Reagan reverses stand

Stock plunge triggers move for meeting

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, reacting to the stock market's historic plunge, bowed to longstanding requests Tuesday and said that he or his aides would meet with members of Congress from both parties to tackle the nation's budget deficit and other economic problems.

But, the president continued to defend his own deficit-cutting program, which relies on spending cuts and avoids any new taxes, and blasted legislation sponsored by congressional Democrats that would raise $12 billion in new revenues this year.

Reagan made his offer to meet with members of Congress — a proposal he had spurned several times earlier this year — after discussing the nation's economic picture with Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan, Secretary of the Treasury James A. Baker III and White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr.

But in an indication that bipartisan compromise remains a distant goal, James C. Miller III, Reagan's budget director, bickered earlier in the day with House Budget Committee members over how to raise this year's budget deficit by $23 billion and head off an automatic, across-the-board spending reduction that neither side wants.

Confidence the ultimate casualty?

By RICK GLADSTONE The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Even if the stock market bounces back from the crash of 1987, as it began to do on Tuesday, apprehension may affect the future behavior of consumers, business and foreign investors for months to come.

Economists said Tuesday that this anxiety could bring sharp cutbacks in consumer spending and lead to stark new perceptions that the economy is vulnerable, the budget and trade deficits are uncontrollable and the government is weak.

"There is a strong relationship between changes in consumer confidence and changes in the real economy," said Richard Curtin, an economist at the University of Michigan's Survey Research Center, which pioneered the concept of consumer confidence 40 years ago.

"There's no question that the kind of drastic and abrupt drop the stock market took will affect consumer sentiment."

Spending on large items such as homes, cars and household durables, most of which involve the use of credit or bank loans, may be especially vulnerable, he said.

"That essentially puts your future income up against these purchases," Curtin said. "When people become concerned about the course of the economy, they're less willing to incur this new debt."

The president, who signed an order Tuesday giving preliminary approval to the automatic budget cuts, told reporters on the White House lawn: "It is preferable, if possible, that the executive and legislative branches reach agreement on a budget deficit reduction package."

"Accordingly, I am directing that discussions be undertaken with the bipartisan leadership of the Congress for that purpose."

The president said that either he or his aides would participate in such meetings, which have not yet been scheduled.

At the same time, Reagan reiterated his opposition to new taxes and blamed the Democratic-controlled Congress for the nation's large budget deficit. Yet he acknowledged that a variety of budget proposals would be debated in the meeting with members of Congress and said: "I am willing to look at whatever proposal they may have."

Earlier, it appeared that such a meeting would not take place. White House officials charged that Democrats had requested an economic summit mainly to lobby for increased taxes. Throughout the day, Reagan and senior officials took pains to create an impression of "business as usual" and stressed that no special meetings were taking place as a result of the market performance, in an effort to avoid creating an atmosphere of crisis.

Jet slams hotel; at least 9 dead

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — An Air Force jet lost power short of a runway at the Indianapolis International Airport on Tuesday, clipped a bank building and exploded in a fireball into a crowded seven-story hotel, killing at least nine people.

The dead were found in the lobby and first-floor meeting rooms of the Ramada Inn Airport hotel, where the A7-D Corsair came to rest. The accident occurred at 9:15 a.m. and firefighters — some of whom saw the crash — were on the scene within two minutes.

The pilot, identified as Maj. Bruce L. Teagarden, 35, of Las Vegas, Nev., ejected at about 800 feet, Mayor William Hudnut said at a news conference. Teagarden was treated and released at a Methodist Hospital.

"The only thing I saw was devastation," said a witness, John Mentzer. "If anyone was in the lobby area they are gone. It was like a napalm bomb. The heat, the flames, it collapsed the whole front of the building."

Five other victims — two men and three women — have not been positively identified, Nicholas said. Dental records have been requested and the coroner said he hoped to have positive identification Wednesday.

Authorities conducted a room-to-room search after fires were put out for additional dead and injured. But because many hotel records were destroyed in the fire, officials Tuesday night did not know how many people were missing.

At Ramada Inn headquarters in Phoenix, Ariz., spokesman Dave Thompson said there were 155 rooms in the hotel and 105 registered guests. "About half of those had checked out before the crash occurred," he said.

However, other people were at business meetings or could have been in the hotel for other reasons, officials said.

Darren Klingler, emergency management coordinator for the Indianapolis department of public safety, said at least 118 people, including guests and employees, were able to escape. Authorities originally said 14 people died in the crash, but later revised that figure.

Valley park sites get a thumbs up

By JACK DOLAN States News Service

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration gave thumbs up Tuesday to legislation that would create two new park systems in the Magic Valley.

Officials of the Interior and Agriculture departments endorsed a measure that would make the 10,320-acre City of Rocks south of Burley, the site of spectacular geological formations and a number of historic and prehistoric sites, a national preserve.

The administration also supported establishing the Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument on what is now a 4,300-acre site managed by the Bureau of Land Management. The land includes hundreds of fossil sites that have yielded prehistoric animal fossils for the Smithsonian Institution.

The endorsements were made by officials who testified before the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

The testimony appears to pave the way for quick enactment of the legislation in the Senate.

After expressing some concern with jurisdictional responsibilities included in City of Rocks legislation, William Mott Jr., director of the National Park Service, was assured that all federal agencies with jurisdiction over the land now would have input in establishing the city as a park.

Mott said the U.S. Forest Service or the Bureau of Land Management should be the lead federal agency in establishing the park. But Sen. James McClure, Idaho's senator, insisted that responsibility should go to the National Park Service. McClure, a Senate Energy Committee member, is chief sponsor of the bill.

McClure said that while the Forest Service will be the "lead agency" in planning, the Forest Service and BLM also "will have a voice in planning and managing the lands that they transfer over to the state or local entities."

The legislation also asks for the federal government to pay up to 50 percent for the annual costs of operation and maintenance of the park after it is transferred to Idaho authorities.

The hearing was a follow-up to a committee hearing held Aug. 19 in Burley, where 60 people testified in support of McClure's City of Rocks bill. Eleven years ago, Idaho ranchers who grazed cattle in the area opposed McClure's efforts.

The bill was discussed for about one-half hour, a sign that the legislation is probably on the fast track to enactment in the Senate.

According to McClure, his bill on the Hagerman fossil area represents the "remarkable" record reached among Idahoans, who historically have battled over the fate of the land containing the fossil beds.

Indeed, Hagerman Mayor Merle Owsley and Hagerman Fossil National Monument Council Chairman H.L. Burt Holmes testified to the unified support for the legislation. They highlighted the economic benefits to be reaped by putting the fossil beds under federal jurisdiction.

"The development of tourist facilities in our area are already in the preliminary planning stages. These plans range from roads, road signs, motels and (recreational vehicle) parks to museums, picnic areas, ferry boats and nature trails," said Owsley.

Citing a 1974 National Parks study, Holmes said there would be about 600,000 visitors to the Hagerman National Monument in 1990. In recent years tourism to the fossil beds has been hampered by a lack of signs and information available about the attraction. The Hagerman Historical Society has a small museum with fossil exhibits in nearby Hagerman.

The bill also would allow for the continued operation of electrical generation and irrigation pumping facilities currently within the boundaries of the BLM natural area.

The area is threatened by irrigation runoff from the Bell Rapids tract that is located above the fossil beds. The soils containing the fossils are composed of unstable soils and they have been numerous landslides in the area, including one last April that destroyed Bell Rapids irrigation pump station.

Budget cuts ordered; tax hike feasible

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, after ordering the start of $23 billion in automatic spending cuts under the Gramm-Rudman law, said Tuesday he would prefer cutting the deficit through a budget compromise with Congress and indicated for the first time he might consider a tax increase.

Reagan's remarks came after a meeting with his top economic advisers and followed calls from the bipartisan congressional leadership for action in the wake of Monday's stock market crash.

"I presented in my budget a program that provided for $22 billion in additional revenue, which was not necessarily taxes. And I'm willing to look at whatever proposal they might have," Reagan said in response to a question about whether he'd compromise with the Democrats, who propose a tax increase to reduce the deficit.

"I am willing to be a participant in anything that can bring us together," the president said, telling reporters he was immediately ordering his aides to open discussions.

Senate debates War Powers Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Tuesday to end a filibuster that has blocked the chamber from debating whether to intervene in President Reagan's Persian Gulf policy.

With the roadblock cleared, senators renewed a debate as to whether the Democratic-controlled Congress should seek to have the War Powers Act invoked or take other steps to limit Reagan's military and naval projection of 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers.

The Senate voted by a 67-28 vote to invoke cloture, seven above the 60 votes needed to limit debate.

The filibuster had blocked formal action on a Democratic-backed resolution which, if it became law, would require the Senate to vote early in 1988 on whether to approve or disapprove of Reagan's policy.

Senate leaders announced late Tuesday that they had agreed to vote Wednesday afternoon on whether to approve the resolution.

As it considered the resolution Tuesday, the Senate gave 92-1 approval of an amendment endorsing Reagan's order to have Navy destroy an Iranian military facility a day earlier. Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., cast the dissenting vote.

Also pending on the Senate agenda was a separate resolution seeking to begin the process of invoking the War Powers Act, a 1973 law that limits a president's right to commit troops to situations of imminent danger.

Reagan, like his predecessors in the White House, contends that the law is an unconstitutional infringement on the president's authority as commander in chief.

Late Tuesday the president told Congress that American military forces in the Persian Gulf have returned to a lower state of alert readiness following Monday's attack by U.S. warships on an Iranian offshore platform.

Reagan said he was making the report in accordance with provisions of the War Powers Act. However, Reagan did not invoke provisions of the act that would force him to withdraw troops from the gulf unless Congress gives it specific authorization for their presence within 60 days.

An administration official, meanwhile, confirmed that the United States had asked the Syrian government to "convey our well known views" to Iran about the situation in the Gulf. Iranian Prime Minister Hussein Musavvi was quoted as saying the United States had sent a "message" through Syria that if Iran did not retaliate for the attacks, the United States would cease its "provocations" in the Gulf. Musavvi also said the Iran rejected the offer.

The administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, acknowledged the Syrian connection in the diplomatic exchange, but said the purpose of the contact was to reinforce privately what the United States has been saying publicly: that threats to shipping must stop.

Syria is still on the United States' list of countries that sponsor terrorism. But the administration has said in recent months that Syria has been helpful in trying to resolve some hostile situations and relations between the two nations have improved slightly.

The vote came a day after U.S. Navy ships destroyed Iranian military platforms in the Persian Gulf in retaliation for last week's Iranian missile attack on the Sea Isle City, one of the 11 retagged tankers.

As the Senate voted, the Pentagon announced that the Navy had begun its 12th convoy operation Tuesday morning.

National assessment tests to keep running

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Education Department announced Tuesday it has awarded a $10.8 million grant to Educational Testing Service to keep running the National Assessment of Educational Progress.

The assessment gives tests to more than 100,000 young people every two years in various school subjects.

Lawmakers from both parties, with Reagan administration support, are sponsoring bills to expand the testing program and provide state-by-state test results for the first time.

The new grant will keep the national assessment in the testing service's hands for at least the next 2 1/2 years. It will test more than 100,000 students ages 9, 13 and 17 next year in reading, writing, civics and American history.

ETS, a Princeton, N.J., firm that also makes the Scholastic Aptitude Test, has run the national assessment program since 1983. It was operated previously by the Education Commission of the States.

Report: 'Commercialism' in U.S. history books

NEW YORK (AP) — Many widely used American history texts are bland and deprive students of the richness of their past because publishers have knuckled under to interest groups and state authorities, a report by a panel of experts concluded Tuesday.

Publishers, worried first and foremost about sales, are producing books marked by "cowardice, commercialism, censorship and crassness," said the 78-page report, "American History Textbooks: An Assessment of Quality," sponsored by the Educational Excellence Network based at Columbia Teachers College, said the blandness pervading history texts applies to both content and language, and is made worse by "readability scales" formulas commonly used by publishers to keep vocabulary and sentence structure simple.

The report, written by Teachers College researcher Gilbert T. Sewall, was one of the harshest indictments yet of publishers who have been repeatedly accused by critics of "dumbing down" their product and contributing to the erosion of school standards.

It urged publishers to reduce the size of texts which have grown to 1,000 pages or more, eliminate glib but irrelevant illustrations, emphasize primary source materials, and hire better writers.

Accusing publishers of bending too far to the demands of interest groups, the report said textbooks should stop acting as "bureaucratic" instruments and special causes at the expense of central stories that mark the nation's political and economic development.

A panel of five college history professors, two historians, two editors, a public school teacher and a middle school principal reviewed 11 widely used American history texts: three elementary-level, four junior high, and four high school.

Those favorably reviewed included "The United States Past to Present," an elementary text by D. C. Heath and Co.; "American History," by Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Inc., at the junior high level; and the high school text "A History of the United States," by Ginn and Co.

But the report blasted the elementary text "The United States and Its Neighbors," published by Silver Burdett Co., as "lifeless, monotonous, without feeling; accordingly, a bus schedule and the Vikings are treated with equal passion."

Most junior high texts were harshly criticized. "American Spirit: A History of the United States," published by Allyn and Bacon Inc., is condescending and reads as if written by committee, said the report.

Launch schedule tight for shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — An engine with a tiny leak has robbed workers of most of the cushion time they had to prepare Discovery for the first post-Challenger shuttle flight June 2 and may force a delay, NASA's administrator said Tuesday.

Engineers suspected that one of Discovery's three main engines had sprung a leak following a 820-second test firing of the powerplant on Oct. 10 at the National Space Technology Laboratories near Bay St. Louis, Miss.

Administrator James C. Fletcher confirmed at a news conference Tuesday that there indeed was a leak.

"They found a very, very tiny leak in the oxidizer heat exchanger, but nevertheless it was beyond-spec," he said. "We've moved up another engine and that's what's causing the tightness of the schedule because that will be delivered to the Kennedy Space Center somewhat later than the original one."

Fletcher did not know how much of a delivery delay there would be, but said, "The late-delivery of the space shuttle main engine has caused the remaining slack in the schedule to come close to zero."

He said a flight delay could result if the leak proves to be common to all three of the engines. "We'd have to take them all apart," he added. "It's quite possible, however, that it's a quality control problem on that particular engine, in which case we'll still make the June schedule," Fletcher said.

The liquid fuel main engines combine with two solid fuel booster rockets to thrust shuttles into space. A faulty joint on one of the solid rockets caused the Jan. 28, 1986, explosion of Challenger that killed the crew of seven.

The administrator met with reporters following a tour of the Kennedy Space Center with center director Forrest S. McGarvey.

After talking with several space workers, he reported "the morale here is high, and we're in good shape at KSC."

Asked about an aggressive space program being pursued by the Soviets, while the shuttle fleet is grounded, Fletcher replied: "We're clearly behind in many aspects of manned space flight. Certainly long duration flights is something we want to do on the space station if we want to do anything beyond the space station. The Russian cosmonauts have already done that. They also have launched their first heavy lift launch vehicle," he said. "This country needs a heavy lift launch vehicle if we want to establish a base on the moon or go to Mars."

He said the United States is well ahead in such areas as space science, applications and microgravity research.

To catch up with the Soviets in manned flight would require adequate funding and a long-term continuity and national will on the part of the executive and congressional branches of government—and the American people, Fletcher said.

School heads show they're stuffed shirts

By its heavy-handed approach to what was nothing more than a bit of student exuberance over Homecoming, the Twin Falls School administration has gotten itself into a real mess.

District Superintendent Carl Snow and his uptight administration team at Twin Falls High School are drawing the wrong line in the dust over a t-shirt design by Senior Rod Gano, a copy of which we publish on this page.

Look at the design to the right. Yes, it is disrespectful of school administrators. Yes, it is irreverent and contentious. But is it disruptive? Obscene? Slanderous? No way.

A comment of this kind is precisely what the state and U.S. Constitutions protect under the rubric of freedom of speech.

Gano's t-shirt does not, by any stretch of the imagination, constitute a disruption of the educational environment at Twin Falls High School.

We submit that the school administration countenances more disruption hourly in our schools by the blaring blasts of administrators over the public address system in which they hustle everything from raffles to when the busses leave for the Minico game.

Snow, who has spent a lot of years in Twin Falls schools, should know that the educational challenge in this community is often pretty sparse.

He should welcome, not attempt to crush, the commentary which an educational environment ought to nourish.

By this act, the school administrators give substance to what many students intuitively believe: that they are a bunch of stuffed, fuddy-duddy t-shirts who have no sense of humor and little appreciation for the freedom of expression which they ought to encourage and which the Constitution protects.

A school is not a prison, in which order and the Almighty God of Discipline reign supreme.

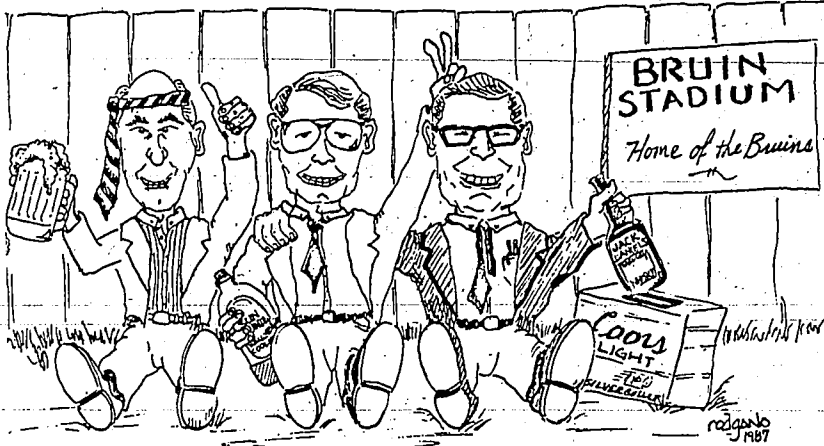

The law is clear on these points. It says school administrators have an obligation to maintain an orderly learning environment and to prevent disruption of that setting.

How a t-shirt with the design printed on this page violates that is beyond us.

Rock no boats. Cover your own rears. Keep the kids docile. Keep controversy out of sight of the community.

Those seem to be the standards of comment our school district wants.

No wonder you can barely get out of town every June, what with all the young people taking off to find stimulation and challenge elsewhere.

IT DOESN'T GET ANY BETTER THAN THIS Homecoming '87

Administrators abused their power

Jeff Carlson

Recently, there have ignited many sparks of controversy at Twin Falls High School, dealing with the creation and sale of Homecoming T-Shirts.

Homecoming (Oct. 9) is an epic event during the school year, and some students chose to make shirts to sell during the week.

The student who created the shirts this year was spoken to by the head administrators of the school: Principal Frank Charlton, Vice-Principal Norm Thomas, and Dean of Students Richard Bann.

Because of his design (three older men with alcoholic beverages next to Bruin Stadium) and the statement on the bottom ("It Doesn't Get Any Better Than This - Homecoming '87"), the student was given a five-day suspension.

In doing so, the three administrators overstepped their bounds and violated his student rights. According to these, a student must go through lesser procedures before a maximum sentence is passed, including a conference with parents and detention not exceeding three days depending on the student's behavior.

The person in question was threatened with suspension, expulsion and lawsuit.

The administration feels that the shirts are damaging to their public image and integrity. However, they have failed to realize that the shirts were made to be a light-hearted look at Homecoming.

They have taken the issue far too seriously, and the student was forced into defending something that really shouldn't have amounted to anything.

We feel that the administration has exercised excessive force in their snap judgment, infringing on the individuals rights as a student and a citizen.

They acted in haste, without positive knowledge that he had planned to do anything, basing their action entirely on hearsay and rumor. Not only is this a violation of his rights, it is also a blow against free enterprise, which this country was built upon.

As concerned students, we believe that a written public apology is in order. Though they are the executive bodies of the school, they have misused their power carelessly during this incident and in the past.

If the student hadn't stood up and defended his actions, who knows how long this tyranny would have persisted? We hope that the affair will end on a positive note, but it is apparent that there are no easy conclusions.

We'd like to finish on this note: If the administration had taken a light-hearted, open approach to the shirts and their content, this mess could have been avoided and replaced with renewed spirit and satisfaction during Homecoming.

Jeff Carlson is a Twin Falls High School senior. His letter was signed by 12 other students.

Freedom to know is protected right

Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press ...

The First Amendment only protects political speech? I had read that years ago when my erratic and undisciplined reading habits brought mine to a book by political philosopher, Alexander Meiklejohn.

I mailed over Meiklejohn's concept of the First Amendment, but as an already published poet, somewhere deep inside I thoroughly disagreed with and, therefore, casually dismissed his arguments. "After all," I'm certain I must have thought, "Meiklejohn is a philosopher. He is speculating. And his ideas have little relevance to the real world of our democracy."

So it was somewhat of a shock to hear that argument resurricited in the debate over Judge Robert Bork's confirmation to the U. S. Supreme Court. That a judge might believe, however temporarily, in such a limited concept of the First Amendment's free speech guarantees, troubled me.

I suppose that, like most Americans, when it comes to the legacy of freedoms which the Constitution and the Bill of Rights have willed us, I seldom thought about them. I accepted that they are there, in some vague but comforting way. I acted on what I believed to be my right as a citizen of the United States. And if my vague sense of those rights ran into a wall of stubborn legal reality, I became indignant. "What happened to justice in this country?"

When one is born and raised surrounded by Constitutional liberties, most often a generous sense of those freedoms and human rights becomes embedded in one's thought and categories of thought.

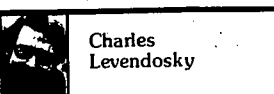

These rights, which generations of men and women have fought and died for, form a part of the strata of one's subconscious. It is difficult to separate such underlying premises of freedom from the foundations of other thoughts or actions.

I think many Americans operate at this level of understanding of what it means to live in our democracy.

Many Americans today seem to accept a generous application of the Bill of Rights as an article of faith, without question, without doubt. Perhaps that is the real reason that all the polls showed that the people reacted so negatively to Bork's confirmation. Perhaps, they reject what they see as his narrow view of our Constitutional rights.

The First Amendment only protects political speech? That isn't what the words spell out. The First Amendment does not say, "Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of political speech."

If that's what the Framers meant, it certainly could have been stated simply enough. The First Amendment seems clearly more inclusive to an ordinary citizen living in today's America. Perhaps it takes a philosophical or a legalistic mind to inject stinky meanings into the text. In my musings and reflections about the First Amendment during the past five years while in defense of free speech, I have finally learned to articulate some of my vague feelings about this great freedom.

Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes conceptualized the "marketplace of ideas" theory of the First Amendment in his dissent in Abraham v. United States (1919).

Holmes wrote, "The best test of truth is the power of the thought to get itself accepted in the competition of the market."

The Holmes concept is often quoted as a defense of free speech and it works well for some forms of speech. Scientific inquiry fits easily into the concept of a "test of truth" where hypotheses are tested and retested.

The "marketplace of ideas" theory of free speech is a good yet limited concept. It has little application to speech or symbolic speech, as in an exclamatory gesture like the "power fist" thrust upward, which doesn't fit the mold of competing in a test of truth.

The "marketplace of ideas" theory may be more expansive than Meiklejohn's concept of the First Amendment's protection of political speech, but it isn't broad enough to cover many kinds of essential communication.

What of information which isn't an idea but a feeling? What of information which isn't intended to be tested for truth. What about fables? What about myths? What about literature, or poetry, or art? What about spiritual truths? Or emotional truths? What about the layers of truth between a man and woman in a relationship?

Certainly, the "marketplace of ideas" concept is useful for some discussion of freedom of speech and of the press; but its severe and obvious limitations show that we must search in some other direction to find what the First Amendment means.

What, after all, is the meaning of living in a free country, of participating in a democracy? Yes, we govern ourselves; we elect our leaders. We have the right to political participation; it is a fundamental, unalienable right.

To what end? Is self-governing enough? Is political participation an end in itself? Humankind is not merely a political animal.

We value our democracy, not because we can vote, but because by governing ourselves we open our dreams and horizons to realizations which change and grow with each generation.

Self-governing is not an end in itself; rather, it is a means to an end.

Democracy allows personal growth. We are not limited to the dreams of our parents or grandparents. Democracy allows each of us to stretch toward accomplishments our grandparents couldn't have imagined.

And essential to reaching any capacity for self-realization is the freedom of speech and the concomitant and necessary liberty, the freedom to know.

Why else would citizens fight and die for democracy, except that they had tasted the raw possibility of reaching their human potentials?

It is this broader concept of free speech, intertwined with the liberty to develop our innate faculties, which is the grand vision; I believe the Framers had in mind when they wrote the First Amendment.

Anything less is trivial. Freedom of speech must incorporate this sense of being allowed to learn all that we can about what it means to be human. How else can we grow? How else can we be truly free?

A blight on times

Regarding Twin Falls' Professional Executive Leasing tax shelter:

As our national debt increases, those that can afford to pay taxes find new ways to avoid them.

Seventy-three doctors, lawyers and other professionals from right here in Twin Falls, have avoided $12 million in federal taxes.

That figures $164,383 per tax avoider, and does not include taxes not paid to the state of Idaho. As shocking as this is, the professionals involved were probably more attracted to the "PEL" promotional literature: "a very liberal fringe benefit package and retirement plan, without having to offer the same benefit to their support staff, such as nurses, lab technicians, and clerical workers."

PEL or PEL, a blight of our times. ROBERT JOHNSON Twin Falls

Gleaners busy For the past several years it has been my habit to take a walk in City Park every day. I was astounded at the size of the nut crops this year. I figured it would be a banner year for the squirrels in City Park this year.

Shortly after the nuts fell to the ground I saw one or two people gleaming under the trees. The next day there were six or seven people gleaming. The next day there were even more people gleaming. The park now looks like someone took a vacuum cleaner to the ground under the trees—there aren't any nuts to be found.

I don't know anything about the legality of this gleaming process, I'll leave that to wiser heads than mine. My point in writing this letter is the fact that we'll have to have a heavier supplemental feeding program for the squirrels this year.

If the people that read this letter will bring a pound of nuts once in a while and drop them off at the park, we can keep the squirrels from starving. If you can't afford a pound, a half pound or a quarter pound will help. Just dump the nuts at the base of one of the trees, and then hope the gleaners don't come back and gather them too. RALPH C. Vice president seeks new role

The Washington Post

MANILA, Philippines — Vice President Salvador Laurel, the Philippines' self-described "mild-mannered" president, spends his days playing golf, working to revive his splintered political machine and explaining to reporters his decision last month to break officially with President Corason Aquino.

Since tendering his "irrevocable resignation" as foreign secretary Sept. 9 in the midst of a major Cabinet shake-up, Laurel has steadfastly denied that he is joining the anti-Aquino opposition. Yet he has continued to lambaste the president for what he considers a failure to marshal all of the nation's resources to fight a tenacious communist insurgency.

"I told her our nation is like a house on fire," Laurel said in a recent interview, repeating a phrase he has used often in past weeks. "You want to water the plants. You want to clean the toilet. You want to cook lunch. And I want you to use all the water to put out the fire."

He added, "I'm in the opposition insofar as her handling of the insurgency is concerned."

While still Aquino's vice president, which makes him next in line of succession, he is also flirting with the political opposition. He announced in the interview that his United Party will likely form a "tactical alliance" with the opposition Nationalista Party of opposition Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile to field common candidates when local elections are held next year.

Fence-straddling is not a rare characteristic in a country where politicians are often referred to as "balimbing," a native-grown fruit with several distinct sides. Surviving has also been the hallmark of the Laurel clan, from pa-triarcho Jose P. Laurel Sr., who became wartime president during the Japanese occupation, to the current vice president, who only broke from now-deposed president Ferdinand Marcos in the late 1970s, when it became politically convenient.

Laurel's current jockeying — largely dismissed by progovernment commentators as political opportunism — has added another element of uncertainty to the complex political scene here.

By offering to form an alliance with an opposition not completely beholden to legal, constitutional processes, Laurel appears to be inviting a means of forcing Aquino from office through military pressure, thereby opening the way for his succession as president under the constitution.

By remaining as vice president, Laurel can continue to harass the Aquino government from within. Over the last few weeks, for example, Laurel has come forth with a "Reds List," an intelligence agency report compiling the names of 150 alleged leftists and communist sympathizers in the Aquino government and in Congress.

In the interview, Laurel said he requested the list to back up concerns voiced by soldiers he surveyed that Aquino was under the influence of communist sympathizers in key government jobs.

Laurel had been considered the leading opposition politician to challenge Marcos until Corason Aquino's sudden emergence on the political scene in late 1984, when the public rallied behind her after the 1985 assassination of her politician husband, Benigno Aquino. Laurel's decision to drop his own presidential bid is widely credited with uniting the opposition forces against Marcos.

Escorted convoy sets out amid threats

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iran will strike back and "make the U.S. regret" the Navy shelling that destroyed two oil platforms in the Persian Gulf, one of its most powerful leaders said Tuesday.

Hashemi Rafsanjani, speaker of the Iranian Parliament, said his declaration was "not a threat, but a reality."

The 12th U.S.-escorted convoy set out Tuesday, one day after the artillery attack on the Iranian platforms, moving south from Kuwait on the 550-mile voyage out of the gulf.

It consisted of two refueled Kuwait tankers — the 80,000-ton Ocean City and the 48,000-ton Gas King — and the guided-missile frigate USS Ford, the Pentagon said.

An Iranian shuttle tanker, reportedly sighting a mine in a busy channel 40 miles off Iran's coast, shipping executives said. They did not say what, if any, action was taken.

The site about 80 miles north of the Qatar peninsula is in what Iran calls an "exclusion zone." In such areas, Iranian forces stop and search commercial vessels suspected of carrying military goods to Iraq, with which Iran has been at war since September 1980.

Sources in Kuwait said eight to 10 artillery rounds exploded at Umm al-Aish, a Kuwaiti oil-drilling camp near the border with Iraq and about 50 miles from the sheikhdom's main oil complex on the gulf coast.

No casualties were reported and where the shells came from was not known. The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said it might have been errant fire from the Iraq-Iran warfront about 25 miles away.

Gulf shipping executives, also speaking privately, said commercial traffic in the waterway appeared normal after Monday's attack by four U.S. Navy destroyers on the Iranian oil-rig platforms in the south-central gulf.

Shells from 5-inch guns demolished the two platforms in the Rostam oilfield in an 85-minute bombardment. The 25-30 Iranians on the platforms were given time to evacuate before the barrage began.

U.S. military sources said three of the destroyers brought into the gulf for the attack, had sailed back out through the narrow Strait of Hormuz to rejoin their Navy battle groups in the Arabian Sea.

The fourth ship, the missile destroyer Kidd, is part of the Navy force in the gulf that escorts the 11 Kuwaiti tankers registered in the United States and given the American flag.

Reagan discounted the possibility of war with Iran, declaring: "They're not that stupid." Admiral William Crowe, chairman of the U.S. joint chiefs of staff, predicted Iran would use the "silent hand" of terrorism or mines.

E. German flees over border fence

HANOVER, West Germany (AP) — A 26-year-old East German man scaled border fences and fled to West Germany after eluding communist authorities who detected his escape, police said Tuesday.

The man, identified only as a bricklayer, crossed the border near the West German town of Bad Sachsa on Monday night, said West German border police in Hanover. Bad Sachsa is about 60 miles east of Goettingen.

Colombian bomb wounds 8

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A car bomb exploded in the Defense Ministry parking lot Monday and wounded eight people, and five small bombs went off in Medellin but caused little damage and no injuries, officials said.

Telephone callers to Bogota radio stations claimed a previously unheard of group calling itself the People's Insurgency set off the bomb at the ministry. That organization was presumed to be a leftist guerrilla group. The callers did not identify themselves.

When the bomb exploded at 4:30 p.m. Hundreds of employees fled the ministry building.

In Medellin, Colombia's second-largest city, Mayor William Jaramillo told the Bogota radio station RCN that no one was hurt in the five explosions.

The Medellin bombs exploded against the facades of four stores and a police guard shack in a neighborhood, the spokesman said.

Police said the man's first attempt to climb the barriers set off an alarm that alerted East German border guards, who began searching the area. The man hid and climbed over during a break in the search.

At least 134 people have fled to West Germany or West Berlin this year. On Saturday, an East German man fled to the West after swimming the Werra River about 15 miles east of Kassel.

Group says contras kidnapped American

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Contra rebels kidnapped an American member of the Witness for Peace group who was investigating reports that they had attacked civilians, a spokesman for the organization said Tuesday.

Paul Alan Fisher, 41, was abducted Saturday near La Libertad in Chontales province, 103 miles southeast of the capital, said Ed Griffin Nolan, the group's local director. Fisher is from Mill Valley, Calif., and his mother Celina, a widow, lives in Cleveland Heights, Ohio.

Fisher had been in Nicaragua since April and was part of a 32-member team that travels in the countryside checking on reports of human rights violations, Nolan said.

Witness for Peace has operated in Nicaragua since October 1983. The leftist Sandinista National Liberation Front overthrew the pro-U.S. government of Anastasio Somoza in July 1979.

The Nicaraguan Resistance, umbrella organization for the U.S.-supported rebels, said Tuesday the matter but would investigate.

No immediate comment was available from the Defense Ministry in Managua.

Prospects dim for peace conference

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Prospects for a peace conference dimmed Tuesday as Secretary of State George P. Shultz backed Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir in opposing an active role for the Soviet Union in negotiations.

Earlier, in London, Shultz dismissed suggestions that the United States may be backing into a war in the Persian Gulf.

Shultz spoke about the Mideast as he flew here from London to prepare for pre-summit talks beginning Thursday in Moscow.

He said the Soviets were "pushing very hard" for the sort of conference that "is exactly the kind of conference that the Israelis are aghast of — and I agree with the Israelis."

Shultz wound up his Mideast talks in London by meeting twice with King Hussein of Jordan. Hussein has campaigned hard for a peace conference attended by members of the United Nations Security Council, made up of the Soviet Union, the United States, France, Great Britain and China.

Left-leaning Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres also is an ardent supporter of such a conference as the most practical way to get Arab-Israeli negotiations started.

But Shamir is against the idea, largely because it might give the Soviets an opportunity to increase their influence in the region by exercising support for Arab positions.

Shultz described his meetings with Hussein as "worthwhile," but said he could not point to any specific achievement or "earth-shattering" development.

In London, Shultz said the U.S. delegation of two Iranian oil platforms on Monday was a "precise, restrained" response to Iranian assaults on American-flagged shipping.

"It was precisely the kind of measured response that we have been saying we would make and, I think, entirely appropriate and necessary under the circumstances," he said.

Stocks hit record low in Tokyo

TOKYO (AP) — Panicked selling sent prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange plummeting by record amounts today, with the market's key indicator losing four times as much as on its previous worst day.

Top officials blamed the slide on worry over the record decline on Wall Street and said it did not reflect confidence in the Japanese economy.

The 225-share Nikkei stock average fell 3,836.48 points and closed at 21,910.08 points, losing almost 15 percent of its value.

The previous record for a single-day fall was 831.32 points, set on April 27, when the index closed at 23,072.41 points.

There were few buy orders on the Tokyo exchange—the largest in the world in terms of total share value, that the day's first deal did not occur until about 25 minutes after the market opened.

Despite a continuing flurry of hand signals indicating lower and lower sell orders, the floor was eerily silent, through much of the day because traders were not shouting out completed deals as usual.

There was simply no one who wanted to buy, one dealer said. Turnover in the market's first session today totaled a moderate 600 million shares, down from 600 million on Monday and 700 million in the previous session.

The drop in Tokyo followed a record 508-point loss Monday in the Dow Jones industrial average in New York and dramatic declines on other exchanges around the world.

The Tokyo market had been booming for months, attracting "thousands of individual investors who sought better returns than those offered by Japan's low-interest bank accounts. Thus housewives who had put their savings into stocks were as worried today as big institutional investors.

Securities firms said their phone lines were flooded with sell orders, and there was little hope of selling at current depressed prices.

Japanese officials moved quickly to try to reassure citizens that the plunge would not mean a repeat of the events of 1929, when a Wall Street crash led to a world recession.

"The economic situation is completely different now," Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone told reporters.

"This phenomenon is limited to the stock markets," chief government spokesman Masaharu Gotoda said. "There has been no major effect on exchange markets. There is no fear that it will lead to a financial depression because the performance of the world economy is favorable."

Michio Takeuchi, president of the Tokyo Stock Exchange, said the decline in Tokyo is "basically because of the fall in New York. It's not due to economic factors. Prices in Japan are stable and worldwide economic performance is not so bad."

Once the exchange will take, he told a news conference, is to increase from 30 to 50 percent the amount of a stock purchase that can be financed with a loan. The move is likely to encourage people to return to the market place.

Susumu Okamoto, a managing director at Yamaichi Trust and Banking Co., said today's market drop, which "accelerated" as the day progressed, was fueled by panic by small-scale investors.

Analysts had expected the Tokyo market to continue to rise at least until next month, when the government plans to issue a large number of shares of stock in NTT, the national telecommunications firm, which recently became a private company.

Prospects dim for peace conference

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Prospects for a Mideast peace conference dimmed Tuesday as Secretary of State George P. Shultz backed Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir in opposing an active role for the Soviet Union in negotiations.

Earlier in London, Shultz dismissed suggestions that the United States may be backing into a war in the Persian Gulf.

Shultz spoke about the Mideast as he flew here from London to prepare for pre-summit talks beginning Thursday in Moscow.

He said the Soviets were "pushing very hard" for the sort of conference that "is exactly the kind of conference the Israelis are shy of — and I agree with the Israelis."

Shultz wound up his Mideast talks in London by meeting twice with King Hussein of Jordan. Hussein has campaigned hard for a peace conference attended by members of the United Nations Security Council, made up of the Soviet Union, the United States, France, Great Britain and China.

Left-leaning Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres also is an ardent supporter of such a conference as the most practical way to get Arab-Israeli negotiations started.

But Shamir is against the idea, largely because it might give the Soviets an opportunity to increase their influence in the region by exercising support for Arab positions.

Shultz described his meetings with Hussein as "worthwhile," but said he could not point to any specific achievement or "earth-shattering" development.

In London, Shultz said the U.S. destruction of two Iranian oil platforms on Monday was a "precise, restrained" response to Iranian assaults on American-flagged shipping.

"It was precisely the kind of measured response that we have been saying we would make and, I think, entirely appropriate and necessary under the circumstances," he said.

Group says contras kidnapped American

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Contra rebels kidnapped an American member of the Witness for Peace group who was investigating reports that they had attacked civilians, a spokesman for the organization said Tuesday.

Paul Alan Fisher, 41, was abducted Saturday near La Libertad in Chontales province, 103 miles southeast of the capital, said Ed Griffin Nolan, the group's local director. Fisher is from Mill Valley, Calif., and his mother, Ceilia, a widow, lives in Cleveland Heights, Ohio.

Fisher had been in Nicaragua since April and was part of a 32-member team that travels in the countryside checking on reports of human rights violations, Nolan said.

Witness for Peace has operated in Nicaragua since October 1983. The leftist Sandinista National Liberation Front overthrew the pro-U.S. government of the late President Anastasio Somoza in July 1979.

The Nicaraguan Resistance umbrella organization for the U.S.-supported rebels, said Tuesday in Miami they had no information on the matter but would investigate.

No immediate comment was available from the Defense Ministry in Managua.

Stocks hit record low in Tokyo

TOKYO (AP) — Panicked selling sent prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange plummeting by record amounts today, with the market's key indicator losing four times as much as on its previous worst day.

Top officials blamed the record decline on Wall Street and said it did not reflect confidence in the Japanese economy.

The 225-share Nikkei stock average fell 3,836.48 points and closed at 21,910.08 points, losing almost 15 percent of its value.

The previous record for a single-day fall was 801.32 points, set on April 27, when the index closed at 23,072.41 points.

There were so few buy orders on the Tokyo exchange, the largest in the world in terms of total share value, that the day's first deal did not occur until about 25 minutes after the market opened.

Despite a continuing flurry of bid signals indicating lower and lower sell offers, the floor was eerily silent through much of the day because traders were not shouting out completed deals as usual.

There was simply no one who wanted to buy, one of the exchange dealer said.

Turnover in the market's first section today totaled a moderate 500 million shares, down from 600 million on Monday and 700 million in the previous session.

The drop in Tokyo followed a record 508-point loss Monday in the Dow Jones industrial average in New York and dramatic declines on other exchanges around the world.

The Tokyo market had been booming for months, attracting thousands of individual investors who sought better returns than those offered by Japan's low-interest-bank accounts. Thus housewives who had put their savings into stocks were as worried today as big institutional investors.

Securities firms said their phone lines were flooded with sell orders, and they were forced to tell customers there was little hope of selling at current depressed prices.

Japanese officials moved quickly to try to reassure investors who had heard the market's plunge would mean a repeat of the events of 1929, when a Wall Street crash led to a world recession.

"The economic situation is completely different now," Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone told reporters.

"This phenomenon is limited to the stock markets," chief government spokesman Masaharu Gotoda said. "There has been no major effect on exchange markets. There's no fear that it will lead to a financial depression because the performance of the world economy is favorable."

Miehiro Takeuchi, president of the Tokyo Stock Exchange, said the decline in Tokyo "is basically because of the fall in New York. It's not due to economic factors. Prices in Japan are stable and worldwide economic performance is not so bad."

One-step-the-exchange will take, he told a news conference, is to increase from 30 to 50 percent the amount of a stock purchase that can be financed with a loan. The move is likely to encourage people to return to the marketplace.

Susumu Ohkawa, a managing director at Yasuda Trust and Banking Co., said today's market drop, which accelerated in the day progressed, was fueled by panic by small-scale investors.

Analysts had expected the Tokyo market to continue to rise at least until next month, when the government plans to issue a large number of shares of stock in NTT, the national telecommunications firm, which recently became a private company.

Sex therapist Dr. Ruth probes 'Moonlighting' roles —RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — If the stars of ABC-TV's "Moonlighting" were in therapy with Dr. Ruth, she would tell David Addison to find himself another woman and Maddie Hayes to stay single.

DR. RUTH Criticizes Maddie Hayes

—Sex therapist Ruth Westheimer, known as Dr. Ruth in newspaper columns, radio shows and books, uses an article in next week's issue of TV Guide to analyze the fictional romance between the characters played by Bruce Willis and Cybill Shepherd.

—Maddie, who becomes pregnant after sleeping with her co-worker and another love interest, gets the bulk of Dr. Ruth's criticism.

"One minute she's saying, 'Let's forget what happened between us,' and two seconds later she's flirting and showing how much she desires him."

—If he were in therapy with me, I would tell him, "Drop her. Go and find yourself a woman who doesn't play these kinds of games," Dr. Ruth said.

Maddie should not marry either David or Sam, her other love interest, because she might not be sure which is the father, Dr. Ruth said.

Stone's 'Wall Street' unaffected by dive

—LOS ANGELES (AP) — The stock market dive may call public interest to a 20th Century Fox film now in production: "Wall Street," directed by Oscar-winner Oliver Stone.

—Due out at Christmas, the film stars Charlie Sheen of Stone's Academy Award-winning "Platoon" in a drama about insider trading.

A Lorimar-Telepictures spokesman said the company has no plans to alter the picture to mirror Monday's panic.

Yorby doesn't miss being mayor of L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Although he still lashes out at the media, communism and Mayor Tom Bradley, former mayor

Sam Yorby says he wouldn't want to be back running the nation's second-largest city. "I don't miss it at all. I'm happy," said Yorby, who lives quietly in Studio City in a house he bought in a foreclosure sale 26 years ago from actor Mickey Rooney.

Yorby, 78, who was often chided by critics for traveling around the world while he was mayor of Los Angeles, is still a globe-trotter and he and his wife, Gloria, recently returned from a visit to South Africa, which he says has been maligned by the news media.

Riccardo Muti writes bicentennial concerto

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Music director Riccardo Muti is returning from Europe to conduct the Philadelphia Orchestra, the premiere of a series of works commissioned for the Constitution bicentennial.

The premiere of the piece by Steven Stucky, a faculty member at Cornell University, will take place Oct. 29 and will be repeated Oct. 30 and 31.

Stucky, 38, youngest of six composers selected for the special commissions, has created a work for full orchestra containing "subtle and mysterious effects," according to Philadelphia — Orchestra program annotator, Bernard Jacobson.

Bettelheim blasts TV for blocking thought

NEW YORK (AP) — Renowned psychologist Bruno Bettelheim says that if a child can't think, educational television may deserve part of the blame.

"On television, you cannot really invite thinking," Bettelheim said in an interview published in the November issue of Parents Magazine.

Bettelheim, whose book "A Good Enough Parent" has been published by Knopf, has other problems with modern child-rearing.

Dad gets girl out of Vietnam

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Former U.S. Army medic Barry Huntoon flew home Tuesday with the daughter he fathered in wartime Vietnam 16 years ago and recently rescued from a life peddling peanuts on the beach.

Huntoon met his half-Vietnamese daughter, Tran Thi Tuyet Mai, for the first time Oct. 12, when he went to Ho Chi Minh City to bring her out of communist Vietnam.

After the war ended in 1976, he had lost all contact with Mai and her mother until he saw Mai's photograph in Life magazine two years ago.

"I'm very happy. I missed my father," said Mai as she, her father, and a few other Amerasian children waited for a Northwest Orient flight to San Francisco.

"The first thing I want to do is go to school," said the girl, who cannot read or write.

"I just wish every father (of an Amerasian) could sit with his child for just five minutes," said I Huntoon, a 38-year-old sales representative from Paradise, Calif.

is to know who their father is." Mai is one of thousands of children fathered by U.S. servicemen and government employees during America's decade-and-a-half military involvement in Vietnam. Hanoi has rejected the children as legacies of a bitter war and said they all should go to the United States.

Despite frequent bickering with Vietnamese authorities, the United States has resettled about 4,000 Amerasians in an official migration program in recent years. U.S. officials say about 10,000 remain in Vietnam.

Huntoon said Mai, poor and with no education, had been living with her mother in the port of Vung Tau near Ho Chi Minh City. The city was called Saigon when it was the capital of the U.S.-backed South Vietnam government, which fell in April 1975.

"Her life's been really tough," Huntoon said. "She sold peanuts on the beach and I asked her if she was able to go swimming and she never could because 'They're so beautiful. All they want was there to work and not to play. She's never played with a doll, with other children."

He said she left Vietnam with only a small bag containing nothing but letters and photographs.

"These are the first new clothes she has ever had," Huntoon said, pointing to the girl's bright pink outfit and tennis shoes.

Huntoon, who is married, says his three young children know Mai's name and face from a photograph mounted in their room. He said it is unclear where Mai's mother will live, but she is expected to leave Vietnam in the next few days.

Huntoon left behind his girlfriend, nine months pregnant with Mai, upon completing his tour of duty in Vietnam in 1972. Huntoon said he and Tran Thi Tuyet Nhung didn't have the papers needed to get married, and efforts to get her to the United States failed.

Surgeons begin to separate twins

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Surgeons at Soweto's hospital on Tuesday began an intricate surgical procedure to separate 10-month-old twins joined at the back of the head.

A statement issued by Baragwanath Hospital in the black township outside Johannesburg said the girls, Mpho and Mphoyana Mathibela, reacted well to the initial, eight-hour operation done by a 40-member medical team.

Guinness Book sets record

LONDON (AP) — The Guinness Book of Records published its latest edition Monday and set a record of its own — in the field of publicity stunts.

The editors unveiled the new volume at London's Covent Garden plaza with a copy of the book 11 feet tall by 10 feet wide, which they claim is the world's biggest volume.

The Guinness Book of Records previously listed the largest volume as the Super Book, published in Denver in 1976. That volume measured 9 feet by 10 feet, 2 1/4 inches.

"It never ceases to amaze me how people keep coming up with new records. Some are frivolous but others are important to history and knowledge," said Guinness editor, Norris McWhirter.

He said some categories were being dropped, including sword-swallowing. "The world record is 13 swords at once and we felt it would be too dangerous for anyone to try for more."

The annual publication was launched in 1955 and its publishers claim it has sold 67 million copies in 29 languages. The normal 1988 edition has 320 pages and measures a routine 8 1/2 inches by 11 1/4 inches.

surgeons, said last week that the chances of success were not high but that the twins had reached an age where an attempt to separate them was vital.

The operation follows the separation of twins from West Germany Sept. 6 at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. Benjamin and Patrick Binder were also joined at the back of the head. The Binders were alive and using ventilators to assist their breathing.

Doctors at Baragwanath say they face a more complicated operation because of the configuration of the Mathibela twins' veins.

"The twins, born Dec. 7, saw each other for the first time earlier this month thanks to a special arrangement of mirrors in their ward. Their names mean "girl" and "little girl."

The babies' 22-year-old mother, Sophie Mathibela, is a domestic worker who earns about $60 a month. The hospital is caring for the babies at no charge to her.

Investigator rips FAA inspections

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration remains unable to adjust its aircraft inspection programs to the rapidly changing airline industry, a congressional investigator said Tuesday.

As a result, the agency's procedures for inspecting the nation's airlines vary from region to region, its training program for new inspectors is unsatisfactory, and its record-keeping is poor, the researcher said. "Most of our concerns about the adequacy of FAA inspection programs are not new," Nancy C. Naismith, a program manager of the Office of Technology Assessment, told members of the House Public Works and Transportation Investigations subcommittee. "Unfortunately, they persist despite public airing."

The report by the office, a research arm of Congress, was greeted sympathetically by lawmakers on the panel. The subcommittee chairman, Rep. James Oberstar, D-Minn., said legislators have repeatedly tried to persuade the FAA to address its problems in overseeing the maintenance of airliners.

"They continue to respond only after problems become publicly known and widespread," Oberstar said.

Since the airline industry was deregulated in 1978, many carriers have centralized their operations and concentrated their maintenance programs, creating an increased reliance on contractors to provide maintenance for their aircraft.

"The companies providing maintenance do not have primary responsibility in the case of an accident... they may not have the same motivation to do the highest quality work," Ms. Naismith said. "The FAA's inspection program and standards have not altered sufficiently to assure that the federal role is responding to these industry changes or is meeting new needs."

In an interview, FAA spokesman John Leyden said the agency has been conducting detailed examinations of airlines' maintenance procedures in recent years, in addition to inspecting the work performed on individual aircraft.

"The agency has changed the way we do business," he said.

Housing construction up 4.4% in September

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing construction climbed 4.4 percent in September, the biggest gain in nine months, the government said today. The Commerce Department said new homes and apartments were built at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.67 million units last month, compared to a revised August rate of 1.60 million units.

The increase was the sharpest gain since a 10.8 percent advance in December 1986 and left analysts somewhat surprised, since many of them had been forecasting further declines in construction, given the fact that mortgage rates rose sharply last month.

The nationwide average for fixed-rate mortgages hit 11.68 last week, the highest it has been in almost two years. After hitting a nine-year low of 9 percent in March, mortgage rates have been rising for most of this year, dampening home sales and construction.

For the first nine months of this year, housing construction is down 10.2 percent from the same period in 1986. The small rebound in August came from improvements in both single-family and apartment construction. Single-family homes were started at an annual rate of 1.17 million units in September following a 2.8 percent decline in August.

Construction of multi-unit dwellings was up 2.9 percent to an annual rate of 501,000. However, even with the increase, apartment construction is still down 11.5 percent from a year ago.

Analysts said the weakness in this sector reflects high vacancy rates around the country and the adverse impact of the new tax law on real estate investments.

Building permits, considered a good sign of future activity, fell in September 0.6 percent following a 1 percent August increase. The unchanged performance for housing construction in August represented a revision from a month ago when the government initially reported that housing construction fell 1.5 percent.

The increase in September included a 7.2 percent advance in the South, where housing units were started at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 688,000 units in September. Even with the improvement, construction activity in the South was still 2.3 percent lower than it was a year ago.

Housing construction climbed 10.4 percent in the Midwest to an annual rate of 308,000 units.

Housing construction edged down 0.8 percent in the Northeast to an annual rate of 244,000 units and was off 0.5 percent in the West to an annual rate of 429,000 units.

Bus-related accidents kill 5

By The Associated Press

A tractor-trailer slammed into a bus in South Carolina early today, killing four people and injuring 13, and a motorist died in a fiery seven-vehicle pileup near St. Louis that involved a school bus, authorities said.

The bus in the north St. Louis County smashup Monday caught fire, but only minor injuries were reported among the 35 grade-school children aboard because a 9-year-old boy opened the rear emergency door and led his schoolmates to safety, police said.

"The flames were coming up and people were screaming," said Damien Moore. "I just went and opened the emergency door, and we all got out." Two adults were injured.

The accident in northwest South Carolina occurred shortly after midnight on Interstate 85 just outside Gaffney, said state Highway Patrol Trooper Allan Luker.

The bus, carrying members of the Converse College women's basketball team, had broken down and apparently was on the shoulder of the interstate when it was hit, police said.

The collision demolished both vehicles, Luker said. "Both went off the road and down the embankment. It's the worst I've seen in several years."

The bus was carrying 16 people back to Spartanburg, S.C., from a scrimmage at Wingate College in Wingate, N.C.

Contractor license plan draws flak

BOISE (AP) — A legislative proposal to set up a statewide contractor licensing board ran into heavy opposition at a legislative committee hearing here today.

Rep. James Stoecheff, D-Sandpoint, said he thought the 19-page legislation went much further than committee members intended.

"I think we should cut out all but about three pages of the bill," he said. "I think we're going to be building another state bureaucracy here that we don't need."

Spokesmen for contractors also objected to a proposal to allow a member of the general public and a representative of workers to be among seven persons appointed to the licensing board.

Committee Chairman Sen. Skip

Smyser, R-Parma, urged committee members to complete their review of the entire bill before discussing whether it needs changes.

"I'm not certain either this is what we intended, but we need to look at it first and make decisions later on," he said.

Idaho has no statewide licensing for contractors, other than those who work on public works projects. At earlier committee meetings, witnesses testified that there's no way people can do anything about bad contracting work or unfair deals.

Cochairman Rep. Dean Haugenson, R-Coeur d'Alene, said he felt the licensing law needs teeth or it will be of no value.

Haugenson, himself a contractor, said, "It's getting so legitimate people can't compete out there" with unethical contractors who don't follow labor laws, don't carry proper insurance and don't pay taxes on their profits.

Paul Pusey, representing the Idaho Building Contractors Association, and Bob Corbell, Associated General Contractors, both objected to a provision that would allow a labor representative to serve on the licensing board along with a member of the general public and five contractors.

The licensing law would require the submission of confidential financial material, they contended, and it would disrupt labor negotiations to allow a union official or representative access to that information.

Stallings says loan probe closed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, says he has been advised by the House Ethics Committee that he improperly used campaign funds for two loans.

It also appears that an inquiry, touched off by an Idaho request, is closed, Stallings said Tuesday.

The congressman said he received a letter signed by the senior members of the ethics panel, Rep. Julian Dixon, D-Calif., and Rep. Floyd Spence, R-S.C. It said Stallings was wrong when he assumed that it was enough to receive approval from the Federal Elections Commission for the loan procedure, that Ethics Committee approval was necessary.

"They said it was a violation which I already have acknowledged," said Stallings. "They were just saying you should not do that in the future."

Stallings earlier this year made a loan of $4,800 from his campaign fund to purchase an automobile to be used partially for business and partially for personal use. Stallings reported that on financial disclosure records filed with the Federal Elections Commission, along with a second loan of $1,000 to an aide, Gary Catron.

Stallings said Tuesday both loans have been repaid, and he still feels he got bad advice from FEC when he asked for approval of the process.

He said Dixon went to the floor of the House to announce the report on Tuesday, and to emphasize to fellow House members that the practice was improper.

Andrus reorganizes state police

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus has announced a major reorganization of the Idaho State Police force, adding a new administrator in each district.

Andrus said Tuesday the new structure is more consistent with other state police agencies and will allow more accurate allocations of work responsibilities.

Each district office now is administered by a lieutenant. The reorganization will elevate the commander position to the rank of captain, and a new deputy district commander position will be created with the rank of lieutenant.

"The State Police is an elite, highly professional organization that has consistently provided outstanding service to the people of Idaho," said Andrus. "This reorganization will allow even greater efficiency and service from top to bottom."

Mack Richardson, director of the Department of Law Enforcement, said the new deputy commander will assist the district commander in the administration of district operations and act as commander at times. That will relieve district commanders from the majority of their administrative duties, allowing them to perform as supervisors on the highways.

The headquarters office also will be restructured. The two field operations commanders and the support services operation commander, presently at the rank of captain, will be promoted to major. The deputy superintendent, currently at the rank of major, will be promoted to lieutenant colonel.

The Idaho State Police supervisor is Col. Rich Humpherys.

Andrus said the increased size and work load of the State Police required restructuring. He also said more commissioned officers are needed to perform the mission mandated by law for the ISP.

Ex-court marshall sentenced

POCATELLO (AP) — Hank Menges, a former 6th District Court marshall, has been placed on one year probation and ordered to pay a $500 fine on each of two misdemeanor counts of petty theft by diversion of services.

The sentence was handed down Tuesday by 7th District Magistrate William Black after Menges pleaded guilty to the charges. Menges' attorney, Shawn Anderson, waived a presentence report.

The guilty plea to the misdemeanor counts were part of a plea bargain agreement reached earlier by Anderson and Bannock County Deputy Prosecutor Craig Jorgensen.

Menges had been charged with six felony counts related to his supervision of a fines workoff program for the district court when he was a marshall.

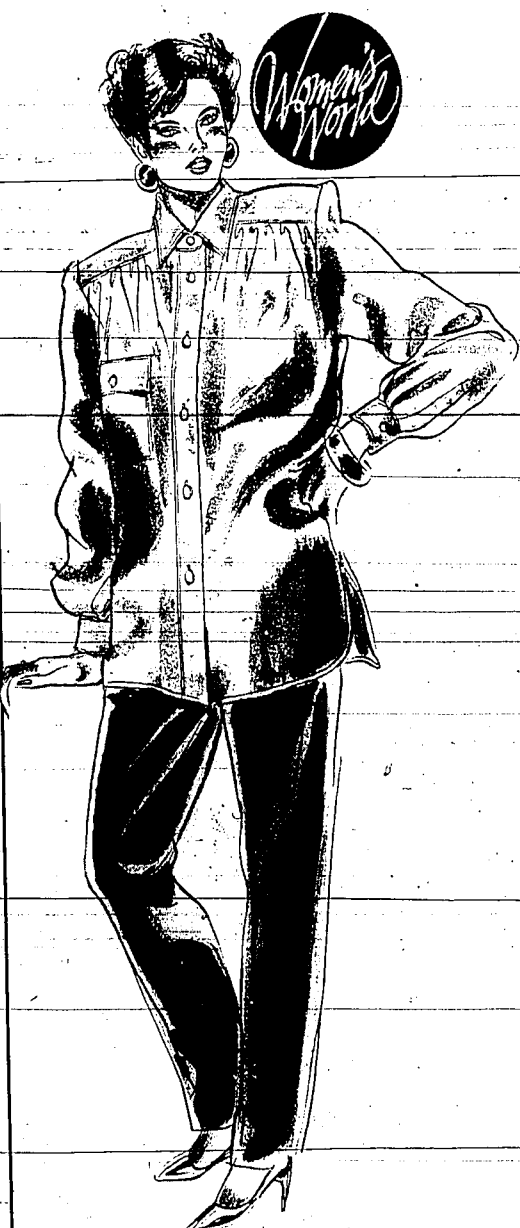

The charges against Menges stemmed from his allegedly making improper program assignments. He had been charged with one count of falsifying public records, one count of offering a false or forged instrument for record and four counts of grand theft.

Black suspended a six-month jail sentence on each count and placed Menges on probation for a year.

Craig objects to, yet helps pass waste dump moratorium

By LINDA KEENE
States News Service

WASHINGTON — Despite objections by Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, House subcommittee Tuesday approved legislation imposing an 18-month moratorium on most work at Hanford and finalist sites in Nevada and Texas for a high-level waste dump.

Approved by the House Interior Energy and Environment Subcommittee, the bill would create an independent commission to review the embattled waste program. It would also allow a special waste negotiator to seek an agreement with a state or Indian tribe to build a temporary, above-ground

"monitored retrievable storage," or MRS.

The bill goes to the full House Interior Committee next week, where its passage is expected, but only after a battle with several members, including Craig.

Following the meeting, Craig argued that 18 months was too long to suspend the program. "It could grind the whole thing to a halt if we're not careful," he said, noting that it would also delay a search for a second repository in the East.

Other committee members, including Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., warned that the bill's MRS provision "will deflate all political will to find a deep geological site." Committee Chairman Rep. Morris Udall, D-Az., disagreed and scolded Markey for his "pessimistic" outlook.

According to the legislation, an independent commission would be formed to conduct a 12-month review of the administration's nuclear waste program. Congress would have an additional six months to review the commission's recommendations. During the moratorium, exploratory shaft excavation at the finalist sites would be prohibited.

In the meantime, a special negotiator would be directed to pursue an agreement with a state or tribe for development of an MRS. The negotiator would be allowed to consult with other agencies about the technical qualifications of potential sites, and would forward its recommendation to Congress for final approval. Western repository by January 1989 while canceling the search for a second site in the East. The proposal duplicates a bill by Sens. James McClure, R-Idaho, and J. Bennett Johnston, D-La.

The MRS amendment was offered by Rep. Jerry Huckaby, D-La. Huckaby was expected to present a more sweeping amendment that would have authorized the DOE to select a site. An aide to Craig said that the Midvale Republican preferred to see all three sites characterized at the same time and for that reason had reservations about the Johnston-McClure bill. Craig does not, however, fully support the moratorium bill because of its extended delay.

Consequently, in a somewhat contradictory procedural move, Craig voted Tuesday to approve the moratorium bill to move it out of committee, but said afterward that he did not support the bill.

Dismissal ruling due on lawsuit

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A federal judge has taken under advisement a motion to dismiss a lawsuit by Utah Power & Light Co. and more than 150 Utah and Wyoming communities against the Western Area Power Administration.

UP&L seeks to force WAPA to allow it and its supporting towns and cities access to federal hydroelectric power.

U.S. District Judge J. Thomas Greene did not say when he would rule on the motion.

During arguments Monday, Donald E. Holbrook, the lead plaintiffs' attorney, accused WAPA of driving municipal governments toward socialism with its allocation system.

Holbrook blasted WAPA's rule that it will sell cheap federal hydropower to cities and towns only if they have their own utilities for distribution.

"In other words, your honor, socialize the distribution system in this state," he said.

Holbrook said WAPA would deny benefits of the federal dams to three-quarters of Utahns, people whose tax dollars helped build the dams.

But WAPA attorney Max C. Vassanelli said the issue was not whether the way the power is allocated is the best it could be.

"We're not here to debate the wisdom of these allocations," he said, adding that in order for the case to have validity in federal court, it would have to be shown that material facts are in dispute, that WAPA broke the law, and that its actions have no rational basis.

The suit seeks to do away with WAPA regulations scheduled to take effect after 1989.

Planners of the Colorado River Storage Project Act envisioned that cities could buy inexpensive federal power through non-government utilities, Holbrook said.

3 stranded hikers rescued in canyon

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — A mountain climbing team from the Weber County sheriff's office rescued three hikers Tuesday after the group became stranded overnight in Waterfall Canyon east of here, authorities said.

Two men and two women left for a hiking excursion in the canyon about 2:30 p.m. Monday and became stuck when darkness fell and they couldn't find their way out, said sheriff's Sgt. Bruce Hartman.

One of the men, Thomas Holmes, 21, found his way down and notified authorities.

"They were unfamiliar with the area. That was a lot of the problem," Hartman said. "For some reason between 2:30 and sunset, they were up there and they just didn't know what to do. They panicked and didn't want to go any farther."

The sheriff's jeep posse was called in but was not able to get to the other three because of the ruggedness of the terrain.

The mountain climbing unit was notified, and seven members of the squad rappelled down to the trio, with a helicopter from Dugway Proving Ground lighting the way, Hartman said.

The three, identified as Debra K. Beckhold, 21, Teresa Stringer, 22, and Mike Minor, 21, all of Ogden, were brought down between 6:30 a.m. and 8 a.m., Hartman said.

Cardinals find their bats just in time

By BEN WALKER
The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — The St. Louis Cardinals heated up on a cold Mississippi River night and cooled off the Minnesota Twins.

Vince Coleman's two-run double in the seventh inning rescued St. Louis from the brink of World Series elimination and rallied the Cardinals over Minnesota 3-1 Tuesday night, cutting the Twins lead to two games to one. No team has ever overcome a 3-0 deficit in the Series.

John Tudor and Todd Worrell checked Minnesota on the chilliest night of the fall. They combined on a five-hitter against the Twins, who scored 18 runs on 21 hits in the first two games.

TV: 6:15 p.m., Channel 6

"It definitely entered my mind that they couldn't be stopped after watching the first two games in Minnesota," Worrell said.

But back at home, the Cardinals returned to their scrape-and-peck offense and clawed back into contention. St. Louis, shut out on four hits through six innings by journeyman Les Straker, got four in the seventh against reliever Juan Berenguer.

"We just have to scratch for runs any way we can. I wasn't sure we could get a run," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said.

"We played for one run and got three," Herzog said. "That's our game. We're not going to score too many runs with the lineup we have."

The Cardinals struck after Straker was taken out for a pinch hitter in the seventh with a 1-0 lead.

"That's the best I've thrown all year," Straker said. "I didn't expect to come out, but that's the way I pitched all year, six or seven innings."

"We wanted five or six innings out of him. If you check his history, he's usually a little shaky after six," Twins Manager Tom Kelly said of Straker. "We wanted Berenguer for two innings and then Jeff Reardon."

"Juan's our guy. He's pitched well all season."

Not against St. Louis, however. The Cardinals scored two runs on three hits in an inning against him in Game 2 and tagged him again.

Game 4 will be Wednesday night when Frank Viola, who won Game 1, will start for the Twins. Rookie left-hander Greg Mathews will start for St. Louis.

Tudor and Worrell were able to contain the Twins and their fourth-inning scoring spree. They had gotten 13 runs in the fourth innings of the first two games.

"I asked Whitey to petition the league to eliminate the fourth inning. They didn't go for it," Tudor said.

The Twins were held under five runs for the first time in seven postseason games and this was the first time they did not hit at least one home run.

"Now we know we can beat this club," St. Louis' Willie McGee said. "Even if it's only one game."

LES STRAKER
Masterful six innings

The Cardinals ended a five-game losing streak in World Series play and halted the Twins' four-game winning streak in postseason play.

"We've lost a lot of offense," Herzog said. "Our pitchers know they have to pitch a low-run ball game." The Cardinals, minus Jack Clark and ailing injured Terry Pendleton out of the starting lineup, again found a way to win when they had to — just like they did in the NL playoffs.

Back in the open air at Busch Stadium before a record crowd of 55,347, St. Louis came alive on the coldest night of the fall.

"It was nice to look up and see blue skies, instead of white," Tudor said.

Kelly said the 40-degree temperatures did not affect his team.

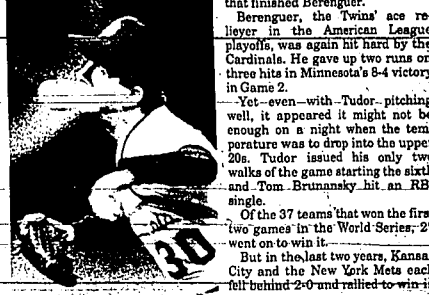

"I think Mr. Tudor pitched an outstanding game. That's why we didn't hit the ball," Kelly said. "We played in the cold weather last week in Detroit and it didn't bother us."

Straker, a 10-year minor leaguer, outdueled Tudor for six innings but left for a pinch hitter in the seventh with a 1-0 lead.

The Cardinals' scratching started when Jose Oquendo and Tony Pena opened the seventh with singles and Pendleton, batting for Tudor, bunted the runners into scoring position.

JOHN TUDOR
Not rattled

Then came Coleman, just 1-for-11 in the Series. He sliced an 0-2 pitch barely inside the left-field line to make it 2-1, then stole his second base of the game and scored an insurance run on Ozzie Smith's single that finished Berenguer.

Berenguer, the Twins' ace reliever in the American League playoffs, was again hit hard by the Cardinals. He gave up two runs on three hits in Minnesota's 8-4 victory in Game 2.

Yet even with Tudor pitching well, it appeared it might not be enough on a night when the temperature was to drop into the upper 20s. Tudor issued his only two walks of the game starting the sixth and Tom Brunansky hit an RBI single.

Of the 37 teams that won the first two games in the World Series, 27 went on to win it.

But in the last two years, Kansas City and the New York Mets each fell behind 2-0 and rallied to win in seven games.

Straker and Tudor matched zeroes through five innings.

Tudor retired the first six Twins and escaped trouble in the third by striking out Straker in his first major-league at-bat. Straker failed to bunt with a runner on first, and the mistake was magnified when Dan Gladden followed with a two-

NFL players lost more than just strike

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

In the short run, the owners won NFL Strike V. They might even have bought two or three years, given the pace of litigation, but they also may have created a residue of bitterness that will last long after the lawsuits are settled.

Analysis

It wasn't so much that the owners won by keeping the games going and turning a trickle of returning players into a torrent. It was that they rubbed it in, refusing to allow the regulars to play last Sunday because the union sent them in Thursday, a day after the weekly reporting deadline.

"The same things we show on the field, the killer instinct, they showed on us," nose tackle Jim Burt of the Giants said. "They really stomped us."

When someone is stomped, he can have a long memory — league officials concede that if there had been a formal back-to-work agreement between the union and the NFL Management Council the regulars who reported Thursday would have played on Sunday.

The only rule in sports negotiations is that when you have your foot on someone else's neck, don't step on it because he'll reverse the situation at some point, "one agent said this week.

"They took proud men who are very macho and already hurting and ground them into the dust. For first time in the whole strike, they got fans feeling relatively sorry for players."

Wait until the next negotiations. If management held the edge this time because the players had no clear-cut issue to rally around, there's sure to be one the next time — resentment over the way the owners rubbed it in.

One reason for the hard-line approach was the makeup of the Management Council executive committee, which contains three of the NFL's toughest bargainers — Tex Schramm of Dallas, Joe Robbie of Miami and Mike Brown of Cincinnati — with only Dan Rooney of Pittsburgh as a moderate.

counterbalance. Combined with Jack Donlan, the Council's executive director, they played hardball all the way through the 24-day strike.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle, who desperately wanted to avoid what did happen, could do little but bring the sides together from time to time. He received calls from union leader Gene Upshaw on Tuesday and Wednesday nights, the last two before the end of the strike, but couldn't get the hard-liners to compromise on a back-to-work agreement that would have ended the strike more amicably.

Al Davis, who links to Upshaw, a former player for him with the Los Angeles Raiders, could have served the owners well, was rendered ineffective because past lawsuits have left him isolated. His so-called "West Coast Plan," which would have allowed five agency after 10 years, was never even considered.

Pair of prep games moved to Thursday

By The Times-News

Two Magic Valley high school football games have been switched from Friday and Thursday night this week to allow students at Wendell and Castleford high school to attend the state Class A-3 and A-4 volleyball tournaments in Rigby, in which their teams are playing this weekend.

Gooding will host Wendell Thursday night at 7:30 p.m. in a game that still has a large bearing on the Canyon Conference final standings and which teams go to the state A-3 playoffs.

league games, are also in the running if Gooding defeats Wendell and if Canyon Conference frontrunner Glenna Ferry defeats Filor Friday night.

In Hagerman Thursday, Castleford will try for its first winning season since 1984 against the winless Pirates in a 7:30 p.m. Magic Valley Conference contest.

The Gooding-Wendell and Castleford-Hagerman games will be the regular-season finals for all four teams.

Three league championship involving Magic Valley teams will be decided Friday when Filor visits Glenna Ferry in the Canyon finale, Buhl travels to Jerome in the South-Central Idaho Conference title game and Oakley visits Murtaugh in the MVC.

Hurricanes playing hard to get for, of all things, Orange Bowl Game

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
The Associated Press

No deals.

That's what Coach Jimmy Johnson of third-ranked Miami says he has told the Orange Bowl.

This year's bowl selection date is Nov. 21, the day the Orange Bowl hopes No. 1 Oklahoma meets No. 2 Nebraska for the Big Eight championship, with the winner earning a trip to Miami as No. 1.

The loser of that game probably will slip below Miami in the Associated Press poll since the Hurricanes' next five opponents are pasties named Cincinnati, East Carolina, Miami of Ohio, Virginia Tech and, on Nov. 21, Toledo.

But here's the catch: Miami plays Notre Dame on Nov. 28 and South Carolina on Dec. 5, two teams capable of beating anyone. If the Orange Bowl expects to make a deal with the Hurricanes dependent on the Notre Dame game, it may be in for a surprise.

"If we are fortunate enough to be 9-0 on picking day, we will only consider unconditional offers," Johnson says. "With who we have beaten so far this season and their rankings (Florida, Arkansas and Florida State were in the Top Twenty when Miami beat them), we shouldn't have to chase anybody. We'll see what's offered and make a decision from there."

Johnson's tone sounds suspiciously like an old country crooner. Take Me As I Am Or Let Me Go. And his attitude caught the Orange Bowl somewhat off-guard.

"I'm sort of surprised by it," Executive Director Steve Hatchell says. "We haven't been brokering anybody on all of this if that type of thing. At this point, I don't know if we'd take them unconditionally, but we haven't discussed any deal with anybody."

R. Pete Williams, chairman of the Orange Bowl's Selection Committee — which, by the way, includes several Miami supporters and a member of the school's board of trustees — said his reaction at this time is that I wouldn't expect Jimmy to say anything different, and I wouldn't say anything different if I were in his shoes.

"He's in a very strong position, but if he's strong enough to dictate where he'll be playing before the Notre Dame and South Carolina games, I don't know. I don't know if it puts any pressure on the Orange Bowl Committee at this juncture, and I don't intend to put any pressure on him.

"I haven't asked the team selection committee for even a straw vote on their opinion right now, but some people here will have to have a gut check in a couple of weeks."

Williams did say that Miami isn't in as strong a position as it was last year, when the Hurricanes were No. 1 and played No. 2 Penn State for the national championship in the Fiesta Bowl.

"If Jimmy were No. 1, his comments would have a lot more impact," Williams said. "He dictated everything last year, but he's not there right now. He doesn't have the same impact."

"I sort of admire him for saying this right now because he can be particularly proud of his opponents between now and then. But the crucial thing to me is how everyone else does between now and then."

The Orange Bowl could be caught in a double bind if Nebraska beats Oklahoma because the Cornhuskers then have to play Colorado in Boulder on Nov. 28.

"We will have a plan before the Oklahoma-Nebraska game that will cover all contingencies — if Oklahoma and Nebraska tie or if Nebraska wins and then loses to Colorado," Williams said.

Process of culling NFL's players gets started

By The Associated Press

Bubby Brister, angry about his demotion from second-string to third-string quarterback on the Pittsburgh Steelers, lashed out Tuesday at Coach Chuck Noll, saying he was being punished for refusing to play during the NFL strike.

Pro football

Meanwhile, replacement players continued leaving NFL practice sites in huge numbers, though for a precious few, the hope of playing professional football kept flickering.

After being listed behind starter Mark Malone and replacement quarterback Steve Bone on the Steelers' depth chart, Brister said, "I'm the third-string quarterback and we don't even have a third team in practice."

Brister, questioning whether the Steelers were making an example out of him because he wouldn't cross the picket line with 18 other guys, said, "I always thought the guy with the most talent was supposed to play, but that's not the way it is around here. Maybe they're trying to make an example out of me... I know they're making examples out of guys on a few teams."

"It was quite obvious I beat him (Bone) out in training camp and I'll beat him out again," Brister said. "It wasn't any contest."

At the same time, the St. Louis Cardinals decided to retain nine replacement players, including quarterback Sammy Garza, while dropping 27.

As the replacement players left, following a team photo, St. Louis Coach Gene Stallings said, "I told all of them I appreciated them being here and helping us out. It (the strike) was hard on everyone."

"The players out there weren't completely sure, and the guys holding out weren't completely sure," Stallings said. "It was frustrating for everyone."

The Seattle Seahawks released 43 replacement players, but kept quarterback Bruce Mathison, wide receiver Jimmy Teal and seven-year Seattle veteran Eric Lane.

Lane had been released by the Seahawks in their last cut before the season began.

"I didn't expect to stay," replacement linebacker Julio Cortes said. "Just came to have fun."

Departing tight end Mark Keel said, "They told us thanks. I wish there had been something more long term, but it was fun. When I came in, I thought I might have a chance to stay, but obviously I was wrong."

"At least I got a chance to play in three games for the Seahawks," Keel said.

"We expected it," safety Harvey Allen said as he departed from Seattle. "I've been playing football since the eighth grade, but I think it's pretty much over. At least that's how I feel today."

The Buffalo Bills retained 15 players, including quarterback Brian McClure, who helped beat the Super Bowl champion New York Giants 6-3 in overtime last Sunday. The Miami Dolphins released three replacement players — wide receivers Eddie Chavis and Damon Riley and nose tackle Ike Reddon.

The Kansas City Chiefs kept seven replacement players, including quarterback Doug Hudson and Matt Stevens.

There were no apparent hard feelings between the Chiefs who had remained on the picket line and the one defector, cornerback Kevin Ross, who broke ranks with the union during the fourth week of the strike.

"He's still my friend, still my teammate, still the same Kevin I've known for four years," safety Lloyd Burnes said.

Defensive lineman Stafford Mays, 29, who had been cut by Minnesota during training camp and had played seven seasons with St. Louis, was the only replacement player retained by the Vikings.

When Mays joined the returning regulars on the practice field for the first time Tuesday, he was the victim of some good-natured kidding. "Everyone said hello... 'Hello, Scab,'" said Mays, who had six sacks in the Vikings' last two replacement games.

As Mays headed into the Vikings' interview room, he was followed by defensive lineman Tim Newton, who quipped, "I can see it now — Scab makes the Vikings'."

The Washington Redskins said quarterback Ed Rubbert and running back Lionel Vital would be among 17 replacement players retained by the club. But quarterback Tony Robinson, who replaced Rubbert in the first quarter of Monday night's game and led the Redskins over the Dallas Cowboys, was released.

"I didn't feel like this was a good place for him because of our quarterback situation," Washington Coach Joe Gibbs said of Robinson. "We're pretty solid at quarterback."

Rubbert will be placed on injured reserve with three other players, while Vital, who gained 136 yards against the Cowboys, is the NFC's leading rusher with 346 yards.

The New England Patriots waived 17 replacement players and two players who had been on the club's injured reserve list — fullback Cletis Jones of Florida State and linebacker Phil Muleahy of the University of Rhode Island.

Meanwhile, the Patriots announced that quarterback Steve Grogan, running back Craig James and nose tackle Dino Mangiero will miss Sunday's game against the Indianapolis Colts at Indianapolis due to injuries.

The Detroit Lions waived 30 players and put three on injured reserve, wide receiver Darrell Gnymes, linebacker Steve Bowdway and center Chuck Steele.

Wildcats lead nowhere except where it counts

BOISE (AP) — As a team, Weber State College ranks no better than second in any category of Big Sky Conference football statistics.

But the Wildcats are undefeated against league opponents, are ranked 10th in the latest NCAA Division I-AA poll — better than any other Big Sky team — and have two individuals among the most potent offensive weapons in the nation.

Weber is 5-1 overall and 3-0 in conference play, thanks to a high-scoring offense anchored by running backs Sean Sanders and Fine Unga.

Sanders leads the Big Sky and the nation in scoring, averaging 13.2 points per game on the strength of 11 touchdowns. Unga leads the conference and is second in Division I-AA among all-purpose runners, averaging 188 yards per game rushing and is second nationally in total offense with an average of 317 yards per game.

Friesz also is third in the league in passing efficiency, behind Northern-Arizona's Greg Wyatt and Jim Zaches of Nevada-Reno. Those two are second and third in the Big Sky, and fourth and 10th in I-AA, in total offense.

Friesz also is third in the league in passing efficiency, behind Northern-Arizona's Greg Wyatt and Jim Zaches of Nevada-Reno. Those two are second and third in the Big Sky, and fourth and 10th in I-AA, in total offense.

Nevada-Reno, after being ranked

No. 1 in the nation earlier this season and being a unanimous preseason pick to repeat as Big Sky champion, has dropped completely out of the I-AA poll after its third loss. Last week's defeat, at the hands of Idaho, was the Wolf Pack's second to a league rival.

But UNR continues to lead the conference in rushing offense, rushing defense and punting and is second in total defense and punt returns.

Another team with a 2-2 Big Sky record, 4-2 Northern Arizona, still dominates the league's team statistics. The Lumberjacks are the Big Sky's best in total offense, total defense, scoring offense and punt returns, and trail only one team in rushing defense and passing offense.

out single. Tudor got Greg Gagne on an inning-ending fly ball.

The Twins, who had scored 13 runs in the fourth innings of Games 1 and 2, went down 1-2-3 this time and that brought the loudest cheer from the relieved crowd. Tudor finished the fifth by fanning Straker with a runner on third, again on three pitches.

The Cardinals again came out running against Straker, who has trouble holding runners on base and is prone to jitters. Straker committed the 17th balk in Series history in the second inning when he did not hold his set position, something St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said the Twins' pitchers do not do.

Coleman reached on Gagne's two-out throwing error in the third, stole second and went to third on a grounder before Her grounded out, making him 0-for-10 in the series. Straker worked around McGee's one-out double in the fourth and Her's leadoff single in the sixth, which ended an 0-for-21 slump in the World Series.

Both dugouts had heaters in use as the game started with the temperature at 49 degrees and it dropped to 44 within the first hour.

Herzog got his wish — a little production from the top of his lineup.

Herzog got a combined four hits and three runs batted in from the first three hitters in the batting order — Coleman, Smith and Herr — and the Cardinals got a 3-1 victory over the Twins in Tuesday night's Game 3 of the World Series.

Coleman's two-run double in the seventh inning was the game-winner, and the Cardinals leadoff hitter also stole two bases.

"If we got five or six hits out of our first three hitters, we're OK,"

Herzog said. "If we don't, we're in trouble."

On Tuesday, that trio got the Cardinals out of trouble by pacing a nine-hit attack. In the first two games — losses of 10-1 and 8-4 at Minnesota — Coleman, Smith and Herz were combined 2-for-24.

Coleman said the absence of slugger first baseman Jack Clark, out since Sept. 9 with an ankle injury, has crippled the offense.

"We don't have our shooter-in," he said of Clark, who had 35 home runs and 106 runs batted in.

In Clark's absence, Coleman expects a lot out of himself.

"I feel if I can get on base three or four times, steal three or four bases and score three or four runs, the Cardinals are going to win."

The Game 3 offensive outpour was an encouraging sign for Cardinals relief pitcher Worrell, who pitched the last two innings to get the save for left-hander Tudor.

and moderate owners like Patrick Bowlen of Denver. Art Modell of Cleveland and Wellington Mara of the Giants refrained from speaking out publicly. Not until the strike ended did Bowlen, in a quiet kind of way, question if the owners had to be so tough.

But things are already beginning to change.

Whereas during the strike, the union was anxious to negotiate, giving the appearance of progress to hold out hope that the end was near, now they're in no hurry, hoping that the courts do the work for them.

The owners' first reaction when the players changed their course and filed suit was relief. Following the strike over. Several, including Schman, wondered, in fact, why they hadn't filed suit earlier and avoided the strike.

But management is hoping to resume negotiations sometime soon, reasoning that it's better off determining its own destiny than having the courts tinker with the "system" issues — free agency and the draft.

How likely is that?

Some legal experts think the players have an excellent chance to have the entire reserve system thrown out.

But others suggest that the fact that free agency and the draft are already part of the labor contract would make a judge reluctant to overturn them. The 1975 verdict in the John Mackey case, which granted the players free agency, was modified by an appeals court to make it part of the bargaining process and the present compensation-first refusal system was written into the 1977 contract.

That may not matter. Just the threat of the courts may be enough to force the owners into concessions on the things players want the most — improved severance and pension benefits. "It's the best shot the players ever had," the agent says.

"It would have been a lot better shot if the suit had been filed four weeks earlier.

All waivers and fees must be turned in by the first league game. Practice games will begin in mid-November. All teams will be guaranteed 15 league games and at least 2 tournament games. Anyone interested in playing in the league who can't attend Thursday's meet should phone the Twin Falls Office of Parks and Recreation at 739-2266 or 739-2288.

Juker cracks PRCA Top 20

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Bruce's Bob Juker has cracked the top-20 in the Professional Rodeo Cowboys' Association steer wrestling standings for just the second time this season. Juker is ranked 20th by the PRCA in his specialty this week with earnings of $21,944, some $28,000 behind the event leader, Otis Berry of Gordon, Neb. Neither of the Magic Valley's other two top cowboys, saddle bronc rider Kent Cooper of Albion and bareback rider Mickey Young of Jerome, are ranked by their specialties by the PRCA this week.

Vandal game films tonight

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls chapter of the Vandal Boosters will view game films from last Saturday's University of Idaho football victory over the University of Nevada at Reno. The film, preceded by taped commentary by Idaho football Coach Keith Gilbertson, is scheduled for 8 p.m. in the lounge at Canyon Springs Inn.

Scramble deadline Friday

TWIN FALLS — Deadline for entering the mayor's scramble at Twin Falls Municipal Golf course this weekend will be noon Friday. Host professional Don Hamblin said the event, in which the mixed field will be re-paired for separate competitions each day, will get off shotgun starts at 1:00 p.m. Saturday and 9:30 a.m. Sunday. The event, which features a barbeque after play Saturday, is open to all men and women in Magic Valley.

Gooding eighth-graders win

GOODING — The Gooding eighth-grade football team defeated Wendell 42-0 Tuesday to wrap up the Canyon Conference eighth-grade championship. The team finished 5-0-1, the only undefeated team in the district.

Dobbs wins another tourney

TWIN FALLS — Wiley Dobbs of Twin Falls' CSI Judo Club defeated all nine of his opponents to win the Idaho State Judo Club's Portneuf Challenge judo tournament over the weekend. The Portneuf challenge invites the club champion from the Intermountain Region. This year's challenge attracted 10 competitors from six clubs. All of Dobbs' wins were by a full point. The next competition for the local club will come Dec. 5 in Ogden, Utah.

Dickerson wants a trade

GELES (AP) — Running back Eric Dickerson says he wants to be traded by the Los Angeles Rams, if he doesn't approach the annual pay of pro football's top quarterbacks. He says he'd "play great" if he got a rewritten contract of $1.1 million rising to $1.3 million a year. He says he's currently stuck at about 26th place among pro football salaries — receiving less than $700,000 a year through 1989. "I'm so fed up, my mind just isn't right. I can't play like that. I'll start, but I can't see myself carrying 30-35 times. The way I'm thinking right now I could get hurt. And that would be ridiculous," Dickerson told reporters Monday as Ram players regrouped after the long, costly players' strike. "I'd play for $1.1 million a year for the next three years without an extension (of his current contract). I'd play great for $1.3 million," said Dickerson. He was the NFL rushing leader three times in his four seasons, and set the league single-season record of 2,105 yards in 1984.

USSR leads world gymnastics

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — The Soviet Union took the lead after the compulsory exercises of the men's team competition at the World Gymnastics Championships Tuesday. The Soviet team, led by Dmitri Bilozherchev, was far ahead with 294.05 points. East Germany was second with 289.85, edging China with 289.8. The optional exercises will be completed on Wednesday and Thursday. Bilozherchev took the lead for the individual all-around title. He was the 1983 world champion but is returning after a severe auto accident in 1985 that broke his leg. The powerful Soviet gymnasts took the top four individual places with Bilozherchev in front with 59.0 points out of a possible 60. Teammates Valeri Liukine, the European champion this year, was second with 58.95 points. Yuri Korolev and Vladimir Artemov tied for third with 58.9 points. Korolev is the 1981 and 1985 all-around champion.

Highsmith now free agent

HOUSTON (AP) — Fullback Alonzo Highsmith, the Houston Oilers' unsigned No. 1 draft pick, can become a free agent and sign with any team in the NFL, a court order says. Judge John Gale of the 11th Circuit Court of Dade County in Miami granted a temporary injunction that allows Highsmith to negotiate with other teams and prohibits the NFL from taking any action against a team that signs him. Miami attorney Bruce Greer filed the request for the injunction, which was granted Saturday. Named as co-defendants in the Highsmith suit are the NFL and its 26 member clubs. "It's essentially a case of collusion between Houston and some other teams to depress the market value of Alonzo," Greer said Monday. "He's free for the moment to negotiate with other teams, but we'll just have to see how it plays out from there. There's been no final ruling, which may take a short time or a long time," he said. Highsmith, the third player selected in the draft, has been a holdout since July 28. "I'm sure the Oilers will take me to court, but before the case can be heard, I might already have been with another team for a year," Highsmith said. "I had to do what I thought was in my best interests because I'm a football player and I want to play football," he said. "I thought about my alternatives, and this just seemed like the best thing to get me on the field as soon as possible. I'd like to be in somebody's camp by Wednesday."

Harvest nostalgia

Exotic foods update old-time fall favorites

Five or 10 years ago we might have stumbled over pronouncing the names of exotic foods. Now they are not only in our culinary vocabularies, they are in our kitchens and pantries.

Combining familiar favorites such as chicken, rice and almonds with unfamiliar ethnic items often helps us accept them more quickly. For example: Fill squash halves with a pilaf-like almond-rice mixture and you've Americanized a Middle Eastern favorite. Stuff grape leaves with rice, fennel, chunked chicken, almonds and thyme and you have a new interpretation of classic Greek dolmades.

The new harvest also carries over to the seasonings. Improvements in agriculture and technology have extended varieties and growing seasons — and our choices in the supermarket. Now many of our favorites are in the marketplace almost all year round.

Nevertheless, the nostalgia of the harvest season lingers. When fall rolls around, it's natural to think of the wholesome bounty of the season — chicken, apples, pumpkins, cranberries, almonds and rice.

It's easy to update the traditional harvest fare to appeal to contemporary tastes and current health and fitness recommendations. The bonus is a healthful and delicious balance of protein, complex carbohydrates, vitamins and minerals with less fat, salt and sugar.

HARVEST HOME SALAD

- 1/2 cup sliced almonds
 - 2 tablespoons raspberry vinegar
 - 1/2 teaspoon Dijon-style mustard
 - 1/4 teaspoon fines herbes (a gourmet spice combination available at local supermarkets)
 - 1/4 teaspoon ground white pepper
 - 1/4 cup almond oil
 - 1 small pear, core and diced
 - 1 1/2 cups each cooked white rice and cooked brown rice (both cooked in chicken broth)
 - 1/2 cup chopped cranberries
 - 1/4 cup each diced dried apricots and thinly sliced green onions (including tops)
 - 2 tablespoons snipped fresh parsley
 - 1 tablespoon grated orange peel
 - Radicchio or red cabbage leaves
- Spread almonds in single layer on baking sheet; bake at 350 degrees 5 to 8 minutes, stirring occasionally, until lightly browned. Cool. Combine vinegar, mustard, fines herbes and pepper, whisk in oil. Toss diced pear with dressing. Combine remaining ingredients except radicchio leaves. Stir in almonds, diced pear and dressing; mix well. Serve salad in radicchio leaf cups. Makes 6 servings.

AMARETTO RICE CHEESECAKE

- Crust:
- 1 cup each graham cracker crumbs and finely chopped almonds
 - 2 tablespoons sugar
 - 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
 - 1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted
- Filling:
- 2 cups cooked rice
 - 1 container (15 oz.) ricotta cheese
 - 1 package (8 oz.) cream cheese, softened
 - 1 cup sugar
 - 4 eggs
 - 1/2 cup Amaretto
- Topping:
- 1 cup dairy sour cream
 - 1 tablespoon sugar
 - 1 tablespoon Amaretto
 - Grated milk chocolate for garnish
 - Toasted almond slices for garnish

To prepare crust, combine all crust ingredients in medium mixing bowl. Press into bottom and one inch up sides of ungreased 9-inch springform pan. To prepare filling, combine rice and ricotta cheese in food processor or blender until well blended; set aside. Beat cream cheese and sugar in large mixing bowl until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each. Blend in Amaretto and reserved rice mixture. Pour filling into prepared crust.

Bake at 350 degrees 1 hour and 5 minutes. Meanwhile, blend sour cream, sugar and Amaretto. Spoon over cheesecake; bake an additional 10 minutes. Cool. Refrigerate at least 3 hours or overnight. Garnish with grated chocolate and toasted almond slices. Makes 12 to 18 servings.

APPLE-HONEY CHICKEN

- 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
- 2 cups apple juice
- 1 broiler-fryer chicken, cut in parts
- 1 large red apple, core and cut in eighths
- 3/4 cup vegetable oil, divided
- 1/2 cup flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon paprika
- 2 tablespoons honey
- Mix cinnamon with apple juice in large bowl. Add chicken; cover and marinate in refrigerator 30 minutes. Sauté apple slices in 1/2 cup oil in large skillet, turning about 5 minutes, over medium heat. Remove apples from pan; set aside. Remove chicken from marinade and drain; reserve marinade. Place flour, salt, pepper and paprika in plastic or brown bag; add chicken, a few pieces at a time, and shake to coat well. Add remaining 1/2 cup oil to skillet and cook chicken over medium-high heat, turning about 10 minutes or until brown on all sides. Drain and discard oil; add reserved marinade and honey to skillet. Reduce heat to medium; continue to cook, basting occasionally, about 35 to 40 minutes or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Garnish with apple slices. Makes 4 servings.

ALMOND RICE STUFFING IN ACORN SQUASH

Season chicken with flair

Seasoning chicken with savory, tarragon and winter herbs and spices provides an almost infinite variety of flavors. Experiment with your favorites for exciting new tastes without increasing chicken's naturally low calorie count.

Among the herbs and spices most often used with chicken are: basil, bay leaf, chervil, chile, chives, cloves, curry, dill, garlic, ginger, oregano, paprika, parsley, pepper, rosemary, sage, thyme, tarragon, turmeric, and white wine.

Don't overseason chicken; you can always add more to taste but you can't remove it.

There are many ways to use herbs and spices when seasoning chicken. Rub some on the outside when roasting a whole chicken; put some in the cavity instead of stuffing; or use in stuffing. Insert a seasoning such as tarragon parsley, pepper, rosemary, sage, or the skin of breasts or thighs.

Meat cutting class set at CSI

By JOAN BEAN, Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Cutting up in class will not only be exhilarating. It will be required in the new meat cutting course at the College of Southern Idaho.

On Nov. 2, students will begin 120 hours of instruction over a six-week period. Instructor Jack Aker, will draw upon his 42 years of meat cutting experience, including 34 years as a meat manager for Safeway. During those years, he trained about 40 meat cutters.

John Byrne, an ex-proctor and instructor in the food marketing department, says he feels there is a real need for this class, because of the economy. Stores are having a harder time making a profit. They start cutting meat hours, and there is less time to do the job. The end result is that they have any new meat cutters there, they don't have time to work with them. He says that in the last 10 years, Byrne says, the practice of breaking down carcass beef at the retail level has been all but eliminated. More than 90 percent of the stores use boxed beef.

They do not need all that time to break down the carcass, he says. That takes some very technical training — go in on this rib, and cut at this joint, to take this piece off. It's already done for them; all they need to know is how to cut and merchandise the meat.

Highway and other safety programs of CSI will give students a foundation upon which future employers can build using their own specific and philosophical approach to merchandising.

Although meat cutting has traditionally been a man's job, he says it is also a good skill for a woman. It takes a lot of dexterity in the fingers, good judgment and depth perception, he says.

The word does involve a lot of lifting. There are women meat cutters now, as far as that goes, and I have worked with women that can pick up a quarter of beef as well as any man. But they have to be able to lift, he says.

The class will be held in the food service area of the new Veterinary Extension Building, which will be limited to 10 students. It will cover beef, lamb, poultry and veal, pork, seafood and some deli items, along with merchandising, how to display in the back, and how to talk to people about meat.

Byrne says that the students will have a merchandising class. All of it will be just like a little meat market, he says.

Freeze dough now for holiday festivities

With this unbelievable weather, we'll all have our fall chores done and will be able to start on holiday don'ts right?

I'll bet you're just thrilled to hear that.

But folks, there are ONLY 65 days left in that countdown. The mail-order catalogs are piled neatly exactly 65 inches high at the end of the house. Now, I have a suggestion to help our local stores:

If you find something you want to give as a present in a catalog, take it to your favorite shop first and give them a shot at getting it for you.

It costs a bundle to stock a store these days; but most of the merchants have access to ordering items. But do it now because everything takes more time than you would think.

It's also time to start your holiday cooking. Actually a few rolls of frozen cookie dough, etc., in the freezer are a great investment any time.

And this last year, I've become hung up on muffin making. I think it's because they have a low failure rate. Even the directions work for us, because you're not to overstuff the batter; just mix until everything is moist.

If you decide to invest in a new muffin tin, look for one that has six cups. They make at least double the previous size and these muffins are great for lunch.

This particular recipe is fantastic. It's my ace for getting the family off to a great start in the morning and makes the center of a good lunch without a lot of fuss.

- 2 medium carrots, scrubbed, scraped and shredded
- 2 large apples (tart kind), core and shredded
- 1 cup vegetable oil

FILER — Fella Brackett and her five children have gone north and east for the winter. The one-room schoolhouse 3 1/2 miles from their ranch at Three Creeks, offers classes for kindergarten through eighth grade. But high school must be attended elsewhere.

Elsewhere in the Brackett's case, is Filer, where she and her children have lived during the school year ever since 17-year-old Lori entered high school. Their winter home is on five acres outside the city limits. "We can't put the kids clear in town," she says. "That's too much. They're used to the open spaces."

While Brackett kept the home fires burning in Filer, her husband, Bert, does the same at their home in Three Creeks where he stays to look after the cattle.

Fortunately, the little community on the Idaho-Nevada border has had telephone service since the last seven years. "When problems do come up, and dad's the only one that can answer, I say, 'Well, you know where the phone is. Go call him.' It really has helped," she says.

The route are paved, so it's just a matter of driving 70 miles on a weekend to be with dad whenever. 11-year-old Gus is not involved in a Saturday "T" football game. And when he can, dad makes the trip to visit his family in their Filer home.

Brackett says she does not have to be concerned about Bert's meals while he is "batching."

"He's a good cook. Whenever people go out there, I get these glowing reports... Your husband sure can fix a good pot of beans."

She says his palate is easy to please, because he prefers hamburgers to just about anything else. "I figured out to keep him happy, I could feed him a fried hamburger patty three times a day, 365 days of the year, and he'd be happy. Sometimes we'll have a whole beef pot into hamburger."

Brackett is state secretary for the Cowbelles, and Lori is State Hereford Queen; so both do a lot of traveling. But, because she has taught her children how to cook, they can also fend for themselves in her absence.

In her own childhood, she says she spent a lot

Frozen veggies pack peak of nutrients with convenience

By TONI TIPPON
The Los Angeles Times

Try as we might to stick to a strict regimen of using only the freshest and most wholesome ingredients available, the truth of the matter is, there are times when using fresh produce is downright wasteful if an improper cooking or storage method is employed.

Everyone would tend to agree that fresh fruits and vegetables are a best bet, nutritionally speaking, especially compared to the canned variety because much of the vitamin and mineral content is lost during the canning process.

"Jane Brody's Nutrition Book" (Bantam Books, 1987) states: "Fresh fruits and vegetables are richer sources of vitamins, minerals and trace nutrients than fruits and vegetables that have been canned, since vital nutrients are lost during processing and storage." Many vitamins are soluble in water (all the B vitamins and C) and many are destroyed in canning. As a result, canned foods may retain half or less of the original content of many vitamins; additional vitamins are lost during storage.

"Furthermore, canned vegetables continue to lose vital nutrients after the trip home — especially at temperatures in excess of 65 degrees. The losses of B-6 and pantothenic acid can be as high as 91 percent in canned foods. You can't expect to meet the RDA (Recommended Dietary Allowance) for these vitamins if you subsist on a menu of refined, processed and canned foods."

Frozen vegetables, Brody suggests, are a better alternative than canned. Also, those who cannot shop frequently enough (Brody encourages consumers to use fresh fruits and vegetables within the first couple of days after purchasing) to ensure maximum freshness and vitamin and mineral retention in fresh vegetables "may be better off with foods that are frozen, usually when vitamin content is at its peak, and then rapidly (frozen), whereas days or weeks may elapse before fresh produce reaches your table." Frozen boil-in-the-bag vegetables are preferred by Brody for their vitamin content.

Vegetables of any variety — fresh, frozen or canned — usually lose their nutrients to the cooking water in which they are prepared because the water is most often poured down the drain before serving the vegetable. To avoid this, food technologists suggest cooking vegetables in a minimum amount of water. Steaming or microwaving in small amounts of liquid is ideal. While some scientists prefer steaming to microwaving and vice versa, neither method has been proven superior over the other in laboratory tests, according to "Food Science" by Helen Charley, professor emerita of foods and nutrition, Oregon State University (Macmillan, 1986).

Boiling in the skin is another suggestion but cook only until barely done.

of time in the kitchen with her mom. "That was kind of our time to get together and get to do special things together."

Before Brackett was married, she looked through her mother's recipes, and copied down her favorites. "I used to say, 'Do a blurb-of-this-and-a-pinch-of-that.' I had to make her sit down one time and actually figure out some proportions for me to go by, so I could write it down. But, I've used them enough now, that I do a blurb and a pinch too," she says.

One of these recipes, which she converted from "scops and blubs" to cups and spoonfuls, is her mom's recipe for bread. She makes it in her mixer with dough hooks:

WHITE BREAD

Makes 3-4 loaves
Combine:
2 cups warm water
2 packages, or 2, tablespoons yeast
¼ cup shortening
Start the mixer, and add:
½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon salt
Add:
4 cups white flour (6 cups of flour altogether are used, 1 cup of which is whole wheat)
Mix until well. Then very carefully add the next 2 cups of flour. Spray Pam on bowl and cover dough with damp cloth. Put it in microwave on lowest power for 10 minutes. Then allow the dough to stand another 10 minutes until it has risen.

Or let dough rise without microwaving at all until it is double in bulk.

In this, she greases the pans and her hands with shortening, molds the dough into loaves, and places it in the pans. Cover with a cloth and let rise for about 30 minutes to an hour. This can be done at a warm temperature in the conventional oven. Bake at 350 degrees for about 30 minutes.

She says, "If it happens to be out of whole wheat flour, she uses oatmeal. I try to put something besides the white flour in, and I usually use unbleached instead of regular white flour."

She also makes rolls two or three times a week, saying her family prefers it to the commercial variety. She also makes rolls, using this recipe. "I do that a lot when I'm taking the lunch out to the branding crew in the summer, because they like hot rolls," she says.

The "branding" crew also enjoys her barbecue recipe, which she multiplies four or five times for up to 20 people.

BARBECUED BEEF

4-5 pound chuck roast, with the bone and fat trimmed
3-4 cups water
1 onion, whole, stuck with 2 whole cloves
1 bay leaf
"Boil the above for three hours, or until tender. Remove the meat, and reserve 1½ cups of the broth. Discard onion and bay leaf. Cool and shred meat. Set aside. And then, in the same kettle, cook 2 tablespoons butter and ½ cup finely chopped onion until tender. Stir in 2 tablespoons brown sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 cup ketchup
2 tablespoons vinegar
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1½ cups of broth
Add the shredded beef. Mix gently. Simmer covered for 30 minutes. Serve on a hamburger bun. It freezes well.

Brackett says she prefers to make the barbecue with 2 pounds of ground beef instead of the shredded chuck roast. So, after the roast boils at white, she removes the stock usually a quart or more, and freezes it to use later for barbecue.

She makes a stew with the shredded meat, adding cooked carrots, potatoes, an onion or 2 tablespoons minced onion, a can of undiluted cream of mushroom soup, salt and pepper to taste.

A salad, bread and butter rounds of the above, and with barbecue, she often serves a salad and green beans.

The next recipe, which she found in her Amarna Radarrange Cookbook, suits her busy lifestyle. And, her family likes it. It's called...

ALL AT ONCE SPAGHETTI

Serves 6-8
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 cup chopped onions
1 pound ground beef
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Two 8-ounce cans tomato sauce
1½ cups water
½ teaspoon ground oregano
½ teaspoon basil
¼ cup uncooked spaghetti
Grated Parmesan cheese (she uses cheddar)
Place butter and onion in a 2-quart casserole. Heat in the microwave oven on full power for about 3-4 minutes; or until the onion is tender. Add beef, and cook in the microwave oven on full power 3-4 minutes; or until beef is no longer pink. Stir halfway through cooking time, and drain. Add the salt, pepper, tomato sauce, water, oregano and basil. Cook in microwave, covered (and be sure it's covered) on full power for 4 minutes. Break the spaghetti in half; and stir into the sauce, and cook covered on full power for 18-20 minutes or until spaghetti is tender. Stir twice during cooking time, and sprinkle with parmesan cheese, as desired.

Brackett says she sometimes stretches the recipe a bit. She serves a tossed salad, green beans or peas with it. "Once in a while I splash, and get some French bread, but most of the time, it's just mom's homemade bread."

She has been using her mother's chocolate chip cookie recipe ever since she was married. There were some problems at first, however.

"The first time I made it," she says, "it smelled good, and it tasted good right out of the oven, but after the cookies cooled off, they were like concrete. I made them again and the same thing happened."

So, she wrote to her mother, and asked her to send the recipe again. "I'd left out one cup of butter. It worked well after I'd gotten the right thing down."

For wedding gifts, she often buys a cookie jar, fills it with chocolate chip cookies and puts this recipe on the top...

CHOCOLATE CHIP COOKIES

Pre-heat oven to 375 degrees and sift together:
3 cups flour
1 teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
Cream together:
1 cup butter or margarine (she uses margarine)
1 cup granulated sugar
½ cup brown sugar
2 eggs
2 tablespoons water
1 teaspoon vanilla
Mix all ingredients together, and fold in:
1 cup chocolate chips
Drop by teaspoonfuls onto a greased cookie sheet 2 inches apart, and bake 10-12 minutes.

These main-dish recipes call upon frozen vegetable combinations as well as vegetable frozen with or without sauces. They include low-calorie protein sources like shrimp, eggs and chicken. Serve with tossed green salad, if desired, and whole-grain bread for a nutritionally balanced meal, that is convenient, too.

Baking pans, oven may be causing your cakes to fall during cool down

By JOAN DRAKE
The Los Angeles Times

Q: No matter how closely I follow a cake recipe, I can never get it to stay as high as it is when it comes out of the oven. Sometimes it goes down much more than I know it should. Any suggestions?
A: The problem may not be the recipe, but your baking pans or oven. In "Understanding Food" (John Wiley and Sons, 1969), authors Lendal H. Kotschevar and Margaret McWilliams give this tip: "For easy removal, grease the pan bottom or line them with wax paper. Leave the sides of the pan ungreased so that the cake can cling to the sides and help pull itself up to the maximum volume."

The authors define "shortened" cakes as those made with flour, baking powder, salt, sugar, eggs, liquid, shortening and flavoring. To achieve optimum baking results of these cakes, "Most cake recipes requiring two cups of flour make about a quart of batter. This can be divided to fill two (eight-inch) layer pans just over half full. During baking, the cake will still fill the pan because most cakes do not quite double in volume during baking. Overfilling the pan will give lower volume and may result in the cake running over."

"Shortened cakes should be positioned in the center of an oven preheated to the desired temperature. The usual baking temperature is 350 degrees, but this may vary with the recipe. Place the cake pans at least one inch from the walls and door of the oven to allow good air circulation and even heating during baking. Space should also be left between pans to avoid interrupted air flow.

"If it is necessary to use two oven racks, try to stagger the pans on the two shelves rather than placing one directly above the other. Without a staggered arrangement, the surface of the lower cake will not brown well. It is important to avoid the lowest and the highest rack positions in the oven; the former creates too dark a crust on the bottom of the cake and the latter leaves the upper crust too light."

"All cakes should be baked in baking pans designed for the job. Bright metal pans reflect heat away from the surface and, consequently, the cakes bake less well in these pans than in darker pans, which tend to absorb the heat. Uneven, warped pans give misshapen cakes. "Shortened" cakes are done when a wood pick inserted in the center comes out clean. If some of the cake clings to the pick, the cake needs to be baked longer. A cake is overbaked if it draws away from the sides of the pan.

"When shortened cakes are done, remove them carefully from the oven and gently set them upright on the counter to cool. The structure of these cakes is extremely delicate when they are hot. However, the structure becomes less fragile as the cake cools; it is possible to remove shortened cakes from the pan onto a cooling rack while the cake is still fairly warm but not steaming hot.

"Removal is easy because the fat or the wax paper will not be firm when warm and the cake is readily persuaded to leave the pan. Then it is a simple matter to peel off the wax paper quickly. Allow the cake to finish cooling undisturbed on the rack. The rack permits steam to escape and helps prevent a soggy cake."

Herbs best when fresh

By The Associated Press

Fresh herbs are best when they are just that, fresh. Sure you can dry them, in some cases even chop and freeze them. But the reason you nurtured them so carefully all summer was so you could use them fresh.

If you're like me, you guarded them carefully all season, not wanting to use too much in any one dish. Suddenly it's fall, and you're facing a large bush of thyme and a possible frost.

Be generous: use handfuls of rosemary, cups of tarragon. These recipes have been designed with such extravagance in mind; if you don't have as much of the designated herb, simply use less and compensate by increasing the other seasonings. And if you must, substitute dried herbs on the ratio 3 parts fresh to 1 part dried.

DENVER DINNER OMELET

4 eggs, separated
Dash cayenne pepper
4 tablespoons oil
1 (10-ounce) package frozen cauliflower with cheese-flavored sauce in pouch
1/4 cup finely chopped cooked ham
1 tablespoon finely chopped onion
2 tablespoons finely chopped green pepper

Beat egg whites until stiff peaks form. Beat egg yolks and pepper in separate bowl until thick and lemon colored. Fold into egg whites.

Heat oil in 10-inch oven-proof skillet over medium heat. Tilt pan to coat bottom and sides with oil. Spoon in egg mixture, spreading evenly over bottom of pan. Reduce heat to low and cook, uncovered, until puffy and light brown on bottom, about 5 minutes.

Prepare unopened cauliflower pouch as directed on package. Meanwhile, bake omelet in skillet at 325 degrees 15 to 18 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean.

To remove, tip skillet, loosening omelet with spatula. Slide onto serving plate. Sprinkle ham and onion over top. Spoon hot cauliflower and cheese sauce over ham. Sprinkle with green pepper. Serve immediately. Makes 3 servings.

Apple Institute offers cooking tips

Here are a few cooking tips from the International Apple Institute:

— When using sliced apples in a cold dish, rub all exposed apple flesh with a mixture of equal parts of lemon juice and water so the slices won't turn brown too quickly.

— Don't use water in apple pie recipes for Brown Betty. Apples are naturally high in water content, so they rarely need any extra moisture for any dish. When cooking applesauce, use only enough water to avoid scorching.

— Try steaming vegetables such as carrots or cauliflower with applesauce instead of water. Use applesauce to baste chicken, pork chops or turkey. Or saute fish or scallops in spiced cider.

Need a quick-to-fix meal? Try a warm meatball salad

Your dinner's ready in just 20 minutes

Summer is over and fall has returned. Calendars quickly fill with school activities, meetings, football, soccer and other sports events. Quick-to-fix dinner ideas become essential.

Warm Meatball and Lettuce Salad is a great quick-to-fix main dish salad as it can be prepared in only 20 minutes. The ground beef is shaped into free-form meatballs — a great time-saver. Simply pinch 1-inch pieces of round beef and shape lightly or pack them as they are added to the skillet. Brown the meatballs in a heavy nonstick skillet shaking the pan occasionally to retain the shape of the meat.

After browning and removing the meatballs, heat the red wine vinegar dressing in the skillet. Add the heated dressing and meatballs to combined lettuce, zucchini slices, tomato wedges and red onion slices, tossing to coat evenly. Next, simply sprinkle the salad with croutons and serve immediately with fruit and cranberry. There will be plenty of time for all these fall activities after this quick-to-fix supper.

WARM MEATBALL AND LETTUCE SALAD
Preparation time: 10 minutes
Cooking time: 5 to 10 minutes
1 pound ground beef
½ teaspoon salt

- ¼ cup prepared red wine vinegar dressing
- 4 cups torn green or red leaf lettuce
- 1 medium zucchini, thinly sliced
- 1 medium tomato, cut into eighths
- ½ medium red onion, cut lengthwise and sliced into thin wedges
- ½ cup croutons
- Pinch of 1-inch of ground beef to make approximately 32 free-form meatballs; cook in a heavy nonstick skillet over medium-high heat, shaking pan occasionally to brown about 4 to 5 minutes. Pour off drippings. Remove meatballs with slotted spoon; season with salt. Add dressing to skillet; heat until hot. Meanwhile combine lettuce, zucchini, tomato and red onion in large bowl. Add meatballs and heated dressing; toss lightly to coat evenly. Spoon salad onto large serving platter; sprinkle with croutons. Four servings.

Video generation addicted to popcorn and is demanding high tech poppers

By The Los Angeles Times
Popcorn seems to have been made for the movies. The two are simply inseparable. No other snack has replaced its billing as the American movie-watcher's greatest comfort food. Popcorn addicts call it their fix; for others, popcorn is a security blanket, particularly during intense movie scenes. Could it also be replacing cigarette smoking?
Also to blame for the popularity of this low-calorie, fiber-rich snack is the cooing trend that generates several forms of indoor entertainment. Home video movies top the list, of course. With the market momentum that VCRs have built up in recent years, popcorn consumption is on the rise. Today Americans consume about 14 billion quarts of popped popcorn annually. Would you believe that is about 46 quarts per person each year?
It is no surprise, therefore, that popcorn-making devices keep popping up. Even microwave ovens take a fair share of the load as packaged microwave popcorn now accounts for 44 percent of all unpopped popcorn sold in this country. For Nordic Ware, the strategy is to go back to the old-fashioned goodness of popcorn popped in a stovetop kettle that has a stirring mechanism, eliminating burning and minimizing unpopped kernels. Styled with a contemporary finish, the Popcorn Stovetop Corn Popper ($25) is designed with a black pistol-shaped handle that has a trigger. When squeezed, the trigger activates the stirring mechanism inside the four-quart saucepan.

If you are frequently in a rush, you will like the built-in measuring cup contained in the see-through plastic cover. The cup slides open to release the corn kernels into the popper. Popcorn can be used with or without oil. When oil is used, preheating is not necessary; without oil the kernels must be at room temperature and should be stirred more frequently while popping.
Forthcoming next month is the new Spacemaker Popcorn Center from Black & Decker ($51.98). It will appeal to people who like the fluffiness of hot-air popcorn and to the nutrition-conscious who insist on the low-calorie advantage of an oil-free method (although the unit has a butter-melting option). For others, the big plus is the convenience of under-the-cabinet mounting. The first of its kind, the unit is the latest addition to the Spacemaker line of coordinated under-the-cabinet appliances.

To make popcorn in the Spacemaker popper, simply load a drawer with kernels, and, if melted butter is desired for flavoring, place a few pots of butter into the butter-melting cup. A deep, six-quart bowl should be placed under the output chute to catch the popped corn. Make sure this is ready otherwise you will end up with popcorn flying all over the place.
Turn on the control; a red "wait" light signals preheating. This warming effect is important for this method of popping to produce larger, fluffier popcorn as well as hotter melted butter. When the green "ready" light comes on, the corn kernels should be released; this is done by pushing in the handle of the spring-loaded drawer. After several minutes, out comes the popcorn, and your melted butter is ready to be poured in.
The Spacemaker Popcorn Center is a great gadget if there is room under the cabinet; the only drawback is that the fan tends to be noisy.

For many people, popcorn is not popcorn without the flavorful touch that hot melted butter gives. The new Microwave Hot Topper melter-dispenser from National Presto Industries, Inc. ($29.98) is a handy invention that helps popcorn lovers avoid the problem of pools of butter at the bottom of the popcorn bowl. Hot Topper is a little plastic pitcher that comes with a nozzle and pump button in the lid. Three necessary tips can be attached to the nozzle: a sprayer for fine, even coverage; a streamer for heavier applications (such as pancake syrup toppings); and a brush for coating corn on the cob, filo pastries, etc.
The Microwave Hot Topper will hold up to a quarter-pound stick of butter or margarine.

Kitchen gadgets appeal to a cook's sense of luxury, not necessity

By The Los Angeles Times
Some people call them labor-saving devices. Others bluntly describe them as tools for the lazy cook or human energy savers. A host of these modern motorized gadgets — kitchen toys, I like to name them — include, say, a battery-operated pot scrubber or a cordless potato peeler. Now there is even a rechargeable corkcorkscrew, so what's next?
Manufacturers like to call them time-saving conveniences. What is happening is, for many housewives, producers of luxury, rather than necessity, has become the mother of invention. The consumer target being the double-income affluents, or the dinks (double income, no kids).
Could this be what Spice Express is all about? Frank Ferreri, president of Kitchentics, the company that recently introduced this motorized spice rack, explains: "The product is innovative, not just a toy or gimmick. Nowadays there is a lot of discretionary income, with both parties working. Our attitude is to get things they want."
The Spice Express #350 is designed to reduce clutter on a cabinet shelf. Ferreri put all herbs and spices in one. With the touch of a finger, the Spice Express rotates 22 spice bottles in left or right, exposing up front whatever spice is wanted. Complete rotation of the bottles occurs in about 13 seconds. "Judging from the positive feedback we get from the warranty cards that come back to us from owners, the product is for serious cooks... It surprised us that many of them have 30, 40, 50 spices in their shelves," Ferreri said.
Finished in soft, neutral ivory, the carrier base holds the bottles by the lids. The rack can be easily mounted with four screws inside the cabinet under a shelf or outside, and operates on four D-cell batteries. Nicely packaged, the unit comes with 22 clear plastic bottles and 50 labels (no spices, of course).

It is also made to accommodate most standard-size store-bought bottles of herbs and spices. Ferreri recommends replacing the caps of some bottles like Spice Islands with the provided caps for better grasp.
Perhaps one appliance that best fits the category of time- and labor-saving devices is the chopper-grinder. Several years ago, the tiny SEB chopper gained favor for its efficiency in mincing foods like parsley and garlic, which somehow would get lost in the larger bowl of food processors. Cuisinart's MiniMatic also took advantage of this consumer preference but managed to make the category even more prevalent.
Also, two years ago, the Sunbeam Oskar food processor set a revolutionary pace in the compact processor category. Next came Big Oskar with a slightly larger capacity. Lo and behold, Baby Bear, arriver in the form of Oskar Jr., chopper-grinder ($35.95), retaining the image of its predecessors but on a much smaller scale. Standing only 9½ inches tall, the 200-watt white unit chops without mashing onions, and does a good job with nuts, beef and Parmesan cheese. And like the Oskar, all it takes is a simple twisting of the cover for turning on and off. A little hole in the cover allows liquid to be added while chopping or grinding.
Another small but powerful chopper-grinder, comes from Black & Decker as part of its HandySeries line of time-saving food preparation appliances. Called the HandyChopper mincer-chopper ($29.98), the low-profiled unit differs from other units by way of its big red pulse button. Another new feature is its telephone-type curly cord that prevents cord clutter, yet stretches to 3½ feet. An optional wall-mount bracket is available for purchase by mail.

I never thought a concept like this would materialize, but here it is: the Black & Decker HandyKnife cordless slicer-peeler ($42.98). The unit has a rechargeable power handle with three attachments that store in a compact recharging base that can be wall-mounted or left on the countertop. The attachments are one stain-resistant peeler and two stainless-steel paring knives for slicing fruits and vegetables, which include a fine-serrated-edge and a scalloped-edge blade. The handle is water-resistant so peeling can be done under a running faucet.
A third addition to the HandySeries line is the HandyBlender cordless blender ($51.98). Now you can make a slushy drink, cocktail or milkshake right on the bench or beat. Rechargeable in 24 hours, the push-button blender will chop, blend, mix, grate, puree and liquefy. Its compact lightweight design makes toting as well as storing easy. The 32-ounce Lexan plastic jar has a handle and no-drip pour spout. A lock-and-charge feature locks the jar into the base, and the charge adapter is detachable.

Science produces tastier sweet corn

Five new varieties have set a new standard for sweetness in early sweet corn. For the first time in several years, I have found some new early varieties which have incorporated the new sugary extender characteristic.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain
gardening

Each year we grow many new sweet corn varieties in the Ricks College Research and Demonstration Garden. For several years, new varieties have been available which have incorporated a new hereditary characteristic or "gene" known as sugary extender. In catalogs and seed packets it is often called SE for short. This gene makes the corn sweeter at the time it is picked. It also extends the length of time the corn will remain sweet after harvest. Ordinary sweet corn loses its sweetness in less than 24 hours. The SE gene can extend that period to 3 or 4 days under refrigeration. Another advantage of the SE gene is greater tenderness.

Another extra sweet gene, known as "sh2", has been around for about 15 years. However the sh2 makes the kernels tougher, rather than more tender. Sh2 sweet corns must also be isolated from ordinary types or the sweetness is lost. This is somewhat difficult for home gardeners with a small yard. The SE corns do not lose their advantage if pollinated by ordinary types.

Until the last year or two, the SE gene has only been available in later maturing varieties. I grew four new early SE sweet corn varieties which have other characteristics comparable to the best early varieties. These four new varieties are Sugar Buns, Maple Sweet, Summer Flavor 65Y and Tri-sweet. A fifth variety, Classic Touch, is also sweeter, although it apparently does not have the SE gene.

These five varieties are comparable in earliness to Early Sunglow, which is one of the most popular early varieties in the Intermountain area. They are a few days later than Spartan and Earlivee, the two most popular extra early varieties.

Sugar Buns, Maple Sweet and Summer Flavor 65Y are all yellow varieties. Sugar Buns is the earliest of the three, but Maple Sweet and Summer Flavor 65Y have a little larger ears. They are all extra sweet, tender and have very good flavor.

Tri-sweet and Classic Touch are both bicolors. This means that they have a mixture of yellow and white kernels on each ear. This characteristic is becoming very popular. Classic Touch is a few days earlier than Tri-sweet, but is not quite as sweet.

I would recommend all 5 varieties as excellent for growing in the Intermountain area. You will probably find seed available only in mail order catalogs or in progressive nurseries.

Canadian furniture passes for European

By The Associated Press

The next time you see a European-looking piece of furniture that's modern, sleek and chic, examine it closely. It just may be stamped: Made in Canada.

A host of Canadian manufacturers are exporting high-style, well-designed sofas, chairs, bedroom sets and dining ensembles to the United States and making inroads into the largely traditional American market. And the furniture — from spidery bent-steele chairs to jugged, asymmetrical tables — has a distinctly European flair.

Many companies offer "knock-down" furniture (you assemble it yourself) that is geared toward casual lifestyles. Others feature upscale, glossy laminated goods and upholstered leather pieces that are sold mainly through interior designers and architects.

The main reason American retailers are turning to their northern neighbors is the weakness of the dollar in Europe, compared to its position in Canada.

"We're getting killed against the Italian lire and the German mark," said Stanley Caplan, president of a Pennsylvania-based company that distributes foldaway beds, wall units and tables made in Ontario. "But in Canada, the dollar is still strong."

The U.S. dollar is worth $1.31 in Canadian currency.

In 1986, Canada exported $220 million worth of furniture to the United States, up 12 percent from 1985, according to the Canadian Consulate. While this is only a fraction of the $1.2 billion worth of furniture manufactured and sold in Canada, it is a boon for many American retailers.

Aside from the pricing advantage, Canadian furniture offers a practical bonus. When ordering from the provinces, stores can purchase goods by the unit, not the container.

"When you buy overseas, you have to order multiples," said Joanne Pedell, president of Brazil Contempo, a leather-furniture company. "But in Canada you can buy three or four sofas, instead of 30."

Still another benefit is the lowered freight costs.

"It makes no economic sense to ship moderately priced upholstered goods from Europe," said Bernice Wollman, vice president of Workbench, which numbers Bauhaus furniture, made in Toronto, among its resources. "Besides, Canada is closer to us than the southeastern part of the U.S."

The furniture is largely European in style, combining clean, spare lines and simple, textured surfaces. Most pieces are handsome, but not stodgy; high-spirited, but not eccentric.

"Canadian companies are in the vanguard of contemporary furniture," said Joann Spelman, publisher of a furniture-industry newsletter in Washington, D.C. "They're bringing fresh ideas to the market. In the Montreal area, in particular, you find a European attitude toward design that's influenced by the French and the Italians."

"We are very close to the European mentality. Our roots are over there," said Claude Labreque, the U.S. sales and design director for Amisco, a company based in L'Islet, Quebec.

Amisco makes tubular steel furniture, covered with a solid-colored epoxy coating. The company uses words like "lifestyle" and "upbeat" to describe the product line, though a better term might be "retreat smart." Bunk beds, stools and tables are streamlined and kicky, with thin steel frames that form strong silhouettes. The firm's new Bicycle Chair is a cross between designer handlebars and a playful-looking spicer.

All of the furniture is knock-down. Because freight and warehouse charges are less costly for this type of furniture — Labreque said the customer saves between 10 and 15 percent on "certain key items." (Prices range from $39 for a stool to $425 for bunk beds.)

"It's worth it for people to take a few hours on a Sunday and put the pieces together," he said.

The 30-year-old company entered the U.S. market in 1976, when its institutional product line (geared toward schools and hospitals) was expanded to include residential furniture. Retail sales in America have soared to $10 million — one-half of the company's annual volume.

The firm has opened showrooms in San Francisco and Dallas and sells to 600 retail accounts, including Conran's and Sears. At the Southern Furniture Market, in High Point, N.C., Amisco is showcased on the 11th floor of the main building, along with a sizable cluster of other Canadian companies.

Right now, they're scratching the surface," said Labreque. "There are more people living in California than in all of Canada."

Still, most furniture made north of the border appeals to an urban consumer with contemporary tastes. Ninety-five percent of the furniture exported to the United States by Rougier, for instance, is sold in cities such as New York, Miami and Chicago.

"It's a very sophisticated look," said Roger Rougier, the president of the Montreal-based company. "We don't consider ourselves a Canadian firm. We consider ourselves a North American firm."

The Rougier line encompasses elements that are both sensuous and spicy. A chair is upholstered in buttery leather, with delicate V-shaped tailoring stitched on. A chair, with a back and arms of different lengths, looks like a sinuous cactus sprouting from the floor.

Video players are becoming common household items

By The Associated Press

There is an old saying that one picture is worth a thousand words. Perhaps that's why it is projected that 70 percent of American households will be equipped with videotape players by 1990. An estimated 40 percent of American homes are equipped with video players now.

"Beyond the building how-tos which have been around for some time, we have been seeing more videos that have to do with decorating and remodeling recently," says Ellen Frankel, editor of 1001 Home Ideas. (In November, the magazine will inaugurate a column to review these videos.)

"I see this as a trend partly because people are looking to television for all their information," the editor says.

Linguini to macaroni — Americans eat a lotta pasta

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — October is "National Pastahh Month." And with good reason. Joe Lichtenberg, president of the National Pasta Association in Washington, D.C., says Americans have doubled their consumption of pasta in the last 15 years.

The National Pasta Association is comprised of American pasta manufacturers who work together to provide consumers, food editors and industry members with up-to-date information on pasta news, trends, nutritional information, recipes and ideas. Pasta can be baked, boiled, steamed, stuffed, smothered with sauce, fried and spiced — and, some say, even dipped in chocolate.

And, according to the National Pasta Association, pasta has only 210 calories per 5-ounce serving (no fattening oils or sauces, please).

Here are a few tips from the National Pasta Association to make sure that pasta is perfect:

- Always cook pasta uncovered at a fast boil, using plenty of water. Use at least one quart of water for every four ounces of dry pasta. A rapid boil helps circulate the pasta for uniform results.
- Stir frequently. Use a wooden fork or similar instrument to prevent sticking.

- Undercook slightly if pasta is to be used as part of a dish requiring further cooking.
- Drain pasta to stop cooking action. Do not rinse unless the recipe specifically says to do so.

Since October is also National Seafood Month, you might want to try these timely recipes provided by the National Pasta Association:

SHRIMP AND SEASHELL PASTA

8 ounces uncooked seashell pasta
1 pound shrimp, peeled, cooked and halved lengthwiso

8 ounces snow peas, blanched
Pesto Sauce:
¼ cup olive oil
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup fresh basil or 1 tablespoon dried basil
2 cloves garlic, minced
¾ tablespoon grated Parmesan cheese
Cook pasta according to package directions. Rinse with cool water and drain. Add shrimp and snow peas. Place pesto sauce ingredients in blender. Puree 15 seconds at medium speed. Add to pasta and toss gently. Serve hot or cold. Makes 4 servings.

SCALLOPS AND FETTUCCHINE

12 ounces uncooked fettuccine
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 tablespoons butter
2 stalks celery, julienned

½ red bell pepper, julienned
2 carrots, julienned
3 green onions, julienned
1 pound raw ocean scallops
2 teaspoons sugar
½ cup dry white wine
Pinch of red pepper flakes
1 teaspoon grated orange zest
¾ cup grated Romano cheese
Cook pasta according to package directions; drain. Heat oil and butter; add julienne-cut celery, bell pepper, carrots, green onions and cook, tossing until crisp but tender.

Slice scallops in thirds (bay scallops can be used whole). Add to vegetables and toss until opaque, about 1-2 minutes. Add sugar, wine, pepper flakes and orange zest. Cook quickly; pour over cooked pasta. Toss with cheese. Garnish with minced parsley. Makes four servings.

Pumpkins are not just for decorating

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens

Since my son was a preschooler, he's picked out two pumpkins each fall, one to carve and one to cook. After some experimenting, Jason and I have settled on this cooking method:

Buy a small to medium pumpkin that feels heavy; it will have less waste and more tender pulp than a large one. Look for one with vivid color, very firm skin and few blemishes.

Wash the pumpkin and cut off the top, scooping out and saving the seeds. Replace the top and place the pumpkin on a baking sheet. Bake in a 300-degree oven until tender (that's about 3 hours for an 8-pound pumpkin).

While it's still warm, scoop the pulp from the rind. Discard the rind. In a blender container or food processor bowl puree the pulp until smooth. Transfer the pulp to a large saucepan and cook over medium heat for 40 to 60 minutes or until reduced by half, stirring frequently.

Serve the pumpkin topped with a pat of butter as a side dish or use it in recipes for pie, muffins or cookies.

We always roast the seeds, too. Wash the pumpkin seeds, removing all the fibrous material. Soak the seeds in salted water (1½ teaspoons salt to 1 cup water) overnight.

The next day, drain the seeds and pat them dry with paper towels. Place the seeds in a shallow baking pan and roast in a 300-degree oven for 20 minutes or until golden.

Crack the shells by hand and remove the nutlike portion inside. The roasted seeds make a great snack and are good sprinkled over a salad, cooked vegetable or soup.

Bread dough yields great main meal

By Better Homes and Gardens

Forget to thaw the bread dough in the refrigerator? Do it quickly in your microwave oven. Place the frozen loaf in a lightly greased, microwave-safe 8x4x2-inch loaf dish. Cover with waxed paper. Microcook on 30 percent power (medium-low) 4 minutes or until just slightly icy, turning the loaf once. Let stand 10 to 15 minutes.

For a good recipe to use with your bread dough try:

SAUSAGE-SPINACH LOAF

¾ pound bulk pork sausage
One 16-ounce loaf frozen bread dough, thawed
One 8-ounce package shredded mozzarella cheese (2 cups)
On 10-ounce package frozen chopped spinach, thawed and well drained.

In a medium skillet cook sausage until no pink remains; drain. On a lightly floured surface roll dough to a 15x8-inch rectangle. Sprinkle cheese over dough, leaving a 1-inch border around all edges.

Top with sausage and spinach. Bring long sides of dough together; pinch to seal edges and ends. Place loaf, seam side down, on a greased baking sheet. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 30 to 35 minutes or until golden brown. Let stand 8 to 10 minutes; cut into slices to serve. Makes 6 servings.

plender. Grease the muffin cups or use the paper liners. Personally I like the liners, because the next batch can go into the oven a lot faster and I think they are easier to save that way.

Preheat your oven to 375 degrees.

In a large bowl beat together the oil, sugar, eggs and vanilla until well blended. Now add the shredded carrots and apples, the raisins, coconut and nuts. Mix well.

In a separate bowl, combine the bran, flour, oats, wheat germ, soda, baking powder and spices. Mix these well.

Now pour the dry ingredients into the wet and stir just until moistened. Remember: too much stirring makes tough muffins.

Fill each muffin tin about 3/4 full. Bake for 15 to 20 minutes. Use a toothpick to test for doneness.

This recipe makes about 24 regular-sized muffins.

I've been wrapping enough for a breakfast in a plastic sandwich bag, then putting several of these in a large bag with a zipper lock. They seem to stay fresher with the double wrap. And you can use the same wrap a couple of times.

If you make a pot of soup or chili, you might try these next muffins instead of the usual bread.

CHEDDAR CORNMEAL MUFFINS

1 cup all purpose flour
1/2 cup corn meal
1 1/4 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
pinch of cayenne pepper
1 cup milk
1 egg
1/4 cup melted butter or margarine
1 1/2 cup grated sharp cheddar cheese
Mix together the dry ingredients and set aside. In another bowl beat the egg and add the milk and butter. Add to the dry ingredients, stirring just to moisten, then stir in 1 cup of the cheese. Spoon into prepared muffin cups and sprinkle with remaining cheese.

Bake at 375 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes. Use toothpick to check for doneness.

Enjoy!

Man's abuse weighs heavily on wife

DEAR ABBY: I need someone to talk to. I love my husband, but he makes me feel awfully sad. I'm fat (185 pounds, 5 feet 6 inches). He is mean to me and calls me names for being fat. I've gone to weight-loss clinics and groups, and when I start to lose weight, he gets meaner.

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

He accuses me of flirting and cheating behind his back. I would never think of doing anything like that. He never takes me out. He says he's ashamed to be seen with me. When I look bad, he's mean, but if I look good, he's meaner. I'll put on some decent clothes, he says, "Who are you getting dressed up for?"

I am going to file for divorce. I love him, but I'll get over it. Many years ago I loved a man who dumped me and left me brokenhearted. It was the pits, but I got over it, and I can get over this, too.

Wish me luck, Abby. FRANNIE IN SEATTLE DEAR FRANNIE: I would discourage a woman from filing for divorce while she still "loves" her husband, regardless of whether he deserves her love. (From what you say, yours does not.)

Offer him the chance to get into family counseling. If he refuses, go alone. And when you are able to put your emotions aside and make a rational decision, if you think you and your child would be better off without him, file for divorce.

DEAR ABBY: I, too, wish there had been a booklet like "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know" when my children were growing up. My daughter married (for the first time) at 16.

It was a bad mistake. My son got his girlfriend pregnant, and faced up to his responsibility and married her. They were both barely 17 at the time.

By the way, I also want to thank you for your answer to that reader who asked if it was too late to fulfill his lifelong dream to become a lawyer at 70. You said, "It's too late to fulfill your dream only if you think it is." I am a widow, age 73, and have a burning desire to become a poet. I write many poems but have never had enough courage to send any of them to a publisher. Now, I think I will, thanks to you.

GREAT-GRANDMOTHER IN MILWAUKEE DEAR GREAT-GRAND-

MOTHER: You already are a poet, but as yet, an unpublished one. Continue to write, and send your poetry to the editors of the publications that contain your kind of poetry. And don't be discouraged by rejection. If you knock on enough doors, one is bound to open eventually. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for warning readers about how dangerous power lawn mowers can be. I know. A power lawn mower struck a pop bottle, and a piece of glass pierced the heart and lung of our 8-year-old son. He was pronounced dead on arrival at the hospital.

STILL GRIEVING IN TENNESSEE (To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Make a list of the items you need or want, including: besides the toothbrush, a hairbrush and comb, pajamas and slippers, a change of clothes for the next day and a list of important numbers, such as where to reach your parents and whom to call in an emergency.

in Magic Valley should be proud to have an editor with the intelligence and imagination of Steve Horgen.

He is, in my judgment, far superior to many editors of much larger papers. I recently asked him to publish one of my on "How to cut the federal deficit." He said it was too long and the print much too small. I did not want to change a word. I was surprised when it came, and complete in larger print and a wider column.

Thanks Steve, you are the greatest.

Pancake breakfast brings seniors together

We would like to acknowledge and publicly express our sincere gratitude to the Lioness Club for sponsoring our Pancake Breakfast on Oct. 3. They provided volunteers to prepare and serve the breakfast to over 200, donating all proceeds to us.

It is difficult to realize how much our society of free enterprise under capitalism in the United States depends on the generosity and dedication of volunteerism. When an organization such as the Lioness Club undertakes a project like the Pancake Happening, it means a brief respite to the many individuals normally involved in the responsibility of serving meals at the Senior Citizens' Center on a daily basis. The seniors who benefit from the existence of the center also contribute an unbelievable amount of hours (29,730 hours in 1986), to make the Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center "the place to go" to enjoy activities planned just for them.

We are always pleased when the community recognizes the needs and value of our center which is providing meals and special services to hundreds of senior citizens on a daily basis.

Market hit with confusion

The Associated Press NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones industrial average... NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones industrial average... NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones industrial average...

"If people renege on it, it would mean we'd have a disastrous Christmas season and we'd have a recession," said David Levy... "I think everyone has been caught by surprise in this," President Reagan said Tuesday in Washington.

leaders around the country. After conferring by telephone Monday with White House chief of staff Howard Baker... The Federal Reserve helped buoy the hard-hit financial markets by saying it stood ready to support them with injections of reserves.

would hurt the United States by pushing down the dollar, thus triggering inflation, or pushing up U.S. interest rates, possibly causing a recession. Two American banks that had raised their prime rates last week, Chemical Bank and Marine Midland, rolled back their increases to the general level of 9.25 percent.

The volume of trading — a good measure of the market's confusion — soared to 608.12 million shares, eclipsing Monday's record-shattering 604.33 million-share day. "There is still a certain amount of sensitivity and nervousness in the market," Johnathan Phelan, first chairman of the New York Stock Exchange, said at a news conference.

The dollar strengthened against foreign currencies, seemingly helped by investor confidence that U.S. authorities would not allow the dollar to decline as a weapon in its interest-rate dispute with the West Germans. The dollar rose to 144.30 Japanese yen from 141.47 late Monday and to 1.8125 West German marks from 1.7721 late Monday.

U.S. gains spur foreign stocks

Los Angeles Times LONDON — Early gains on Wall Street Tuesday were followed by a rally on the London stock exchange... The London markets appeared headed for another slaughter, with the Financial Times index of 100 shares plummeting by 304 points after a 249.8-point, 10.64 percent drop on Monday. But after early Wall Street quotations showing a substantial recovery, London began to rally. By late afternoon the Financial Times index was being quoted at just 67.4 points below Monday's close of 2,052.30. Elsewhere in Europe, losses continued but they were not of the same magnitude as Monday's.

Dollar rises, gold eases

The Associated Press LONDON — The dollar rebounded in Europe early today and gold bullion fell back from a five-year high amid worries over sharp declines on the world's stock markets. Trading was described as nervous on both the currency and bullion markets, as Tokyo and London stocks tumbled for a second day, in line with Wall Street's steep fall on Monday.

Two major New York banks lowered their prime interest rate by one-half percent, while in Frankfurt, the West German central bank offered new money to the market at 3.8 percent, down from its previous rate of 3.85 percent. The Tokyo stock exchange, which closed below U.S. markets opened, experienced the worst plunge in share prices in its history when the Nikkei index of 225 leading shares collapsed Tuesday by 3,836.48 points to 21,910.08 points. In West Germany, Bundesbank President Karl Otto Poehl described the "wave of pessimism" on world stock markets as "incomprehensible," calling a conference in Frankfurt on capital markets that it was astonishing that investors had taken no notice of the "spectacular" improvement in the U.S. budget and the "positive" developments in the U.S. trade balance.

Panic of '87: Relax and ride this one out

Some are saying the stock market looks like "another 1929" or feels like another 1929. Let me assure you it is NOT another 1929. The U.S. now has knowledgeable officials in key positions who can pursue policies to prevent any "crash" of dangerous proportions. Headlines and news stories are loaded with details that trace this stunning fall in stock prices. But here are some fundamentals that demand attention. Safety nets exist on all sides to "catch" stock prices if the crumble becomes more menacing. Margin calls have been kept under control for years. A borrower must put up 50 percent in cash to borrow to buy stocks. In 1929, 40 percent of all those in the stock market were borrowing as much as 80 cents of every dollar to buy stocks. The banking system is protected by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, which insures deposits up to $100,000. The Social Security system is protected so well that we take Social Security for granted. The same goes for unemployment insurance. None of these safeguards was in the picture 60 years ago. It was never a question of whether the bull market would end. The question was only when.

Sylvia Porter pattern: If you didn't unload long ago, ride it out. Better to hold on and hope to recover in the months ahead. Before 9 o'clock, the head of one of the major investment management firms was at his desk. He would talk only briefly because he was waiting to begin buying when the market opened. The financial wizard at a prominent insurance company told me that his firm had been selling stocks for weeks, but would stop selling now rather than unload stocks at depressed prices. Despite the apprehension about an extended bear market, none of them sees this leading to a major economic downturn. There still are many strengths in our economy. Interest rates have been rising. But Alan Greenspan, although new to the chairmanship of the Federal Reserve, is as well-informed as Paul Volcker before him. It is inconceivable that he will not use all the power he has to staunch any bleeding. He's as shrewd in his way as Volcker was. The Federal Reserve can cap the rise in interest rates if it so desires. I ask myself: Why did it happen? No one had an answer. I must conclude that the name of this phenomenon will be "Panic of '87." It is a panic, it is a panic by institutional investors who have dominated the market for so many years: Why did institutional investors panic? For the same reason you panic: Fear of the unknown. We've watched a multiplicity of destabilizing situations develop: The weakness of the U.S. dollar, America's trade deficits, the threat of war, the fear of rising interest rates will be "Panic of '87." None of these by itself might have changed professional investor psychology. But it's likely all of them have made their impression. It's also likely that the increasing threat to oil supplies coming from the Iranian Gulf focused the real and floating anxieties of these all-too-human traders. Fear of a recession is sure to broaden. This week's events will be felt by families and spenders the nation over. It is too soon to measure the impact, but occurring in the pre-Christmas shopping period, it is almost certain to dampen on holiday spirits.

Mutual funds, the haven of the cautious investor, are both a cause of the difficulties and a target. When shareholders ask for cash, the managers must sell out of their portfolios to get that cash. That feeds a spiral, over-growing up or down. If you are a small investor, you probably shouldn't have been gambling in stocks at all. And if you really were gambling, you probably deserve a gambler's fate. Again, if you were in the market, you should only have invested what you could afford to lose. And finally, you should have had a percentage of funds in safe investments as a nest-egg to protect yourself. I once asked the operator of a phony oil-drilling investment plant, who since has spent some time in jail, "To what do you attribute your success?" He replied, "Human greed." His press agent quickly interceded, "What he means is natural human acquisitiveness." Mr. Big told me, "I mean human greed." Be firm in all your investments that you are motivated by a sound philosophy and not by human greed. Sylvia Porter writes on matters of interest to consumers.

Federal reserve pledges to protect U.S. financial system

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve, seeking to prevent Monday's stock market crash from causing a wave of bank failures similar to that which followed the 1929 collapse, pledged Tuesday to take whatever steps were needed to protect the nation's financial system. Underlining its determination, the Fed injected funds into the banking system before noon in a move that traders said helped encourage a decline in interest rates and helped assure financial institutions that they would have the means to meet their obligations.

"The Federal Reserve, consistent with its responsibilities as the nation's central bank, affirmed today its readiness to assure a source of liquidity to support the economic and financial system," Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan said in a one-sentence statement issued shortly before the stock market opened.

But Greenspan canceled a long-scheduled speech in Dallas to the American Bankers Association convention, returning to Washington to monitor developments in the financial markets. And Secretary of Treasury James A. Baker III cut short a trip to Europe and met with Greenspan and President Reagan at the White House.

Reagan, bowing to pleas from lawmakers, announced that the administration would accept a "budget summit" with congressional leaders from both parties to discuss a deficit-reduction package aimed at avoiding $23 billion in automatic spending cuts next month. Speaking to reporters outside the White House after meeting with the government's top two economic officials, Reagan also said that he was "pleased that the steps taken by the Federal Reserve have had a salutary effect on the markets."

Interest rate drop stuns economists

Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — Short-term interest rates fell sharply Tuesday in an astonishing reversal that stunned economists and touched off predictions that mortgage and consumer loan rates may fall precipitously.

"Two banks that raised their prime lending rate by a half-point only last week, Citibank and Marine Midland, took the unusual step of pulling back amid criticism over their move. The bond market rallied. And yields on short-term Treasury bills tumbled almost one full percentage point, a remarkable decline for a single day."

"All manner of interest rates are down and everything that bothered the stock market reversed itself in a single day," observed Irwin L. Kellner, chief economist for Manufacturers Hanover Bank. "That is quite a record."

Although predictions are virtually impossible in an environment that allows stock prices to fall 508 points one day and rise 102 the next, economists now say that they expect rates to fall still further, for at least several weeks.

"The interest rate outlook is very important to market psychology," said University of California, Los Angeles economist Larry Kimball. "With this reversal, I would say we've just seen the beginning. Interest rates are going much lower."

Kimball's predictions: 9 percent fixed mortgage rates, 3 percent short-term Treasury bills and 7 percent long-term government bonds within the next few months. Fixed mortgage rates are now running 12 percent in some instances. Treasury-bill rates are 5.8 percent and 30-year U.S. government bonds are 9.5 percent.

"I called my mother early this morning and told her to take her money out of CDs (bank certificates of deposit) and get long bonds," Kimball said. "I'm betting that the (Federal Reserve) Board is going to actively give us lower rates."

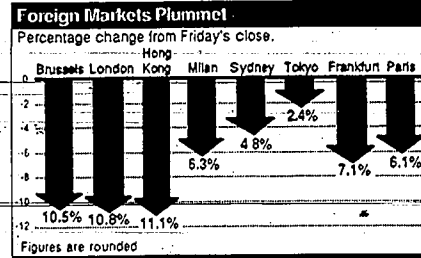

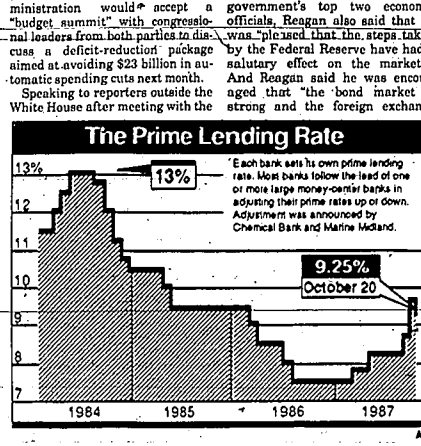

At the heart of the interest rate free fall was Monday's stock market crash.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE - BOBBY WOLFF

"Failure makes people bitter and cruel. Success improves the character of the man." - W. Somerset Maugham.

It's one thing to choose a plan of play that has a chance to win; it's quite another to give oneself no chance. The latter failures are the ones that cause much bitterness.

South won the trump lead, cashed the club ace and ruffed a club. He ruffed a low spade and ruffed another club with dummy's last trump.

When South led a heart toward dummy, he went up with the queen and the game was lost. East ducked cleverly and South was stuck.

Where did South go wrong? Instead of leading a heart to dummy's queen at trick nine, a play that would lose regardless of the outcome might be.

ANSWER: Four hearts. It's more flexible and better to play in the 4-4 eight-card fit than in what is most likely a 5-3 eight-card fit.

Send bridge questions to The Aces, P.O. Box 1228-Dallas, Texas 75222; with self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.
