Iranian trade banned in symbolic gesture

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, citing Iran's "continued and increasingly belligerent behavior," Monday banned all imports from the nation, including oil, and cut off virtually all U.S. exports to Iran. The action was intended primarily as a symbolic gesture, since U.S. and Iranian trade already is minimal. In August, Iranian oil accounted for only 1 percent of U.S. crude oil imports. But the White House said that it wanted to ensure that profits from U.S. trade could not help Iran subsidize its war against Iraq or its attacks on Persian Gulf shipping. "Let me emphasize that we are taking these economics measures only after repeated but unsuccessful attempts to reduce tensions with Iran and in response to the continued and increasingly belligerent behavior of the Iranian government," Reagan said in a statement. Between January through July, Iran's oil earnings from sales to the United States were estimated to be $900 million, up from $500 million throughout 1986. Reagan's announcement came after recent missile attacks by Iran that have damaged a U.S.-flagged oil tanker, other ships, and Kuwaiti facilities at the northern end of the gulf. Moreover, the sanctions were imposed under pressure from the House and Senate, which recently passed similar legislation. Reagan said that the restrictions would remain in effect until Iran retreated from what he called "its aggressive disregard for the most fundamental norms of international conduct." "Some in the administration have expressed reservations about taking such action, warning that it might compromise the U.S.'s declared neutrality in the gulf war. Paul Freedenberg, acting Commerce Department undersecretary for export administration, also told the House Foreign Affairs Committee recently that a similar ban imposed against Libya had little economic impact on that nation. However, a U.S. official said the White House decided the sanctions were justified and that the president, rather than Congress, should impose them because they represented a foreign policy action.

In addition to oil, the United States imports rugs, pistachio nuts and a few other goods from Iran. Sales to the United States represent a very small fraction of Iran's exports. U.S. sales to Iran are made up primarily of low-technology manufactured goods, and totaled about $32 million in 1986. The new ban cites 14 categories of U.S. products "with potential military application." Among the few exports exempted from Monday's ban were food and medical supplies. In broadening the restrictions, Reagan acted under the International Security and Cooperation Development Act. The import restrictions are to take effect as soon as possible, officials said, with the export controls going into effect within 10 days.

China targets market changes Calls for reform met with caution

BEIJING — A day after Premier Zhao Ziyang called for further reforms of China's Soviet-style industries, two senior Chinese officials made clear on Monday that the country faces numerous obstacles to such reforms and is uncertain about how to proceed in some areas. In a news conference, they said China will continue to experiment with reforms that some more traditionalist Marxists would consider to be capitalistic, such as the creation of land and labor markets and the distribution of shares in state-owned factories. But they were unable to provide a timetable for the implementation of key reforms dealing with prices, bankruptcy, and the management of state-owned industries. The news conference was organized as part of a major Communist Party congress, which opened Sunday. The congress is supposed to endorse policy and top party leadership changes. Answering a question about a controversial land reform, one of the two officials, Du Runsheng, director of a high-level party rural research center, said land use rights could be sold under a reform now under consideration. A Western economist here said the Chinese were edging toward creation of a real estate market, something that might have shocked Mao and Marx. But Du said China would keep its land under state ownership regardless of whether land use rights were transferred. Meanwhile, price reform, considered the key to many other reforms, has been largely stalled since early this year out of a fear of inflation. Prices rose 7 percent in the first three-quarters of this year, and bank officials say that a more accurate rate would be more than 10 percent. "We will persist in our efforts to see REFORM on Page A2

Voters up in arms over pesticides, researchers warn

LAKE ARROWHEAD, Calif. — Chemical companies must quickly develop non-toxic methods to combat crop pests and diseases because future use of farm pesticides will be sharply limited by voters' desire to clean up the environment, researchers predict. "Agriculture cannot expect to depend on chemicals for crop protection as it has in the past," said James Seiber, an environmental toxicology professor at the University of California at Davis. Seiber, who once worked for Dow Chemical, said the farm industry has "covered itself in a chemical blanket" for too long and must get to work on alternatives. Seiber spoke as nearly 120 scientists, regulatory agency representatives, chemical industry officials, environmentalists and legislative staff members opened a three-day symposium entitled "Reducing the Use and Persistence of Agricultural Chemicals Through Biotechnology." The conference, which started Sunday and ends Tuesday, is intended to increase communication among groups which often clash over the use of pesticides and see PESTICIDES on Page A2

Living 'the Principle' in modern times

By MICHAEL WHITE The Associated Press SALT LAKE CITY — At 81, Rhea Kunz has eight children, more than 130 grandchildren and great-grandchildren, and was one of four women to share the same husband. She was once jailed for polygamy and says she suffered death threats from power-hungry patriarchs. None of it has swayed her belief in the "high and holy calling" that Mormon fundamentalists call "the Principle." But she said she is alarmed by an outbreak of violence among rival polygamist sects, marked by the Oct. 16 slaying of polygamist leader Daniel Ben Jordan. Jordan, a son-in-law and one-time follower of convicted murderer and polygamist patriarch Ervil LeBaron, was killed at a Utah campsite in a shooting authorities say may have had religious overtones. LeBaron himself died in prison in 1981 after being convicted of murdering the 1977 murder of Kunz's brother, Rulon Allred, the leader of a rival sect, and conspiring to kill his own brother, Verlan LeBaron. Kunz, who was born to polygamists and separated from her husband shortly before she served a few days in jail in 1944 for refusing to denounce polygamy, says the violence contradicts the tenets of Mormon fundamentalism. "Everything is out of order. There is such a concentration of evil and vice," Kunz said last week. "The fundamentalists are crying out for the setting in order of the House of God as much as anyone else." Authorities and scholars estimate that there are 25,000 to 30,000 practicing polygamists in the West, with most in Utah, Arizona and Once a focus of police in Utah, Arizona and see POLYGAMY on Page A2

Investors in debt face liquidation

Buying on the margin a gamble at best

By BILL SING Los Angeles Times For the past few years, stock market newsletter editor Al Frank had advised his clients to buy stocks with borrowed money, a process Wall Streeters call buying on margin. And in the five-year bull market that started in August 1982 — during which the Dow Jones industrial average more than tripled — that strategy made Frank and his clients a mint. But beginning last week, when the market crashed, Frank and many of his clients received margin calls — requests that they sell stock or deposit more cash with their brokers to replenish the declining value of the stock used as collateral to back the loans. Frank, editor and publisher of The Prudent Speculator, said his would cancel the planned remodeling of his house and sell some of his stocks to meet those margin calls. "We're hunkering down, we will probably not out less, be less generous with our Christmas gifts," said a distraught Frank, who claims he lost $700,000 of his $2 million portfolio in the market debacle, they could reduce consumer spending, which in turn could depress economic growth and possibly lead to a recession. Also, margin calls are threatening the holdings of some major speculators and corporate raiders who use margin to acquire stakes in publicly-held companies. For example, British-born financier Alan E. Core may lose the control he recently won in Oakland, Calif.-based KaiserTech, holding company for Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical, due to margin calls. Many investors, facing margin calls for the first time, have been unprepared for the resulting trauma, some brokers say. In the bull market of the last five years, "people have rarely seen any stock they've bought take a drop for very long" and so have never had margin calls, said Jim Angelson, a broker in the Los Angeles office of Kidder, Peabody & Co. In some cases, the investor trauma can even lead to tragic results. On Monday, a distraught Miami investor — reportedly facing a margin call — shot and see MARGIN on Page A2

Since last week's crash, margin calls like Frank's have ballooned — by forcing investors to sell additional stock — have been a major contributor in driving down stocks even further. Market watchers say that margin calls were a significant factor behind Monday's 158.83-point decline in the Dow average, its second-largest single-day point drop ever following the previous Monday's record 508-point free fall. Dow plummets, spending falls - D1 "Margin calls have been 'up substantially,'" said Hugo W. Quackenbush, senior vice president of marketing for Charles Schwab & Co., the nation's largest discount brokerage. "They're heavier than normal, but not alarming," said Betsy Flagler, spokeswoman for Merrill Lynch, the nation's largest brokerage. Increasing margin calls could force many affluent investors to sell homes, cars or other assets to pay off stock debt, experts say. Or, as in Frank's case,

Leaders call truce, discuss budget cuts

WASHINGTON — President Reagan and congressional leaders talked face to face Monday as they began a new effort to reduce the federal deficit, saying the need to reassure the nation's shaky financial markets added urgency to their task. The president met for nearly an hour with the Democratic and Republican leaders of Congress. Participants said there was no discussion of specifics on such subjects as possible tax increases or spending cuts, but there was agreement on the importance of their task. "We have to be serious. All of us have to be serious," said House Speaker JIM WRIGHT, D-Texas. "Today's session at the White House was the first move in a high stakes game that we can't afford to lose," said Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. "We're going to work as hard and fast as we can," said Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., the Senate majority leader. see TALKS on Page A2 implement price reform will proceed in a steady manner so as to maintain the basic stability of prices," Du said at the press conference.

A Western economist said the Chinese were likely to delay making any moves on price reform for an additional nine months to a year from now.

Prices are a highly sensitive issue because they affect so many people and because the Communists have prided themselves on controlling inflation. The Communists defeated the Nationalists in 1949 partly because of the Nationalists' inability to control runaway inflation.

A Chinese official said recently that the government feared major unrest, and possibly rioting, a few months ago because of rising food prices.

At Monday's news conference, the official said a major problem was that demand for goods continually exceeds supply in a society that has become increasingly oriented toward consumption.

Earlier this year, the party shifted the main emphasis of the reforms away from price reform to factories in an attempt to make industries more efficient and productive. More than 20 percent of large state-owned factories are said to operate at a loss.

Pesticides

 herbicides, said meeting organizer Brian Federici, a professor of insect science at the University of California at Riverside.

Many of Monday's presentations dealt with the use of genetic engineering to develop microorganisms that attack specific insects, microorganisms that degrade toxic chemicals to harmless forms, and genetically redesigned plants that resist insects and diseases.

"The worst thing we could do is ignore the signals and wake up five or 10 years down the road with chemicals outlawed," said Federici.

"Because of increased regulation and what appears to be society's unhappiness with chemicals, fewer chemicals will survive and fewer new ones will come down the pipeline in the future," he said. "The extreme is that someday there may be no chemicals available to agriculture. I don't believe that, but it's not outside the realm of possibility."

"There is no question there's a trend to reduce the amount of chemical pesticides used in agriculture, particularly in California because we use so much and because we're finding chemicals we know are carcinogenic (causing cancer) in water supplies," Federici said.

Ananda Chakrabarty, a microbiologist-immunologist at the University of Illinois in Chicago, said new chemicals will continue to be made and used, and that it was "high time we also try to develop antidotes" to neutralize toxic wastes in soil.

In California alone, 80 million to 100 million pounds of agricultural insecticides and herbicides will be used this year, Federici said. While researchers are developing non-toxic alternatives, very few have been approved by the government for widespread use, he added.

More must be done to make sure researchers deal with practical problems faced by farmers, said Kenneth Farrell, vice president for agriculture and natural resources at the University of California at Berkeley.

Seiber said the move away from farm chemicals is an inevitable result of pesticide contamination of the environment, the accumulation of toxic waste and the pollution of groundwater by farm runoff.

He said the number of bills signed into law in California to control toxic materials grew from nine in 1983 to 33 in 1984 to 57 in 1985 and reached 60 last year.

He especially noted Proposition 65, the Safe Drinking Water Act, an initiative overwhelmingly approved by California voters last year. It bans the discharge of state-listed carcinogens or birth defect-causing chemicals to potential drinking water supplies unless polluters can prove the chemicals won't significantly add to the number of cases of cancer or birth defects. Seiber said that will be impossible to prove.

Talks

 Nov. 20.

Rep. Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., the House minority leader, said the president didn't comment specifically on any proposal during the meeting.

"We just had a free exchange of ideas," he said. If there was a message from the president, he said, it was "we'd better get cracking and get something done."

The talks beginning Tuesday will involve a group of 15 including three from the White House: chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr., Treasury Secretary James Baker and Budget Director James Miller. Each political party will have three representatives from each chamber of Congress.

Despite the new talks, Wright emphasized that the Democrats were not going to abandon the deficit-reduction legislation they've been working on all year. Their main budget bill, including about $12 billion in new taxes and also a welfare reform package, is scheduled to come before the House on Thursday.

Wright said Reagan's comments at the meeting indicated a desire to avoid either a budget freeze at last year's levels or automatic cuts under the deficit-reduction law.

He said Reagan told an anecdote from his days as governor about having proposed a 10 percent across-the-board budget cut, and "the ceiling fell in on him. It was just not a happy result," Wright said.

Several lawmakers spoke of going beyond the Gramm-Rudman goal and of making sure that the deficit-reduction steps carried over into future fiscal years.

But Fitzwater said the White House agreement was simply "to get as much as it could." "We won't try to forecast more or less" than the $23 billion, he said.

Fitzwater also emphasized that the president was not adopting the Democrats' idea of half the deficit reduction coming in cuts and half from taxes. As for talk of wrapping up an agreement in just a few days, Fitzwater was also cautious, saying Nov. 20 was the "outside date" but agreement could come sooner.

During a picture-taking session at the beginning of the meeting, Reagan was asked to describe how urgent the talks were. "I'm not commenting," he said.

"It is true the stock market has added a sense of urgency to this," Fitzwater later told reporters.

Today's weather Sun should linger a few more days

Camas Prairie and Wood River Valley:
 Sunny, mild days and clear and cold at night today and Wednesday. Highs from 60 to 70. Lows in the mid 20s.

Northern Utah and Nevada:
 Utah - Fair through tonight. Increasing clouds statewide Wednesday with scattered showers developing in the southwestern portion. Lows in the 40s to low 40s. Highs from mid 60s to low 70s.

Nevada - Mostly sunny today. Increasing clouds tonight, then mostly cloudy with a chance of showers on Wednesday. Highs today from mid 60s to mid 70s. Lows tonight from near 30 to the lower 40s.

Summary:
 The National Weather Service in Boise says high pressure at the surface and has continued to build over Idaho Monday and will remain over the intermountain region for several days.

Therefore, fair weather with mild afternoon highs and cool overnight lows will prevail through at least mid week.

Mostly sunny weather prevailed over Idaho Monday afternoon with only some high thin clouds at times.

Early afternoon high temperatures were in the upper 50s to low 60s over the north and mid to upper 60s over the south.

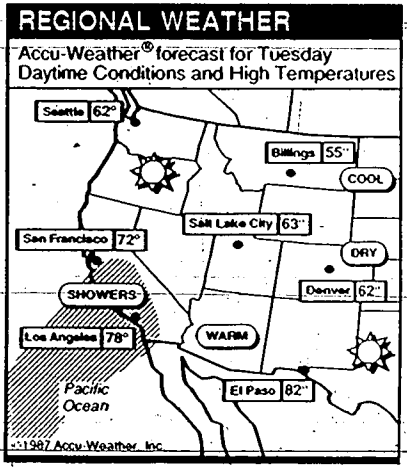

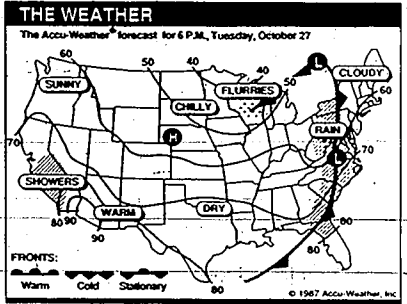

Early afternoon winds across the state were light except for the southwestern and south-central portions where winds to 15 mph were noted.

The warmest temperature in Idaho Monday was 74 degrees in Hagerman, while the low was 15 degrees recorded at Stanley.

The agricultural outlook for Southern Idaho - Conditions for harvesting and field work will be excellent through Saturday as mild dry weather continues. Winds will be generally east to southeast 5 to 10 mph today and Wednesday.

The extended forecast for Southern Idaho - Thursday through Saturday, mostly sunny days and clear nights. Highs in the 60s to mid 60s. Lows from mid 20s to mid 30s.

Elsewhere in the nation Monday, the highest temperature was 98 degrees at Laredo, Texas, and the lowest was 15 degrees at Gunnison, Colo.

Margin

 killed the branch manager of his brokerage office and critically injured his broker. The investor then killed himself.

The surge of margin calls is an unpleasant, though expected, result of the boom in margin borrowing since the bull market began in 1982. Margin debt at the end of September hit a record of $23.4 billion, a 44 percent increase from the $16.2 billion at the end of 1984 and quadruple the $10.95 billion five years ago, according to the New York Stock Exchange. More than 2.8 million investors have margin accounts, with the average account size growing to more than $4,880, up from $1,415 in mid-1984 when the NYSE first started tracking them.

Such growth has been easily understandable. In the 1982-87 bull market, buying on margin was wildly profitable.

Federal regulation allows investors to borrow up to 50 percent of the value of stock purchased. Such borrowing leverage allows investors to get an opportunity to earn a profit with a smaller initial investment.

For example, suppose an investor bought $10,000 worth of stock by borrowing $5,000 - typically from his broker - and putting up $5,000 of his own cash. If the value of the stock doubled to $20,000, the investor would have made a $10,000 profit on his $5,000 investment, minus borrowing costs. But if the investor had bought the stock entirely with cash, his $10,000 profit would have been against a $10,000 investment.

But margin is a double-edged sword: while profit potential is greater on the upside, losses can also be greater. If that $10,000 in stock plummeted to $5,000, the investor would lose his entire investment, whereas if he had not borrowed, he only would have lost half of his investment.

Because of that loss potential, many investment advisers discourage margin borrowing. "Margin is too risky for the average investor, and potential is too costly," said John L. McKee, director of research for the American Association of Individual Investors.

Accordingly, institutional investors such as pension funds are forbidden by law to use margin. Although only as few as one in 10 individual stock investors is said to use margin, those that do tend to be well-heeled individual investors or traders who trade and speculate often.

But when prices go down sharply they inevitably face margin calls. These calls are usually triggered when the investor's equity in his stock - its market value minus the amount of the loan - drops to 25 percent or 30 percent of the total value.

If that happens, the investor must either add more securities or other collateral, put up more cash, or sell the stock. Generally, brokerages inform clients of margin calls by mail and allow 48 hours for a decision.

Brokerages say many investors have chosen to sell rather than stick it out, wanting to cut their losses or lacking enough money to meet the margin call. That often is a financial disaster for the investors.

Being forced to sell due to a margin call means "you get taken out of the market at the worst possible time" when stock prices are low.

Polygamy

 other Western states, prosecution of polygamists has virtually ceased since the 1960s. In 1984, Elizabeth Joseph, a polygamist wife, ran for Kane County attorney and lost, and her husband, Big Water Mayor Alex Joseph, ran for the Kane County Commission in 1986 on the Libertarian ticket.

Charges were never filed against Joseph or any of his 11 wives.

Prosecutors said society's more liberal attitudes toward marital relationships dissuaded them from pressing charges under the state's colonial laws.

"It's kind of ludicrous to enforce that when you have people living together without matrimony," U.S. Attorney Brent Ward said.

For the most part, the polygamists groups remain closed to outsiders. But the more relaxed climate has persuaded Kunz to speak out to correct what he sees as misconceptions about polygamists.

"The main run of them are hard-working people, just honest people trying to get along. They're just good folk," Kunz said.

Kunz belongs to none of the four major polygamist groups that sprang up after the Mormon Church, an "outcast" of Utah statehood, officially abandoned the practice of plural marriage in 1890.

Tom Green, a polygamist who is compiling a history of Mormon fundamentalism, said the major sects are the United Apostolic Brethren, founded by Rulon Alford and now led by his brother, Owen; the Davis County Co-op, which combines polygamy and communal business interests; the Church of the Firstborn of the Fullness of Times, based in Chihuahua, Mexico; and followers of the late LeRoy Johnson who inhabit adjacent towns on the Utah-Arizona border.

But Kunz and Green concede that many of the adherents of polygamy has strayed from the "ideal" espoused by early Mormon leaders.

"Green, like Kunz an independent, said that in some instances, sect leaders do use wives based on payment of tithes.

Marriage in some groups also may depend on whether you can turn over their paychecks to the church for a two-year period, a variation of the Mormon practice of sending young men on two-year proselytizing missions.

Kunz said few men enter polygamy for sexual adventure simply because extramarital sex is readily available without taking on the responsibility of a second family. But he added that few polygamist husbands treat their wives with the respect and consideration called for by fundamentalist doctrines.

"There are men who really and truthfully understand the place of honor a woman has, but they are few and far between," Kunz said. "Brigham Young said polygamy would damn more men than it would save." It "takes" really unselfishness, real dedication to live this law right," he said.

But her roots run deep among the dissenters who braved excommunication and criminal prosecution to keep polygamy alive. Her father fled to Mexico in the late 19th century rather than abandon his two wives. In 1944, Kunz accompanied her husband and his three other wives to jail rather than renounce the "Principle."

She said that in the 1970s followers of Ervil LeBaron also threatened her life in a bloody bid to control two of the major polygamist sects.

But she said none of the trials have shaken her conviction that plural marriage was ordained by God for his most faithful servants.

"People who haven't had any contact or knowledge of these things, they get their own ideas. Most of the inquiries are superficial, such as 'who earns the living, who does the work, sex,'" Kunz said. "That shows their ignorance of a beautiful and holy law." That law was given to bring the choicest spirits into the world.

"Polygamy was introduced in the 1840s to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints by church founder Joseph Smith, who said God had commanded it.

Supremacists' trial begins in '84 slaying of radio host

DENVER (AP) — Four members of the white supremacist group The Order went on trial today on civil rights violation charges in the slaying of Denver radio personality Alan Berg, 34 years after he was gunned down by machine-gun fire.

The trial in U.S. District Court of David Lane, 48, Richard Scutari, 40, Bruce Pierce, 32, and Jean Craig, 54, began today with jury selection. The proceedings are expected to last six weeks or more.

U.S. District Judge Richard P. Matsch began questioning the pool of 110 potential jurors this morning. The defendants, clad in street clothes, were escorted amid heavy security into the courtroom, where a dozen or more plainclothes federal officers kept watch during the proceedings.

Matsch told the potential jurors that the government will have to prove several elements for the jury to find that there were civil rights violations — including that the defendants attacked Berg because he was Jewish and that the attack resulted in his death.

The prosecution has listed 106 potential witnesses, including Denver Daw Parmenter, an original member of the group who testified in a federal trial of The Order members in Seattle that Berg's slaying was part of the group's plan to start a race war.

The four defendants were indicted April 24 on charges of interfering with a federally protected right resulting in a death. All are serving federal sentences for racketeering convictions resulting from a 1985 Seattle trial.

Ten Order members, including three of those charged in the Berg slaying, were convicted in the Seattle trial. Twelve others, including Scutari, pleaded guilty to racketeering or conspiracy charges. The maximum penalty in the Berg case is life in prison, with eligibility for parole after 10 years.

Lane, Pierce and Scutari also have been named in a sedition indictment in Fort Smith, Ark., which alleges that The Order and other groups planned to start a race war against the government and establish a white nation in the Northwest. The trial is scheduled for early next year.

Berg often used his KOA radio program to attack and embarrass white supremacist leaders. He was slain with a submachine gun June 18, 1984, as he got out of his car in front of his townhouse.

Prosecutors said five people were involved in the shooting. They said Pierce was the trigger man, Scutari was the lookout man and Lane drove the getaway car. Craig allegedly tailed Berg weeks before the killing to make note of his routine, the prosecution said.

The man identified as the fifth member of the team is Robert Mathews, who was killed in December 1984 during a shootout with police on Whidbey Island, Wash., police said. Mathews, who has been described as the founder of The Order, allegedly was a lookout during the Berg killing.

Stretching could be triggering jolts

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A series of small-to-moderate earthquakes in Utah's western desert may have been triggered by stretching of the Great Basin between the Wasatch and Sierra Nevada mountain ranges, a seismologist says.

The most recent of the quakes, which have rattled the sparsely populated region off-and-on for the past six weeks, hit at 9:16 p.m. Sunday, registering 4.8 on the Richter scale.

Ethan Brown of the University of Utah Seismograph Stations said Monday that the shakers could be linked to the fact that the Sierra and Wasatch ranges pull away from each other a little bit annually.

"California is getting further away from us every year," he said. Brown said Sunday's quake probably had nothing to do with the pumping of the Great Salt Lake, which is creating a man-made pond over previously dry desert.

Nonetheless, the quake was centered near the pump site, 16 miles west of Lakeside, a small town at the edge of the Great Salt Lake. It was about 50 miles northwest of Salt Lake City.

The quake was the largest eight which have occurred since Sept. 17, Brown said.

"It was felt widely in the Salt Lake Valley, and also in Wendover and Stansbury Park," Brown said.

"It was a big one. Several other earthquakes have been measured in the area since 1967, about the time extremely sensitive seismic instruments were installed, he said.

In addition to the stretching of the Great Basin, Brown said, another theoretical explanation for the quakes is that the Earth's crust is popping up now that it isn't weighed down by the deep, prehistoric Lake Bonneville.

About 16,000 years ago, the lake was about 1,000 feet deep and covered 20,000 square miles, including most of Utah's portion of the Great Basin. Since then, it has evaporated into the remnant 80-mile-long, 30-mile wide Great Salt Lake.

However, Doug Sprinkel, deputy director of the Utah Geological and Mineral Survey, said he believes most of the post-Bonneville rebound occurred long ago.

The seismic activity in the west desert, and in the Tremonton area in the last year, could be small forerunners of larger quakes that could actually rupture the Earth, he said.

In 1934, an earthquake measuring about 6.5 on the Richter scale ripped apart ground in Hansel Valley near Snowville, northwest of Tremonton, he said.

Historical averages indicate Utah may be due for an other major earthquake, Sprinkel said.

"The longer we wait, the more we can expect an earthquake of 6.5 to 7.5 could occur," he said.

Syphilis cases baffle state

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Health experts say they're baffled by a syphilis epidemic in Oregon that increased five times faster than the national average increased during the first half of 1987.

Henry Horton, manager of the state Health Division's Sexually Transmitted Diseases Program, predicts a total of 475 cases of syphilis in Oregon by the end of this year, compared to 202 in 1986.

"I have never seen any epidemic take off like this — anything, anywhere," said Horton. "We've looked at all the factors and we can't figure out why this has hit us like a ton of bricks."

The outbreak in Oregon reflects a national epidemic of the disease. Figures provided by the National Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., show the number of new syphilis cases in the country grew 25 percent in the first six months of 1987 compared to the first half of 1986.

In Oregon, the gain was 132 percent for the first half of 1987, one of the largest increases in the country. By comparison, the number of new syphilis in Washington climbed 6 percent in the same period, while Idaho recorded a 33 percent decrease. Oregon's increase was also higher than New York City, at 60 percent, and Los Angeles, where the increase was 112 percent.

Joseph Blount, a CDC statistician with the agency's sexually transmitted disease division, said that studies are under way to find a reason for the explosion of the disease. "We're looking to what effect drugs, prostitution, the language problem and the diversion of resources (in the fight against AIDS) has had on syphilis," Blount said.

So far, he said, figures show that syphilis is declining among gay men as they take precautions against AIDS.

Of the increase in syphilis among heterosexuals, he said, "One hypothesis is that an increasing number of drug users are contracting and passing on the disease."

Oregon minorities were particularly hard-hit by the epidemic.

Hispanics, who account for 2.5 percent of the Oregon population, had 28 percent of the syphilis cases — up from 15 percent in 1985. Blacks, who make up 1.4 percent of the population, had 31 percent of the syphilis cases in 1987, up from 10 percent in 1985. Whites constituted 40 percent of the cases in 1987, down from 69 percent in 1985.

State and federal health experts say efforts to stop the spread of syphilis are hampered by difficulties in communication.

Many of those victims are drug abusers who do not know who their sexual contacts are and are reluctant to cooperate with health officials. Blount said that a growing number of syphilis carriers are drug addicts who turn to prostitution to support their habits.

"Drug users are more difficult to talk to because they may not remember who their sexual contacts were; they may be fixated on their next hit," he said.

Salt Lake named last stop for Soviets' tour

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A 20-member Soviet delegation, ranging from factory workers and musicians to researchers, will arrive in Salt Lake City Wednesday for a two-day visit.

Utah Committee for American-Soviet Relations spokesman Lowell Turner said the Salt Lake stop is part of a four-city United States tour sponsored by the USSR-USA Committee in Moscow.

Other stops on the delegation's agenda include Washington, D.C., Portland and San Francisco, with Salt Lake City as the final stop before the group returns home.

Delegates will arrive at 12:55 p.m. Wednesday at the Salt Lake International Airport, Turner said.

The highlight of the visit will be a Salt Lake-Soviet Friendship Festival at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Sheraton Hotel. The public is invited to attend at no charge.

The festival will include a welcome by Gov. Noem Bagster, an appearance by a Soviet delegate, musical numbers by two sisters who are vocal soloists with the Moscow Philharmonic Society; American folk and American Indian dancing, and a reception.

The Soviets will be leaving Friday morning, Turner said.

A tree-planting ceremony is scheduled for 4 p.m. Wednesday in the International Peace Garden. The tree to be planted is donated by Laura Fairbourne in memory of her husband, the late Maj. Gen. William Fairbourne, a World War II hero who became nationally known as a peace worker before his death earlier this year.

Members of the group will visit local homes for dinner Wednesday. Several will speak at area schools, the University of Utah and service clubs during their visit.

Turner said the delegation includes no Soviet government officials except for one judge.

The others include a department head from the USSR Academy of Sciences, an agricultural expert, people in the Soviet film industry, an English language professor, a journalist, a welder and a poet. Turner said.

Education, hightech essential for growth

The announcement Friday by the U.S. West, the Baby Bell which serves much of the western United States, that it would locate its new research facility along Colorado's high-tech Front Range should come as no surprise.

High technology and high-quality educational facilities are clearly related. The one does not go where the other is not in place; failure of a state or region to develop its higher education virtually assures it a second-place finish in the competition for such enterprises.

Idaho was one of more than a dozen states which submitted bids for the research center. It was also one of the states in which phone company lobbyists linked the potential location of the center to the state's willingness to pass further state deregulation of the telephone industry.

But the heavy-handedness aside, Idaho simply lacks, at this point, the kind of competitive quality in its higher education system to attract a U.S. West research center.

The point has been made repeatedly, but it bears noting again. Regional parochialism, from the top of state government on down, has left Idaho with a disinclined effort when it comes to education and economic development.

Even some local companies are finding this frustrating. Recently, for example, a Mitron Technology executive said the company would be forced to look outside of Idaho for its expansion because of the state's failure to develop a solid business program at Boise State University.

The way out of this is through regional cooperation. Computer-assisted communications technology now allows university and post-graduate programs to be developed virtually anywhere.

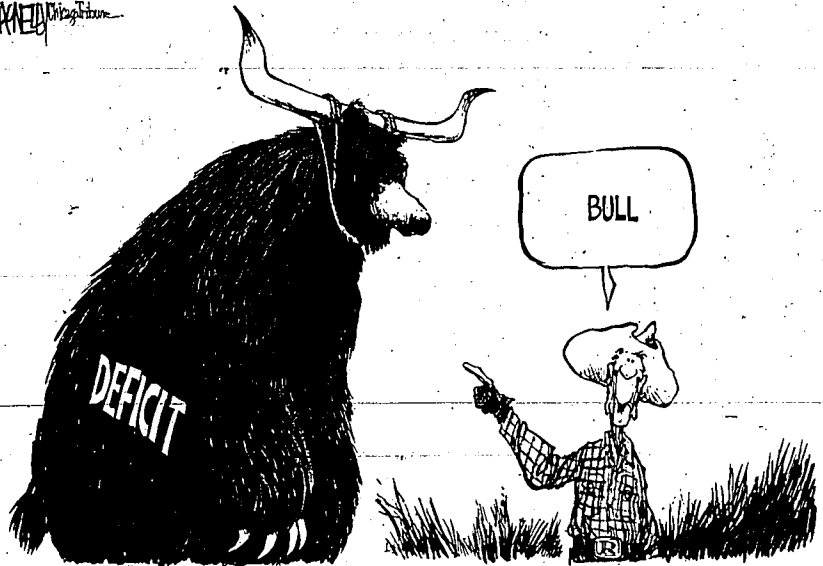

A program of this sort is in the development at the College of Southern Idaho, in cooperation with the University of Idaho and, perhaps, other state institutions.

The State Board of Education could go a long way in assisting those efforts by tightening up on duplication of programs, thus eliminating the territorial philosophy which now infects our state's higher-education system.

It must make decisions based not on geographic location, but on what is best for Idaho as a whole. The state needs imaginative solutions to break the hold of provincialism.

None of this is easy, but until Idaho is willing to do these things, the high technology research centers will continue to go to other states where education and excellence are by-words in deed as well as in rhetoric.

Concerned about view of life

Dear Rod, (And all the other "Rods" out there — no matter the age.)

I'm not as concerned about your t-shirt as I am about your view on life. If you really feel this way, you must be one depressed kid.

I'm not saying there isn't a lot in life like you depicted, but I'm saying there's a lot of good out here, too.

Oh, I know it's hard to find sometimes, what with the media (TV and movies included) splashing the negative before us almost constantly; but did you read the story in the paper today (Friday, October 23) about the man who sacrificed his own life to save a probable stranger from drowning?

Probably not. It wasn't very big. I wouldn't have gotten to read it either, except a man in Idaho thinks he's his brother.

Now I know these "Good Samaritan" stories are not isolated. I haven't lived very long — I'm sure I'm double your age; but there has been much more than once in my life already that I've needed help and perfect strangers have given me service.

Yes, I know, there is a lot of ugly and bad out here; but there's a lot of good, too. I've found with my experiences with people; they're just about as good to me as I am to them. And this world? Well, I think it's just about as good as I make it.

Tell me, "Rod" — How good are you going to make it?

Paint a rainbow or sunset

What happened to respect for your elders? We were taught teachers, ministers, parents and all decent older people were to be respected. Obedience, respect for others and all good manners must be taught in the home, then carried out into all phases of our lives, forever.

This boy has a beautiful talent. He said, that it can't be used to beautify and gladden his fellow man instead of a put-down.
Character is not built by having a pity party when a child is sent home. Let him get out into the real world and try this tactic on his boss. How long would his job last?

Suggests re-reading article

Editorial appalls reader

I am totally appalled by your editorial of Oct. 21 and by the printing of the picture that adorned the controversial t-shirts. If those administrators, by public behavior, deserved this, then what is wrong with the board for not firing them?

And if you are aware of what is going on in the community, and they deserve such treatment, why haven't you led a campaign to get rid of them?

And if this is a slanderous picture how could it be termed free speech? Thank God, none of my grandsons ever were guilty of such obnoxious, disrespectful behavior.

I'd be so ashamed I'd leave the community. If students have the right to behave this way how can you ever expect dedicated, worthwhile people to ever be attracted to the educational system? More profitable to be a lawyer or doctor.

Where have such traits as kindness, respect for teachers and authority, gratefulness to the public for our educational systems, obedience, just plain, ordinary decency gone?

If a student chooses to miss school and parade on a public right of way, then speech is free. Or get a soap box. But it is ridiculous to the point of absurdity to evoke the claim to free speech for any reason that's frivolous or downright mean, or cruel in a school building.

And this is mean and cruel and if undeserved by their public behavior, otherwise, then I think it's slanderous. And I think you're vicious and mean, too, for printing the picture.

Signs of personal vendetta

Although the Twin Falls High School administrators could have handled the t-shirt incident in a different manner, I resent Wednesday's staff editorial which was riddled with gross generalizations.

It is often easiest to take the popular point of view, which is what the Times-News has done; but that's alright. What is not alright is the manner in which the point of view was expressed.

I wonder how many Twin Falls High School teachers, and students for that matter, agree with your final paragraph which implied that the school offers little stimulation and challenge and that "you can barely get out of town every June, what with all the young people taking off to find stimulation and challenge elsewhere."

Well now, how many of those students, and with the June traffic jams they must be in the hundreds, can find a learning sanctuary at the Times-News? Or are the editorialists, like so many others, being overly critical of public education while offering no solutions?

It also appears that the editorialists have a personal vendetta against the administrators, describing them as "a bunch of stuffed, fuddy-duddy t-shirts who have no sense of humor." Did the editorialists poll students to see how many "intuitively" feel that way about the administrators?

Ironically, the article written by Twin Falls senior Jeff Carlson on the same topic and on the same page, was written in a much more professional style. Maybe the Times-News editorialists should seek some "stimulation and challenge" as a result in a Twin Falls High School journalism course.

Letters/ Another angle or two on television car salesman

Prefers dealer, salesman

Being of a peaceful nature I don't often get involved with quarrelsome folks; however, I surely do believe it's time to do a little "rebuttal" for Bob Latham.

It seems to me I'll be arriving a mite harsh on both Bob and his purveyor of horseless carriages, the so-called loudmouth.

I had no idea that speakin' out to be heard was a crime. Why shucks I member grandma Tucker usta always say, "speak up sonny you're mumbalin again," boy did I ever hate to be called sonny.

Now I reckon the feller is a mite mouthy but you just try whisperin and see how many folks perk up their ears, and you can't say his ads are boring what with all the many costume changes.

The man is an actor and a damned good one at that, spends hours studying and reading a script. Peers to me like you might say that he makes a livin the old fashioned way, "he learns it."

By the way friends, while we are on the subject of commercials; how bout the one that comes on ever evenin just as I'm bout to sit down to supper? Now I don't take kindly to anything botherin my supper and this one purely does.

It has to do with the female anatomy and various remedies to ease the ailments of certain areas of that anatomy. Phisaw, makes my bile rise and I get my cup and head for McDonalds. How about some of y'all joinin me and we will have a "Fresh and Dry party," if you get my meanin?

Then of course there is all the old worn out actors like Ed McMahon, the Johnny Carson clone who giggles like a schoolgirl each time his chain is rattled.

There ain't no way that me or mine would ever buy any insurance from a feller in a $600 suit and $140 shoes. Why shoot he'd most likely buy chiffon BVDs with my first $35 payment and any dangd fool knows "chiffon wrinkles."

Least but not least how'd you like to have the "Hoover Town" shanties back that usta sit where Bobs new cars now sit? Remember the old 2-seater outboard back in the left hand corner that faced 2nd Avenue?

Aw comeon sure you do, remember the seggy door and the tin vent pipe in the roof, boy did it ever need that vent pipe. My Aunt Droway holed up in Hoover Town for awhile, her pet watch dog was a 6-foot rattlesnake named Clancy; mean, dirty mean he was. Phisaw, Howard Gillette was the onliest man I knowed that was brave enuff to walk thru there after sundown.

So here to you Bob with your big flag, the bright lites and best of all the reverberating dulcet tones of the "Swedish Nightingale of Latham Square."

Try laughing at this guy

This is another comment about Dave Campo, the "loud mouth" on the Latham Motors TV commercial. I think he is funny — a real clown. There's nothing obscene in what he says and it doesn't take long for him to say it.

There are many TV viewers who cannot stand the prolonged noise of the sports programs — basketball, football, baseball and car races, etc. Also, some of the "music" programs are objectionable. However, they just turn those programs off and think nothing more about it.

So, what's the big deal about that 16 second commercial? Change your attitude and laugh at it.

High school girl has only pity for venomous phone caller

On Sunday Oct. 18, an article about a "million-dollar tax shelter" was published on the front page. Did it deserve this exclusive coverage? Despite that many people may not have gotten all the way through it, because of the "legal jargon," but I did and actually found the article to be objective.

The only thing that I would disagree with was the lack of informing the reader that many other plans are set up for the support staff. They are, in fact, quite well covered, just not in this particular plan.

That was just a minor detail. What really bothered me was the fact that all of the names of the investors were listed in the newspaper. With all of the attention brought to the story, this was an indelicate blow. Now whole families have been dragged before the public eye.

I felt very uncomfortable about this.

considering my father was involved. Therefore, I have a bit of insight into the whole issue.

As far as I can see, the majority felt that they had come upon a reliable retirement program. Can you blame anyone for wanting to secure their future in this tumultuous world?

Especially if you were my father who has been audited yearly for the past 16 years. He believes strongly in his duty to pay taxes, and has definitely been tapped of them.

After that, I wouldn't know how many people "got greedy" about the plan. It would be unrealistic to deny that anyone didn't. These people lead very busy lives.

I'm speaking from experience. I'm lucky to see my father for a few minutes each day. Like the majority of us, they are not tax experts. If someone is presented to them as a qualified tax expert, how would they know the difference?

What I am trying to say is that, all in all, they are once again the victims of the IRS. No one ever said that they are not willing to pay for their mistake. Mr. Walker believes the plan is esteemable and deserves to be defended.

What prompted me to convey my feelings was a phone call I received. It came at a time when I didn't expect it. I was prepared for some negative reaction in school, but nothing ever came and it seemed to be over.

I was home sick the other day when an elderly woman called my home. She politely asked whether or not she had reached the Desmond residence. Upon my reply her voice became seeped with venom and she stated, "Why don't you pay your taxes like everybody else? You have the money."

I was prepared to give a rebuttal to her statement but a resounding click quickly followed. She didn't have the pride to identify herself and I must admit that I was numb.

Some of you may not see anything horrible about this except that I am a spoiled little rich girl who can't take life's realities. I contest that opinion.

Ever since I can remember I have tried to live my life without a shred of prejudice. My family despises people who flaunt their wealth. My father is a self-made man and knows very well what it is like to be poor. I expected such a reaction, but I'm not any less insulted or violated by it.

I pity that woman who called me. She must have an awful lot of hate inside of her. I feel sorry for her because she couldn't even stand to have her opinion argued with by a 16-year-old girl.

Ignorance is the root of hate and prejudice. Therefore I urge the people of this community to educate themselves on this matter. Yes, even remember those names on page three.

Think about the good they have done for this community, the lives they have saved. Then make your own judgment. No matter what it is, as long as it is well founded. It is your right, stand by it; for I can not take it away from you or hold it against you.

Stacy C. Desmond is a student at Twin Falls High School. Her father is Dr. Patrick Desmond.

Investor slays broker, then kills self

MIAMI (AP) — A gunman who had lost heavily in the stock market opened fire at a Merrill Lynch brokerage office today, killing one broker and critically wounding another before killing himself, police and witnesses said.

The assailant was identified as Arthur Kane, 63, of Miami, and Metro-Dade Police Cmdr. William Johnson said, "We believe it was, in fact, related to losses suffered in the market during the recent downturn."

The shootings occurred at a large Merrill Lynch office outside a trendy suburban shopping center, The Falls, in southwest Dade County.

A Merrill Lynch spokesman said the slain brokerage manager was Jose F. Argilagos, 51. The wounded stockbroker was Lloyd Kolokoff, 39, of Miami. Both men were local vice presidents.

Kolokoff was flown by helicopter to Baptist Hospital, in critical condition, said hospital spokeswoman Adrienne Silver. He had a gunshot wound to the back, a possible spinal injury and was taken to surgery, she said.

"I think they went into an office to talk and I think everyone who was in there was shot," he said.

Aaron Perry, a broker with Profile Investments, said friends at Merrill Lynch told him Kane was a longtime customer who had received a margin call because of last week's decline.

"From what I've heard, the guy was overextended. We're talking huge losses," said Perry.

Buying stock on margin is the use of money borrowed from a brokerage to cover up to 60 percent of the cost of securities. If the value of a stock falls, a brokerage issues what is known as a "margin call." That asks the client to put up more assets to bring the percentage of the stock's value covered by the loan back within required limits.

If the call is not met, the brokerage can sell off the stock involved to cover the debt.

"It's one thing to lose your money, it's another thing to lose your mind like this guy apparently did," said Perry.

Two crying women were escorted into the building by detectives, but police declined to identify them or give their relation to the victims.

Several customers stood outside police lines until an employee came out and informed them that they should return Tuesday.

Jerry Bovenkamp, property manager at The Falls, said "violent crime was unheard of at the fashionable shopping center.

"Not in my experience ever, has there been anything like this," he said.

Probe of fatal fire exercise continues

MILFORD, Mich. (AP) — Investigators on Monday rejected a report that criminal negligence charges were being considered in a fire department training fire that burst out of control, trapping six volunteers and killing three of them.

Any talk of criminal charges in Sunday's fire is premature, said police Lt. Dale Mallett, who spoke for the town's fire department at a news conference. The Milford Fire Department is investigating the deaths with help from the state and other agencies.

Mallett said a state fire investigator quoted in a copyright story in The Detroit News wasn't qualified to make the statement.

Three firefighters on the second floor of an old farmhouse saved themselves from the fire by jumping out a window. Four firefighters were injured and two remained hospitalized Monday.

The practice fire was out of control 10 minutes after it was set, Mallett said earlier. Some witnesses said the second floor of the farmhouse collapsed beneath the firefighters, but Mallett refused to comment on that at the news conference.

Mallett declined to comment Monday about specific facts about the fire.

"At this point, we don't know what went wrong. We're still conducting interviews with firefighters (who were) on the scene. There are as many as 40 to 50 more interviews to do," he said.

Widow challenges jet safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — General Dynamics, the chief contractor of the F-16, has been aware of design problems with the jet fighter but has refused to admit the defects, the widow of a pilot killed in an F-16 crash told Congress on Monday.

A General Dynamics spokesman and an Air Force officer defended the plane.

"The Fighting Falcon became the Falling Falcon and it certainly has the appellation of being a widowmaker," said Janet Harduvel, as she testified to the Joint Economic national security subcommittee.

Her husband, Capt. Ted Harduvel, was killed Nov. 15, 1982, when his F-16 crashed while he was flying in South Korea. The Air Force investigation determined that the crash was caused by pilot error.

His widow sued General Dynamics, and a federal court in Tampa, Fla., last April found the company guilty of negligence and awarded her $3.1 million. Mrs. Harduvel contended during the trial that the crash was caused by electrical malfunctions in the plane.

"The finding in this court case and the evidence introduced at the trial raise the most serious questions about the F-16 program," said Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the subcommittee.

General Dynamics is appealing the court ruling and thus declined to appear at the hearing or discuss the case, said Proxmire.

Al Spivak, a spokesman for General Dynamics, confirmed that the company declined to testify because the case was still in litigation.

"As for the crash, Spivak said, "Obviously, we disagree. Mrs. Harduvel's case is based on speculation, not fact. General Dynamics continues to believe that the cause of the accident was pilot disorientation and not aircraft systems failure."

Air Force Lt. Gen. George Monahan Jr. also defended the plane as he appeared before the subcommittee, although he refused to discuss specifics of the Harduvel crash.

"The F-16, with all its combat capability, remains the safest single engine fighter in American history," he said. "The F-16 has met all performance requirements and has been more reliable and safer than anticipated."

The single-engine plane first entered the Air Force in 1978 and the service has now purchased 1,200 and plans to buy more. In addition, the jet has been sold to 10 other nations.

There have been 75 F-16s destroyed in crashes and 28 pilots killed, according to figures provided the subcommittee by the Air Force. Each accident was exhaustively investigated, Monahan said.

Deaver trial ready for arguments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The jury for Michael K. Deaver's perjury trial was selected Monday and the judge in the case then turned away Justice Department complaints about the prosecutor, clearing the way for opening arguments on Tuesday.

The complaints dealt with independent counsel Whitney North Seymour Jr.'s efforts to persuade the Canadian government to waive diplomatic immunity and have Ambassador Allan Gotlieb testify against the former presidential aide. U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson denied a Justice Department request that he admonish Seymour. And he also refused to order Seymour to use diplomatic channels to deal with Canada, saying it was up to the Canadian government to tell the prosecutor how it wanted to be contacted.

On the sixth day of jury selection, nine women and seven men were selected to serve as jurors and alternates and will be sworn in Tuesday. All are black; Deaver is white.

The judge and attorneys in the case did not indicate which members of the panel are designated as alternates, a procedure designed to ensure all are as attentive to the case as full jurors would be. The trial is expected to last three to five weeks.

Deaver, a former White House deputy chief of staff, is charged with lying to a federal grand jury and a House subcommittee that investigated his lobbying for possible ethics law violations.

Baker, senators mull list of high court candidates

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker on Monday presented Republican senators names of 13 potential Supreme Court candidates, in a fast-track effort that could produce a new nominee this week.

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, one of five senators at the meeting, confirmed that Baker's list began with 13 and said that nine remained strong candidates at the end of the closed meeting. He said there were varying objections to the other four.

The senator said it was an "important message" that the administration was consulting with senators in the wake of the defeat Friday of Robert H. Bork's Supreme Court nomination by a 58-42 vote.

Hatch's conciliatory tone was a contrast to his comments last week, when he accused Senate Judiciary Committee Democrats of serious distortions in their written committee report on Bork's nomination.

Baker will take his list Tuesday to Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., and Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va. A Democratic source, speaking on condition he not be named, said the majority party would have problems with some of the names reportedly on the list.

Baker said before he began the meeting, "The president will take into account a variety of views and ideas."

Gunmen slay rights activist

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Two men firing handguns with silencers killed the president of the Salvadoran Human Rights Commission as he left home Monday to drive two of his six children to school, officials sources said.

As the children stood some distance away, the assailants shot Herbert Ernesto Anaya point-blank in a small parking lot, a police source said.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility. A spokesman for the human rights commission blamed the killing on rightist death squads linked to the military.

A government spokesman called the murder "an irrational act" and appealed for calm. A leftist rebel group said it could endanger further talks with the government under the Central American peace plan.

Anaya's father, Rafael Lopez, told reporters his son was being watched by men the father did not identify, and had received several anonymous death threats because of his work with the commission.

"He had had a premonition, and when we talked about it, he told me, 'Look, father, they are going to kill me. They are going to kill me. But that's OK, let them do it,'" Lopez said.

The 32-year-old president was the fourth member of the commission slain in 1988, and two other members disappeared while in police custody.

It is an independent private organization made up of lawyers and other professionals.

For security reasons, the commission keeps the number of its members and their identities a secret except for the spokesmen, president and a few other leaders.

The assailants fired on Anaya outside his home in the Zacamil district of the capital as he prepared to enter his car, said military sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Anaya died almost instantly between 6:30 a.m. and 7 a.m., said the police source, also speaking on condition he not be identified.

Titanic telegraphs pointing forward

Los Angeles Times

PARIS — Engine-room telegraphs recovered from the wreck of the Titanic indicate that the doomed luxury liner's bridge crew may not have ordered engines full-speed astern in a desperate bid to avoid hitting the iceberg that sank the ship on her maiden voyage 75 years ago, a spokesman for the French Titanic expedition said here Monday.

The telegraphs appear to contradict accounts by officers and crew who survived maritime history's worst peacetime disaster that the Titanic was slowed to avoid the iceberg.

The announcement came at a lavish news conference in advance of Wednesday's live TV broadcast during which 900 artifacts from the sunken liner, including the nameplate from the Titanic's starboard bow, a leather case containing jewelry, wine bottles, crockery, light fixtures and chunks of coal spewed out of the ship's coal bins, will be displayed.

Organizers of the U.S.-French expedition earlier speculated that an explosion occurred in a coal bin immediately after the collision, helping to rupture the ship's double-bottom hull. That theory is at odds with accounts by survivors, none of whom reported an explosion.

"Both the telegraphs are in a forward position," said John Joslyn, producer of the TV show "Return to the Titanic - Live."

Save on warm robes, sleepwear and loungewear for misses, juniors and children! (below) Deep tone clan plaid gown and matching robe from Lanz. The gowns, Reg. 38.00, Now 30.40. What's what

WIFE IS A FRIEND

A man believes his best friend is his wife. Usually, his best friend is what recent research indicates: Some research suggests a woman believes her best friend is another woman. Our Love and War man has analyzed this matter and concludes it's mostly that men and women differ in how they use the words. Most any woman likes the term "best friend." But many a man, though he freely says the word "friend," declines to confer that "best friend" title on anybody, except maybe his wife when some surveytaker is asking him impudent questions.

To distract their victims, pickpockets do some curious things, according to a lifelong lawman. Such as stick chewing gum to a seat near an airport boarding gate, and wait patiently for some sad soul burdened with purse and packages to sit on it, and get flustered when it's time to stand-up.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Contact some powerful people you know regarding a new project. Be sure to avoid any arguments with associates.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20): Many modern ideas will occur to you today, so be a progressive thinker and implement them to your advantage now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21):

VIOLENT CRIMES

Q. What else do men convicted of violent crimes have in common?
A. Tattoos. History of abuse on children. Record of late bedwetting.

BLOOD PRESSURE

A Johns Hopkins School of Health study reveals that blood pressure of doctors rises proportionately as their income rises. Try this, Doctor: Quit smoking, take a brisk walk daily, and cut fees.

Before people gave up meat for Lent, they celebrated with a "carnival." That word stems from a "carnal" meaning "goodbye, meat."

That symbol common to the most different national flags is the star.

If you have a piano, hit the F key in the middle octave. That's the note the housefly hums.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a good day to get into the business aspects of your life and find out what's been holding you back. Those around you may be in a mood to argue tonight, so be on your guard.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21):

Don't be unreasonable if confronted with some criticism this afternoon. There may be a problem with your car tonight—be cautious.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Reserve some time for your mate tonight, as this person has been feeling a bit neglected. Keep a cheerful attitude all day.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Don't rely on others to handle your responsibilities—your work is being scrutinized by superiors. Watch your budget carefully.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Maintain a serious attitude even though you may be tempted to laugh at someone's opinion. Be objective and open-minded.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): If you can see your way clear to lending money to a friend, do so. You know this person will definitely pay you back conscientiously.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Now is the time to ask a favor of a superior. You should pay particular attention to your check-book right now, as there may be a mistake.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Have a good time with your mate at a social affair tonight. Don't criticize the ideas of others if you don't understand them.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Formulate a plan of action early today, then stick to it. Don't rely on your intuition when AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Be sure all of your bills are paid on time, and be ready to face some new debts incurred from property repairs. Drive carefully.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Don't judge a book by its cover when you meet new people today. If you keep an open mind, you may make some new and lasting friends.

Poets claim 'mystery poem' their own

DEAR READERS: Is plagiarism really the best form of flattery? In any case, it's nothing new. Montaigne, the 16th-century French essayist, had this to say about "borrowing" literary quotations: "I have gathered a bouquet of other men's flowers, and only the ribbon that binds them is my own."

A reader signed "Going Crazy in Reno" sent the poem that began "Do not stand at my grave and weep," and asked me to help her find the author. I printed her letter, and more "authors" surfaced than I can mention here. For example:

DEAR ABBY: A very good friend of mine sent me your column from The Patriot Ledger in Quincy, Mass. May I modestly state that I am the author of the poem in question.

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

I am 77 years old and have been a poet and journalist for the last 36 years. I wrote that poem in 1978 and titled it "Afterwards." John Wayne requested in his will that my poem be read at his graveside. I do hope that this will clear up the mystery of the origin of that poem.

— NEAL S. TOOMEY, LOWELL, MASS.

DEAR ABBY: The poem sent to you by "Going Crazy in Reno" was written by me in 1971 while on an extended holiday in America.

I gave it to the president of the Reno Chamber of Commerce while visiting Nevada. That poem was tentatively named "A Clown's Eulogy."

Needless to say, I am amazed that my work was used in the manner you have stated, and also very pleased that I have left something behind me besides bones.

— WILLIAM ARTUS, VANCOUVER ISLAND, BRITISH COLUMBIA

DEAR ABBY: In regards to the poem sent in by "Going Crazy in Reno": The title is "I Am Not There," and I am the author. I composed the poem at Mr. Wayne's request in 1977. Yours in life.

— ROBERTA BRAUN

DEAR ABBY: The poem "Do not stand at my grave" was written by Father Joseph Mohr of Oberndorf, Austria, in 1819 when his brother, Elbert Mohr, was laid to rest. This beautiful poem was also read at another Mohr family member's funeral in Nuremberg, Germany, in 1899; and has become a popular eulogy since then. I am a great-grandnephew of the author, who also wrote "Stille Nacht" (Silent Night).

— AUTHOR'S KIN, CONN.

DEAR ABBY: The author you are looking for is John Neihart, poet laureate of Nebraska. That lovely poem is inscribed on the Nebraska

State Capitol building in Lincoln.

— GEORGIA GRUBB, OMAHA

DEAR ABBY: My boss is a well-known minister in Atlanta, and he uses that poem for funeral services. He credits Lillian Bullard Ridgeway as the author.

— VERA H. WADELLE, DR. OZMENT'S SECRETARY

DEAR ABBY: "Going Crazy" will be relieved to learn that the author is Charles E. Hollingsworth, M.D. — a Los Angeles psychiatrist. I found the poem in "The Family in Mourning" — a guide for health professionals, published in 1977. It was read at the funeral of a friend of mine.

— REGINA THOMPSON, WALHALLA, S.C.

DEAR ABBY: I read in The Sacramento Bee that you are searching for the author of a poem recited as a eulogy for John Wayne.

I have a tattered copy of that poem and the author is Clare Harner Lyon.

— PEGGY GRIEVE, ELK GROVE, CALIF.

(For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (30 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Hotel celebrates birthday with a million-dollar party

By MARYLOUISE OATES The Los Angeles Times

If you are going to give yourself a party, give yourself a million-dollar one.

"Can you believe it?" the Hotel del Coronado's Larry Lawrence asked, only somewhat rhetorically. Even when details are known about the three-day weekend — which should bring in more than $1 million for the charities of the guests' choice — it is mildly mind-boggling.

Lawrence and his wife, Jeanne, are importing Dallas party maven Wendy Moss to construct a labyrinthine weekend that comes to life Feb. 19. Lawrence is quick to point out that it is nothing less than his famous San Diego hotel deserves on its 100th birthday, since it now has the same historical designation as the Washington Monument and this year, he said, "We will have more visitors than Yosemite. They run 2.6 million, while we run 2.8 (million). Not guests. Just people coming by to gawk."

Wendy Moss — her favorite adjectives are fun and exciting in describing what she estimated as a week-end costing $1 million — said that the weekend will open with a Friday evening parade, ending at the hotel, where a fantasy time capsule will have been constructed: "There will be a giant fantasy key, and huge fantasy doors and Jeanne and Larry unlock the door and enter a time tunnel back into 1888."

Guests follow the Lawrence into the hotel, along a "lighted pathway through time," and get to party in 10 different partying sites, each designated for a decade of operation.

"There is a 1920s speak-easy, with all black entertainment, nine o'clock cocktails just like it was in the '20s in the wonderful Cotton-Club type dives," and there is a 1940s "Del Morocco" nightclub with zebra banquettes, a '50s drive-in, a '60s diner.

Even if a person is not one of the lucky who will pay $5,000-a-couple for the weekend, there are some $1,000-a-couple tickets just for the Friday night extravaganza, which also lets one into the Victorian celebrity tennis tournament the next day (that's right, Victorian) and other goodies, like rides around San Diego Harbor on Dennis Conner's Stars and Stripes. The "gambling for prizes" that starts Friday night in the "Some Like It Hot" speak-easy will continue all day.

Saturday night, it is a turn-of-the-century ball, with 100-plus special celebrity guests and friends of the Lawrence, and 250 couples getting to come since they have paid the $5,000-price tag for the weekend. For that, Moss said, they "got announced in the old formal fashion, announced by trumpeters" as they come into the Crown Room, "where Lindberg had his celebration."

"This party has been talked about for a while, including a public mention last summer that Operation California would be a prime beneficiary of the event. OC's Richard Walden said his international relief agency, supported strongly by brand-name stars from Hollywood, was asked to secure specific stars for the weekend, in return for being one of the designated charities. Walden said the five stars on the Del's list, including Liza Minnelli, Julie Iglesias and Betty Midler, "weren't people we knew."

"A lot of those things that happened before we came on board never really happened," Moss said.

Officials try to keep lad from mom

CHICAGO (AP) — Authorities started paperwork Monday to deny a pregnant drug addict custody of her two babies; one day after she looked through a glass partition and identified a 22-month-old boy as the child she traded for $50 worth of cocaine.

The child pointed at her. A child knows its mother, strange as circumstances might be, tragic as circumstances might be, police youth division investigator Frank Giunta said Monday, describing the brief reunion between Lou Ann Powell and her son, Anthony.

"Even though she's an admitted addict, a mother is a mother," he said. "She had tears in her eyes, she looked at the kid and asked if she could get a little closer."

Anthony has been in foster care since he was found abandoned outside a day labor agency June 16 and turned over to the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, said agency spokesman Dave Schneiderman.

Police, not realizing Anthony had been found and placed in foster care by the Family Services agency, had been looking for him since they arrested Powell on an outstanding prostitution warrant July 23.

Powell, 26, was well known to case workers from Family Services because of past reports of neglect involving Anthony and his 9-month-old brother, Joseph, Schneiderman said.

"Naturally, the first question we asked when she's arrested is, 'Where's Anthony?'" said Schneiderman. "And she comes out with this business of using him as collateral for a $50 coke buy."

Joseph has been in foster care since his mother's arrest, said Schneiderman. Powell told police she is currently two months pregnant.

Family Services officials, meanwhile, began paperwork necessary to continue adoption proceedings for Anthony and said they would try to initiate similar proceedings on Joseph's behalf.

Hurlbutt to bid for high court seat

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Fifth District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt has decided to apply for the seat on the Idaho Supreme Court left vacant after the death of Justice Charles R. Donaldson on Oct. 9.

Hurlbutt announced his decision Monday and said he has resigned his seat on the Judicial Council, which will study applications for the position and recommend two to four of them to the governor.

Hurlbutt joins Twin Falls attorney Lloyd Webb in applying for the seat amid an effort by local lawyers and politicians to convince the council and Gov. Cecil Andrus to appoint a Magic Valley resident to the position.

"I've made no secret of the fact that I'm going to make the judiciary my career," Hurlbutt said. "I love working at the trial court level, but I've received encouragement from the local and the state level to apply."

Webb, the head of the Twin Falls law firm Webb, Burton, Carlson, Pedersen and Webb, announced his decision last week. He's been a lawyer for 30 years and has served as a district judge in Minidoka and Cassia counties.

Hurlbutt, a native of the North Side suburbs of Chicago, has worked as an arbitrator, lawyer, a prosecutor in Blaine County, a magistrate in Lincoln County and was appointed in 1983 to the seat left vacant by former 5th District Judge Theron Ward.

During his tenure on 5th District Court, Hurlbutt has ruled on cases involving contract disputes between the Twin Falls Education Association and the Twin Falls School District and on over-crowded jail conditions in Twin Falls County. That ruling led to a successful jail bond election to build a new Twin Falls County Jail.

He also has been a persistent campaigner for increased funding for Twin Falls County courts.

More recently, Hurlbutt was involved in a controversy over the county's jury-selection process, a flawed procedure that led to the invalidation of 21 drug indictments in July.

Hurlbutt, as trial court administrator, helped install a new jury-selection procedure for the county.

He has also been assigned to handle the Snake River water adjudication case, a case that will firm up water rights throughout the Snake River plains. He will have to drop that case if he is appointed to the Supreme Court.

Mark Stubbs, a Twin Falls attorney and chairman of the Twin Falls Republican Central Committee, said last week that local politicians and lawyers are mounting an effort to convince the council to appoint a Magic Valley resident to the seat because the area hasn't been represented on the court since 1981.

Traditionally, the five seats on the court have been split geographically, with one justice from the Magic Valley, two from southwestern Idaho, one from northern Idaho and one from eastern Idaho.

Condie proposes creating ombudsman

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — For more than 15 years, Thomas Condie's accounting firm was hired annually to audit the city of Twin Falls.

When the city switched accounting firms last year, Condie said he finally got the opportunity he had always wanted — to run for City Council.

Condie, 42, is seeking election to one of the four seats open on the council in the Nov. 3 election.

Condie, who has practiced as a certified public accountant in Twin Falls since 1969, was a member of the city Planning and Zoning Commission for four years during the late 1970s and served as its chairman during 1981. He is a member of the city Parks and Recreation Commission.

But serving in an advisory capacity is not the same as sitting on the council, he said. When his firm made recommendations to the city, "I never got the opportunity to act on those recommendations. I'd like to get on the other side of the desk and that experience to help the city," he said.

His experience with municipal auditing — his firm also works for other cities and school districts — and service on the planning and zoning commission distinguishes him from the other candidates, Condie said.

But when asked about the present council's decision to consolidate fire and police departments after a public vote against consolidation in 1984, Condie's answer was similar to other council challengers.

"If I was on City Council, I would follow the direction of the majority," Condie said. "It was an issue that there was consolidation without a vote of the public, that's in opposition to what the people wanted and that's why there's an election every four years."

Consolidation is economically beneficial, but "we should keep a constant watch to be sure that it is wise from a public safety perspective," he said.

If elected, he will propose the creation of an ombudsman office, staffed by volunteers, to "act as clearing house" for the concerns and problems of city residents.

"Council members are employees of the citizens. They are the servants and not the masters," he stated in a campaign release. An ombudsman will go a "long way" to help the council, city employees and people settle any differences.

Condie said he is "supportive of the council's establishment of an economic development department. Emphasis should be placed on not only luring big businesses, but small ones, he said.

"Expansion of a few small businesses, development of one or two new markets for an industry could easily offset the impact of a lost Tupperware or have an equal economic impact of a Trus Joist," he said. "Efforts should continue to place viable retail businesses in the now vacant buildings downtown."

The Trus Joist Corp. of Boise announced last month its intention to open a window-manufacturing operation in the former Kellwood building.

"I think we should do all we can for economic development. We're at a point where the city needs to grow. We need jobs, good quality jobs. This is a great place to live," he said. "We have to have something for our children to come back to if they want to live and work in the area."

He said he will do his best to work against increasing city taxes.

"The city can increase sources of revenue by assisting in the eco-

Vollmer says he learned to listen to people

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Mayor Doug Vollmer admitted he was less than sensitive to constituents' problems during his first year on the Twin Falls City Council.

But he learned to listen to the people he represents, he said.

"You better damn well be sensitive to the people's problems. I've learned you better do it, wherever they live, whatever they do," said Vollmer.

Vollmer, 45, is seeking a second four-year term on the council. He is the owner of American Real Estate and Appraisal in Twin Falls, where he has resided most of his life.

"To those council candidates who claim they can better represent the public," Vollmer replied, "that's baloney. If they get elected to the council, they'll find they have to do some things the public doesn't like."

But they will do those things because they are for the betterment of the entire community, he said. The classic example is annexation. A group of people didn't want to be annexed into the city last winter, but the council looked at what was

DOUG VOLLMER
Mayor seeking 2nd term good for the other 25,000 city residents, Vollmer said.

Some challengers to the incumbents claim the public became disenchanted with the council after it proceeded with the consolidation of fire and police departments, despite a large majority who voted against the concept in a 1984 election.

Vollmer said the opponents of consolidation, which he prefers to call "utilization of personnel," had agreed to drop the fight and give consolidation a try. "It was too late to pull the initiative off the ballot and the city failed to state its case adequately on consolidation, he said.

The council proceeded with the changes to slow down the rate of increase in costs in the departments in the future, and now the city is seeing benefits from the consolidation of three years ago, he said.

"We (the council) are sensitive and have proved it in the past. We feel what we do is for the good of the community," Vollmer said.

Prior to consolidation, the city had cross trained employees in the fire, police and sewer departments, he said. In checking with seven large employers in the area, he found most cross trained their people to do three different jobs.

If re-elected, he'd like the council to take a hard look at consolidation and "see how it's working," he said. While there's no proof it is not working, "you can improve on anything. If it doesn't work, I'll be the first one to vote to change it."

He will discuss consolidation on a one-to-one basis with anyone, and those open minded enough will see its merits, he said. "But I will not be a victim of a blood bath on a forum on consolidation."

The new city swimming pool is another example of the council's "going along with the majority of the people," Vollmer said. Only a few people don't want the pool, as indicated by neighborhood meetings and a community survey.

The city was responsive to the neighborhood residents to lessen any impact from the pool, which will be built at Locust Street and Stadium Boulevard, he said.

Vollmer said he has already met the goals he set four years ago when he was first elected. One of his goals was establishing city support for economic development to continue what the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce had started, said Vollmer, a former chamber president.

Economic development was difficult.

Grand jury challenge plans hold up arraignments for 10

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The arraignments scheduled Monday for 10 people indicted by a Twin Falls County grand jury on a wide variety of drug charges have been postponed at least a week.

The defendants asked for delays partly to allow the court, prosecutors and defense lawyers to meet and schedule joint hearings on motions challenging the grand jury and partly to try to find a private lawyer before filing out forms requesting the service of the county's public defender office.

Almost all of the defendants were also indicted by a grand jury earlier this year on the same charges. Those indictments were thrown out in July because the county's jury-selection procedures were invalid.

One of the defendants, Crystal Jane Rogers, requested a delay so her attorney, Monte Carlson, could prepare for a challenge to the proceedings.

"I understand if we enter a plea, we waive the right to challenge the grand jury proceedings," Carlson said to 5th District Judge Daniel Meehl at the arraignment. "We wish to challenge the grand jury proceedings."

In an interview after the hearing postponing the arraignments, Carlson said he thought the prosecutor's office withheld evidence that should have been presented to the grand jury, which met in late September and handed down indictments early this month.

"I really think Idaho law puts a pretty heavy burden on the prosecutor" as far as the quality and type of evidence presented to a grand jury, Carlson said.

Carlson is representing Rogers and one other defendant from the grand jury indictments.

The defendants from the grand jury have been assigned to either 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt or Meehl.

"What we'll try to do is schedule a meeting with the prosecutor's office, Meehl, the public defender's office and the other defense lawyers to try to set up a schedule for any motions," Hurlbutt said. "We're going to try to do essentially the same thing as before — consolidate the appeals in front of Meehl and me."

Before the lawyers who challenged the grand jury on the basis of the county's jury-selection procedures held three days of hearings and testimony before Meehl and Hurlbutt threw the indictments out.

Immediately after that, Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter vowed to take the grand jury matters through another grand jury.

Buhl women face federal charges of falsifying papers for worker

The Associated Press

BOISE — A federal grand jury has handed down indictments against two Buhl women accused of falsifying documents on behalf of a Mexican farm worker seeking temporary resident status in the United States.

The U.S. attorney's office filed criminal complaints against Estela Renfro and Irma Garza on Oct. 13, but their scheduled appearances before U.S. Magistrate Michael Williams were vacated when the grand jury took up the case last week.

The women now are scheduled to be arraigned before Williams on Nov. 3 in Boise. If convicted, they face up to five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Renfro and Garza are charged with falsifying information on an application Juvenal Gonzales-Rosales submitted to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service on Oct. 7 for temporary special agricultural worker status.

But Buhl attorney Jeffrey Hepworth, representing Renfro, and Linda Monk of Buhl contend in affidavits filed in U.S. District Court on Monday that INS clerks Gonzales-Rosales into testifying against the women. Monk's affidavit alleges that men who identified themselves to Gonzales-Rosales as narcotics agents or "barros" threatened to return him to Mexico to be tortured by "federales" cooperating with their investigation.

Hepworth alleges in his affidavit that Gonzales-Rosales' constitutional rights have been violated and that he remains in INS custody.

INS officials were unavailable for comment late Monday.

According to the complaints submitted by the U.S. attorney's office prior to the grand jury indictment, Gonzales-Rosales entered the United States from Mexico for the first time on April 23 under the government's H-2 seasonal contract farm worker program.

He was working at the Bell Rapids project near Buhl on Sept. 19 when Garza approached him about his qualifications for temporary resident status under provisions of the 1986 immigration reform law, according to the complaints.

The application allegedly included an affidavit from Garza stating that Gonzales-Rosales had worked for her as a farm laborer in 1985 and 1986.

Briefly

Suspect in shooting sought

EDEN — The Jerome County sheriff's office is still searching for the suspect in a shooting at a farm east of Eden Sunday.

The sheriff's office is looking for Arnyfeld Veltran, 25, who was last seen wearing an Army field jacket, said Sgt. Deane Moore of the Jerome County Sheriff's office.

The victim, Manuel Alvarez, 47, was shot on his right shoulder, possibly with a .38-caliber revolver, Moore said.

The incident occurred about 8:30 p.m. Sunday at a farm west of Eden.

Alvarez and Veltran got in an argument that included other farm workers at a dining room on the farm, Moore said, and Veltran allegedly pulled a gun and shot Alvarez in the shoulder.

He also allegedly fired at least five more shots, none of which hit anyone, Moore said.

Veltran is described as 5-foot, 6-inches to 5-foot, 8-inches tall and weighs about 150 pounds, Moore said. He left the scene in a black car.

Exhaust pipe started fire

KETCHUM — A preliminary investigation into a 200-acre fire northeast of Sun Valley indicates a hot exhaust pipe started the fire, the Forest Service announced Monday.

The Corral Creek started about 3 p.m. Saturday. More than 50 firefighters worked through the weekend and contained the fire Monday.

Ketchum District Ranger John Phillips said the fire started on a road overgrown with vegetation and a vehicle was spotted on that road just before the fire started.

The Corral Creek fire was the 52nd fire on the Sawtooth National Forest this year. Those 52 fires have burned more than 16,800 acres.

Thirty-four of the fires have been man-caused. The 16 fires that were started by lightning burned seven acres.

Over the last 15 years, there has been an average of 53 fires a year on the Sawtooth National Forest, burning an average of 1,600 acres a year.

Gage unopposed for mayor

DIETRICH — There will be four names on the ballot in Dietrich Nov. 3.

Pete Gage is running unopposed for mayor after having been appointed to fill the seat of the late Willard Stevenson.

Running for two four-year council seats are incumbent Jeanette Knowles and newcomers Tim Conant and Charles Starves. The two council candidates receiving the most votes will join the council.

Declo mayor not candidate

DECLO — Declo Mayor Jones Leonard is not seeking another term in the Nov. 3 election. Jay Darrington is the only candidate filing for his seat.

There are also two four-year council seats up for election. The seats are currently held by Jim Orban and Ross Anderson. Orban is not running for another term, but Anderson, Gary Osterhout and Wendell West have filed petitions for the two seats.

Association picks Bauscher

KIMBERLY — Kimberly School District Superintendent Richard Bauscher has been chosen to serve as a 1987 committee officer for the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges, according to a press release.

Bauscher will also represent the school district as one of 20 rural school districts in the United States and Canada selected to make a presentation at the 1988 National School Board Convention. He will discuss "Proven Practices For Improving School Climate."

cultures of chamber to alone, he said. But, he believed the city should be involved, which had not been the case with past city administrations.

"This year the city established a new economic development department."

"It took years to get this rolling," he said. "Without the city's involvement in Trus Jost, they wouldn't be here."

The Trus Jost Co. of Boise recently announced its intention to open a window-manufacturing operation in the former Kellwood plant south of Twin Falls.

The city will be the single biggest benefactor from the new business through property and sales taxes and growth, Vollmer said.

Vollmer characterizes the present council as "pro-economics" rather than pro-business, despite the fact a majority of the council members head their own businesses.

"If business doesn't grow, the community doesn't grow," he said. The council supports business, but not to the "extent they are allowed to rape and pillage the community."

He represents all the people, not just one segment, he said.

The other goals he set and met were improving the city employees' morale and easing what he considered some extremely stringent zoning ordinances, he said.

On another subject, Vollmer said he has noticed better community support on city projects. Some neighborhoods have agreed to install curb and gutter if the city installs the streets, which stretches city dollars. Local improvement districts have been formed with good public support to improve Blue Lakes Boulevard North and College economic development of the Twin Falls area," he said. "As economic development enters and new services are provided, new revenues will be generated."

As for growth through annexation, Condie said the city should adopt a plan to inform people about its guidelines and criteria for annexation.

"Annexation is one of the real difficult issues because most people don't want to be brought into the city," he said.

On the city finances and a large multi-million dollar reserve in the city budget, Condie said he recalls a time when the city had to go to tax-anticipation notes.

"It was really difficult for the city to build back reserves," he said.

Reserves can be eaten away quickly, he said, and if the city is not careful, it can find itself on a roller-coaster ride of using them, then building back reserves.

In a campaign statement, Condie supported the new swimming pool and called the plan adequate. As plans proceed, however, he wants to make sure the neighborhood is protected, he said.

He would like to "build on" the city recreational offerings.

The city has so many recreational programs. Anyone has to be impressed by going by Harmon Park," said Condie, who coaches youth athletic teams.

Condie said he is running on a positive note.

"I don't have a gripe."

But he believes his experience can be beneficial.

The voice he would add to the council is a fiscally conservative one that also supports positive growth.

"I will want to be very careful with city funds and use the taxpayers' money wisely. But I want to be progressive," he said.

Blaine County prisoners file suit

HAILEY (AP) — Six inmates at the Blaine County Jail have filed suit over allegedly unconstitutional conditions at the Hailey facility.

The prisoners are asking at least $300,000 in damages from the jail. Blaine County Sheriff Jerry Felling and jailer Stanley Cohen. The lawsuit was filed earlier this month in 5th District Court.

Among the inmates' complaints is the contention that they all are required to use the same razor for shaving, which they argue poses a risk of spreading acquired immune deficiency syndrome or other diseases.

Other complaints include that they have been provided inadequate access to a telephone, insufficient exercise and recreation time, and that portions of food are too small and are not fresh.

Besides monetary damages, the inmates are asking that Felling and Cohen be ordered to write 1,500-word essays "explaining why they feel they can break federal laws designed to protect prisoners' lives."

The suit was filed by Christopher Anderson, Timothy W. Hiser, Steve Barnard, Dale Bradshaw, Dwayne Broadway and Walt Decker.

Blaine County sheriff's officials issued a press release saying the allegations had been investigated.

The would not respond to specific claims made by the inmates.

However, the release said the county is operating a Class A jail that exceeds state and federal standards and was recently found in compliance with all 150 requirements of a state inspection."

Indian forces capture city of Jaffna

JAFFNA, Sri Lanka (AP) — India's soldiers now patrol the streets of Jaffna, and Indian generals boast how their determined troops encircled and seized the city that Tamil rebels once vowed to defend to the death.

In a classic military sense, the battle for Jaffna is over and India's might triumphed.

But the real battle for this Tamil city may begin only now, and Indian generals say they could face a long war against experienced guerrillas who know the city and its people.

Lt. Gen. Depinder Singh, who commands India's soldiers in Sri Lanka, said as many as 1,200 rebels — escaped India's encirclement.

Another Indian officer, Brigadier E.W. Fernandez, said Tamil snipers remain, ready to pick off Indian soldiers.

"If you think you can clear out snipers, you are sadly mistaken. There is always the odd one left behind," he said. "There are so many of us, we make ideal targets."

Indian soldiers also must hold a city whose people are at best skeptical of India's intentions and at worst hostile.

For more than two years, the dominant rebel militia, the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, held Jaffna and kept out the Sri Lankan army.

While the mainly Hindu Tamils make up only 18 percent of Sri Lanka's 16 million people, the 800,000 residents here and in the Jaffna Peninsula are almost all Tamils.

The Tigers have pictured themselves as defenders of Jaffna against Sri Lanka's army, which is dominated by the island's mainly Buddhist Sinhalese majority.

More than 6,000 people have been killed in the 4-year-old insurgency for a separate Tamil nation. The Tamils say they are discriminated against by the Sinhalese, who are 75 percent of the population.

India, a majority Hindu nation with a large Tamil minority of its own, has sent more than 20,000 troops to Sri Lanka to enforce an accord signed in July with Sri Lanka aimed at ending the Tamil insurgency.

It guarantees that India will disarm the rebels in exchange for Sri Lanka granting some autonomy to Tamils in the north and east.

Since Indian troops arrived, the Tigers have tried to paint the soldiers as worse than the Sri Lankan army, saying Indians were raping Tamil women and killing civilians.

Indian officers deny the charges but say the Tigers' campaign has gained some success.

When army officers took reporters to Jaffna's main hospital to disprove charges that Indian shells hit the building, they wound up cutting the visit short after several patients complained their wounds came from Indian artillery shells. "They came from the fort," an elderly man, holding his injured grandson, said of the shells that hit his home. Jaffna's old Dutch fort is the Indian army's headquarters in Jaffna.

Indians insist they held down civilian casualties by not using heavy artillery. They also maintain civilians would have a hard time, in the heat of battle, judging if shells came from Indian or rebel guns.

India is mounting its own public relations campaign by distributing food and medical aid and trying to quickly restore electricity and other broken down municipal services to Jaffna residents.

Depinder Singh, the Indian general, said the army is hoping "good sense will prevail" and individual Tiger fighters will respond to an offer of amnesty.

Gopalswami Parthasarthy, spokesman for India's Foreign Ministry, said India still would consider negotiating a surrender with Tiger leader Velupillai Prabhakaran, despite a string of broken pledges by the militia chief.

Without surrender, the Indians will have a tough time living up to their pledge to disarm the rebels. Outside Jaffna, the task is even more difficult.

Kuwait fears retaliation by Iran forces

Los Angeles Times

MANAMA, Bahrain — U.S. retaliation against Iran poses a direct threat to Kuwait's national security, Kuwait's ambassador to Washington was quoted Monday in the Saudi newspaper Ashraq al-Awsat.

"The danger inherent in these strikes is that they will expose Kuwait to retaliation of the kind which Iran would not dare undertake directly against American interest," Ambassador Saad Nasser Al-Sabah told the newspaper.

"What Iran is doing in effect is settle its accounts with the United States at Kuwait's expense," he said. The ambassador underlined that

Kuwait and its five non-combatant partners in the Gulf Cooperation Council "did not want a confrontation with Iran, but, on the contrary, want to live in peace with it."

He said that Iran had launched three Silkworm missile attacks against Kuwait in the last two weeks.

The ambassador's statements were published Monday, a few hours after the foreign ministers of Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Oman, the United Arab Emirates, and Qatar which comprise the Gulf Cooperation Council, ended a two-day meeting without adopting expected collective counter-measures against Iran.

A joint statement referred to option of rupturing Arab ties with Iran to an emergency Arab summit conference to be held in Jordan's capital of Amman Nov. 8. But there were strong doubts that such a stand would materialize at the summit.

Syria, Iran's main Arab ally, warned the gulf states Sunday that they could not "antagonize Iran while hiding under the wings of the United States."

A commentary broadcast by the state-run Damascus radio said the gulf states knew that "their shoulders are too fragile for the burden of a confrontation with Iran" and that they had serious doubts that the United States could protect itself in the gulf "let alone protect them."

Arab newspapers, meanwhile, indicated that Egypt, the strongest Arab state could become militarily involved in the gulf.

Some of the newspaper reports suggested that the GCC finance and economics ministers had met in Riyadh over the weekend specifically to consider a multi-billion-dollar economic aid package to Egypt.

Despite Egyptian denials that it was preparing to send contingents to the gulf, Hamed's press reports claimed that some units in the Egyptian air force have been placed on alert for possible deployment in Kuwait.

Radio reports from Iran charged that Egypt was using the fact that 3 billion of its nationals were working in the gulf as a pretext for military involvement in the area.

Iraq's Deputy Prime Minister Taha Yassin Ramadan and Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz conferred Monday with Kuwaiti ruler Sheikh Jabbar al Ahmed al Sabah after earlier talks in Jeddah with Saudi King Fahd and Defense Minister Prince Sultan.

Ramadan told the Kuwaiti News Agency that Iraq was coordinating with both Kuwait and Saudi Arabia because of the growing Iranian threat to all three states.

Saudi petrodollar reserves vanish

Los Angeles Times

MANAMA, Bahrain — Saudi Arabia registered an unprecedented budget deficit of $16.7 billion in the March-December period of 1986 and is quickly approaching depletion of its one-year petrodollar reserves, the authoritative newsletter Middle East Economic Survey reported Monday.

The Nicosia, Cyprus-based newsletter, quoting figures supplied by the Saudi Arabian Monetary Agency, the country's central bank, said the nine-month budget deficit was the highest ever admitted by Saudi authorities.

The newsletter said the agency figures project a deficit of $14.1 billion for the current calendar year, but the actual deficit might exceed the $21.4 billion deficit of 1986 due to unrealistic expectations for oil revenues and an officially projected 38 percent drop in foreign investment income.

The report estimated Saudi Arabia's liquid foreign assets at the end of June 1987 at $39.5 billion, down sharply from a 1982 peak of more than $100 billion.

The report said the figure included $8.5 billion in shares at the International Monetary Fund and $2.1 billion in gold holdings — both of which are "essentially un-touchable" items for Saudi Arabia for prestige reasons.

The remainder of Saudi Arabia's liquid foreign reserves include $20 billion in U.S. holdings and $8.9 billion in other currencies, the report said.

"The Saudi government has, therefore, surprisingly little financial reserve left with which to face 1988," it added.

Qatar, meanwhile, was reported to have started offering its oil customers price discounts of up to 32 cents per barrel below the official prices of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The newsletter said the Qatar move, effective Oct. 1, was due to falling demand for Qatar petroleum resulting from continuing overcapacity in the oil market.

Qatar has an OPEC quota of 299,000 barrels daily. OPEC's aggregate production is currently estimated at 19 million barrels per day because of violations by some member states of the cartel's self-imposed "daily ceiling" of 16.6 million barrels.

The newsletter said the October price formula was based on the spot market prices charged by Oman, a non-OPEC producer which is not officially committed to the organization's $18 benchmark price system.

It said this meant a price of $17.60 for Qatar's Dukhan crude (32 cents below the official price) and $17.45 for Qatar marine (22 cents below official).

Korean police on alert

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The nation's 120,000 police went on full alert Monday on the eve of a referendum to approve a new constitution that would allow the first direct presidential elections in 16 years.

About 200 radical students opposing the referendum fought riot police at two schools in Seoul.

Aides to opposition leader Kim Dae-jung said he has decided to step down from the major opposition Reunification Democratic Party, headed by rival opposition leader Kim Young-sam, and form a new party to run for president.

The new constitution is designed to ensure full democracy. Despite opposition by some small radical groups, it is expected to be endorsed by most of the 25.6 million voters. It needs a simple majority to be approved.

Weathermen forecast warm weather and fair skies for Tuesday's voting. The 19,834 polling stations were to be open from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. and results will be available by early Wednesday.

About 100 students throwing firebombs battled tear gas-firing riot police for 30 minutes at Hanyang University. Another 100 students from Hankook University of Foreign Studies fought police with fire bombs for nearly 40 minutes.

The new constitution calls for direct election of a president to a single five-year term.

Suspect in shooting sought

EDEN — The Jerome County sheriff's office is still searching for the suspect in a shooting at a farm east of Eden Sunday.

The sheriff's office is looking for Rogelio Veltran, 26, who was last seen wearing an Army field jacket, said Sgt. Deanie Moore of the Jerome County Sheriff's office.

The victim, Manuel Alvarez, 47, was shot on his right shoulder, possibly with a .38-caliber revolver, Moore said.

The incident occurred about 8:30 p.m. Sunday at a farm east of Eden.

Alvarez and Veltran got in an argument that included other farm workers at a dining room on the farm, Moore said, and Veltran allegedly pulled a gun and shot Alvarez in the shoulder.

He also allegedly fired at least five more shots, none of which hit anyone, Moore said.

Veltran is described as 6-foot, 8-inches to 5-foot, 8-inches tall and weighs about 160 pounds. Moore said he left the scene in a black car.

Exhaust pipe started fire

KETCHUM — A preliminary investigation into a 200-acre fire northeast of Sun Valley indicates a hot exhaust pipe started the fire, the Forest Service announced Monday.

The Corral Creek started about 3 p.m. Saturday. More than 50 firefighters worked through the weekend and contained the fire Monday.

Ketchum District Ranger John Phillips said the fire started on a road overgrown with vegetation and a vehicle was spotted on that road just before the fire started.

The Corral Creek fire was the 62nd fire on the Sawtooth National Forest this year. Those 62 fires have burned more than 16,800 acres.

Thirty-four of the fires have been man-caused. The 18 fires that were started by lightning burned seven acres.

Over the last 15 years, there has been an average of 53 fires a year on the Sawtooth National Forest, burning an average of 1,500 acres a year.

Gage unopposed for mayor

DIETRICH — There will be four names on the ballot in Dietrich Nov. 3.

Pete Gage is running unopposed for mayor after having been appointed to fill the seat of the late Willard Stevenson.

Running for two four-year council seats are incumbent Jeanette Knowles and newcomers Tim Conant and Charles Starnes. The two council candidates receiving the most votes will join the council.

Declo mayor not candidate

DECLO — Declo Mayor Jones Leonard is not seeking another term in the Nov. 3 election. Jay Darrington is the only candidate filing for his seat.

There are also two four-year council seats up for election. The seats are currently held by Jay Orthman and Ross Anderson. Orthman is not running for another term, but Anderson, Gary Osterhout and Wendell West have filed petitions for the two seats.

Association picks Bauscher

KIMBERLY — Kimberly School District Superintendent Richard Bauscher has been chosen to serve as a 1987 committee officer for the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges, according to a press release.

Bauscher will also represent the school district as one of 20 rural school districts in the United States and Canada selected to make a presentation at the 1988 National School Board Convention. He will discuss "Proven Practices For Improving School Climate."

council as "pro-economics" rather than pro-business, despite the fact a majority of the council members head their own businesses.

"If business doesn't grow, the community doesn't grow," he said. The council supports business, but not to the extent they are allowed to rape and pillage the community."

He represents all the people, not just one segment, he said.

The other goals he set and met were improving the city employees' morale and easing what he considered some extremely stringent zoning ordinances, he said.

On another subject, Vollmer said he has noticed better community support on city projects. Some neighborhoods have agreed to install curb and gutter if the city installs the streets, which stretches city dollars. Local improvement districts have been formed with good public support to improve Blue Lakes Boulevard North and College Road.

"I feel good about the community assistance," he said. It's a change from earlier times when "they used to recall over LIDs."

He defends the city's large reserve of funds — about $6 million — and increase in taxes.

The reserves are necessary in departments where replacing equipment will be costly, such as in the water and sewer departments, Vollmer said.

"We could spend the $6 million today and never fix what all needs to be fixed," he added.

This year's tax hike will pay for the city employee wage hikes and rising costs of doing business, Vollmer said. "We have not increased the cash reserve through taxes."

About $770,000 from the reserves will be spent on the pool. That is money given back to the public through a new pool, he said.

nomic development of the Twin Falls area," he said. "As economic development enters and new services are provided, new revenues will be generated."

As for growth through annexation, Condie said the city should adopt a plan to inform people about its guidelines and criteria for annexation.

"Annexation is one of the real difficult issues because most people don't want to be brought into the city," he said.

"On the city finances and a large million dollar reserve in the city budget, Condie said he recalls a time when the city had to go to tax-anticipation notes."

"It was really difficult for the city to build back reserves," he said.

Reserves can be eaten away quickly, he said, and if the city is not careful, it can find itself on a roller-coaster ride of using them, then building back reserves.

In a campaign statement, Condie supported the new swimming pool and called the plan adequate. As plans proceed, however, he wants to make sure the neighborhood is protected, he said.

He would like to "build on" the city's recreational offerings.

"The city has so many recreational programs. Anyone has to be impressed by going by Harmon Park," said Condie, who coaches youth athletic teams.

Condie said he's running on a positive note.

"I don't have a gripe."

But he believes his experience can be beneficial.

The voice he would add to the council is a fiscally conservative one that also supports positive growth.

"I will want to be very careful with city funds and use the taxpayers' money wisely. But I want to be progressive," he said.

Blaine County prisoners file suit

HAILEY (AP) — Six inmates at the Blaine County Jail have filed suit over allegedly unconstitutional conditions at the Hailey facility.

The prisoners are asking at least $300,000 in damages from the jail, Blaine County Sheriff Ranger John Phillips said in a lawsuit filed earlier this month in 5th District Court.

Among the inmates' complaints is the contention that they all are required to use the same razor for shaving, which they argue poses a risk of spreading acquired immune deficiency syndrome or other diseases.

Other complaints include that they have been provided inadequate access to a telephone, insufficient exercise and recreation time, and that portions of food are too small and are not fresh.

Besides monetary damages, the inmates are asking that Fernald and Cohen be ordered to write 1,600-word essays "explaining why they feel they can break federal laws designed to protect prisoners' lives."

The suit was filed by Christopher Anderson, Timothy W. Hiser, Steve Barnard, Dale Bradshaw, Dwayne Broadway and Walt Decker.

Blaine County sheriff's officials issued a press release saying the allegations had been investigated. They would not respond to specific claims made by the inmates.

However, the release said the county "is operating a Class A jail that exceeds state and federal standards and was recently found in compliance with all 150 requirements of a state inspection."

Indian forces capture city of Jaffna

JAFFNA, Sri Lanka (AP) — India's soldiers now patrol the streets of Jaffna, and Indian generals boast how their determined troops encircled and seized the city that Tamil rebels once vowed to defend to the death.

In a classic military sense, the battle for Jaffna is over and India's might triumphed.

But the real battle for this Tamil city may begin only now, and Indian generals say they could face a long war against experienced guerrillas who know the city and its people.

Lt. Gen. Depinder Singh, who commands India's soldiers in Sri Lanka, said "as many as 1,200 rebels escaped India's encirclement."

Another Indian officer, Brigadier E.W. Fernandez, said Tamil snipers remain, ready to pick off Indian soldiers.

"If you think you can clear out snipers, you are sadly mistaken. There is always the odd one left behind," he said. "There are so many of us, we make ideal targets."

Indian soldiers also must hold a city whose people are at best skeptical of India's intentions and at worst hostile.

For more than two years, the dominant rebel militia, the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, held Jaffna and kept out the Sri Lankan army.

While the mainly Hindu Tamils make up only 18 percent of Sri Lanka's 16 million people, the 800,000 residents here and in the Jaffna Peninsula are almost all Tamils.

The Tigers have pictured themselves as "defenders of Jaffna against Sri Lanka's army, which is dominated by the island's mainly Buddhist Sinhalese majority.

More than 6,000 people have been killed in the 4-year-old insurgency for a separate Tamil nation. The Tamils say they are discriminated against by the Sinhalese, who are 75 percent of the population.

India, a majority Hindu nation with a large Tamil minority of its own, has sent more than 20,000 troops to Sri Lanka to enforce an accord signed in July with Sri Lanka aimed at ending the Tamil insurgency.

It guarantees that India will disarm the rebels in exchange for Sri Lanka granting some autonomy to Tamils in the north and east.

Since Indian troops arrived, the Tigers have tried to paint the soldiers as worse than the Sri Lankan army, saying Indians were raping Tamil women and killing civilians.

Indian officers deny the charges but say the Tigers' campaign has gained some success.

When army officers took reporters to Jaffna's main hospital to see charges that Indian shells hit the building, they wound up cutting the visit short after several patients complained their wounds came from Indian artillery shells.

"They came from the fort," an elderly man, holding his injured grandson, said of the shells that hit his home. Jaffna's old Dutch fort is the Indian army's headquarters in Jaffna.

Indians insist they held down civilian casualties by not using heavy artillery. They also maintain civilians would have a hard time, in the heat of battle, judging if shells came from Indian or rebel guns.

India is mounting its own public relations campaign by distributing food and medical aid and trying to quickly restore electricity and other broken down municipal services to Jaffna residents.

Depinder Singh, the Indian general, said the army is hoping "good sense will prevail" and individual Tiger fighters will respond to an offer of amnesty.

Gopalaswami Parthasarathy, spokesman for India's Foreign Ministry, said India still would consider negotiating a surrender with Tiger leader Velupillai Prabhakaran, despite a string of broken pledges by the militia chief.

Without surrender, the Indians will have a tough time living up to their pledge to disarm the rebels.

Outside Jaffna, the task is even more difficult.

Kuwait fears retaliation by Iran forces

Los Angeles Times

MANAMA, Bahrain — U.S. retaliation against Iran poses a direct threat — to Kuwait's national security, Kuwait's ambassador to Washington was quoted Monday in the Saudi newspaper Ashraq al-Ahmed.

"The danger inherent in these strikes is that they will expose Kuwait to retaliation of the kind which Iran would not dare undertake directly against American interest," Ambassador Saad Nasser Al-Sabah told the newspaper.

"What Iran is doing, in effect, is settle its accounts with the United States at Kuwait's expense," he said. The ambassador underlined that

Kuwait and its five non-combatant partners in the Gulf Cooperation Council "did not want a confrontation with Iran, but, on the contrary, want to live in peace with it."

He said that Iran had launched three Silkrom missile attacks against Kuwait in the last two weeks.

The ambassador's statements were published Monday, a few hours after the foreign ministers of Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Oman, the United Arab Emirates, and Qatar which comprise the Gulf Cooperation Council, ended a two-day meeting without adopting expected collective counter-measures against Iran.

A joint statement referred to option of rupturing Arab ties with Iran to an emergency Arab summit conference to be held in Jordan's capital of Amman Nov. 8. But there were strong doubts that such a stand would materialize at the summit.

Syria, Iran's main Arab ally, warned the Gulf states Sunday that they could not "antagonize Iran while hiding under the wings of the United States."

A commentary broadcast by the state-run Damascus radio said the Gulf states knew that "their shoulders are too fragile for the burden of a confrontation (with Iran)" and that they had "serious doubts that the United States could protect itself in the Gulf 'let alone protect them."

Arab newspapers, meanwhile, indicated that Egypt, the strongest Arab state could become militarily involved in the Gulf.

Some of the newspaper reports suggested that the GCC finance and economics ministers had met in Riyadh over the weekend specifically to consider a multi-billion-dollar economic aid package to Egypt.

Despite Egyptian denials that it was preparing to send contingents to the Gulf, Monday's press reports claimed that some units in the Egyptian air force have been placed on alert — for possible deployment in Kuwait.

Radio reports from Iran charged that Egypt was using the fact that 3 billion of its nationals were working in the Gulf as a pretext for military involvement in the area.

Iraq's Deputy Prime Minister Taha Yassin Ramadan and Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz conferred Monday with Kuwaiti ruler Sheikh Jabbar al-Ahmed al-Sabah after earlier talking in Jeddah with Saudi King Fahd and Defense Minister Prince Sultan.

Ramadan told the Kuwaiti News Agency that Iraq was coordinating with both Kuwait and Saudi Arabia because "of the growing Iranian threat to all three states."

Saudi petrodollar reserves vanish

Los Angeles Times

MANAMA, Bahrain — Saudi Arabia registered an unprecedented budget deficit of $16.7 billion in the March-December period of 1986 and is quickly approaching depletion of its once-vest petrodollar reserves, the authoritative newsletter Middle East Economic Survey reported Monday.

The Nicosia, Cyprus-based newsletter, quoting figures supplied by the Saudi Arabian Monetary Agency, the country's central bank, said the nine-month budget deficit was the highest ever admitted by Saudi authorities.

The newsletter said the agency figures project a deficit of $14.1 billion for the current calendar year, but the actual deficit might exceed the $21.1 billion deficit of 1986 due to unrealistic expectations for oil revenues and an officially projected 38 percent drop in foreign investment income.

The report estimated Saudi Arabia's liquid foreign assets at the end of June 1987 at $39.5 billion, down sharply from a 1982 peak of more than $100 billion.

The report said the figure included $8.5 billion in shares at the International Monetary Fund, and $2.1 billion in gold holdings — both of which are "essentially un-touchable" items for Saudi Arabia after the 1985 oil price crash.

The remainder of Saudi Arabia's liquid foreign reserves include $20 billion in U.S. holdings and $8.9 billion in other currencies, the report said.

"The Saudi government has, therefore, surprisingly little financial reserve left with which to face 1988," it added.

Qatar, meanwhile, was reported to have started offering its oil customers price discounts of up to 32 cents per barrel below the official prices of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The newsletter said the Qatari move, effective Oct. 1, was due to falling demand for Qatar petroleum resulting from continuing oversupply on the oil market.

Qatar has an OPEC quota of 299,000 barrels daily. OPEC's aggregate production is currently estimated at 19 million barrels per day because of violations by some member states of the cartel's self-imposed daily ceiling of 16.6 million barrels.

The newsletter said the October price formula was based on the spot market prices charged by Oman, a non-OPEC producer which is not officially committed to the organization's $18 benchmark price system.

It said this meant a price of $17.50 for Qatar's Dukhan crude (32 cents below the official price) and $17.45 for Qatar marine (22 cents below official).

LANE KIRKLAND Welcomes Teamsters back

Labor leaders smiling

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The AFL-CIO opened its biennial convention today with 1.5 million Teamsters back in its fold, and leaders vowed to use the reaffiliation to bolster union membership and renew organized labor as political and economic force.

To those who say we have lost clout ... perhaps we can be a little more convincing the next time around," federation President Lane Kirkland told the 900 union delegates here. "We're on the road again to a resurgent labor movement."

Kirkland called the Justice Department's proposed suit to take over the Teamsters on allegations that its leaders have shown a pattern of corruption "a contrived theory of collective guilt" and suggested the AFL-CIO might file a formal complaint against the government with the United Nations International Labor Organization if the case is pursued.

Without the reaffiliation of the Teamsters, membership in the AFL-CIO's 83 unions would be down by 407,000, to 12.7 million workers, from where it stood two years ago.

The reaffiliation, effective Nov. 1, was approved by the federation's 35-member executive council Saturday, 30 years to the date after the Teamsters were expelled from the AFL-CIO in the midst of allegations of corruption among their leaders.

Teamsters President Jackie Presser, awaiting trial on federal charges of embezzlement in an alleged payroll-padding scheme at a Cleveland union local he heads, is scheduled to address the convention at its close on Thursday.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, who conferred by telephone with Presser after Saturday's vote, called the Teamsters' reaffiliation "a process of pursuing solidarity and bringing into one house all of labor's children."

He also said he doubts it would have occurred without the U.S. Justice Department's threat of a civil lawsuit to place Presser's union under the control of a government-appointed trustee on a claim that it has shown a pattern of labor racketeering during the past 13 years.

Other AFL-CIO union leaders called the government's proposed lawsuit a threat to all unions, and defended the reaffiliation as the only logical response.

"The entire labor movement is under siege from all sides," said Wayne Glenn, president of the United Paper Workers Union. "And frankly, we're tired of it. There's a growing mood to fight back."

The Teamsters were one of three unions expelled from the AFL-CIO in 1957 after a federation committee labeled them as being dominated or heavily influenced by corrupt figures.

Their reaffiliation boosts the federation's membership, which had eroded by 10 percent since 1975 to an all-time high 14.3 million.

Moderate quake hits off Baja coast

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A moderate earthquake centered about 100 miles south of San Diego shook the ocean floor Monday afternoon, officials at the California Institute of Technology reported.

The quake, measuring 4.2 on the Richter scale, was centered off the coast of Baja California, Mexico, about 4:55 p.m., said CalTech spokesman Robert Finn.

Finn said it was difficult to immediately pinpoint the quake's exact location.

"It's very hard to say with undersea quakes, because some of them aren't even marked," he said.

Finn said it wasn't immediately known if the tremor was felt on the coast. However, there were no reports of damage and no calls from boaters in the area, he said.

Air Force cheers launching of Titan bearing spy satellite

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Air Force Monday successfully launched a Titan 34-D rocket, ending an 18-month grounding of the nation's most powerful unmanned launch vehicle.

It carried a classified military payload believed to be an "eye-in-the-sky" satellite crucial to monitoring crises and verifying Soviet arms control activities.

The launch, delayed several times in recent weeks, appears to end a period in which major U.S. launch systems have been grounded following spectacular launch failures, including the January 1986 destruction of the Challenger space shuttle. Among other things, the grounding left the nation dependent for a variety of national security functions on military satellites already in orbit, including some old ones.

"This launch has tremendous significance for the nation's space program," said Air Force Secretary Edward C. "Fete" Aldridge, Jr., in a post-launch statement. "Not only does it restore the Air Force's ability to place large national security satellites in orbit, he said, "It also reopens all of our current expendable launch vehicle paths to space. ... Our nation's fleet of expendable boosters, Scout, Atlas, Delta and Titan 34D are now operational again."

The Titan thundered skyward following a secret countdown at 2:32 p.m. MST from a pad at Vandenberg Air Force Base on the Pacific coast northwest of Los Angeles.

Officials do not comment on classified payloads. However, space experts said Monday's most likely was the last model of an Air Force-Central Intelligence Agency KH-11 strategic reconnaissance satellite — with a price tag of $500 million to $700 million. Its instruments can take finely detailed photographs of Earth.

If Monday's payload is the KH-11, "it will reduce the pressure on the shuttle to resume launches," according to John Pike of the Federation of American Scientists.

There are supposed to be two such satellites in orbit around the Earth's poles. But because a Titan launch failure destroyed one, experts said, there is only one aloft and that one reaches the end of its normal three-year "life expectancy" early next year.

EPA announces plans to complete Love Canal cleanup

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency announced plans Monday to complete the $200 million cleanup of Love Canal, 10 years after hazardous wastes surfacing in the basements of the upstate New York community first dramatized the human costs of industrial pollution.

Assistant EPA Administrator J. Winston Porter said the final stage of cleanup, in which 35,000 cubic yards of the toxic chemical dioxin will be dredged from creeks and sewers and incinerated, is "consistent" with the goal of rehabilitating the 10-block area in Niagara Falls once populated by 900 families.

But Porter said that despite years of efforts to contain, pump out and treat the underground pollution, it is still too early to determine whether this last remedial phase will "sufficiently detoxify" Love Canal.

tests will be taken next year to determine the extent of contamination.

"The issue is whether the dioxin is so ubiquitous that you just can't live there," said Porter, noting that Love Canal was developed in the 1950s next to a landfill in which the former Hooker Chemicals & Plastics Corp. dumped 21,000 tons of toxic waste from 1942 to 1953, according to the EPA.

Free agency befoils NBA contract talks

By BILL BARNAKD
The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — There appears to be no end to labor strife in sports.

Although the NBA's position on free agency might bring a shudder to NFL owners, and NBA players currently have no plans to join their football brethren on the picket line, different attitudes don't add up to success for pro basketball's contract negotiators.

Pro basketball

The two sides are as stalemated as they were four months ago when they jointly agreed to a contract signing moratorium so they could concentrate on a new collective bargaining agreement.

At our last meeting two weeks ago, we acknowledged that we understood each other's position," said Russ Granik, the NBA vice president and chief labor negotiator. "It's frustrating that there's respect for the other side, but that hasn't helped bring about an agreement."

While the NFL has been adamant that free-agency would destroy professional football, Granik is ready to cut back on the free-agent restrictions that already are much looser than the NFL's.

"We've made three proposals, all aimed at the players' specific goals on free agency," Granik said. "We're willing to loosen up to make sure players are treated fairly."

But, NBA Players Association general counsel Larry Fleisher, a fiery free-enterprise advocate who believes any restriction on free movement is "essentially un-American," isn't buying the NBA proposals.

"Their proposals would be of some help, but it doesn't do away with the major problem, that not enough offers are made to free agents," Fleisher said.

Fleisher points to the more than 90 free agents who got no offers from other teams before last season as desire to keep the player, often squeezing a trade out of the team that signed the free agent.

Granik said the NBA is offering to require teams to make a qualifying offer at some percentage of the original contract. If such an offer is not made by a specified date, sometime in July, the team would lose its right of first refusal.

Fleisher agreed that this proposal would help a player such as New Jersey guard Otis Birdsong, whose last contract paid him nearly $1 million a year, but whose value has clearly diminished.

Birdsong received no offers from other teams when his contract expired and he had little choice but to remain with the Nets at whatever salary they offered.

Under Granik's proposed modification, the Nets would be unlikely to make an offer approaching his previous contract, so Birdsong would be free to make the best deal he could with his new team having to out-manuever the Nets to get him.

Granik's other proposed modifications — of free-agent restrictions — include a team matching an offer to keep that free agent for one year and preventing a team from receiving compensation in exchange for waiving the right of first refusal — Fleisher called "cosmetic."

"The reality is that most offer sheets already contain no-trade provisions," Fleisher said.

Thomas Grantham, the players' executive director, said the free-agent modifications do "nothing to create incentives to develop this free agent system. When you talk to players who have experienced right of first refusal, you realize that such modifications have no chance of working."

Both sides bring an attitude of "Try it our way and let's see how it works" to the bargaining table.

"Maybe we were naive to believe they would live up to what they signed," Fleisher said. "But they didn't... This time we'll make sure that doesn't happen."

"Teams in small markets are afraid they won't be able to keep their good players if there's unrestricted free agency," Granik said. "They're afraid everyone will want to go to the big media markets in New York and Los Angeles and Chicago."

"Fleisher says that's not going to happen, but he can't be sure. He says, 'Let's try and find out.' But we don't want to gamble that way."

Granik said that the owners in the large markets also support the current system "because they realize that in the long run unrestricted free agency would not be good for the league as a whole."

The NBA filed an antitrust suit last week challenging the draft, the right of first refusal and the salary cap that was part of the last collective bargaining agreement in 1985.

Both sides said that the suit does not mean that the NBA labor issues will not have to be resolved at the bargaining table.

"If the court rules in our favor, we still would need a negotiated agreement," Fleisher said, "but there also could be damages involved."

"No matter who wins the lawsuit, we still will have to negotiate," Granik said. "That doesn't determine whether business is open and the players are working or not. It will have to be settled at the bargaining table one way or the other."

With the NBA season opening Nov. 6 and training camps already started, Fleisher said he is not thinking about setting a strike date, but he warned the owners against trying to field teams without the regular players.

"It would be a terrible tragedy if there was a strike and the NBA tried to replace the regulars," Fleisher said.

Granik said if a strike comes, replacement games "would be discussed, but we haven't discussed it yet. There are a whole bunch of factors that would go into making that decision. It's kind of premature, but if the union set a strike deadline, you have to look at your options."

...evidence, that the right-of-first-refusal system doesn't work.

Under that system, a free agent can sign with any team with no compensation to his original club. However, that original team has the right to match the free-agent offer and retain the player.

Granik acknowledges that the players aren't always treated fairly under this system.

"Too often, the original team does not offer a new contract to a free agent, leaving him no leverage to shop himself in a free market. Other teams usually don't bother to make an offer high enough to prevent the original team from matching it.

Lakers' starting payroll: $6.3 million

By GORDON EDES
Los Angeles Times

The Los Angeles Lakers' place in history is yet to be determined — repeating as champions, of course, would strengthen their claim as perhaps the greatest team ever — but there is no question where they rank on the all-time payroll. Numero uno.

When the Lakers open the National Basketball Association regular season at the Forum Nov. 6 against the Seattle SuperSonics, Coach Pat Riley will send out a starting five worth $6.3 million, assuming that everyone is healthy.

Magic Johnson, voted the league's Most Valuable Player last season, checks in at a team-high $2.5 million. Team captain Kareem Abdul-Jabbar is next at $2 million, with a $1 million raise already promised for next season. Forward James Worthy, who last summer signed a 7-year, $10.9 million contract extension, will be making $1 million this season. Byron Scott, who signed a new contract on the eve of training camp, will be paid $600,000, and forward A.C. Green, in the third year of a four-year deal he signed as a rookie — comes in as low man at $200,000.

There is plenty of well-heeled talent on the bench, too, starting with backup center Mychal Thompson at $712,000. Thompson is in the second year of a five-year deal that tops out next season at $800,000.

Michael Cooper, the league's Defensive Player of the Year, is in the second year of a contract that will pay him $612,500 this season, and Kurt Rambis — the subject of trade rumors as well as speculation that he may not be protected in next season's expansion draft — will make $525,000 in the last year of a three-year contract.

On the far end of the bench, backup guard Wes Matthews is making $125,000, and Mike Smrek and Adrian Branch are making somewhere around the NBA minimum, which is $75,000. Billy Thompson, expected to begin the season on the injured list, is making $230,000 this season, including a signing bonus in the middle year of a three-year deal. Newcomers Jeff Lamp and Milt Wagner, should they make the team, would both be making minimum.

Total Laker player-payroll: an estimated $8,650,000.

John MacLeod was fired as Phoenix coach last season before the Suns' drug scandal erupted, but he can be excused for feeling snake-bitten in his first month as coach of the Dallas Mavericks after former Roy Tarpley went public with his drug problems.

Tarpley, a member of the NBA's all-rookie team last season, is receiving treatment under the league's anti-drug program after spending six weeks last summer in a substance abuse program.

Maverick owner Donald Carter has been supportive of his 7-footer.

"Roy felt he was bringing disgrace on us," Carter said. "He's not. If it was one of my kids, I'd feel the same way. You don't like it, but you'd survive rather than kill it and solve it. And you can't strike it halfway. That's what can happen if you don't come out with it."

Injury of the week: Phoenix forward Larry Nance will be out a month after breaking the ring finger on his right hand. Nance suffered the injury when he struck his hand on the rim while trying to dunk.

There for the taking: Utah's Kelly Tripucka, one year after being acquired from the Detroit Pistons for Adrian Dantley, doesn't fit into Jazz plans.

Tripuca, 28, averaged only 23 minutes a game last season, one reason his scoring average was cut in half, to 10.5 points a game.

Tripuca's salary may make it hard for the Jazz to move him. He's making about $900,000 a year. Still, there was a report that Houston might be interested in getting him for Robert Reid and Steve Harris.

The only team that shot worse than the Los Angeles Clippers in the Washington Bullets, who made only 45.4 percent of their shots. That is a major reason that they signed former scoring champion Bernard King to a $2 million-plus, 2-year offer sheet even though the New York Knicks' small forward has played six games since tearing up his knee in 1986.

Bullets' accuracy may not be helped much by No. 1 draft choice Mugsy Bogues. The 5-3 guard went one for 13 from the floor in his first two exhibitions.

Add Bogues: Laker Coach Riley, after the Lakers got the first look at the league's smallest player, "Little son of a gun. He's great. Before the game we talked about how to defend him and in the second quarter 'we couldn't stop him, anyway. He just took over and rolled through us. He opened up the whole game for them."

Twins

eight postseason victories, including all four World Series triumphs. More than 2 million fans, a club record, attended Twins games in 1987.

Meanwhile, the Twins were on 20-62 on the road, the worst record ever for a first-place finisher.

"We appreciate the fans and their support. They've been great and we love them," Kelly said. "But it's the boys on the field that get the job done, not the fans. The boys are the ones that have to perform, to pitch, to hit, to field."

The boys on the field had a most interesting season.

For all intents and purposes, it began Sept. 12, 1986, when the Twins named Kelly interim manager to close out a 71-91 season. During the offseason, Pohlad turned over total control to Andy MacPhail, whose first official duty was persuading Pohlad to hire Kelly for 1987. MacPhail, 34, is the youngest top executive in the majors; Kelly, 37, is the majors' youngest manager.

On Dec. 16, MacPhail decided not to sign right-hander Jack Morris, the winningest pitcher of the 1980s who had offered to sign with the Twins as a $2 million free agent. When MacPhail said, "Hi, the road, Jack," he instantly became the least popular person in Minnesota.

"I'm going to be a household word like toilet," MacPhail said at the time.

Undaunted, MacPhail began the task of rebuilding a team that last won the AL West in 1970, the AL pennant in 1985 and the World Series in 1924, when the team was known as the Washington Senators. In the next several months, he acquired pitchers Juan Berenguer, Joe Niekro, Steve Carlton and Dan Schatzeder, infielder Al Newman, catcher Tom Nieto and Sal Butera, designated hitter Don Baylor and outfielder Dan Gladden. His most significant deal was made Feb. 3, when he got reliever Jeff Reardon.

"Reardon" made us instant contenders," MacPhail said. "This club was beaten psychologically last year, when so many legends were blown in the late innings. Reardon saved 31 games and, more importantly, gave this team confidence."

Playing in the weakest division in the major, the Twins were never more than five games out of first place. A seven-game winning streak from June 6-12 put the Twins in first, and they were never more than percentage points out again.

On Aug. 30, Puckett, the stumpy center fielder who sparked the Twins all year, went 6-for-6 with two homers and four RBI — capping a two-game spree in which he was 10-for-11 with four homers and six RBI — and the Twins were alone in first for good. They finished 86-77, two games ahead of Kansas City.

Although the Twins will be remembered as baseball's best home club, the games in which they won both the AL West and the AL pennant were played on the road.

"Whenever this team had to play what we felt was a must-win game, at home or on the road, this club performed well," Roy Smalley said.

The top performers included:

— Puckett, who batted .332 with 28 homers and 91 RBI and who made several home-rocketing catches. His 4-for-4, four-run effort helped the Twins rally from a 5-2 deficit in Game 6 of the World Series.

— Gaetti, who batted .267 with 31 homers and 109 RBI and established himself as perhaps the best defensive third baseman in baseball. He batted .300 with two homers and five RBI in the playoffs.

— Hrbeck, the first baseman who batted .285 with 34 homers and 90 RBI. He hit a grand slam in World Series Game 6 that just about took the roof off the Metrodome.

— Brunansky, the right fielder who batted .259 with 32 homers and 85 RBI. He batted .412 with two homers and nine RBI in the playoffs.

— Viola, the left-hander who was 17-10 with a 2.90 ERA and won three postseason games.

— Gagne, who had a 47-game errorless string at shortstop and drove in the Series-winning run.

— Gladden, who stole 26 bases and provided the Twins with the leadoff batter they had been seeking. He hit safely in all seven Series games, driving in five runs in Game 1.

— Reardon, a factor in almost every big game.

— Bert Blyleven, the 36-year-old right-hander who was 15-12 and then won three postseason contests, including the playoff clincher.

"A few players on this team will get national notoriety that they would have never gotten otherwise because we play in Minnesota," Smalley said.

Johnson ends his holdout with Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — Vinnie Johnson ended his holdout with the Detroit Pistons just in time for the NBA exhibition game at Madison Square Garden by signing a multiyear agreement, General Manager Jack McCloskey said Monday.

"I'm delighted to have Vinnie back," McCloskey said. "He has always been one of my favorites, and he's such an integral part of the club."

The 6-foot-2 star guard will earn an average of $850,000 per season during the life of the three-year agreement and will have an option on a fourth year, according to reports in the Detroit Free Press.

The Pistons play the Phoenix Suns in New York Tuesday night.

Johnson, 31, averaged 15.7 points per game last season.

"We need Ho (Johnson)," Thomas said. "The whole team was worried about him not being in camp."

McCloskey and Johnson's agent, Lance Luchnick, had been negotiating since Oct. 6, the day the NBA's signing moratorium ended. The turning point may have come Friday when McCloskey and Luchnick met face-to-face in Luchnick's office in Houston, the Free Press reported Monday.

The pair met again Saturday afternoon in San Antonio before the Pistons' exhibition game against the Spurs. The deal was sealed late Saturday night.

Briefly in Sports

Rules meeting tonight

TWIN FALLS — A rules meeting for high school wrestling coaches and officials is scheduled for tonight at O'Leary Junior High School.

According to District 4 wrestling commissioner Ed Peterson, the purpose of the 7 p.m. session will be to review rules and rule changes for the upcoming season.

Officials and coaches should attend the meeting.

CSI netters win again

NAMPA — The College of Southern Idaho's volleyball team ran its season record to 24-11 here Monday by defeating Northwest Nazarene College in a non-conference match.

The Eagles prevailed 8-15, 15-9, 15-4, 15-7 behind the play of Sandy Rowland and Kelly Plaster.

CSI will travel to Coeur d'Alene Friday for a crucial northern division Region 18 matchup with North Idaho College. If CSI wins that match, it will advance to the Region 18 tournament next month. If NIC wins, a second match will be played later on a neutral site to determine which team goes to regionals.

Ricks College has already clinched the No. 1 spot to the four-team tournament from the northern region.

Fight tickets available

TWIN FALLS — Tickets are available for the Blue Lakes Country Club's closed circuit broadcast of the middleweight championship fight Thursday night between Thomas Hearns and Juan Roldan.

The card also includes the IBF light heavyweight championship fight between Bobby Czyz and Charles Williams.

Saturday Idaho-Weber game should decide BSC

By The Associated Press

Weber State College has forged a winning pattern on the haphazard records of other Big Sky Conference teams this season after routing Montana 29-28 in conference action Saturday in Missoula.

make them and we had the plays and didn't make them."

In other conference action, Idaho State beat Boise State 35-32 and Idaho defeated Eastern Washington 31-24.

Idaho maintained its place just under Weber State as sole possession of second-place with 4-1 and 8-2 Eastern Washington is 2-3 and 4-4.

Idaho's defensive attack led to 10 unanswered points in the third quarter and ended its 16-play 63-yard drive during the fourth quarter when quarterback John Fries hit tight end Chris Slater for a 57-yard touchdown.

The win leaves Idaho undefeated against home state teams this season. Boise State suffered a disappointing homecoming loss to Idaho State after a spectacular 86-yard kickoff return by Idaho State's Frank Selto with 1:48 left in the game.

Selto's return came minutes after the Broncos' Ty Ogata had put Boise State ahead 92-28 with 2:41 remaining.

It was the second-straight loss for Boise State and the Broncos' first loss at home this season. Boise State fell to 2-3 and 4-3, effectively ending playoff aspirations.

Northern Arizona sophomore quarterback Greg Wyatt was instrumental in his team's 54-21 win over Montana State after tying a school record by throwing five touchdown passes, four going to junior tight end Shawn Collins.

The win leaves Northern Arizona at 3-2 and 5-2 and keeps it in contention in the conference. Montana State has yet to win a conference game this season.

"We took a big giant step backward as a football team. Northern Arizona is an excellent football team, and when you give them a short field to work on, they're going to hurt you," said Montana State coach Earlie Solomonson.

"We took the main part of their offense away from them with a staunch defensive effort keyed by middle linebackers Don Ott and Eric Vance, said Northern Arizona coach Larry Kentera.

The loss leaves the error-prone Montana State at 5-0 and 7-1 this season.

Stephen F. Austin walk-on freshman David Jones set the school record for his 3-for-4 field goal performance. His last 45-yard goal lifted the team to victory.

ISU's Whitmer named Big Sky player of week

BOISE (AP) — Idaho State quarterback Jason Whitmer, Northern Arizona quarterback Greg Wyatt and Lumberjack defensive back Erik Vance have been named the Big Sky Conference offensive and defensive football players of the week, league commissioner Ron Stephenson announced.

Whitmer and Wyatt share the honor on offense this week, and Vance wins the award on defense.

Whitmer, a 6-foot, 1-inch, 195-pound freshman, helped spark Idaho State to a 38-32 upset road win against Boise State. He completed 22-of-34 passes for 382 yards and four touchdowns passes of 67 yards, two for 13 yards and another for five yards.

Wyatt, a 6-3, 200-pound sophomore, led Northern Arizona to a 54-21 victory over Montana State. He completed a Big Sky season best 18-of-21 passes for 303 yards and five touchdowns in three quarters.

Others nominated for the weekly award included Boise State runningback Chris Jackson, Eastern Washington flanker Jamie Buzelli, Idaho runningback Todd Hoines, Montana runningback John Huesita and Weber State wide receiver Wade Orton and quarterback Jeff Carlson.

Vance, a 6-1, 230-pound junior linebacker had 14 tackles, including two sacks and a safety as Northern Arizona dominated Montana State. He was credited with six unassisted tackles and recovered a fumble and intercepted a pass to set up two touchdowns.

Others nominated for the weekly award included Eastern Washington cornerback Quintin Blythe, Idaho linebacker Jerry Medved, Idaho State cornerback Tony Boland, Montana inside linebacker Mike Rankin, Nevada-Reno strong safety Mike Brown and Weber State linebacker Joe Long.

College football

"We are thinking championship," quarterback Jeff Carlson said. "That's what our goal is and we just keep pushing toward it. All these games that are tough are just making us better for that championship drive."

"We've still got a long way to go, but that's real and that's our goal," he said. "No dreaming about it."

Montana dropped to 2-3 and 3-4, likely dashing the Grizzlies' hopes for playoff competition.

The Wildcats scored the winning touchdown when Carlson hit wide receiver Wade Orton with a 36-yard touchdown pass with 3:20 left in the game.

It was the last of three long-yardage touchdowns passes for Carlson Saturday. He hit on 22 of 32 passes for 388 yards, the last one to Orton. One minute later, Weber stopped Montana on its fourth-and-three play at the Grizzlies' 48-yard line. The Wildcats then let the clock wind down.

"The big thing is that they (Weber State) rose to the occasion and came back," Montana coach Don Read said. "I just think they made some plays when they had to

Cleveland's defense manhandles Rams, 30-17

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Browns safety Felix Wright knows when the spotlight is on

In the Canadian Football League's championship game in 1984, Wright intercepted four passes for the Hamilton Tiger Cats. And in Cleveland's first post-strike game Monday night, he intercepted two passes, returning one for a touchdown to help the Browns beat the Los Angeles Rams 30-17.

"I think this gives me a little bit of respect nationwide," said Wright, who usually plays in the shadow of the Browns' talented cornerbacks, Hanford Dixon and Frank Minnifield.

"Hanford and Minnie deserve all they're due. They're all-pro ball players," Wright said. "Me, I'm just assigned to help those guys out. But this is my time to shine now."

Wright's interceptions helped the Browns, 4-2, to a 23-7 halftime lead, and Bernie Kosar then hit Brian Brennan with a 53-yard scoring pass on the second play of the second half for what seemed to be a comfortable 30-7 advantage.

The Rams, 1-5, who played most of the game with disgruntled half-

Dickerson agreed that the leg was bothering him, but he also said he would not want to start the Rams' next game.

"I don't feel like I'm a starter now. I have other things on my mind," Dickerson said.

White also was hurt in the game, injuring his wrist on one hand and a finger on the other. Robinson said both would be X-rayed.

Los Angeles paid dearly at least twice for benching Dickerson because of his salary complaints. In the first quarter, the Rams were unable to score after driving to a first-and-goal at the Cleveland 1-yard line, and in the fourth White was stopped on a fourth-and-1 play at the Cleveland 15.

Wright intercepted Jim Everett on third down to end the first-quarter Ram threat, taking a deflected pass 68 yards down the left sideline to set up the first of three Jeff Jaeger field goals.

Kevin Mack gave the Browns a 10-0 lead with a 16-yard touchdown run early in the second quarter, shaking off three tacklers on his way to the end zone, and Wright then stepped in front of Henry Ellard and picked off Everett's telegraphed pass for an easy 40-yard touchdown.

After Jaeger's 48-yard field goal made it 20-0, Dickerson ran 27 yards for the Rams' only first-half score.

Jaeger added a 41-yard field goal as the second half ended, but he missed a 47-yarder in the fourth quarter.

Dickerson finished with seven carries for 38 yards, all in the first half.

Robinson benched Dickerson at the start of the game because of the running back's complaints last week that his $680,000 annual salary was inadequate. Dickerson, replaced in the starting lineup by White, suggested that his concerns over his contract might prevent him from giving a 100 percent effort.

White, buoyed by two 150-yard-plus performances during the three games played while NFL regulars were on strike, was the NFL's second-leading rusher after five weeks with 330 yards on 75 carries. He added 54 yards on 13 rushes Monday night.

Kosar completed 19 of 30 passes for 223 yards with one interception and one touchdown. Everett hit 21 of 50 for 227 yards with three interceptions.

NFL owners likely to set 50-man roster

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — NFL owners will begin the task of regrouping from the 24-day strike when they meet Tuesday and Wednesday.

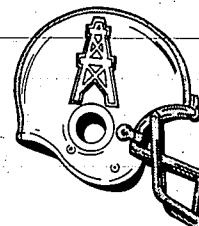

While the session is one regularly scheduled for the fall, the principal items of business will deal with the fallout from the strike, including a report on the antitrust suit filed against the league on the day players reported back without a contract.

The owners are also expected to approve what is expected to be a 50-man roster, 45 players active for each game with a five-man reserve list.

The owners also are expected to review the tiebreaker format, necessitated by the 15-game season.

Oilers' owner spurns Jacksonville offer to remain in Houston

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Houston Oilers owner Bud Adams spurned a lucrative offer from Jacksonville, Fla., and ended months of speculation and negotiations Monday by announcing he will keep his NFL team in Houston.

"This is my home," Adams said Monday. "I've been here 41 years. I could have gone to Jacksonville for a lot more money."

Jacksonville, starved for a professional football team, assembled a package that could have brought Adams more than $125 million over 10 years. Adams and his family toured the Florida city several weeks ago for a red-carpet visit that rivaled treatment given to a head of state.

But Adams said he was swayed after a Houston proposal that calls for construction of 72 luxury boxes at the Houston Astrodome to foster other renovations planned for the stadium, now the NFL's smallest with a capacity of 60,594.

The new 10-year deal to remain in Houston, where the Oilers have played since 1960, hinges on sale of 76 percent — or 54 of the boxes by Dec. 15, according to a letter of intent signed by Adams.

"I don't see any problem reaching that goal," said Don Jordan, chairman of the Greater Houston Chamber of Commerce. "We expect to get them all sold."

Officials said they already have commitments from 26 firms and individuals to purchase the boxes, which will be known as Columbia Suites. About 34 of the boxes will become available by next season with the remainder finished in time for the 1989 season.

The luxury boxes are among some $60 million in improvements to the Astrodome, which also will get an additional 10,000 seats and new artificial playing surfaces for baseball and football.

"It will continue to keep it No. 1 in dome stadiums throughout the country, there's no question about it," Harris County Judge Jon Lindsay said.

Adams, who refused to say how close he was to actually moving the team for Florida, said he could not compare the Jacksonville and Houston offers in terms of dollars.

"They were so much different," he said. "My family lives here and I'd like to continue to live here."

The Oilers and the Houston Sports Association, who own the baseball Houston Astros and operated the county-owned Astrodome, have been involved in a dispute about a new lease to replace the agreement which expires at the end of this season.

"Jacksonville was a very fine and great offer," Adams said. "But when we were able to work out the necessary changes in the lease with the HSA, we conceded this was the type of lease we could live with. This was enough for me to make the decision to be in Houston."

"It's been a very trying and traumatic last four or five months, to say the least," he added.

"We are obviously very pleased," Bob Harter, president of the Houston Sports Association said. "I can say now without fear of misinterpretation: 'Go Oilers!'"

Oilers and HSA officials met Sunday night to discuss a new Astrodome lease agreement after the Oilers' 37-3 victory over the Atlanta Falcons.

According to the proposed lease agreement, the Oilers will pay HSA 9.5 percent of their gross tickets receipts, without a cap on rent. The team currently pays 11.2 percent, officials say.

Nothing's really changed on the field since before strike

By DAVE GOLDBERG The Associated Press

Analysis

The real NFL players are back and for the most part in real NFL form — Jim McMahon coming off the bench to put one out for the Chicago Bears, the Seattle Seahawks and New York Giants playing like they were supposed to before the term "replacement football" was invented.

Sunday was a day, in fact, when just about everyone played like they hadn't been away for weeks.

From the Giants, Seahawks and Bears to the New Orleans Saints, Miami Dolphins and Cincinnati Bengals, who also demonstrated their pre-strike tendencies, what strike or not. Only San Diego, a 42-21 winner over Kansas City, picked up where its uncharged strike team left off — the 5-1 Bears are now off to their best start since 1968.

In East Rutherford, N.J., the Giants won their first game since the Super Bowl, routing St. Louis 30-7 in the first non-strike game ever at Giants Stadium for which the tickets weren't sold.

And they looked like the NFL champions, with Phil Simms nearly duplicating his 22-of-25 Super Bowl performance by completing 17-of-21 with three touchdown passes. They also looked like a team that can fulfill Coach Bill Parcells' wishes by winning their next nine — about what they will need to make the playoffs after the 0-5 start.

Those were the Super Bowl champions out there, said fullback Ron Wolfley of St. Louis. "Those are the same guys. They're chopped liver. That's not the expansion Jacksonville Bulls. Those guys can play."

So can McMahon, who has been out nearly a year — since last Nov. 23 — after surgery to repair a damaged shoulder.

The Chicago quarterback, who has won his last 23 starts, came on in relief of Mike Tomczak after four turnovers and two roughing the kicker penalties had helped Tampa Bay to a 20-0 lead over the Bears.

His performance was similar to the one he gave two years ago, coming off the bench in a come-from-behind win over Minnesota. He sent 17 of 24 for 198 yards and led Chicago 71 yards in six plays for the winning touchdown in the final 2:44, capping it with a 6-yard touch-down pass to Neal Anderson that gave Chicago a 27-20 victory.

"I'm not surprised at anything Jim McMahon does," said Coach

Mike Ditka, echoing a comment he made many times before.

The Seahawks, meanwhile, were looking just like the team that was the consensus preseason pick to represent the AFC in the Super Bowl, running off to a 28-0 halftime lead before being the Raiders 35-13. It was their first win in Los Angeles since 1983.

So dominating were the Seahawks and so flat were the Raiders, who look no different than last year's 8-8 team, that with three minutes to go in the half, Seattle had a 14-1 edge in first downs.

The Raiders also showed pre-strike form. Justly illgered demonstrated in the first half that he's not the answer to their quarterback problems and Marc Wilson, in second-half relief, showed his old tendency to throw interceptions, two to Kenny Easley and another one that Easley dropped.

Elsewhere, the form chart also looked the same.

The Bengals, who managed to blow a six-point lead with two seconds left in their last game before the strike, did it again. This time, they took a 20-10 lead over Pittsburgh, blew it, then couldn't get the field goal team onto the field when they reached the Steelers 18 with 10 seconds left in the game.

The Saints, who have never finished over .500, had a chance to tie San Francisco for the NFC West lead but lost 24-22 despite dominating the second half.

But they twice failed to score touchdowns from inside the San Francisco 10, got their only touchdown on a blocked punt, and had to settle for five field goals by Morten Andersen, who missed a 62-yarder that would have won the game as time ran out.

McMahon makes — well, a McMahon-like return to action with Chicago

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Anything else obviously wouldn't do for Jim McMahon, like coming into an ordinary situation under ordinary circumstances.

It seems that destiny decrees everything be eventful where McMahon is involved, and the Chicago Bears' quarterback lives and thrives on it.

Pro football

McMahon looked after another of his dramatic returns when he rallied the Chicago Bears to a 27-20 victory over Tampa Bay Sunday in his first appearance in a regular game in almost a year.

"I almost to be put into situations where I can win or lose a game," said McMahon. "I've seen more than 'I've lost. I'm comfortable with that feeling."

Coach Mike Ditka said he would have preferred that McMahon make his return under less strenuous circumstances. The Bears rallied throughout and were behind 20-14 before he got things rolling.

But Ditka did admit that the outcome was "good for McMahon and all the people who doubted his talents."

It also turned out to be an excellent test for McMahon physically. There were no aftereffects, no pain in the surgically repaired right shoulder that sent him to the sidelines last Nov. 23 and kept him on the injured reserve list this season until he was activated for Sunday's game.

But he was wheezing because of a chest cold and sipping hot coffee to open the pipes so he could speak.

"My little boy had it Friday and my wife and daughter also had it," said McMahon of the cold. "Now, I'm finally getting it."

Highsmith, Oilers reach agreement in principle

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys for the Houston Oilers and first-round draft choice Alonzo Highsmith continued talks Monday aimed at ending a court suit against the NFL and clearing the way for Highsmith to sign with the Oilers.

"Hopefully, they'll present it to the judge prior to the hearing, and our expectations are that the lawsuit will be dropped and the injunction will be lifted," Oilers General Manager Ladd Herzog said Monday.

But he was wheezing because of a chest cold and sipping hot coffee to open the pipes so he could speak.

It almost rivaled the 1985 game at Minnesota, when he was injured, but came off the bench to throw touchdown passes on his first two plays, turning a 17-9 deficit into a 33-24 victory.

"That one was bang-bang-bang," McMahon said. "This one took a little longer."

Bad calls should prompt instant replay use

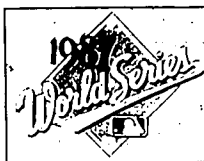

By ROSS NEWHAN
Los Angeles Times

The passion and tenacity which surfaced finally in Games 6 and 7 of the World Series should not be permitted to cloud its legacy.

Baseball

The most vivid recollections are those of noise, Homer Hankies and fire advertisements for Teflon. Which is not to say that the Series was without potentially meaningful impact.

The astonishing series of incorrect umpiring decisions in Game 7 should prompt Commissioner Peter Ueberroth to urge the use of instant replay during the playoffs and

Analysis

World Series. Seldom has a game been riddled with worse officiating. The Minnesota Twins had one run taken away from them and one run given them. The St. Louis Cardinals were deprived of a baserunner when the game was tied. The fact that St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog — hurt by Series umpiring for the second time in three years — chose not to make an issue out of it and the victorious Twins didn't care about anything except bathing in champagne doesn't diminish the potential for repetition, controversy and injustice.

Of four debatable calls in Game 7, instant replay clearly showed that the umpires were wrong on three of them. The fourth seemed inconclusive to the viewer, although most others in the press box felt the umpire had blown it, too.

A review: ● With two runners on and no outs in the Minnesota second, Kent Hrbek had a 2-and-0 count when third base umpire John McSherry of the National League ruled that Hrbek had broken his wrists on a half swing, making the count 2 and 1. The angered Hrbek eventually struck out.

The replay showed McSherry to be wrong, but that Hrbek had not swung through. Had the count gone to 3 and 0, putting Hrbek in an advantageous position to hit or walk, there is no telling how many runs the Twins would have scored, because there were two ensuing hits.

● The first of those hits was a single left by Tim Lincecum. Coach Rick Renick attempted to bring Don Baylor in from second. Home plate umpire Dave Phillips of the American League called Baylor out, believing that Vince Coleman's throw to catcher Steve Lake had beaten him. The replay showed that although the ball was there in time, Lake chose to go for the tag high and Baylor's left foot was across the plate before Lake made it.

● In the Minnesota fifth, Greg Gagne squibbed a grounder to the right of the mound, where first baseman Jim Lindeman fielded it. Pitcher Joe Magrane covered the base and took the throw from Lindeman in an awkward position. Most replay viewers saw that Magrane dragged his left foot across the base just ahead of Gagne, but umpire Lee Weyer of the National League called Gagne safe, and he ultimately scored the run that tied the game, 2-2.

● In the St. Louis sixth, with the score tied and one out, pitcher Frank Viola picked out Tom Herr off first on an aborted steal. A replay of the ensuing rundown showed Weyer blow the call. He failed to cite Hrbek for interfering with Herr's return to first and he then called Herr safe, although Herr had clearly reached the base ahead of the tag by Viola, who was in foul territory when he took a throw from second baseman Steve Lombardozzi.

Phillips and Weyer are respected umpires. They are human despite their occupation and subject to mistakes. Those who oppose replays as an umpiring adjunct, including the umpires union, cite the lack of enough cameras and angles, the delay that would be involved and the unnecessary cost considering that the umpire is right more than 90 percent of the time.

Those arguments have validity during the regular season, when it would be an expensive proposition to provide the required number of cameras.

In spite of themselves, Twins turned out to be a better team

By THOMAS BOSWELL
The Washington Post

MINNEAPOLIS — Now for hot stove hoven. Seldom has a World Series led to so many fiery questions in its wake. Get ready for a winter of debate, and screaming, too.

Analysis

How should we feel about the cheerful Twins, maybe the most unlikely team ever to win a Series? They jam our emotional gears when we think about them too long. How do we juxtapose all the valid points that exist in their world?

● No other champion ever won fewer than 90 games, not even in 164-game seasons. So, the 85-win Twins are, by one limited definition, the weakest Series winner ever. On the other hand, look who they beat in October — the Tigers and Cardinals, just to name a few. Perhaps just this time of year. Perhaps no defending division winner is so poorly suited to repeating over a full year as the Twins, but if they do get back to the party, they might be the best suited to repeat in postseason. A's, who won Series after their modest 93-94-90 win seasons.

Can't we just kick all the numbers out the door and enjoy this phenomenon? Who knocks a 91-game loser that rebounds so far in a year? Besides, Don Baylor and Roy Smalley get their rings, at last.

The Twin Cities will, of course, manage this 'Grin-And-Ignore-It' trick with ease. But millions of other fans are going to talk all winter about the Twins' 62-25 Metrodome record and their 31-56 road atrocity.

Is such a lopsided team a champion by any standard? Is the Metrodome somehow an unfair advantage? Do the Twins cheat at home as managers Bobby Valentine, Dick Williams and Whitey Herzog have hinted? And how on earth can the Twins get the extra home game when their foes have far better season records? That would be a scandal in the NFL, NBA or NHL.

Do we go with the flow and hunk our horns all night for the Twins and their marvelously civil fans? Or do we shake our heads and say, "How can a Series be so good, yet, somehow, a bumner, too?"

For that matter, how should we react to the St. Louis Cardinals who are, on one hand, a heroic team that took the '85 Series to a seventh game without Vince Coleman and Terry Pendleton. Twice, they've had to play Games 6 and 7 on the road despite having better season marks than their foes. How can we club a team that rallied from 0-2 against the Dodgers in a playoff, then came back from 2-3 against the Giants?

Isn't that hear, however, and we see to the St. Louis club that has now lost five straight match-point Series games and, in those defeats, averaged 1.8 runs. Twice, John Tudor has had a world title on his racket and gotten shellied.

So, stoke up the stove. First, I doubt the Twins cheat. What happens if the secret spills when some Twin gets traded? If some cities-it might be seen as a scandal. In Minnesota, it would tear the Twins in public for years. No, it can't happen here. Herzog and Tudor pulled back just in time for their prof-less hinting. They learned lessons from their bad conduct in 1985. Still, the old Cardinals paranoia isn't entirely dead. They did better this time. But not well.

On the field, the Cardinals remain the most under-valued team of the '80s. Think how close they've come to three world titles in six years. In the home of the homer, playing in the Year-dome against the slug-ging Twins, the worst homer team in baseball — playing without its two leading home run hitters — almost won this Series with a game to spare. Perhaps baseball's variety really is infinite.

At least the resourcefulness of the Cardinals is vast. Kent Hrbek weighs 100 pounds more than Curt Ford. Tom Brunanucky could carry Ozzie Smith like luggage. Gary Gaetti would love to use Tom Lawless for a bat. But baseball is only a game of might if you choose to play it that way. In this sport, there's an antidote for every poison, an answer to every style.

The Cardinals are surrounded by so many myths they overlap. For instance, it's not true that St. Louis has much home field edge. Since 1982 only two teams have shown so little difference in record at home and away (3 percent). This year, the Cardinals had the best road mark in baseball. Also, for 110 games, until Clark was hurt, the '87 Cardinals had the best offense in baseball in 30 years — on a pace for more than 900 runs. That's why you can subtract so much from their order and still have something left.

'We're not Twinkies anymore; we're the Twins'

By BEN WALKER
The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Put an asterisk next to this World Series, if you want.

Say the St. Louis Cardinals were crippled. Complain that Minnesota would never win the American League East. Or that the Twins played in a silly stadium.

Doesn't matter. Next April, when the Twins open the 1989 season at Yankee Stadium, there already will be a World Series championship banner hanging from the Teflon-coated roof at the Metrodome, and no one can take it down.

"It doesn't matter how we did it, as long as we did it," said third baseman Gary Gaetti, who fielded the final ball that clinched the Twins' first title.

Minnesota won Game 7 without any gimmicks. "No balls were lost in the roof, or bounced over fielders or went careening over the baggy right-field fence."

The Twins beat St. Louis 4-2 in one of the most exciting games of recent times, ending a World Series that sometimes was dull. But the final game of the season, played in doors on artificial turf, perhaps was the best of the year. It was filled with clutch hitting, good defense, close calls, collisions, tension and excitement, no matter how much purists might object.

The only thing missing, in the Year of the Home Run, was a home run. Maybe that will finally rid the building of its undesired and inaccurate "HomerDome" label.

Instead, it's the Deed-Dome or the Domination-Dome. Charged up by noise levels unheard anywhere else, the Twins went 62-25 there, by far the best home record in the majors.

Their 29-52 road record during the regular season was the worst among 16 teams. The Twins' overall mark of 85-77 was the poorest for any World Series champion.

Yet this was the season in which the AL team got four home games, and it came at the perfect time for the Twins.

They scored 39 runs and hit .329 in winning four games at home during the World Series, compared to .184 with five runs in three losses at St. Louis. This was the first World Series in which the home team won every game. Manager Tom Kelly, in his first full season, told his team from the first day of spring training to play hard and have fun. The Twins kept doing that, and had just enough left to come from behind in the final two games of the Series.

"I'm exhausted," right fielder Tom Brunanucky said, "when I get out on the field. Ozzie (Smith), 'Congratulations no matter what happens.' He looked as tired as me."

"I'm physically and mentally drained. There was a lot of pressure, but I didn't seem to feel it during the game."

Nor did the young Twins. The scored a run in the fifth inning for a 2-2 tie and went ahead for good in the sixth on Greg Gagne's infield single with the bases loaded and two outs.

Three walks brought up Gagne, who pulled a 3-2 fastball from Todd Worrell down the third-base line. Tom Lawless backhanded the ball to his knee, recovered and made a one-hop throw that first baseman Jim Lindeman caught with a full stretch, just after Gagne crossed the bag.

"I went to the bases right from the get-go," Gagne said. Lawless, playing in place of injured Terry Pendleton, said, "My only thought was to stop it and keep it from going to the outfield. If it's anybody else running, he's out. He gets out of the box, runs real well and beats it out."

Frank Viola, the MVP of the Series, kept the Cardinals in check and the Twins scored an insurance run in the eighth. Jeff Reardon, whom the Twins acquired in the off-season to protect leads — a major weakness in the past — pitched a perfect ninth and it was over.

Maybe the Twins are the best team in baseball this year, and maybe they aren't. And maybe they are just the hottest team right now that was best-equipped for a seven-game series.

By next year, there will be some changes. New lighting is planned for the Metrodome, and the age of enlightenment for the Twins might begin.

"We're not the Twinkies anymore," second baseman Steve Lombardozzi said. "We're the Twins. The Twins, the World Series champions."

How good are Cards with Clark?

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Twice in three years, the St. Louis Cardinals have had their wings clipped in the World Series. This time, they possibly shouldn't have been there at all.

Minnesota had to win all the head-to-head games that were going to happen to us this year. I'd have said we'd be lucky to get where we did, center fielder Willie McGee said following Sunday night's 4-2 loss to the Minnesota Twins in Game 7.

"But we just kept playing as hard as we could and doing our job every time," McGee said. "We had a lot of adversity, but sometimes that's how you form your character. I feel that in spite of getting beat, it may even make us better."

The team Minnesota defeated with its "Homer Dome Magic" was not to be mistaken for the offense that started the year for St. Louis.

Almost from the beginning, the Cardinals had the makings of a team that was star-crossed.

Catcher Tony Pena suffered a broken thumb on the season's third game. Nine days later, pitcher John Tudor sustained a broken leg. Other subsequent injuries, although less devastating, persisted.

"At one point in the season, I almost hated to check with (trainer) Gene Gieselmann to see who was hurt," Manager Whitey Herzog said.

"Fortunately, we got a lot of help from players we really hadn't counted on as the key us from falling apart. If we hadn't, we could have been buried by July. I'd say the last half of the year, we were just holding on."

ers who eventually wound up playing in the World Series. Catcher Steve Lake was part of the reason for St. Louis' strong start while filling in for the injured Pena. Versatile Jose Oquendo played all positions except catcher. Otherwise, or so it sometimes seemed, the Cardinals used Band-Aids to hold things together.

"We were just a bunch of guys who went out and took whatever hard knocks were dealt us and kept on going," shortstop Ozzie Smith said.

"One day it would be Steve Lake who would be picking up, another day it would be Jose Oquendo. A lot of guys contributed. The big thing is that we didn't let our troubles get us down."

St. Louis, fittingly, won its 15th NL pennant with the help of Oquendo's three-run homer in a 6-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Unsung Tom Lawless hit a three-run homer in Game 4 of the World Series, a 7-2 victory. But at the end, of course, the Cardinals came up short.

Pittsburgh G.M. wins front-office power struggle

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Syd Thrift signed a two-year contract Monday to continue as the Pittsburgh Pirates' general manager, just three days after pulling off a front-office power play that led to the resignation of former team President Malcolm MacPride.

During contract negotiations with Thrift, Prine demanded the right to approve all hirings, firings and trades. But after the Pirates' board of directors voted with Thrift last Friday and sided to rehire him without such restrictions, Prine quit, citing increasing animosity between him and Thrift.

"I'm sorry it turned out the way it did," Thrift said. "I'm just glad this is over with, and I can go back to being a real person. This whole thing has worn me out."

The new contract reportedly boosts Thrift's salary by $75,000 a year to $200,000 annually and gives him the final say on all baseball-related decisions.

LEGAL NOTICE

NOTICE OF IRRIGATION DISTRICT TAXES

In compliance with Title 43 Section 707 of the Idaho Code, as amended, each property owner owning land within the boundaries of the King Hill Irrigation District, or person or institution having interest therein, is hereby notified that the 1987 assessments of the District are now due and payable. You are also notified that, in compliance with the Idaho Code, payments for the first half of these taxes must be made on or before the 20th day of December 1987, and from that date to the 15th day of January 1988, the books will be closed for the acceptance and payment of the 1987 irrigation district taxes and that thereafter a 2% penalty will have been added to the amount due the first half and interest will be accrued at the rate of 1% per month, from the 15th day of January 1988 to the date of payment. The second half of the 1987 irrigation district taxes is the 20th day of June 1988. Thereafter, the books will be closed for payment of the 1987 tax, liens will be placed of record against the land; all taxes not paid by law will be added and payment of these will be required before any release of lien will be forwarded to the office of the County Recorder. Interest chargeable by law against both halves accrued from the first day of January 1988, and that opening hours of each day, Monday through Friday of each week excepting holidays. Each of you are also notified that, if you are the owner or the interested party in the land located within the boundaries of the King Hill Irrigation District, you are notified by the provisions of law, of the obligation to pay the assessments at the District for the year 1987. King Hill, Idaho September 10, 1987

Each of you is also hereby notified that the final payment date, without penalty and interest being added, for the second half of the 1987 irrigation district taxes is the 20th day of June 1988. Thereafter, the books will be closed for payment of the 1987 tax, liens will be placed of record against the land; all taxes not paid by law will be added and payment of these will be required before any release of lien will be forwarded to the office of the County Recorder.
