No question of ethics raised

Ginsburg owned stock while writing brief

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee Douglas H. Ginsburg had almost $140,000 invested in a cable-television corporation when he "personally handled" a Justice Department effort to have the court extend First Amendment protection to cable operators.

An administration source close to Ginsburg said Sunday that Ginsburg apparently did not raise the possibility of staying out of the case with Justice Department superiors or with agency ethics officers. He said Ginsburg discussed the situation with a subordinate.

The Supreme Court, on June 2, 1986, adopted Ginsburg's arguments in a decision that will reduce government regulation of cable operators.

"It is a First Amendment rights case that had economic consequences to it," said a former federal ethics official familiar with the cable case but not with Ginsburg's role in it. "If I'm holding cable stock, that is a good thing for me."

Ginsburg, nominated by President Reagan, to succeed retired Justice Lewis Powell on the court, apparently did not violate criminal conflict of interest laws because the company in which he invested was not a direct party to the case even though it could benefit from the ruling.

But ethics experts said Ginsburg's actions could be viewed as skirting a presidential executive order forbidding actions that create an appearance of a conflict of interest. Violation of that order carries administrative penalties, such as a letter of reprimand or suspension.

Ginsburg, through his informal spokesman W. Stephen Cannon, declined on Sunday to comment on his role in the cable case until he has an opportunity to review his records.

A former head of the Justice Department's antitrust division and now a U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals judge, Ginsburg, 41, is little known to the public and his professional performance is being scrutinized by the Senate Judiciary Committee in preparation for confirmation hearings.

Ginsburg was before the same committee a year ago, when he was nominated for the appeals court. A Democratic source on the committee said the panel did not notice then that he had worked on the cable case while he had a sizable investment in Rogers

Communications Inc. of Toronto.

Rogers has about 450,000 subscribers in Arizona, California, Minnesota, New Mexico, Oregon and Texas. The firm is about the 20th-largest cable operator in the United States, and with extensive Canadian franchises, it is the third- or fourth-largest in North America, according to company officials.

Ginsburg was assistant attorney general in charge of the antitrust division at the Justice Department when the Reagan administration filed a friend-of-the-court brief in the Los Angeles cable television case.

French arms sales investigated

Scandal emerges over Iranian deal

By JEFFREY ULBRICH Associated Press writer

PARIS — A scandal that some reports are calling the French Iran gate is brewing over the sale of munitions to Iran by a French arms manufacturer with the alleged complicity of high Defense Ministry officials. According to articles published over the weekend in the local press, an investigating magistrate in Paris is seeking to have a Defense Ministry report on the sales declassified so charges can be brought against several people. What is known as the "Luchaire Affair" involves the clandestine delivery of 450,000 artillery shells to Iran between 1983 and 1986 under the Socialist government of Premier Laurent Fabius. Reports in two weekly newspapers implicate high-ranking officials in the office of former Defense Minister Charles Hernu and say that even President Francois Mitterand knew about the sales, which contravened a government embargo on shipments to Iran.

In addition, a leftist newspaper reported Sunday in Beirut that the Paris government under Fabius tried unsuccessfully to negotiate with Iran for the release of French hostages in Lebanon in exchange for a $3 million ransom. As-Safir quoted unidentified diplomatic sources as saying France also agreed to provide Iran with 500,000 heavy artillery shells, "but the deal collapsed at the last minute." Six Frenchmen are among 22 foreigners missing in Lebanon and believed held hostage by pro-Iranian Shiite Muslim extremists.

In addition, Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite of Britain vanished in January while seeking the release of American hostages. A South Korean diplomat, Do Chae Sung, was released last week after 21 months in captivity, reportedly for a $1 million ransom. The Seoul government, however, has denied paying any money to win Do's release. The French press articles were based on a report titled "Confidential Defense" by Jean-Francois Barba, comptroller-general of the arms.

New suit filed against Gooding County

By ANNETTE GARY Times-News writer

GOODING — A second suit against Gooding County to recover debts of the county hospital appears inevitable. The county has transferred operation of the Gooding County Memorial Hospital to a newly formed hospital taxing district, but has agreed to retain the debt to give the district a fresh start. Earlier this fall the county unsuccessfully asked the court for permission to register warrants for a $385,000 debt that included a $150,000 note from First Security Bank. The debt remains on county books and Board of Commissioners Chairman Robert Thackeray says that he knows of no realistic way for the county to pay it off unless a suit is filed and a court-ordered equitable levy results. He says he sees no other option for creditors. Hospital officials are also talking as though a suit is inevitable and are making plans for the hospital district to join a suit against the county, if necessary. At the first meeting of the new hospital district board, board members advised Assistant Administrator Linda Rodriguez to pay the bills incurred under the old administration if creditors are likely to stop services unless they are paid. If need be, the district will then sue the county to recover the money used to pay off the debts that the county had agreed to retain, says hospital district attorney Rita Berry. The board also discussed advising creditors asking for overdue payments for hospital supplies and services to contact First Security Bank about joining a suit. Bank Manager Gary Phelps says that the bank has already received letters from creditors asking to be included in a suit against the county. However, the banks note came due only Oct. 15 and no suit has been filed, he says. To date, the bank has only notified the county that the debt is due, he says. Rumors of a suit are "premature," but the bank has not ruled out the possibility of bringing a suit to recover its $150,000 loan, he says. The hospital district has acquired its own $60,000 line of credit from Mountain State Savings Bank to

Conservative reign in China comes to end

The Associated Press

BEIJING — Top leader Deng Xiaoping resigned in triumph Sunday from the Communist Party's governing body, leaving younger officials to carry on his drive to shake up the stagnant bureaucracy and replace dogma with production. The 83-year-old Deng left, as he had promised, at the end of a party congress that affirmed his policies and forced into retirement all the leading conservatives who had sought to slow his reforms.

The congress appointed a younger, streamlined party Central Committee that is expected Monday to confirm Deng's protégé, premier Zhao Ziyang, as party general secretary. It also is expected to keep Deng on as head of the party's key Central Military Commission, from which he likely will exert considerable influence on party decisions. The congress amended the party constitution so Deng can remain on the commission even though he resigned from the Central Committee.

Foreign reporters allowed into the final 20 minutes of the eight-day 13th National Party Congress at the Great Hall of the People saw Deng watch serenely as nearly 2,000 delegates raised their hands in unanimous approval of a report that summarized and defended his reform policies.

Conspicuously absent from the dis was 82-year-old Chen Yun, a conservative economist and leading proponent of the central planning system. Deng has begun to smother a party official said the calling Chen left earlier in the three-hour session, but a television report did not mention him as attending. Reporters were not allowed to witness voting on the new 176-member Central Committee, from which nearly half of the outgoing committee's 209 members were dropped. Five leading conservatives who

BEIJING — Deng Xiaoping can be excused if he revels a bit in the just-concluded Communist Party Congress. The 83-year-old leader pushed his own retirement through the west coast congress to force by example the exit of aging conservatives and allow his reform-minded protégés to consolidate power. But the scope of his victory became apparent only Sunday, when the new party Central Committee was announced. Not only was his name missing, but so were those of all his main foes, who resisted the pace of his innovations. While Deng is likely to enjoy his voluntary retirement by watching his protégé Zhao Ziyang run the party and by wielding influence from behind the scenes, his conservative nesses may be limited to sulking and dreaming about what might have been. In the months leading up to the congress, the first in five years, there were indications conservatives continued to exert considerable influence and could yet upend Deng's plans to decentralize the economy, open up to the outside world and reduce party power to run state enterprises.

When students took to the streets in December and January to press for democracy, it was party chief Hu Yaobang, another Deng protégé, who took the fall. Conservatives waged a campaign against "bourgeois liberalization" — the favoring of Westernization and capitalism

Carlucci: Senate to ratify accord

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — National security adviser Frank C. Carlucci said Sunday that a U.S.-Soviet accord on intermediate-range nuclear missiles is "98 percent of the way there" and predicted Senate ratification. However, a leading Senate Democrat warned that the superpower pact could be doomed if conservative Republicans tamper with it by attaching amendments on issues like the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan. "I do think that there could be problems," said Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the Senate Democratic whip who is also a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the Select Committee on Intelligence. "There are 15-20 very conservative Republican senators who I think are very likely to take on the treaty directly, and I think there are others who might take it on by inaction.... They

Gorbachev may use summit to criticize SDI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev appears to have made his opposition to "Star Wars" before the December summit but that doesn't mean he won't use the White House meeting as a bully pulpit for his criticism.

President Reagan and Gorbachev are due to sit down on Dec. 7 and sign a treaty eliminating intermediate nuclear forces (INF). And they will continue talks to cut long-range arsenals by 60 percent under a Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty (START).

Moreover, they hope to sign a START pact in Moscow during the first half of 1988.

Despite the optimism of the moment, the chances of signing a START pact at a Moscow summit seem slim. As Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas said Sunday, Americans "shouldn't get carried away with that."

The best is on for an historic deal, however, and it will get better.

Gorbachev wants a deal because it would allow him to divert money from the military to the faltering civilian economy. At the same time, he appears to be under severe pressure at home to curb Star Wars, known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative, or SDI.

Reagan wants to prove that the costly military build-up he began seven years ago made it possible to negotiate an agreement to cut strategic nuclear arsenals, rather than to simply limit them, as previous agreements have done.

And next year, he may be under pressure from fellow Republicans to stage another summit to help the party hold onto the White House.

A similar pattern was at work in the first two Reagan-Gorbachev summits, in Geneva in 1985 and Reykjavik, Iceland, last year. Gorbachev used both summits for strong attacks on Star Wars, attacks that probably helped weaken U.S. domestic support for the program.

Gorbachev's hand-picked foreign minister, Eduard Shevardnadze, all but ruled out a Moscow summit early next year if there is no START deal. And he said no deal was possible unless both sides agree to observe this 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty, which severely limits the development of space-based defenses such as those envisioned for SDI.

Asked point-blank whether Reagan could go to Moscow without a START deal, Shevardnadze told reporters last Friday: "We have to prepare a basis for a meaningful visit. And the main result of that visit, and we understand that the U.S. administration agrees, would be the signing of the treaty at a 60 percent reduction of strategic nuclear arms."

That's virtually the same formula Gorbachev used to duck the promise he made in Geneva to visit Washington during 1986.

Frank Carlucci, the White House national security adviser, sounded upbeat on Sunday, saying the Soviets "are now talking about strategic stability. They are no longer talking about killing SDI."

"Strategic stability and predictability are concepts that we can work with," Carlucci said on the NBC-TV program, "Meet the Press."

Reagan's return after services

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and his wife Nancy returned to the White House on Sunday after attending memorial services in Arizona for the first lady's mother, Edith Luckett Davis.

The first couple, both dressed in black, smiled and waved in response to applause from a small crowd gathered at the south entrance. An aide carrying an orchid bouquet followed the president and Mrs. Reagan into the residence.

On Saturday, the president addressed about 220 mourners at St. Thomas the Apostle Roman Catholic Church in Phoenix, Ariz., bringing his mother-in-law as one who "gave wit and charm and kindness throughout all her life."

Mrs. Davis, 91, died last Monday of a stroke as she slept.

Report: Ginsburg's wife performed abortions during medical training

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Justice Department spokesman has confirmed a report that Supreme Court nominee Douglas H. Ginsburg's wife performed abortions as part of her medical training but said it should have no bearing on the nominee's confirmation chances.

Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland said Dr. Hallee Perkins Morgan performed the abortions during her medical training at Beth Israel Hospital in Boston during her first year of residency in 1979-80. She agreed during her next year of training to assist with an particularly difficult abortion, but has performed none since then.

Eastland added Washington attorney W. Stephen Cannon, who is serving as Ginsburg's unofficial spokesman, also confirmed a report in Sunday's edition of the Wilmington (Del.) Sunday News Journal that Dr. Morgan had performed abortions.

Both Cannon and Eastland said Saturday night that they were unaware of Ginsburg's position on abortion.

Eastland said Dr. Morgan's medical experience was irrelevant to the nominee's qualifications for the Supreme Court and doubted it would become an issue as the Senate debates whether to confirm the Ginsburg nomination.

"I don't think it will, nor do I think it should," he said.

Let's bear in mind that the nominee is Doug Ginsburg, not Hallee Eastland said. "Certainly a professional woman can have her own view on a matter and one should distinguish those from the husband's."

And Dr. Morgan is currently a full-time mother and is not practicing medicine, Eastland said. He said he did not know if the doctor now opposes abortions, although he said that she, like a number of doctors who have performed abortions, from her own experience, became persuaded that she did not want to do that anymore.

Officials intrigued over evidence of apparent Moscow-Havana rift

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials say they are surprised and intrigued by a rare public airing of differences between Cuba and its principal ally, the Soviet Union, over Cuba's economic policies.

The two countries have been on intimate terms for most of the past two decades, and the differences generally have been subtle, discernable only to seasoned analysts.

American experts on Soviet-Cuban relations have long suspected that Moscow is displeased with Cuba's economic performance, and that impression was borne out by an article in late August in the Soviet "New Times" magazine.

The article, written by staff reporter Vladimir Chirkov, chides Cuba for excessive defense spending, non-employment of foreign debt; continued rationing of food, inadequate housing and other perceived deficiencies.

"Labor productivity is still very low in Cuba and this results in production capacities being underused," Chirkov wrote. "A third of all enterprises operate at a loss."

Although US criticism was expressed in moderate terms, several US officials, all of whom insisted on anonymity, voiced surprise that such an article could appear in a publication such as the "New Times," which is described as "fairly authoritative" and very influential.

Equally surprising to these analysts was the Cuban response, which appeared in a recent edition of the same publication. It was written by Cuban Vice-President Carlos Rafael Rodriguez and contained some unusually acid comments.

Referring to Cuba's public campaign to rectify past mistakes in economic policy, Rodriguez said "it never occurred to us that they could be used in the pages of 'New Times' as part of an analysis whose superficial and negative nature is to the detriment of objectivity."

He accuses Chirkov of a lack of balance and logic and said the writer had no business assailing Cuba's productivity levels in view of the Soviet's own difficulties in that area.

In the most developed socialist country (the Soviet Union), labor productivity in industry is lower than in such countries as Sweden, the United States, West Germany or Japan," Rodriguez said.

Organization opposed to Ginsburg

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — The NAACP's general counsel said Saturday the organization must oppose the Supreme Court nomination of Judge Douglas Ginsburg with the same intensity it did the nomination of Judge Robert Bork.

Grover Hankins told delegates to the state convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People Saturday night that gains made by blacks over the years are at stake.

President Reagan on Thursday nominated the 41-year-old Ginsburg, who sits on the same Washington, D.C., federal appeals bench as Bork, whose nomination to the nation's highest court was rejected by the Senate.

"This move by Reagan is an in-your-face, slam dunk on the Senate," said Hankins, a key spokesman for the nation's oldest and largest civil rights group.

"Let's work again, like we did last summer, and just say 'No' to Ginsburg," he told the applauding crowd.

The NAACP is a substantial political power, Hankins said. He said that even in New Mexico, which has a relatively small black population, the organization is strong with the help of coalitions with Hispanics.

"The issues are the same for all of us," Hankins said.

He said opposition to Ginsburg could be based on the relative lack of experience of a judge who has served only 14 months on the federal court of appeals.

Presidential hopeful escapes major injury

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Democratic presidential contender Bruce Babbitt and his son escaped serious injury but their car was destroyed when a motorist rear-ended the auto and it hit a car in front.

Babbitt, 49, suffered possible whiplash, said campaign spokesman Vada Manager. No one else in Saturday's three-car accident reported any injuries.

The former Arizona governor and his son Christopher, 12, were heading to play basketball at a hotel health club when a van with rain-soaked brakes collided with the rear of Babbitt's 1972 Buick LeSabre, Manager said.

Babbitt's car then hit a vehicle in front of it that contained an acquaintance, Phil Weeks, who also was going to the health club, Manager said.

Babbitt, a lawyer himself, called the "best lawyer in

Girl, 3, survives quadruple transplants

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Surgeons transplanted a liver, pancreas and part of a stomach and intestine Sunday into a 3-year-old girl who has never eaten solid food because of a deadly defect in her digestive system.

Doctors said that without the experimental surgery, Tabatha Foster of Madisonville, Ky., would have died within weeks.

The operation began at 10 p.m. Saturday and ended nearly 16 hours later at 12:45 p.m. Sunday, said Lynn McMahon, spokeswoman for Children's Hospital.

Tabatha was in the hospital's intensive-care unit in critical condition, which is normal following transplanted organs, said Rowe, who watched the operation and acted as spokesman for the eight surgeons who took part.

Ms. McMahon said earlier that Tabatha probably would remain unconscious Sunday and doctors would watch her closely for signs of rejection and to ensure that the organs were functioning properly.

Dr. Marc Rowe, the hospital's chief surgeon, said Sunday evening. "She looks good."

Surgeons removed Tabatha's spleen, an organ that acts as a blood filter and can trigger rejection of performed only twice, and the patients died, said Sue Cardillo, another hospital spokeswoman.

There are risks involved technically in terms of making the connections with the transplanted organs to the recipients and there are dangers associated with rejection," Ms. McMahon said. "Since this procedure hasn't been done many times before, physicians themselves aren't sure what all the risks might be."

Kansas City ad blitz kicks off anti-porn drive

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The Reagan administration will step up the battle against "the horrors of the obscenity epidemic" with a legislative package to be introduced in Congress this fall, Attorney General Edwin Meese says.

"We are not in favor of censorship. We are talking of something that is not protected by the Constitution," said Meese.

He detailed the Justice Department's high-priority attacks on sexual exploitation of women and children and pornography's links to broader crime.

Meese on Saturday addressed a pornography conference sponsored by Morality in Media, a national clearinghouse group, and received an award for his "dedicated commitment to obscenity law enforcement."

Calling obscene publications, videos, telephone services and mail "a corrosive evil" of a perverted society, Meese said the Justice Department has embarked on a program of "reliable and consistent enforcement of the laws that are already on the books."

But he said the new legislative package would make the legal efforts easier to accomplish.

Obscenity bills set for Congress

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The opening battle in a year against "hard-core pornography" — a $300,000 campaign including billboards, a newspaper insert and a TV program — have been fired in Kansas City by activists who say their target is "dehumanizing and dangerous."

Their critics, however, say the group is using scare tactics and exaggerating the problem to arouse the public, and they raise the specter of censorship down the road.

The anti-porn drive was a test, organizers said. A national group may take the campaign throughout the country, depending on its evaluation of the Kansas City effort.

The campaign launched over the past month by National Coalition Against Pornography and its local affiliate urged people to Stand Together Opposing Pornography, or STOP. It featured 80 billboards, a two-hour television program, direct mail pleas, a 12-page newspaper insert and a phone bank to take calls from financial contributors.

"If enough of us stand together, we can provide the support our public officials need to take on the pornographers and prosecute them for selling illegal materials," said one advertisement.

Train slams car, killing 6

DUNKIRK, N.Y. (AP) — A freight train slammed into a car apparently trying to beat the locomotive past a crossing early Sunday, killing six high school seniors returning from a Halloween party, authorities said.

A compiler and snow plow in front of the locomotive speared the car and pushed it 1,700 feet down the tracks, officials said. "If it would have thrown them to the side, we would have had survivors," said Patrolman James Brill.

The crossing gate was operating when the Norfolk and Western train, traveling about 40 mph, struck the car broadside, said Officer Thomas Zajac.

Patrolman David Ortolano said investigators believe the car either dropped under the gate just before it dived or went around it. It would have been impossible for the engineer to stop the 89-car train, according to Brill.

Negotiators discuss budget cutting plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration may consider an increase in taxes if Congressional spending cuts over a two-year period, a Republican source involved in budget negotiations said Sunday.

"They aren't going to negotiate on taxes unless we are really willing to have some two-year spending cuts that are for real, credible," said Sen. Pat Domenici of New Mexico, the ranking Republican on the Senate Budget Committee.

"You have to go to programs like farm support, like Medicare. And many of the other programs that have grown rather broadly," he said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation." "You can't just get it in the area, it's got to be something."

Domenici, one of eight congressional leaders involved in discussions with the White House, said they had been to agreements of Sunday to cut the entitlement program.

"But essentially, we are looking," he said. "We have left the discretionary appropriated accounts, which is essentially military and this small portion of the budget, $12.6 (billion) to $13 billion that you appropriate every year. We're beginning to reach an accord on that. We're now going below that and talking about some of these other savings that ... we can get below that line."

President Reagan, in his weekly radio address Saturday, took a more conciliatory tone on the budget talks than he had previously, never mentioning his oft-stated opposition to tax increases. He called on Congress to join him in a long-range effort to balance the budget.

Deaver hospitalized; trial postponed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former presidential aide Michael K. Deaver was hospitalized over the weekend for treatment of acute pain from kidney stones, his lawyer and hospital officials said, indicating resumption of his perjury trial this week could be postponed.

Deaver "doubled over in pain Saturday night and was rushed to a hospital emergency room," defense lawyer Randall Turk said Sunday.

Turk said an X-ray determined that Deaver was suffering from kidney stones and he was immediately given morphine to relieve the pain.

Georgetown University Hospital spokesman Mike Marsick said Deaver was in good condition but "at the moment, Mr. Deaver's physicians are unable to state the expected length of hospitalization."

"The kidney stone ailment surfaced following the first week of testimony in Deaver's trial on charges that he lied to a congressional committee and a grand jury investigating his lobbying activities after he resigned as President Reagan's deputy White House chief of staff.

Deaver was hospitalized for alcoholism treatment in June 1986 shortly after he left the White House and again in the fall of 1986, five months after he gave his sworn testimony.

Papal visit slows speeders

MIAMI (AP) — Pope John Paul's visit brought an unexpected blessing to Florida — it saved the state $12.6 million in highway funds by slowing down speeders just enough to squeak in below a federal limit.

"I'm sure the visit of the Holy Father affected the lives of many people — both — admittedly — and inadvertently," said Monsignor Jude O'Doherty, spokesman for the archdiocese of Miami. "This was one of the inadvertent ways. I'm happy he made the contribution."

Florida was in danger of losing the federal funds because more than 50 percent of the motorists monitored on 38 selected stretches of highway exceeded the 55 mph limit.

Under federal law, a state's failure to keep at least 50 percent of its motorists under the speed limit is grounds for the cutoff.

Overall violent crime rate declines

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's rate of violent crime declined overall from 1981 to 1986, despite an increase in the rate of violence among relatives, the Justice Department said Sunday.

"Thirty-seven percent of the violent crimes by strangers in 1986 involved weapons, compared with 42 percent in 1973," the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics reported.

The bureau, which based its findings on semi-annual interviews with some 128,000 people 12 years old and older, said the amount of gratuitous violence in crimes by strangers declined since the mid-1970s.

"The agency said it is difficult to measure gratuitous violence, in which the victim does not resist but is injured anyway, because the circumstances surrounding the attack vary from case to case."

"Nevertheless, inferences can be drawn by examining the percentage of crimes in which the victim was injured but did not try to defend him or herself or fight back," Michael R. Randga statistician for the bureau, wrote in the report. "Given this definition, it appears that injuries due to gratuitous violence in crimes by strangers have decreased somewhat since the mid-1970s."

From 1973 to 1977, 26 percent to 28 percent of the victims who did not fight back were injured, the report said. Since 1977, that figure has declined to about 22 percent.

"There appears to be somewhat less injury in robberies in which the victim took no self-protective measures in the 1980s than in the 1970s," Rand wrote in the report.

Overall, the violent crime rate in 1986 stood at 32 victims per 1,000 people.

Survey: Soviets want nuclear free Europe

MOSCOW (AP) — A vast majority of Soviets favor eliminating nuclear weapons from Europe, but a sizeable minority fear such disarmament may be dangerous for their country, according to an opinion poll.

The survey, conducted by the French polling organization Ipsos from Oct. 1-12, indicated 62 percent of Soviets view the United States as a "declared enemy" of the Soviet Union.

But in answer to another question, 61 percent regarded relations with the United States as "not bad."

The Associated Press on Sunday obtained an English-language translation of the results of the survey, which was conducted for French television and the weekly news magazine Le Point.

For the survey, 1,000 Soviets between the ages of 18 and 65 who live in Moscow or within about 25 miles of the city were contacted by telephone and asked 65 questions.

Random telephone sampling is common in the West but rarely used in the Soviet Union. It is not known what percentage of the people living in the survey area have telephones.

The survey said 95 percent of those questioned favor the elimination of nuclear weapons from Europe.

Aquino says rebels taking war to cities

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corason Aquino said Sunday that the killings of three Americans and other recent urban attacks indicate Communist rebels have brought their 18-year-old insurgency to the cities.

In her weekly radio call-in show, Mrs. Aquino also said her government was doing its best to solve last Wednesday's slayings of the three Americans and a Filipino outside the U.S.-run Clark Air Base.

No credible claim of responsibility has been made for the unprecedented killings, but U.S. and Philippine authorities suspect they were carried out by Communist rebels.

If so, it would mark the first time since government and all other agencies are investigating this matter.

Rebel sources in Manila said they were responsible for the Clark killings because the underground decided months ago to target Americans in response to U.S. support of the Philippine military.

Shamir, head of the right-wing Likud bloc, opposes the proposed international conference that would include the Soviet Union, saying it could force concessions from Israel that would endanger the Jewish state's security.

Chirac addressed Parliament on the first day of a three-day visit aimed at bolstering bilateral ties.

Both countries have said his tour is a sign of improved relations following a deterioration after the 1967 Middle East War when Israel seized the West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip.

Chirac said an international conference was "the most natural way of bringing together the parties" in the Middle East conflict.

Chirac's visit to Jerusalem is the first since he became prime minister in 1981.

Chirac visits Jerusalem to bolster common ties

JERUSALEM (AP) — French Prime Minister Jacques Chirac on Sunday urged Israel to recognize Palestinian rights and said Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir should drop his opposition to an international peace conference on the Mideast.

Chirac, the first French prime minister to visit Israel, also told Parliament that Israel's right to existence and to security must be unambiguously guaranteed.

But he added "the Palestinian people's right to choose their future and to be able to live it must be equally acknowledged and carried out."

Soviets seek quick talks

PARIS (AP) — The Soviet Union, which is preparing to sign a treaty with the United States banning intermediate-range nuclear missiles, wants to negotiate "tomorrow" with Washington on short-range missiles, a top Soviet official said Sunday.

"We are for the liquidation of all missiles and we are ready to do it starting tomorrow," said Vadim Zagladin, first deputy chief of the International Department of the Soviet Communist Party Central Committee, in a radio interview.

"Now, everything depends on the West," Zagladin said during the interview from Moscow on Radio-Television Luxembourg.

"The dismantling of short-range missiles is not only our desire, it is also the desire of many Europeans, notably in West Germany."

Intermediate-range missiles have a range of from about 300 to 3,000 miles.

Zagladin also said the Soviets were not linking the dismantling of intermediate-range missiles, the object of the Dec. 7 summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, and the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative.

Iran's parliament leader lashes out at U.N.

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iran's powerful Parliament speaker on Sunday accused the United Nations of "cheating" Iran in the world body's efforts to end the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war.

Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani, in comments carried by official Iranian media, indicated his country would not accept a U.N. resolution to end the war with Iraq.

The comments were Iran's harshest criticism to date of the United Nations.

Meanwhile, Iraq and Iran said their warplanes flew more raids against each other's oil installations, and a senior Soviet diplomat visiting Tehran was quoted as condemning "ugly" U.S. actions in the gulf.

In a report on Tehran radio, monitored in Cyprus, Rafsanjani said "the work on the international forums will come after a decisive blow on the battlefield."

Rafsanjani made his remarks in a speech to students of a Tehran military college for the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps.

"In our talks with the United Nations, we have told them the solution for ending the war. But as the time goes on, it seems that they are unreliable and that they are cheating us," state-run Tehran television quoted Rafsanjani as saying.

"It is obvious that they (the United Nations) have ill intentions," the television reported him as saying.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency quoted Rafsanjani as saying Iraq could not be trusted.

"We are mistaken if we expect them to observe justice," he was quoted as saying.

Iran's acceptance of the U.N. cease-fire resolution "passed" last summer.

Iraq said it could accept the cease-fire plan but Iran had refused to commit itself unless a prior inquiry is held to determine which side started the conflict. Iran wants Iraq to be branded as aggressor before a settlement could be reached.

Tehran claims Iraq started the war Sept. 22, 1980, when it invaded western Iran. Iraq says Iran ignited the conflict Sept. 4 when it shelled Iraqi border areas.

Vorontsov wound up talks in Tehran Sunday and flew to Moscow.

Gorbachev says policy can save the world

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev, in a book released Sunday, said he has brought a second revolution to the Soviet Union — one that requires U.S. understanding and cooperation to save the world from destruction.

The 270-page book, entitled "Perestroika and the New Thinking for Our Country and the Whole World," was presented to journalists two days after America and the Soviet Union announced the date of a third summit meeting between Gorbachev and President Reagan.

The two leaders are to sign an agreement banning intermediate-range nuclear missiles at their meeting in Washington in December.

Mikhail Nenashev, chairman of the Soviet State Publishing Committee, told a news conference Gorbachev's book would be released at the Soviet Embassy in Washington on Monday and published this month by Harper and Row in the United States.

Excerpts already have appeared in the weekly Moscow News and U.S. News and World Report. In the Soviet Union, 300,000 copies of a Russian-language edition were printed and are on sale for about $1.

Gorbachev wrote that his efforts at streamlining and modernizing the Soviet economy are a result of a more humane approach to government.

But the reforms also require the country to work for a more peaceful world atmosphere in which the changes can take place, he said.

"The fate of socialism, the fate of the whole world, depends on the success of perestroika," Gorbachev wrote.

Perestroika means restructuring in Russian.

His comments came after Yuli Vorontsov, Soviet first deputy foreign minister, met with Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati in the last stop of a regional tour.

Vorontsov was believed to be seek-

What's what?

GOATS THAT FAINT

An element in some goats is called myoglobin. It shorts out their nervous systems so they stiffen up when startled, lose consciousness, and keel over. A low-flying plane can flatten them. So, can horns ever really slide down a banister, honking. Hand clapping. Yelling. A common usage makes. And so on.

GOING BAREFOOT

Q. You quoted a doctor as saying that going barefoot improves the circulatory system. Why?

A. Wasn't a doctor, it was a woodsman. He said it forces you to watch where you put your feet down. Frontier Indians were the best trackers, he claimed, because they'd learned from babyhood to look at the ground when they walked, and they'd never outgrown the habit of wearing hard-soled shoes.

What, you don't buy the claim that cotton is heavier than water? Such is the claim.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This morning would be a good time to work on pleasing those around you and improving your interpersonal relationships. Later, however, don't force any issues, and avoid arguments and confrontations.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You may find it necessary to make some revisions in your financial plans. Be sure to drive with the utmost care.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Make any needed repairs to your property, but don't rush into anything without consulting an expert. Pay special attention to your mate.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 21): An opportunity to form a partnership may arise. This arrangement could be surprisingly profitable later on if you follow through with it.

LIBRA (September 22 to October 21): The right attitude will make your daily work seem much less mundane. Be wary of a troublemaker this evening, but don't lose your temper.

SCORPIO (October 22 to November 21): Don't get started on any new projects unless you're sure you'll have plenty of time. Remember: There's no such thing as an "easy job."

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): This is the chance you've been waiting for to get your personal life in order. Someone may be disturbed tonight, so be soothing.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Be careful in arranging your schedule today. Think of prior commitments which may take precedence over new plans.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): A money expert has given you some very good advice. Do stop procrastinating and follow it. Drive very carefully this evening.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Avoid a person who usually tries to tell you what to do and is just very boring in general. Be cautious in dealing with financial affairs.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have a strong interest, and equal ability, in organizing rather large projects, particularly those concerned with government or entertainment. Your progeny may have a tendency to be a bit too eager, so teach him or her to complete a project at a time.

'Baby boom' doctor, Dr. Spock, reportedly good after fall

BOSTON (AP) — Dr. Benjamin Spock, the 84-year-old pediatrician in the baby boom generation, was reported in good condition Sunday at New England Medical Center after fainting and taking a tumble on a marble floor.

"He's doing very, very well," said hospital spokeswoman Diane Millikan. Spock was undergoing tests, she said.

Spock's wife, Mary Morgan, said he fainted before falling Saturday in the lobby of the Copley Plaza Hotel, where he was staying.

"He lost consciousness for about 15 seconds. He hit the floor so hard he made a noise," said Jim Carey, concierge at the hotel.

"We were talking about the symphony. He was kind of laughing a little," said Carey, who sent Spock to the hospital by taxi.

Spock, best known for his book "Baby and Child Care," first published in 1946, was in Boston for a specific case to deliver Sunday before a meeting of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

DeVito welcomes home third new baby arrival

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rhea Perlman and husband Danny DeVito are parents for the third time, with a son for the Emmy-winning performer, a spokesman at Cedars Sinai Medical Center said Sunday.

Jake, Daniel Sebastian DeVito was born Friday and weighed seven pounds, 11 ounces, and mother and child were doing well, Paula Correia said. The couple also have two daughters, aged 2 and 4.

Ms. Perlman won three Emmys for her portrayal of sharp-tongued waitress Carla Tortelli in the NBC-TV comedy hit "Cheers."

DeVito won an Emmy for his role as the unsavory dispatcher Louie DePalma in the series "Taxi," now seen in syndication. He also starred in such films as "Romancing the Stone," "Ruthless People," and "Tin Men."

Duchess Fergie enjoys work, misses Andrew

LONDON (AP) — The Duchess of York says she loves her book-publishing career and her official duties as a member of Britain's royal family, but wishes she could see her husband, Prince Andrew, more often.

"I would like to see my husband more often, but there is work to be done and I am glad to be doing it. In any case, he is 100 percent behind me when I am doing, and actually I think he enjoys it," the former Sarah Ferguson was quoted as saying in an interview with Press Association, the British news agency.

Andrew is a Royal Navy helicopter flight instructor.

The duchess gave the interview to promote the latest in Sir Robin Cooke's book, "The Palace of Westminster, a history of the onetime royal residence that houses Parliament. She initiated the book as acquisitions editor for Swiss-based publisher Richard Burton.

"I was in on the editing, the pictures, the layout and the design. If I did not like it, it didn't happen," she was quoted as saying.

For her next project, "I have some good ideas up my sleeve but they are secret," she said.

"However, it is not going to be a book on snakes," she quipped, referring to an animal exhibit in Connecticut in September when she was frightened by a Burmese python.

Stallone has close call while filming

ELAT, Israel (AP) — Sylvester Stallone had a close call on the set of "Rambo III" on Sunday when a helicopter buzzed him during a stunt and missed his head by a few inches.

"I suppose if it had gotten any lower I could have saved the cost of a haircut," Stallone was quoted as saying by production spokesman Tom Gray.

Stallone ducked just in time and escaped unharmed, Gray said.

Gray said the scene called for a French-made F4Ua helicopter to buzz Stallone as he dives over a fence flared behind the actor.

Gray said the helicopter was supposed to fly about six feet above Stallone's head. He said the pilot misjudged the distance because dust and flames shrouded the set.

The scene was filmed in the Red Sea resort 190 miles south of Eilat. Filming in Israel began in the summer and will wrap up by the end of November, Gray said. Additional scenes for the film, which is set in Afghanistan, will be shot in Thailand and Pakistan.

"Rambo III" is scheduled for release in the summer 1988.

'I'm gonna surprise ya Jacko's makin' a smash

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sparing, spike-haired Jacko Jackson has put a power surge into Eveready's ad campaign for Energizer batteries, boosting consumer awareness of the product by 28 percent in two months, company executives say.

The former Australian football star appears in TV ads and billboards, wearing wrestling outfits and posing with giant Energizer batteries.

Jackson, 28, whose appearance is a cross between rock rebel Billy Idol and wrestler Hulk Hogan, chants "Get Energizer! I'll surprise ya!" and shouts "Oy!" in his down-under accent.

The ads were originally created for the Australian market, where two pop hits and a best-selling book had already made Jackson a celebrity.

When that campaign increased recognition of Energizer by 40 percent, the company exported the ads to New Zealand, where Jackson wasn't known at all.

After 1000-pound gain, Hudson's lost appetite

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — A 1,000-pound-plus man who gained national attention after he got stuck in a bathroom door says a strange thing has happened — he's lost his appetite.

"I can hardly believe it myself. I don't miss food," Walter Hudson, 42, told the New York Daily News in an interview published in Sunday editions.

Hudson has been on a diet supervised by Dick Gregory, the comedian-turned-nutritionist who runs a weight clinic in the Bahamas. The newspaper said he has lost about 75 pounds and now weighs about 1,100 pounds.

"It just amazes me," Hudson said.

"A month ago I was eating like I always did. And now I'm drinking this Bahamian diet powder drink three times a day with orange juice and water. I feel a lot better and I'm still losing weight."

DAVE ROEVER RALLY

C.S.I. GYM

7:30 P.M.
Monday, November 9

Dave Roever was burned beyond recognition or hope of survival in the Vietnam war. While serving with the Special Forces, he was severely injured by a hand grenade explosion. Dave suffers burns over 40% of his body, lost 60 pounds of flesh, was hospitalized for one year and two months, and underwent numerous surgeries. His is an incredible account of tragedy and triumph, of hurt and heroism; and of faith, hope, and love.

"A Dave Roever Crusade is a unique opportunity for us to tell people in our area about Jesus Christ and the new life He gives. Christ has given the mandate to go and make disciples." (Matthew 28:19) Evangelism is our means, not an end! We go from decision to disciples. First, we evangelize the community by inviting men and women to accept Christ and, then, incorporate those who respond into the local church. The church is strengthened by the acts of witnessing and discipling. New growth and renewal of the church is the result of obedience to the command of Jesus. A crusade of this magnitude will not just "happen" without the prayers and involvement of hundreds of committed people. For all of us, it will provide a special opportunity to tell people about Jesus and a unique responsibility to answer the call to do so.

Tahiti lifts Papeete curfew

PAPETE, Tahiti (AP) — A curfew imposed on Papeete and four surrounding communities after riots last month was lifted Sunday, but a state of emergency remained in effect.

The Oct. 24 riots broke out during a confrontation between police and striking dock workers who demanded an extra team of workers on the island of Mururoa. Tahiti is a French territory and Mururoa is France's nuclear testing site.

Many of the city's shops were looted and burned and a dozen people were injured in the clashes.

The 7 p.m.-to-5 a.m. curfew covered Papeete, Faan, Pirae, Arue and Mahina.

The state of emergency, which prohibits all demonstrations or large gatherings, expires Thursday. An act of Parliament is necessary to extend it.

Royal pair lands in Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — Britain's Prince Charles called his wife "the most glamorous colonel in the British army" after he and Princess Diana arrived here Sunday amid press speculation that their marriage is faltering.

The prince and princess were met at Gatow airport, the British military airfield in West Berlin, by West Berlin Mayor Eberhard Diepgen and his wife, Monika.

British press speculation that there is trouble in the royal marriage was sparked by a lengthy separation.

Except for two brief public appearances together in south London and west Wales and a one-night reunion at their country home last weekend, the 38-year-old Charles and his 26-year-old wife have not been together since Sept. 16.

Bangladesh riots injure 150

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — More than 150 people were injured Sunday as anti-government protesters battled baton-wielding police outside government offices across the nation, police and opposition sources said.

Clashes that began with demonstrations demanding the ouster of strongman President Hussain Muhammad Ershad erupted at several district headquarters throughout the nation.

Among the injured was Deputy Commerce Minister Abdul Gaffar, who was beaten and had his car destroyed in an attack by an opposition group, said a district official speaking on condition of anonymity.

Car crashes into checkpoint

BERLIN (AP) — An unidentified man rammed his car into barriers in East Berlin early Sunday after speeding through Checkpoint Charlie in West Berlin, police said.

The man — who had blood on his head from the crash — was taken from the eastern control checkpoint on a stretcher by East German border police, West Berlin police quoted observers as saying.

2 die in Karachi fighting

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Police and Moslem settlers from India and Bangladesh clashed Sunday after rallies staged to mark the anniversary of Mohajir-Pathan violence. Witnesses said two people were killed and 70 wounded.

The fighting in Karachi broke out when supporters of the Mohajir Qaumi Movement erected barricades, burned tires and threw rocks at passing cars.

World

Attackers seek candidate's withdrawal

PUSAN, South Korea (AP) — About 250 protesters shouting "Concession! Concession!" attacked the hotel where opposition leader Kim Dae-jung was staying Sunday night and demanded his withdrawal from the presidential race.

Earlier, a sand-filled bottle narrowly missed the candidate as he spoke before a crowd of 200,000 in South Korea's second largest city, the political base of opposition rival Kim Young-sam.

In Seoul, 500 radical students and workers hurling firebombs and rocks battled riot police after holding an anti-government rally. At least 21 protesters were arrested. At least four people were injured in the hotel protest and one of them, bleeding from his face, was seen taken away in an ambulance. Six protesters suffered minor cuts from broken glass.

Kim Dae-jung and his party requested police intervention to end the 90-minute attack on the Kukje Hotel in downtown Pusan.

At least six people were reported arrested.

Kim Dae-jung and Kim Young-sam are longtime rivals who had united to oppose the government. They recently split to run separately in December's presidential elections, and opposition leaders fear the candidates might divide the opposition vote, helping the military-backed governing party.

Kim Young-sam, who was escorted to his room for protection, aides said.

The aides claimed that most of the protesters were members of political groups in the city supporting Kim Young-sam.

Each candidate has urged the other to withdraw.

The protesters surrounded the 15-story hotel and hurled stones, bottles and eggs, breaking nearly all the windows on the first two floors.

Kim Dae-jung, who was giving a banquet on the third floor after a campaign rally and motorcade through the city, quickly was escorted to his room for protection, aides said.

The aides claimed that most of the protesters were members of political groups in the city supporting Kim Young-sam.

Scores of riot police, armed with shields, were deployed around the hotel as dozens of protesters continued to shout against Kim Dae-jung under a steady rain.

The two Kims came under public fire after they reneged on earlier promises that just one of them would run to end 26 years of authoritarian rule.

Abortions in Greece increase

LONDON (AP) — Greek doctors estimate that about 2,500 women in Greece had abortions last year because they feared their babies might have been harmed by radiation from the Chernobyl nuclear accident, a report in the British Medical Journal says.

The estimate is not incompatible with the speculative figure of the International Atomic Energy Agency of 100,000 to 200,000 Chernobyl-related induced abortions in the whole of Western Europe, said the report in the Oct. 31 issue of the journal.

Doctors from the University of Athens Medical School said that the Russian nuclear accident on April 26, 1986 led to panic during most of May because of conflicting data and false rumours, according to the report.

In Greece, as in other parts of Europe, many obstetricians initially thought it prudent to interrupt otherwise wanted pregnancies or were unable to resist requests from terrified pregnant women and their husbands, they said.

Within a few weeks, the doctors said, misconceptions in the medical profession were largely cleared up although worries persisted in varying degrees in the general public.

Tutu calls for unity among factions

EDENDALE, South Africa (AP) — Archbishop Desmond Tutu, pleading for unity in the battle against apartheid, led a "prayer for peace" service Sunday in a black district where factional fighting has claimed scores of lives.

Tutu, leader of the Anglican church in southern Africa and winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize, told a crowd of at least 1,000 that "freedom is coming" but that blacks must stop fighting each other.

However, one of two warring factions, the Zulu political organization Inkatha, boycotted the service and said Tutu should stay away.

The Pietermaritzburg Council of Churches sponsored the service at an ecumenical center. The council says about 140 people have been killed this year in Edendale and other black townships around Pietermaritzburg, the capital of Natal Province, including 80 slain in the past two months.

Three killings were reported Sunday, including a watchman stabbed during the night in Edendale by attackers who set fire to a shop. In other Pietermaritzburg townships, a man was hacked to death by a mob and another was shot dead by police after officers trying to disperse a crowd were fired at.

The violence stems from a long-running feud between the United Democratic Front, a nationwide anti-apartheid coalition, and Inkatha, a 1.3-million-member organization headed by Zulu leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi.

Inkatha's regional chairman, Valaphi Ndlovu, complained that Inkatha had not received a formal invitation and said Tutu was unwelcome because of his support for economic sanctions against South Africa.

Inkatha opposes economic sanctions, while the UDF advocates them. Some UDF members view Buthelezi as a government collaborator because he serves as chief minister of the KwaZulu homeland.

Tutu, like other clergymen who took part in the prayer service, did not mention Inkatha or the UDF by name.

"The enemy that stands in the way of our liberation is apartheid and that system is destined to fail," the black archbishop said.

Nyerere resigns Tanzania presidency, accepts chairmanship of ruling party

The Washington Post

NAIROBI — Kenya Julius Nyerere, Tanzania's founder and president, said two years ago that he had had enough. In a rare act for an African leader, he voluntarily gave up the presidency.

The "father of African socialism" said at the time that he would serve only 24 more months as chairman of his country's ruling party. Then, he said, he would return to his "little house" in the village of his birth near Lake Victoria.

Last week, however, it became official that Nyerere would be going home to the lake. At a party conference in the central Tanzanian town of Dodoma, the 85-year-old former schoolteacher was chosen for five more years as party chairman.

From that position, as head of the country's supreme policy-making organ, Nyerere will retain his power to influence and perhaps undermine the capitalist changes made by his successor, President Ali Hassan Mwinyi.

The reluctance of Nyerere and Tanzania's ruling party to turn away from socialism is indicative of the half-hearted recent conversion of many poor African countries to free-market economic reforms.

The International Monetary Fund supervises reform programs in 30 of the 45 countries of sub-Saharan Africa. These programs are supposed to shrink government spending while creating incentives for farmers to grow more food and cash crops.

But in Tanzania, as in Zambia, Sudan and several other countries, there remains a deep ideological commitment to socialism.

When Nyerere stepped down, he acknowledged that his socialist policies had helped impoverish Tanzania by nationalizing too many industries and centralizing too much power in the government. This past year, however, he appears to have had second thoughts. He defended his Chinese-inspired schemes for collectivized farming and blasted the IMF as "bent on suppressing the weak developing countries."

Tips for reducing stress when your bent aims at perfection

Janice is the kind of woman Mother's Day cards are written about the kind who makes all the Halloween costumes by hand and her bread from scratch. She has her children enrolled in eleven teen dance classes and she never misses a PTA meeting or her son's ball games.

Janice is also a woman who is experiencing STRESS — stress to the point of burnout. She complains of headaches and fatigue. She feels a sense of worthlessness and guilt most of the time because she can't get around to doing everything done. And the pressure she's under causes irritability and temper flare-ups.

"Frankly," Janice confesses, "At times I just get sick at the sight of my kids and fed up with being a wife and mother. I'd just like to run away."

If, like Janice, you feel at times like you're pushing yourself almost beyond your ability to cope, this article is for you. Here are some ideas that may help you to reduce your stress and to take charge of your life.

Jo Ann Larsen

Quit demanding that you do everything perfectly. In their heads, women are usually emotionally in charge of hundreds of details that relate to their roles as wives and mothers. And all these programs to take care of all they are programmed to do.

Says one woman: "I had to laugh at myself when I thought of how I responded to my daughter when she suggested a rather simple Halloween costume. I told her the costume wasn't fancy enough and that we'd have to think of something more elaborate."

Missing a detail or not doing a job perfectly can cause women to lower their self-esteem. One woman candidly reports: "I had to buy the pants for my little boy's Halloween costume this year. And all the while

I was shopping I was putting myself down inside, saying, 'Elizabeth, if you had just paid more attention in seventh grade home economics, you would have been able to make those pants.'"

Perfectionism can be hard not only on women, but also their families. Said one mother: "I was going crazy, as usual, preparing for my son's birthday party for the entire third grade class. Suddenly it hit me, as I was blowing up the 29th balloon, that what's good for my child may not be good for me — that having a mother who nags herself out driving to four different stores to find the right color crepe paper streamers may not be so great. The child may have the kind of birthday party you'd see in a TV commercial but he doesn't see his mother smile all day."

Releasing yourself from taking care of everything perfectly may be hard to do — but it can be done. Reports one young mother: "All I had to do to feel bad about myself was look through the kitchen window at the apricots falling off the tree in the backyard. I could hear my mother's voice, saying, 'Jane, it's slothful to let those apricots go. It's the same as wasting money.'"

Continues this young mother: "Now that I'm liberating myself I'm giving myself permission not to have to do something simply because someone else says I should. I just can't do everything and I decided that next year I'm going to tell my mother that she's welcome to pick the apricots when they're ripe."

Says another woman who is releasing herself: "I used to think I had to make everything. One time I saw an item I needed on sale for $10 but I couldn't feel good about buying it. By the time I bought the materials for making what I wanted, it cost me $28. I decided then I wasn't going to be so hard on myself after this. I'm going to take shortcuts whenever I can to get things done."

Still another woman observes: "My mother once embroidered a pillow for me and on it was the saying: 'A spotless house is the sign of a misspent life.' I no longer feel guilty for not doing everything thoroughly. And I find that I have a lot more time for myself."

Remember that some things are not worth doing well. And some aren't worth doing at all. Says one time management expert: "Why should you spend 45 minutes meticulously mending a skirt waistband that will always be covered by your sweater when you could do an adequate mending job in just 10 minutes?"

Learn to delegate. Many women have trouble accepting help. Confesses one woman: "I used to get angry when my husband tried to help me because I thought he was sending the message I wasn't doing my job right. Now I'm learning to take help whenever I can get it. I don't get angry anymore when my husband helps. I cheer him on."

Learning to delegate may mean lowering your standards. Many women don't delegate because they can do the job better than anyone else. "I used to complain when my husband did the vacuuming because he always missed the corners," says one progressive woman.

"Now I let him do the middle and I go along behind him and catch the corners. It's easier than doing it all myself."

Learn to say no. Most women have trouble saying no for a variety of reasons. "Who'll do the job if I don't," says one woman. "I'm afraid I'll hurt someone's feelings," says another. "People may think less of me if I turn them down," says still another.

If you're afraid of rejecting others or being rejected yourself when you say no, you may need to depersonalize the business of turning down other people. No one has infinite energy, resources and time. To protect yourself from burnout, you have to set limits. You can't stretch far enough to meet every demand — although some women operate on the tacit assumption that "I should be able to do anything anyone asks."

To do for you

"To Do for You" is a calendar listing health-related activities, events and education. Information should be submitted by Thursday for publication in the following Monday's Reach section. Mail notices to The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, 83303, or deliver to our office at 132 Third St. W.

Basic EMT courses to begin

TWIN FALLS — The State of Idaho Emergency Medical Services Bureau will sponsor training courses for basic emergency medical technicians beginning Tuesday in Buhl, Nov. 9 in Albion, Nov. 13 in Hailey and Nov. 16 in Hazelton. Cost of the 110-hour course is $60 including textbooks. For information, call the regional EMS office at 734-9214.

Prenatal class includes tour

JEROME — St. Benedict's Family Medical Center will offer a prenatal class which includes a birth film, hospital tour, fetal heart monitor tests and practice exercises. The class is held at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the conference room at the Center. Cost is $4 per couple. For information, call Gayle Goodin, 638-6445.

Birthing film illustrates class

SHOSHONE — A birth film, hospital tour, fetal heart monitoring tests and practice exercises will be included in the prenatal class on Thursday from 7:30 p.m. at Dr. Davis' office, 113 S. Apple St., Shoshone. Cost of the class is $4. For information, call Gayle Goodin, 638-6445.

Children of alcoholics featured

KETCHUM — "Children of Alcoholics — Past and Present," sponsored by the Walker Center and the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, is held at 4:30 p.m. Thursdays at Our Lady of the Snows Catholic Church in Ketchum. For more information, call J.C. Smith at 1-800-227-4190.

Free pre-school tests offered

JEROME — The Region V Adult and Child Development Center will offer a free screening clinic for children ages one through five on Friday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Magic Valley Speech and Hearing Clinic, 414 N. Lincoln, No. 2, in Jerome.

The purpose of the screening is to identify children who may have delays in physical development, language, speech, motor and self-help skills. Vision and hearing will also be tested where possible. Parents of children showing delays in any areas tested will be referred to appropriate sources for professional help.

Screening will be by appointment only. Parents should call Macla or Jo at 734-9273 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays for an appointment.

Larsen workshop set Saturday

TWIN FALLS — "Choosing Your Own Happiness," a day-long workshop designed for women who want to increase their self-esteem and decrease stress and depression, will be held Saturday at Canyon Springs Inn.

Jo Ann Larsen, a Salt Lake City-family therapist and columnist for The Times-News Reach section, will lead the workshop.

Registration for the workshop begins at 8:30 a.m. with the first session starting at 9 a.m. There will be a lunch break at noon, with the afternoon session continuing from 1-4 p.m. Cost of the workshop is $35, which includes lunch. Pre-registration is requested by Thursday, and a $15 deposit will assure registration.

For information or to pre-register, call 423-5165 or 1-801-263-3147.

groups.

And for teens and children, buses of Reyes Syndrome have prompted health care officials to consider aspirin and viruses a potentially deadly combination. Flu shots are now recommended for young people who receive long-term aspirin therapy.

Children must be at least 6 months old to receive the vaccine.

This year, the vaccine against the new strain has been included in the flu shot commonly available, eliminating the need for the two shots.

Flu shots are especially important for people in certain high-risk categories (see box). That list has been expanded this year to include persons living in the same household as those in other high-risk

South Central District Health Department will be giving flu shots at their weekly immunization clinics, Wednesdays, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., at their offices on 324 2nd St. E., Twin Falls.

For senior citizens, a special clinic will be held this Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Cost of the vaccine is $4.60; fees will be waived for those unable to pay.

brown rice, part-skim mozzarella and nonfat dried milk, are reasonably healthful foods. But others, such as ground beef, butter and cheese are high in saturated fats.

Year after year, ions of butter, processed cheese and ground beef end up as agricultural surpluses that the government must purchase as part of its farm-support-price program. Where do these heart-unhealthy foods end up? On our school children's lunch plates.

"The type of food eaten in childhood is likely to form a lifelong nutritional pattern," comments David Jacobs, a Washington, D.C. internist and specialist in clinical nutrition. School lunches should be a model for children, because in effect they "teach" kids what is nutritionally desirable. This is particularly true for inner-city children, for whom school lunch is likely to be the best meal they'll eat all day. You can't tell kids to eat low-fat, low-salt and low-sugar in the classroom — or at home — and then feed them hot dogs and nuggets in the cafeteria. They won't get the message."

Some foods used in school lunches are nutritious, others are high in sodium and fat

Fat isn't the only problem with school lunches. USDA canned commodity vegetables (which many cafeteria managers complain kids won't eat) are high in sodium and low in taste. Much of the fruit is still canned, too. And so far, white flour and white rice holds way over their non-refined counterparts.

USDA's dietary guidelines — "This is the first time, some are making a minor attempt to reform commodity foods. S-305, a bill introduced by Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.), is largely intended to improve the administration of the commodity distribution program. Tucked into the bill's language, however, is the following amendment: 'Commodity products that are distributed by the Secretary shall, to the maximum extent practical, be consistent with the Dietary Guidelines published by the United States Department of Agriculture and the Department of Health and Human Services.'

While this amendment offers a glimmer of hope that commodity foods may one day be improved, the wording is too vague to be enforceable as a practical, working policy. Still, an industry lobbying organization representing commodity farmers — the National Grange, lobbied to have it deleted.

The fact that USDA's own foods may not meet the agency's standards — the Dietary Guidelines advise avoiding "too much fat, saturated fat, cholesterol, sodium and sugar — is ironic indeed. Compounding the commodity problem is the fact that many school managers apparently believe they are competing with local greasy spoons for kids' business.

Many school districts allow and sometimes even encourage the sale of so-called "competitive foods." These sugary, salty or fatty junk foods, usually sold in vending machines, "compete" with the regular school lunch offerings.

Competition for food fight

In 1980, USDA passed a regulation halting the sale of competitive foods anywhere in school until after the last lunch period. But in 1984, the National Soft Drink Association sued USDA. A federal court of appeals ruled that the agency did not have the statutory authority to ban competitive foods everywhere in schools throughout the day — only in the cafeteria during lunchtime.

Some school districts, such as Fairfax, Va., have chosen to uphold the school-wide ban anyway, as a local option. "We'd much rather feed our children fruit juices instead of soda, and trail mixes instead of sugar candies and salty snacks," says food service director Dorothy VanEmmond-Pannell. But the majority of school districts have not followed Fairfax's example.

Recently, the tide has been turning against competitive foods again — a parent and consumer group pressure schools to pass laws halting the sale of competitive foods. Last June, the New York State General Assembly passed a bill to ban the sale of competitive foods statewide through the end of the lunch period.

There are bright spots. Salad bars are now a regular feature in a growing number of school districts, and raw vegetables with dip, baked potatoes and fresh fruit have become more regular menu items.

But it is the rare food service director who is willing to go the whole nine yards — to transform a standard program into a model of healthful eating. One pioneer is Louise Conrad, director of the Makato School District in Minnesota.

Lowering heart disease risk

In 1981, Mankato and two other communities in Minnesota were selected to participate in a multimillion-dollar "Heart Healthy Program" funded by the National Institutes of Health (NIH). The program's aim was to lower the community's heart disease risk. Adults were given advice by staff from the University of Minnesota on how to stop smoking and eat healthful foods at home and when dining out.

For children, dietary advice was given at school — in the lunchroom. Conrad says Mankato school cafeterias now serve "special" lunches with less fat, sodium and sugar and more complex carbohydrates and fiber. These meals are marked with a heart symbol to indicate to students and parents that the fat content does not exceed 50 percent of total calories, and 1,300 milligrams of sodium.

In 1982, the first year of the program, only one day featured heart-healthy food.

But over the years, the program has gradually been expanded, so that now it is two months long.

The modified meals "have been over popular," Conrad says. "Our participation rate hasn't dropped at all." Although the NIH-funded Heart Healthy Program will end in 1989, Conrad says his goal is to serve healthful menus year-round.

To date, cooks and managers have devised approximately two dozen ways to reduce salt, sugar, and fat in traditional recipes.

Mankato schools now:

- Never deep-fry foods;
- Omit potato chips and coconut products from menus;
- Omit flavored salts, such as garlic and onion, from all recipes;
- Use 30 percent less oil in salad dressings;
- See LUNCH on Page D3.

Readers' cures pour in, but Charlie still holds hiccup record

DEAR READERS: On Sept. 16, an Iowa woman wrote to ask me if I could help a fellow-Iowan named Charlie Osborne, who's 85.

He got the hiccups in 1922 when he tried to lift a 350-pound hog to butcher it, and he's had them ever since. She said Charlie was a celebrity in Anthon (population about 300) and after 65 years of constant hiccupping, he would appreciate a good night's sleep.

Did any of my readers have a cure for the hiccups?

Not one to pass up a chance to help a fellow Iowan — or a good story — I phoned the Anthon Herald, a weekly run by Sheryl Ashley and Shirley Nelson. Yup, it was true: Charlie Osborne was still hic-the country offering cures, solutions and prayers.

Charlie, who had always walked downtown to the post office to pick up his mail, needed help to carry his mail home. The first week he received more than 1,000 letters and cards, and I received nearly 900 "cures" to send on to Charlie.

cupping — in fact he had already hiccupped himself into the Guinness Book of World Records.

So I ran an item in my column asking any readers who had a sure cure for the hiccups to please send them to Charlie in Anthon.

Well, the day that hit print, Charlie got a telephone call at 8:20 a.m. from a Richmond, Va., woman who had a sure cure. For the next three days, phone calls came from all over

A radio talk show host in Austin, Texas, called Charlie for an impromptu interview. He's had two offers (one from California and one from Alabama) to appear on TV shows there. He said if they'll send him a ticket, he'll go.

According to Charlie, the only cure that gave him any relief was one used by a doctor who visited him from Illinois. Using carbon monoxide, his hiccups were cured for 30 minutes, but they came back again.

Readers, I know you mean well, but please don't send any more cures to Charlie in Anthon — he's moved.

Last week he sold his house, packed up his belongings and went to live with his daughter, Lucretia, and her husband in Minnesota. Charlie says the move is not permanent. He may move back to Anthon someday.

DEAR ABBY: The most popular parlor game these days seems to be snoooping into the past of famous people to find out when they were married and when their first baby arrived.

This is embarrassing to say the least for some of our most respected — and least suspected — public figures.

I am reminded of a letter you once published. It went something like this:

"Dear Abby: Our son was married last January. Five months later his wife had a 10-pound baby girl. They said the baby was premature. Tell me, can a 10-pound baby be this early?"

You replied: "The baby was on time — the wedding was late. Forget it."

— LEO H. MANCHESTER, CONN.

DEAR LEO: Apropos counting the months — friends who "count" don't count.

Smoking deaths total 315,120 in '84

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal health officials have concluded that 315,120 Americans died in 1984 from smoking cigarettes.

The disease impact of smoking in the United States continues to be enormous, despite recent declines in the prevalence of smoking, the national Centers for Disease Control said Thursday in its weekly report.

To determine the yearly deaths from smoking, federal government researchers plotted the numbers of deaths in 1984 from various causes, such as lung cancer, heart disease and respiratory disease, then used risk estimates to calculate the fractions of such deaths which were due to smoking.

Deaths from causes such as chronic emphysema and cancers of the lung, trachea and larynx are considered to be among the most likely to be smoking-related, according to the CDC.

The yearly "smoking-attributable mortality rate" for American men is 192 per 100,000, more than twice the U.S. female rate.
