by lightning strikes in late August, engulfed 772,500 acres in Northern California and 135,281 acres in southern Oregon, the U.S. Forest Service said.

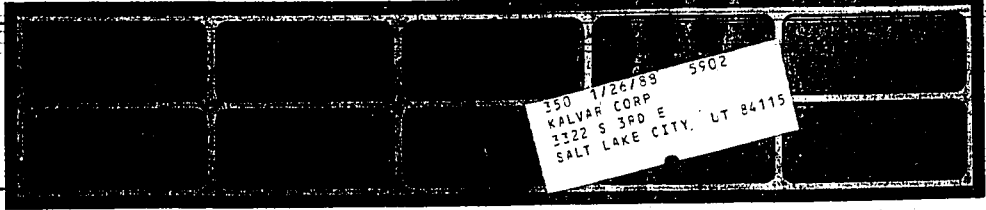

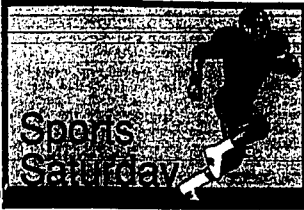

"It's terrible all the natural destruction occurred, but it's fortunate we could make some aircraft-based measurements in the smoke to help us understand the nuclear winter hypothesis better," said Pennsylvania

State University meteorologist Douglas Westphal.

Zak said scientists were in Seattle in late August waiting to study intentionally set fires, but flew south because of the massive wildfires.

As smoke dimmed daylight to twilight throughout the region, scientists conducted two key experiments. Sandia's Twin Otter aircraft sampled cumulus clouds that formed above large smoke plumes, while UW's C-131 research plane chased a huge

Pilots hurried on preflight checklist before Detroit crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pilots of the jetliner that crashed Aug. 16 near Detroit, killing 166 people, were sidetracked from completing critical preflight procedures amid confusion over a runway and a mix-up over radio frequencies, documents indicated Friday.

The documents reiterated that the Northwest Airlines plane's flaps had not been set properly for takeoff from Detroit Metropolitan Airport, and revealed that an alarm, designed to warn pilots of a false flap setting, did not sound because the alarm was not getting electrical power.

Setting flaps is the first item on Northwest's preflight checklist, according to aviation sources who declined to be identified by name, and is essential to give a plane the lift it needs to take off.

The crash was the second worst in U.S. aviation history.

The finding about the alarm fueled speculation that the flight crew might have pulled a circuit breaker controlling power to the alarm, although none of the documents provided clear evidence as to what stopped the flow of power to the alarm.

A report from one group of investigators said, however, an examination of the plane's electrical system "exhibited no evidence of a circuit breaker which might have caused a circuit breaker to pop or evidence of damage. The alarm system, which remained largely undamaged, worked properly during tests, it said.

Six summary reports from investigators, including a transcript of the cockpit conversation during the 32 minutes before the crash, were released without comment by the National Transportation Safety Board.

According to the cockpit recorder transcript, Flight 255 was aloft only 22 seconds before it crashed. The cockpit microphone recorded seven minutes before the plane came to rest on a highway.

Neither Capt. John Maus, who was flying the plane, nor his co-pilot, David Dodds, even indicated they were aware they had forgotten to extend the flaps for takeoff, according to the transcript.

It showed Maus and Dodds ran into trouble almost immediately after starting down the runway when they noticed a power surge and realized they had not set a device that keeps the automatic throttle from engaging.

That problem was corrected as the plane continued along the runway. As the plane gained adequate speed for takeoff, Maus murmured an expletive, followed by a nervous laugh, presumably over their mistake with the throttle and their ability to correct it.

Seconds later, the plane began to lift off, but ran into new trouble, which the pilots were not able to correct, according to the transcript.

The yoke began vibrating violently, indicating the aircraft was not gaining altitude and was about to stall. Then a computer-generated voice sounded, "St-ail! St-ail!"

A partially distinguishable comment could be heard indicating the pilots were trying to apply power and fly out of their problems.

"St-ail!" sounded the computerized voice again.

"One of the pilots could be heard to say, 'Ah' followed by an expletive.

Four seconds later came the first sound of impact, presumably as the plane struck a light pole. No other sounds were heard from the pilots.

Flight 265 was delayed by poor weather and much discussion during the 30 minutes covered by the transcript involved talking about the delay, their arrival time in Phoenix, Ariz., and a brief talk with a flight attendant and for a short time with another pilot who stopped by the cockpit on the way to a seat in the cabin.

The pilots went through their first checklist while the plane was parked at the gate. Then came the pushback from the gate and about 10 minutes passed before final take-off clearance was given.

During this time, according to aviation experts, the pilots were supposed to have gone through a final preflight checklist. The Federal Aviation Administration requires each item to be called off by one pilot and acknowledged as having been accomplished by the other pilot.

There was no record of such a procedure on the transcript.

Bork debate could commence as early as next Tuesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd allowed Friday that the slow-start Senate debate on the Supreme Court nomination of Robert H. Bork could begin next Tuesday.

But he said the starting date could be pushed back again if the Senate decides instead to concentrate on efforts to invoke the War Powers Act in connection with developments in the Persian Gulf. He also said, for the first time, that if the Bork debate drags on too long after it does get under way, he might move to table the nomination — in other words, remove it from the agenda.

Byrd's comments late Friday came after a conservative Senate supporter of Bork said he would "stand in the way of the herd" and refuse to go along with an agreement that would allow a quick vote on the apparently doomed nomination.

The stance — of Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., threw the scheduled debate into confusion, raised the likelihood that no vote would occur for more than a week and further delayed the confirmation process for a new nominee. Byrd, D-W.Va., had spent several days trying to win an agreement from Republicans setting a specific time for voting and thus setting a limit for debate. Byrd said there was no reason for a delay since 54 senators already have said they would vote against the conservative appeals court judge, all but ensuring defeat when the vote does come. Humphrey, however, said Republicans need time to make their case. He said a vote could be held next Thursday or Friday, but possibly not until the week after.

Because of Humphrey's position, Byrd said he would not interrupt a previously scheduled day off on Monday to begin debate. So the debate, which promises to be bitter, could begin Tuesday at the earliest.

Also on Friday, Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., and Alfonso M. D'Amato, R-N.Y., became the 38th and 39th senators to say they would vote for Bork, leaving seven senators undecided.

Reorganized, AIDS group meets anew

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's 3-month-old AIDS commission, navigating crisisly under a new chairman, held what amounted to an organizing session Friday in its first public meeting since its top two members resigned last week.

At the conclusion, another member, who had been thinking about quitting, pronounced himself optimistic with the course set by the new chairman, retired Navy Adm. James D. Watkins, and said he would stay on the panel.

"I sincerely believe that if anybody in the United States can make a go of this panel, you can," Cardinal John J. O'Connor of New York City told Watkins. "If you had asked me, I would have said you would be crazy to take this job."

O'Connor's remarks came after the 11 commissioners spent the better part of four hours forming themselves into working groups and detailing a committee to start working on the framework of an initial report due Dec. 7.

The commission's original chairman, W. Eugene Mayberry, and vice chairman, Woodrow A. Myers Jr., resigned last week after a power struggle that had hampered efforts to get the commission moving.

Watkins said the two vacancies will be filled soon. Sitting beside Watkins at Friday's meeting was Polly L. Gaulk, named executive director by Watkins earlier this week. The top staff post had been vacant since Sept. 11, when Linda Sheaffer was ousted as part of the turmoil that eventually resulted in the departure of Mayberry and Myers.

Watkins acknowledged that the commission, which is authorized to have 15 full-time staff members, still has only two secretaries in addition to Gaulk, but he said he expects to flesh out the staff within the next week or so and will assign specific staffers to work directly with the various working groups.

Pentagon stops rumor

WASHINGTON (AP) — CBS News reported Friday that Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger has told White House and Pentagon officials he wants to resign, but the Pentagon quickly denied the report.

"We get this resignation rumor at least once a year and it's always just that, a rumor," said one official, who insisted on anonymity.

"It is flatly not true," added one ranking Pentagon official, who also asked to be anonymous. "He intends to stay exactly where he is."

The CBS News report, though mentioning Weinberger's disagreements with arms control and Persian Gulf policies, said Weinberger wants to step down for personal reasons. The report said the White House was trying to persuade Weinberger to stay.

The report said the actual resignation could still be weeks away.

Weinberger, 70, is one of the oldest members of the Reagan Cabinet and has been defense secretary since Jan. 21, 1981. Robert McNamara, who held the post seven years through the Johnson and Kennedy administrations, has occupied the position longer than anyone else.

According to one account reported by CBS, Weinberger wants his deputy, William Howard Taft IV, 42, to succeed him.

Weinberger personally dismissed the resignation story, CBS said, but the network quoted a source as confirming that Weinberger has talked privately in the past about resigning.

Accident is second to strike in McClure family this year

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — For Chip and Reba "Sissy" McClure, the ordeal of seeing their daughter trapped in a 22-foot-deep abandoned well for two days in the family's second traumatic experience this year, a relative said.

Rod McClure, Chip's older brother, died of AIDS in May, said his older sister, Ceidi Proctor.

"When I heard this news, I thought to myself, I can't believe this. This can't be happening," Ms. Proctor said Friday.

Chip, 18, and Reba, 17, married 2 1/2 years ago. Both dropped out of high school but have since earned a high school equivalency degree. Chip works as a house painter.

"They are real sweet kids," says neighbor Margie Lunsford. "She is an excellent mother."

The McClures live in an apartment in a working-class neighborhood near the home of an aunt, where Jessica fell into the 8-inch well opening Wednesday morning. Reba McClure was particularly tormented during the ordeal, because she was in the house when Jessica fell into the well, Ms. Proctor said.

"She keeps saying, 'I was only gone for five minutes.' She either went to answer the telephone or go to the bathroom, and she thought the children were perfectly safe because the yard was fenced in," said Ms. Proctor.

"They've come through a lot," she said. "Chip got a job and they have their own apartment. And now to have this happen to them."

Ms. Proctor gave no other details about the brother's death from acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which damages the body's immune system and leaves victims susceptible to cancers and other illnesses.

"She was not alone in her concern about the psychological impact of the trauma on the McClures. They are loving, church-going people," Ms. Keller said. "I'm shocked and I'm terrified for the little girl and the family."

Ms. Lunsford said Jessica is known as an active child who climbs on chairs and tables and has to be warned to stay away from things.

"She loves her daddy, but her and her mother are very close," Ms. Lunsford said of Jessica. "Sissy has a back carrier and everywhere she went, that baby went."

Midland psychologist Sam Hooper said the McClures can expect to suffer some emotional stress following the ordeal.

"They'll probably experience fatigue and a lack of interest in what's going on around them," he said. "In similar situations, parents often become over-protective of their child."

Texas town rallies around family in effort to set free trapped toddler

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Residents of this depression-weary West Texas oil patch town saw their own problems from a new perspective as they rallied around the effort to free a little girl trapped in a well.

"I think it's true that the closer you get to what remains of the frontier, the more people tend to depend upon their friends and neighbors for support and help," Mayor Carroll Thomas said Friday.

Thomas said he was impressed with the way his community responded to the rescue effort to get 18-month-old Jessica McClure out of a 22-foot-deep abandoned well.

"I think this pulled the community together. I think it would any community," Thomas said. "It makes us stop thinking about our problems and realize that someone else has bigger problems."

The 49-year-old stockbroker became mayor in May 1986 when Midland was feeling the worst of the oil bust. The city's unemployment rate was 14 percent at that time, but is now 9 percent. Thomas said, a little above the state's jobless rate.

"The city is definitely coming back. We went through some real hard times last year," he said, adding the town of about 90,000 lost a few thousand residents.

For many residents, Midland's troubled economy hasn't mattered during the last two days.

"A few hours ago, they needed more volunteers. And shortly after they announced that, they were turning people away," said longtime Midland County Commissioner Winfree Brown.

Raymond and Maxine Sprague have lived for 20 years in a house next door to the well where Jessica fell into the yard. Their home became a center for reporters to phone their editors and television crews to hook up their lights. Reporters took up a collection Friday morning and gave the Spragues nearly $200 to pay for damage to the house.

Fiscus rescue similar

RANCHO BERNARDO, Calif. (AP) — Efforts to save a Texas toddler trapped in a well brought back painful memories for Alice Fiscus, who lost her 3 1/2-year-old daughter in a similar accident 28 years ago.

"You try to forget each time something like this happens, why it brings it back," Mrs. Fiscus told KFBM-TV as workers struggled to reach 18-month-old Jessica McClure. "It's something that's helped us — to think it has helped other children."

"But I do want to send my love and prayers to this family," she added.

suburb of Los Angeles. The struggle to free Kathy gripped America, just as did the efforts Thursday and Friday in Texas.

But after 49 hours, when Kathy's body was brought up, the world learned she was dead, apparently from injuries suffered while falling in.

"We had prayers from everywhere in the world — it was absolutely unbelievable," Mrs. Fiscus recalled.

The Fiscus family received more than 22,000 donations, which were given to Los Angeles' Children's Hospital.

Shultz' focus is Soviet Jews

JERUSALEM (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz opened talks with Israeli officials Friday by focusing on their campaign for massive increases in Jewish immigration from the Soviet Union.

Both Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres urged Shultz, who will be in Moscow next week, to relay to Soviet authorities their insistence that Jews with exit permits be given directly to Israel.

About 6,430 Soviet Jews have been granted exit visas to Israel so far this year, compared with 61,320 in the peak emigration year of 1979. Israeli leaders told Shultz it was important to establish direct flights from Moscow to Israel for Soviet Jews because only about one-third of emigrants with Israeli visas were coming to Israel. The rest settled in Europe or the United States.

State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said Shultz restated the U.S. position that emigrants should have freedom of choice regarding their destinations and should not be forced to fly directly to Israel.

A number of American Jewish groups have expressed similar views.

Avi Pazner, spokesman for Shamir, said: "We are not at all against freedom of choice, which is very dear to Mr. Shultz. But we think we can solve much of this problem if we have direct flights from the Soviet Union to Israel."

Once Soviet Jews reach Israel, they usually stay. Foreign ministry spokesman Ehud Gol said that between 1972 and 1979, when Soviet Jewish immigration reached its peak, more than 160,000 Jews came to Israel and 95 percent of them remained.

Gol quoted Peres as telling Shultz that Jewish immigration is more important for Israel than re-establishing relations with the Soviet Union.

The Kremlin severed ties with Israel after the 1967 Middle East war.

Shultz focused on the issue of Jewish immigration for several reasons. For one thing, he supports the right of people to live where they wish. For another, he hopes that Soviet concessions on immigration might make Israel more amenable to Soviet participation in the Middle East peace process.

Shultz is on the first leg of a mission to find a formula for direct peace talks between Israel and the Arabs.

"I am going to be in as creative a frame of mind as I can," Shultz said, commenting about the negotiation process.

Shultz suggested that an international conference might not be the best way to negotiate a settlement of the 40-year-old Mideast conflict.

Shamir is cool to the idea of a conference in which the Soviet Union could play an influential role. But Peres and Jordan's King Hussein support such a plan.

"The important thing is bilateral negotiations, and the question is how do you get there," Shultz said.

He told reporters traveling with him that his aim was finding a structure "that leaves the parties unencumbered to work out whatever they want to work out."

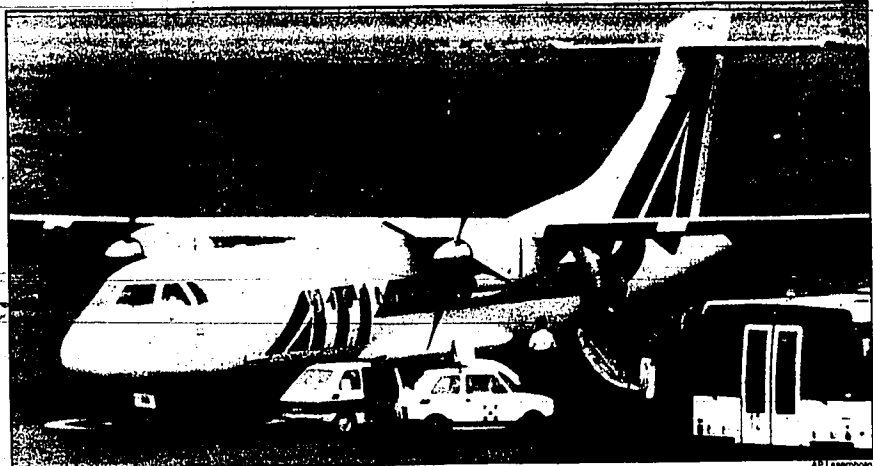

Peres, meeting Shultz at Ben Gurion International airport outside Tel Aviv, counseled patience. "One cannot force peace, one has to build it, and this building requires patience and wisdom," he said.

After a side trip today to Jidda for talks with King Fahd of Saudi Arabia, Shultz will meet separately Sunday with Shamir, Peres, Ida Nudel, a prominent Soviet refusenik, and a group of Palestinian Arabs.

Arab newspapers on Friday urged Palestinian leaders to boycott the talks because of what they called Shultz's rejection of Palestinian rights.

Shultz has said he would not intervene in the dispute over an international peace conference, which has divided Israel's 3-year-old coalition government.

Shultz has accused the Soviets of trying to sabotage an attempt by Jordan's King Hussein last year to catch up with a dispute with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

37 found dead in Italian airliner crash

BARNI, Italy (AP) — An alpine rescue team descended from helicopters into the craggy foothills of the Italian Alps on Friday and found the remains of an Italian airliner that crashed in a rainstorm, killing all 37 people aboard.

"At the moment we don't know how or why it happened," said state prosecutor Mario Del Franco, who is investigating the crash. "It's now up to experts to determine the cause."

The ATI airliner crashed Thursday night near this mountain resort bordering Lake Como about 20 miles north of Milan, minutes after taking off from Milan on a flight to Cologne, West Germany.

A passenger list released by ATI, a subsidiary of the Italian state-run carrier Alitalia, did not include nationalities. But airport sources said 29 passengers were West Germans and five passengers and the three crewmembers were Italians.

Witnesses reported they saw a burning plane, flying very low in driving rain, and then heard a powerful explosion as it slammed into a heavily forested area about 2,400 feet above sea level.

Rescue teams searched in vain for the wreckage overnight as poor visibility, rough terrain and high cliffs hampered their efforts.

Alpine guides, using ropes to lower themselves from hovering helicopters, finally spotted the scattered wreckage at dawn Friday, nearly 12 hours after the plane vanished from radar screens at Milan's Linate airport.

"Our first worry was to organize the rescue, but unfortunately it wasn't needed because there are no survivors," Del Franco said.

The airline said searchers found one of the airliner's so-called black boxes, its flight data recorder. The cockpit voice recorder was still missing.

Investigators said they were examining "all possibilities" for the cause of the crash of the twin-engine turboprop.

Del Franco declined comment reports that the plane was in flames before the crash.

"I will begin formal questioning of eyewitnesses in the next few days, thus I have nothing to say at the moment," he said.

Tamara Villa, who runs the Madonna Refuge, an inn near the crash site, said in an interview Thursday night that she saw "a ball of fire" rising in the air "and then we could see an explosion in the valley... it looked like fireworks."

An ATI investigation commission refused comment on the possible cause as they inspected the crash site along the slopes of Mount Crozza, east of the lake resort of Bellagio.

In Rome, the Italian cabinet announced it would appoint a separate commission to investigate the crash.

As mourning relatives arrived in Erba and Bellagio, dozens of soldiers and victims recovered the remains of the wreckage scattered over a huge area.

"It's a complex and long operation in a rough area," Gazzillo said.

Some corpses were taken to the gymnasium at nearby Asso.

Thursday night's crash was the first for the Italian commercial aviation in seven years.

Nicaragua claims Contras threatening to kill clergymen

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Foreign Ministry said Friday that anti-Sandinista rebels have threatened to execute two clergymen who were kidnapped while working with a local peace commission near Waslala in northern Nicaragua.

A Nicaraguan Resistance spokeswoman denied the allegation.

The ministry said a Roman Catholic priest, the Rev. Enrique Blandon, and a Seventh-day Adventist preacher, Gustavo Adolfo Tiffer, both residents of Waslala, were kidnapped Oct. 10 when they tried to discuss a partial cease-fire with a Contra field commander identified only as "Danto."

"We have information that they (the rebels) have said that they are thinking about their execution, their assassination tomorrow (Saturday)," said Miguel d'Escoto, the foreign minister. "That would be a lamentable thing and it obviously is not something that should happen."

D'Escoto said the Foreign Ministry had asked the United States, which funds the Contras, to intervene and demand that the rebels "issue a counter-order."

Blandon and the three others were never taken into custody, she said in a telephone interview, adding that she had no information on Tiffer.

Storm rips through W. Europe, kills 21

LONDON (AP) — A storm packing hurricane-force winds whipped through parts of Western Europe early Friday, killing at least 21 people and knocking down buildings, trees and hundreds of miles of power lines.

In England, the storm was the worst in centuries, striking the south without warning. At least 13 people were killed.

The gales swept in off the English Channel, rolled through the orchards of Kent and smashed into London just before dawn, knocking out electric power across the capital.

The same storm battered northern France Thursday night and Friday morning, killing four people.

The storm hit northwestern Spain Thursday and was blamed for one death.

In Portugal, torrential rains whipped by gales blocked roads, uprooted trees, cut power lines and flooded neighborhoods in the central and northern regions. Four people died and nine were injured.

The London Weather Center said winds in London gusted up to 94 mph, the strongest ever recorded in the capital, and hit 110 mph on the southern island of Guernsey off England's southeast coast.

Hundreds of ancient trees were uprooted at the Royal Botanic Gardens at Kew. "Kew Gardens will never be the same in our lifetime," said spokeswoman Christine Brandt.

Granular tower cranes swayed dangerously over construction sites. Uprooted trees blocked railroad tracks and — made — hundreds — of — roads impassable.

Trains and subways, powered by electrical rails and overhead cables, were at a standstill much of the morning and 101 flights were canceled and dozens delayed at London's Heathrow Airport.

"I admit we weren't forecasting hurricane-force winds and that's what we got," said meteorologist Ian McKaskill — of the weather center. "That's what we will get maybe once every 50 years, maybe once a lifetime."

McKaskill said winds were trapped between cold air from the north and unusually warm, moist air from the south. He said a similar storm was recorded here in 1703.

Millions of customers in London and southern Surrey, Kent and Essex counties were without power for several hours. Electricity was restored in time for most Londoners' breakfasts, but was slowly trickling back to other areas throughout the day as winds died down and the sun shone.

The blackout was London's worst since the late 1960s, said Andy Roe, spokesman for the Central Electricity Generating Board. He said the wind knocked out several hundred miles of overhead power lines.

Dover, the world's busiest passenger port, was closed for the first time in living memory because of high seas.

The Coast Guard said the 10,000-ton diving vessel, Smit-Lloyd One, lost power and steering in the North Sea and came dangerously close to colliding with two oil rigs before being steamed by rescue ships in 104 mph winds.

The Queen's Hotel in the south coast town of Hastings was blown down "like a deck of cards," killing one man, police said. Nearby, a beach hut hurled by the wind struck and killed a fisherman.

In France, a cyclist was killed when a gust blew him into a telephone pole in St. Aubin les Ecluse in Normandy.

A man in the Brittany village of Kerligor was killed when the tree he was cutting fell on him.

African president executed in coup

OUAGADOUGA — Burkina Faso (AP) — Capt. Thomas Sankara and 12 other officials were executed and buried Friday after Sankara's chief adviser ousted him as president of this impoverished West African nation, an official source said.

Capt. Blaise Compaore, leader of a bloody coup on Thursday, declared a national holiday. A statement read on national radio called Sankara a "madman."

An official source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Sankara and a dozen other officials, including the presidential press secretary and a senior police official, were shot and buried Friday morning in a mass burial outside Ouagadougou, the capital.

Witnesses said residents pushed and shoved to get a glimpse of the names of the dead written on scraps of paper that served as makeshift gravestones.

A communique read on government radio Friday night said Sankara had planned to "arrest and execute" his opponents in government during a meeting scheduled Thursday night. The communique said some members of the presidential guard and security forces learned of Sankara's plan and acted to "avoid an unnecessary bloodbath."

The government radio made no mention of Sankara's fate, but other regional stations broadcast news of his death.

Compaore announced that representatives from the country's 30 provinces would meet to elect a new president. The announcement did not set a date for the election.

The new government said 1,500 teachers, fired in 1984 for protesting government policies, had been reinstated. It also said all political prisoners had been released.

In Washington, the State Department said the United States did not plan any immediate action that would constitute recognition of the new government.

"The question of recognition is really not appropriate at the moment," said department spokesman Phyllis Oakley. In cases of coups or "abrupt government changes," she said the United States closely monitors the situation but generally refrains from signing agreements of any kind with the new leader.

The events surrounding the takeover were not clear. Witnesses said they heard shots fired around the presidential palace on Thursday afternoon. Sporadic firing continued throughout most of the evening but it was unclear whether it was armed resistance or simply shots being fired in the air.

Burkina Faso, so named in August 1984, was previously known as Upper Volta and was once a colony of France.

Soviets explode device

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union exploded a nuclear device in Central Asia on Friday in an underground test of military technology, the official Tass news agency said.

The blast, which Tass said was equivalent to 20,000 tons of TNT, was the 19th underground nuclear explosion since the Kremlin abandoned a unilateral test moratorium on Feb. 28.

Tass said the blast at the Semipalatinsk test range in Kazakhstan was staged "with the aim of perfecting military technology," but gave no additional details.

In August 1985, the Soviets began a unilateral moratorium on nuclear testing and urged the United States to "make-the-test-freeze mutual."

The United States refused, citing national security concerns, and the Soviets resumed underground testing this year.

The latest previous blast was on

Oct. 3, when an underground nuclear device was detonated in Kazakhstan for economic purposes.

Most of the Soviet nuclear explosions conducted since Feb. 28 have been for military purposes, but officials have said several of them were intended to help the economy.

A blast this summer was to help extract oil deposits, Soviet media said at the time.

Sankara: new style of leadership

PARIS (AP) — Capt. Thomas Sankara, in four flamboyant years as president of Burkina Faso, struggled in vain to show that a poor African nation could break colonial molds and thrive on its own.

Sources in Ouagadougou, the capital, said the 37-year-old leader was killed in a coup led Thursday by his second-in-command, Capt. Blaise Compaore.

With colorful dress language, often set to his own rock music, and clad in camouflage fatigues or jogging shorts, Sankara had symbolized for many Africans a new sort of leader who could better their lives.

When Bob Geldof organized Sport Aid in 1986, a worldwide mini-marathon for famine relief, the president led a pack of civil servants and citizens gasping in the West African heat.

"Development is what we do ourselves," he told The Associated Press in an interview last year, explaining why he thought France had left his people in the lurch at independence in 1960.

"Those who colonized us had the means to set up a system so that we could survive," he said. "But we don't have the right now to sit around and plead for help every time our crops fail."

He tried to restore traditional ways of farming and self-help while altering customs that blocked development. As part of this, he championed African women's rights, naming three women in his Cabinet.

"In our society, the woman is a beast of burden. She is exploited like a cow which produces offspring, gives milk, and has the force to work and offer pleasure. When old and tired, she is replaced by another cow."

He also railed against corruption and waste, firing suspected officials and closing bars during working hours to keep people at their desks.

Sankara shunned the heavy security other African leaders rely upon.

Legendary Michael Jordan included in new World Book

CHICAGO (AP) — The staying power of pro basketball star Michael Jordan, British actor Sir John Gielgud and the Toyota Motor Corp. has put them among 70 new entries in the 1998 World Book Encyclopedia, editors say.

"You can't be of temporary interest like rock stars such as Madonna, who may be here today, gone tomorrow," said Executive Editor A. Richard Harmet.

The new edition, celebrating the Chicago-based encyclopedia's 70th anniversary, is the most extensive World Book revision in 26 years, he said.

"We wanted to see what we could do to make World Book more useful and usable," Harmet said Thursday.

Jordan, the ninth professional basketball player to be included, was chosen for his NBA scoring record and spectacular dunk shots, the World Book editors said. Gielgud was selected for his distinguished 66-year acting career. Toyota became the first Japanese car maker to make the World Book.

"A person, event, or subject must have historical significance, must have made a major contribution to his or her field or must be a topic of great interest to a large number of people," Harmet said.

Rosalyn speaks out on media stereotyping

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Rosalyn Carter, the former first lady, says the news media have helped promote a stereotypical image of the mentally ill as dangerous people.

"The media can make so much difference," she said Thursday. "People need to be made aware of the fact that it can happen to anyone. It can happen to their families."

Mrs. Carter, who has been married to former President Carter 41 years, was in Birmingham Thursday for the annual meeting of the state Mental Health Association.

Earlier, she spoke at Judson College in Marion as part of the induction ceremonies for the Alabama Women's Hall of Fame. Alabama author Lella Warren and neurosurgeon Elizabeth Caroline Crosby were the inductees.

Mrs. Carter's involvement with mental health programs began 16 years ago when her husband was governor of Georgia. There has been progress in the field of mental health since that time, she said.

"For the first time we are developing coalitions that can have an influence on legislative processes," she said. "Mental health is becoming an acceptable cause."

Sexier, steamier scene planned for L.A. Law

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Susan Dey said her character of tough deputy district attorney Grace Van Owen on NBC's "L.A. Law" will loosen up this season and be more sexy and confident. Confident enough, perhaps, to go without Kuzak's socks.

The love scenes between Miss Dey and actor Harry Hamlin, who plays lawyer Michael Kuzak, were steamy last season but Miss Dey said she may have been a bit inhibited.

"Some of the specific sexual, sensual scenes between Owen and Kuzak ... it was different. And I felt the difference," she said. "At times, it was breaking through for both Harry and myself."

"One scene there was a negligence, and we hadn't seen Grace Van Owen in anything like this. She was going to be in a negligee and lying in bed, going over legal briefs. I said, 'I can't handle it.' I said, 'See if I can wear Kuzak's socks. That would make me feel more comfortable.' They cleared it and said OK. You never saw the socks on film, but it made me feel more comfortable, more balanced."

Peter Holm seeks more following serious illness

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The lawyer for Peter Holm, who quit when

Holm phoned in sick from France before a hearing on his demand for $80,000 a month in alimony from ex-wife Joan Collins, was back on the case Thursday.

Frank Steinschreiber agreed to re-enter the case because of signed statements from Holm's French court confirming that the former Swedish rock star had flu that rendered him unfit to travel, said Lynn Roache, Steinschreiber's legal secretary.

The lawyer is scheduled to argue for re-opening of the case at a hearing Oct. 30, Roache said. Documents filed with the court contains a declaration from Holm answering questions about his marital status.

"Rumors that I remarried are untrue," Holm wrote.

Miss Collins' attorney, Marvin Mitchellson, told reporters Oct. 7 that Holm, 40, had married Cathy Wardlaw, the former secretary to Los Angeles Lakers and Kings owner Jerry Buss.

Mitchelson has said Holm received $1.9 million during the couple's marriage and deserves nothing more.

Deng: Better conditions, more handicap support

UNIVERSAL CITY Calif. (AP) — Deng Pufang, the wheelchair-bound son of Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping, called on Hollywood's leaders to help improve conditions for the handicapped.

Deng, 43, paralyzed from the waist down since he was thrown out of a fourth-floor window at Beijing University by Red Guards during the 1968 Cultural Revolution, has emerged in recent years as China's leading spokesman for disabled people's rights.

He currently heads the China Welfare Fund for the Handicapped. Deng is in the midst of a three-week U.S. visit, his first.

Father pleads Gambling daughter underaged, broke

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Casinos gave a 17-year-old girl drinks, hotel rooms, limo rides and expensive meals, treating her as a high-roller despite her father's protests that she was underage and a compulsive gambler—state gaming regulators said Thursday.

Debra Kim Cohen lost thousands of dollars playing blackjack with money from her bank account, which included earnings from sales-clerk jobs and gifts from a Sweet 16 birthday party, said her father, Leonard Cohen.

The state Division of Gaming Enforcement filed complaints Wednesday against five casinos — Caesars, Harrah's Marina, Resorts International, Elsinore's Atlantis and Trump Plaza — for allowing Miss Cohen to gamble, even though she was under the legal gambling age of 21.

State Attorney General W. Cary Edwards said he only did the casinos fail to check on her age, but they rated her play, checking how much she gambled and how well she played.

"To compound matters, as a result of their ratings, Caesars and Resorts extended her complimentary services, while Harrah's made the offer, which was declined."

The complimentary services or "comps," customarily given to preferred customers, included free drinks, hotel rooms, limousine rides, shows and expensive meals, the state complaint said.

Cohen's attorney had sent letters and photographs of his daughter to the casinos, notifying them that the girl was an underage compulsive gambler.

"Notwithstanding the plea for assistance and cooperation, several of the casinos continued to permit Miss Cohen to gamble," said Division of Gaming Enforcement Director Anthony Parrillo.

The complaint also charges a Caesars security officer, David Olin, with allowing Miss Cohen into the casino even after she told him she was 17.

Security officers posted at casino entrances are required to "check for juveniles who may try to enter," Edwards said. "If a minor does slip by security, the responsibility of deterring his or her age falls to the dealers and floor people."

John Hagerty, a spokesman for the attorney general, added, "Unfortunately, many minors in today's society don't appear to be minors."

Officials of the five casinos named by the gaming commission said they had not received the complaint and would not comment Thursday. Caesars spokeswoman Rosalyn Lifshin only would say the complaint "is currently under review by our legal staff."

When contacted Thursday, Cohen, an Atlantic City police detective, said his attorney had advised him not to speak about the situation because his daughter faces charges of underage gambling.

But in a recent interview with The Press of Atlantic City, Cohen said he tried everything to help his daughter, now 18 and living with her mother in the Queens section of New York City. They have an unpublished telephone number and Miss Cohen's father would not give it out.

"I tried punishing her, I tried not punishing her," he told The Press. "I tried taking her out myself, spending time with her. I tried psychiatrists, teachers, her peers."

The distraught father said his daughter's gambling habit "got to the point where she would be gone two, three, four days at a time, to the point where she slept in casino lobbies and bathrooms. This would go on until she was penniless and hungry."

When not gambling, Miss Cohen was a typical teen-ager, her father said. She was second runner-up in a local beauty contest and worked at an after-school job in a department store.

"But the same teen-ager thought it was a heady experience to be able to treat her friends to a free gourmet meal at a casino, Cohen said.

Underage gambling is not a new problem, Parrillo said, but the state Casino Control Commission has imposed only nominal fines on offending casinos, unlike nightclubs and liquor stores that face much stiffer penalties and even loss of their license for violating age restrictions.

Hagerty, the attorney general's spokesman, said fines issued by the Casino Control Commission against casinos for underage gambling typically have ranged from $2,000 to $4,000.

In the Cohen case, gaming regulators will ask the commission "to impose much stiffer and harsher penalties," Parrillo said.

Jensen, director of the New Jersey Council on Compulsive Gambling, said he obtained commission figures showing 177,000 juveniles were turned away from casinos in a one-year period. An additional 3,600 were taken off the floor, he said.

Inventory control fallen by wayside

BOISE (AP) — Since the state of Idaho did away with a central property management agency, inventory control in individual agencies has "fallen by the wayside," says Legislative Auditor Bruce Balderston.

The next Legislature may be asked to come up with a new policy requiring state agencies to keep closer track of property, legislators said.

The Legislature's Joint Finance Appropriations Committee has been reviewing agency performance audit reports here.

Friday, Sen. Atwell Parry, R-Melba, said he was concerned that many of the reports indicate very lax inventory control in state agencies.

"It appears there are a lot of inventory problems in all agencies and departments," he said. "It is a significant problem. We need to take a real good look at this. Maybe we should go back to what we were doing."

Balderston said since the Legislature cut out the central property management system to save money, it has been up to each agency to pursue its own inventory policies.

"It has been left in the hands of the agencies and it has fallen by the wayside," he said.

He said there is almost no way his auditors can check state agency records to determine if property is missing. The only control is to check capital outlay against what is found, but that still won't help locate items purchased several years ago.

"Desks can't walk away, but other things can. If there is no record of it, you don't even know it is gone," he said.

Balderston said capital assets are not much different than cash. "If that much cash were involved, we would be doing something about it," he said.

"There should be a record of what they bought, and if it isn't there, where it is," said Neibaur.

The $1.6 billion laid out by out-of-state visitors, plus the additional $500 million spent by Utahns traveling in the state, generated $425 million in wage and salary income for 47,000 jobs. The money shelled out by campers, skiers and sightseers also produced $92 million in state-tax revenue and nearly $28 million in taxes for local governments.

North's aide: 'authorized'

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — The man who acted as courier for Lt. Col. Oliver North in secretly passing money to the Nicaraguan Contras says he thought he was acting under the authority of President Reagan.

"I assumed, although I never asked, that I was acting under the authority of the president of the United States," Robert Owen said Thursday. He spoke at a news conference here prior to a lecture engagement at the University of Montana.

Owen, 33, also said because he dealt in private money during the Iran-Contra operation, he believes he violated no laws. Between 1984 and 1986 Owen worked for the Nicaraguan resistance, and at one point worked under a $50,000 contract with the U.S. Department of State, distributing $27 million in U.S. humanitarian aid to the Contras.

Owen, who testified under a grant of limited immunity before U.S. House and Senate committees investigating the Iran-Contra affair, was paid $3,500 by the Associated Students of the University of Montana for his speech Thursday.

Hospitalized Benson to be released soon

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church President Ezra Taft Benson, hospitalized for "physical discomfort" possibly linked to a heart ailment, may be released from LDS Hospital early next week, church officials say.

The 88-year-old "prophet, seer and revelator" of the 6.4 million-member Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints was admitted Thursday morning after complaining of discomfort as he began his day's activities.

Church officials still did not release details on the location of the discomfort Benson felt. However, he was admitted to the hospital's coronary care unit, both church and hospital authorities confirmed.

"He continues to be listed in stable condition today at LDS Hospital. He spent a comfortable night," Cahill said Friday. "There will be further tests to determine the source of the discomfort that resulted in his being hospitalized."

Benson, who served as agriculture secretary 1953-61 under President Eisenhower, became the 13th president of the church on Nov. 10, 1986 following the death of his predecessor, Spencer W. Kimball, 90. The church's presidents serve for life.

"An electronic pacemaker was implanted in Benson in November 1986. He had been hospitalized for observation in January of that year after fainting at his residence."

Utah's tourism depends on future advertising

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Stunning scenery is one of Utah's biggest draws for tourists, and restrictive liquor laws are among the least of the travelers' worries, an exhaustive new survey concludes.

The $160,000, 18-month study, released Friday by the Utah Travel Council and the Salt Lake Convention and Visitors Bureau, was touted as possibly the largest and most comprehensive ever conducted for a single state.

In included interviews with more than 21,000 U.S. residents and an analysis of information provided by the U.S. Travel and Tourism Administration regarding foreign tourists to the state.

Officials with the two sponsoring agencies say hope the information will help them plot ways to increase the $1.5 billion out-of-state travelers spent in the state during 1986.

"It's a marketing tool, pure and simple," said Travel Council spokesman Joe Rutherford. "We wanted this to find out where we're going, how we should proceed."

The survey was conducted by the Washington D.C.-based United States Travel Data Center in connection with Dan Jones & Associates, Inc. in Salt Lake City, the University of Utah Bureau of Economic and Business Research,

Idaho's 'swing vote' could be an area judge

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — Appointment of an Idaho Supreme Court justice to succeed the late Charles Donaldson, considered the "swing vote" on the five-member panel, will have a big impact on future Idaho law.

It also will have political ramifications, even though Supreme Court appointments are nonpartisan.

Although you won't find in any lawbooks, for generations there has been a "gentlemen's agreement" among Idaho political leaders about the makeup of the Supreme Court.

Making appointments to the Idaho Supreme Court isn't something that an Idaho governor gets to do every day. John Evans, even though he was governor for nearly 10 years, got to appoint just one justice, Robert C. Huntley Jr. in 1982.

Of the four holdovers, Chief Justice Allan Shepard is the senior, having been selected in 1968 and seated early in 1969.

In 1971, Andrus had the opportunity to appoint a replacement for Clay Spear, who was from northern Idaho. But insiders say Andrus didn't like the nominee presented to him from that area, who just happened to be a strong-minded and Republican-leaning district judge. He picked Bakes instead, a Boisean and former assistant U.S. district attorney.

The next appointment came in 1976 when former Pocatellan Henry McQuade resigned for a federal job. Instead of replacing him with an eastern Idaho appointment, Andrus named Stephen Bastline from Sandpoint.

When Joseph McFadden, who came from the Magic Valley, retired in 1982, Evans appointed Huntley, from Pocatello.

That long process, then, could dictate that the next appointment will be from the Magic Valley.

The replacement depends on who is nominated by the Idaho Judicial Council. That panel is to select at least two and no more than four nominees for consideration by the governor.

In contrast to other appointments, however, once Andrus makes up his mind, that's it. The Idaho Legislature does not get to confirm judicial appointments, which would be a violation of the separation of powers provision of the state constitution.

Supreme Court justices do not have lifetime terms, but that's the way it has worked in the past. Once a judge is appointed, there is a great reluctance among the state's legal community to oppose him for re-election.

Lawyers simply don't want to run against a justice, who later might be in a position to make important decisions against them.

3 names circulating for position

TWIN FALLS — Three names already are circulating among the legal community in Twin Falls for the vacant position on the state Supreme Court — William Nungester, Lloyd Webb and Fifth District Court Judge Daniel Hurlbut.

Mark Stubbs, a Twin Falls attorney and chairman of the Twin Falls Republican Central Committee, said Friday he has been called by attorneys from Nungester's and Webb's law offices.

"Basically, there are some people out sniffing the political winds," he said. "I think Webb is one of the most qualified lawyers in the state of Idaho, as is Nungester."

Hurlbut earlier, this week said he was flattered his name was mentioned as a candidate, but he has not yet decided to apply.

Analysis

Tradition has it that there is to be one judge from northern Idaho, two from southwestern Idaho, one from the Magic Valley and one from eastern Idaho.

That tradition has been bent out of shape for the last 16 years. To get it back in kilter, Gov. Cecil Andrus could appoint the new justice from the Magic Valley, even though Donaldson was from Boise.

Water flow ruling waiting on figures

By the Associated Press and the Times-News

PRESTON — The Idaho Water Resources Board took no action on the minimum stream flow request at Crystal Springs, but a board member said there will be a formal hearing at some point.

"We're all concerned about it, and feel strongly there should be one," said William Lanting, a former state representative and now a Water Resources Board member from Hollister. "I'm sure there will be a hearing, but it hasn't been set."

Lanting said the reason for the delay is that the board is still waiting for accurate measurements on the total flow at Crystal Springs. He said he did not know when those measurements would be made.

The Idaho Parks and Recreation Department asked the board to apply for a minimum stream flow of 50 cubic feet per second at the stream. The Army Corps of Engineers also is applying for the 50 cfs of additional water for its steelhead hatchery across the river, but corps officials say the 50 cfs is high.

Board members also discussed, but took no action, on the Snake River Basin adjudication process and federal reserved water right negotiations, and a minimum stream-flow request on the Big Wood River.

In other business, it will cost as much as $35 million to build the proposed Stewart Dam on the Smith Fork River above Cokeville, Wyo., a major tributary to the Bear River system, an Idaho Department of Water Resources engineer says.

Ralph Mellin told the Idaho Water Resources Board that the dam would allow irrigation of some 20,000 acres in Idaho and another 14,000 acres in Wyoming at a cost of $12 to $21 per acre annually.

The Water Resources Board and Keith Higginson, who recently succeeded A. Kenneth Dunn as director of the Idaho Department of Water Resources, spent much of their time Thursday reviewing the status of the Bear River Basin development program, as well as a number of other state water issues.

Frank Nishiguchi of Box Elder County, Utah, chairman of an ad hoc dam committee spanning the three states through the Bear River Basin, urged the board to support the Stewart Dam proposal.

Nishiguchi said the dam would help ensure adequate water for irrigation and municipal and industrial uses in the region. But he also urged the board to require that recreation users help pay for the project.

Representatives of Utah Power & Light Co., which has developed and now regulates the Bear River system, asked the board not to forget the Salt Lake City based utility in its planning.

Window breaking suspects arrested

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Two men who may have left a stream of broken glass behind them were arrested late Thursday night.

Larry Albert Harms, 19, of Route 1, Wendell was charged on Friday with three misdemeanor counts of malicious destruction, said Twin Falls Public Safety Director Tim Qualls.

David Paul Gabert, 20, of 361 Martins St. in Twin Falls is to appear in 5th District Magistrate Court Oct. 27 on a charge of misdemeanor malicious destruction.

Qualls said the two men are also under investigation in connection with 12 more incidents of malicious destruction to vehicles and businesses during the past two weeks.

Harms and Gabert were apprehended after a report of a car window shot out at 659 Blue Lakes Boulevard N. at 10:42 p.m., according to court records. The vehicle was owned by a Kevin Coggins.

Harms was taken into custody by Twin Falls police. Gabert was issued a citation to appear in court on the misdemeanor charge, Qualls said.

In addition to the window smashing on Blue Lakes Boulevard, Harms is charged with allegedly shooting out a window at Wholesale Carpets at 726 Main Ave. N. and a window at First Interstate Bank at 113 Main Ave. W. on the night of Oct. 5, court records state.

Gabert faces a charge for the destruction to the vehicle on Blue Lakes Boulevard.

The suspects are believed to have used baseball bats and rockets to cause the damage, court records state. Qualls didn't have any figures on the total amount of damage done to businesses on Shoshone Street West, Blue Lakes Boulevard and Main Avenue North. There were also reports of smashed windows to vehicles and homes on Filer Avenue and Polk Street.

Police suspected the damage was caused by pellets fired from a moving vehicle.

Some city residents were in fear of their windows after a flurry of destruction on Oct. 5. Police responded to reports of broken windows to businesses on Shoshone Street West, Blue Lakes Boulevard and Main Avenue North. Extensive volunteer work earned Jack Muldoon his 1987 Chamber Person of the Year award

Speaker: Dedication is the key

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — People helping people can make a difference.

That was the message given Friday by Fred Norman, director of the Morrison Center in Boise, at the Fifth Annual Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce Success Breakfast.

But Norman's theme, so common these days, contains a twist.

He says that systems, corporations and computers rule the world today and people who are dedicated to doing a good job and serving others are disappearing.

"We've become so captured by systems," Norman said. "We panic because things rule the world."

But people volunteering their time and caring about their work will make a change, even if it's "inch-by-inch," he said.

"As an executive director, I don't raise funds, I raise attitudes," he said.

Norman, who raised millions of dollars for the Morrison Center, says it's important to keep plugging away at change.

"All things are not relevant to the past or future or present," Norman said. "The key is: right things are right, wrong things are wrong."

Norman's talk, titled "People and Systems Make Good Book Ends," continuously stressed the need for hard work and unselfishness.

"By sharing our service, inch by inch, we can make a difference," he said to the businessmen at the Friday breakfast.

Chamber award goes to Muldoon

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — You might call him super volunteer. Jack Muldoon has given his time to so many organizations it could make a lesser person's head spin.

The Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce Friday called Jack Muldoon its 1987 Chamber Person of the Year. The Chamber's Ambassadors Committee chose Muldoon over 22 other nominees.

Muldoon, fresh off a stint as head of the successful Twin Falls County Jail Advisory Committee, was honored at the 1987 Chamber Success Breakfast. Muldoon spearheaded a successful campaign to pass a $3.8 million bond issue to build a new Twin Falls County Jail.

But Muldoon, sitting in his home office after the breakfast, said he isn't resting on his laurels.

He's donating his time as local president of the Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship International, promoting Billy Graham religious films in the area and with the Prison Ministry, a group of laymen who visit prisons to give religious ceremonies.

"It's something that's contagious," Muldoon said of his volunteer work.

Muldoon has been active in Parent Teacher Associations, the Boy Scouts of America, the United Way, the Salvation Army, the Kiwanis Club, the Chamber of Commerce, the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Board, the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Foundation and is on the board of directors of the Idaho Olympians.

In short, Muldoon seems to be addicted to volunteering his time.

Defendant tells his side of the story

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The defendant took the witness stand in 5th District Court Friday to tell the jury a different version of what happened day for their instructions from the judge and to on the night he is accused of the kidnap and murder of a Filer woman.

Marvin D. Hedger, 38, of Twin Falls, is on trial for burglary, robbery, rape-aggravated battery and kidnapping of a woman who testified Thursday she escaped from him with Mike Wood, to testify on his own behalf. He described how she begged and pleaded with the defendant in a rest stop near Jackpot, Nev., was once married to, and several other previous witnesses.

Hedger, however, told the 12-member jury that the more than four hours he spent with the woman were pleasant and friendly and that her she willingly engaged in sexual intercourse with him in her home.

The second full day of the trial ended at 6:15 p.m. Friday and the five women and seven men on the jury were told to return at 10 a.m. Monday for their instructions from the judge and to hear final arguments from the prosecution and defense attorneys. They will begin deliberation on the case Monday.

Hedger was called to the stand Friday by his attorney, Twin Falls County Public Defender Mike Wood, to testify on his own behalf. He described how she begged and pleaded with the defendant in a rest stop near Jackpot, Nev., was once married to, and several other previous witnesses.

On Thursday the woman testified that he entered her home through a window, then held her at knife point with repeated threats on her life. She said he raped her, forced her to drive with him in her home, and there told her he planned to kill her.

Under questioning by Wood, Hedger said the two were getting along well and talked of reconciliation. He said they were joking and drinking beer together and that it was, in fact, the woman's idea to drive to Nevada on the night of the alleged incidents.

Hedger said the jury that he did not rape the woman, did not kidnap her and did not threaten her with a kitchen knife. In fact, he said she was driving him home to his Twin Falls apartment when she turned toward Nevada about 1:30 a.m. June 10.

Hedger said he went to the woman's home and she let him in, and they then drank some

Zoning group OKs mini-storage units

By PAT MARGANTONIO

TWIN FALLS — A Bozeman, Mont., company is proceeding with plans for a new business park on Elm Street North.

The Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission approved on Tuesday a request by Melco, Inc. for a special-use permit to build mini-storage units on the 1500 block of Elm Street North. The storage units are a phase of the plan for Blue Lakes Business Park.

The storage facilities will be accessed from Elm Street through a security gate, company officials reported.

The buildings will be constructed along the north and east property lines and face the interior of the area.

The commission also approved a rezoning of part of the property from commercial to residential to act as a buffer for Locust Street North, said LaMar Orton, the city development director.

The east section of the lot was rezoned from residential to commercial.

UP&L's Jody Williams said any decisions on the Stewart Dam must take into account the three-state Bear River Compact and that all existing storage and off-stream control mechanisms have been built and maintained by the company.

"Utah Power currently operates the river but does not want to stand in the way of development," Williams said, encouraging board members to let UP&L work with it on any proposed project.

Craig Thomas of the Bear Lake Regional Commission said the BLM is letting in high amounts of phosphorus and nitrogen, which is a concern to the commission and landowners around the lake.

Don Ricks, a Bear Lake County water user, said construction of the Stewart Dam would be good for irrigators and help control pollution entering the lake.

Don Gilbert of Grace, president of the Last Chance Canal Co., the largest irrigation company on Bear River, urged the board to consider development of a site near Soda Springs for a dam, rather than at Cokeville, because a feasibility study for that location already has been completed.

$3-million recovery sought

BOISE (AP) — The bankruptcy trustee in the case of Boise precious metals dealer Keith Bybee, who is serving a 14-year prison sentence for theft by unauthorized control, has filed suit against a California company seeking recovery of more than $3 million in silver and gold lost by Bybee's customers.

Trustee John Krommenhoek filed the complaint Friday in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Boise against A-Mark Precious Metals Inc. of Beverly Hills, for which Bybee had been a "certified trading partner" since 1978.

The complaint alleges A-Mark instigated a scheme in 1982 that called for Bybee to store his customers' precious metals with A-Mark through his own "margin account," which allowed Bybee to buy silver and gold on credit for delivery at a later date.

The precious metals bought on behalf of Bybee's customers through the margin account required full payment; so A-Mark "knew or should have known" that any such purchases were not for Bybee himself, according to the lawsuit.

The additional investments provided A-Mark "substantial security to cover any loss of exposure on the margin account and also provided substantial interest revenue from Bybee," the complaint said.

Krommenhoek contends 157 customers eventually were bilked as A-Mark used its knowledge of Bybee's worsening financial condition to lure him into investing other people's money in his own account.

A-Mark took over all the silver and gold bought by and through Bybee in a June 1986 liquidation of some $2.7 billion in assets. The complaint alleges the company also got $1.2 million in margin-call payments and $678,000 in interest from Bybee, who declared bankruptcy for protection from his creditors in February.

Jed Manwaring, the Boise attorney representing Krommenhoek, said the lawsuit contends Bybee fraudulently conveyed thousands of ounces of silver and gold to A-Mark and that the company "did not receive it in good faith" and has refused to turn over to the trustee.

Manwaring said federal bankruptcy law allows a trustee to assert "strong arm" powers to recover property taken or transferred fraudulently.

"There is strong evidence that the transfers of precious metals from Bybee to A-Mark were made 'or in' or 'in' with actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud Mr. Bybee's creditors," Manwaring said in a press release.

The six-count complaint calls for a jury trial and alleges violations of federal and state bankruptcy, fraud, securities and consumer protection laws.

"I don't know what anything A-Mark did was per se illegal, but it demonstrates their bad faith," Manwaring said.

He said Bybee was "cooperating in every way to help us with the lawsuit. How that will affect his criminal case, I don't know."

"There is some evidence that Mr. Bybee was not completely innocent in the beginning, but that doesn't make or break this lawsuit," he said.

Krommenhoek said about $45,000 from the sale of other assets recovered as part of Bybee's bankruptcy, including real estate, bank accounts and stocks, has been put in a trust fund.

The trustee contends A-Mark still holds assets belonging to Bybee's customers.

Mystery shrouds Stealth crash in Nevada desert

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The crash of a secret plane in the Nevada desert remained shrouded in mystery Friday as the Air Force released the name of the pilot who was killed but refused to reveal further information.

Pentagon sources have said the plane that crashed Wednesday night was a top secret F-19 Stealth fighter, which uses the latest electronic technology, materials and aerodynamic design to foil radar and infrared sensors.

The pilot of the downed plane was Maj. Michael C. Stewart, who was based at Nellis Air Force Base, Nellis spokesman Capt. Barry Anderson said. He declined to give his age, hometown or the wing to which he was attached — information normally released following Nellis Air crashes.

Anderson said he had been instructed to release only the pilot's name and home base.

Nellis officials have also refused to disclose the type of aircraft involved in the crash on the Nellis Air Force Gunnery range, although such information is normally released following a crash.

Pentagon sources who asked not to be identified said Thursday that the plane was a Stealth fighter similar to one that crashed in 1986 in California.

The plane went down about 100 miles northwest of Las Vegas, and about 50 miles south of a secret base where about 50 Stealth fighters are believed to be tested. The fighters, designed to be almost invisible to radar, fly only at night, presumably so pictures can't be taken of them.

A dispatcher for the Bureau of Land Management said the BLM was notified of a fire in the area about the time of the crash, and called the Air Force, which operates the sprawling range facility. The dispatcher, who refused to give her name, said Air Force officials asked the BLM not to say where the fire was or how big it was.

The pilot was the only crew member aboard, said Nellis Air Force Maj. Victor Andrijauskas. Emergency crews responded and secured the area, he said.

A plane believed to be a Stealth fighter crashed in July 1986 in the western Sierra Nevada, falling off a 160-acre brushfire in Sequoia National Park. The crash occurred about 12 miles northeast of Bakersfield, Calif.

Here's an intriguing possibility. How about Andrus appointing Jones to the court?

The Democrat governor long has lamented the fact he's in a 3-2 minority on the state Land Board, the key panel on public land issues.

If Jones resigned as attorney general to accept appointment to the Supreme Court, that would allow Andrus to appoint a Democrat, thus assuring himself a Democrat majority on the Land Board at least until 1991.

Jones says he isn't interested.

Politics aside, Donaldson's replacement is extremely important from a legal standpoint. Since Huntley was appointed five years ago, he, Bistline and Donaldson had voted in a majority on many critical matters.

With conservatives Shepard and Bakes voting one way, and more liberal Bistline and Huntley voting another, Donaldson usually cast the deciding vote.

State legal officials say they're worried about what could happen in death penalty cases. Bistline and Huntley long have contended, although in a 3-2 minority, that Idaho must abandon its system of having a trial judge decide the death penalty, and put it in the hands of a jury.

"The new justice may cast critical votes in questions about the rights of society versus those of individual defendants, with Huntley and Bistline generally coming down strongly for individual rights.

Even the new Idaho law, outlawing the use of an insanity plea in major criminal cases, could come under attack with a different-minded Supreme Court.

Attorney General Jim Jones says the new justice could have much more effect on Idaho than the controversial nomination of Robert Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court would nationally.

The new person's impact on a divided Idaho Supreme Court could be much more than one new appointment to a nine-member U.S. Supreme Court.

"The appointment will be much more critical to key issues in Idaho because the chances to make an impact are much greater," he said.

On June 15. On Sept. 8, the west section was rezoned from residential to commercial with a condition the remaining 200 feet of property on the lot be rezoned back to residential.

The permit decision is final, unless appealed to the City Council. The council will have final say on the rezoning request.

The commission also put its stamp of approval on a request by the Bible Baptist Church for a special-use permit to operate a daycare center and pre-school at its building at 315 Shoup Ave. W. The area is zoned residential with a residential overlay.

The facility will accommodate up to 60 children ages two to five.

The permit was granted with the stipulations that an outdoor play area be fenced and sidewalk installed on part of the lot, Orton said. The stipulations were recommended by city staff.

No one protested any of the requests.

beer. He said because he took a shower prior to the trial, he had no evidence. Testimony indicated the atmosphere was friendly when the two drove to Jackpot together, intending to purchase more beer. The woman, who was driving, missed a turn on a county road while taking him home to Twin Falls, he said.

As long as they had passed the turn, he decided to continue to Hollister for beer, he testified, and when there was nothing open there, they decided to go to Jackpot.

He said they did stop at the rest area in Nevada the woman had described, but he said it was just so she could go to the bathroom and to turn around. He said he had had a knife, had never seen one there and did not threaten to kill the woman there or elsewhere.

He said she called him "Hon" and made jokes with him, showing no signs of fright or concern. He said they left her two children home in bed and alone, but that they had often done that in the past when going for beer.

Hedger said he was leaning back in the front seat of the car, relaxing, when they passed a police officer stopped in a FILER parking lot. He said he did not know why the officer testified that he could see one in the car but not the woman. He said he did not crouch down on the floor to avoid being seen.

The defense cross-examined prosecution witnesses at length, but called only three witnesses for the defendant. In addition to Hedger, Wood called two law enforcement officials and Dana Duce, an acquaintance of Hedger, who had on two occasions driven Hedger to the home where the alleged acts occurred.

Judge Daniel Harbutt denied motions from the defense for dismissal of charges and for a mistrial. Woods objected repeatedly to testimony from Peter Magnusson, who said Hedger told him he could not live without the woman and that if he could not have her, no one else could. Woods contended this testimony was a violation of the confidentiality between a clergyman and a client.

Chief Donald Barkley testified that he had investigated the home where the rape was reported to have taken place and interviewed the victim. He testified that there were cut marks on the woman's throat. He also said he took a towel from the woman's bathroom that was sent to the state crime laboratory for analysis and on which technicians found no evidence of semen or hair.

Dade testified that he had taken the defendant to the home of the woman on two occasions prior to June 9. He said the defendant was allowed to enter the home on those visits, but said at least on one visit, he could hear shouting and loud voices.

Police officer Cliff Johnson said he used a metal detector in an unsuccessful attempt to locate the knife the woman said was thrown into the bushes of the rest stop. No knife was found, and Johnson said he could not search the mud and water of the marsh because the detector was ineffective for anything more than six inches under water or mud.

Several additional state witnesses were called Friday by fore-Baxter testified her case. He introduced evidence from Peter Magnusson, a counselor, who said he went by the woman's office the morning after the alleged crimes, and talked her into going to the police and prosecutor.

He said he found her very upset, appearing to be terrified. She did not want to do anything because she said she was afraid of the defendant, he said. The woman's sister also testified the woman was frightened, upset and had been crying when she saw her on June 10.

Both said the woman told them she had been raped and forced to drive to Nevada at knife point by the defendant. Magnusson said she told him she felt unclean and used and that she appeared more than upset when he talked with her.

Spiritual life a secret to remaining young

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Elder Joseph Anderson, 97, the oldest Mormon Church general authority, says the secret to remaining young at heart is to develop a positive attitude and live a spiritual life.

Speaking at Brigham Young University's "Aging Awareness Day" program, Anderson told students that while old age carries with it "our little troubles," it also presents opportunities.

"If you take advantage of them, you can be happy," he said. "I recommend being positive and active. I sometimes think that if we live right, we seem to live closer to the Lord when we get old than when we are young. If you want to be happy, keep close to the Lord."

Anderson has been a swimmer for 85 years, and he believes that activity combined with his mile-and-a-half walk each day has contributed to his good health. He was filled to be a general authority when he was 80. His church service began when he became President Heber J. Grant's secretary.

Anderson was dutifully taking notes during a meeting of the First Presidency when he heard someone say three new members would be called to be assistants to the Quorum of Twelve Apostles, and one would be him.

"That hand of mine wouldn't write anymore when I heard them say that. They hadn't even asked me if I wanted to be a general authority before that meeting," he recalled Thursday.

"I've had a remarkable life. I've been one of the most fortunate people to live, because I've known more than 150 general authorities of the church," Anderson added.

Global evangelization set for 2000 A.D.

NEW YORK (AP) — Eying the century's end, numerous Christian organizations have set a grand goal of evangelizing the world by 2000 A.D. Even though doing so seems impossible.

"Only God can do it," they say. "Pray hard."

But they're also working at it, initiating new tactics and expanding old ones, talking it up, kindling fervor for it and pushing ahead, though recognizing the odds against accomplishing it.

"As we labor toward a breakthrough, anticipate it and strategize for it, we must be utterly dependent on God," says a Southern Baptist official, the Rev. Lloyd Elder of Nashville, Tenn., of that denomination's "Bold Mission Thrust."

Called "bold" because it is its distinctive hold objective is to present the gospel to every person in the world by the turn of the century.

Although the 14.6-million Southern Baptists are the biggest U.S. Protestant body, their foreign missions executive, the Rev. Keith Parks of Richmond, Va., says the job is too big for any one denomination.

"None of us is large enough, strong enough, wise enough to make a significant impact on the whole world," he said in getting 20 other evangelical, missions-minded organizations together in September on the floor.

They called on Christians worldwide to join in 24 hours of prayer fasting just before Pentecost Sunday each spring focused on "global evangelization" between now and 2000.

Altogether, there are about 60 plans by various Christian organizations to evangelize the world, several of them starting in 2000 as the time set for getting it done, says a noted Christian researcher, the Rev. David Barrett.

He says the plans "seem barely possible of achievement" unless Christians coordinate their efforts in a way that is "completely new and unprecedented." He says failure to do so has been the "overriding problem of such past ventures."

Barrett, a British-Anglican and now a consultant to the Southern Baptist foreign missions board based in Richmond, says that since the time of Christ, about 250 plans have been launched to evangelize all the world.

They all "collapsed or flaked out within five, 10 or 15 years," he says. In modern times, considering statistical obstacles, he says neither Christian literature nor broadcasting can cover the world's languages and homes.

Nevertheless, various organizations have shaped cautious projections to present the world with "evangelicalism," one called "Evangelicalization 2000," by a Roman Catholic organization in Rome.

Its director, the Rev. Thomas Forrest, told a huge evangelical charismatic gathering in New Orleans in July. "The light of Christ is almost out in Europe and around us. It is flickering. We have the job of getting it back on again."

A World Evangelization Strategy Committee, using computer data on current Christian work, is working on plans to complete Christ's "Great Commission" to get his message to all the world.

The interdenominational Campus Crusade for Christ has set a "prayer target" of Christianity being presented to every person in the world, the estimated world population by 2000.

"Every Home for Christ" of Chatsworth, Calif., aims to get evangelistic literature in homes of every nation. He Center for World Mission of Pasadena, Calif., wants "a church for every people by the year 2,000."

The "hottest plan, however, is that of Southern Baptists, summoned by their foreign missions board to monthly "concerts of prayer" for world evangelization.

The plan, adopted by a 1976 convention, has brought strong annual growth in overseas baptisms, although not up to the level initially envisioned. Enormous obstacles to it are cited.

By world population projections, he says that even if Southern Baptists baptized 3,000 new converts each day, triple the current rate, it would take 5,478 years to get everyone baptized.

Catholics go door-to-door

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The Roman Catholic Diocese of Providence is sending people door to door in what organizers say will be a massive attempt to "bring people to Jesus Christ" regardless of whether they are Catholic.

The program, unprecedented in Rhode Island, started Wednesday with about 60 people knocking on doors. An evangelization school at Immaculate Conception Church in Cranston plans to turn out 66 more graduates to take to the streets after the week-long course.

The program, unprecedented in Rhode Island, started Wednesday with about 60 people knocking on doors. An evangelization school at Immaculate Conception Church in Cranston plans to turn out 66 more graduates to take to the streets after the week-long course.

Don Turbit, among the teachers, said graduates are expected to train at least two other people every 16 weeks — a strategy which, if followed, would have nearly 25,000 evangelists working the streets in just a few years.

Turbit said, "We're not trying to proselytize or steal people from other churches. If we talk to a Protestant, our goal will be to make that person a better, church-going Protestant, and make the fall-away Catholic a church-going Catholic."

September wholesale price rise moderate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The biggest dip in energy costs in nearly a year partially offset higher food and automobile prices in September as wholesale prices rose a moderate 0.3 percent, the government reported Friday.

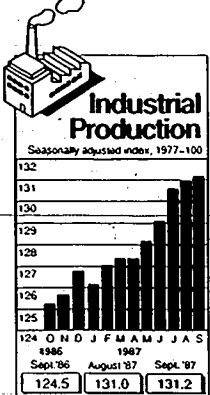

The increase in the Labor Department's producer price index left wholesale inflation for the first nine months of 1987 an annual rate of 3.6 percent.

The September rise in prices, one step short of the retail-level, followed a month in which prices remained level. Wholesale prices had risen 0.2 percent in July.

Analysts generally said the report buttressed contentions that inflation remains relatively tame, despite apprehension in financial markets which has pushed up interest rates in recent weeks.

Still, if September's swings in energy and food prices are discounted, the index for all other goods rose a fairly sharp 0.6 percent.

"The report is not quite as good as it appears on the surface," said Robert Ortner, undersecretary of commerce for economic affairs. "The moderate gain was achieved with a drop in oil prices."

Energy costs, up in seven of the eight previous months, dropped 3.7 percent in September, dragged by a 6.4 percent tumble in gasoline prices.

and an 11.4 percent fall in home heating oil.

It was the biggest decline in energy prices since an identical 3.7 percent drop in October 1986.

Food prices, meanwhile, moved up 1.1 percent, all but erasing a 1.3 decline in August. Fruits, vegetables, pork, beef and eggs were all up. Fish and poultry prices fell.

In other economic statistics released Friday:

• The Federal Reserve reported output at the nation's factories, mines and utilities edged up a small 0.2 percent in September, the eighth consecutive month without a setback.

• The Commerce Department said business sales shot up 1.3 percent in August while inventories rose 0.2 percent, just half the pace of the previous month.

The increase in wholesale prices was in the range considered modest by analysts and held few surprises.

"It was very much in line with expectations," said David Jones, senior economist for Aubrey G.

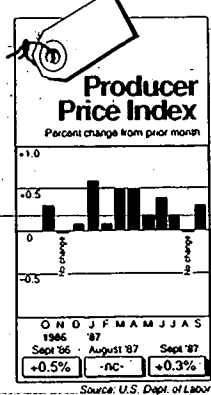

Lanston & Co. in New York. "What we had was offsetting moves in the two most volatile commodities. Food was up and energy was down."

Passenger car prices were up a hefty 3.6 percent in September, following a 1.8 percent decline in August. The increase reflected annual incentives offered by manufacturers to dealers in September for new-year models.

The September rate alone was equivalent to an annual, compounded rate of inflation of 3.7 percent.

Dirk Van Dongen, president of the National Association of Wholesaler-Distributors, said "producer price activity doesn't occur in a vacuum. As the jobless rate of the trade deficit reflects itself in rising interest rates, I'd look ahead with some degree of caution to possible producer price inflation in the months ahead."

Wholesale prices have been rising at a slower pace this year than prices at the retail level. The companion consumer price index rose through August at an annual rate of 5 percent.

The consumer price figures — which more directly reflect inflation from rising import prices — for September will be released next week.

Dow suffers 100-point loss in record trade

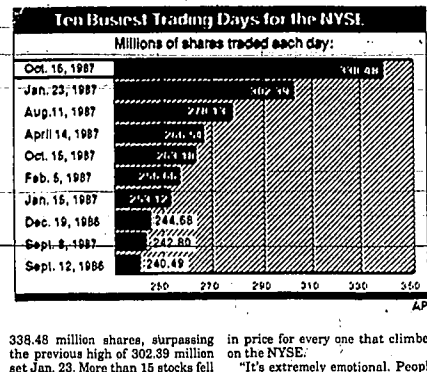

NEW YORK (AP) — An avalanche of selling pounded stocks in record heavy trading Friday, dealing the Dow Jones industrial average its first 100-point loss in history as it knocked nearly $160 billion from the value of stocks.

"Although computerized program trading made the action wilder, the underlying factor in the turmoil was deep indecision among investors about the durability of the economy's long expansion."

Bulls pointed to signs of healthy business and consumer spending combined with modest inflation, but bears raised concerns about persistent trade deficits and the weakness of the dollar.

Already off sharply in the preceding two sessions, stock prices went into a nosedive Friday. The Dow Jones industrial average plummeted a record 108.36 points to 2,446.73, a level not seen since May.

Trading volume on the New York Stock Exchange soared to a record

338.48 million shares, surpassing the previous high of 302.39 million set Jan. 23. More than 15 stocks fell in price for every one that climbed on the NYSE.

"It's extremely emotional. People are dumping stocks with reckless abandon," said Newton Zinder, a veteran market analyst at E.F. Hutton & Co. "As true as it may sound, the market is going down because it's going down."

In contrast to stocks, bond prices steadied, indicating that some investors were pulling money out of stocks and putting it into high-yielding debt securities. The price of a 30-year Treasury bond with a face value of $1,000 rose about $3.75.

Bond prices had fallen sharply earlier in the week on fears of higher inflation and rising interest rates, and some investors considered them a bargain at their new levels. Bond prices and interest rates move in opposite directions.

The stock market's fall Friday wiped out $145 billion in the value of stocks, according to the Wilshire Associates index, which measures the value of 6,000 stocks on the New York and American stock changes and the over-the-counter market.

Since the Dow industrials peaked on Aug. 25, the market value of all stocks in the "Wilshire" index has fallen about $486 billion, or 14.7 percent. The Dow industrials have fallen 476.69 points, or 17.6 percent.

But most analysts say it is too soon to declare the five-year bull market dead, noting that stock prices are still at levels considered attractive a year ago.

The Dow industrials, for example, are still 350.78 points, or 18.5 percent, higher than when the year began. The Wilshire index is up $379 billion, or 15.6 percent.

Merrill Lynch & Co. advised its customers to shift some of their money out of stocks and into bonds, citing a growing perception in the market that the economy was getting weaker and inflation fears were overblown.

The move into bonds was aided by a Labor Department report Friday that producer prices rose a modest 0.3 percent in September and by a Federal Reserve report that industrial production rose a fairly weak 0.2 percent.

UP seeks to close all freight agencies in Idaho

BOISE (AP) — Union Pacific Railroad has asked the Public Utilities Commission to allow it to close all its freight agencies in Idaho and provide services from a central facility in St. Louis.

A public hearing has been scheduled Dec. 2 at Pocatello.

UP has asked permission to shut down 13 one-man freight agencies and move their regional offices to regional service centers in Pocatello, Idaho Falls and Nampa. It also wants to permanently close 16 other one-man agencies which have been closed on a trial basis for the last two years.

The moves would affect 39 employees. Most belong to a union and will not lose their jobs, said Dick Tinscher, spokesman for Union Pacific at Salt Lake City.

The advance of computers has made one-man freight agencies and their regional centers obsolete, Tinscher said.

"All major industrial organizations in the country are looking for ways to be more efficient," he said. "Centralizing railroad customer service is one way of doing that, he said."

"As of Aug. 15, 50 percent of all states were receiving all their service through our St. Louis service center," he said, and eventually all states will be routed through there.

"With the new system a customer can call a toll-free number in St. Louis and receive the same type of service he would have by calling a local office," Tinscher said. Customers also can plug into the system directly with an IBM-compatible computer using a toll-free telephone line.

Don Howell, staff attorney with the PUC, said many Union Pacific customers have expressed concern about the closure of one-man freight offices.

"The customers feel that local agents would be able to fight for more railroad cars during peak shipping periods, he said. And they also feel the local agents would better be able to handle minor complaints, such as railroad cars blocking driveways.

One of UP's first moves to centralize its Idaho operations came in 1983, when the company asked permissioners to allow the railroad to open the regional centers and close 16 agencies on a trial basis.

The trial period was extended for another year in January of this year.

Howell said the PUC heard rumors that UP wanted to close all its freight offices before the Sept. 30.

"Theoretically, if (the central facility) should work," Howell said, "But it's human nature for shippers to want to deal with somebody they know in their community."

*All payments are figured on a 60 month FLECO lease on approved credit only, your down payment will also be your first payment, you will only have 59 payments left. You have no further obligation if lease ends, except physical condition of the vehicle. There is a 15,000 mile per year limit, the sales tax will be added on your payment if applicable. The total of your payments would be 60 times the payment amount plus sales tax. We believe this is the least expensive way for people to drive an automobile — Come in and let us explain why and how.

Glenns Ferry's Jon Hartway breaks away from a group of Wendell defenders to pick up second quarter yardage

Glenns Ferry rolls on

Pilots defense shuts out Wendell, 21-0

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

WENDELL — If the Pilots get to the state playoffs — and after Friday night's 21-0 win over Wendell that looks promising — Glenns Ferry can thank its defense.

It was the working man's side of the ball that took control of a prolific Wendell offense in the early going and then set up all three touchdowns with turnovers.

Glenns Ferry now is just one game — a home test against Filer's Wildcatters next week — from the Canyon Conference championship and the No. 1 seed out of this district in the A-3 state playoffs.

Defending league champion Wendell, which could have had the title by winning this one, can still advance to the playoffs by beating Gooding in the Gooding County A-3 championship battle next week.

The victory was the seventh straight for the Pilots, who are ranked fifth in the latest Associated Press Class A-3 football poll.

That the game hinged on the defensive side didn't surprise Pilot Coach Bill Brock.

"It's been the defense all year," he said. "I felt coming in it would be a matter of the first team making a mistake going down and they made it their mistake."

The first thing Glenns Ferry was able to control was fullback Greg Hirai and he's the cog that makes everything else in the Wendell offense click. Usually Hirai's up-the-middle running forces the defense to honor that first. And Wendell then goes with the outside stuff to quick Chris Thackeray and Duane Packer or on play-action passes to Dean Surplus. But none of that worked against the Pilots because their defense was everywhere.

Brock deflected all praise for that defense to assistant Mitch Britzmann, who noted "We didn't key on Hirai. We went mostly on the sets they ran. Our linebackers are real experienced guys and that makes a big difference. And we have a lot of confidence in our three deep people in the secondary."

World Series

Cardinal speed tested by Twins' perception

By ROSS NEWHAN
Los Angeles Times writer

MINNEAPOLIS — Never has baseball's pitchout received as much attention as it did during the National League Championship Series.

Manager Roger Craig's insight and intuition helped the San Francisco Giants control and contain the vaunted speed of the St. Louis Cardinals, who stole a major-league leading 248 bases during the regular season but were five for 11 in seven playoff games against the Giants.

Now it's the Minnesota Twins' turn, and they may need some of Craig's perception if they hope to have similar success in holding back the Cardinals.

Hope seemed to be the Twins' only weapon during the regular season when they threw out only 47 of 215 base stealers. Against the Twins, base stealers had a 78 percent success figure, compared with the American League mark of 69 percent.

Tim Laudner threw out only 16 of 84 base stealers. Sal Butera caught just 14 of 56.

So what are the Minnesota catchers up against in the 94th World Series that opens here Saturday night?

The Cardinals stole 72 more bases than the Milwaukee Brewers, who led the American League. Vince Coleman alone, with his total of 109, stole more than the Boston Red Sox, Detroit Tigers, New York Yankees and Baltimore Orioles.

And given the absence of Jack Clark and the limited availability of Terry Pendleton, the Cardinals will be looking to run even that much more.

"To win, we're going to have to do the things we do best," second baseman Tom Herr said. "If we get a chance to run, we're going to have to make things happen. We can still create a lot of problems, if we do that."

The Twins know that. The question is: What do they do about it?

"We can call pitchouts and throw to first from the dugout," pitching coach Dick Such said. "But our basic approach will be the same as it was all season. We don't want to be so concerned with the runner that we give in to the hitter. Take 'em one at a time."

"I mean, they have to prevent our power guys from hitting home runs and we have to stop their rabbits from getting on base."

Said Bert Blyleven, who is scheduled to pitch Game 2 and throws the big curve that tends to help a baserunner: "If they steal, they steal. If they've got a runner on first, I've already made one mistake. I don't want to be worried about the runner to the point that I make another. I'm not going to give in to the hitter."

The Twins obviously had a problem during the season. Was it all the catchers, or did the pitchers do a poor job of holding runners close? Laudner refused to point a finger.

"I'm only looking at the positive aspects," he said. "Our pitchers have been throwing well; our defense has been outstanding and we've been getting the key hits. If we continue to put those numbers on the board, we can negate a lot of Stevie's Cardinal speed."

Said Butera, who formerly caught in the National League: "I played against Coleman and (Willie) McGee for quite a few years, and you can definitely put pressure on you. I've always felt that those guys were going to steal their bases, even against the best pitcher-catcher combination."

"The key, I think, is not letting the guys hitting behind them beat you. If you worry so much about the runner that you forget the hitter, you end up behind on the count to an Ozzie Smith or Tommy Herr, and that's a very tough situation."

Twins Manager Tom Kelly cited the Cardinals' speed and said it is one reason he is starting a left-hander, Frank Viola, in Game 1. Viola is holding as the Twins' best at regarded runners close. He is their best pitcher, period.

Burley crumbles under strong Jerome offense

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

BURLEY — For the past two seasons opposing defenses have had to concern themselves for the No. 42 worn on the jersey of Jerome's running back Jay Ostler. After the unbeaten Tigers manhandled Burley 49-6 Friday the No. 39 may come to mind.

Ostler, named offensive player of the year in the Class A-2 ranks a year ago, romped for 197 yards on the ground and four touchdowns — the last three coming from 59 yards out as Jerome exploded for 35 second-quarter points enroute to a victory which counts in both the South-Central Idaho and Cross State Conference standings.

It took the Tigers awhile to warm to the task before Ostler burst the final two yards capping a seven-play, 40-yard drive and soccer-style kicker Francisco Guzman tacked on the first of his seven conversions.

That score came on Jerome's second play from scrimmage in the second period and preceded four Burley turnovers, each of which cost the Bobcats seven points.

Jim Bos pilfered a Peter Rodriguez aerial at the Burley 28 and after his 13-yard gain was nullified by a clip, Ostler sailed in on his first 39-yarder.

Jeff Van Orman sandwiched another interception between fumble recoveries by Mike Aardema on Burley's next three possessions which set up a 9-yard scoring toss from Tiger quarterback Lon Rukhter to Clark Baumgartner, another Ostler scoring jaunt and a five-yard TD plunge for running back Alan Epos.

"We knew we took the team in after pre-game warmups they weren't quite ready to play football," said Jerome Coach Joe Mattie. "We were slow in starting, but then really got rolling. You just can't get the ball on the ground against us four times without being hurt."

Perhaps the most telling blow for Burley came just after the second half kickoff. Apparently stopped on downs at their own 27 the Tigers went into punt formation only to have Aardema fake the kick and said 73 yards down the sideline for yet another score.

The Bobcats, now 2-6 overall.

Tyson clobbers Biggs in 7th round

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
The Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Mike Tyson had a ball on the Boardwalk Friday night, and Tyrell Biggs paid for it.

"I was having a great time," the 21-year-old undisputed heavyweight champion said after flattening Biggs twice and stopping him with one second left in the seventh round.

"There is no one on this planet who can beat me," said Tyson, who certainly looked invincible before a crowd of about 12,000 at the Atlantic City Convention Center, including Larry Holmes and Michael Spinks.

Co-manager Jim Jacobs said Holmes is next.

Tyson is scheduled to meet the 37-year-old former World Boxing Federation and International Boxing Federation champion Jan. 23 at a site to be determined.

"Spinks is in our future, but not in our immediate future," Jacobs said.

However, Jacobs said a fight against Spinks might be moved up if Spinks agreed to a match in which the winner would take all or almost all. The loser would get $1 million.

The unbeatn Spinks was stripped of the IBF title, which he won from and defended against Holmes, for refusing to make a mandatory defense against Tony Tucker.

"I wanted to keep constant pressure on him," Tyson said, and he did just that. "When I came here, I knew I was the best fighter."

"I hurt him with body punches. I knew he was breaking down. He was crying from them in the fourth round."

"He didn't punch as hard as I thought he would," Biggs said, sounding like a man who had been punched very hard. "He's not a hard puncher, he's heavy-handed."

Biggs didn't exhale the left jab he is known for, and there no power in his punches.

He was swinging in desperation from the second round, Tyson said. "I could have knocked him out in the third round," Tyson said. "I wanted to do it slowly. I wanted him to remember this for a long time."

He didn't show any respect. I

Richfield moves closer to state appearance

By The Times-News

RICHFIELD — Fifth-ranked Richfield took a giant step toward a return appearance in the state eight-man football playoffs here Friday by beating fourth-ranked North Gem 32-6 in a Sawtooth Conference game.

The victory, which left the defending state champion Tigers at 5-1-1 for the season and 3-1 in conference, put Richfield back into the playoffs for a third straight year unless North Gem upends Rockland in their regular-season finale next week in Rockland. Should that happen, the conference would end in a three-way tie — only two teams from the league go to the state playoffs — and there is no certain tiebreaking mechanism.

"The North Gem coach wants to flip a coin, but we won't do that," explained Richfield Coach Rudy Miles. "If we go on the basis of records against common opponents, we'll be first. But if we go on the basis of total points, we might be in trouble."

Miles said Richfield Athletic Director Jim Thomas would get together with the athletic directors from Rockland and North Gem next week to devise a formula.

If Rockland beats North Gem next week, however, the top-ranked Bulldogs would be the Sawtooth champions and would get the league's No. 1 berth in the playoffs. Richfield would be second, hosting North Star Conference eight-man champions Kootenai of Harrison, probably next Friday. The winner of that game will move on to either Garden Valley or Craigmont the following week for the playoff semifinals.

The championship game will be played in the Kibbie Dome at the University of Idaho in Moscow on Nov. 15.

The Tigers, shocked by Rockland 30-8 10 days ago, were in command from the beginning against North Gem, scoring 10 points in the first quarter and taking a 24-0 lead at halftime. The Cowboys only threatened twice, once on a third-quarter touchdown drive capped by Shane Jenkins' 7-yard scoring strike to Christian White and again on an aborted drive late in the first half that was brought up shore by Barry Ward interception at the Richfield 16.

"We just dominated the game,"

NFL team rosters to increase, limit of 45 players on field

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The end to the 84-day NFL strike may leave teams next week with as many as 86 players on their rosters — regulars and replacements. But only 45 would be allowed to suit up for the games.

The league is also likely to approve a version of the old "last squad," allowing coaches to keep players who impressed them during the strike.

As some of the regulars turned away when the strike ended Thursday returned Friday to begin preparations for next week, league officials were trying to get ready for the full influx of regulars next week.

NFL Management Council spokesman John Jones said teams will be allowed to keep up to 85 players on their active and inactive lists next week, and would have to name their 45-man active roster by 4 p.m. Saturday.

"That could set up possible confrontations if the players share the same locker rooms and practice together."

The final roster size will probably be determined at a league-meeting scheduled for Kansas City Oct. 27.

Tex Schramm, a member of the Management Council's executive committee and president of the Dallas Cowboys, said it was likely the owners would decide to keep the active roster at 45 but that a "reserve squad" might be added so that coaches could keep replacements who had impressed.

But he said it was unlikely the roster would be increased to 49, a figure tacitly agreed upon during the negotiations but never formally approved. "That's a sensitive figure right now," Schramm said. "I don't know that we'd want to go for that."

The union, meanwhile, said it was considering filing lawsuits through the National Labor Relations Board to try and get players paid for this week. Players who reported after the union sent them back were barred from playing this weekend and being paid, though they can practice and be paid at a per diem rate, while their replacements play this Sunday.

Jones also said that the owners will honor the provisions of the 1982 contract with the exception of union dues' checkoff. That means the union will have to collect dues individually for players rather than having them deducted from paychecks.

"No player benefits are getting interrupted," Jones said.

Jones also said that despite the antitrust suit filed against the league by the union, the owners were still interested in resuming contract negotiations.

"The things that were on the table when the strike ended are still on the table," Jones said. "We would think that despite the suit, we could still try to work out an agreement."

Members of the Washington Redskins and Green Bay Packers declined to resume practicing for the per diem rate — daily payments based on a $750 a week salary for veterans and $500 for rookies plus $38 a day meal money. They joined the Chicago Bears and Los Angeles Raiders as the only teams with large number of veterans practicing.

The Tampa Bay Bucs, on the other hand, returned for the first time, then walked out when they were told the couldn't play this week, just as many of the teams had done Thursday.

For that players out-of-condition could be injured was cited by most clubs as the reason for not allowing the regulars to play.

Doug Allen, the assistant executive director of the NFL Players Association, said the union is considering asking the NLRB to seek an injunction in federal court seeking

Trouble with free agency

PASADENA, Calif. — Union leader Gene Upshaw may have realized he was in trouble on free agency as early as March at the players association convention in Los Angeles.

While most of the 200 players at the Century Plaza Hotel were saying that free agency wasn't very important to them, Upshaw and the rest of the union leaders had a new slogan: "horizontal, not vertical."

That is, he said one sunny morning in the hotel coffee shop, the eight major issues were all of equal importance; free agency no more important than roster size or a 3-year contract term. "I think the free agency thing has been blown out of proportion," said the man who until the previous January had made that his primary issue.

For Upshaw, the problem was that the owners wouldn't let him off the hook.

Twin Falls misses PAT, falls short of Rigby Trojans, 14-13

By The Times-News

RIGBY — Ted Smack's towering high extra-point kick came down on the cross bar and bounced back into the end zone Friday night, dooming the Twin Falls Bruins to a 14-13 Gem State Conference loss at the hands of the Rigby Trojans.

In the first football meeting between the two schools, the teams alternated scoring until that moment, which came with about three minutes to go.

"We were playing for the tie because we felt comfortable about going into overtime with them," said Coach Jon Jund. "I couldn't believe that that kick didn't have enough momentum to go through. It was the way the whole season has been for us. I feel sorry for the kids. They deserved better than this."

Rigby Coach Steve Carlson was as aware of his players needing a win as badly as Jund and he expressed his gratitude for it.

It was like the arm of the Lord reached down and knocked it back, Carlson said. "It seemed high enough to me to go four times. And then I couldn't believe it would bounce backward after hitting the cross bar."

Twin Falls missed a good opportunity to score early in the second quarter but was denied after attempting a first and goal. The Bruins were hit with an illegal receiver downfield, losing the yards and the down and ending up pointless. Moments later they tried a fourth and nine on the Rigby 20 and missed but late in the half they pushed on across a nine-yard throw from Joel Jund to Jody Bryant. That was the only passing interception by the Rigby 35. Smack booted the point after.

Rigby came back in the third period when Mike Anderson picked off a Jund pass at his own 40 and returned it 60 yards to the Bruin 10. Two plays later, tailback Matt Watson went in from two but Rigby's kick failed.

But Rigby was able to overcome that deficiency on its next possession, putting together a long march that became very serious when quarterback Dave Miller hooked up with Steve Nield on a 31-yard pass play that carried inside the Bruin one.

Walker punched that in and Rigby then established the difference in the game when Matt Janson South with a play-action conversion pass.

Twin Falls replied immediately, moving from its own 25 to its 40 in a couple of plays and then collecting a touchdown when Steve Nield went to a slant in from Jund, split two defenders and raced into the end zone.

That's when the kick and the crossbar met in Rigby's favor.

File 9
Kimberly 0

FILER — Clint Lutz banged through a 37-yard field goal and Jared Conrad capped a 160-yard night with a 29-yard scoring dash Friday night when the Filer Wildcats turned back the Kimberly Bulldogs 9-0.

The Canyon Conference victory kept Filer's hopes alive for a postseason playoff berth with a number of possibilities still available in the final standings that will be posted after next week's games.

Kimberly provided most of the threats in the first half, twice moving inside the Filer 25-yard line before being stopped.

The Bulldogs defense had a strong night but Filer's offense began moving against the tiring defenders in the last quarter.

Lutz provided the winning margin with his long field goal and Conrad came up with his scoring run a few minutes later.

Mackay 39
Hansen 7

MACKAY — Shane Jarvis rocketed Hansen with a 85-yard romp with the game-opening kickoff and the Mackay Miners never looked back in handling the Hukies 39-7 Friday in a Magic Valley Conference football game.

After Jarvis' run, Hansen steered to hold the Miners for the rest of the quarter but a 19-point second period showed the game out of reach. Cody Schmidt scored on a one-yard run, Lance Rosenkrantz caught a 15-yard strike from Jeff James and Harris came back with a 21-yard scoring reception from James. James' PAT kick made it 26-0 at intermission.

The Miners got another one-yard run from Schmidt and a 46-yard touchdown pass from James to Rosenkrantz to wind up their scoring in the third quarter.

Kyle Allen put Hansen on the scoreboard with a 64-yard sprint in the final period.

Buhl 34
S. Fremont 28

ST. ANTHONY'S Brad Armitage passed with interception in overtime let the undefeated Buhl Indians outlast the South Fremont Cougars 34-28 Friday night in a Cross State Conference football game.

Armitage and Eric Beem had hooked up on back-to-back running plays just moments earlier to give Buhl its overtime touchdown but South Fremont stopped the two-point conversion run.

South Fremont then ran two plays for just two yards before trying the pass that Armitage stole.

The hard-fought victory came after a first-half that made it look like a Buhl laugher.

"The Cougars had a rousing start, scoring on a 68-yard pass play on the game's third play. But Buhl then uncoupled 28 straight points to Buhl's 14-0 lead at the half."

South Fremont pumped some life back into its game with a last-half touchdown and then scorched the Indians for the tying 14 points in the third quarter.

The victory means that Jerome and Buhl will be taking undefeated records into their conference and playoffs showdown battle in Jerome next week.

No scoring summary was available at press time.

Murtaugh 15

Hagerman 8

HAGERMAN — Murtaugh senior Grant Cummins picked off a Hagerman pass at the Red Devil 40 yard line with the winning moment Friday night, ending a final Flier threat and allowing his team a 15-8 win in a Magic Valley Conference football game.

Cummins crashed three yards for the Devils first score early in the second quarter then added a placement which held up until after halftime. But Hagerman senior running back Scott Clark returned the favor in the third period and Ryan Pharis ran in the two-point conversion to give the Pirates the lead.

The Murtaugh victory, its second straight in the MVC, came when Cory Adams took a fourth-quarter pass from Troy Rogiv 25 yards to the end zone.

SHOSHONE — Raft River senior running back Alan Ward scored a pair of touchdowns Friday to lead his team to a 35-12 Magic Valley Conference win over the Shoshone Indians.

Tyson

Biggs was going to make him pay with his health.

Biggs was cut on the lip in the first round and over the left eye in the second. Tyson did not become a head-bunter. He continued to wrack the body.

"I wasn't thinking about the cut. I wanted to go to the body, to soften him up," Tyson said.

Then, late in the seventh round, Biggs threw a left hook and Tyson retaliated with a left hook that dropped the challenger on the seat of his pants. Tyson's upper body went through the ropes.

Biggs got to a sitting position and struggled up as referee Tony Orlando counted nine. Tyson charged to the attack. He hurt Biggs with a right to the head and then smashed home a left hook to the head that sent Biggs backwards onto his back in the eighth round.

Orlando didn't bother to count as Biggs' cornermen and Dr. Frank Drogosh rushed into the ring.

They got the stricken challenger onto his stool, where he remained for several minutes.

The 6-foot-4 1/2 Biggs outweighed Tyson, 228 1/2 to 216 pounds and had a 10-inch reach advantage. Nothing helped.

It was Tyson's first defense of the undisputed championship and the first defense of the undisputed heavyweight title since Muhammad Ali was upset by Leon Spinks on Feb. 16, 1978.

The victory was the 32nd and 28th by knockout for the unbeaten Tyson, who is the 1984 Olympic heavyweight champion who was ranked No. 1 by the World Boxing Association, now is 15-1 with 10 knockouts.

"He's made for me," Biggs had said before the fight.

No way. Tyson, 21, five years Biggs' junior but older than the challenger in pro experience, landed several hard jabs and packed power in both hands — to the body — and head throughout.

Biggs took several hard shots but finally could not resist the man who has been irresistible since turning pro on March 6, 1985.

Orlando, the 1984 Olympic champion was certainly the best fighter in the ring as he turned it into a one-sided fight, looking every bit the 8-1 favorite he was.

Biggs tried to circle and jab in the first two rounds as Tyson stalked.

In the third round, Biggs went flat-footed and got caught over the eye. Tyson went in hard in mid-round and landed four hard hooks later in the round.

Tyson kept up the pressure in the fourth round but slipped a little in the fifth, when Biggs might have had a slight edge. The referee warned both men for rough tactics during the round.

Biggs looked tired in the sixth as Tyson landed some tremendous body punches, then late in the round caught Biggs with a hook to the body and two hooks to the head.

Tyson was guaranteed $2.25 million, but Jacobs said a percentage deal would gain him a minimum of $4.1 million.

to have the regular players paid because the game for the Jets on Sunday night. That could mean the owners would have to pay about $20 million to the players, the approximate weekly total salary figure.

Individual players were thinking along the same lines.

Tight end Rocky Klier and linebacker Bob Crockley of the New York Jets said they might see the league's owners to allow them to play Sunday against Miami. Klier said they had the backing of Coach Joe Walton.

"Joe said if there is any way we can legally play in this game, then do it," Klier said. "The only thing holding him back from playing is his management part of it. They won't let us. The strike is over and we are trying to do the best we can to get a salary this week and play."

"It's simple," Crable said. "I'm here, ready willing and able to play, pursuant to my contract. If they won't let me in, it's a simple matter. I'm looking to legal action to play on Sunday."

But Jets president Jim Kenil said that the management decision not to let them play was legal because no contract or back-to-work agreement had been agreed upon.

played 100 percent better than we did against Rockland," said Miles. "We had most everybody healthy and the kids really did a good job."

Senior Laine King was responsible for 18 of the Tigers' points, tackling Jenkins in the end zone early in the game to give Richfield a 2-0 lead, then scampering 15 yards from scrimmage for Richfield's first touchdown. He scored once more in the second quarter on a 31-yard pass from Ward and then caught two conversion passes.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — It was supposed to be the battle of the "Running Thompsons" — Indiana's Anthony and Minnesota's Darrell Schell — in the show.

But Indiana quarterback Dave Schell was the show.

Schnell scored two touchdowns, including the game-winning 8-yard run to tie No. 20 Indiana an 18-17 Big Ten victory over previously unbeaten Minnesota.

"He threw a couple of high ones, but all in all he did a nice job," Indiana Coach Bill Mallory said of Schnell, who completed 21 of 33 passes for 250 yards.

"He did exactly what he's been doing all year," Minnesota linebacker Brian Bonner said of Schnell. "He was real patient. We had good coverage in the secondary, but he just 'dropped' underneath."

Minnesota kicker Chip Lohmiller, whose 21-yard field goal with two seconds left defeated Indiana last year, was wide left on a 44-yarder with 1:32 left Friday. Earlier in the game, he had set a team scoring record with a 29-0 score point.

"It was happy to see one go our way," said Mallory, whose Hoosiers, 5-1 overall and 3-0 in the conference, took sole possession of first place in the Big Ten. Michigan State, which plays at Northwestern Saturday, has a 2-0 Big Ten record.

Anthony Thompson's punt returned by Darrell Thompson 160 yards to 103 as the Hoosiers, who had beaten up on five losing teams en route to its best start since 1960, fell to 5-1 and 2-1.

Schnell's 15-yard touchdown run with 25 seconds left in the first half brought the Hoosiers within 14-12.

By "We were stunting part of the time and needing the other part," Britzman said. "It gave their offense some problems. Once we got into the lead we knew they'd be going to the air more and we stopped stunting pretty much."

Wendell Coach Shawn Corrigan praised Glenn Perry's three-deep pass defense and still had trouble believing it was as effective as it was.

"He did a good job against our running game and was able to pressure our passer. With only three deep we should have completed more. We missed a couple of wide open receivers deep early in the game and if those had been completed, it might have turned it around a little."

With next week winding up the season, both coaches knew exactly where they stand.

"We're master of our own destiny," said Brock. "If we beat Ferry, we go for sure."

"We have to win next week and Gooding has been playing better every week lately," Corrigan said.

The total game basically was played in Wendell's end of the field because of Glenn Perry's strong defense. Twice in the second quarter the Pilots mounted serious Ostler, who added a 45-yard pass reception and 21-yard punt return to his overall effort, gave Jerome some breathing room on a quick opener out to the 33 and an interference call two downs later moved the ball to the all-too-familiar Bobcat 39 from where the 5-8, 160-pound Tiger fullback bounced off three tacklers for his teams final TD.

A 55-yard pass from Rodriguez to junior running back Mike Ruffell broke the shutout for the Cats at the 8:30 mark of the final period.

"It was a game of pride for both teams," said Mattie. "Both are looking at important contests next week and may have been looking ahead."

Reno takes on Idaho for, well, second place

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

MOSCOW — Hmm, this hasn't been for awhile.
A middling University of Nevada-Reno team — a rare commodity, indeed — will be coming to the University of Idaho's Kibbie Dome this afternoon to play a scattered and inconsistent Vandal scholastic for second place in the Big Sky Conference standings.

College football

Hardly the stuff of crisp, autumn, homecoming afternoons, is it? Actually today's 2 p.m. MDT encounter means a bit more, but certainly not what it meant when the two teams, with one loss between them, met in Reno-Mackay Stadium one year ago last September.
"Certainly the loser would almost be out of contention with two conference losses," says Idaho coach Keith Gilbertson, whose 4-2 Vandals are 2-1 in Big Sky games. "It's a big game for both schools, there's no doubt about it. It's a good rivalry and has become one of the key rivalry games in the conference. We're looking forward to having the chance to play them and play them at home."
"We're looking forward to playing up there," said UNR Coach Chris Clark earlier in the week. "There's no question that things are a little cloudy in the conference right now, but this game will have a lot of significance."

If you're scoring along with us on the new nine-team system in Big Sky this year, Weber State stands at the top with a 2-0 record, one-half game ahead of Boise State, Idaho and Reno. Idaho State is a game back at 1-1, as is Eastern Washington at 2-2.
In past seasons, having two conference losses was a kiss of death as far as making the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs, but that may not be the case this year. Indeed, with nine teams in the Big Sky, it's entirely possible the eventual conference champ will end up with two league losses.
How the I-AA selection committee will view the Big Sky's newly discovered parity is an open question. But league runner-up will almost certainly go to the playoffs, and perhaps a third Big Sky team as well since the conference has grown from eight to nine teams and is going national championship game in the

to be played in Pocatello.
But that's conjecture, and the Vandals still have Eastern Washington, Weber State and Boise State on their schedule.
"In previous years, it's been the winner of the Idaho-Nevada game that's gone on to win the conference championship and gone to the playoffs," says Ault, whose Pack beat the Vandals 17-13 in Reno last Oct. 18 and then again 27-7 last November in the first round of the I-AA playoffs. "Certainly that could be the case this year."
For the Vandals, who have played six games and lost a starter to an injury in every one, the offense is winging it, literally. The latest numbers for quarterback John Friesz show that the sophomore is responsible for 70.1 percent of Idaho's offense to date. That's good, because Idaho is down to two healthy, running backs; their backups are freshman whom Gilbertson would rarely use to in-march.
Reno is in a much better shape physically, but not always mentally. The Pack is 3-2 for the season, 2-1 in conference, and has won just once on the road this season. Reno ranks fourth in the league in offensive production, fifth in scoring defense and second in the ratio of turnovers given to turnovers received.

"We're a pretty young team in some spots, and it's shown at times," says Ault. "It wasn't until the second half of last week's game (a 31-13 victory over Montana State) that I really felt our players started playing together. Fortunately, our passing game has bought us a little time to mature."

Ault is using his quarterback, junior college transfer Jim Zacheo, more than he had intended this year. That's because Zacheo has been Reno's most effective means of moving the ball.
"They have the ability to come off the graduation of all those kinds of people and just stand it to all those running backs and still be a potent, real effective offense," says Gilbertson. "Zacheo has improved every week and is going to be the player they thought he was. They still have a great offense."
This afternoon's game will be broadcast and telecast into the Magic Valley. Radio listeners can hear it on Twin Falls station KEZL-FM and Burley station KBAR-AM. Nampa TV station KIVI-TV, channel 6 in the Magic Valley, will broadcast it.

Yes, but can Boise St. win football games on the road?

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

MISSOULA, Mont. — OK, so Skip Hall's Boise State Broncos play pretty well at home.
Remember Weber State?
The Broncos, 4-1 overall, 2-1 in the Big Sky Conference and ranked 19th in the nation in the latest NCAA Division I-AA college football poll, will take on the University of Montana at 1 p.m. this afternoon in Washington-Grizzly Stadium, marking just the second time they've left home under their first-year manager.
Last time, three weeks ago on an outing to Ogden, Utah, they lost 56-44 to the Wildcats.
"The thing we'll do differently is to try to get better execution, especially on defense," said Hall. "Montana is a big and strong team. Obviously, their size concerns us and we've got to get them out of their game. If we just allow them to utilize their big people and their passing, we're going to be in trouble."

Boise television station KTVB, channels 7 and 38 in the Magic Valley, will broadcast the game live.
If anything, the 2-3 Grizzlies, who have taken themselves out of the race for the conference championship with a murderous early-season schedule, may be a bigger offensive challenge to the young Bronco defensive front than was Weber. The Wildcats' offensive line ate up the Boise State defense pretty convincingly, but Weber had nobody like UM offensive tackle Larry Clarkson, a 6-foot, 7-inch, 300-pound senior whom everyone is drafting as an NFL first-round draft choice. Four of the Grizzly offensive linemen are returning starters and the smallest, center Bill Venard, weighs 285 pounds.

"We're going to have matchup problems with Montana on the defensive line, there's no question about it," said Hall. "We've got to play with more consistency and more aggressively than we did against Weber State if we're going to win the ballgame."
In fact, Montana has had its problems with offensive consistency, so much so that second-year coach Don Reed is changing starting quarterbacks for Boise State.
Reed said he would start Scott Werbelow, a senior who was Brent Pessow's two-year understudy at Montana, over Scott Waak, a red-shirt freshman who started Montana's first game and led the Grizzlies to upset victories over nationally-ranked Nevada-Reno and Northern Iowa.
In three games in a relief role,

Werbelow has completed 21 of 34 passes for 290 yards, three touchdowns and one interception.
"This does not mean that we think Scott Waak is not doing the job," Reed said. "As a matter of fact, he has improved weekly and graded out well in the Idaho game."
Montana lost 31-25 at Idaho last week, with Werbelow coming in late in the game and driving the Grizzlies to their final touchdown.
"It's just that Scott Werbelow has come in and led the club well and deserves a chance to start," Reed said. Waak, a 200-pound runner from Bend, Ore., was 20 of 28 for 249 yards and a school-record-tying four TD passes earlier this season in a 41-29 upset win over Nevada-Reno.
Werbelow, who redshirted in 1986, played in five games two seasons ago and started one — a 38-23 loss to Nevada-Reno.
The Grizzlies are among the national teams in the Big Sky in turnover ratio — giveaways to takeaways — and have two solid runners in tailback Richard Coleman and fullback Jody Farmer. Farmer is the Big Sky's No. 6 rusher, while Coleman is the league's No. 3 all-purpose runner.

"It's important that we avoid turnovers and keep our defense off the field," Hall said.
That should be a little easier with the return of reserve tailback Cliff Sexton, who was sidelined with a shoulder injury last week, leaving the Broncos with only starters Chris Jackson and Ty Ogata and a host of first-year freshmen.
"Boise comes into Missoula with a well-rounded football team; with a very mobile quarterback, talented running backs and their defense is very solid," said Reed. "Defense is the one team that gave our defense a lot of problems last year, and I see nothing that makes them any different this season. They do a variety of things that cause problems on offense, defense and in the kicking game."

The big news for Boise State's offense is the rise of senior quarterback Vince Alcala, who now ranks second in the Big Sky and sixth in the nation in passing efficiency and fourth in the conference and 20th in the country in total offense. BSU, the "Big Sky's worst passing team" last year, now has two of the conference's top 10 receivers, including league-leader Eric Andrade. Jackson is the Big Sky's leading rusher with 690 yards in 79 carries.
The game can be heard in parts of the Magic Valley on Boise radio station KBOI-AM. No Magic Valley radio stations carry the Broncos' games this season.

Idaho State will look for complete game against Northern Arizona

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

POCATELLO — Defying predictions of those who think they play just a month ago, the Idaho State University Bengals are still alive in their quest to be a party to the NCAA Division I-AA championship game that is scheduled to be played in the Mindoro in two months.
"This was the team that until two weeks ago had statistically the worst — the last-place — defense in all of I-AA."
"But at 1-3-1 for the season and 1-1 in Big Sky games, things are definitely uphill from here, starting to-night when ISU entertains Northern Arizona at 7:30 p.m.
"They're coming on strong right now," says NAU Coach Larry Kentera, whose lumberjacks put themselves in jeopardy of dropping out of the postseason playoff race last week by losing to Weber State and dropping to 1-2 in conference, 3-2 for the season. "They're on a real roll. Offensively, they run well and pass effectively and young Jason Whitmer looks like he's developing into a fine quarterback. Defensively, they're also a good team."

How's that last part again?
"Anytime you beat a good team like Idaho, and hold them to three touchdowns, you're doing a good job on defense," Kentera says. "Believe me, I know."

NAU lost 46-37 to Idaho in Flagstaff, Ariz., last month.
Still, the Bengals, who are averaging 457 yards and 28.4 points defensively, have stretched the definition of bend-but-not-break defense. Portland State got 367 yards total offense last week in a 24-24 tie with the Bengals, Idaho 433 yards in a 30-21 loss the week before.
"Defensively, we played pretty well at the tackle position against Weber State," said Idaho State Coach Jim Koetter. "But it was one of our poorer defensive performances of the year. We didn't execute our blitz scheme very well. We didn't tackle as sharply as we did in the Idaho game. We didn't show improvement from one week to the next."
The Bengals will need to do that tonight. The Axers rank second in the Big Sky and fifth in the country in total offense, second in the league and sixth in the nation in passing efficiency and second in the league and sixth in the country in scoring offense. Sophomore quarterback Greg Wyatt leads the league in passing efficiency — he's fifth in I-AA — and is second in total offense, accounting for 1,384 yards in five games.
"Northern Arizona has a real fine short passing attack," says Koetter. "They spread you out, they use different motion and sets, and we can't afford to get confused. They have a good offensive line and we have to get pressure — the pass rush is a key. Wyatt does a good job getting the ball to the open receiver — he makes good decisions and reads and has the physical ability to throw the ball well."

The Axers' defense ain't bad either, leading the Big Sky in total defense, ranking second in rushing defense and third in pass defense and in scoring defense.
"On offense, we have to handle the blitz and run and pass against it," Koetter says. "We will be 100 percent better prepared to handle the blitz this week. We had a lot of individual breakdowns (against Portland State), some people tried to leave their assignments and help someone else with theirs and we had chaos. We didn't handle the blitz well from the quarterback position. We could have made from 5-yard passes go for touchdowns. The receivers were open and it could have been handled by making the correct pre-snap read. It goes back to experience. It will be a valuable game for (freshier freshman) Jason (Whitmer) — he can look at it on film and see it's not as difficult as he made it out the field."

The brightest spot from Koetter's perspective is the presence of three healthy arms, Whitmer and first-year freshman Greg Brown, both of whom threw touchdown passes against Portland State, and strong-shouldered senior Gino Mariani, who came on to throw a two-point conversion pass against PSU that tied the game for the Bengals.
The game will be broadcast in the Magic Valley on Twin Falls radio station KTFJ-AM.

Columbia seeks to break 35-game losing streak

NEW YORK (AP) — Now at the pinnacle of football failure, Columbia will seek to snap its major college record 35-game losing streak Saturday against Yale, the team it beat last — in 1963.
Having been outscored 134-15 in their first four games this season, the Lions will face Yale in an Ivy League game, to be televised nationally by PBS, starting at 11 p.m. MDT.
"We're just going to continue to work our people hard and try to get them to believe," said Larry McElreavey, who has yet to win a game in 14 tries since becoming the Lions' coach last season.
"That's the biggest obstacle — the belief that they can be successful."
Yale is 2-2 overall and 0-1 in the Ivy League, while Columbia is 0-4 and 0-2, not having won since Oct. 15, 1983, when it beat the Eli 21-18 at New Haven, Conn.
"All the pressure is off and you know they're going to win sooner or later," Yale Coach Carmen Cozza said. "It's going to happen to some team. I just hope it's not us."
Columbia surpassed Northwestern's record of 34 straight defeats last week with a 38-5 loss at Princeton, while Yale outlasted William & Mary 40-34.
Putolo completed 9 of 24 passes against Princeton for 109 yards and guided the Lions to their only touchdown. He also passed for the two-point conversion.

Oklahoma St., Oregon, seek to prove they belong with elite

The Associated Press

The winds of change are threatening to blow away some of college football's biggest names Saturday.
Second-ranked Nebraska, No. 9 UCLA and No. 16 Penn State, the defending national champion, face other members of "The Associated Press Top Twenty" in 12 Oklahoma State, No. 16 Oregon and No. 13 Syracuse, all seeking to prove they really belong among the elite.
"We expect Nebraska to compete with us, and we expect to compete with Nebraska," Oklahoma State Coach Tommy Thomas says of the Big Eight clash in Stillwater, Okla. Complete? Probably.
Win? That's another story. The Cowboys won the first two games of the series in 1960-61 but are 0-24-1 since then, managing only a 17-17 tie in 1973.
However, the Cornhuskers had problems with Oklahoma State in 1983 (14-10), 1984 (17-3) and 1985 (34-24).
"The '83 game got us over the hump as far as having a legitimate chance to win," Jones says. "These kids have a different feeling about this series now."
Meanwhile, Penn State visits Syracuse, a team it has beaten 16 straight times, while UCLA plays host to Oregon; the only two teams with unblemished (2-0) Pac-10 records.
Elsewhere, No. 1 Oklahoma is a 56-point favorite at winless Kansas State while fourth-ranked Florida State is favored by 47 at home against Louisville under the lights. Third-ranked Miami, Fla. is idle.
Rounding out the Top Ten, fifth-ranked Auburn visits Georgia Tech, Kentucky is at sixth-ranked LSU, Duke at 7, Clemson and No. 8 Tennessee at Alabama for a night game in Birmingham.
In the Second Ten, No. 11 Notre Dame is at Air Force, Temple at No.

14 Florida, Texas vs. No. 16 Arkansas in Little Rock, No. 17 Ohio State at Purdue, No. 18 Georgia at Vanderbilt under the lights and No. 19 Michigan State at Northwestern. Indiana, the No. 20 team, played at Minnesota on Friday night.
The Oklahoma State could be a "high-scoring" shootout. Nebraska is second nationally in scoring (45.4), sixth in total offense (453.0) and third in rushing (325.4). Oklahoma State ranks fifth in scoring (37.4), 10th in total offense (442.8), 14th in passing (248.8) and has the nation's leading rusher in tailback Thurman Thomas (140.0). However, Nebraska is third in rushing defense (66.0) and has held Thomas to 116 yards on 66 carries in three previous meetings.
"Nebraska is a very important game to me," Thomas says. "One of the goals I set for myself was to beat Oklahoma and Nebraska, and this is going to be my last chance."
In his career, Thomas has rushed for 100 yards or more 16 times and Oklahoma State is 15-1 in those games.
In Thomas, quarterback Mike Gundy and wide receiver Hart Lee Dykes, the Cowboys have a threesome that reminds some of Nebraska's famed 1983 trio of Mike Rozier, Turner Gill and Irving Fryar.
"There might be a new set of Triplets in this league," Jones says.
Gundy and Dykes lead the Big Eight in passing efficiency and receiving.
"They run and throw very well," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne says. "Oklahoma State has been moving the ball well, and with a lot of consistency. Talk was that Oklahoma and Nebraska, and then Colorado and Oklahoma State, were the best teams (in the Big Eight) in that order. I think Oklahoma State has turned the order of the last two. Both teams are 5-0, the Cowboys' best start in 30 years.

Syracuse is 6-0 for the first time since 1960, a year after the Orangemen won the national championship.
"It's the biggest thing that we've been involved with," says Coach Dick MacPherson, who has Syracuse's record of 107-20-7 in 16-year absence. It will be the running of Penn State's Blair Thomas, No. 7 nationally with 125.3 yards a game, against a Syracuse team which leads the nation in rushing defense (63.4) and is tied for sixth in scoring defense (11.6).
After five games last season, four backs had rushed for more than 100 yards against the Orangemen. This year, only one team — Missouri — has done it.

Joe Paterno says his 5-1 Penn State team is "in pretty good sync right now. We've gotten better and we're a good football team right now."
"How good? I'll have a better idea when we play a good Syracuse team."
UCLA is a two-touchdown favorite over Oregon but don't try to sell that to its coach, Terry Donahue.
"Any of you who have been around Pac-10 football for a while realize that two of the better teams in the conference have been Washington and USC. Oregon has beaten those teams back-to-back.

"The Ducks are for real."
In fact, they have turned the quacking into quaking.
Some things, however, seldom change. Oklahoma has beaten Kansas State 16 straight and the series stands 67-114 in favor of the Sooners, who once won an NCAA record 32 consecutive games from the Wildcats, from 1937-68.
"They're in an everything-to-gain-nothing-to-lose position."

Three CSI players sign

TWIN FALLS - Three College of Southern Idaho basketball players have made their future schools official. In the past three days, incoming sophomores Bryan Tucker, a 6-foot, 9-inch forward, has signed with University of Idaho...

Coach Fred Trenkle said Mauro Gomes and returned missionary Todd Peterson of Rigby are the only two uncommitted sophomores on the team.

Pendleton sidelined tonight

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - St. Louis third baseman Terry Pendleton says a pulled-rib muscle will probably keep him out of the lineup in Game 1 of the World Series against Minnesota.

Pendleton hurt the left rib muscle Wednesday night in Game 7 while running from first to third on Tony Pena's single. Pendleton then scored on Jose Oquendo's homer as the Cardinals beat San Francisco 6-0 for their third pennant in six years.

Pendleton played defense in the third inning and then was pinch hit for in the bottom of the inning.

As his teammates took batting practice in the Metrodome Thursday evening, Pendleton stood on the sidelines, leaning on his bat.

"We're here now and I'm not able to help the team. It's a very big disappointment," Pendleton said.

The Cardinals are also without first baseman Jack Clark, who led the team with 35 homers and 106 runs batted in. Pendleton was second on the club with 12 homers, 11 more than his 1986 output.

St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said he doubted Pendleton would be ready to face left-hander Frank Viola tonight.

"I don't like the injuries, but there's not much I can do," Herzog said.

Pendleton, who is also nursing an ankle sprain, said the rib pull makes it difficult for him to hit right-handed, and difficult to do just about anything.

"It hurts to cough; it hurts to sneeze; it hurts to run," Pendleton, a switch-hitter, said.

Herzog said if Pendleton can't make it, Tom Lawless would play third base and Willie McGee would hit fifth, behind Vince Coleman, Ozzie Smith, Tommy Herr and Jim Lindeman.

Fenech retains WBC title

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) - Unbeaten Jeff Fenech of Australia retained his World Boxing Council super-bantamweight title Friday night, after a butting of heads with Carlos Zarate of Mexico caused the fight to be stopped at the end of the fourth round.

American referee Hank Elepuzar ruled that a deep cut under Fenech's right eye was caused by an accidental butt and ordered the judges' cards tallied. Fenech led 40-34 on all three cards.

It was his second successful defense of the title he won from Thailand's Samart Payakarun in May.

Zarate claimed the cut had been caused by a legal blow and said he would protest the decision and ask for a rematch.

Many confused fans in the 6,000 sellout crowd initially thought Fenech had lost on a technical knockout.

Fenech, 23, improved his record to 18-0, while Zarate suffered only his third defeat in 69 fights.

Minnesota Twins: The little team time forgot, that decades couldn't improve

By MIKE NADEL The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS - First they almost let down. Now they're the talk of the town. The Minnesota Twins have come a long way in just a few years.

Baseball

"It seemed for sure that we'd be in Florida somewhere by now," outfielder Tom Brunansky says.

Instead, the Twins are still in Minnesota. And, for the first time since 1965 and the second time since the 1987 World Series will be in Minnesota.

When Brunansky came to the team in 1982, the Twins were falling apart, both on and off the field.

They were a far cry from this 1987 team - which drew more than 2 million fans during the regular season, another 110,000-plus during two victorious American League playoff games and about 50,000 more fans for a post-playoff rally.

In the strike year of 1981, the Twins attracted only 469,090 people to old Met Stadium. In 1982, the Twins moved into the Metrodome in downtown Minneapolis, but only 921,186 people cared enough about that 60-102 team to come out and watch.

Even fewer fans cared the following year - 553,939 - and Calvin Griffith, who in 1961 brought the team to Minnesota from Washington, D.C., was starting to talk about selling the team to a group of people from the Tampa-St. Petersburg area.

The lease Griffith signed with the Metrodome could have been broken if the Twins didn't draw at least 2.4 million fans in 1984.

So a ticket-buyout scheme was launched by Twin Cities businessmen in a last-ditch effort to keep the team here.

On May 16, for a weekday game against Toronto, only 6,346 fans showed up to watch the Twins lose to the Blue Jays. There were 45,517 no-shows, so the announced attendance was 51,863 - at that time, the second highest total in team history.

"Those were dark days," Brunansky says. "We didn't know if we were coming or going."

Griffith was a dinosaur, the last owner in baseball who relied only on his sport to make a living. Unlike the Steinbrenners, the Krocs, the Turners, he didn't have another source of income from which he could draw millions of dollars to pay ballplayers in the free agency era.

"I had to get out," says Griffith. "I loved the game, but the game was eating me alive. And I thought the best way to get out was by making it clear that the Twins weren't bound to stay in Minnesota. I'm just thankful that we did stay."

Finally, after entertaining offers from Florida, Griffith found a local buyer: millionaire banker Carl Pohlad.

On Sept. 7, 1984, at home plate in the Metrodome, Pohlad and Griffith signed on the dotted line.

"Of course we're glad we stayed here," outfielder Randy Bush says. "Minnesota is a nice place to play. But as players, we really couldn't worry too much about it. We didn't have any control of anything that happened off the field."

On the field, however, things weren't much better. Bush and Brunansky were two of six players who were traded away before they were ready to play in the major leagues.

The others from the "Class of '82" included pitcher Frank Viola, first baseman Kent Hrbek, third baseman Gary Gaetti and catcher Tim Laudner.

"They were forced," Twins Manager Tom Kelly says. "They were brought up here before they were ready to play in the major leagues. They should have been in Triple A."

"I've been here since '82 and I've seen Twins fans go through a living hell since then," Brunansky says. "We kept promising and kept promising, kept asking them to be patient, and it finally paid off. The success of the team has made it to the World Series."

The Twins almost paid off a lot sooner. In 1984, just before Griffith sold the team, the Twins led the weak AL West by as many as 6 1/2 games. But their lead gradually diminished as the pressure began getting on the young Twins.

Finally, in a Sept. 28 game against the Cleveland Indians, the Twins blew a 10-0 lead and lost 11-10.

Gaetti, whose throwing error opened the floodgates for Cleveland's seven-run sixth inning, had one of the most memorable moments of the season, a memorable moment of the game: "It's hard to throw when you have both hands around your neck."

Gaetti and other Twins say they learned from their near-miss in 1984.

"I made a mistake on that play. I eased up on a throw I had to make. And I've never let that happen again," says Gaetti, whose hard hitting and superb defensive play carried the Twins past the Detroit Tigers in the AL playoffs.

All the hope, all the promise, that the young Twins showed in 1984 faded over the next two seasons.

Popular Manager Billy Gardner was fired and Larry Miller was hired in 1985. Miller was fired in favor of Kelly in 1986.

Again, the Twins were losers. Again, they were the "Twinkies."

"You get tired of being a loser," Viola says. "You get the reputation and people start wondering, 'You guys ever going to win?'"

But now you're an ex-crate again. This year was an excuse any shut-up or shut-up. Fortunately for us, we did put up."
