Stallings will introduce bill for fossil beds monument

By MARK PRATTER Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, says he will introduce legislation making the Hagerman fossil beds a national monument. Stallings' announcement at a lunch here Friday followed a tour of the beds that contain world-renowned fossils from the Pliocene-Bligocene Age some 3.5 million years ago. "All the ingredients are here to move on a national monument. There has been quite a bit of opposition to (Rep.) Larry Craig's proposal for a national park in the Sawtooths but I don't sense that (here)," he told a gathering of several dozen national monument supporters. Among those attending were state Rep. Ralph Peters of Jerome and Gary Carson, Bureau of Land Management Jarbridge Resource Area manager. Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, has already introduced fossil bed legislation in the Senate and Stallings says he will have to talk to McClure before introducing his version in January. The Stallings bill won't seek more money for the fossil beds than the McClure bill — no more than $6 million, says Charles Barnes, a Stallings aide. "We will have our work cut out for us to get it through Congress, particularly because of the money involved," Stallings said. But the Second District congressman said despite the budget cutting mood in Congress, a monument bill can be passed. Stallings says he was successful in getting a similar amount of money for a brain tumor center at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory. A Hagerman Fossils National Monument Council has been formed to further the project and Stallings told the council members in the audience that he hopes as the council meets, it will do more than create a national monument. "It will still take a great deal of effort and county cooperation. These areas are successful because of word of mouth experiences," he said. The area will have to provide the facilities to serve the tourist, Stallings says. The fossil beds have a leg-up on other areas because the beds are already known to geologists, he says. However, tourists have complained the beds are difficult to find because of a lack of signage. BLM, which currently manages the beds and owns most of the land, has been concerned about the landslide problems at the site from overland flows created by farm runoff. Northern Testing Labs of Boise is doing soil studies at the site, says Carson of BLM. Carson says BLM will move ahead with plans to put up inter-

Bennett urges judge to drop nomination

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Education William J. Bennett, told by President Reagan to "do what you think is right," called Supreme Court nominee Douglas H. Ginsburg Friday night to urge that he withdraw following disclosure that he had smoked marijuana. Bennett warned the federal judge that "the situation is hurting the president." Ginsburg's response was "non-committal." In public remarks earlier in the day, Reagan had vowed to stand by Ginsburg, declaring that his nomination was not an adder. By the evening, however — after support for Ginsburg had steadily eroded throughout the day — Bennett called Reagan to inform him of his plans and the president advised him to do as he thought right, Bennett spokesman Loye Miller said. Miller said Bennett told Ginsburg that he would not be making the call if the president had said anything to discourage him. The incident, the result of controversy over Ginsburg's admission a day earlier that he had smoked marijuana on a number of occasions, brought his flagging nomination to the brink of demise. Even before his conversation with Bennett, an outspoken conservative and a leader of the administration's anti-drug fight, Ginsburg was quickly losing support among conservative Republican senators who are Reagan's strongest supporters. WASHINGTON — Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said Thursday that if it had been known President Reagan's nominee for the Supreme Court Douglas H. Ginsburg had smoked marijuana, he would never have been nominated. But Idaho's junior Senate Republican Steve Symms charged that the flap over Ginsburg is being blown out of proportion. "This certainly makes a difference," McClure told the Washington Post. "It might be accepted by some as a youthful indiscretion, but I'm not sure that's really sufficient." McClure, who chairs the Senate Republican Steering Committee, was involved in the process of selecting candidates for the high court with White House aide other Senate officials prior to Reagan's choice of Ginsburg. He had been one of the first Senators to support the nomination. "If it had been known that he had used marijuana before he was nominated, he would never have been nominated," said McClure. Ginsburg has been dogged by controversy since he was tapped by Reagan for the high court on Oct.

26. This has been fueled by conflict of interest charges and disclosures that his wife performed and assisted in abortions in white she was in medical school. In a statement Thursday, Ginsburg admitted smoking pot "on a few occasions" in the 1960s and early 1970s, acknowledging it was a mistake. McClure said that the revelation may well affect his vote as well as Ginsburg's chances for confirmation. In a statement on the Senate floor Friday, Symms defended Ginsburg, saying that he was tired of the "hotter-than-thou and self-righteous" reactions of some of his colleagues. "This should be put into the proper perspective," Symms admonished. "If we senators had to be put to the same litmus test about past mistakes, no one in the Senate could pass it." Symms urged the Senate to focus on Ginsburg's qualifications. "He is highly qualified, and he has admitted his mistake," Symms said. "The ultimate question is what is he doing now? Is he the kind of judge we want on the Supreme Court? These are the questions that matter."

GOP deficit-reduction plan brings hope, mixed reaction

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congressional Republicans proposed on Friday a $30 billion deficit-reduction compromise with more taxes than President Reagan wants and more domestic spending cuts than Democrats support. The offer was made to the Democrats after a White House meeting at which Senate Republicans urged Reagan to reconsider his opposition to cutbacks in Social Security benefits. House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ind., presented the new plan as the second week of budget talks was coming to a close. He said the reaction was "better than I thought" it would be, including White House acceptance of military spending far below Reagan's request. Sen. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana, one of the Democratic negotiators, called the plan "a constructive step forward" but said he thought it needed more taxes. "It cannot be, of course, accepted in its current form," he said.

The president didn't endorse it either. "He doesn't like taxes," said Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., senior Republican on the Senate Finance Committee. But Michel said he was encouraging agreement to keep moving forward, and lawmakers speaking privately said they sensed White House support. "You don't need a Ph.D. to figure out that he (Michel) wouldn't be doing this unless there's some support base there. That's a sign of progress," said a Democratic lawmaker who declined to be identified. The GOP proposal calls for reducing the deficit by $30 billion over five years. See BUDGET on Page A2

Payrolls, jobless numbers higher

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Unemployment edged up to 8 percent in October but payrolls surged by 550,000 jobs, indicating the economy was robust when the stock market plunged, the government said Friday. While the 0.1 percent increase in the jobless rate was its first move up in 13 months, 415,000 more Americans were working in October than in September when the rate fell to 5.9 percent for the first time since 1979, the Labor Department said. Payroll growth in October, a four-year record, was more than twice the average monthly gain over the past year. The unemployment rate climbed only because of a jump of a half-million people, triple the normal monthly increase, in the labor force, those either holding jobs or looking for them. "The resurgence in the American economy means that as employment prospects brighten, more people are lured into the labor force," said Richard Rahn, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. "The increase in the unemployment rate would not be interpreted as a negative development." The percentage of all Americans — including children but excluding institutionalized people — such as prison inmates — holding jobs continues to reach new highs almost every month. It climbed to a record 62.1 percent in October, up nearly a full percentage point from a year ago. All October figures are based on surveys of households and business payrolls taken the week before the record 508-point drop in the Dow Jones industrial stocks index Oct. 19. Even so, both government and private economists used such terms as "strong," "attractive" and "impressive" to describe the first fourth-quarter indicator of the economy's basic health. Trying to play peacemaker in Persian Gulf frustrating role

By BARBY SCHWEID The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States is trying to play the peacemaker in the Persian Gulf war but the Soviet Union and Iran are slowing down the diplomatic initiative. A U.S.-backed cease-fire resolution was adopted unanimously by the U.N. Security Council on July 20, but the Reagan administration is unable to muster enough support for an arms embargo against Iran to enforce it. "The Iranians have been successful in defusing the momentum, and the Soviets, for their own reasons, have been helpful to the Iranians in their enterprise," a State Department official said. The lack of Soviet — and Chinese — support has caused the Reagan administration to hesitate in seeking approval of an arms embargo by the council. As permanent council members, the Soviets or the Chinese could kill such a resolution with a veto. But the official, who discussed the difficult diplomatic initiative only on condition of anonymity, said the United States may go ahead anyway. "Our view is that we have to get it unstalled," he said. "We need to take steps to strengthen the secretary general's hand." Since mid-summer, Javier Perez de Cuellar, the U.N. secretary general, has shuttled between Iranian and Iraqi officials trying to arrange a cease-fire in the seven-year-old war. Iraq quickly agreed to comply in July, but has since hardened its bargaining position, the State Department official said. Iran, meanwhile, has said neither yes nor no to the cease-fire resolution. Despite the threat of a Soviet or Chinese veto, the Reagan administration may gamble that if an arms embargo is put to a vote in the council the Soviets and Chinese would go along rather than run the risk of antagonizing the Arab governments that back Iraq. "We're not at the end of the game," the official said. "A resolution needs 9 of the 15 members. If there is momentum, then (the Soviets and Chinese) obviously will have to reconsider their position: Do they want to be seen as doing the U.N. job?" Two months ago in his annual speech to the U.N. General Assembly, President Reagan tried to lay down a marker of U.S. resolve. He said "unless Iran clearly and unequivocally accepted the cease-fire the council would have to move rapidly" to adopt an arms embargo. It did not yield. And Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, in his own speech to the General Assembly, supported an Iranian demand for an investigation of who started the war in 1980, simultaneously with a cease-fire. "Our attitude remains the same," Martin Fitzwater, the White House spokesman, said Thursday. "We want the cease-fire in the Iran-Iraq war. We want compliance with the cease-fire resolution 598. And we are working on a second resolution which would establish an arms embargo." Fitzwater added, however: "The timing is one that cannot be predicted." See GULF on Page A2

"This administration is conducting a war on drugs," Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., said. "It will be very hard to explain support for a person who used marijuana while a professor of law... I would have a very difficult time supporting his nomination."

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., of the White House is "going to have to seriously consider" whether Ginsburg's confirmation remains possible.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, called Ginsburg's revelations "a very negative factor," though he said he was not yet ready to vote against the nomination.

Bennett's call to Ginsburg appeared to be a classic example of the president's handling of such politically-sensitive personnel problems. Reagan, over his years in government, has shown extreme reluctance to dismiss aides or back away from nominees who have become an embarrassment, typically allowing subordinates to put pressure on them to resign or withdraw.

After calling Reagan, Bennett telephoned Ginsburg at his judicial office here and told him that he felt strongly that the marijuana use was "not right," according to Miller, who said that Bennett added that Ginsburg's acknowledgement made the fight to confirm him "not winnable." To continue only "hurts the president," Bennett said.

At this point, Ginsburg could gracefully withdraw something he would not be able to do later, the education secretary said.

Ginsburg gave a non-committal response, saying that he was surprised at Bennett's recommendation to withdraw. Only hours earlier, the nominee said, he had been at the White House and received encouraging signals.

Bennett responded by saying that he had talked with the president and with White House officials.

The conversation marked a turnaround for Bennett himself, who only Monday had given a strong speech in favor of Ginsburg at a cabinet breakfast. By Thursday, however, the education secretary turned against the nominee after confirming that his marijuana use had occurred when he was a law teacher.

"When he learned that this took place when Ginsburg was teaching students law, something really snapped," Miller said. "His very much a law-and-order man, and feels particularly strongly about drugs in schools," the spokesman said.

Senate approves Sousa's work as national march

WASHINGTON (AP)—A bill designating John Philip Sousa's "The Stars and Stripes Forever" as the national march was passed Friday by the Senate on a voice vote.

In introducing the bill, Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., said the Sousa composition "has long been recognized around the world as the American march. It captures the energy, exuberance and drive of the American spirit."

A similar measure has been introduced in the House. The House Post Office and Civil Service census and population subcommittee is expected to take up the legislation Nov. 17 and have it on the floor for passage in January.

Ginsburg admitted Thursday that he had used marijuana during the 1960s and 1970s, telling senators that his use of the drug ended in 1979, when he was a 33-year-old Harvard Law School professor.

Support for Ginsburg's nomination has been shaky from the start, partly because of his relative obscurity in the legal field. He has been a judge on the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia for barely more than a year, and has written few articles and legal opinions, particularly for a nominee to the highest court in the land.

Moreover, since his nomination only nine days ago, Ginsburg's support has dropped considerably after a number of potentially damaging disclosures. On Saturday, it was reported that he had owned roughly $100,000 in stock in a cable TV company at the same time he had taken on the highest court in the land. His position on a major cable television case.

U.S. wary of peace talk proposal

WASHINGTON (AP)—The State Department responded cautiously Friday to Nicaragua's offer to hold indirect cease-fire negotiations with the Contra rebels, saying such talks can end the fighting only if the Sandinistas conduct them in good faith.

Department spokesman Charles E. Redman, assessing a speech Thursday by President Daniel Ortega in which the cease-fire proposal was announced, said Nicaragua was still "far from being in compliance" with the Central American peace plan.

In the speech, Ortega reversed himself and agreed to end cease-fire talks with the U.S.-backed rebels through an intermediary. Agreement on a cease-fire is a major element of the peace plan signed by Nicaragua and four other Central American countries in August.

The plan was scheduled to have been implemented by Thursday, but the region's leaders have informally extended the deadline until January.

On Capitol Hill, meantime, a six-member Senate observer group left for a weekend trip to Central America, with both Republicans and Democrats welcoming Ortega's move toward mediated talks.

"The news is very positive," said Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn. "It is the most significant news since the Aug. 7 signing of the peace accord in Guatemala City and puts 'new life in this very fragile and difficult process,'" he said.

Jobs

"The economy had a tremendous amount of momentum going into the October market crash and didn't flinch in the face of it," said Edward Yardeni, chief economist for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. "Consumer spending is driving the economy. The key to that jobs, not stock prices. And the job market is very very strong."

Of the 550,000 new payroll jobs in October, 65,000 were on manufacturing assembly lines, raising to 220,000 the growth in factory employment since June.

Labor Statistics Commissioner Janet L. Norwood said payroll employment rose last month in more than 60 percent of the nation's goods-producing industries, a sector largely behind for most of the latest economic recovery.

Indexed October employment in three manufacturing industries — furniture, rubber and plastics, and printing and publishing — reached an all-time high, she said. "And factory overtime, averaging 4 hours a week, was at the highest level in more than 14 years."

Construction employment, adjusted for seasonal variations, rebounded in October, with 40,000 new jobs after a drop of 30,000 in September. At 5 million, however, the number of construction workers holding jobs remains no higher than in August.

Meanwhile, the service sectors of the economy resumed their role as the biggest job creator, following only moderate growth in September. Altogether, service providers produced 80 percent of the 660,000 new jobs in October.

Business and hospital services provided 150,000 of the new jobs and retail trade added another 70,000. Local government payrolls climbed by 165,000, but 65,000 of them represented teachers and other school employees returning to work after strikes.

Friday's unemployment report also officially makes this recovery the longest on record at 59 months, exceeding a 58-month economic expansion that ended with a minor recession in January 1980.

Since the end of the 1981-82 recession, U.S. employment has grown by more than 14 million, more than double the job growth of Europe and Japan combined; the number of jobs has dropped by nearly 5 million people to 7.2 million last month, and the unemployment rate has fallen from 10.8 percent.

Citing the same October job figures as evidence, analysts disagreed Friday on how much longer the recovery can continue after the stock market collapse.

Asked if the president was urged to consider Social Security cuts, Packwood responded, "As part of an acceptable package."

"I believe it's not the president and the administration" could accept," said Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., the assistant House minority leader. "I'd certainly be willing to go to them and urge them to accept it."

But Lott said if Social Security cuts became part of the final proposal, "I'm out of there."

"Social Security has never been on the table. It remains off the table," said Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., the House majority leader and chairman of the talks.

The Social Security issue was raised in the morning meeting with Reagan by the Senate Republicans, who earlier proposed in the talks limiting all cost-of-living increases in federal programs including Social Security.

"Assessing the talks generally," Foley said Friday was a profitable day. "We're moving forward," he said. "There is a sense that we're moving toward a more specific examination of the issues — more explicit decisions."

However, he said he did not expect a final agreement until the end of next week, "if then."

The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 84 degrees at Emmet, while the lowest reported the low of 16 degrees.

The extended outlook for Southern Idaho, Monday through Wednesday — Cloudy, Monday and Tuesday, with chance of showers. Partly cloudy Wednesday. Highs 50s. Lows 25 to 35.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperatures were in the 80s at Priddy, Texas. The lowest was 13 degrees at Hibbing, Minn.

State: Avoid overreacting

BOISE (AP) — There are right and wrong ways for Idaho employers to minimize their vulnerability to legal action from employees worried about being infected with acquired immunodeficiency syndrome. Firing someone infected with the AIDS virus is the wrong way, unless the disease is interfering with job performance, state epidemiologist Dr. Charles Brokopp told the Idaho-Job Service Employers Committee on Friday. "If you know a person has AIDS you probably wouldn't choose to hire that individual but by all means don't use AIDS as the reason to fire them." But, he said, "There's nothing wrong with discharging an employee who can't do his job." Brokopp, deputy director of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare's Bureau of Preventive Medicine, said employers should avoid overreacting to fears and misinformation about AIDS. Instead, they should treat employees with the deadly disease the same as they would a worker suffering from any other serious chronic illness.

State reopens computer bid

BOISE (AP) — Bidding on a $1 million computer project for the Idaho Legislature has been reopened after Hewlett-Packard Co. complained that the original specifications were biased toward IBM. "We thought that for things to be correct, we ought to rebid it," said House Speaker Tom Rood. R. G. Gensco, I don't think you can call it a rigged bid, but, yes, in fact, it was a slanted bid." Boyd said the use of IBM terminology in the request for bids "was what caused the consternation," although the request allowed for alternative proposals. Bids were to have been awarded Oct. 30. The delay means the equipment is unlikely to be installed for the 1987 legislative session, according to Legislative Auditor Bruce Balderston, who is coordinating the bidding. IBM and two other companies, AT&T and Digital Equipment Co., submitted bids by the Oct. 16 deadline. Both AT&T and Digital submitted basic and alternative bids.

Phone regulation a must

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission says it will name a competitor to the sole regulator of long-distance telephone service. The commission on Friday signed an order that it will regulate companies such as MCI Telecommunications that compete with already regulated phone companies for in-state long-distance service. And Jan. 6, the commission will start hearings on whether MCI should be issued a certificate to operate in Idaho. The existence of a monopoly is not the prerequisite to regulatory authority," the commission said. "We reject the contention of Mountain Bell, Troy and Century Telephone which stated in its special terms that if monopoly disappears, regulation must...also disappear," the PUC said.

INEL competes for facility

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The Idaho National Engineering Laboratory is in the running for a proposed $60 million facility that would simulate the thermal and blast effects of a nuclear explosion. The Large-Blast Thermal Simulator has been proposed by the U.S. Army for testing effects of nuclear explosions on tanks, armored vehicles and other weapons. The facility would use non-nuclear devices to produce extreme heat and pressure. Peter Dirkmaat, Department of Energy-Idaho acting special programs director, said an estimated 200 jobs would be created during the construction period, with 30 permanent jobs remaining for the 30-year life of the project. The INEL is competing with the White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico for the project.

Tax evaders can't hide

BOISE (AP) — There's bad news for those Idaho residents who try to get away from filing state tax returns — or paying the taxes. The state's getting better and better at finding such procrastinators. And thanks to increasing cooperation with the federal Internal Revenue Service, the number of nonfilers who are turned up by state investigators is going up. On Friday, the IRS director for Idaho, Richard Orasco, presented a plaque to state employee Roger Clapp for his work in uncovering tax violators and helping the IRS do the same. The plaque included a U.S. Treasury Department Special Agent badge, making Redge a "T-Man," but Orasco said it was an honorary title only. "This award is significant and recognizes Mr. Redge Clapp's ongoing efforts in assisting the Internal Revenue Service's tax compliance and enforcement programs," Orasco said.

Settlement reached in suit

BOISE (AP) — A settlement has been reached in the multimillion-dollar lawsuit filed by the parents of 17-year-old Christopher Peterman, who was tortured and beaten to death by fellow juvenile inmates at the Ada County Jail more than five years ago. No details of the settlement were disclosed Friday. But Ada County Commissioner Mike Johnson said county officials were glad to have the situation behind them. Peterman, who was jailed for failing to pay $73 in traffic fines, was killed when other youths repeatedly kicked, burned and beat him during a period of 15 hours over the Memorial Day weekend in 1982. His parents, Lloyd and Janice Peterman, originally sought $29 million from Ada County. They alleged, among other things, that supervision at the jail was lax, that an audio system designed to monitor the juvenile cell was malfunctioning during the beatings, and that their son was placed in a cell with prisoners who had severely beaten another youth less than two weeks earlier.

Flaw shows age limit error

BOISE (AP) — Although it was state-policy, for a period of 26 months, there was no state law forbidding licensed drivers under age 16 to drive at night, a lawsuit has revealed. Richard and Thoreau Lystad were killed in an Oct. 14, 1984, traffic accident on Idaho 56 south of McCall. Their survivors filed a $1.5 million lawsuit against the parents of the driver of the other vehicle, James Simpson, a Valley County resident. The lawsuit alleged the Simpson youth was inexperienced, pulled into the wrong lane, was driving too fast for existing conditions and was improperly driving after dark with a license restricted to daylight only. Before the trial started, defense attorneys produced a statement from state officials that because of reorganization and oversight between July 1982 and November 1984, there was no state law against licensed drivers under the age of 16 driving at night.

Economic director named

BOISE (AP) — A Nebraska official will start work Dec. 1 as Idaho's new administrator for the Division of Economic Development. Commerce Director Jim Hawkins on Friday announced the appointment of Gordon Thompson, currently director of the Box Butte County Development Corp., Nebraska. Hawkins said Thompson will work toward expanding Idaho's resource-based industries and developing new ones.

Witness details events after Berg killing

DENVER (AP) — A federal judge said Friday that the mistress of the late founder of The Order could tell a jury how the white supremacists gathered at her Wyoming home to read news accounts of the 1984 slaying of Alan Berg. U.S. District Court Judge Richard P. Matsch issued the ruling in the trial of David Lane, Bruce Pierce, Jean-Craig and Richard Scutari, all members of The Order, who are accused of civil rights violations in Berg's machine-gun slaying. Friday's proceedings wrapped up the second full week of the trial. Craig, daughter of defendant Jean Craig and mistress of the late Robert Mathews, initially described events involving the defendants without the jury present so defense attorneys could learn the nature of her comments before she testified in front of jurors. She has been kept under heavy security while entering and leaving the federal courthouse during two days of testimony. Matsch ruled that Order founder Robert Mathews' comments to his mistress in private could not be introduced as evidence, but allowed Craig's testimony about the defendants both before and after Berg's slaying. Craig said Mathews told her the day before Berg's death that he, Pierce, Scutari and Lane were "going to Denver to kill Alan Berg." She said Mathews told her, "Pierce asked to be the one to kill Alan Berg." Craig said she kept a calendar of information about Mathews "because I loved him." Lane, she recalled Mathews telling her, would drive the car "because he knew the area and the best way to get out of town." Lane formerly lived in Denver, prosecutors said. She said Mathews also told her specifically that Scutari "was going to Denver to kill Alan Berg." Mathews, who was killed in a shootout with FBI agents in December 1984, was identified by prosecutors as the fifth member of the team that killed Berg. Craig never was formally married to him although she bore his son.

Zillah Craig, left, tells of gathering to read news accounts about the murder

Defense lawyers questioned Craig closely about the places and dates of her conversations with Mathews in an effort to point up some confusion in her mind. But there was only one point where she admitted she was wrong — when she recalled some conversations concerning Scutari that actually took place before she met the man. Craig said most of her conversations with Mathews occurred at her trailer home in Laramie, Wyo. Mathews praised her mother, Jean Craig, after she returned from a surveillance trip to Denver, Zillah Craig said. On the morning of June 18, 1984, the day Berg was shot, Mathews left her trailer about 7 a.m. and drove away with someone in a car, leaving his own car in Laramie, she said. "He said he and the others were of their way to Denver to kill Alan Berg," she said. Mathews told Craig he didn't know what time they would be back, but he arrived in Laramie at 1 a.m. June 19, she testified. "He knocked on the door," she said. "Who is it?" He identified himself and I let him in," she said.

"He got up early, got some papers and brought them back to the house. Bruce Pierce and Richard Scutari came to the trailer later that morning. They read newspapers about the Berg murder." She was asked if there was discussion about the crime. "No," she said. "It was real quiet."

'Summit' calls for more negotiations

BOISE (AP) — Idaho officials held a water quality "summit conference" at the Statehouse on Friday, but the chief action was a resolution in essence urging more negotiations on new water rules for the state. In a quick session chaired by Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, legislators adopted resolutions formally rejecting the Department of Health and Welfare's proposed water quality rules. The resolution directed all involved to resume negotiations aimed at producing general agreement on "antidegradation rules for state streams."

Greg Forge, an aide to Gov. Cecil Andrus, said he hoped to arrange another negotiating meeting within 10 days. The federal Environmental Protection Agency, which has caused some confusion in Idaho by unclear directives on water quality, has promised a clarification within days, Forge said. Idaho is the only state without nonpoint source antidegradation rules. They are intended to preserve stream quality against pollution from nonpoint sources, such as logging activities, farming or mining. Negotiations have been dragging on for months with no agreement. The Idaho Conservation League and other groups have served notice they will file legal action to force EPA to adopt guidelines, since the state has not acted. The group says it plans to file the legal action within a few days. Noh, who is chairman of the Senate Resources and Environment Committee, said he felt the lawsuit would have little impact, except to spur the emphasis on negotiations. "In my opinion, it should have little impact except to raise the level of interest in reaching settlement," he said. Of the "summit conference" meeting on Friday, Noh said it was "a clear signal to stimulate attempts to come up with satisfactory water quality regulations. It doesn't really mean a slowdown in those efforts. It should expedite efforts to come up with our own solution," he said. A subcommittee of Resources and Environment formally filed an objection to Health and Welfare's proposed rules, as did a number from the House Resources and Conservation Committee. The Senate Health and Welfare Committee did not produce enough subcommittee members to form a quorum to take action, but Chairman Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Idaho, said he supported it. Similar action was taken by House Environmental Affairs Chairman Rep. Emerson Smock, R-Boise. Health and Welfare has been working on water quality rules which would classify state streams as A-, B- or C. Depending on the classification, activities would not be allowed which would result in significant degradation of water quality. Spokesmen for the natural resource industries such as logging, agriculture and mining, have been battling against rules they say might be so restrictive they would limit economic growth in the state. Conservation and outdoor groups have contended the state's lack of action is allowing "pollution" to continue from a number of sources.

U.S.-West German financial cooperation may not last long

By TOM RAUM
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With West Germany's lowering of a key interest rate, the world's major industrial nations for once are pulling together in an effort to calm frenzied financial markets, but the international cooperation may be short-lived.

Some analysts said Friday that the move, a victory for the policies of Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, might not be enough to stabilize gyrating currencies. Others suggested that coordinated interest-rate reductions held certain high-stakes risks, including a resurgence of inflation, particularly in Europe.

West Germany's Bundesbank, which had come under mounting criticism from the United States and other allies to lower interest rates, cut two short-term lending rates Thursday to their lowest levels in months.

Analysis

Even if, as by some accounts, the West German central bank was pulled kicking and screaming into taking such action, the move played out as part of a coordinated effort to ease monetary policy. It was followed by prime rate reductions by major U.S. banks.

A further easing of the Federal Reserve's discount rate — the key rate it charges for loans to banks and other financial institutions — also was widely anticipated.

The lower interest rates initially buoyed stock and bond markets, but did little to slow the dollar's decline, which slumped again Friday in New York trading.

The United States has long leaned on West Germany to do more to stimulate its economy, claiming tight monetary policies there have stifled growth and exacerbated the huge U.S. trade deficit. But fiscally conservative German policymakers had long resisted such a move, citing fears of rekindling domestic inflation by overheating the economy.

However, the collapse of stock markets is propelling the major industrial nations nearer to a new accord on economic coordination to replace a February 1987 Paris agreement to support exchange rates at "current levels."

Details of such a new agreement could be sketched out this weekend when Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan meets with other central bank leaders at a conference in Switzerland.

And West Germany's move to join in lowering interest rates — which theoretically should allow the dollar to stabilize at new, if lower, levels — showed that for once the Germans were on the same wavelength as the other major trading partners, analysts suggested.

Before the stock market plummeted, Baker's harsh criticism of West Germany was aimed mainly at trade. He contended that its concerns with keeping the lid on inflation were undermining efforts to stabilize the dollar while dampening consumer demand among West German consumers for U.S. goods.

But when Baker and other administration officials earlier this week signaled that they were abandoning a policy of propping up the dollar and would let it fall — rather than risk a recession — the appeals to Bonn took on a new insistence.

For one thing, the falling dollar was battering the export-driven West German economy by driving up the dollar price of German goods.

And, by telegraphing that the United States was not about to halt the dollar's slide with higher interest rates, the onus for stabilizing the dollar shifted from the Federal Reserve to other central banks.

The Bank of Japan, for instance, has spent billions in recent days in buying dollars in an effort to keep the dollar's fall from further driving up the value of the yen — a direct threat to Japan's own export-reliant economy.

A falling dollar, while holding out the promise of easing the U.S. trade deficit by making imports costlier and exports more competitive, also carried with it the risk that foreign investors would pull out of dollar-based securities — leading to further falls in the dollar's value.

That could be reversed by raising interest rates in the United States to once again make the dollar securities attractive, but that course now has clearly been ruled out by both the Reagan administration and the Fed.

Thus, the pressure mounted on West Germany to lower its own interest rates to accommodate the lower U.S. rates in the effort to restore currency stability.

But some economists said the Bundesbank's move was too little, too late — and that, by failing to also lower its key discount rate, the action provided only symbolic support for international economic coordination.

"It was only a minor easing," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Brothers, a New York investment house. "The German cut in interest rates was as much a desire to stabilize the deutsche mark against the French franc as it was to work with the United States."

Other analysts suggested that coordinated interest-rate cuts could backfire and lead to higher inflation both here and in Europe.

"The central bankers at the behest of Mr. Baker have panicked in the face of financial market hysteria," said Edward Yardeni, chief economist for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. "Lowering interest rates now could bring back the inflationary fears that got us in this pickle in the first place."

"The long-term bond rates will go back up, and that will set off another stock market crash," Yardeni speculated.

Solo female teen sailor sets record for voyage

NEW YORK (AP) — Tania Aebi, who says she embarked 2½ years ago as an aimless 18-year-old in "a fire ignominy," completed her solo round-the-world sail Friday as an "accomplished person," her father said.

The poised, smiling Miss Aebi, now 21, docked at the South Street Seaport Museum at 12:40 p.m. after being towed by a Coast Guard power boat from Sandy Hook, N.J.

She had sailed her 26-foot sloop, the Varuna, into Sandy Hook on Thursday, the first finish of her 27,000-mile circumnavigation. But with a broken engine and the wind against her, it was decided to use a tow to bring her to the seaport, her starting point on May 28, 1985.

Later, amid popping champagne corks and a full-scale press conference, Miss Aebi said "I'm happy to be home. It means I'm alive."

Cruising World magazine said she was the first American woman to sail around the world alone, and a telegram from President Reagan congratulated her for having "in a way few people have, conquered the beauty, the majesty, and the danger of the sea."

Her plans now are to write a book about the voyage and do some more sailing, but not another solo voyage. "I wouldn't do it again, not by myself," said Miss Aebi, whose name is pronounced "abby." A traditional harbor welcome for a hero was laid on — a fireboat with four nozzles spraying blessed the Varuna and boat horns blared as her vessel, with sails furled, landed between the museum's two 19th-century cargo sailing ships.

Miss Aebi, in a yellow slicker and white wool cap, embraced her boyfriend, whom she met at one of her Pacific Ocean stops, then was reunited on the dock with her father, Ernat, a Swiss-born artist, and two sisters and a brother.

Her mother, Sabine, died of cancer midway through the voyage and Miss Aebi flew back to her home in New York for a week.

For companionship at sea, she left with a cat who was to die of cancer in the Pacific.

"I got another cat in Tahiti to keep him company before he died and when he died I got another cat to keep her company," she said.

Her greatest peril may have been in a Mediterranean storm that blew up when she was exhausted, she said.

"It was howling and lightning — I never saw lightning like that before. It was just like a strobe light going all around me. I took down the sails and waited. I went to sleep and I woke up and the boat had gone over. ... It was filled with water and everything in the cockpit were gone — jerrycans and sails and tools and all sorts of important things.

"I panicked for a little while and I pulled an emergency beacon, but

Law school yawns at flap over pot use

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The news that Supreme Court nominee Douglas Ginsburg smoked marijuana at Harvard Law School provoked little criticism Friday from faculty and students, although drug use there was described as uncommon.

Harvard Law Professor Hal Scott, 43, who has known Ginsburg for 25 years and was at a party in the late 1970s when Ginsburg accepted some marijuana, said the incident should "not be characterized as a big deal."

"It was an indiscretion and he dealt with it," said Scott. "We all make mistakes, but I don't think this should keep him from the nomination."

Scott said the party was the only occasion that he has seen marijuana present. Scott said he chastized Ginsburg at the time and that Ginsburg agreed it was a mistake.

On Thursday, Ginsburg admitted using marijuana once in the 1960s and on a few occasions in the 1970s, including the party he was a professor at Harvard Law. He said "it was a mistake and I regret it."

Scott said he doubted that marijuana is common among Harvard Law School students. "Kids are pretty serious these days. I think they do a lot less of that sort of thing than the prior generation."

Ken Vermeulen, 23, a first-year student, said Ginsburg's marijuana use was a popular topic on campus. Friday, he said, those criticizing the nominee, saying "he who is without sin cast the first stone."

Vermeulen said marijuana is present on campus but "not nearly as much as college or high school." But he said he was shocked when a professor was doing it.

David Musto, a Yale University professor of psychiatry and expert on history of medicine and drug use, said "the use of marijuana in academic circles in the middle 1960s was uncommon, nor was it particularly significant."

"It is a hazard that the administration has in trying to pick any young individual for the Supreme Court," he said. "In the 1980s our attitudes toward drugs have changed a great deal and the Reagan Administration bears a great responsibility for this."

Indiscretion dealt with

Peter Kochanburger, who graduated from Harvard Law School last year and now is associate director of student services, said marijuana "is not prevalent around here at all."

Court says libel laws apply to Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — A member of Congress may be sued for defamatory statements made in a letter to the executive branch even though he may consider the contents parts of his official duties, federal appeals court panel ruled Friday.

A dissenting opinion said the ruling denies a congressman even the immunity given to a postman.

The 2-1 ruling written by District of Columbia Circuit Judge James L. Buckley, a former Republican senator from New York, ordered the lower court to rehear a case it dismissed against Rep. Don Sundquist, R-Tenn.

The appeals court ruled that Sundquist's comments about a Tennessee attorney in a 1985 letter to then Attorney General William French Smith were not covered by the speech or debate clause in the Constitution. The clause protects members of Congress from legal action against remarks made in congressional floor debate, committee work or in performing other legislative duties.

Buckley, in his majority decision, rejected what he said was an effort to extend the reach of official immunity to members of Congress. "We hold that members of Congress are not entitled to immunity from common law torts committed while acting within the scope of their official duties but outside the sphere protected by the speech-or-debate clause," the decision said.

Judge Abner Mikva, a former Democratic congressman from Illinois, in a dissenting opinion, said the decision "denies to our governmental structure."

"It holds congressmen cannot also qualify for the immunity that courts have given to postmen," Mikva said.

Without congressional immunity, we are liable to have a Congress that is deterred from the vigorous exercise of its constitutional responsibilities."

The suit was filed by Wayne Chastain of Memphis, an attorney for Memphis Area Legal Services Inc. in a Jan. 14, 1985 letter to Smith, Sundquist accused Chastain of teaming up with "two convicted felons" to harass juvenile court officials in child-support cases. Chastain was defending indigent parents jailed by the courts for failure to make child-support payments.

Sundquist's press secretary, Ralph Perrey, said the congressman was in his district on Friday and not immediately available to comment on the decision. Perrey said he could not comment on the decision himself.

Congressional attorney Steven Ross, who represents Sundquist, called the decision "ill-reasoned and ill-founded" and said he is inclined to "ask the whole appeals court to set aside the panel's ruling, although he might appeal directly to the Supreme Court."

"It is dangerously antidemocratic because it challenges the right of the American people to be informed of government activity by their elected members of Congress," Ross said. "It puts forward the absurd notion that a low-ranking Department of Agriculture official would be immune from comments to the press, but an elected representative of the people of Tennessee is not immune for commenting to those people he represents."

The suit cited Sundquist for providing a copy of the letter to the press and for remarks made to reporters.

Chastain, in a telephone interview from Memphis, said the decision was proper but he expects an appeal. "I take my hat off to Judge Buckley," he said, adding that Sundquist was asking for "a brand new type of immunity."

Buckley, in the decision joined by Judge Stephen F. Williams, noted that Sundquist did not claim immunity from suit under the constitutional protection of congressional speech and debate but had asked for a broader immunity.

"No imperative of office requires that a member of Congress, while acting outside the scope of his legislative duties, be free to reach out with impunity and name names without regard for the consequence to individual reputations," the decision said.

Woman draws 4 years in prison in twins' deaths

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A woman was sentenced Friday to four years in prison for leaving her 3-month-old twins unattended in a car where they died of heatstroke on a summer day in 1985.

Beverly Jean Ernat, 26, was convicted of child endangerment in April.

Orange County Superior Court Judge Jean Rheinheimer said she imposed the prison sentence because of the seriousness of the offense and the vulnerability of the victims.

According to testimony, Ms. Ernat left Adam and Ashley in her car about 7 a.m. on July 20, 1986, when she went into a shop where her boyfriend lived and fell asleep with him. According to autopsy reports, the twins died no later than 10:30 a.m., nearly two hours before they were discovered.

Trial challenging fee for lawyers concludes

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A final dispute over the link between nuclear weapons tests and cancer ended the trial Friday of a suit by 5,000 "atomic veterans" challenging an 1864 law that effectively denies them lawyers in Veterans Administration disability cases.

After the last of a series of VA-affiliated scientists testified in support of standards under which "nearly" all radiation claims have been denied, U.S. District Judge Marilyn Hall Patel took the case under consideration.

She is not likely to rule for many months, and her decision is certain to be appealed.

Patel ruled in 1984 that the Civil War-era law allowing veterans to pay lawyers no more than $10 in disability cases unconstitutional. It prevented them from presenting their claims effectively.

The U.S. Supreme Court

disagreed, saying the law was a legitimate means of keeping the system simple and allowing veterans to retain all the benefits they got.

But the high court's ruling left room for a challenge that was limited to the VA. Patel then allowed a suit on behalf of veterans who took part in U.S. atmospheric nuclear tests in the Pacific and Nevada through 1962, or who occupied Hiroshima and Nagasaki after the atomic bombings in World War II.

In pretrial proceedings, Patel hit the VA with $145,000 in penalties for destroying or withholding evidence. She said last January that the agency had shown "a callous disregard for all processes of court" and ordered an independent lawyer appointed to review documents would be produced and employees could speak freely about problems.

U.S. will arm Chad units with Stinger anti-aircraft missiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will arm Chad with Stinger anti-aircraft missiles and has sent a military training team to the African country to boost its defenses against what the State Department says is the threat of Libyan attack.

The decision was made two months ago, but not announced until Friday by the department's spokesman, Charles E. Redman. "It is obvious the reason we do this," he said. "These are defensive weapons systems, they are air defense systems, and Chad is subject to continuing overflights by Libyan aircraft."

The shoulder-fired missiles are relatively easy to handle, and sometimes are described by weapons experts as "a terrorist's dream." They could be used by guerrillas against Israel forced the Reagan administration last month to remove Stingers from a proposed arms package for Saudi Arabia, meanwhile, have used Stingers to attack U.S. helicopters. There is speculation they were provided by U.S.-backed rebels in Afghanistan, but Redman said he did not know how the missiles got into Iranian hands.

Asked if the Reagan administration was "concerned the Stingers might be seized by the Libyans," the spokesman said, "without elaboration: 'The necessary security precautions are being taken.' He refused, meanwhile, to say how many Stingers would be delivered or the cost.

Chad has received liberal U.S. support in recent years — $16 million in emergency military aid in September 1986, another $10 million last March, $9 million in regular military assistance this year and $11.8 million in economic aid.

Pyanze is Chad's primary backer, with the United States playing a backup role.

"The air threat to Chad is real, even today, even while there is a so-called truce in place," Redman said.

"Overflights by Libyan aircraft continue, for example. The Libyan air force has been very active in this war inside of Chadian territory."

He said the Stingers, as an anti-aircraft defense weapon, "are useful to the Chadians in the environment they find themselves."

Refusing to compare the situation in Chad to other countries from whom Stingers have been withheld, Redman said: "The decision in this case is made to provide a defensive weapons system to people who need it in order to deter and act against outside aggression."

Sen-Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., one of the major opponents of Stinger sales to Africa and the Middle East, was briefed on the deal by Assistant Secretary of State Chester Crocker, aides said.

DeConcini, who has proposed legislation to ban the sale of Stingers to Persian Gulf nations, is "very concerned" about the lack of proper safeguards in Chad to protect the Stingers from falling into the wrong hands, said DeConcini's spokesman, Jamie Ridge.

Courtroom skirmish to Hakim

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arms merchant Albert Hakim won a legal point in an Iran-Contra case Friday when a federal appeals court including Supreme Court nominee Douglas H. Ginsburg slapped an independent counsel—Lawrence E. Walsh's tactics.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals unanimously refused to enforce a contempt order against Hakim for not giving prosecutors records of eight foreign companies involved in the Iran-Contra affair.

The appeals judges also criticized Walsh for using congressional testimony obtained through limited immunity grants to document the claim that Hakim controlled the records.

The case was sent back to U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. to determine if the lower court has jurisdiction to enforce a subpoena on the foreign corporations.

The judge held that Hakim, a target of the investigation, could properly invoke his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination and refuse to turn over the documents if he could prove merely producing them "might tend to incriminate him."

In this situation, the court said, Walsh could not confer limited or so-called "use" immunity on Hakim for the narrow purpose of providing the documents.

The appeals panel's decision was written by Judge Harry Edwards and joined by Judge James L. Buckley in a dissent.

Walsh and his business partner, retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord, operated Swiss-based companies through which U.S. arms were sold to Iran and profits diverted to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Walsh is investigating the roles of Secord and Hakim in the arms-for-hostages deals along with that of Col. Oliver North, who was fired from his National Security Council job last year after the diversion of funds to the Contras became public.

Hakim's lawyer, N. Richard Janis, hailed the ruling as "a victory not only for Mr. Hakim but for all citizens who are entitled to protection under the Fifth Amendment from prosecutorial overreaching. It affirms that no matter how important a prosecutor may believe his investigation is, he must still comply with the rule of law."

In a statement issued by his office, Walsh said: "The opinion of the court is being studied and a prompt decision will be made as to the appropriate way in which to proceed."

Although a setback for Walsh, the ruling did not appear to be a serious blow to the investigation. Earlier this week, Walsh's staff finally obtained more than 2,000 pages of Swiss bank records tracing the intricate financial web of the arms deals.

Reagan picks Time editor to be envoy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan announced Friday he is nominating Henry Kissinger to be his special envoy to Austria.

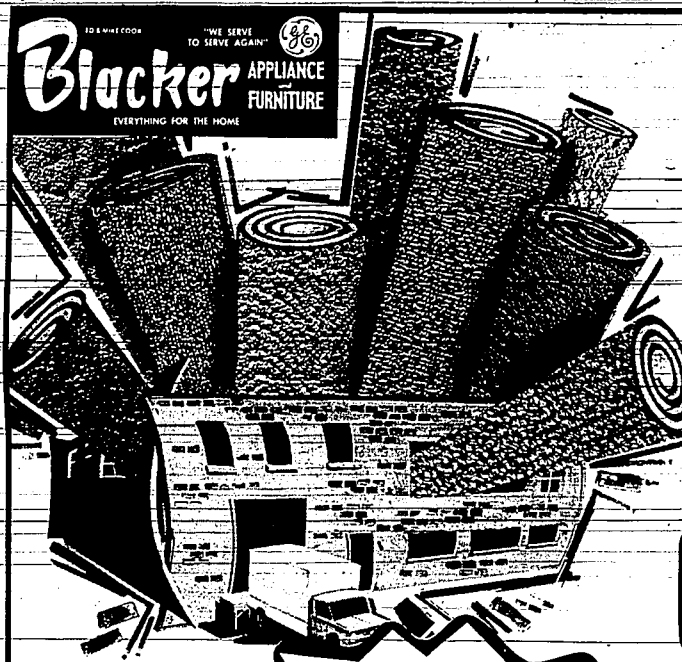

Gruenwald, 64, was born in Vienna. He has been editor-in-chief of Time since 1979 and has been with the magazine since 1945, rising through the ranks from staff writer.

If confirmed by the Senate, he would succeed Ronald S. Lauder in the Vienna post.

The White House also said Reagan is nominating Richard Huntington Melton, director of the Office of Central American and Panamanian Affairs in the State Department, as ambassador to Nicaragua.

Melton, 52, has served in Lisbon, Montevideo, and London as well as Washington in a Foreign Service career that began in 1961.

In addition, the White House said Linda J. Flaherty will be nominated as assistant administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, in charge of policy and evaluation. Since 1985, she has been executive assistant to the EPA administrator.

Former associate disputes Deaver's claim on appointment

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former lobbying associate of Michael K. Deaver gave evidence Friday, disputing the ex-presidential aide's sworn testimony that he didn't help a South Korean official get an appointment with President Reagan.

Doral S. Cooper, former assistant U.S. trade representative who later worked for Michael K. Deaver & Associates, told jurors in Deaver's perjury trial that she suggested wording for a letter the Korean envoy gave to Reagan.

Ms. Cooper testified that she cabled a South Korean official to "suggest personal themes" that could be included in the "personal, extremely confidential" letter that President Chun Doo-hwan was drafting for Kim Kihwan, his trade envoy, to deliver to Reagan.

The assistance was provided as part of the $475,000-a-year contract Michael K. Deaver & Associates had to represent the South Korean government.

Mrs. Cooper also testified when Kim was en route to Washington on Oct. 1, 1985 she told Deaver: "As far as I know the meeting has not been set up."

The conversation took place in a car while Deaver was driving to play tennis with another lobbying associate, William Sittmann, she said.

Later that day, Ms. Cooper said Sittmann called to report Kim's appointment was scheduled for the next morning. On Oct. 2, Ms. Cooper said she accompanied Kim to the west gate of the White House and left after he was admitted to the grounds.

A photograph of Kim handing the letter to Reagan was admitted into evidence after it was identified by Terry Arthur, a White House photographer who said he snapped the picture during the two-minute meeting.

Among the five perjury charges against Deaver is the allegation that he lied to the House Energy and Commerce oversight subcommittee when he denied doing anything to help Kim get the appointment.

Prosecutors contend the meeting was rescheduled after then-White House chief of staff Donald Regan canceled the appointment.

Deaver told the committee that Sittmann, a former White House aide, merely called a National Security Council official on Oct. 1 to inquire whether Kim had an appointment. Sittmann was told there was already a request for the appointment being handled through diplomatic channels, Deaver testified.

But the prosecution presented testimony of a State Department witness on Thursday that no such request had been made. Nicholas Platt, the U.S. ambassador to the Philippines who was the department's executive secretary in 1985, said the Kim appointment was arranged directly through the White House.

The only diplomatic message traffic from the U.S. embassy in Seoul indicated that Kim was en route to Washington and wanted to meet with U.S. trade officials, Platt testified.

In her cable to the South Korean government, Ms. Cooper suggested "we have to plant success stories" about U.S. trade relations with Korea.

At the time there was pressure from the United States to open South Korean markets that had been traditionally closed to American goods.

Ms. Cooper's cable suggested that the Koreans point to the positive aspects of the bilateral trade relationship to downplay South Korea's large trade surplus with the United States.

Ms. Cooper also testified that she and Deaver discussed South Korean trade issues with Gaston Sigur, then a National Security Council aide. The indictment charges that Deaver lied when he told the subcommittee that he didn't recall any contacts with the National Security Council other than Sittmann's call on the Kim visit.

During the meeting, Ms. Cooper said she warned Sigur of rising domestic political pressure in South Korea over U.S. trade demands, adding the firm "hoped there would be no unfair trade filings against Korea."

Roy Rogers gallops into court to protect 'Happy Trails' title

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Roy Rogers and a posse of attorneys galloped into U.S. District Court to head off Happy Trails Department Stores at the pass.

Rogers and the attorneys claimed the stores were using the name without permission.

The saga ended peacefully Wednesday when Judge Earl H. Carroll approved a settlement under which Happy Trails will change the name of stores here and in Denver by March 1. The stores also will stop using the song "Happy Trails" which was written in 1951 by Rogers' wife, Dale Evans.

Happy Trails Department Stores, owned by Asco Inc., has operated five stores in the Phoenix area since 1976, selling clothing, tobacco and records.

Asco's attorney, Gregory J. Nelson, said a new name has not been picked.

Rogers and Evans sued the stores in May 1985, saying they had suffered damage to their reputations as "champions of decency, law and justice" because the song and phrase Happy Trails were used to help sell "drug paraphernalia."

"Happy Trails" was the couple's trademark in movies, television and, most recently, a restaurant chain and development projects.

Rogers and Evans, of Victorville, Calif., had no comment on the settlement, a spokesman said Wednesday.

Mickey Rooney stars in Omaha fund raiser

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Who else but Mickey Rooney would appear in the world premiere of "Mickey Rooney in Mickey Rooney."

The actor will perform, present

Prince Charles and Princess Diana near station in Hamburg. Kennedy Library, said Friday he wants to expand exhibits and answer questions during the show, premiering Nov. 22.

Rooney-chase Omaha, said Karen Engelsman, executive director of the National Kidney Foundation of Nebraska. — Rooney is national spokesman for the kidney foundation.

Mickey Rooney likes the family, the small town rather than the big city, she said. "He likes the heartland, so what better place for a premiere than Omaha?"

Rooney starred in "Boys Town," the movie about the Omaha- born home.

New JFK Library chief wants more visitors

BOSTON (AP) — Charles U. Daly, new director of the John F.

His appointment was announced Friday at a news conference at the library by Frank Burke, acting archivist of the United States.

"His academic experience combined with a broad knowledge of government and community affairs will add a new and enriching dimension to the library's administration," said Caroline Kennedy, daughter of the late president and president of the John F. Kennedy Library Foundation.

The library, one of eight presidential museums, has attracted more than 2.3 million visitors since its opening in 1979.

Daly takes over Jan. 1 from John Stewart, who has been acting director since Dan Fenn's retirement in January 1986. Daly was a staff assistant to President Kennedy for congressional liaison from 1961 to 1964.

Burgess Meredith set in Hollywood sidewalk

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three hundred people warmly congratulated Burgess Meredith as his star was unveiled on the Walk of Fame.

Meredith, known as the villainous Penguin on the "Batman" television series and as the hard-nosed fight manager in the "Rocky" and "Rocky II" movies, became the 1,859th person to be honored with a star on the Hollywood walk.

The actor, 78, and his family were joined by actors Brenda Vaccaro and Carrol O'Connor, said Hollywood Chamber of Commerce spokeswoman Anna Martinez.

Meredith has starred in movies and television and on Broadway and radio and has also worked as a writer, director and producer. His more than 50 movies include "Of Mice and Men," "Day of the Locust" and "Tom, Dick and Harry."

Court resumes hearing on Mount Hood deaths

OREGON CITY, Ore. (AP) — A judge resumed hearing testimony Friday to determine whether the 13-year-old daughter of a school dean who died in Mount Hood's worst climbing disaster can sue the school.

Nine people died during a May 1986 climb sponsored by Oregon Episcopal School, a private school in suburban Portland. Among the victims was Marion C. Horwell, 42, the school's dean of students.

The hearing, which began Thursday in Clackamas County Circuit Court, is to consider whether Ma-

Horwell's brother, Donald Penater. One of the lawsuits, alleging wrongful death, was filed on behalf of her estate. It seeks more than $2 million for the care of the sole heir, Ms. Horwell's daughter, Amy.

The other lawsuit, filed by Penater as his niece's guardian and conservator, seeks more than $2 million for her emotional distress and loss of companionship.

Listed as defendants in the lawsuits are the school, Ralph Summers, the private guide hired by the school to assist in the climb; and the estate of the Rev. Thomas Goman, a teacher identified as the leader of the expedition.

Ms. Horwell, Goman and the other victims were trapped on the mountain by a spring blizzard, which included freezing winds and "whiteout" snow conditions that limited visibility at times to fewer than 10 feet.

Some of the climbers turned back. Goman and the remaining climbers later dug a snow-cave for shelter.

Summers and one of the students, Molly Schula, went back down the mountain for help.

Searchers found the cave four days after the climb began. All but two of its occupants, students Giles Thompson of Longview, Wash., and Brinton Clark of Portland, were dead or dying. Thompson and Miss Clark survived.

Nine defense witnesses, including several of Ms. Horwell's friends and colleagues, testified Thursday that they believed her job did not obligate her to go on the climb.

Miss Schula testified that Ms. Horwell was an inexperienced climber who lagged behind the others but pressed on despite the difficulties of the climb.

She was ready to accept the challenge of the mountain, Miss Schula

Judge upholds district's right to impose school dress code

ALOHA, Ore. (AP) — Oregon's attorney general says a high school policy banning shirt and displaying beer logos may be unconstitutional.

Dave Frohnmayer said schools have the right to impose such rules in the interest of keeping order, but he added such a rule would have a tough time making it through the court system.

His remarks were made in response to student demonstrations during an Aloha High School symposium on the 200th anniversary of the U.S. Constitution.

To a question about mandatory drug testing, Frohnmayer said that private enterprises may legally test workers, but such tests could not be carried out in public institutions without probable cause.

"Asked about religion in public schools, Frohnmayer said, 'I don't think it furthers the cause of religion, and it doesn't advance the cause of government to create that kind of discontent in schools."

He said he was not opposed to groups meeting for Bible study or prayer sessions on school premises, as long as participants were not coerced into the activity and it was not done on school time.

In a speech about rights granted by the Constitution, Frohnmayer recalled a trip he made to Czechoslovakia in 1974. There, he said, he witnessed Soviet soldiers carrying sub-machine guns, stopping people at random and asking to see their identification papers.

He related a story about a mythical state he called Evergreen, where two high school students lose their rights because they oppose a government ban on popular music.

Baby Tabatha up, talking with mother

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Three-year-old Tabatha Foster chatted with her parents and nurses and watched television "Foley" as she continued to recuperate from an experimental, five-organ transplant.

"All indications are good so far. They're just going ahead with caution. They keep saying caution," said Sue Cardillo, a spokeswoman at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh.

"She's continuing to impress them because she's doing so well. But at the same time, we're early to tell that this has been a big success," Miss Cardillo said.

The Madisonville, Ky., girl received a new liver, pancreas, small intestine and parts of a stomach and colon during a 15-hour operation that ended Sunday. The procedure was performed twice before in the United States, both times unsuccessfully.

Tabatha, who remained in critical but stable condition, was born with a fatal, congenital deformation of the intestines known as short gut syndrome. She developed liver failure from her highly concentrated liquid diet.

Iranian commandos shoot up American-managed tanker

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iranian commandos shot up a U.S.-managed tanker from a speedboat Friday, and Iraq said its warplanes bombed a petrochemical plant in the Persian Gulf coast.

The 103,584-ton Grand Wisdom anchored off Dubai in the southern gulf with five rocket-grenade holes in its hull from the first attack on neutral shipping in nearly two weeks. The tanker is registered in Panama.

No casualties were reported in the pre-dawn assault and the crew quickly extinguished a small fire, marine salvage executives said.

They said the raid was the first by an Iranian speedboat since Oct. 24 and appeared to be retaliation for an Iraqi air raid on an Iranian tanker Wednesday. The gulf neighbors have been at war since September 1980.

The attack took place about 25 miles from where the U.S. Navy frigate Carr fired on a United Arab Emirates fishing boat Sunday, killing an Indian seaman. The Carr's officers apparently believed the boat was an Iranian craft preparing to attack a refueling tanker the Carr was escorting.

Shipping sources, all of whom spoke on condition of anonymity, said no American warships were in the area when the Grand Wisdom was hit.

Teekay Shipping Co. of Long Beach, Calif., manages the tanker. Capt. Vinay Pat Wardhan, vice president for ship management, said the rocket-propelled grenades hit the stern above the waterline and some stores were burned, but no oil spilled or caught fire.

U.S. warships escort only U.S.-flagged ships, which include 11 Kuwaiti tankers that have been registered in the United States so the Navy can protect them.

Iran accuses Kuwait of aiding Iraq, its neighbor at the head of the gulf, and last year began attacking ships owned by or serving the sheikhdom. Iran fired three missiles into Kuwait's oil terminal-anchorage complex last month, hitting two tankers and a major loading dock.

American officials say the "rules of engagement" allow U.S. warships to offer humanitarian aid to other ships that request it, but not to intervene in an attack on a vessel that does not fly the Stars and Stripes.

In Washington, the Pentagon said the 16th convoy of refueled Kuwait tankers and Navy warships began moving down the gulf Friday, with the frigate Thach on the ... supertanker ... near the island, about 140 miles from Kuwait, on the first convey in July.

It said the ships "passed Iran's Farsi Island without incident this morning." The refueled supertanker Bridgeton struck a mine near the island, about 140 miles from Kuwait, on the first convey in July.

It said an Iraqi plane was shot down Thursday night and crashed in Saudi-Arabian waters.

Arab leaders will convene on Sunday

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Arab leaders gather Sunday for their first summit in five years, with rifts stemming, largely, from conflicting positions on Iran and Iraq threatening once again to frustrate efforts to forge a new conference.

The three-day conference will be held in the 100-seat Royal Theater, the same hall where most Arab leaders met seven years ago for a summit that only served to cement disunity.

A Palestinian leader, speaking on condition of anonymity, called this weekend Arab summit "crucial" as crucial it "could either mark an Arab renaissance or a return to the Dark Ages of wars and defeats."

But Saudi Arabia's King Fahd, considered one of the Arab world's most influential leaders, and Libyan leader Col. Muammar Gadhafi have said they will not attend.

In a surprise move last Tuesday, Fahd said he would send Crown Prince Abdullah in his place. No explanation was given.

Last Monday, Gadhafi said he would boycott the conference, charging it was "dictated by America" and "designed to 'combat' Iran," which Libya supports.

Arab diplomats said Gadhafi was piqued because fellow Arabs rejected his call for a summit after U.S. air raids on Libya in April 1986.

This is the first full-scale Arab League meeting since 1952. It is expected to be well-attended because it was prompted by growing Arab alarm that the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war, now spilling over into Kuwait, will drag in other Persian Gulf Arab states.

King Hussein of Jordan, a staunch ally of Iraq, and other Arab leaders regarded as moderates believe the gulf war is overshadowing what they see as the most important issue, in the Middle East — finding a settlement to the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Before that can be tackled, the moderates believe, the gulf war somehow has to be brought to an end, and isolating Iran would hasten that end.

Cardinal agrees to act as cease-fire mediator

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo agreed Friday to a request by President Daniel Ortega that he serve as go-between in the effort to arrange a truce between the Sandinista government and rebels known as Contras.

Ortega visited the Roman Catholic archbishop of Managua in the cardinal's office for 45 minutes.

Afterward, Obando y Bravo told reporters gathered outside: "I have accepted the proposal."

The president said: "The cardinal considers this positive and we are going to continue discussions with him to make it more concrete in coming days."

Most observers had doubted Obando y Bravo, head of the church in Nicaragua, would be acceptable to the Sandinistas — as an intermediary. He leads the National Reconciliation Commission formed under the Central American peace plan, but also is a frequent critic of the leftist government.

Pedro Joaquin Chamorro, a director of the rebels' U.S.-supported Nicaraguan Resistance umbrella group, said Thursday night in San Jose, Costa Rica, that it would be "very difficult for us to accept anyone but Cardinal Obando y Bravo."

In another development, the Defense Ministry said Sandinista soldiers would return to combat Saturday in four areas where a unilateral cease-fire has expired, and expect to face a rested, better-equipped rebel force.

"The time was used to strengthen the Contras by resupplying them," the ministry spokeswoman, Maj. Rosa Zaos, said in an interview.

"We know the Contras are going to try to put their forces into a northern operation, but we're not afraid."

Ortega's government has said it expects the Contras to attack to show the U.S. Congress they are a viable fighting force. The Reagan administration is asking Congress for $270 million in "new" aid for the rebels.

Attackers shoot offices seeking to foil election

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Attackers sprayed two party headquarters and a presidential candidate's home with bullets early Friday, the fourth day of violence that appears aimed to stop elections scheduled for Nov. 23.

Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, president of the military-dominated ruling junta, promoted himself on Friday from army chief of staff to commander in chief of the armed forces. The junta has governed since dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier fled the country Feb. 7, 1986.

"Nobody knows what it means," a U.S. Embassy official said of Namphy's change in title. "We have no reason to believe he has changed his announced intention to be out of the palace one hour after Feb. 7, 1988, nor his allegiance to the constitution."

A new president is to assume power on that date, exactly two years after three decades of family dictatorship ended with Duvalier's flight to France.

Gunfire riddled the headquarters of centrist presidential candidates Marc Bazin and Leslie Manigat early Friday, and shots were fired at the home of C. Gregoire-Eugene, another centrist candidate. Eugene's watchman was wounded in the knee and Eugene's car was damaged.

Bazin, Manigat and Eugene publicly endorsed the nine-member independent Electoral Council's disqualification of 12 presidential candidates this week because of their "close ties to Jean-Claude Duvalier and his father Francois, known as 'Papa Doc.'"

Clovis Desnoir, the most prominent, denied he was involved in shooting and arson attacks on the council and its members. When asked Thursday whether his recent statements had encouraged supporters to commit such actions, he said: "No! We are not assassins."

"Among other things, Desnoir has said 'the people will do their duty' if his candidacy is rejected.

Japan's Takeshita elected as the new prime minister

TOKYO (AP) — Noboru Takeshita was elected as the new prime minister of Japan Friday, the same day that the yen reached its highest postwar exchange rate against the U.S. dollar.

Takeshita, 63, former general secretary of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, was the choice of former Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone. Takeshita's election by the two houses of Parliament remained a formality after he was elected president of the Liberal Democratic Party on Oct. 30.

Takeshita received 299 votes out of the 498 cast in the Diet, the nation's Parliament. The leader of the Japan Socialist Party, Takao Doi, received 145 votes, with three of the five opposition parties back in the House of Representatives.

The Liberal Democratic Party has held a ruling majority in same day that the yen reached its highest postwar exchange rate against the U.S. dollar.

Takeshita's Cabinet contains only one member of the Nakasone ministry: Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa, who also becomes deputy prime minister, and Hajime Tamura, minister of international trade and industry.

Formal ruling confirms T-shirt unacceptable

By the Associated Press and the Times-News

BOISE — A federal judge has ruled that schools can teach as much by discipline as through debate.

U.S. District Judge Marion Callister on Thursday issued his formal ruling against a Twin Falls High School student's lawsuit over a T-shirt considered objectionable by school officials.

"Discipline and debate are equally effective teaching tools. A robust exchange of ideas can occur effectively within a civilized context," Callister wrote. "When the school disciplines the plaintiff (a student) for wearing a T-shirt falsely depicting administrators in an alcoholic stupor, it is engaging in its statutory duty. It is teaching the students that falsely accusing one of being drunk is not acceptable."

Callister announced from the bench last week that he would rule against the $1 million lawsuit filed by Rod Gano, the father of a Twin Falls high school student with the same name. The younger Gano had drawn a caricature of three school administrators holding alcoholic beverages outside the school's football stadium.

Gano's attorney, William Hollifield, could not be reached late Friday afternoon for comment about Callister's decision or whether he would appeal.

Superintendent Carl Snow said after Callister's initial ruling that he considered the case closed.

The suit was filed Oct. 16 after the student was suspended or sent home three times because of the shirt. Gano and Hollifield claimed the student's First Amendment right to free expression was violated by the administrators' actions.

But Callister ruled that Gano, who testified during a hearing Oct. 30 to stop administrators from disciplining him for wearing the shirt, was "not able to articulate the expression that is in danger of suppression."

"Is it meant to be criticism of administration policies?" Callister asked.

After a long pause during the hearing, Gano replied his expression was simply to wear the shirt. Hollifield added that the Constitution doesn't require people to verbalize their expressions.

But Callister judged that the message is that school administrators were drunk on school grounds — a false message since there was no evidence presented during the hearing to justify it.

"They are falsely accused of a misdemeanor," consumption of alcohol on school grounds, he added.

The caricature depicts Principal Frank Charlton, Vice Principal Norman Thomas and Dean of Men Dick Baun each holding alcoholic beverages and offering various gestures while sitting in front of a fence marked Brinn Stadium.

Sworn statements from school officials were that the T-shirts were prepared by an unofficial "function" committee at Twin Falls High School. The unsanctioned "function" committee attempts to raise money for an end-of-school-year party, including the purchasing of beer, wine, liquor and even drugs, the statements said.

Gano admitted during the hearing that students initially asked him to draw the caricature to raise money for the function committee. But he also told The Times-News that after administrators vetoed student use of the design, Gano decided to print the shirts privately and sell them outside school property.

Other teachers filed statements that Gano's wearing of the T-shirt, his suspension and student discussion of the matter were extremely disruptive of classroom proceedings.

But live testimony from three teachers and four students at the hearing in addition to Gano related that there was little or no disruption from Gano wearing the shirt.

In fact, English teacher Mary Lu Barry, Gano's teacher for the Brinn News, the student newspaper for which he is editorial cartoonist, testified that Charlton didn't notice Gano wearing the shirt on one occasion. Charlton worked the Brinn News class the first Wednesday afternoon after the shirts were printed and didn't notice Gano wearing the shirt, Barry said.

Gano had first been suspended the previous Monday, without wearing the shirt, after the three administrators learned the student ordered 300 shirts with the design.

Callister ruled that administrators' actions in prohibiting the shirt were justified.

"The school is actively engaged in teaching when it sets the bounds for proper conduct," wrote Callister, who added the T-shirts were "clearly offensive."

Unemployment rate increases

Magic Valley goes up 6 percent

By the Associated Press and the Times-News

BOISE — The unusually warm weather through harvest season that pushed unemployment rates down in the Magic Valley has ended and so has the unusually low unemployment rate in the wake of a decline in total employment.

Those same weather patterns brightened the state's unemployment outlook since early last winter finally caught up with the Idaho workforce in October, pushing the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate back above the 5 percent level.

The three-tenths of a point jump in the jobless rate last month to 5.1 percent was only the second time the indicator rose on a month-to-month basis this year. The September rate of 4.8 percent was the lowest of the year.

In the Magic Valley, the unemployment rate went up 6 percent over the unusually low September rate, said Lon McDonald, labor market analyst for the Twin Falls Idaho Job Service office.

However, the unemployment rate, which is forecast to be 5.3 percent in October 1988 rate of 6 percent, McDonald said.

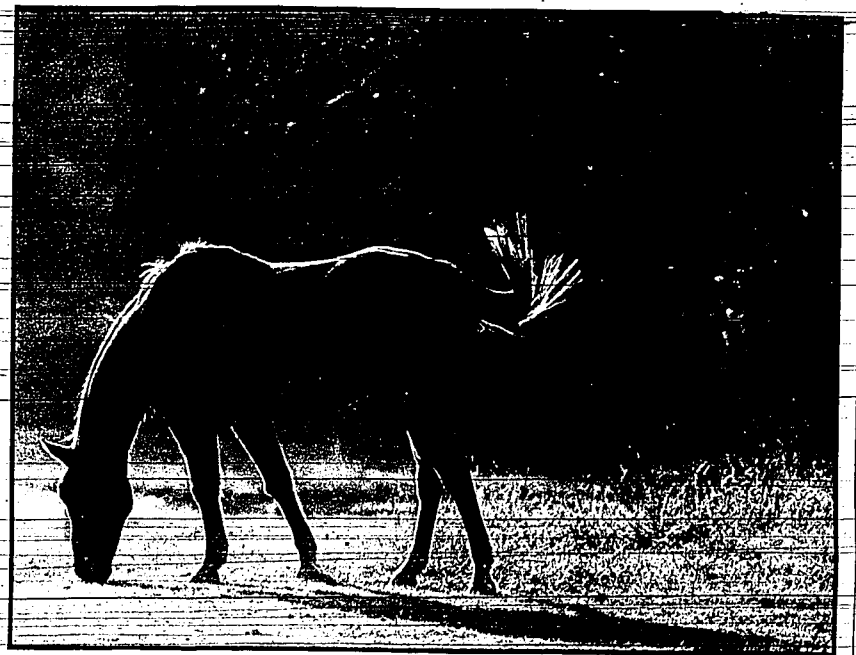

But while the number of Idahoans out of work was still at its second lowest level of 1987, the total state labor pool plunged to its lowest point since mid-1983 and the number of workers with jobs came dangerously close to slipping below the psychological 400,000 barrier.

The same trend of declining total employment is evident in the Magic Valley, McDonald said.

The labor force in the Magic Valley dropped 1,440 workers between October 1986 and October 1987 to 36,855, McDonald said, an indication that the Magic Valley's low unemployment levels are the result of workers leaving the area.

"It means that while unemployment rate has been at a fairly low level, part of the reason for that drop has been, we believe, that some individuals unable to find work have been forced to look for work elsewhere."

Stallings shows concern on issues

By JANE ROBISON Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Democratic Congressman Richard Stallings on Friday called the Supreme Court nomination of Douglas H. Ginsburg a "major disaster," and said it is proof the Reagan presidency is disintegrating.

"It also shows the way Ed Meese does business — sloppily," Stallings said.

Disclosures that Ginsburg, a federal court judge, smoked pot in the 1950s and '70s have caused a furor and thrown the Ginsburg nomination in doubt.

Stallings said if Ginsburg had smoked marijuana in high school or college, it would have been much less serious.

But reports that Ginsburg used pot as a Harvard law school professor shows a gross lack of judgment, particularly for a conservative," Stallings said.

"It makes you wonder what else is lurking in his background," he said.

Stallings said he spoke to congressmen from the California delegation who said the other potential Supreme Court nominee, Arthur Kennedy, was an excellent candidate.

Switching ground, Stallings called the proposed 8.5 percent Gramm-Rudman budget cuts "disastrous." The across-the-board cuts are scheduled to take effect Nov. 20th, unless Congress and the president can work out a compromise.

"It will hit people who've already been cut," Stallings said. "I think it will be disastrous."

He was also critical of House Democratic leadership for bringing a $23 billion deficit reduction package to a vote. He voted against it.

"I thought the timing was poor and the package too small," he said. "The package didn't reduce the deficit enough. And we should have held the package until after negotiations with the White House."

Stallings said he will not support a tax increase unless Reagan supports it.

"I was labeled as a tax and spend Democrat, and I'm not going to do that," he said. "If the president is behind it, then it's no longer a political issue."

Questioned about politics and Democratic presidential hopefuls, Stallings said he hopes there will be no clear frontrunner at the time of

Proposed boost eases phone burden

By the Associated Press and The Times-News

ALBION — Hoping to ease the burden on rural consumers, the staff of the Public Utilities Commission has proposed a boost in the payments Mountain Bell makes for long-distance access to small rural phone companies.

The proposal, intended to ease the massive increases in basic service rates sought by Rockland Telephone Co. in southeastern Idaho and possibly others, was presented to the regulators during hearings on rural phone company requests that ran through Thursday.

Rockland alone has asked for a 500 percent hike in residential and business phone rates.

The rate hike, similar to increases being sought by small phone companies in Albion and Cambridge, was prompted by an $11,000 deficit the company has run into since a long-distance poll that helped subsidize rural phone costs was abolished last March.

The toll pool involved the local phone companies pooling their revenue on long-distance calls within the state and taking expense money out.

When the pool was in operation, some of the highest-cost small phone companies had sufficient receipts to allow them to have lower local phone rates than anyone else, says Conley Ward, attorney for several rural phone companies.

The small phone companies could take money out of the pool according to their needs, he says.

The small phone companies are proceeding on two tracks in their effort to have single party residential phone rates comparable to Mountain Bell's rate of about $12 per month.

In addition to asking the PUC to approve higher access charges and hefty rate increases, the companies are pursuing state legislation to form a Universal Service Fund, Ward says.

The fund would essentially be a toll pool with a different name, says Lynn Anderson, PUC telephone analyst.

If the legislation passes, the small phone companies will have any rate increases approved by the PUC to the extent the pool covers costs, he says.

But Mountain Bell, the primary beneficiary of the pool's demise, countered with a plan for only temporary, short-term hikes in access charges to help resolve immediate local financing problems.

The PUC staff thinks higher access charges would solve the problem in keeping rural phone company rates comparable to Mountain Bell's.

Mountain Bell attorney Dan Poole opposed the staff plan, contending access payments the company makes "are very high, and should not be increased in Mountain Bell's opinion."

Mountain Bell is willing to pay the staff-proposed higher access charges on strictly an interim basis to allow the PUC time to complete its investigation of the necessity of a universal service fund, Poole said.

Deputy Attorney General Marsha Smith said the access charge hike would actually be a very small percentage increase and if necessary, Mountain Bell could ask the commission for an increase in its rates to cover the higher cost although she doubted that would be necessary.

Rockland has proposed boosting residential rates now $5 a month or less to $27.75 and business rates from $7 to $41 a month. The commission staff plan would limit the residential rate to $12 a month and the business rate to $18 and make up the difference with the high payments from Mountain Bell.

While not endorsing the staff plan, former PUC member Ward, representing Rockland, claimed Mountain Bell was getting a bargain after long-distance spokesman Richard Petrone conceded Mountain Bell's payments to Rockland Telephone have decreased since the pool was eliminated. The company now pays an estimated $172,000 a year in access charges, compared to previous rates of $245,000 a year.

Ward called that a "significant break" compared to the price impact on Rockland's rural service customers.

Poole contended a high access rate would displace alternate long-distance carriers from serving a community like Rockland.

But Commission President Perry Swisher questioned the motives of a 500 percent rate case, that officials warn could force four in 10 Rockland Telephone customers to discontinue service.

Rockland's customer load is estimated at just under 400, and a loss of 100 customers could

Ketchum attorney quits, plans European visit

By the Associated Press and The Times-News

KETCHUM — When Larry Young takes over as Ketchum mayor in January, one of his first steps may be to hire a new city attorney.

Ketchum City Attorney James W. Phillips resigned Wednesday, one day after the defeat of 12-year Mayor Gerald Seifert.

However, he stressed that he would never resign as mayor who won the election.

Phillips, who held the job for eight years, wrote in a letter to the mayor and the City Council: "As you all know, after the first week of January I will be spending the winter and spring in Europe skiing and visiting family."

The resignation will take effect

Jan. 1.

City Manager James Jaquet said Phillips resigned Wednesday to give the council plenty of time to find a replacement and provide him or her training to allow a smooth transition.

Young said Phillips' resignation came as a surprise, but that "my understanding is that he already had his winter planned out," he said.

Young said he did not anticipate any major staff changes, but added that he would ask the council to "explore combining some Ketchum city government functions with the city of Sun Valley," if Sun Valley is interested.

Phillips plans to return to Ketchum later in 1988 and continue practicing law.

Buhl woman files claim over arrest

By BONNIE BAIRD, JONES Times-News writer

BUHL — A Buhl woman has asked for $23,000 in a tort claim filed last week with the City of Buhl as a result of her arrest for traffic violations as she was rushing an injured man to Twin Falls for medical treatment.

The Buhl City Council turned the tort claim filed by Barbara Holesinsky and her husband, Frank, over to their insurance company for action.

Holesinsky said she is asking for only $23,000 because she is not trying to make money, but only to cover expenses and losses she suffered in connection with the incident last July 13.

On that date her daughter's 1976 Ford Mustang motorcycle was hit by a car and suffered neck lacerations. Holesinsky said shortly after the accident that she had feared an artery in the neck might have been cut. She said she and her daughter put the injured youth in her vehicle and she was rushing to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center for assistance when she was stopped and arrested.

She reportedly drove past a police officer who had made a traffic stop, falsely imprisoned by Buhl city officers, and asked him to radio other officers.

Buhl Police Chief Les Cochran said he cannot comment on the pulled in behind her with lights claim at this time since it is still pending.

A letter with the claim, written in a heated and continued driving quest of it until she was forced over to a stop.

Holesinsky alleged in her claim that she suffered injuries when she was shoved, pushed and assaulted by a police officer, and that she was placed in handcuffs which also injured her arms. The claim further charges that the woman was unnecessarily stopped by police and was the convention and that the party will drop a candidate.

"I hope a convention will work its way and we can pick one of the bright stars in the Democratic Party, such as Bill Bradley or Sam Nunn," he said.

Stallings said none of the current crop of candidates thrills him.

Stallings said he has talked to Democratic strategists and he believes better potential presidential candidates are staying out of the race because the economy is lagging on the brink of disaster in the next few years, and 1992 will be a better year for Democrats to win.

the White House. In other matters, Stallings said he has organized a January conference in Twin Falls on the possibilities of transferring technology from INEL to private business.

"There's a whole world of possibilities," he said. "The first step is to get the information out to the Chamber of Commerce people."

Stallings said neither Hanford nor INEL have been as successful as other federal facilities in promoting spinoffs in the private sector.

Stallings is also organizing a conference on alternative crops—Jan. 18 to the College of Southern Idaho—to try and bolster the area's economy.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A man who took control of an Air Canada jetliner at the airport Friday and held an ax to the pilot's head gave up about 3½ hours after he stormed the plane, a spokesman said.

The hijacker is in custody," said San Francisco International Airport spokesman Ron Wilson. "The pilot is uninjured and the thing ended. 'It was peaceful,' he said later. "There was not a struggle. He gave up."

Sgt. Gary O'Donnell of the airport police said the man, described as a "mentally unstable" white male, about 6-foot-tall and in his early 30s, simply surrendered during negotiations with FBI agents who were on board the aircraft with him.

"Authorities declined to immediately release the man's name. He seized the plane at 12:15 p.m. PST, initially taking the pilot, first officer and 10 flight attendants captive. He later ordered everyone except the pilot off the plane, according to airport director Lou Turpen. "There's a man in the cockpit with a fire ax over the head of the pilot," Wilson had said before the drama ended. "He has threatened the life of the pilot if he doesn't get the plane," Wilson had said. "He seems to be somewhat unstable. That's all we can say, mentally unstable."

Turpen said the man had rushed aboard the plane, which was empty of passengers, and grabbed an ax in the cockpit. "I am not sure where the hijacker materialized from," he said. "The aircraft had just arrived and was being turned around to depart. He evidently walked up to the cockpit and indicated he wanted to go someplace."

His first, rambling demands were for the plane to be refueled and flown to London, Dublin or some other city, but his main concern seemed to be to talk to the FBI, Turpen said.

In addition to the FBI, SWAT teams had been called to the site in case they had been needed to storm the plane.

Al Cline, an Air Canada spokesman in Los Angeles, said the plane, an A300-600, had been scheduled to leave at 1 p.m. for Toronto and Montreal with 171 passengers.

The incident did not affect airport operations except for the area immediately around the gate where the plane was parked, Wilson said.

Officials investigate increase in hepatitis cases

BOISE (AP)—Health officials are investigating an unusually high number of hepatitis cases in southwestern Idaho, including three cases in one neighborhood.

Bob Hays, health specialist for the Southwest District Health Department, said there has been a sharp increase in the incidence of hepatitis A, a viral infection that causes inflammation of the liver.

Since September, 15 cases have been reported in Nampa alone. Usually, the entire seven-county district, which includes Nampa does not report more than three or four cases of hepatitis A each month.

Hays said three people who do not know each other but live on the same Nampa block have been afflicted with the virus. They came down with the disease during the past month, but investigators have not been able to determine what the link was.

"These have been sporadic cases. It doesn't look like it has been spread specifically from one person to another," Hays said.

Health officials are investigating whether the infection could have come from the water supply, sewage systems or restaurant food.

He said the hepatitis A virus is spread when food and water has been contaminated by feces. He said the disease is commonly transmitted by infected individuals who handle food and do not wash their hands frequently.

Health investigator Guy Manley said he did not think the source of the infection could be the city's water.

"If something is wrong with our tap water, we would have had a lot more cases," he said.

Hepatitis A is generally not as serious as hepatitis B, which also is a viral infection but enters the body through the bloodstream. But hepatitis A can last for several months and cause permanent liver damage.

Hays said initial symptoms include nausea, vomiting, fever, and fatigue. In a few weeks, the victims may have dark-colored urine and jaundice—yellow-tinted skin and eyes. He said anyone who has these symptoms should see their physician.

People are infected before symptoms appear and, as a result, they may handle food and unknowingly spread the disease, Hays said. Frequent and thorough hand-washing can prevent the spread of hepatitis A in many cases.

There have been 237 cases of hepatitis A reported to the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare so far in 1987. That's 88 more cases than were reported in all of 1986.

Accident on Red Cap Corner injures four, reroutes traffic

KIMBERLY—A two-car collision at Red Cap Corner on Highway 30 Friday morning resulted in injuries to four persons and forced police to temporarily reroute traffic through Kimberly, state police reported.

The driver of one of the vehicles, Elizabeth Degrado, 15, and her 10-year-old sister, Spring, were both admitted to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, where they were listed in serious condition Friday. Degrado's mother, Donna, and the driver of the other car, Richard Maroney, were both treated and released, hospital officials said.

Neither Elizabeth nor Spring Delgado suffered any broken bones. According to Cpl. Rick Wright of the Idaho State Police, Degrado was traveling north on U.S. 30 when, at 8:35 a.m., she pulled through the intersection and was struck by Maroney, 69, who was traveling east on U.S. 30. Maroney, a resident of Pebble Beach, Calif., struck the left front door of Degrado's car.

Maroney was traveling alone at the time of the accident, police said. When both cars came to rest in the east-bound lane, police were required temporarily to detour traffic through Kimberly. According to Wright, the Kimberly Fire Department was also called to hose down the road after the gas tank in Degrado's car had ruptured.

Degrado, whose family resides in Kimberly, was cited for failure to yield at a stop sign, Wright said.

State retirement may need funding

MOSCOW (AP)—The stock market crash has melted about 17 percent of the Idaho Public Employees Retirement System's $1 billion in assets and that may require the Legislature to pump more money into the system, says Idaho House Speaker Tom Boyd.

Speaking to University of Idaho journalism students Thursday, Boyd said the Oct. 19 crash in the market cost the state pension fund about $179 million.

"It does affect the actuarial stability of the fund and if it does not come back, the state would probably be called upon to put in funding to make it actuarially sound," Boyd said.

Lawmakers may not face that dilemma in 1988 because the effect of the stock market meltdown upon the retirement fund won't be known for a year. But it may be a foreshadowing of an economic slowdown coming at a time when the state will depend on growth to produce more tax revenues for public schools and higher education, Boyd said.

That's because lawmakers alter increasing taxes by about $45 million in 1987, a year of no mind to reap that performance in an election year, he said.

"The words coming out of Boise, and I certainly have to concur, is that this will be a hold-the-line session," Boyd said.

Until the crash, all signs indicated Idaho's tax system would meet its $660 million target. The first clue whether the stock market crash had impaired the state's economy will come in a week, when October's tax collection figures are released, Boyd said.

"It could have a dampening effect by the time we get the November (tax) figures," Boyd added. "I'm ground we've never walked before."

Even a best-case scenario in which the state's tax receipts match projections will fall short of the Idaho Board of Education's requested $34.4 million more for public schools and $12.1 million extra for higher education. Instead, state officials may have to accept a budget increase that will cover inflationary increases, $14 million to $25 million, Boyd said.

INEL unveils supercomputer used for testing, graphics

IDAHO FALLS, AP—The Idaho National Engineering Laboratory has taken what the facility's former manager called a "quantum step" toward, state-of-the-art technology with startup of a new $8 million supercomputer.

"The Cray supercomputer," the first of its kind in Idaho, will conduct intricate scientific tests, produce accurate computer graphics, and perhaps bring new basic research projects to the INEL.

"It truly is a watershed day for this laboratory," Fred Wade, former Idaho manager of U.S. Department of Energy facilities, said at Thursday's dedication ceremony.

"Acquisition of the supercomputer is another example of the fact that the INEL does not do anything in the standard way," Wade said.

While some laboratories might obtain a supercomputer to complete existing contracts, Wade said, the INEL has added the computer to attract new research contracts to the site.

Wade, who now is the DOE's acting assistant secretary for defense programs, said American producers need all-weather research built on computers like this one.

Currently, there are no immediate plans to use the INEL's supercomputer for defense work.

computer for defense work. "It certainly could be used for that, however."

Current Idaho-DOE Manager Donald Ote said the supercomputer will "greatly accelerate the pace of the INEL's scientific research, with modeling applications as diverse as high technology nuclear safety and research into waste migration.

The supercomputer has a capacity of 250 MIPS, or million instructions per second, Ote said. It replaces a system with a capacity of 55 MIPS.

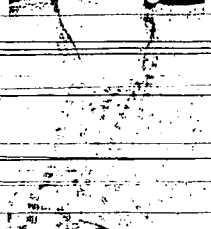

Like Wade, Ote expects the supercomputer to bring new research to the INEL.

"It's like honey, it's going to draw flies," he said.

Jim Zane, manager of EG&G Idaho Inc., a prime contractor at the eastern Idaho site, said the computer was "visible evidence" that the INEL and its workers have a "vision for the site."

"We want to be the premier engineering laboratory in this country," Zane said, calling the supercomputer a "strategic investment" in that effort.

"It's new, it's different and it's far-sighted," he said.

Theologians weigh evangelicals' force

Los Angeles Times

PASADENA, Calif. — The evangelicals — "born-again" convert-seeking Protestants — have been outshining the mainline ecumenical Protestants for about two decades in church growth, spending and public attention in America, most religious analysts agree.
But are they still on a full head of steam? Can they be heard in spite of television evangelist controversies, internecine fighting within the large Southern Baptist Convention and what evangelicals decry as "secular humanist" attitudes in influential parts of society?
One of evangelical Christianity's prime movers and shapers, Fuller Theological Seminary in Pasadena, the world's largest multidimensional seminary, observed its 40th anniversary this week and posed that question.
The answer seems to turn on whether one expects to see signs that evangelical values are being embraced by American society as a whole.

Most voices heard this week questioned that as a realistic standard, but one prominent evangelical theologian said it was not pronounced the movement lacking.
The evangelical movement is "being swamped by the mass culture it sought to alter," said Carl F.H. Henry, one of Fuller's founding faculty members. Henry, 74, was asked to open and close an all-day conference Tuesday assessing the evangelical movement.
Henry indicated that the post-World War II rise of evangelicalism peaked in 1976 when, significantly, Americans elected a "born-again" Southern Baptist, Jimmy Carter, as president. Since then, evangelicals have been plagued with a range of sins, including self-indulgence, he said.

Meanwhile in general society, Henry said even secular humanism — as represented in mass media, universities and U.S. politics — is "decomposing into paganism." Besides what Henry sees as a predominant media disdain for "inherited values," particularly the biblical ideals of chastity, marriage and family, he said Americans today resemble ancient Rome in its homoio tolerance of a variety of religious beliefs but are intolerant of any religion that claims to be the only true one.

The cross-pollination of religious ideas is reflected in a Gallup (Poll) report that one in four Americans believes in reincarnation. Henry observed in his keynote talk, "The wave of the immediate future is not neo-paganism but neo-paganism." In remarks at the close of the day, Henry said evangelical decline is further evidenced by a "massive falloff of giving" to television ministries, a downward trend in religious book sales and a decline in seminary enrollment. On the latter point, Fuller president David Allan Hubbard said there are some 100 drop-in seminary enrollments, including that at Fuller, which has hovered around 2,800 students for the last few years.

Nevertheless, Henry said, "I don't want to give up too easily on the possibility of a Christian culture."

Mormon Church head recovering from attack

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church President Ezra Taft Benson, enjoying "get well" cards from around the world, continues to make his recovery from a mild heart attack, a spokesman said Friday.

Benson suffered the attack on Oct. 15 and was admitted to LDS Hospital. He was released late Oct. 24 and has been "feeling well and enjoying daily improvement in his health" since, church spokesman Jerry Cahill said.
"Doctors believe that Benson, 68, will be able to resume his normal duties in the next several weeks. Meanwhile, he continues to meet regularly with his counselors in the faith's First Presidency on matters of general church administration," Cahill said.

Benson, who celebrates two years as the prophet, seer and revelator of the 6.4-million member church next Tuesday, became the church's 13th president following the Nov. 10, 1985, death of Spencer W. Kimball, 90.
"Cahill said Benson, who served as assistant secretary and then President Eisenhower 1953-61, had been hospitalized in January of 1986 after fainting at his home. In November of that year, Benson was implanted with an electronic pacemaker.

Cahill said Benson has expressed "great appreciation for the tenderness and concern" shared with him and his family in the form of cards and letters from "friends worldwide."

Market fades on late selling

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market retreated in late trading Friday, yielding to a pre-weekend round of selling concentrated in blue chips.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed at 2,925.00, closing out the week with a net loss of 34.48 points.

Advancing and declining issues were evenly balanced on the New York Stock Exchange, with 809 up, 807 down and 572 unchanged.

Big Bond volume totaled 228.29 million shares, against 225.96 million Thursday.

Newton Zinder, an analyst at E. F. Hutton & Co., attributed the late drop to "traders not wanting to hold stocks over the weekend."

Analysts also noted that the selling intensified after the NYSE said it would remove on Monday the last of the electronic trading period during last month's market turmoil on computer-program trading.

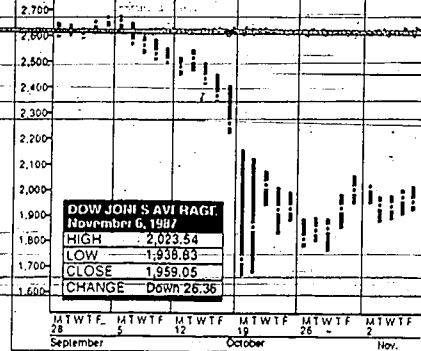

Critics of program trading contend that it often adds to volatility in stock prices.

In addition, brokers said investors seemed to have mixed feelings about the recent slide of the dollar in foreign exchange.

The dollar weakness is seen as a plus for many U.S. companies that compete in world markets, especially since the Reagan administration and the Federal Reserve have

MARKET REPORT

Actively over the past 30 trading days

The Labor Department reported Friday morning that the civilian unemployment rate edged up to 6.0 percent in October from 5.9 percent the month before. However, the data also showed an increase of 549,000 in nonfarm payroll employment.

Employment statistics for coming months will be watched most closely on Wall Street for signs of any fallout from last month's stock market crash.

Losers among the blue chips included IBM, down 1 1/2% at 119 1/2; Merck, down 4% at 179; Philip Morris, down 2 1/2% at 90; Coca-Cola, down 1 1/2% at 39 1/4; and Procter & Gamble, down 1 1/2% at 85 1/4.

An exception was USX, which rose 1/2 to 28 1/2. The company said it expected its cash flow to be strong enough in 1988 and 1989 to permit it to consider such possibilities as a dividend increase and acquisitions.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $24.09 billion, or 0.98 percent, in value Friday.

The Big Board's composite index of all its listed commodity stocks dropped 1.77 to 140.04.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 282.7 million shares.

Standard & Poor's 400 Industrials fell 2.92 to 285.67, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 1.38 at 250.41.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market gained 22 to 326.40. At the American Stock Exchange—the market value index closed at 255.23, up 18.

Borrowing for new cars spurs increase in debt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' borrowing heavily to purchase new cars took out $6.06 billion in credit in September for the biggest increase in a year, the government said Friday.

The Federal Reserve said consumer debt rose at an annual rate of 12.2 percent in September and was the largest advance since a $7.6 billion rise in credit in September 1986. Both months were heavily influenced by car sales spurred by dealer incentive programs. Consumer credit rose $5 billion in August.

Automobile loans climbed at an annual rate of 15 percent in September, rising by $3.24 billion following a $3.03-billion August gain.

Consumers also borrowed heavily on their credit cards, boosting this category of debt by $2.02 billion in September, almost double the $1.09 billion August increase. Credit card debt rose at an annual rate of 17.4

percent, the largest advance since April 1986.

The category—that includes cash loans from banks that are not secured by real estate rose $890 million in September, compared with a $1.04 billion August increase. Loans for mobile homes fell by $95 million following a $165 million August decline.

For the July-September period, total consumer debt was climbing at an annual rate of 9.8 percent, a substantial pickup from a 3.5 percent increase in the first six months of the year.

However, economists said all of these figures reflect economic conditions before the record declines in the stock market in October. Many analysts are predicting that jittery consumers worried about the future will cut back on their spending and borrowing in coming months.

The various changes in September left total consumer debt at a seasonally adjusted $602.2 billion.

Most investors unhurt by October's collapse

NEW YORK (AP) — Most of 510 investors surveyed nationwide indicated the record-breaking stock market crash of Oct. 19 didn't affect their holdings as much as the collapse would suggest, according to a study released Friday.

Forty-five percent of the investors said they lost a little money and 33 percent indicated they "held their own" during the 508-point plunge of the Dow Jones industrial average. Twelve percent said they "lost a lot." They did not reveal specific amounts.

The telephone survey, to appear in the Nov. 9 issue of Barron's, was conducted by The Roper Organization Inc. Fifty-two percent of the investors had at least $10,000 invested in stocks and stock mutual funds, and 29 percent had at least $25,000 invested.

So far, at least, the Great Crash of 1987 has not shaken investor confidence in the market or the economy to the extent so vast a drop would lead one to expect," said Alan Abelson, editor of Barron's.

Eighty-three percent said they kept their stock holdings during the Oct. 19 crash, while 2 percent said they sold their holdings or tried to do so but could not.

About 10 percent said they sold most of their holdings before the decline, 2 percent indicated they made money, and 3 percent said they bought stock because of the lower prices.

Despite the market's instability, 52 percent said they expect to invest the same amount of money in stocks and mutual funds as they had in the past, 31 percent said they plan to invest less money, and 10 percent said they will invest more.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

'He who limps is still walking.' -Stanislaw Lec.

Those who try for the maximum number of tricks on every hand are sometimes forced to pay a heavy price. Better to limp home using a simple plan than to fall by the way-side looking for overtricks.

South won his heart and ace ruffed a heart in dummy. Then he led a trump, losing a finesse to West's singleton king. Back came a club and South began to sweat. He played low and lost to East's queen. Back came a club to West's ace, and a third round of clubs was ruffed by East's last trump. South was down one after a series of demoralizing plays.

An experienced rubber bridge player would not fall into the same trap. He can count a maximum of only three losers with any reasonable play of the cards, as long as he goes up with his trump ace after East has followed suit on the trump lead from dummy.

In today's case, the ace drops the king and South makes an overtrick. Had the king not dropped, South's only other possible losers would have been two club tricks and an instead of falling victim to "unbelievably bad luck," South would have scored his game and rubber.

Homedale battles past Pilots, 13-0

By LARRY HOWEY
Times-News writer

HOMEDALE — Glenns Ferry's football season came to an end one step short of the state Class A-3 state high school championship game here Friday when perennial power, Homedale, collected a 13-0 victory.

But the fourth-ranked Pilots, who will have virtually their total crop of skill players back next season plus a lot of linemen, made it a promise for 1988 rather than a disappointment for 1987.

Glenns Ferry, considered three-to-four touchdown dogs here in the Third District, gave up an early score to Homedale and after that the two teams simply plodded it out in a defensive duel.

STATE CLASS A-3 FOOTBALL PLAYOFFS Semifinals

Glenns Ferry at Homedale

When it was over, Glenns Ferry Athletic Director Brent Taylor probably summed up the feeling of the Pilots' crowd, noting, "All week, everyone said 'We had to play Homedale. Next year, they may have to play us.'"

That feeling was echoed by Coach Bill Brock, who simply stated, "We plan on being here again next year — except one step farther."

The victory put the third-ranked Trojans, 9-1 for the season, into the state A-3 championship game at 5 p.m. MST on Saturday, Nov. 14, in the Kibbie Dome in Moscow. Homedale's opponent will be the winner of today's other semifinal game between North Fremont and Grangeville in Pocatello.

The defending state champion Trojans probably deserved this victory because they were the more consistent team overall Friday night. But Glenns Ferry, which was here because of its defense, showed on several occasions it could be as hard-nosed as ever.

The Pilots showed their spunk in the closing minutes when they made a first-and-100-foot goal-line stand, taking the ball back at their own 5. Then after a pass interception by Homedale's Brad Kuehler that was returned to Glenns Ferry's 11, Trojan Coach Jim McMillan showed his class by inserting the second unit and having his quarterback sneak while the final minute ticked away.

McMillan later agreed that Glenns Ferry had proved a stronger foe than he had anticipated, although he noted he was not taking the Pilots lightly.

"I thought we might score some more points, but they played us tough," he said. "They are very well coached and did some things defensively that really stopped us at times."

"I may have contributed a little because I got a little conservative with our offense," he continued. "We probably didn't put the ball up enough. Our defense was playing well enough. We felt we could hold them and consequently we didn't do the things we maybe should have on offense."

Brock said he felt his Pilots had played well on defense because "this (Homedale) is a good football team. There are a lot of reasons that we could point to for losing this game, but I think the basic one is that Homedale has a good team."

"We knew Homedale was a strong defensively and we felt we had to take a few chances," he continued. "A couple of mistakes at critical situations hurt us."

One of those mistakes came right after the opening kickoff when the Pilots saw a fake punt that carried to the Homedale 7-yard line, wiped out by a penalty. Immediately after that, the Trojans whirled to a go-ahead touchdown to make it 7-0 with 7 minutes and 48 seconds gone in the game, and it appeared the rout was on. But Glenns Ferry immediately stood.

That TD came on a short dash by Ryan Nash on one play after a fencible penalty negated a Glenns Ferry defensive play that appeared to have thrown Nash for a 7-yard loss on third down.

After Kurt Shanley kicked the extra point, the defenses moved center stage for the rest of the half, except for a rash of penalties in the first four minutes of the second quarter. A turnover exchange midway through the third period set the stage for the final score.

Glenns Ferry started "it when John Belleagant recovered a Homedale fumble at the Trojans' 46-yard line, but two plays later

Grounded ex-Bruin discovers new life on Calgary gridiron

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

CALGARY — Anyway you look at it, it's a long way from Bruin Stadium to McMahon Stadium.

For University of Calgary freshman Mike Pavelec, the journey would have been unimaginable a couple of years ago when he was a Twin Falls High School senior.

"When I was in high school, the two things I wanted to do were fly and play football," says Pavelec, a 6-foot, 5-inch, 263-pound offensive tackle who just completed his first season — starting every game — for the Dinosaur's football team.

"When I got into the Air Force Academy, I thought I'd have a chance to do both, but it didn't work out that way."

The way it worked for Pavelec is a world of three downs, trap blocking, undersized, fleet-footed linemen, and a state-of-the-art facilities designed to impress the world, which will visit here next February for history's largest winter carnival.

"It's unusual to have a player of Mike's potential come into the program as a walk-on," says Peter Comella, the Dinosaur's head coach. "We didn't put Mike on the football team expecting that he would play as much as he did this year, but we had one of our starting tackles, Steve Rodetschors, go to the Winnipeg Blue Bombers (of the Canadian Football League). We weren't expecting that, so it created a vacancy."

Pavelec filled it quickly, winning the starting assignment in pre-season drills, and keeping it through all of the Dinosaurs' 4-4 season ended Oct. 30, because of the cold weather and the limited number of opponents, Canadian teams play just eight or nine games.

"Had he been eligible, he would have been our number one pick for the Peter Gorman Trophy, which is the award given to the outstanding collegiate freshman in Canada," says UC Sports Information Director Jack Neumann. "But because he sat out a year between high school and his freshman year here, he wasn't eligible. It wasn't because he's an American; you just have to be your own out of high school to be considered."

Pavelec, a 1986 graduate of TFHS, left the Air Force Academy in October of that year after being told he was too big to qualify for the Air Force's pilot training. He had letters from Boise State, North Dakota, UCLA, and Nebraska, but through his family — his mother, Maureen, grew up here — Pavelec found out about

Richfield takes on Air-Garden Valley

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

GARDEN VALLEY — Last time Richfield played a prolific passing team, the Tigers lost the Sawtooth Conference championship. Coach Rudy Miles hopes his ballclub won't lose something more today.

"Garden Valley has a very good quarterback by the name of Chiral Korrell," says the mentor of the defending state champion Tigers of Garden Valley, his semifinal opponent today in the state eight-man football playoffs. "They throw the ball well, their first 12 starters are all between 160 and 230 pounds and they're physical — and that's what worries me."

The 6-1 Tigers and the Wolverines, tied for the No. 2 eight-man ranking behind Rockland in the final Associated Press high-school prep poll, will square off today at 1 on Garden Valley's downsized field for the chance to advance to next Saturday's state championship game in Moscow.

"We know we can play with them," says Garden Valley Coach Sam Nelson, whose Wolverines lost 48-0 to the Tigers in Richfield a year ago in the state eight-man semifinals.

"We've got a big team. We've got the revenge factor. We didn't play well last year when they beat us bad."

An impartial observer, North Gem High School Coach Frank Bunker, gives the edge to Richfield with qualifications: North Gem opened its season in August with a victory over Garden Valley — the Wolverines only lost in eight outings this year — and then lost the second berth from the Sawtooth Conference to the state playoffs to the Tigers.

"Korrell had a broken leg when we played them, so it's kind of hard to tell," says Bunker. "If I had to pick, I would pick Richfield on the basis of the games we played against the two schools. Richfield, I think will burn them in the air, if Rudy will go to the air. He likes to stay on the ground."

The quarterback in question is Korrell, a 6-foot, 175-pound senior who has completed 61 of 95 passes for 1,200 yards this season, and Barry Ward, a 6-0, 165-pound senior who has completed 57 of 111 passes for 1,020 yards and has rushed for 784 more.

"If it came down to a slugging match, we'd beat 'em," says Miles. "But I hope they don't get any better from the last time I saw them."

The Tigers still have vivid memories of Rockland quarterback Mike Steidley, who burned them badly with long passes in the Bulldogs' 30-8 victory last month. By all accounts, Korrell is the same sort of passer back, although he isn't the Wolverines' only offensive weapon.

"We have five guys that have scored over 40 points; so they can't key on one person," says Nelson. "His kids play good pass defense until somebody goes long on them."

One bigger-than-usual homefield advantage for the Wolverines stems from the fact they play on a smaller-than-usual field. The Garden Valley gridiron is 13 yards narrower than regulation, cutting down the sweep-

Vandals must battle complacency at MSU

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

BOZEMAN, Mont. — University of Idaho head coach Keith Gilbertson, whose 10th-ranked Vandals are leading the Big Sky Conference by 1 1/2 games over runner-up Weber State, characterizes today's encounter with cellar-dwelling Montana State rather succinctly.

"Right now, we're where we want to be, but we have to stay there," says Gilbertson, whose ballclub is 7-2 for the season and 5-1 in conference with two games to play. The secret is not getting there as much as it is staying there.

"There is two victories — or one. Weber State loss — away from Idaho's second conference championship in three years. But rain and possibly snow — is in the forecast for today's 1 p.m. game in this mile-high city that has been notably unkind to visitors.

Federico replaced by Seltio in ISU's starting lineup

By The Times-News

MISSOULA, Mont. — Twin Falls High School alum Coby Federico, a senior fullback at Idaho State University, won't be in the starting lineup when the Bengals take on the University of Montana here this afternoon.

Federico has been replaced at starting fullback by Frank Seltio, author of the 96-yard kickoff return that lifted the Bengals to a 35-32 victory over Boise State two weeks ago.

"Seltio continues to be very productive playing a lot of positions," said Idaho State Coach Jim Koetter.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — David Robinson, the former Navy center who signed with the nifty San Antonio Spurs for a reported record sum, says a commitment to rebuilding motivated him to join the club.

Robinson, the Spurs' No. 1 draft choice who must spend the next two years in the Navy, was able to get an eight-year deal worth between $24 million and $30 million, according to published reports.

Neither Robinson, agent Lee Fontana nor Spurs chairman Daniel Drossos would discuss details of the contract Robinson signed Friday.

Robinson, college basketball player of the year last season, said he thought he could help the Spurs, who had their worst season last year at 24-58.

"There is no amount of money I would have signed for if I didn't think this team had a commitment to becoming better and to becoming a successful franchise," Robinson said Friday.

Robinson, who will be on hand for the Spurs' home opener against Dal-laware, said he was happy with his contract and would be rooting for the team until it is able to join it.

"Bringing me in I feel it wouldn't be enough to make a successful franchise, but there are some talented young players who are going to get a lot of experience in the next few years," Robinson said at a news conference attended by about 800 screaming fans.

"I feel I can come in here and make my impact and we will be successful," he said.

Drossos, who had negotiated with Fontana and Robinson for 10 days, said the contract would make Robinson among the highest-paid athletes in pro sports. He said Robinson could have an impact on the team and fans during this rebuilding season.

"I think that this team could surprise a lot of people, and the players may be that just, more determined to show the world can do it on our own," Drossos said.

Robinson told the fans that he and his parents, Ambrose and Freda Robinson, appreciated the hospitality extended to them during their first visit to the city in September.

"It's the one who had to live with this decision and I set down and carefully thought it out, and I deecided this was the place where I wanted to be," Robinson said.

Robinson said he thought of his chance of signing with a high-profile team, like the Los Angeles Lakers, but said the Spurs reminded him of his underdog Navy team.

"This is a similar situation and we have a commitment to becoming what we can be, and I feel a big part of taking us where we want to be," Robinson said.

Robinson's '83 school records at Navy, including 2,869 career points, 1,314 rebounds and 516 blocked shots. He said he would be like to play in the 1988 Olympics, but is awaiting a decision from the Olympic Committee.

"That may be the time I get the next chance to play organized ball and that's something I'm looking forward to," Robinson said.

Despite the fanfare, he said he doesn't want out of his Navy commitment.

"I have a commitment now and it's a good situation now for me and I enjoy it," Robinson said. "When it comes to play ball, I'll be ready."

Mountain Home edges Jerome girls, 36-30, in SEIC season opener

By The Times-News

JEROME — Mountain Home opened its South-Central Idaho Conference girls' basketball season here Friday night by edging Jerome, 36-30.

Mountain Home scored 12 points in the third period to take a five-point lead at the three-quarters mark, but Jerome came back to trim the lead to 3 points at the 3-minute mark. Hampered by cold shooting and turnovers, however, Jerome couldn't get closer.

Jerome freshman Angie Bailey led all scorers with 12 points.

The game served as the season-opener for both teams.

Jerome's junior varsity prevailed, 21-15.

The Indians rolled up a 23-17 halftime lead and led 33-31 after three quarters, holding off a couple of comeback attempts by the Wildcats in the final period.

Filer, playing its season opener, missed 11 of 17 free throw opportunities, however, to down its chances.

Portland led the entire game after the opening minutes, but the Suns stayed close until the Trail Blazers took control midway through the fourth quarter.

Vandeweghe, the league's fifth-leading scorer last season, scored 12 in the final period.

Bird, brethren brutalize Bucks in opener

BOSTON (AP) — Maybe it's only wishful thinking, but Coach Del Harris of the Milwaukee Bucks thinks Boston superstar Larry Bird "should be an NFL quarterback."

"He can hit people on the run better than most quarterbacks," Harris said Friday night after Bird led the Celtics to a 125-108 NBA victory in their 42nd home opener at Boston Garden.

Bird had 28 points, 15 rebounds and eight assists while playing only 37 minutes.

The Celtics unveiled their new look with three rookies and a running game to go with their half-court offense.

Fred Roberts, a veteran reserve, returned as trade bait until this week, responded to a starting role with 20 points, while Danny Ainge had 18 for the Celtics.

Bird, starting his ninth season and determined to lead Boston to a 17th NBA championship, had special praise for the bench, especially the rookies, who provided 35 points.

"We got a 10-point lead, we put the new guys in and you don't know how they're going to react in their first game in the Garden in front of a big crowd," Bird said. "I really enjoy playing with guys who are excited—and the crowd got behind them and they all played pretty well."

Daugherty, who finished with 17 points, broke a 91-91 tie with a 10-foot jumper and free throw, igniting a 10-2 run.

Harper followed with a steal and slam dunk to make it 96-91, and Daugherty hit a jump hook from the baseline for a seven-point Cleveland lead.

HOUSTON (AP) — World B. Free hit four straight third-quarter baskets and Rodney McCray came off the bench with one day's practice to score 23 points, rallying the Houston Rockets to a 108-102 NBA victory over San Antonio Friday night.

A crowd of 16,611, the largest Rockets crowd in history, watched Houston overcome a 63-59 halftime deficit to win its fifth straight season opener.

Houston's Akeme Oluwole scored 22 points, while Johnny Dawkins scored 21 points and Alvin Robertson added 20 for the Spurs.

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Isiah Thomas scored 21 points Friday night to lead the Detroit Pistons to a 110-99 season-opening victory over New York, spoiling the NBA debut of Knicks Coach Rick Pitino.

Bill Laimbeer made two free throws and John Salley and Rick Mahorn scored field goals as the Pistons won 96-91 in the game.

DALLAS (AP) — Derek Harper hit a 3-point goal with one second left, giving the Dallas Mavericks a 95-93 victory over the Utah Jazz Friday night in the NBA regular-season opener for both teams.

The winning margin was the biggest in Denver franchise history.

Denver's 139 points set a franchise record.

Washington 97 Atlanta 84

ATLANTA (AP) — Dominique Wilkins scored 34 points as the Atlanta Hawks overcame a sluggish third quarter to down the Washington Bullets 97-84 in the NBA season opener for both teams Friday night.

Atlanta built a 73-45 halftime lead, which gave the Hawks a cushion to get through the third quarter, when the Bullets shaved the margin to 75-73.

Washington took advantage of an apparent lack of concentration by the Hawks and a 12-point quarter by center Moses Malone to narrow the gap.

Homedale's Shane Muir intercepted the ball and returned it to midfield. From there, Homedale scored in nine plays. The touchdown came on Nash's 17-yard end sweep with Homedale looking at a third-and-seven. A high snap from center aborted the "point-after" kick attempt.

Glenns Ferry's best offensive effort came as the fourth quarter began when quarterback Duncan Farris scrambled for a 32-yard gain and Ron Hartway added two first-down runs to take the ball to the 10-yard line.

Farris then threw a 30-yard pass for a 14-yard loss, but got 8 yards back on a screen pass to Hartway. On fourth-and-five, Homedale's Scott Taggart sacked Farris for an 18-yard loss at the Pilots' 26. Four plays later, Homedale had the first-and-goal on the 1-foot line and Glenns Ferry came up with its stand.

Brock said that while his team committed several individual mistakes, the Pilots probably owned the loss to an evening process.

"We had things going pretty much our way all year until tonight," he said.

Glenns Ferry, which hadn't had a winning season in 10 decades, finished this year 9-2, including a night-game winning streak that was snapped Friday.

The Dinosaur's program. He met Connellan during the Christmas holidays last year and earned an invitation to walk-on at May camp, the Canadian equivalent of spring football.

"He had the size and the basic skills, and he's a bright young guy and a quick learner," says Connellan. "I thought he would have a chance to play quite a lot as a freshman and maybe be a starter as a sophomore, but he progressed quickly."

Pavelec is the only American on the Calgary roster, except for the "border" schools like the University of British Columbia. Americans are relatively rare in Canadian college football.

"I like Canada," he says. "Because my mother is Canadian, I'm eligible for dual citizenship and I'm going to apply for it next week."

He says the adjustments have been surprisingly easy.

"There are three downs in Canadian football and the rules make the defensive linemen line up a yard off the ball, which changes things for an offensive lineman," says Pavelec. "But apart from that, things really aren't that different. The players here are a little smaller than in American college football, but they're quick and they're tough. It's really a good quality of competition."

"He hasn't had any problems," says Connellan. "He needs to work on his pass blocking because up until now he's never played on a team that passed much. And he needs to get stronger."

Pavelec's weight training program last summer consisted on working on a U.S. Forest Service firefighting crew out of Stanley.

L.A. Lakers 113 Seattle 109

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Magic Johnson scored 10 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter and A.C. Green added 21 Friday night as the Los Angeles Lakers opened defense of their NBA championship with a 113-109 victory over the Seattle SuperSonics.

Mychal Thompson scored 17 points for the Lakers and teammate Michael Cooper had 16. Seattle was paced by Tom Chambers, 20 points.

The Lakers, who swept the Sonics in last year's Western Conference playoff finals, opened the fourth quarter with 10 straight points for a 95-86 lead.

Seattle rallied in the final two minutes.

Instead of winning 13-10, it's now 27-6 or 31-23. Maybe that's because the addition of McMahon and Neal Anderson, on offense, gives the defense more room to let down.

It's typical of this distorted season that the Bills, who have already equalled their win total of the past two years, are talking playoffs.

And it's typical that Ray Perkins is trying to speculate the talk.

Tampa Bay (4-3) at Cincinnati (2-5)

This isn't a mismatch on the field, but it may be on the sideline — Don Shuta against Sam Wyche, whose status is such in Cincinnati after three last-minute losses, still have "Fire Wyche" signs popping up all over Riverfront Stadium.

But the Bengals blame themselves.

Dallas (4-3) at Detroit (1-8)

The first thing Tom Landry did after the Cowboys beat the Giants Monday night was to talk about the last time they won a big Monday night game and followed it up with a trip to Detroit — they lost.

Richfield

Richfield has big linemen, Buncie observes. Center Craig Ward and guard Casew Riley will be a big part of offense in that man football.

"We ran out of room," says Buncie. "When we played them it was muddy, yucky. I jokingly accused them of watering the field because it hadn't rained anywhere in the state."

Nelson's greatest fear is that Ward will start connecting with junior Laine King, who has caught 44 passes for 225 yards and 11 touchdowns this season on a running team.

row since a 30-21 loss to Idaho State in Pocatello. The Bengals are out of the Big Sky cellar only by the grace of the Bobcats.

The Idaho State loss is still one that bothers our players and coaches a lot," Gilbertson says. "It's one that we really felt we let get away, but that's a long time behind us. We've regrouped, done some great things as a football team; overcome a lot of adversity in the last month and now we're here."

Playing a team that has lost seven straight, certainly is where most coaches would like to be, but Big Sky port of call like Bobzman can be full of dangerous shoats this time of year. The particular concern is Idaho's very young defense, which on the weather-slickened natural grass of Ren-Hall Stadium could get in trouble again on an option team that has controlled the ball an average of 31 minutes a game.

meeting last Wednesday that appeared to heal the strike scars. The Lions, with Coach Darby Rogers near the end, couldn't fight worse.

New Orleans (4-3)

at Los Angeles (1-6)

The Saints are one of those teams like the Eagles, Oilers, Bills and Chargers who may give the playoffs a strange look this year.

In fact, the playoff chickens are already being counted in win-starved New Orleans, something that annoys coach Jim Mora.

Pittsburgh (4-3) at Kansas City (1-6)

The winner of this game is the one that best gets into the Bears' mind.

The Chiefs twice led by 14 before losing 31-20 to the Bears; the Steelers blew 14 and 10-point leads against Miami and lost 23-21.

The Chiefs are now playing for their jobs.

Atlanta (2-5) at Cleveland (4-3)

And to think that the Falcons beat Washington in the second non-struck game of the season. Last week's 38-0 thrashing by New Orleans left a lot of jobs in jeopardy.

The last of them, Coach Marion Campbell's.

So Campbell took it out on the players.

"We've started to come on," says Miles. "I think our kids will win by a good margin. I hope the kids will have the confidence that comes with state (playoff) experience."

Nelson guarantees his players will be ready.

"I've made an oath (watch the film) that (Richfield) game every day this week."

Buncie has a caveat for the Tigers. "If I was Rudy, I wouldn't make my reservations to Moscow just yet."

And although Montana State ranks eighth in the Big Sky in total offense, that's still 27th-best in the nation. More important, the Bobcats' "veer-based" offense ranks fourth in the conference in rushing offense with an average of 170 yards a game.

"In the heat of the battle in the last four football games, our defense has really controlled the game," says Gilbertson. "At the end of the game when we're now playing the clock, people have scored some touchdowns late and certainly you don't like to see that happen."

"Some of our younger players have got to become sounder performers if we're going to develop into the kind of football team capable of being," says first-year MSU Coach Earle Solomonson, whose Bobcats are 1-8 for the season and winless in six conference outings. "We're looking for our seniors to hang in there, but we've only got two opportunities left and one of them is against the best offensive team in the conference. We have to work hard to control the football, execute up front and on defense, try to disrupt their passing game. We haven't been able to do that and that's what's going to be a real challenge to our young men."

"We're ready for the option," says Gilbertson. "We've seen it twice before this season, against Central Michigan and Mankato State. I think it does nothing but help us. The game will be broadcast in the Now instead of teaching your players something brand new on our defense, it's just a refresher course."

Two of them, Neosia Morris and Greg Ferguson, may be the only seniors starting on either team; Ferguson missed the Weber State game with a shoulder separation. The game will be broadcast in the Magic Valley on Twin Falls radio station KZZL-FM and on Burley station KBAR-AM.

FSU, Auburn join battle of No. 1 contenders

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
The Associated Press

There will be at least one less challenger for college football's national championship this weekend. Neither fourth-ranked Auburn State, 7-1, nor No. 6 Florida, 7-0-1, can afford anything but a victory and Saturday's loser will drop out of the title chase.

College football

For Florida State to go to a big bowl has a chance at the national championship, we must win this game," Coach Bobby Bowden says. "Now Auburn can still get in a big bowl by winning their conference, but it is also a mighty big one for them."

Top-rated Oklahoma and fifth-ranked LSU also face members of the Associated Press Top Twenty. Oklahoma enters this No. 12 Oklahoma State and LSU playing host-at-night-to-Alabama-which-is tied for 13th with South Carolina. A fourth pairing of top Twenty teams is at No. 18 Indiana and Louisville at No. 19 Tennessee. South Carolina and No. 20 Texas A&M are not scheduled.

How good is Oklahoma? The Sooners are 29-point favorites over the nation's No. 12 team and, as Auburn Coach Pat Dye puts it, "Those people that set the line don't do it—with their heart, they do it based on knowledge."

Oregon State, No. 8 Syracuse at Navy, Boston College at No. 9 Notre Dame and Clemson at North Carolina.

In the Second Ten, Purdue visits No. 15 Michigan State; No. 16 Penn State plays Maryland in Baltimore, Illinois is at No. 18 Indiana and Louisville at No. 19 Tennessee. South Carolina and No. 20 Texas A&M are not scheduled.

How good is Oklahoma? The Sooners are 29-point favorites over the nation's No. 12 team and, as Auburn Coach Pat Dye puts it, "Those people that set the line don't do it—with their heart, they do it based on knowledge."

Oklahoma leads the nation in scoring, total offense, rushing, scoring defense and total defense, but the Sooners are only second in passing defense and sixth in rushing defense and lost to Oklahoma State in 1976 so Coach Barry Switzer has to be concerned.

"This has always been a backyard brawl, and I expect the same this week," he says. "Oklahoma State has some truly outstanding skill people.

"Quarterback Mike Gundy concerns me with his ability to scramble and make a good play out of a bad one. We all know the abilities of (tailback) Thurman Thomas and (wide receiver) Hart Lee Dykes and Barry Sanders has added a new dimension to their kick-return team. They have had success and know what kind of season it will be if they can beat us. I expect the toughest test of the year."

Thus far, Oklahoma's toughest test was a 24-6 victory over Colorado.

"We should score," says OSU's Shabby, who directs a not-too-shabby offense that ranks 14th nationally at 419 yards a game — to Oklahoma's 531.6. "If we don't, we're going to get blown out. If our defense plays great, they're still going to score some points, so we've got to score."

Oklahoma leads the series 63-12-6, including 10 in a row and two straight shutouts.

I can look back eight years from now and know we kept this string going."

Meanwhile, Nebraska is a 45-point favorite over Iowa State and there isn't even a line in the Miami-Miami game.

Auburn, however, is an underdog at home — by 3½ points — for the first time since a 1982 visit by No. 1-ranked Georgia and Dye rates the Seminoles two touchdowns better than Miami despite a 26-25 loss to the Hurricanes.

"Florida State is a great football team," he says. "Coach Bowden said this was going to be his best team, and I think it is. They are averaging something phenomenal on offense. They are a good, solid defensive football team that is better than it has been in the past."

"I think they key to the game will be if we will be able to tackle Sammie Smith. That is something nobody has done, including Miami, which is rated as having one of the top defenses in the nation."

Kansas City deals away sometime star Jackson

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Kansas City Royals sent injured pitcher Danny Jackson and shortstop Angel Salazar to the Cincinnati Reds Friday for shortstop Kurt Stillwell and pitcher Ted Power, the Royals announced.

DANNY JACKSON
Key to '85 drive

Baseball

Jackson, 25, played a key role in Kansas City's drive to the 1985 World Series title, but slumped last year and has a 37-49 record and a 3.69 earned run average in 119 games with the Royals.

Power, 32, spent the past five years with the Reds and set a lifetime mark of 44-42 with an ERA of 3.96. He also has 41 saves.

Salazar, 26, spent most of the past two seasons as the starting shortstop for Kansas City. He has a 224 batting average with the Royals.

Stillwell, 22, a switch hitter, batted .297 in 1986, set a career high in home runs and 33 runs batted in. Stillwell's two-year totals in the majors are a .246 batting average with four home runs and 59 RBI.

Cincinnati, and at 20, was the youngest player in the National League for much of the season. In 1987, he hit .255 with four home runs and 33 runs batted in.

Pirates ship Orsulak to O's in trade for two infielders PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates obtained shortstop Terry Crowley Jr. and third baseman Rico Rossy from the Baltimore Orioles for outfielder Joe Orsulak, the Pirates said Friday.

"We feel we've acquired two outstanding infield prospects," General Manager Syd Thrift said. "Rossy, 23, who batted .287 at Baltimore's Charlotte team in the Southern League this year, will be assigned to Pittsburgh's Buffalo farm club.

Crowley, 19, a switch hitter who hit .302 in 78 games for Hagerstown in the Carolina League in 1987, will be assigned to Pittsburgh's Harrisburg affiliate.

"We followed Crowley in his free agent days, and we're very high on him," Thrift said. "We are also impressed with his performance in the Carolina League this past season.

"Rossy has shown improvement and is performing very well in the Puerto Rican winter league." Crowley is the son of Orioles first base coach Terry Crowley Sr.

Orsulak, 25, batted .201 in 39 games during the 1987 season with Pittsburgh's Vancouver farm team, where his season was interrupted by a broken foot.

In 298 major league games in four seasons for Pittsburgh, Orsulak has a lifetime batting average of .272 with two home runs, 44 runs batted in and 51 stolen bases.

Meanwhile, the Pirates said pitcher Don Taylor was scheduled for surgery Monday at Arlington, Va., and we're very high on his right elbow.
