House passes Swan Falls bill; dispute erupts

While Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones takes exception to environmental impact studies stipulated by the bill passed on Monday, environmentalists worry that the present agreement will harm the river's ecology, including a refuge downstream from Swan Falls Dam (above).

By JEFF JACKSON
States News Service

WASHINGTON — The House Monday passed a measure by Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, to settle a decade-long dispute over Snake River water rights, but Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones rekindled the dispute because he says language added to the bill would undercut state control over use of the river.

Jones charged in a statement Monday that the staff of a House panel had used "underhanded" tactics to alter an agreement over Stallings' bill to force federal recognition of the state's Swan Falls Water Rights Agreement.

Jones' allegations came as the House passed, by a 320-0 vote, Stallings' measure to compel the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) to approve the Swan Falls accord. The bill enjoys the support of Gov. Cecil Andrus, Republican Rep. Larry Craig and the Idaho Power Co.

Jones called on Stallings before the vote to pull the bill off the floor. Jones claimed that a staffer of the House committee with jurisdiction over FERC named David Finnegan had "clandestinely" changed the language of Stallings' legislation to gain more federal control over Snake River waters in the interest of certain environmental groups.

Jones' charge — B1

that he thought Jones' charges were "strange" because it would not be possible for a single committee staffer to get away with such tactics.

Jones does not like language added to Stallings' bill that calls for a study to be performed jointly by the Fish and Wildlife Service, the National Marine Fisheries Service and the Idaho Power Co. to assess the environmental impact of the Swan Falls accord. This provision stipulates that FERC is to ensure that the study is carried out.

Jones said that this "could seriously" jeopardize Idaho's control over the Snake River. He added that the "language urges unprecedented federal control over Snake River waters."

Stallings retorted that the provision calling for the study was added to his bill by the Energy and Commerce Committee on Oct. 6, and since then consultations with legal experts have made clear that a federally mandated study will not affect Idaho's control over the river.

Stallings said his bill was necessary to force FERC to ratify the Swan Falls settlement. Since the accord was signed in 1984, FERC's refusal to take action has tied up thousands of farmers' and utilities' water permit applications before the Idaho Department of Water Resources. ## Idaho environmental groups sue EPA, demand water rules

The Associated Press

BOISE — A dozen environmental groups have filed suit against the Environmental Protection Agency, contending it has failed to set guidelines for protecting Idaho lakes and streams from "nonpoint" sources of pollution.

The suit, filed Friday in U.S. District Court in Boise, fulfilled a promise the groups made in September that they would take legal action in 60 days if the EPA failed to set water quality standards for Idaho as required by the federal Clean Water Act.

Idaho is the only state without non-point source anti-degradation rules, aimed at preserving stream quality against pollution from non-specific sources, such as logging activities, farming or mining.

State officials, conservationists and industry representatives have been negotiating establishment of an Idaho anti-degradation plan for months.

Last week, the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare postponed a series of hearings on proposed water quality rules, citing the lack of EPA guidelines and objections both from state legislators and interest groups.

Last Friday, leaders of four legislative committees formally abandoned the Legislature's February 1985 deadline for Health and Welfare's Division of Environment to produce anti-degradation rules. The lawmakers also directed all the parties involved to resume negotiations on the issue. The environmentalist complaint contends the EPA has been in violation of the Clean Water Act since 1985 by allowing Idaho to go without an anti-degradation policy.

It calls on the agency to write standards for the state within 90 days.

The groups involved include the Idaho Conservation League, the Wilderness Society, the Committee for Idaho's High Desert, the Idaho Environmental Council, the Sportsman's Coalition, the Idaho Natural Resource Legal Foundation, Upper Snake River Chapter of Trout Unlimited, the Henry's Fork Foundation, the Federation of Fly Fishers, the Sierra Club, the Boise-Payette Backcountry Coalition, the Boise Valley Fly Fisherman and John Osborn, an individual from Spokane, Wash.

Andrus brought opposing sides in the anti-degradation dispute back to the table in October.

But no progress was made toward reopening consensus negotiations that broke down this summer.

Ben Mitchell, Idaho Sportsman's Coalition executive director, said sportsmen have given up on negotiations because of the stand of the timber industry and the action of the state.

The state Department of Health and Welfare has "betrayed us by cutting a separate deal with industry, and by now issuing regula-

Kennedy emerges as front-runner for court seat

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House called federal appellate judge Anthony M. Kennedy the front-runner for the Supreme Court nomination Monday and subjected him to new background questioning as other Republicans doled out blame for the collapse of the Douglas Ginsburg nomination.

Kennedy, who was flown to Washington less than two weeks ago to be interviewed for the court vacancy, was brought back Saturday by Air Force jet after Ginsburg withdrew in the uproar following his admission that he had used marijuana.

"I think it's fair to say he is the leading candidate," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said of Kennedy, of Sacramento, Calif.

President Reagan, meanwhile, said that harassment from outside rather than inside the administration forced Ginsburg to withdraw.

Reagan and other White House officials denied that Ginsburg had been abandoned after his drug-use admission. The president said, "I stood by and declared I would not withdraw him. He voluntarily made that decision on his own."

SEN. ORRIN HATCH Assails 'gutless wonders'

However, conservative Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, said Ginsburg wanted to fight it out but "gutless wonders" on the White House staff undermined the nominee and forced him to bow out.

Hatch blamed Reagan himself for failing to assert enough leadership

White House claims Bennett didn't push

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Reagan Monday denied using Education Secretary William J. Bennett to push out Supreme Court nominee Douglas H. Ginsburg and claimed that Ginsburg withdrew because of "harassment" and "clamor" from sources he did not identify.

"I stood by and declared that I would not withdraw him," Reagan told reporters. "He voluntarily made that decision on his own."

His account conflicts with authoritative descriptions of how Reagan's aides pressured Ginsburg to give up.

In addition, Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, one of Reagan's longtime conservative supporters, Monday accused "gutless wonders" on the White House staff of pulling the rug from under Ginsburg. He did not name them.

Hatch said Reagan should find out who was undermining him and "bust 'em right out of the White House as soon as he can."

Meanwhile, Education Department officials reaffirmed their statements that Bennett did not misstructure his conversation with the president Friday, after which Bennett called Ginsburg and urged him to withdraw.

"Every indication we had from the White House... was that they were grateful for what Bennett had done," said William Kristol, Bennett's chief of staff.

In remarks to reporters while touring United Way headquarters in Alexandria, Va., Reagan tried to put distance between himself and Bennett's actions.

On Friday, Bennett's spokesman, Lorne Miller, said Bennett had called Ginsburg and urged him to withdraw. He said that Bennett had told Reagan in advance of his intentions and that Reagan did not object. Another Education Department spokesman had quoted Reagan as telling Bennett, "Do what you think is right."

Democrats.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said at the time that some senators believed Kennedy was too liberal, and the White House was told there could be a filibuster against Kennedy if he were nominated. It was

Talks enter 3rd week on budget

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Democrats pressed Republicans Monday to accept less military spending and approve more taxes in place of domestic cuts, as White House and congressional negotiators began a third week of deficit-reduction talks.

"We are making significant progress," said Rep. William H. Gray III, D-Pa., chairman of the House Budget Committee. Agreement could come "maybe by the end of the week," he said.

Gray and other Democrats said they were encouraged by a GOP compromise proposal Friday, and the bipartisan meetings broke off early Monday so Democrats could meet today to respond.

Reagan alters course, lists 'ifs' for talks with Sandinistas

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan said Monday the United States would take part in talks with Nicaraguan authorities if they engage in serious ceasefire negotiations with the Contra rebels.

Reagan emphasized that such discussions are the first between the United States and Nicaragua in almost three years — would occur only if representatives of other Central American countries are also present.

The president outlined the U.S. position to a luncheon gathering of Western Hemisphere foreign ministers assembled here for the annual meeting of the Organization of American States. Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto was among the listeners as Reagan spoke.

The United States and Nicaragua have had no substantive bi-lateral talks since the latter half of 1984 when a series of meetings were held in Manzanillo, Mexico. By insisting that other Central American countries be a part of any future contacts with the Sandinistas, Reagan appeared to rule out a resumption of bi-lateral discussions.

Reagan's announcement apparently was linked to the surprise statement by Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega last Thursday that his government would agree to open, through an intermediary, cease fire talks with the U.S.-backed Contras.

Reagan's remarks were consistent with the previous administration position that the United States would ease its stand on talks with the leftist Sandinistas only if they first opened a dialogue with the Contras.

Reagan said that Secretary of State George P. Shultz "will be ready to meet jointly with the foreign ministers of all five Central American nations, including the Sandinistas representative" if Nicaragua engages in "serious negotiations" with the Contras.

The statement appeared to suggest continued forward movement in the Central America peace agreement signed by five presidents of the region last August.

The administration, rejecting Sandinista appeals for direct U.S.-Nicaraguan talks, has confined its contacts in recent years to the four friendly Central American nations — El Salvador, Honduras, Guatemala and Costa Rica. In diplomatic jargon, these three countries are known as the "core four."

The United States is not a signatory to the peace agreement but has been looking for ways to play a more active role because of what Reagan considers to be important American security interests in the region.

Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega will address the OAS meeting on Wednesday. Vice Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco told reporters Monday that Ortega will stress Nicaraguans' interest in full compliance with the peace plan.

Ortega's visit to Washington is believed to be his first since President Carter invited him and other Sandinista leaders to the White House in September 1979, two months after the Nicaraguan revolution.

 ate to compel FERC to recognize the agreement.
 McClure's bill, which passed the Senate last February, does not include a provision for an environmental study. Since it passed last February, bargaining will have to take place to reconcile the differences between Stalling's and McClure's bills. A spokesman for McClure said they will have to study the language in the House version before taking a position.
 A spokesman for FERC said Monday that it has failed to reject the Swan Falls accord because of concerns raised by the Fish and Wildlife Service and the National Marine Fisheries Service that environmental concerns were inadequately addressed in the agreement.

Rob Lowthrop, of the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission said Monday that Stalling's bill would never have passed the House without a provision for further study of environmental impact.
 He said the Swan Falls accord would reduce flow levels in the river to the point where entire populations of salmon and sturgeon would be threatened with extinction.
 "What strikes me about the settlement is that it is heavily dominated by agricultural and utility interests at the expense of environmental concerns," Lowthrop said.
 Kurt Handerson, head of the Idaho chapter of the National Wildlife Federation, also said the Swan Falls agreement did not take river ecology into proper account. He warned that the accord would lower the river's water level in the Deer Flat Wildlife Refuge downstream from the Swan Falls Dam, endangering the habitat of a variety of species.

 Clive Storey, Jones' assistant for natural resource issues, said Monday that Jones is concerned because such a study could be used by environmental groups to re-open resolved issues over water rights in the Swan Falls accord.
 Stalling's job he was puzzled by this reasoning.
 "If the study shows that the agreement would harm the river's ecology, then environmental groups can sue the state," Stalling said. "But I don't see where it gives the federal government authority to intrude on Idaho's control over water rights."

 not clear whether Helms had changed his mind in light of Ginsburg's withdrawal.
 A Democratic source from the Senate Judiciary Committee, speaking only on condition he not be named, said Democratic committee members placed Kennedy in their "least controversial" category among possibilities mentioned by White House officials.

Atlanta (AP) - Scattered light rain moved across parts of the drought-stricken South Monday, but forest fires remained out of control in some states and forestry officials cautioned against too much optimism.
 "We may get a couple of days of relief but one rain is not going to take us out of the fire season," said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Doug Williams in Atlanta.

He said rain fell over Texas, Mississippi and Louisiana, plus Kentucky and West Virginia as a cold front swung eastward across the region. Firefighters reported higher humidity and morning dew in some areas, he said.
 In Tennessee, the fires Monday menaced a nursing home and a natural gas field.

West Virginia Gov. Arch Moore called out the National Guard Monday to help firefighters starting Wednesday. National Guardsmen also have been activated in Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, Virginia and Kentucky, where 10 helicopters sprayed homes threatened in Middleboro.
 Basil Vaughn, 48, chief of the Crossroads Volunteer Fire Department in rural Kentucky, died Sunday of a heart attack while fighting fires.
 Heavy smoke from the fires had drifted northward and cut visibility as far as New England on Sunday. On Monday morning, the smoky haze had moved into northern Maine and New Hampshire, the National Weather Service said, but the advancing cold front began clearing the air over Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

As of Monday, more than 10,000 fires had charred approximately 224,900 acres on public and private land since Oct. 27 in the 13 states that make up the U.S. Forest Service's Southern Region, the regional headquarters in Atlanta reported. Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia all have had at least some fires in the past two weeks, according to the Forest Service.

not elaborate on what problems this would bring.
 The California Secretary of State's report on lobbyist registration for 1976-77 listed Kennedy as a lobbyist for Schenley Industries, Capitol Records Inc. and the California Association of Dispensing Opticians.
 Hatch said in a television interview on Monday that conservatives might feel betrayed if Kennedy turns out to be "a moderate Republican who's going to not be there on a lot of the issues that the president stands up on."
 At a news conference later in the day, Hatch sharply criticized White House staffers, whom he would not name.
 Hatch said he spoke with Ginsburg before and after the nominee's withdrawal statement on Saturday.

 tions that ignore the non-point source team's recommendations, the clear public testimony for clean water and the requirements for the Clean Water Act," Mitchell said.
 "For the sake of Idaho's future, the public is now acting on its own behalf. We have no other choice."
 Warren McCall, EPA Idaho watershed chief, said the suit was not a surprise.
 "We certainly weren't taking their threat lightly," he said. "We were proceeding in a manner that up until recently seemed to be productive."

 McCall said the EPA "really wants to see the state handle (the water quality issue) without federal pressure." He said officials hope the governor can provide leadership on the issue that has been lacking.
 But Mary Kelly, Idaho Conservation League executive director, said the suit was the only choice for conservation groups.
 "ICL always has considered legal action to be their last line of defense," she said. "But that route (negotiations) has failed repeatedly over the last two years in regards to water quality."

 Joe Hinson, executive vice president of the Intermountain Forest Industry Association, has said the EPA already has set a national anti-degradation guideline, allowing the use of state-approved "best management practices" to protect water quality. But he said the lawsuit may be useful for settling the issue.
 State Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, chairman of the Senate Resources and Environment Committee, said he felt the lawsuit would have little impact, except to spur the emphasis on negotiations.

FBI secures wanted criminal

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — White supremacist Louis Ray Beam Jr., one of 14 people indicted on sedition charges and one of the FBI's 10 most wanted fugitives, was returned to the United States Monday after being arrested in Mexico, the FBI said. Beam's wife, Sheila Marie Toohy Beam, 20, opened fire on Mexican police as they made the arrest Friday in Guadalajara, critically injuring one officer, said FBI agent Don K. Pettus. Mexican authorities were holding Mrs. Beam for assault on a police officer, and Pettus said she was not wanted on any U.S. charges.

Beam, 41, was affiliated with the Aryan Nation Church of Jesus Christ Christian in Hayden Lake, Idaho, and was a former grand dragon of the Texas Ku Klux Klan, Pettus said.

U.S. will discuss truce

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said today the United States would be willing to reopen substantive discussions with Nicaragua's leftist government once "serious negotiations" begin between the Sandinistas and the U.S.-backed Contra rebels on reaching a cease-fire.

Reagan made the disclosure in remarks to a gathering of hemispheric foreign ministers attending the Organization of American States General Assembly. Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Manuel d'Escoto was among the 50 officials gathered in a State Department room overlooking the Potomac River.

Reagan made clear that he envisions talks with the Sandinistas as part of a broader discussion involving other Central American countries as well.

Nuclear theft could happen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government cannot assure that nuclear material shipped to foreign customers won't be stolen by terrorists or used to make atomic weapons, four agencies' reports released Monday.

International guidelines "do not in themselves permit a confident conclusion in all cases that the physical protection provided is adequate," said the Pentagon report.

The Pentagon's conclusions were generally echoed by the State Department, the Energy Department and the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. The reports were sent to Congress under legislation authorized last year by Rep. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., and he released them.

EPA agrees to cleanup plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major natural gas pipeline company and the Environmental Protection Agency announced agreement in principle Monday for a $400 million cleanup of 29 waste pits in 14 states, many of them contaminated with hazardous PCB compounds.

The EPA said it was the biggest cleanup project, in dollars, that it has ever negotiated.

Texas Eastern Gas Pipeline Co. also has agreed to a $15 million civil penalty and to reimburse its share of EPA's costs in the agency's probe of 14 pipelines that may have dumped PCB-contaminated substances into pits along their lines.

Thiokol tests new joints

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — A test Monday to gauge the effectiveness of a new metal "capture feature" in the joints of Morton Thiokol's redesigned space shuttle booster was successful, officials said.

The test firing in the company's Joint Environment Simulator allowed engineers to study the ability of the metal lip to withstand and contain super-hot gases generated during an actual launch.

The 122-second test "is another success on the way to re-flying the (shuttle) vehicle," said Royce Mitchell, solid rocket program manager for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The escape of such gases through a booster joint was blamed for the Jan. 28, 1986, destruction of the shuttle Challenger and its seven crew members.

Overall corn harvest up substantially

WASHINGTON (AP) — Overall, farmers have had good weather and record yields of corn as they wind up this fall's harvest, the Agriculture Department said Monday.

Corn production was estimated at nearly 7.17 billion bushels, slightly more than forecast a month ago but still down 13 percent from the 1986 harvest of 8.25 billion bushels.

The department's Agricultural and Statistics Board said an estimated 93 percent of this fall's corn acreage was harvested as of Nov. 1, far ahead of the year-ago pace of 61 percent. Farmers cut back to about 59.6 million acres for harvest from 69.2 million acres a year ago.

A major reason for the acreage cutback was participation in government programs in which farmers agreed to idle part of their cropland in return for price supports and direct payments. In all, farmers signed up to take 64.4 million acres from crop production this year, including corn, wheat, rice and cotton. In addition, farmers so far have agreed to idle almost 23 million acres of marginal, highly erodible land for 10 years.

Corn output this year is the smallest since 1983, when drought and government acreage programs reduced production to 4.18 billion bushels. The record output was 8.89 billion bushels in 1985.

But corn inventories will remain huge for at least the coming year, although some decline in the national stockpile is expected because of increased use, including larger shipments to overseas buyers.

The U.S. average yield per acre is forecast at a record high 120.3 bushels, up 0.4 of a bushel from the Oct. 1 forecast, the board said in its report. The previous record was 119.3 bushels set in 1986. Record yields are forecast for Indiana, Minnesota and Nebraska.

Officials said the "all crops" production index as of Nov. 1 averaged 107 percent of the base year of 1977, up a percentage point from October and just one point shy of the 1986 reading.

Soybean production was estimated at 1.96 billion bushels, down fractionally from the October forecast but 1 percent more than the 1986 harvest of 1.94 billion bushels. The record was 2.26 billion bushels in 1979.

With the harvest of 1987 crops winding down, no new production figures were included for many other commodities such as wheat, oats and barley.

According to USDA economists, net cash income of farmers this year may be in the range of $54 billion to $58 billion, up from last year's record of $52 billion. Net cash income is the difference between cash receipts and cash expenses.

Consumer food prices overall are expected to average about 4 percent higher this year, compared with a 3.2 percent gain in 1986.

Negotiators consider joint nuclear inspection teams

WASHINGTON (AP) — American and Soviet negotiators, opening talks on underground nuclear tests, will consider setting up joint inspection teams to guard against cheating, Reagan administration officials said Monday.

But the officials, briefing reporters at the State Department on the talks in Geneva, Switzerland, held out little prospect of banning all tests, as Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev has proposed.

"As long as we require nuclear weapons for our security we have to be sure they work," one official said.

In fact, he said, future U.S. military needs may require raising the ceiling of 150 kilotons imposed in a 1974 U.S.-Soviet treaty.

President Reagan, in a report to Congress, has accused the Soviets of possibly exceeding the legal limits. The U.S. negotiators in Geneva will concentrate on improving verification procedures.

In that regard, the officials said, the two sides will discuss having U.S. and Soviet inspectors jointly at each other's test sites. "That's one of the options that has been raised," an official said.

EYE OF THE STORM

CAPTURE ITS BRILLIANCE IN YOUR HOME

A magnificent display of color and light created by rare gases safely enclosed in a clear glass chamber. Eye of the Storm is a new concept in home entertainment based on an original 19th century design. Bring to your home the excitement and wonder of lightning. You can vary the intensity of the lightning and control the electrical discharge to achieve "forks" and spectacular starburst patterns. Touch the surface and watch the lightning gather harmlessly about your hand. Set it to respond to music and voice. Now available at The Bon Gifts.

FBI secures wanted criminal

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — White supremacist Louis Ray Beam Jr., one of 14 people indicted on sedition charges and one of the FBI's 10 most wanted fugitives, was returned to the United States Monday after being arrested in Mexico, the FBI said. Beam's wife, Sheila Marie Toohy Beam, 20, opened fire on Mexican police as they made the arrest Friday in Guadalajara, critically injuring one officer, said FBI agent Don K. Pettus. Mexican authorities were holding Mrs. Beam for assault on a police officer, and Pettus said she was not wanted on any U.S. charges.

Beam, 41, was affiliated with the Aryan Nation Church of Jesus Christ Christian in Hayden Lake, Idaho, and was a former grand dragon of the Texas Ku Klux Klan, Pettus said.

U.S. will discuss truce

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said today the United States would be willing to reopen substantive discussions with Nicaragua's leftist government once "serious negotiations" begin between the Sandinistas and the U.S.-backed Contra rebels on reaching a cease-fire.

Reagan made the disclosure in remarks to a gathering of hemispheric foreign ministers attending the Organization of American States General Assembly. Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Manuel d'Escofo was among the 50 officials gathered in a State Department room overlooking the Potomac River.

Reagan made clear that he envisions talks with the Sandinistas as part of a broader discussion involving other Central American countries as well.

Nuclear theft could happen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government cannot assure that nuclear material shipped to foreign customers won't be stolen by terrorists or used to make atomic weapons, four agencies said in reports released Monday.

International guidelines "do not in themselves permit a confident conclusion in all cases that the physical protection provided is adequate," said the Pentagon report.

The Pentagon's conclusions were generally echoed by the State Department, the Energy Department and the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. The reports were sent to Congress under legislation authorized last year by Rep. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., and he released them.

EPA agrees to cleanup plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major natural-gas pipeline company and the Environmental Protection Agency announced agreement in principle Monday for a $400 million cleanup of 89 waste pits in 14 states, many of them contaminated with hazardous PCB compounds.

The EPA said it was the biggest cleanup project in dollars, that it has ever negotiated.

Texas Eastern Gas Pipeline Co. also has agreed to a $15 million civil penalty and to reimburse its share of EPA's costs in the agency's probe of 14 pipelines that may have dumped PCB-contaminated substances into pits along their lines.

Thiokol tests new joints

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — A test Monday to gauge the effectiveness of a new metal "capture feature" in the joints of Morton Thiokol's redesigned space shuttle booster was successful, officials said.

The test firing in the company's Joint Environment Simulator allowed engineers to study the ability of the metal lip to withstand and contain super-hot gases generated during an actual launch.

The 122-second test "is another success on the way to re-flying the (shuttle) vehicle," said Royce Mitchell, solid rocket program manager for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The escape of such gases through a booster joint was blamed for the Jan. 28, 1986, destruction of the shuttle Challenger and its seven crew members.

Overall corn harvest up substantially

WASHINGTON (AP) — Overall, farmers have had good weather and record yields of corn as they wind up this fall's harvest, the Agriculture Department said Monday.

Corn production was estimated at nearly 7.7 billion bushels, slightly more than forecast a month ago but still down 13 percent from the 1986 harvest of 8.25 billion bushels.

The department's Agricultural and Statistics Board said an estimated 93 percent of this fall's corn acreage was harvested as of Nov. 1, far ahead of the year-gate pace of 61 percent. Farmers cut back to about 59.6 million acres for harvest from 69.2 million acres a year ago.

A major reason for the acreage cutback was participation in government programs in which farmers agreed to idle part of their cropland in return for price supports and direct payments. In all, farmers signed up to take 54.4 million acres from crop production this year, including corn, wheat, rice and cotton.

In addition, farmers so far have agreed to idle almost 23 million acres of marginal, highly erodible land for 10 years.

Corn output this year is the smallest since 1983, when drought and government acreage programs reduced production to 4.16 billion bushels. The record output was 8.89 billion bushels in 1985.

But corn inventories will remain of possibly exceeding the legal limits. The U.S. negotiators in Geneva will concentrate on improving verification procedures.

In that regard, the officials said, the two sides will discuss having U.S. and Soviet inspectors jointly at each other's test sites. "That's one of the options that has been raised," an official said.

Negotiators consider joint nuclear inspection teams

WASHINGTON (AP) — American and Soviet negotiators, opening talks on underground nuclear tests, will consider setting up joint inspection teams to guard against cheating, Reagan administration officials said Monday.

But the officials, briefing reporters at the State Department on the talks in Geneva, Switzerland, held out little prospect of banning all tests, as Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev has proposed.

"As long as we require nuclear weapons for our security we have to be sure they work," one official said.

In fact, he said, future U.S. military needs may require raising the ceiling of 150 kilotons imposed in a 1974 U.S.-Soviet treaty.

President Reagan, in a report to Congress, has accused the Soviets huge for at least the coming year, although some decline in the national stockpile is expected because of increased use, including larger shipments to overseas buyers.

The U.S. average yield per acre is forecast at a record high 120.3 bushels, up 0.4 of a bushel from the Oct. 1 forecast, the board said in its report. "The previous record was 119.3 bushels set in 1986. Record yields are forecast for Indiana, Minnesota and Nebraska."

Officials said the "all crops" production index as of Nov. 1 averaged 107 percent of the base year of 1977, up a percentage point from October and just one point shy of the 1986 reading.

Soybean production was estimated at 1.96 billion bushels, down fractionally from the October forecast but 1 percent more than the 1986 harvest of 1.94 billion bushels. The record was 2.26 billion bushels in 1979.

With the harvest of 1987 crops winding down, no new production figures were included for many earlier commodities such as wheat, oats and barley.

According to USDA economists, net cash income of farmers this year may be in the range of $4 billion to $5 billion, up from last year's record of $6 billion. Net cash income is the difference between cash receipts and cash expenses.

Consumer food prices overall are expected to average about 4 percent higher this year, compared with a 3.2 percent gain in 1986.

Slow boat can sink U.S. foreign policy

WASHINGTON — The formulation and execution of foreign policy has traditionally rested on four pillars: power, purpose, resources and human ingenuity.

Today, when our sense of national purpose is so clear, when we have the firm and sure investment in world affairs so vital to our national security, it is painful to see the disastrous effect budgetary cuts are having on our capacity to conduct foreign relations. The costs to undo this damage will surely be much higher than any "savings" today.

GEORGE P. SHULTZ
Pullback threatens security

George P. Shultz

Resource constraints are dictating an American withdrawal from world leadership. This is totally at odds with our military, moral and economic standing in the world, and it seriously threatens our security.

A story is told of the secretary of state in the early 19th century who, after not hearing for several months from the U.S. minister to France, reportedly exclaimed: "If we don't hear from him within three weeks, send him a strong letter."

Today, foreign policy cannot be conducted by slow boat. We are in the midst of an information and communications revolution. The volume of information available for analysis, its importance to national security and the speed of its transmission have transformed the role of our diplomats. Policy-makers need to know in "real time" what is happening around the world; so do defense planners, commercial representatives, health officials and many others. Today's American diplomat must produce more data and faster analysis.

In the face of stringent budgets, we have tried to cut this information from people. For example, purchase of necessary equipment and furniture was pushed from one fiscal year to the next in order to delay the elimination of Foreign Service positions. Having exhausted these mechanisms, we now face the loss of services of 1,200 people — all this because of an anticipated $84-million budgetary shortfall. When the nation faces a budget deficit of nearly $150 billion, such an amount seems almost trivial.

When these major pillars of our policy-making capability are weakened, what impact does this have on U.S. national security and interests? Our presence abroad and our judicious use of resources around the world have netted impressive gains recently. Our personnel and programs are contributing to a worldwide resurgence of democracy and a turn by many toward free market economies. Our personnel represent U.S. interests, analyze and recommend, negotiate agreements, assist U.S. citizens and help friends. Can we afford to reduce this presence abroad?

The curtailment of operations of the Department of State is just part of a larger disaster looming in our overall international affairs budget, which includes the operating budgets of all the other foreign affairs agencies as well as our military and economic assistance programs, both bilateral and multilateral. In fiscal year 1988, appropriations for international affairs were $2.1 billion. Today, under the FY 1988 congressional budget resolution, only $1.2 billion would be available — a 24 percent cut. After inflation and exchange rate adjustments (a particular problem in maintaining diplomatic missions abroad), this reduction is even more severe. Security assistance has been particularly hard hit, declining from $9.5 billion in FY 1986 to just over $8 billion under the congressional budget resolution. Because Congress insists we use half a billion of this to fund the Guaranty Reserve Fund for foreign military sales — a bookkeeping transaction that appropriates money to return it to the Treasury — the effective cut is more than $2 billion. After adjusting for earmarks mandated by Congress, we have been forced to cut back or eliminate assistance to countries in which we enjoy basic rights and military access agreements. We face outright elimination of important humanitarian and developmental programs in Africa and Asia.

A withdrawal by the United States from world leadership would have a negative, know-nothing effect on our security. Countries that look to the United States for encouragement and support will be left empty-handed. Where the United States cannot provide, opportunities will be given to the Soviet Union, support for our interests from friends and allies will decline, and initiatives we have taken will wither. The question we need to ponder is whether the United States — stripped of its capacity to respond effectively in a fast-changing world and withdrawing from world affairs — will be seen by our friends as relevant to their needs in the years ahead.

The debate over our foreign affairs issue is sometimes cast in bureaucratic terms or ascribed to a failure of management to curb waste. Surely, the State Department, like other agencies, must strive to cut fat, as we have been doing.

But the real issue is not over a few dollars saved here or there. Rather, it has to do with our ability and willingness to continue to shoulder the burdens of world leadership. It has to do with the advancement abroad of our many interests. It has to do with the ongoing struggle between freedom and totalitarianism. It has to do with our ability to pursue a foreign policy based on the strong pillars of power, purpose, resources and human ingenuity.

The challenge facing Congress and the administration is to work together to ensure that the pillars of our foreign policy remain strong. Working together means continuing our dialogue with Congress to improve our role as the world's leading force for progress, peace and human dignity. We need understanding and support from our legislators.

George P. Shultz is secretary of state of the United States.

Schroeder's tears were rational ones

Jeanne Kirkpatrick shed no tears as she declined to seek the GOP nomination for president, thereby avoiding the "tear" speeches aimed at Pat Schroeder.

Schroeder attributed criticism of her tears to a double standard that makes emotional displays acceptable for Ronald Reagan but not for her. On one level she was wrong. According to a convention that has prevailed since the similar outburst of Edmund Muskie in 1972, it is clear that this anger may be expressed in a campaign appearance, but not sorrow.

But to the degree that she was expressing the frustration of women candidates, Pat Schroeder's tears were rational ones. As she said, women have not yet learned how to campaign and so either are not entering the presidential lists or are experiencing frustration in running for lesser offices. Let it be concluded that only women are cluttering the air waves with their tears, however, it must be recognized that for the most part, it is men rather than women who are being emotional in their political messages. It's just that men's appeals are far more subtly packaged.

A double standard has emerged. Women must still prove competence, while men can move beyond that to appeal that focus on issues and character. On the latter front, men are openly emotional and reap not only the male but also the female vote, while women, who are loath to focus on the caring side of character for fear of appearing weak, will be further inhibited by the response to Schroeder's tears.

This must be a setback to women, who are reduced to achieving few political gains above the local level. In 1986 they won statewide races only in Maryland and Nebraska. In both cases, women ran against other women. Despite eight challenges on the gubernatorial level, only Kay Orr was successful in Nebraska in her race against Helen Bosawick. Women secured four victories on the congressional level, but had no net gain over 1984.

The irony is that much of today's campaign image-making focuses on intergenerational bonding and that, although women are disproportionately responsible for meeting daily family needs, men reap the political benefits.

Intergenerational bonding focuses around the male candidate. It is not on the Bill Cosby show alone that fatherhood has experienced a comeback. In the 1984 election, Reagan cried on the bluffs of Normandy Beach as he vowed to be able to sit in a chair representing America that such a war, in which she had lost a male relative, would never happen again, because he and all American men in their farms, fields and factories would take his place and sacrifice for her. The president's vows were misty as he vowed to become the father figure the wending rows of crosses, and the first lady reached up to touch her husband's arm, offering consolation to the man who will protect America.

It was a deeply moving ad, which, like almost all of the Reagan campaign messages, focused on the ties that bind and offered reassurance both to the young, many of whom have experienced separation and divorce, and to the old, who, as the ads proclaim, can see the future in the "bright eyes of our young." It was interesting that I brought tears even to the eyes of media consultant William Pope of Atlanta, who said, "I knew what they were doing, but I cried anyway."

Such bonding is at the heart of image-making for even the most serious candidate, and it is bipartisan. Thus in 1986 Rep. Ed Zschau, R-Calif., addressed the voters from a raft filled with his children. Rep. John Breaux, D-La., is presented to the electorate through the eyes of his daughter, and Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., appears in timeless, mythical advertising, whose camera angles depict the candidate from the vantage point of a child.

From New York or Florida come expressions by governors and their family consultants that the state is like a family, with the governor-father at its head. Michael DeKakis presents the case for his trustworthiness in terms of the values learned from his own father. By contrast, the focus for female candidates must be on legislative accomplishments presented in ads that frequently focus on an endorsement by a male colleague. On a medium in which political advertising competes with commercial messages, this spells exciting male and boring female candidates.

If this were not enough, there are no female systems of strength comparable to those that derive from sports and military life for men. In the ultimate injustice, not only can candidate Tim Wirth throw a football in Denver to prove that he can "catch the ball" on many issues, but he will do it in an ad depicting multi-generational ball games.

Both Pat Schroeder and Jeanne Kirkpatrick had advantages in this area. If Joe Biden's greatest strength was the fact that he was a family man who could communicate well, theirs was their ability to hold their ground on defense issues with male colleagues. But Kirkpatrick was passed over for appointment as secretary of state, and Schroeder had to break new ground as a member of the House Armed Services Committee.

Many problems remain for women candidates. The image of the married woman is hard to market in political terms. Democrats have gone with the "maiden aunts," Mary Sue Terry and Barbara Mikulski, who rack up legislative accomplishments. Republicans have touted the clear-headed experience of women such as Jeanne Kirkpatrick and Elizabeth Dole, but it is now clear that neither is willing to venture into the electoral arena on her own behalf. Recruiters for both parties are reporting difficulties in finding women to run for the House and the Senate. For women candidates, Pat Schroeder was crying real, not crocodile, tears.

Montague Kern is a Washington writer currently completing a book on political advertising.

Letters

Lossing veterans a political bone

"Welcome to my parlor said the spider to the fly." "Could it be that Twin Falls County is throwing the veterans a bone in having open house on Veterans Day? Seems unusual since the flag wasn't even hoisted the past two years."

Oh yes, how could I have forgotten? County election is coming up in 1988. Remember veterans and widows, we are still 20,000 strong in Twin Falls County.

Letter misses the point of ban

To Willy Nicholson: In response to your letter of Nov. 4, 1987, wherein you attempt to justify your position, I do believe you miss the point of the banning of cigarette smoking in some areas. After all, I have yet to see the results of studies done which conclude that "the way people choose to dress; the type of religion one practices, the kinds of movies one chooses to watch, and the kind of music one chooses to listen to" are in any way damaging to the lungs of non-smokers.

GLENN A. LAPP

Too bad some laws are needed

Re: Willy Nicholson's letter Nov. 5. An American, land of the free, home of the brave. Love it! Freedom of opinion, freedom of expression of those opinions however erroneous they may be. I smoke. My hair stinks. I get holes in my shirts from hot little ashes that fall down, my bedroom smells like rotten old socks. I have to wash my hands and brush my teeth very vigorously so they don't turn yellow. When I breathe toward non-smokers, I watch them recoil in dismay and grimace through their distance.

My wife loves me enough to kiss my "ashtray" mouth. My friends put up with me most of the time. My brother asks me to smoke on the balcony only. My mother sends me three flights down stairs to smoke. I get postcards that show a cigarette hanging out of a chicken's hind end with a caption below that reads "Any but can smoke" and I have to throw away perfectly good cigarettes before I go into stores. I pay more for cigarette taxes than I do for the cigarettes themselves and still (dummys) I smoke.

Only in America? No! In India they let people starve to death while protecting sacred cows. In more remote parts of Africa, they put bones in various parts of their anatomy that distort their features until they are "beautiful," and here in America you can go to jail for attempted suicide, but you have the freedom to smoke yourself to death — slowly. The key word being — slowly. Don't end it too quickly or you violate our laws.

"Your business ends where my nose begins," was used long before smoking became an issue. Now it is more true than ever before. I can't stop my smoke at the end of my nose so it won't get to yours. Therefore my habit restricts your freedom. If you should decide to quit, I still have the right to smoke next to you in the hardware store while we both look for paint to cover the yellow on our walls. Even if it has become painful for you to breathe my smoke. Even if you have lung cancer.

I don't much care when I'm called the human chimney, yellow tooth, the living ashtray. I don't like becoming a pinoleous jelly fish when I try to quit either. I respect my freedom — and yours too.

Look at it like this. We have had to pass laws about treating people decent for 200 years yet we all know that you can't legislate morality, decency and manners. It's too bad that we have to pass laws forcing us to treat each other with common respect.

JOHN E. NIPPER
Jerome

He'll stick with hardware sales

At some time in life every boy has been asked what he wanted to be when he grew up. I remember well the three vocations I chose, in the order of importance they were: country western singer, gospel preacher, and a politician. I use to set in front of our old water tank and listen to the radio. One of his sheep heard sources and handed me a bent up guitar with the simple admonition: "Here boy, it's all yours." Well sir, I clutched it to my bony ribcage like a Republican does a fat checkbook; practised for hours, weeks, and months. Let my hair grow and braided it in a pony tail down my back; wore a red bandana tied around my forehead and well... washed "Oshogoh Bygones" overall. Went after books in all the best places like the Wooden Shoe, Demmy, the Blue Front and the St. Regis and then pa hit the roof. "Dum it may be, that boy's wallin' in givin me the willys singin' thru his nose like that." Said iffin I had to have an alias when in tarntation did I pick a name like Wally Nielson. "Y'all mite git a bookin' or two but the next day you'd get in on the road."

One summer evenin' ma drug us to a tent revival meetin' on the village green in Murtaugh. Now that preacher was a hoater and started right out with "Repent all you sinners or y'all will finish your days in Hellfire and Brimstone." Well, pa said he reckoned them was a couple of border towns down close to Nogales and we furs couldn't go down cause we didn't have any duds fit for travelin'. I could see the thet there was big money in preachin' when the collection plate came by and brother made a lucky grab and got 35 cents out the thridist. Bw. This time too, we were studying bowt Wm. E. Borah "the Lion of Idaho" in school and how he and Bob LaFollett ruled them folks in Washington. Sounded good to me.

Well sir, I'm mighty glad I passed up preachin' or politician cause I don't believe my sexual stamnia would have endured either in a house of Congress or a house of the Moral Majority. So I reckon I'll just keep on peddlin' hardware and "Hey man, what do you mean them nails have their heads on the wrong end? They go on the further side of the roof."

Washington cannot understand linkage; put act together

WASHINGTON — Two stories, one perhaps apocryphal and the other a matter of record, underscore the difficult circumstances flowing through the capital during these invidious, yet sad, days.

Haynes Johnson

The first involves a prominent Democrat often mentioned as a strong presidential possibility. His reason for not running, he is supposed to have said privately, is that he is unwilling to become the hapless Herbert Hoover of the 1990s, cleaning up after Ronald Reagan's do-nothing, let-the-problems-accumulate, Calvin Coolidge act of the 1980s.

The other came two days ago in congressional testimony from David S. Ruder, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Even though more than a week had passed since the stock market crash, Ruder told incredulous members of Congress that he had yet to brief the president of the United States about it or even have a detailed conversation with him. These kinds of revelations, real or fancied, reinforce the sense that things are seriously out of sync in Washington and oddly, gives the prevailing sense of physical ease and well-being.

Seldom has the capital been lovelier; one perfect fall day follows another. Seldom has it seemed more entrapped by forces beyond its control as each day brings further evidence of inability to deal decisively with events. The result is drift and uncertainty and an undercurrent of bitterness and recrimination.

In Congress, partisan wrangling erupts. Boos and catcalls are heard. Members call for the sergeant at arms to arrest absent members. Privately, some speak with open contempt of the process. Here, too, as on Wall Street, cries for forceful leadership are voiced. None seems forthcoming but not because there are no leaders. Serious, thoughtful people in political parties are attempting to forge a consensus on deficit reduction and long-term economic planning. So far, they are stymied.

That is so because the White House, specifically the president, and congressional leaders have not been able to reach agreement on a course of unified action, or even general strategy. The president, it is said reliably, has been told to his face — and "eloquently," according to one Republican witness — that his failure to act on deficit reduction could forever tarnish his presidential legacy. But he does nothing. Thus, in the face of a national need for reassurance, the signals sent not only are mixed but also discordant.

All of this reinforces the worst fears of Wall Street. In the financial capital, there is much talk about the "wealth shock" stemming from the market collapse and great money loss of October 1987. But the real concern is over another, potentially greater, shock to come. That is the specter of recession, possibly a severe one, stemming from failure to put the nation's fiscal house in order.

The comments of one senior Wall Street executive were illustrative of what seems to be a widely shared point of view. "We've had a fiscal crisis," he said, in the midst of a long conversation. "We've had a political crisis. What we haven't had is an economic crisis. . . . Is this an isolated event, or does it link into other things in the economy? All history would say you cannot have a major contraction without reaching into the economy."

"So I think most economists are going to end up concluding real growth is going to be less, you might have a minus quarter and, if you don't really do things, it might be a recession. And you run the risk that, if you don't do things, it could be a very, very bad recession. So we're at the stage where we've had that one-time shock, and it's very easy, to say, 'Well, that's that. It's over and gone'."

"And what has Washington done? The evidence is they're sitting back and saying, 'The stock market is an spectator sport just like football or anything else. It is not a surprise that stocks came down; it is a surprise they went up so much.'"

"What they're missing is that the stock market is down 30 percent in plus plus. It's no longer a spectator sport. It's linked to the economy. It's linked to society. It's linked to allies. It's linked to the military. All these things get linked with different degrees of intensity depending upon how long you go without political leadership and, the longer you go without political leadership, the linkage to the economy intensifies. . . . which then intensifies that linkage to other things. And I think they're making a mistake by not understanding the linkages and 'acting while the acting is easier.'"

That's the act Washington has been unable to put together.

Haynes Johnson writes for The Washington Post.

Supreme Court will decide if teen-age chastity law valid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court said Monday it will decide whether a law intended to encourage premarital chastity among teen-agers violates the Constitution by promoting religion.

Reagan administration lawyers say an April 15 decision invalidating the 1981 law is "deeply flawed."

But American Civil Liberties Union lawyers say the law "authorizes the use of federal funds to subsidize religious indoctrination as a means of opposing premarital sex, abortion and birth control for teen-agers."

The court will decide whether Congress unlawfully promoted religion when it passed the Adolescent Family Life Act. The law allows religious organizations to get some of the money provided to promote self-discipline among teenagers. Millions of dollars have been passed out under the law's provisions.

The law requires programs applying for funds to describe how, in providing services, they will "involve religious" and charitable organizations, voluntary associations and other groups in the private sector.

"The challenge was brought by clergy members, a group of taxpayers and the American Jewish Congress, arguing the law violates the constitutional requirement of separation of church and state."

U.S. District Judge Charles Richey, while saying that the law has a valid purpose, struck it down because it also has "the primary effect of advancing religion and fosters excessive entanglement between government and religion."

His ruling is believed to mark the first time in the nation's history any court has invalidated an act of Congress as an impermissible establishment of religion.

"The statute... explicitly permits religious organizations to be grantees, and provides a direct role for those organizations in the education and counseling components of AFLE grants," Richey said.

Janet Benshoof, director of the ACLU's Reproductive Freedom Project, said in an interview Monday that religious organizations — including agencies of the Roman Catholic Church — have received money under the 1981 law.

"One parochial school was using federal money in its religious education classes," she said. "The chastity act allowed that."

Former Sen. Jeremiah Denton, an Alabama Republican who was a prime sponsor of the law, said Monday in an interview that an estimated $14 million a year in federal funding is at stake.

Denton said he introduced the legislation to provide "an alternative to Planned Parenthood," which offers family planning counseling that includes the alternatives of contraception and abortion.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, another sponsor of the law, said he hoped the Supreme Court would uphold it. "It's an important case, a clear case," he said.

In the appeal acted on Monday, government lawyers said Richey's ruling "rests on—on brittle—legal premises."

"As a consequence," they said, "large numbers of unmarried teenagers, some pregnant and others likely to become so, may lose vital benefits that Congress intended them to have."

Richey had ordered that no AFLE money be given to religious organizations but Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist earlier postponed the effect of that order until the Supreme Court considers the government's appeal.

The justices also will study an ACLU cross appeal sparked by Richey's ruling that the law could be salvaged by halting all funding of religious organizations.

In other matters, the court: —Let stand a $1.24 million fine imposed against the Boston-based Bank of New England for violations of the federal Bank Secrecy Act and related regulations.

Agreed to decide in a Wisconsin case how difficult it should be to sue in state courts public officials accused of violating federal civil rights laws.

—Turned away an appeal by an Alabama oil company executive ordered to pay the government some $20 million for violating federal price controls during the 1973-74 oil embargo.

Union Pacific searches for cause of collision

KEMMERER, Wyo. (AP) — Union Pacific Railroad investigators tried Monday to determine whether fog caused two freight trains being driven by brothers to smash head-on.

One man was killed and six others injured in Sunday morning's crash, which occurred about 16 miles west of Kemmerer, said UP spokesman John Bromley.

Bromley identified the dead man as Ned E. Hanson, of Pocatello, Idaho, a conductor on the westbound train.

"He was crushed in the cab of the first locomotive," he said. "The spokesman said officials weren't sure if the fog played a role in the crash that occurred about 6:15 a.m."

"We're investigating that possibility," Bromley said from his Omaha, Neb., office Monday.

"We do know that the eastbound train was supposed to stop at that location and he did not. We'll have to look into that, that's the key."

Bromley said later Monday that investigators had estimated that the eastbound train was traveling about 40 mph at the time of the collision, and that the westbound train was moving about 15 mph.

The investigators hoped to receive help in their work from the contents of recording devices on each of the trains.

"We have removed the recording devices from the cabs of the locomotives... and we will use those in our computer center in Salt Lake City to recreate the events preceding the crash," said Bromley. "So we will be able to duplicate what the engineers did prior to the crash."

Identification made on remains

WASHINGTON (AP) — The remains of an American soldier who disappeared more than 37 years ago during the Korean War have been identified and will be buried this month in West Virginia, the Pentagon announced Monday.

The remains, discovered last May by Korean workers, were identified by the Army's Central Identification Laboratory in Honolulu as those of Cpl. Jack L. Walker, who was 18 years old when he disappeared during heavy fighting on July 31, 1950, near Chinju, South Korea.

Walker, of Swiss, W. Va., was reported as missing in action on July 31, 1950, and carried in that status until a presumptive finding of death was issued on Dec. 31, 1953, the Pentagon said.

Last May 21, Korean workers who were moving graves in the Gimn-Dong Community Cemetery discovered the remains along with dog tags bearing Walker's name.

Dole kicks off bid for presidency

RUSSELL, Kan. (AP) — Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole formally opened his presidential bid on Monday, pledging that if elected he will sit down with congressional leaders "as long as it takes" to hammer out a balanced budget plan.

In his announcement speech, Dole took subtle swipes at chief rival Vice President George Bush, extolling the Reagan administration's record but adding, "It's not something to run on. It's something to build on."

Against the nostalgic backdrop of his hometown of 6,600 in western Kansas, Dole promised a policy of common sense "molded in America's smalltown heartland and tempered during a career of public service."

Dole, the sixth and last major Republican to announce his candidacy, called for tough-minded economic policies, saying the federal deficit "is the single greatest threat to a prosperous and dynamic America."

He said, "I will sit down with congressional leaders during my first weeks in office and we'll stay there as long as it takes, and will not stop until we come up with a renewed commitment to a multi-year plan — a new compact — that ends with a balanced budget in the near future."

Dole insisted that, if elected, "we will tackle the runaway federal budget head-on — without raising tax rates."

"With the single exception of programs to assist vulnerable Americans, no area of federal spending will be off limits," he said.

Dole, the GOP Senate leader for the past three years, hammered at the theme that he's been on the front lines during President Reagan's presidency. And he said "I offer a record, not a resume," a clear jab at front-runner Bush's lengthy list of past positions.

He also used his speech for hard-line anti-communist rhetoric. Dole's announcement rounds out the presidential field of six Democrats and six Republicans.

Amy Carter joins protest

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Amy Carter, daughter of former President Jimmy Carter, returned Monday to the state where she was arrested a year ago to join fellow former defendants in another CIA protest.

It was Miss Carter's first appearance at a demonstration since the Nov. 24 protest at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst that led to her arrest and trial, according to protesters. She and veteran activist Abbie Hoffman were among 15 defendants acquitted in April of trespassing and disorderly conduct charges.

What's what

CANARY SEASON

Q: How come people don't buy canaries anymore?

A: Can only guess it's because a lot of sellers gave up on them. The canary market drops off between July and October. That's when the birds molt, and big changes can send them into shock.

Can you explain why major league baseball uniform shirts wear out so much more quickly than the pants? They do.

Computer stores, once swarming with flip sales folk, have been closing. Still making it is a different sort - run-by-one-of-those-anxious-souls who go into the field, analyze, take orders. They keep stock low, buying item by item. Though they give away more expertise than they sell, they sell enough. What they sell mostly is confidence. Like the old-time doctors who made "house calls. Know-how isn't enough. Survivors of the high tech fallout have to sell that curious relic of yesteryear - integrity.

REAL ROCKY

"blue" meaning off-color.

FISH FEELING

Fish auctioneers in Japan wear long open back stencils. Buyers reach into the stencils and bid on the signals with finger pressures. No quaint little provincial game, this. It's the way it's done in the whole multi-zillion yen fish industry.

That wrinkled wrapping around your brain is called your cerebral cortex. If it were ironed flat, it would be as big as a newspaper page.

The scale formations on birds' feet are as distinctive as human fingerprints.

Q: The great heavyweight Rocky Marciano was never beaten, right?

A: Never as a pro. As an amateur, once. Coley Wallace beat him.

Q: Why don't beer advertisers mention that beer tastes better if you take it out of the refrigerator 20 minutes before you drink it?

A: They don't make their money from the people willing to wait.

Q: Where'd we get the exclamation "Wow!"

A: Some now unknown vaudeville performer coined it. You can say the same for such words as "flop" and "integrity."

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today would be a fine time to tie up the loose ends of all those family and property matters which you've been tripping over. You'll have poor judgment tonight, so don't argue.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't invite any guests into your home tonight or small disagreements will become big arguments and huge fights.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): A person who is usually pleasant will be moody today. Drive carefully, especially tonight, and avoid the highway as much as possible.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): If you make any important agreements today, be sure to get all the details on paper. Take it easy and rest up tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Much can be accomplished today, if you don't play your hand too soon. Keep a straight and calm face and you can bluff out a fortune.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 23): Be ready to exercise some exemplary self-control. A favor from your boss will be granted willingly. Avoid an argumentative person you know.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Be wide awake to changes in your daily activities. Don't kick yourself over something which you can do nothing about tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Forget the social scene tonight. Relax at home with your mate and enjoy some rare conversation. Ignore a peaky salesman.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You would be wise to avoid civic affairs tonight, but today can be a banner day in business if you apply yourself seriously.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): If you organize your work load early today, you'll have a smooth afternoon with no disturbing surprises. You'll go home very happy tonight.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Don't argue with an associate over an account today. Instead, go over it together and find out what the trouble is and how to solve it.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY

...he or she will be very family-oriented and will do well where property or financial matters are concerned, so be sure the education will accentuate these gifts. Teach him or her while young to be objective and not to be so sensitive to criticism or insults.

Soul singer claims he was mistreated following accident

AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — Soul singer James Brown says he was mistreated by Aiken County sheriff's deputies when he was arrested over the weekend on charges of resisting arrest and leaving the scene of an accident.

Brown, 54, a resident of Beech Island, was arrested Saturday after his van struck a vehicle in a parking lot, officers said. He was freed Sunday on $10,118 bond.

Capt. James Whitehurst said Deputy Norwood Bodie stopped Brown's van after the incident and tried to arrest him. "There was a fight that ensued between James Brown and the officer, and several citizens stepped in to assist the officer," he said.

Brown denied involvement in the accident and said he fought with Bodie when the deputy refused to return his driver's license.

He also claimed he was bound hand and foot with wire. "It's very inhumane what they did to me," he said Sunday.

Whitehurst denied Brown's allegation. "We don't tie people up with wire," he said. "At most, Mr. Brown was handcuffed."

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — A 16-year-old high school student who gained widespread attention when she refused to dissect a frog is telling her story in a 30-second national television commercial for a computer company.

"I didn't want to hurt a living thing," Jennifer Graham explains in the ad for Apple computers that also features a computer-animated frog. "I said I would be happy to do it on an Apple computer. That way,

"I can hear and the frog lives." "But that got me into a lot of trouble, and I got a lower grade," she says. "So this year, I'm using my Apple II to study something entirely new... constitutional law."

A suit pending in federal court in Los Angeles claims the Victor Valley Union High School District acted unconstitutionally in denying Miss Graham an alternative to dissection. It seeks to force school officials to restore her grade from a B to an A.

Apple officials said they decided to use Miss Graham in the ad after reviewing 800 letters supporting her stand from teachers across the country.

"As musicians we know we cannot alter boundaries, but we are capable of making people smile at each other," he said.

Beach Boys member weds Martin's daughter

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Carl Wilson of the Beach Boys and Gina

Martin, daughter of entertainer Dean Martin, have gotten married 12 years after they were introduced.

The 31-year-old bride was given away by her father during a 30-minute service Sunday at the First Presbyterian Church.

Wilson, 40, called himself "the luckiest man in the world."

Other members of the Beach Boys attended the ceremony and a reception that followed at Bally's Hotel, the Strip resort where Dean Martin performs.

Pressure on Soviets will bring more to West

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — It took 17 years for Vladimir Slepak to win permission to leave the Soviet Union with his wife, and now he says people in the West should continue pressuring the Soviet Union to let more Jews emigrate.

"We are free now, not because we did something, but because we were supported by Jews in the United States, by Jews in Israel, by the American administration, by our Israeli government," he said in a speech to a Jewish group Sunday.

Pressure on the Soviet government to release more refuseniks is crucial now, Slepak said, because its new leaders "need to achieve their goals and they need support from the West. To get all this, they must give some concessions to the West and one of the concessions is freedom of choice."

The couple arrived in the United States on Friday. Slepak was in Philadelphia to accept the Federation of Jewish Agencies Humanitarian Award, an honor that has been given only eight times in the past 20 years.

Florida congressman Mack admits pot use

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — U.S. Rep. Connie Mack has reversed past denials and joined the group of politicians who admit they once smoked marijuana, according to a report published today.

"It was all wrong and I should not have done it," Mack, a Republican who plans to challenge Sen. Lawton Chiles in 1988, told the Fort Myers News-Press Sunday. "But I have not done it (smoked marijuana) in years."

In 1982, during his first campaign, Mack denied smoking marijuana, but Sunday he said he smoked pot "more than once, but not often—when he was in his 30s. He would not say whether he had smoked it in private or at parties but said he never purchased pot nor sold it. He also said he has never tried any other illegal drugs.

During Mack's 1982 race, attorney Paul Nuckolls and then-State Attorney Jim Gardner accused Mack of smoking marijuana. Mack denied the accusations and went on to win the election by a margin of nearly 2-1.

On Sunday, Mack said he has regretted his denials for the last six years and was ready to clear the record.

"I'm a Catholic, and we believe that confession soothes the soul. I made a mistake... it was wrong to deny it then," he said. "I should have just said I experimented with ten years ago," Mack said, adding that if all candidates who had tried marijuana were discounted, there would be few politicians left—between the ages of 30 and 50 in office.

Mack, 48, said he is among millions of people who came of age during the 1960s, when drug experimentation was relatively common.

"We can't disqualify everyone in the country who made a mistake and I was wrong, and lived with that. I thought now is the time to set the record straight and move on."

Mack, who worked for two years developing a drug abuse program before being elected, said he would never condone use of the drug.

Council to study specific seat election plan

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Informal discussions during a special Twin Falls City Council meeting Monday resulted in a plan to study the advantages and disadvantages of electing future city officials for a specific seat rather than at large.

The meeting was called to canvass the results of last week's city council election won by incumbents Doug Vollmer and Gale Kleinkopf and newcomers Art Frantz and Tom Condie.

City Councilman James Vickers suggested the city consider changing election procedures in Twin Falls to allow candidates to file and run for a specific seat. He said some other Idaho cities, including Pocatello, are doing this now. Presently the city council candidates run at large and the top vote getters win the offices.

Mayor Vollmer said this would be a more acceptable procedure than running from a specific district.

"I would be opposed to setting up districts but I would not oppose the election for a given seat on the council," Vollmer said. "Otherwise, we could end up with districts where there were no candidates. It's hard enough to get good candidates to run from the city as a whole."

Councilman Richard Carr also expressed interest in electing by seats, saying it would create more interest in the elections and issues and give candidates a chance to oppose an individual incumbent council member.

Unsuccessful council candidate Donald McMurrian had campaigned for changing to a district election system. In such an election, candidates run from the district in which they reside, which Vollmer said might mean some districts could not field a candidate.

Most cities where election is by districts or seats do not have city managers, he added.

City Manager Tom Courtney said he could and would do two things to review such a change for Twin Falls: He will find out what would be required to change the procedure and will contact officials in cities that are now electing by seats and see if it is satisfactory in those areas.

The council adopted a resolution accepting the official election results of last Tuesday. Frantz was present at the special meeting. Vollmer said Frantz and Condie will be invited to all city meetings, including executive sessions, from now until they take office in January.

In the 30-minute meeting, council members discussed preparation of a pit-bull ordinance to eliminate the attack dogs from the city. They also discussed the skateboard facility and traffic planning for the new city swimming pool.

City Attorney Shane Bengochea said he believed such a pit bull ordinance can be adopted and enforced on grounds that the animals are dangerous and a hazard to safety. He said there was one incident in Twin Falls when the city forced an owner to move his dog out of the city.

"We did not have anyone injured, but the dog did attack other animals in the neighborhood," Bengochea said. "There were also reports of some women and children being chased by the dog but not injured."

He said as far as he knows, pit bull ordinances passed by other cities have always been upheld by the courts.

Courtney said the draft for a traffic pattern near the proposed new swimming pool is now in final stages and will soon be ready for city and school district review.

Councilwoman Mary McCluskey said something is needed, probably at least a sign, at the skateboard ramp at the College of Idaho to keep bicycles off of the facility. She said it has been damaged by bicycles or other use and may become dangerous to skateboarders. Bengochea said it is not city property, but added the city could probably post a properly worded sign to prohibit use by equipment other than skateboards.

The council went into executive session following the regular meeting for a discussion on legal matters.

Placement battle closes

Settlement nears for local stations

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A settlement appears near between K49AZ-TV and King Videocable Co. over placement of K49AZ on the local cable dial, although officials are keeping a tight lid on the terms of the settlement.

"There's no settlement, yet, but it's the final stages," said King Video manager Chris Talkington Monday. "Until all parties sign, there's nothing I can say."

Talkington also said the city was discussing the issue Monday, and "they're the last party to sign the agreement."

"I'm hopeful we'll have an agreement, if the city feels comfortable with it," he said.

But late Monday afternoon, there appeared some confusion over the status of the settlement.

The Twin Falls City Council discussed the terms of the agreement Monday in an executive work session, but took no action.

City attorney Shane Bengochea said council members appeared satisfied with the proposed terms, but no formal agreement was presented to the council to sign.

K49AZ manager Kris Harvey also refused to comment Monday, saying the Idaho Attorney General's office requested silence until the agreement is signed, sealed and delivered.

If a settlement is reached, it would be a last minute reprieve for the low transmission-power television station.

K49AZ has been fighting King Video since July, trying to get switched from Channel 19 to a lower channel on the cable system. Harvey said the move would mean more viewers and more advertising revenue, since not all television sets are equipped to receive channels above 13.

As the fight dragged on, K49's chances of survival dimmed. Last month, Harvey said the station would stay on the air through November, but after that, "I just don't know."

Harvey said the city council in July that her station had amassed losses of $150,000 after a year in the business and that its survival depended on being switched to a lower channel on King Video's system.

Like professional wrestling, the fight has been thrown out of and into several rings. It moved from the city council, which issued the franchise for King Videocable, to the Idaho attorney general's office on to the Federal Trade Commission.

The FTC was called in to look into alleged restraint of trade violations.

King Videocable, a Seattle-based company, also owns KTVB of Boise and K3BAS, a low-power NBC affiliate for Twin Falls, which Harvey charged were getting preferential treatment over local stations.

Who has rights to Twin Falls

BSU, ISU differ on course offerings

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Rep. Ron Black, calling Idaho State University business courses offered in Twin Falls "Mickey Mouse, and duplicative," said Monday that local interest justifies more offerings.

The Twin Falls Republican cited a March survey's findings that 33 area people were interested in bachelor's degrees in business and 39 were interested in undergraduate computer science degrees. In addition, 26 people were interested in master's degrees in business.

"It's just the tip of the iceberg — someone at ISU hasn't done their homework," said Black, who is investigating continuing education statewide as head of a House subcommittee on higher education.

But ISU Business Dean Michael Gallagher countered that of two fall courses offered in Twin Falls, a junior-level computer course called "management information systems" is accredited by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business.

That status qualifies it as a prerequisite for ISU's master's program in business — part of a required "common body of knowledge" to enter the graduate program which other schools' courses lack. And it prompts Gallagher to reply, "We don't offer any Mickey Mouse courses anywhere."

Gallagher admitted that the second semester senior-level "business communications" duplicated a course offered simultaneously by Lewis and Clark State College, driving down ISU's registration to only nine students.

But he added that officials from both schools met more than a month ago to avoid duplicating courses again this spring.

In calling for more course offerings, Black was citing a Universal-Frozen Foods survey which polled 139 people at seven businesses and the College of Southern Idaho. Beyond the apparent interest, the survey said it represented "only a portion of the potential population" because 16 businesses did not reply.

But Gallagher said ISU's own studies indicate a lack of students available to offer the school's five different business majors in Twin Falls. Only 12 people registered for "management information systems," required for the undergraduate degree and as a step toward a graduate degree, this fall.

"So we have no alternative but to ask people to take these courses," Gallagher said.

He said that a general business degree may be offered to consolidate the interest in five major areas.

Further, Gallagher said there was insufficient interest in a graduate degree program currently because students must have already completed their four-year degrees, including coursework from AACSB's common body of knowledge.

This is Black's latest volley in a campaign to bring more courses — particularly business courses and a degree program — to the Magic Valley.

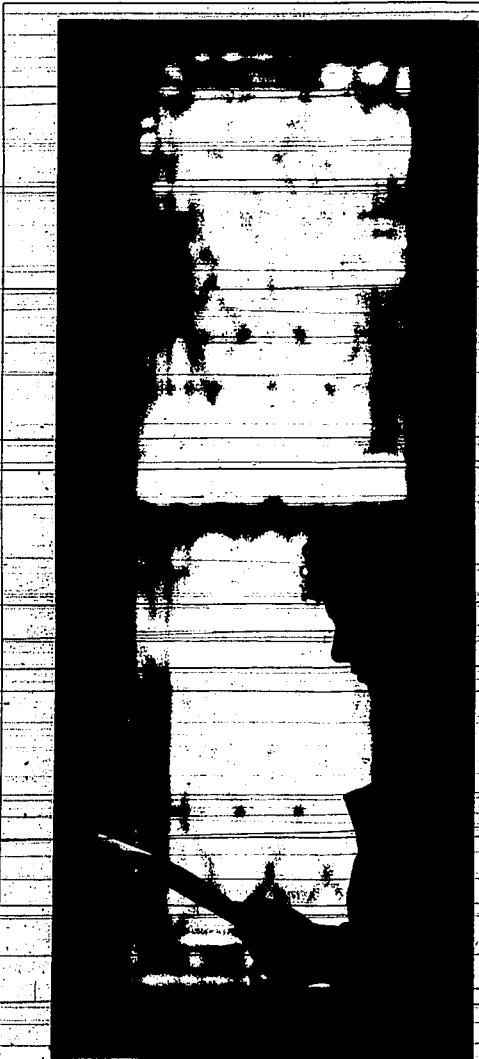

The state Board of Education is expected to decide next June whether to allow ISU to offer an undergraduate business-degree program in Twin Falls.

Meanwhile, ISU is responsible for providing upper-division courses to Magic Valley. If other state schools want to offer courses here, ISU must first decline to offer the course itself.

ISU's right of first denial now results, according to Black, and Boise State University Director of Continuing Education Bill Jensen in shutting out BSU despite being about the same distance from Twin Falls as ISU.

After BSU steps to the plate with course offerings for Twin Falls, ISU, as the home team, gets to bat second and match whatever the commission report on Project Impact, a substance abuse program.

Despite drought, potato crop excellent

The Associated Press

BOISE — Idaho potato growers, surviving the worst drought in a decade, brought in their third largest crop ever this fall only to see market prices slipping well below last year's average, the Agriculture Department reports.

The fall harvest statewide totaled 9.97 billion pounds, the Agricultural Statistics Service said Monday, as the average yield was spurred by judicious use of limited irrigation water and relatively favorable weather at key times of the season to 29,600 pounds an acre, just 100 pounds short of the record statewide yield.

The 1987 harvest was nearly 100 million pounds larger than last year's production and prices slipped significantly below last year's $4.30 a hundredweight.

The quality, so far that we've seen, looks good, Agriculture Director Dick Rush said, but producers are now caught in a classic bind.

TWIN FALLS — Topping the agenda for the Twin Falls School Board tonight is consideration of the district's audit for the 1986-87 school year.

Also scheduled is a canvass of votes for the district's plant facilities report scheduled today and a report on Project Impact, a substance abuse program.

The district budgeted more than $16.7 million during the school year ending June 30. Last year's audit from Evans, Condie and Holmstead issued TFSB a clean fiscal bill of health in all but three areas.

Fixed asset records and accountability were inadequate, there was not an accounting policy manual and student body funds were decentralized, thus avoiding the internal control of the district's fiscal offices, the audit report stated.

The plant facilities report runs from noon until 8 p.m. today. The 10-year levy begins taxing about $329,000 annually to pay for maintenance of the district's $43 million in grounds, buildings and equipment.

Voters must be registered and polling places include the district's five elementary schools excluding Bickel.

Jones decries water rights legislation

The Associated Press

BOISE — As the U.S. House of Representatives prepared for a final vote Monday on legislation endorsing Idaho's Snake River water rights settlement, Attorney General Jim Jones called supporting documentation dangerous to the state and suggested that if it cannot be deleted the bill should be killed.

"It is something Idahoans cannot live with and should not live with," Jones said a few hours before the House passed the legislation by a 320-0 vote. "If the report language can be changed or the report deleted, we might be better off to live without the legislation."

At issue is the bill, that had been backed by the state congressional delegation, to require the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to approve of the 1984 settlement that ended the long-running battle between the state and Idaho Power Co. for control of the Snake River.

"It is not clearly the kind of bill we wanted to see," Jones conceded, although negotiations resulted in a version he felt the state could live with.

But just last Friday, Jones said, he was informed that the supporting document for the bill attempted to regain unprecedented federal control of Idaho waters that was effectively negotiated away during drafting of the legislation.

While that supporting document has no legal force, it will be critical during anticipated court cases in determining congressional intent behind the measure's provisions.

"There are a number of major ambiguities in the bill," Jones said. "It was agreed certain matters would remain neutral so they would be subject to court interpretation."

He claimed the language in the supporting document was drafted by "people who have designs on Idaho water" in an "underhanded effort to renege on the negotiated agreement."

Jones said Republican Congressman Larry Craig has promised to insert a statement into the record of today's floor debate citing Idaho's concerns about the offensive language, and he said Republican Sen. James McClure also indicated he would try to take some action in the Senate to clarify the matter.

But the attorney general held out little hope that the problem could be resolved acceptably to the state, and he suggested that if it cannot, the bill should be scrapped and federal approval of the settlement returned to the administrative arena.

The bill is similar to one tacked on to a measure setting energy standards for appliances last fall that was vetoed by President Reagan because of his objections to the standards. Reagan has said he would sign the water rights provision if it were sent to him separately.

The federal approval is the last hurdle for the settlement, that guarantees Idaho River adequate stream flow for its hydrogenerating output on the Snake and still gives the state the opportunity for at least some additional development on the Snake River Plain.

The absence of federal approval has halted the state from issuing an permanent new water rights in the basin although temporary ones with no future guarantees have been authorized.

The adjudication of water rights throughout the basin, a key element of the settlement, began two months ago and is expected to take a decade, and cost over $20 million.

2 women file suit over alleged job harassment

CHALLIS (AP) — Two women are seeking $3.5 million in a 7th District Court lawsuit against a Challis man and Vangas Inc., alleging sexual harassment on the job.

The complaint was filed by Riki N. Nagle of Arco and Terry Carmichael of Blackfoot, against the Whippany, N.J.-based gas distributor and Vangas employee Byron Cook.

Ms. Nagle contends in this suit that she was forced to leave her job in July because of the harassment. Ms. Carmichael is still employed by the company.

The complaint does not say where or when the alleged incidents occurred or where the women were employed.

It alleges that Cook "made the respective work places of the plaintiffs one which was pervaded by sexual slur, sexual insult, sexual innuendo and harassment and subjected both plaintiffs to sexual comments and offensive sexual touching and innuendo on numerous occasions."

It says the company is liable because it knew or should have known of Cook's conduct.

The suit claims Ms. Nagle was forced to resign because "no reasonable person under those circumstances would have been able to or required to tolerate the unacceptable conduct of the defendant Cook and the working conditions, including her loss of advancement, that were imposed upon her."

The complaint seeks $200,000 for Ms. Nagle's loss of income and job-related benefits, plus $175 million in punitive damages, including $500,000 in punitive damages.

FBI agents testify in Berg murder trial

DENVER (AP) — An Atlanta FBI agent testified Monday that Bruce Pierce told him the "mass media" was communicating Jewish lies nearly a year after radio talk show host Alan Berg was shot to death in Denver.

Agent John Iacovelli said Pierce made the remarks following his arrest on March 22, 1986, near Rossville, Ga.

Pierce, 33, is one of four defendants on trial in U.S. District Court for alleged civil rights violations in Berg's shooting death on June 18, 1984. Iacovelli was among witnesses from southern states, including four FBI agents, who testified Monday about arresting Pierce.

The other defendants are Jean Craig, 54, David Lans, 48, and Richard Scutari, 40, all members of The Order who are serving federal sentences for racketeering stemming from a 1986 Seattle trial.

Berg, who was Jewish, was an outspoken, controversial radio talk show host for several years in metropolitan Denver. He often used his program to attack white supremacists.

Iacovelli said he was taking Pierce into custody when Pierce mentioned he was a member of the Aryan race and said Aryans were "God's chosen people." Pierce also said Jewish people claimed to be God's chosen people and that he was dedicating his life to changing that, Iacovelli testified.

"He told me he believed the Jews were in control of the U.S. government," Iacovelli said. "He told me the Jews control the mass media of the United States and that the mass media was communicating Jewish lies."

FBI agents testified that when they arrested Pierce, they found clippings from "Who's Who in America" with the biographical background of right-wing watchdog Morris Dees and television producer Norman Lear.

Earlier testimony indicated members of The Order believed Jews should be annihilated, and that Berg, Dees, a civil rights attorney, and Lear should be assassination targets.

Agents also testified that they found a Wyoming driver's license and an identification card bearing Pierce's photograph and a fictitious name.

Earlier Monday, a photo shop owner told the jury that Craig once picked up photos of Berg and said, "We're going to get them all, and he's going to be the first one."

George Burnett, operator of the Rainbow Photography Shop in Laramie, Wyo., said when Craig picked up developed film, "he started saying stuff about Jews, she started making an inflammatory speech about Jews, and she mentioned this fellow's name (Berg)."

Craig also made the remark about "going to get them all" with Berg the first target, he said.

Polygamists generally peaceful, writer says

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Violence that claimed the life of Colorado polygamist leader Daniel Ben Jordan does not reflect the generally peaceful lifestyles of those practicing plural marriage, says an author who grew up in a polygamist home.

Dorothy Alfred Solomon, who wrote "In My Father's House," said she believes the violence is confined to a single polygamist sect, and it is a misperception that plural marriage and violence are inseparable.

"I am anxious to set the record straight. There is not a war going on among polygamist groups as far as my family is concerned," Solomon said. "I feel threatened talking about (the violence), because I don't want to perpetuate it in any way. Criticizing it perpetuates the violence. I don't feel there is widespread conflict among polygamist leaders."

Soloman spoke during the Algie Ballif Forum here Saturday.

She does not practice polygamy but grew up in a home with her father, Dr. Rulon Alfred, his seven wives and 48 children. Her father was shot and killed on orders from rival polygamist leader Ervil LeBaron in 1977. LeBaron later died in prison while serving a life sentence.

Soloman said the recent outbreak of violence seems to be confined to members of the LeBaron group. Jordan, LeBaron's son-in-law, was gunned down near Mantt, Utah, on Oct. 18 while on a hunting trip with 30 family members, including eight of his wives.

Soloman, who is married and has four children, is one of only a handful of Alfred's children who are not living in polygamist marriages.

Several thefts occur in Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS — Burglary activities during the weekend proved costly for several property owners in Twin Falls.

Among thefts reported to police in Twin Falls as of Monday were a vehicle burglary in which damage was estimated at $600 and a house burglary where the owner's loss exceeded $2,000.

Police said Nolan T. Bakeswell of 1316 11th Ave. E., reported someone broke into his home late Friday or early Saturday and took $1,950 worth of guns and other valuables and caused another $350 loss in damage to the building.

A vehicle owned by D.C.S. Motors and parked at 1613 Richmond Dr. was burglarized at about the same time. Damage to the vehicle from the break-in represented $600 in damages while loss of sound equipment from the inside of the car was estimated at $150.

good job of producing our price drop and actually income to farmers often is lower.

When the 1987-1988 marketing year began in August, the marketing was averaging $4.05 a hundredweight above the state. But it slipped to $3.50 in September as farmers actually began to harvest what experts believed was going to be a good crop, and based on mid-October estimates the price slipped another 20 cents last month to $3.70 as the harvest was ending.

The average price for the record 1986 crop was only $3.30 a hundredweight.

The erosion of the market underscored Rusa's comments that this year's harvest would produce lower receipts for growers, whose 1988 crop was valued at $388 million.

Growers in the 10 southwest counties of the state had a record yield of 40,000 pounds an acre, scipping the old mark of 37,500 pounds in 1985, for total production of 720 million pounds. But while substantially larger than last year's output, production was the second lowest since 1964 as farmers planted only 18,000 acres to potatoes, less than 76 percent of their traditional commitment.

The rest of the state made up for the difference, however, turning out its largest crop ever at 9.25 billion pounds with a record yield of 29,000 pounds an acre from 319,000 acres.

petition produces.

For example, Jensen said BSU considered offering a finance course next spring, but then ISU decided to offer the course itself.

"In the end, ISU decided they could do it," Jensen said. "Consequently, we backed off and said fine, if you can do it, fine."

But Jensen said BSU remains interested in providing courses in Twin Falls, especially as technology increasingly allows courses to be offered by two-way television hook-ups instead of placing an instructor in a city.

Jensen expects the new state Telecommunications Council for the state Board of Education to sort out which courses are offered where as that technology increases statewide.

But full implementation of such a plan is considered several years away, if completed at all. Meanwhile, officials are confronted with turf battles such as this one for Twin Falls.

"Then we run into these problems of jurisdiction by the institutions," Jensen said.

Truck damaged in accident

BURLEY — Three persons were treated for minor injuries following a truck accident that resulted in $35,000 damage early Monday near Burley.

The accident was reported to Idaho State Police at 5:54 a.m. when a westbound truck missed the curve at the junction of Interstate Highways 84 and 86, southeast of Burley.

ISP Cpl. Fred Rice reported the truck, traveling from I-86, crashed onto the off-ramp of I-84 and extrica-tion equipment was necessary to get the driver and two passengers out of the vehicle.

The truck, a 1985 Freightliner, was driven by John David Goss, 31, of Oklahoma City, Okla. Passengers in the truck were identified as Charles Swinney, 25, and Cynthia Furgus, 22, both of Oklahoma.

Rice reported the truck was loaded with grain and carrying titanium dioxide, a non-hazardous material. The report did not show if the cargo was spilled or if the total damage involved the vehicle.

Candidate drops recount bid

POCATELLO (AP) — Unsuccessful Pocatello City Council candidate EVAN FRASURE has abandoned plans for a recount of last Tuesday's election results.

"I really do not believe a recount would change the results of the election and I will not ask for one," said Frasure, who lost by 56 votes to incumbent Councilman Robert Chambers.

Frasure, who last week indicated he might ask Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones to initiate procedures for a recount, said his decision came after a meeting with his family and campaign staff.

"Rather than have everything come across as sour grapes, I felt it best to decline seeking a recount," he said.

Frasure said he felt Chambers would make a good member of the council, adding he would give his total support to Chambers and to Mayor Dick Finlayson.

State looks to help retirees

BOISE (AP) — Idaho lawmakers are looking for a way to make medical insurance premiums more affordable for retired state employees.

Those premiums shot up more than 50 percent at the beginning of 1987, and hundreds of retirees abandoned the state system in favor of lower-cost private insurance programs.

But a consultant to Idaho's group insurance system told an interim legislative study committee on Monday that one proposed change aimed at reducing the expense to retirees would cost the state an additional $289,000 a year.

More than 3,000 state retirees and dependents now are enrolled in the medical insurance program, which allows employees to use up to 50 percent of their unused sick leave to pay premiums after retirement.

Citizens want jobs, not beds

BLACKFOOT (AP) — Residents have put real economic expansion of their community at the top of their priority list as Blackfoot civic leaders put together a long-range development plan, a community survey has discovered.

"An interesting thing about the results of the survey was that most people wanted job development instead of residential development," said Lynda Ferrin, former Chamber of Commerce president who now heads the chamber's economic development committee. "That settles the question of Blackfoot becoming a bedroom community."

The plan, which should be finalized later this month, will attempt to capitalize on Blackfoot's assets like its central location between Pocatello, Idaho Falls and the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, its strong agriculture and potato processing base and the medical facilities of State Hospital South and Bligham Memorial Hospital.

Wreckage found in Zion's

ST. GEORGE, Utah (AP) — Ground crews Monday found the wreckage of a single-engine private plane near southern Utah's Zion National Park boundary and all three aboard were dead, authorities said.

"The aircraft was found in Kolob Canyon near the boundary on the northeastern side," said Civil Air Patrol Lt. Robert Smith. "All three aboard were dead."

Smith had no additional information on how the plane landed or whether it burst. Air crews Monday had narrowed their search to a section of southern Utah's Zion National Park for the plane, missing since Friday night.

Smith said personnel from the Iron, Kane and Washington county sheriff's departments were joined by three CAP aircraft in combing an area about 40 miles north of St. George.

The wreckage was found by having a CAP plane and Army helicopter follow the flight path the plane was following the night it dropped from radar screens.

The plane had a transponder that left a set of computer footprints with air traffic controllers in Los Angeles, Smith said. He said search aircraft followed the last known flight path of the missing plane and directed ground crews.

The aircraft is thought to have lost altitude Friday night during rain and snow storms.

"Another plane had landed and reported that there was icing conditions all the way up to 13,000 feet," Smith said. "Formation of this ice makes it very difficult to maintain altitude. Eventually they were to descend like this one did."

Scholarship plan may halt brain drain

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus, hoping to bolster the corps of Idahoans who will fashion the state's economic expansion, has announced a new college scholarship program to begin stanching the flight of the state's best students to colleges elsewhere.

The Idaho Governor's Scholarship Program, providing five $3,000-a-year four-year scholarships to Idaho schools annually, should be a step toward keeping the state's "very best, most capable high school graduates" from leaving Idaho for a higher education elsewhere, Andrus said Monday.

"In the past, the governor said, "they have been purchased by scholarships to go out of state."

"We hope that this will stem the flow," he said. "These are people who will contribute a great deal to the future of Idaho. We want to keep them here."

Statistics released last winter showed Idaho students were fleeing by proceeds from the Governor's Cup annual golf tournament, which produced $34,000 this year, and by contributions from private industry and the state's participating educational institutions. US West and Mountain Bell Telephone Co. are among the major private sponsors. Under the program, the scholarships will be awarded to the top students based on scholastic achievement, leadership and community involvement. The students must have a 3.6 grade point average or higher or be in the top 10 percent of their class. The scholarships will be good for any public or private college in the state.

The first scholarships will be awarded next spring.

Andrus conceded that the $3,000 a year would not cover the complete cost of a college education, but he provided the kind of economic incentive needed to keep Idaho students in Idaho.

"It just can't help but help us," the governor said.

ships will be awarded to the top students based on scholastic achievement, leadership and community involvement. The students must have a 3.6 grade point average or higher or be in the top 10 percent of their class. The scholarships will be good for any public or private college in the state.

The first scholarships will be awarded next spring.

Phone firm seeks service order delay

BOISE (AP) — Fearing possible violation of a federal court ruling, Mountain Bell has asked Idaho utility regulators to stay an order that the company provide time-of-day service through directory assistance operators beginning Friday.

But spokesman Steve Guerber said Monday that Mountain Bell has asked U.S. District Judge Harold Green — who presided over the breakup of the nationwide Bell telephone system — for a waiver from a portion of his 1984 decision so it can comply with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission order.

"Mountain Bell would like the Idaho commission to delay implementation of the time-of-day order until it gets a reply from Green, Guerber said.

"We just don't feel comfortable with something that very well could be a violation of federal law until someone who oversees those laws says they will provide a waiver for us," he said. "If we were to comply with the order and it was found to be in violation, we would be held accountable to the federal court and that could mean a fine of $2,000 a day."

The PUC ordered recently that Mountain Bell provide time-of-day information service through directory assistance operators throughout its Idaho service area.

But Guerber said Green's Bell breakup ruling prohibits former Bell operating companies from providing information services such as time-of-day in any area where another telephone company operates competitively.

Stockholders hurt, borrowers helped

No remedies flow from market panic

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The worldwide stock market panic of three weeks ago has hurt stockholders and helped borrowers but has yet to stir any bold remedies for the underlying economic problems.

On the good side, people from Frankfurt, West Germany, to Frankfurt, Ky., can borrow money more cheaply now. And a big slide in the dollar should make American goods more competitive in world markets.

But the panic of Oct. 19 has not, as many investors had hoped, shocked world lenders into decisive action on the imbalances that led to the crash in the first place.

Although the West Germans rolled back certain interest rates this past week, they continue to resist American demands to stimulate their economy.

Meanwhile, Congress and the White House have moved slowly in their efforts to cut the federal budget deficit in spite of intense pressure from Wall Street and leaders of major trading partners, including Margaret Thatcher, the British prime minister.

"The financial side of the economy has come through (since Oct. 19) in remarkably good shape, but nothing has been done to remove the underlying problems," George Eads, chief economist for General Motors Corp., said last week.

"The mess in Washington looks if anything messier," and internationally there is no evidence that Americans are part of an international policy cooperation," agreed Alan Stoga, senior associate of Kissinger Associates, a New York consulting firm.

Economic fears the world leadership void, besides leaving serious problems to fester, could create another crisis of confidence.

"Everybody is jittery out there, ready to jump, and the Dow will drop another 300 points if we're not careful," said Timothy Luehrman, a Harvard Business School professor.

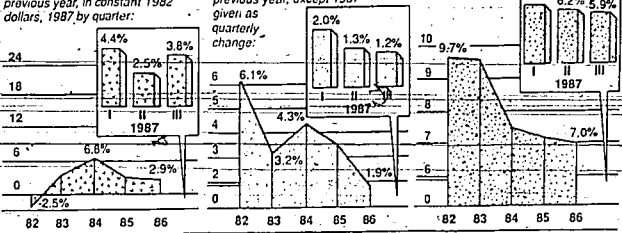

The stock panic of Black Monday, Oct. 19, slashed 508 points from the Dow Jones industrial average and wiped out more than $500 billion in stock value in the United States alone. While its long-term impact is still unknown, here are some of the policy areas affected:

New fears deal stocks a setback

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stock prices sustained a broad setback Monday amid renewed concern about the dollar and wariness over the full-scale retooling of computer program trading techniques to the market.

Activity was quiet by recent standards, however.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 3.85 to 1,900.20 for a loss of 3 percent. It was the average's ninth largest point drop on record.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 3 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 407 up, 1,284 down and 307 unchanged.

The Big Board volume totaled 160.6 billion shares, against 228.29 million in the previous session.

The dollar was mostly lower in foreign exchange markets around the world Monday.

Analysts said some traders were also unhappy over an apparent lack of progress toward agreement on measures to shrink the federal budget deficit.

The wild card in Monday's session was program trading, after the NYSE lifted the last of the strictures adopted last month to diminish that type of activity.

But attempting to limit the depth of both program trades and eager buyers, Monday's volume on the Big Board was the lightest since a 441.87-million share day on Oct. 12, when many investors were taking a Columbus Day holiday.

A week later, when the Dow Jones industrial average plunged 508 points, NYSE volume reached 604.3 million shares.

Among actively traded blue chips, General Electric fell 1 1/2 to 44 1/2; Eastman Kodak 1 1/2 to 49 1/2; American Express 1 to 24 1/2.

Amgen Pharmaceuticals and Tele-Communications Inc. were up 1/2 to 28 1/2 and 1 1/2 to 118 1/4.

A few issues bucked the downturn on takeover news.

CNW Corp., parent of the Chicago & North Western Transportation Co., jumped 5 to 25 as an investment firm proposed a buyout offer of $30 a share in cash and securities.

Bell & Howell climbed 5 1/2 to 61. Late last week the company said Maxwell Communications of Britain planned to seek clearance to increase its stake in Bell & Howell to more than 50 percent.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $62.9 billion, or 2.58 percent in value.

The Big Board's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped 3.62 to 136.35.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell 8.56 to 277.09, and S&P's 600-stock composite index was down 7.24 to 243.17.

The NASDAQ composite index for 100 over-the-counter market stocks fell 5.96 to 320.43. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 249.79, down 5.44.

Lower dollar can benefit Americans but it's dangerous, too

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As national policy makers shifted gears from defending the dollar to avoid inflation to defending economic growth to avoid a recession, the U.S. currency packed up and headed south.

Last week, the dollar fell to new post World War II lows against the Japanese yen and the West German mark, clearly bad news for American tourists abroad and for trading partners with export-driven economies.

A falling dollar erodes Americans' purchasing powers and can lead to a lower standard of living. But it can also help ease the U.S. trade deficit. And, if accompanied by lower interest rates, it can stimulate business growth.

While U.S. allies sought furiously for ways to restore exchange-rate stability, U.S. manufacturers were taking heart. The dollar's fall was showing clear signs of once again making their products more competitive on world markets.

Is the falling dollar good or bad for Americans? The answer, economists suggest, is — well, it all depends.

Here are some of the major issues surrounding the dollar's recent gyrations, largely brought on by the stock-market collapse.

Q. Who determines the exchange rate value of the dollar?

A. Until 1971, its value was rigidly set, first to a certain weight of gold and later to exchange rates of other major nations' currencies. But since then, the price has floated, determined by market forces. Each day, hundreds of billions of dollars are bought and sold by traders in foreign exchange markets.

These traders are usually commercial banks or other large institutional buyers, but can also be central banks like the Federal Reserve or the Bank of Japan.

Q. How did the stock market collapse in the United States and in other industrial nations affect the dollar?

A. For the first few days, there was little noticeable effect. However, as markets continued to decline, investor confidence in the U.S. economy and the dollar — and in dollar-denominated securities — was shaken. That triggered massive sales of dollars on foreign exchange markets.

Much of those sales stemmed from fears by traders that the dollar would fall even further — especially with the Fed increasing the supply of dollars daily by pumping new cash, or "liquidity," into the nation's financial system to avoid a banking crisis.

Q. What makes a dollar "strong" or "weak"?

A. The dollar is subject to the same laws of supply and demand as farm products, stocks and other goods and commodities which are traded openly. Heavy buying of dollars on exchange markets drives up its price, making it strong compared to other currencies. A "sell-off" of dollars sends the price down, making it "weak."

When foreign investors put their money in dollar-denominated securities, like U.S. Treasury bonds, that also helps to keep the dollar "strong." When they pull out of these investments, that helps to weaken it.

Q. So what's better, a strong dollar or a weak dollar?

A. It depends. A strong dollar makes Americans' cash go further overseas and cheapens the price of imports — generally good for U.S. consumers and for foreign manufacturers.

Q. Why did the United States let the dollar fall in the aftermath of the stock market crash?

A. It had little choice, because the collapse in financial markets raised the spectre of a new recession. The traditional way of propping up the dollar — raising interest rates — could hasten such a recession by clamping down on economic growth. The administration and the Federal Reserve changed course, deciding to lower — not raise — interest rates to protect economic growth.

Inflation fears associated with a weaker dollar, once in the forefront, receded to a lower priority with these new prospects of a recession.

Q. Until recently, why was the administration trying to prop up the dollar when a lower dollar could help the trade deficit?

A. The Reagan administration initially raised interest rates to help balance trade accounts. But in February it agreed that further falls in the dollar could lead to renewed inflation. It joined its trading partners in the "Louvre accord" to try to hold the dollar steady around "current levels."

Q. If the dollar's value is solely set by driven economics like those of Japan and West Germany — can it spawn inflation, first through higher import prices and then through spiraling prices for all goods?

A. A strong dollar can restore competitiveness to American products by making foreign goods comparatively more expensive, narrowing the trade deficit. But too weak a dollar — besides bringing havoc to export-market forces, what steps can governments take to stabilize it?

A. Through a variety of ways — exchange-market intervention and by coordinating interest-rate changes.

Q. How does intervention work?

A. Intervention is the direct buying or selling of currencies by central banks on foreign exchange markets. If the purchases are large enough, that can influence prices directly. When the Bank of Japan and the West German Bundesbank buy dollars directly, that reduces the supply of dollars available and sends up the price.

Massive intervention by the Bank of Japan over the last few days has kept the dollar from falling further than it did.

Q. What about interest rates?

A. Changes in interest rates affect exchange rates more subtly. But generally, high interest rates in the United States, compared to low rates abroad, will help facilitate the flow of investors' money into dollar-denominated investments. That makes the dollar more attractive and raises its value.

Lower interest rates at home and higher interest rates abroad will send investors fleeing to securities based in other currencies. That drives the dollar value lower.

Investors will flock to where they can get the highest return.

You have time to put the '86 tax reform law to work for you

The brutal truth is that while a major part of your tax bill is already fixed, you still have the opportunity to determine what happens to the rest of it.

The time to work for you is NOW. This is the period to choose and implement tax tactics that will mean more dollars in your pockets. By using the right techniques, you can add a brand new meaning to that old phrase, "the buck stops here."

Have those bucks stop in your pockets. Rather than the pockets of the tax collectors.

Be on guard. Many tax reform changes will be reflected for the first time in the 1987 tax return that you file in 1988.

So help you get the most out of available tax breaks (and avoid many of the crackdowns), I have put together a series of six columns with the assistance of tax attorney Eli J. Warach, chief consulting editor at Prentice Hall Professional Newsletters.

You will find strategies to pull deductions forward into 1987 (where they are worth

Sylvia Porter
First in a series

more) and to push income into 1988 (where the tax will be lower). You will also discover other tax angles that will translate into more dollars for you.

To begin with, there's a new, tougher tax rule for deducting what are known as miscellaneous itemized expenses. As of 1987, they are deductible only to the extent that their total exceeds 2 percent of your adjusted gross income.

In the past, this catch-all deduction category included such items as union and professional dues, tax return preparation fees, expenses of producing income (such as subscription to investment newsletters, investment consulting and safe deposit box rentals) and employee business expenses — other than travel.

This year, the category has been expanded to include all unreimbursed business expenses incurred by employees — notably travel. (You cannot write off your business use of your personal car unless your total miscellaneous expenses exceed the 2 percent mark.)

Use a timing strategy. If your miscellaneous expenses are already near or above 2 percent of your adjusted gross income, be on the lookout to accelerate other such expenses from early 1988 into this year. That way, you'll be sure to get a deduction for them — regardless of whether you pass the 2 percent mark in 1988.

Q. Is there any way to avoid the 2 percent floor?

A. Yes. If you are reimbursed by your employer for your travel and entertainment expenses and you report the reimbursement on your tax return, your expenses are fully deductible up to the amount of the reimbursement. In brief, the 2 percent floor does not apply.

With the help of your employer, you can set up things so that you can take advantage of the reimbursement exception and put more dollars in your pocket.

Example: Sam Green works at XYZ Corp. and has an adjusted gross income of $120,000 in 1987. The only miscellaneous itemized expenses he incurs are for business travel. Before 1987, he paid these expenses out of his salary from XYZ. This year $4,000 is eligible for the miscellaneous itemized deduction. Assume he again pays these expenses out of his salary.

Result: Because of the 2 percent floor, Green can deduct only $1,600 of this travel expense ($4,000 less 2 percent of $120,000, or $2,400). Even though $4,000 of Green's salary goes to pay his travel expenses, only $1,600 is sheltered by his miscellaneous deduction.

Idea in action: Say that because the end of the year, Green takes a $4,000 cut in salary and, in return, XYZ agrees to reimburse him for his travel expenses.

Result: Green no longer has to pay taxes on $4,000 of his salary, since he is not getting it any more. And, as for the $4,000 reimbursement, it is completely tax-free. The 2 percent floor does not apply.

Important: Just having your employer re-label a portion of your salary as a travel and entertainment reimbursement isn't enough to nail down the tax savings. Be sure: Give your employer an "adequate accounting" of your travel and entertainment expenses. In short, give your employer the diary or other records you have been using to back up your own deduction.

New York Jets put AFC's East into gridlock

By BARRY WILNER
The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Billy Griggs and JoJo Townsell are the ultimate role players in a sport of specialization.

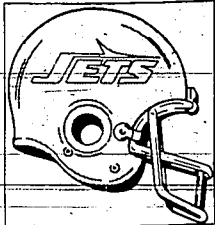

On Monday night, Griggs and Townsell got their chance in the spotlight. They put on award-winning performance.

Townsell, who usually is limited to kick returns, and Griggs, a third-string tight end and special teams regular, scored touchdowns as the New York Jets beat the Seattle Seahawks 30-14 and created an unprecedented five-way tie in the AFC East.

The Jets, 4-4, are tied with Buffalo, Miami, New England and Indianapolis, the only time this late in the season such a deadlock has existed. Seattle dropped to 5-3, two games behind San Diego in the AFC West.

Townsell broke a scoreless tie in the second period when he returned a Ruben Rodriguez punt 91 yards. Griggs caught a 4-yard TD pass from Ken O'Brien for his first regular season reception in 37 games.

"It doesn't feel any different in the spotlight," said Townsell, in his third season with the Jets. "I just try to play winning football and get in the position to help win ballgames." "Sure, I'd like to do more, anybody does, that's the competitive nature. I know my role and I'm satisfied with it. I only ask to get my hands on the ball and get the opportunity to contribute to winning." Townsell got his hands on the ball at his own 9 and wasn't touched on the punt return. He made a nifty move to speed past Rodriguez, the last man who could stop him. "I saw the hole right away," he said. "It was great blocking. I was on the punter right away and was able to take him." Griggs had taken in only one pass in his three seasons with the team — a 6-yarder for a touchdown in a playoff game with Kansas City. It

Idaho moves up to 6th in current I-AA ratings

BOISE (AP) — Can a team in third place in its own conference really expect to be selected among the 16 to compete in the NCAA Division I-AA football playoffs? — It can if it also is ranked 16th in the nation, leads the Big Sky Conference in both total offense and total defense, has had some success against bigger schools and is powered by one of Division I-AA's top quarterbacks.

Northern Arizona is 4-2 in the Big Sky and 7-2 overall. Unfortunately for the Lumberjacks, one of their best seasons in years coincides with banner campaigns by league rivals Idaho and Weber State.

Idaho moved from 10th to sixth in this week's I-AA rankings, is 8-2 overall and leads the conference at 6-1. If the Vandals beat Boise State in their regular-season finale on Nov. 21, they will win the Big Sky outright.

Weber State, tied for 12th in Division I-AA, is 5-1 in the league and 7-2 for the season with two games left. The Vandals can win the Big Sky title with two victories, but only if Idaho loses. The Vandals represent one of Weber State's two losses.

Northern Arizona also has two games remaining, one on the road at Boise State and another in Flagstaff against 1986 Big Sky champion Nevada-Reno, which this year has stumbled to a 4-5 record.

If the Aztecs can win both they will finish with an identical season record to Idaho and Weber State, but with losses to both those teams. Big Sky Commissioner Ron Stephenson said the Lumberjacks' record, along with last week's victory over Division I-A Tulsa, should give them a good shot at the playoffs. "If they end up at 9-2 with their win over Tulsa and their only two losses in the conference, I would be surprised and disappointed if they were not selected, and argumentative too," Stephenson said. The Big Sky has had two teams in the Division I-AA playoff four times, but never three teams. Northern Arizona could change that — it is first in the Big Sky and third in I-AA in total offense, averaging more than 453 yards per game. It leads the league in total defense, allowing opponents fewer than 303 yards per game. The Lumberjacks also are the Big Sky's best defense. • See POLL on Page C4

NL president Giamatti against instant replays

CALDWELL, T.P. — Baseball should be judged by machines, then perhaps the machines should play the game, says National League President A. Bartlett Giamatti.

But baseball is a human contest, and that's why he opposes any thought of "instant replays" in the game.

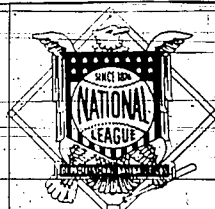

"I don't like it. I don't like the idea that a camera can do things that a person in the right position couldn't do," Giamatti said Saturday.

Giamatti, former president of Yale, was in Idaho Saturday to speak at the inauguration of College of Idaho President Robert Hendrick, a personal friend.

Since December, he's been president of the National League. He said he prefers to make the changes in the game as possible — and that includes instant replay.

There were several controversial calls in the World Series, but Giamatti said that does not indicate a need for instant replays even though he has endorsed the National Football League.

"Using instant replays would only shift the burden to someone who was not on the field and would slow the game down," he said. "If you extended the principle, if you wanted mechanical perfection, why not have the machines play. Baseball is a human contest," he said.

Giamatti said the National League first must decide whether it wants to expand, before it decides where. But first, the league's leaders have another couple of matters to resolve. The Major League television contract expires in December of 1989, and the player-agreement expires at the same time. "These are two major contract issues. It would be irresponsible to focus on expansion until those issues are resolved," he said. Because of scheduling problems, it appears it would be better to add four teams rather than two, he said. If the American League also expands, that would require six new teams, six new stadiums and a huge amount of new talent.

Ricks to take part in inaugural ISU JC bowl

POCATELLO (AP) — Ricks College and Walla Walla (Wash.) Community College have been invited to compete in the inaugural Centennial Bowl football game Nov. 21 at the Idaho State University Mini-dome.

Ray Ritari, executive director of the Centennial Bowl committee, said both junior colleges were contacted Sunday about participating in the game and he expects them to accept the offer by the middle of

College football

Ricks College, 6-4, finished fifth in the 10-team Western States Football League. The Vikings will be making their second consecutive appearance in a postseason bowl game and their fourth since 1981.

Walla Walla, 6-2 with one game remaining on its schedule, already has clinched the championship of the Northwest Athletic Association of Community Colleges. It has never appeared in a bowl game.

"We've got a great matchup," said Ritari, who also is manager of the 12,000-seat Mini-dome. "I'm very, very pleased with it."

Both Ricks and Walla Walla were ranked among the top 10 junior college teams in the country last year by the J.C. "Grid-Wire" newsletter.

The two schools have never played each other.

Under National Junior College Athletic Association guidelines, Sunday was the first day bowl games could officially extend invitations to football teams.

Snow College of Ephraim, Utah and Grand Rapids (Mich.) College were the other two teams the Centennial Bowl committee considered inviting to Pocatello, Ritari said.

Ricks College, staggered by injuries to key players, won two road games and then upset nationally-ranked Mesa College last Saturday to earn a spot in the bowl game lineup.

The Warriors of Walla Walla have won 30 of 36 games under coach John Volek.

Ricks College went 10-0-1 last season and finished second in the final NJCAA poll. Walla Walla, which was not a member of the NJCAA last year, was 9-0 for the 1986 season.

"People (who follow junior college football) know of Walla Walla and they know of Ricks," Vikings coach Ron Haun said. "It was overdue that Walla Walla and Ricks meet."

Ritari said he hopes to attract a crowd of 5,000 to the game.

The bowl game has already been recognized by the Idaho Centennial Commission as an official event of Idaho's 1990 statehood centennial.

NCAA, Big Ten absolve Iowa back Harmon of wrongdoing

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — The NCAA and the Big Ten Conference Monday cleared Iowa running back Kevin Harmon of any wrongdoing in allegations of payments made to Harmon by sports agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom, Iowa Athletic Director C. W. "Bump" Elliott said.

"I am very pleased to report today that Wayne Duke of the Big Ten and Steve Horton of the NCAA have conferred on this matter," Elliott said in a statement. "They have confirmed to me that they see no violation of Big Ten or NCAA rules or regulations by Kevin Harmon, and see no problem that would jeopardize his eligibility for athletics at the University of Iowa."

The university launched an investigation last week after a report by federal arbitrator John C. Culver said Harmon may have received $350 and airline tickets from World Sports and Entertainment, Walters' and Bloom's sports-management firm.

Culver ruled in the report that Kevin's brother, former Iowa running back Ronnie Harmon, does not have to repay Walters almost $50,000 that was given to the Buffalo Bills running back during his junior season at Iowa.

"While suggesting that on a few occasions he displayed poor judgment, the NCAA and the Big Ten concluded that Kevin Harmon did not commit any violations," Elliott said.

The committee's report, released Monday by the university, said no Iowa athletic department officials were aware of the events described in Culver's report and no NCAA rule was violated by Kevin Harmon.

Berenguer, Tanana, 16 others seek free agency

NEW YORK (AP) — Eighteen players, including relief pitcher Juan Berenguer of the World Series champion Minnesota Twins, Detroit's Frank Tanana and Houston's Jose Cruz, filed for free agency Monday as the midnight deadline approached.

The additions brought the total of free agents to 76 of a possible 102 players. Last year, 79 players declared free agency but only Andre Dawson and Lance Parrish changed teams.

Others declaring for free agency Monday were pitchers Tommy John of the New York Yankees, Joaquin Andujar of Oakland, Ed Lynch and Dickie Noles and infielder Manny Trillo of the Chicago Cubs; pitcher Mike LaCoss, outfielder Eddie Miller and utilityman Joel Youngblood of San Francisco; outfielder Ken Griffey and infielder Graig Nettles of Atlanta; utilityman Jamie Quirk of Kansas City; pitcher Mark Clear of Milwaukee; outfielder Ken Landreaux of Los Angeles; pitcher Moose Haas of Oakland, and pitcher Greg Minton of California.

Two of the key potential free agents — third baseman Mike Schmidt of the Philadelphia Phillies and shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. of the Baltimore Orioles — were negotiating with their clubs Monday.

Baseball

Cincinnati catcher Bo Diaz and infielder Ed Romero of Boston, each of whom were eligible for free agency, resigned with their teams Monday.

First baseman Dan Driessen was released by St. Louis.

Berenguer had an 8-1 record with a 3.94 earned run average this year, when he earned $152,000.

Tanana was 15-10 with a 3.91 ERA. He made $662,500 last season.

Cruz, who holds many of Houston's career offensive records, batted .241 with 11 homers and 38 RBI in limited duty. He platooned for most of the season and the Astros said they did not plan to resign him. Cruz made $773,333 last season.

John was 13-6 with a 4.03 ERA with the Yankees. He was paid $350,000 after joining the team during the season.

LaCoss went 13-10 with a 3.68 ERA for the Giants. He earned $300,000.

Andujar was 3-5 with a 6.08 ERA during an injury-plagued season for the Athletics. He made $1,353,333 in 1987.

Lynch, 2-9 with a 5.38 ERA, reportedly earned $550,000 in 1987.

Noles, who was acquired by Detroit late in the season from the Cubs, was dealt back to Chicago after the season. He had a 4-2 record and 3.50 ERA for the Cubs and a 0-0 record and 4.50 ERA for the Tigers, earning a reported $160,000.

Griffey batted .286 with 14 homers, 64 RBI and was the highest-paid member of Monday's group with a salary of $1,075,000.

Nettles, 43, made the Braves in spring training as a non-roster player at a reported salary of $219,500. He hit .209 with five homers and 33 RBI.

Cardinals fire veteran Driessen, late-season hitting star

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Veteran first baseman Dan Driessen, a late-season acquisition who helped the St. Louis Cardinals win the National League pennant, was released Monday.

Driessen, 36, was purchased by the Cardinals from their Louisville Triple A team Aug. 31. He stepped into the lineup when first baseman Jack Clark injured his ankle Sept. 9 and made 15 starts at the position for the Cardinals.

In 24 regular-season games, Driessen hit .233 with one home run and 11 runs batted in. His RBI double drove in the game-winning run in the Cardinals' victory over the Montreal Expos Oct. 1 that clinched the NL East division.

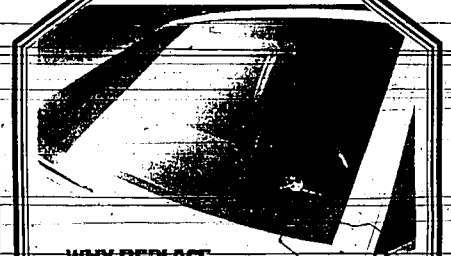

He appeared in nine postseason games and hit .240 with two RBI.

The Cardinals also said that first baseman-outfielder Jim Lindeman was recovering after successful back surgery Nov. 4 to remove a ruptured disc. Cardinals team physician Stan London said Lindeman should ready to return to full activity in 6-8 weeks, well before the start of training camp next February.

Lindeman was on the disabled list twice in his rookie season with recurring back spasms. He played in 75 games and hit .208 with eight home runs and 28 RBI.

In the postseason play, he hit .321 in 28 at-bats with one home run and five RBI.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Insurance: an ingenious modern game of chance in which the player is permitted to enjoy the comfortable conviction that he is beating the man who keeps the table. - Ambrose Bierce.

A good insurance policy can be worth its weight in gold, it can also be worthless if one doesn't read the fine print carefully. Dummy's club ace won, a trump was led to South's ace and a queen backed toward the queen. West hoped up with his king to lead another club, and dummy was forced to ruff, thus establishing a second trump winner for West. "I bought some insurance against a singleton trump king with East," alibied South. It was a true statement as far as it went. However, it was like buying fire insurance for a home about to be blown away by the wind.

Today's prime danger for declarer was "a singleton trump king with East but a loss of trump control. At trick two, South should lead a heart in hand and lead a low trump toward dummy's queen. West hops up and leads another club but the slam is safe. Declarer ruffs with dummy's nine, cashes the trump queen and returns to his hand with a heart in order to draw the last trump.

Esprit: A society, culture, a lifestyle

Doug and Susie Tompkins have capitalized on style

By MARTHA SHERILL DAILEY
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Doug and Susie Tompkins can't be found in Who's Who in America. They don't fly first-class. And when Forbes magazine dropped the couple from its list of the "Four Hundred Richest People in America" (last year's estimated worth, $350 million), Doug says he was relieved.

"I hate the whole idea of that damn thing," he says. "It's a drag."

The Tompkinses are a part of a new generation of entrepreneurs who have synergized their counterculture ideals with their corporate identities. They say their product — subtly sloppy clothes for the MTV generation — is not simply fashion; it's a way of life.

They not only have esprit, they are Esprit. "Esprit is so much more than anyone thinks it is," says Susie, 45, who started the business 20 years ago out of her cramped San Francisco kitchen. "It's a lifestyle, a culture, a society."

Whatever is unique to Esprit is the effort to put a comprehensive show together," says Doug, 44, CEO and administrator of the architectural department. "It's your clothing, your image and the aura that you spin around the clothing, the form of advertising and promotions, the catalogs, the use of photography, store architecture, the interiors."

It's High Concept. Just as Ralph Lauren sells WASP nostalgia or Banana Republic markets the allure of exotic travel, Esprit trades on Northern California hip.

It successfully sells an image the way its competition — the Gap, the Limited, Benetton — sells a product. Fresh, casual and just a little funky, the Esprit clothes often make less of an impression than the Esprit ethos.

"It's like, it's no big deal," says Susie. "They're just clothes." But her designs have accomplished the impossible: They straddle the line between what a teenager wants to wear and what a parent is willing to buy.

The Esprit corp. has invaded Europe, the Far East and the Middle East as well as America, with worldwide sales estimated at $800 million a year. Sixty-five percent of sales are international — the clothes are sold in 25 countries. Twelve new stores will open in Italy this year. An Esprit Superstore opens on Sloane Street in London in November.

The Tompkinses were back in Washington in September for the opening of the new East Coast flagship store, 11,000 square feet of white walls, soaring ceilings and streamlined polished steel. Airy, modern, a little hallow, it is a timeless backdrop for the changing moods of adolescence.

But they were together only in esprit, more like business partners than partners in marriage, Doug and Susie rarely see each other.

They share a house on the curvy part of Lombard Street on San Francisco's Russian Hill, but Doug spends half the year outside Milan, and Susie spends many months at their place in Hong Kong.

"There's a conflict between us, but there's a dynamic that can create a lot of positive energy," she explains.

Susie has never dressed for success. Her sunny blond hair is tousled, and her Esprit suit needs ironing. She wears no makeup and only two pieces of jewelry — a plain gold wedding band and a man's stainless steel Rolex.

As design director, she's here to check on the clothing displays and the supply of short skirts. Sitting in the new Esprit store, she is constantly turning over a thought and checking her feelings.

When she bought herself a "little Mercedes" recently, she says, Doug thought it was "vulgar." But "it doesn't mean that I've copped out," she says. "I don't think it's vulgar."

And Doug, still stewing about his childhood spent with rich kids, doesn't believe in inheritance. Their daughters Quincey, 21, and Summer, 20, will have to survive on Susie's half of Esprit. "You sit around waiting for the money to come in, and it retards your personal growth," he says.

"I don't agree with him," says Susie, "but that's the way he is."

Three days after his wife leaves town, Doug arrives. Cruising around the new store, he's got on his corporate uniform — pressed cotton shirt, belted jeans and Timberland shoes.

Speaking softly, just louder than the hip-hop piped in over his head, he doesn't sound like an aggressive, ambitious, teenwear tycoon. He seems more like a man on vacation.

"I see all sorts of slapdash stuff up and down the street," he says of Wisconsin Avenue in Georgetown as he settles back in a black, high-tech office chair.

Considering himself an architect without a license, he's here attending to what he loves most — the Esprit environment.

"First of all, the tapes around here now are not my favorites," he says, referring to the hip-hop. He prefers more profound shopping music — instrumentals like "Celestial Sodapop" off Ray Lynch's "Deep Breakfast" album. It's wistful, space-age jazz, the kind of sound track you'd imagine for a California condor on its final flight.

Doug, like Susie, is a kid-size, inquisitive and esthetically preoccupied. They have designed everything for Esprit, from dressing rooms reminiscent of black port-a-johns and postmodern sales receipts to management style and advertising.

Real people have been used in the Esprit ads since the beginning. At first they were employees, photographed in do-your-own-thing combinations of Esprit clothes.

Now the customers have taken over. Found at rock concerts, on campuses and more often in the Esprit stores, they appear in close-ups, always accompanied by a witty identification penned by Doug.

Cara Schanche, Berkeley, California, Age 23, English Literature Student, Part-time Waitress, Anti-Racism Activist, Beginning Windsurfer, Friend of the Dalai Lama.

Schanche is a very young blonde. Her teeth are a blinding white. Her eyes are as blue as denim. She stares straight at you, as if in a languid trance.

"Who says the Esprit customer is not sexy?" asks Doug, who refused to run the ads in Cosmopolitan magazine — even after Editor-in-Chief Helen Gurley Brown made a personal appearance in his office, pleading for pages.

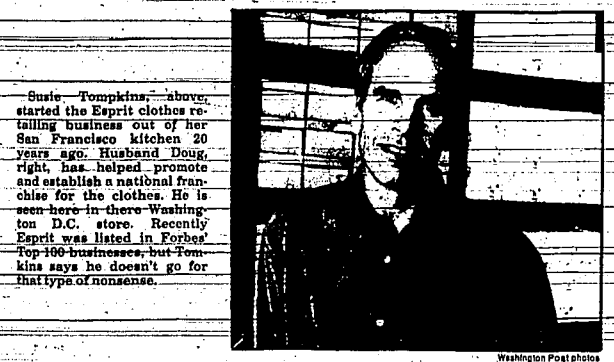

"I find them (Cosmo cover girls) sex-object types ... flaunting their cleavages, and they've got these phony-looking hardos, and they've got a lot of makeup. That's not the kind of image that I'd like to portray, so I don't think that so many of our customers are reading that magazine."

Susie says: "It's the wrong kind of sexy. We would really like to inspire customers to be sexy in a different way — being secure and clear about who they are."

And no Seventh Avenue mannequin has ever been wholesome enough for Esprit. "Anybody can hire Brooke Shields," Doug shrugs.

Doug and Susie Tompkins met 25 years ago on a road outside Lake Tahoe. Susie, then 20, was running keno bets at a casino for the summer. Doug, 19, and trying to make the U.S. Olympic ski team, was hitching a ride. She picked him up in her '67 VW

• See ESPRIT on Page D3

Susie Tompkins, above, started the Esprit clothes retailing business out of her San Francisco kitchen 20 years ago. Husband Doug, right, has helped promote and establish a national franchise for the clothes. He is seen here in their Washington, D.C., store. Recently Esprit was listed in Forbes' top-100-businesses, but Tompkins says he doesn't go for that type of nonsense.

Fashion options await large women

By KILEY ARMSTRONG
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A splash of panache awaits women who discover the world of Je Suis, a boutique-quality line that turns large sizes into a definite fashion plus.

Throughout the retail world, big women will find more choices next spring as several of the famous designers gear up to suit their needs.

The clever-yet-classic creations of Je Suis are presented by Laura Douglas, who formed the company after years of struggling to find elegant clothing in size 24.

"Now she delights in accentuating the attributes of others."

For spring, Je Suis offers a delecting, hourglass-shaped "croquet skirt" in grey, white and black horizontal stripes that's cut a tad longer in the back so it hangs straight over a full derrier. The matching black-accented wrap jacket features a blouse-back.

There's also a beige print silk dress — that looks like matching sleeves puffed from the mid-arm down, and ruffled elastic smocking just below the waist.

The back of Je Suis dresses are artfully draped from the top, then nipped in toward the hem. That way, they don't ride up and the fullness "looks like fabric instead of fat."

A lightly quilted, navy-and-white print long-sleeve dress with matching pirate vest and jacket features a curly, low-cut "Queen Anne" neckline to show off the pretty part below the shoulders and neck.

Jackets are sized so they "don't pull across the back and make little creases that destroy the look." Most garments span several sizes to accommodate weight fluctuations, and wool in linings can't be stuck, scratch or retain heat.

Big women with good-looking legs can gather compliments in Je Suis' short, square, muffed skirt awirled with pink roses. The matching top has a square ruffled collar.

Such savvy doesn't come cheap. Je Suis, available through specialty stores, starts around $100 for the less-expensive "bridge" line, and up to $1,300 for a designer suit.

A number of established designers also are getting into plus sizes for spring.

Mary McFadden's new Signature collection has a snappy, black suit with a gently elasticated waist and just the right touch of white at the pockets, cuffs and buttonholes. Or choose McFadden's lean-looking two-piece dress, white-on-white or black-on-black, with softly padded shoulders and skirts just below the knee.

For evening, the "Oleg Cassini Woman" might covet a shimmering, white evening gown, resplendent with white beads, a dropped waist and flouncy skirt, or a stunning, silver-jacket over a flowing long-sleeved dress. Silver also is favored by Givency on Plus, in an evening-style pants set with matching coat.

For casual fun, the new Dakin Plus line offers aerobics and street wear in sizes 14 to 24; icebergs, midriff-bearing "crop tops" with matching trunks and stirrup pants plus an assortment of jumpsuits, rompers, tights, shorts and cover-ups.

Many garments are jazzed up with nautical stripes, cartoon graphics and eye-catching geometric designs in cheery pink-and-blue or bold black-and-white. But beware of the gaudy "brush-stroke-florals" in clashing colors.

Big sizes can mean big profit news

By KILEY ARMSTRONG
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Big sizes are big news for spring.

Based by industry estimates that half of all American women wear size 14 or larger, designers are waking up to the potential goldmine of that untapped market, called "plus size."

"We expect it (the market) to grow 60 percent by the year 2000, based on just one factor — baby boomers aging," said Anne Allison, director of Allison Associates, a marketing consultant for the fashion industry.

Trudy Sullivan, founder of the Boston-based T. Deane retail chain, says that in 1986, plus-size women spent an estimated $10 billion on clothing.

Ms. Allison notes that in the past, large women have been "totally overlooked as a specific segment with special needs."

But now, "There's greater awareness of all types of segments of society. Consumers are, in terms of fashion, getting more demanding."

Ms. Allison said the plus-size trend began after clothing manufacturers noticed the success of specialized-hosiery lines, such as L'Eggs and Hanes' Fitting Pretty.

Next spring, big women can pick from variety of labels: Bill Blass, Harvey Bernard, Pierre Cardin, Oleg Cassini, Dakin, Gianfranco Givency on Plus, Mary McFadden, Albert and Square.

There also are catalogs from Spiegel and J.C. Penney. A "Vogue" magazine supplement called "Fashion Plus" and several special issues a year from "Women's Wear Daily" and "Apparel News."

T. Deane, which sells designer clothing, belts and jewelry for women size 14 to 26, plans to open 100 stores by 1991, primarily along the East and West coasts, according to spokeswoman Betty Higgins.

The stores, targeted at upscale women age 35 and over, will feature Ashanti, Nipon and Evan Picone, as well as T. Deane's own private-label line.

It's amazing that "retailers ignored this market for so long, considering that more than 35 million women wear large sizes," said Ms. Sullivan.

Ex-wife would like to exclude mistress

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I am 57 and have been divorced from "Joe" for five years.

Joe broke up our 31-year marriage by saying he didn't love me anymore, but he did love his secretary, who was 24 at the time. (Joe was 54.) They are living together in a house he bought for her five years ago. They are not married.

The problem now is that our 24-year-old son is getting married in December, and Joe is bringing his mistress to the wedding.

Abby—I just can't—handle—her being there. I have been hurt enough without having this woman flaunted in front of my family and friends.

Is there anything I can do to keep her from coming? Joe and I do not speak to each other, but I called him to ask if he planned to bring her, and he said yes.

Would it help to appeal to her not to come? I want my son's wedding to be a happy occasion for all of us.

— WAITING FOR AN ANSWER
DEAR WAITING: One fact of life that many people have difficulty acknowledging: You can't control the behavior of others — only your own.

Yes, you could appeal to Joe's mistress to stay away, but unless she has the IQ of a houseplant, she already knows that her presence at your son's wedding will make you uncomfortable.

Go to your son's wedding, hold your head high and quit worrying about who else will be there. And please remember, above all, that this day belongs to your son and his bride, so do your part to make the day a happy one.

DEAR ABBY: I repeatedly told my former boss not to touch me, hold my hand, play with my hair or pat my rear. He persisted, and rejecting him cost me my job.

Abby, your statement that some people feel that their space has been violated is true. However, when I told him to stop it, he referred to me as the "Ice Queen."

Because of his abusive ways and unwelcome touches, a federal judge will now have to decide this case.

My former firm calls me ...

DEAR ABBY: I need to know how a person gets crab lice. My wife got them, then said she must have gotten them off a toilet seat at work. Could she have been feeling around?

Please tell me what percent likelihood it is that they came from a toilet seat, or an affair.

These doubts are damaging a very good marriage.

— MUST KNOW

DEAR MUST: I don't know the percentages. However, it is possible to pick up body lice from a toilet seat, so don't let suspicion loose up a good marriage.

Dee Dee and John Reed

The Reeds

TWIN FALLS — Dee Dee Buren became the bride of John Glenn Reed Oct. 17 at Immanuel Lutheran Church in Twin Falls.

The Rev. Dale Heinlein, Eden, officiated. Brenda Ludwig was organist and Todd Schwarz was soloist.

The bride is the daughter of Donald and Mary Buren, Boise, and the bridegroom's parents are Glenn and June Reed, Eden.

Elizabeth Burr was maid of honor with Michelle Boyce, Grianne Mabe and Rene Knutson serving as bridesmaids. Rachael Ducker was flower girl.

Rod Anderson was best man. Groomsmen were Jeff Korn, Bob Schindler and David Ehlers. Mikal Griffiths was ringbearer. Gerald Griffiths and Allen Duren ushered.

Special guests were John Schauerman and Lois and Austin Mathoney, grandparents of the bridegroom.

Following the ceremony a reception was held with Sandy Griffiths and Chris Ashfield assisting. Lori Reed was guest book attendant and Kristi Stephens assisted with gifts.

The couple also was honored at a reception at the American Legion Hall in Eden, with Billie Reed, Bill Reed and Evie Craner assisting.

After a trip to Hawaii the newlyweds reside in Hazelton where the bridegroom farms. The bride is employed at Sage Gymnastics.

Espirit

... and they were married a year later, in 1963, after moving to San Francisco.

They never went to college — prep schools are their only academic claim. Susie, born to an old-line San Francisco family, was sent to boarding school when she was 3½, and a score of schools followed. "I was a handful, I know."

Doug must have been, too. The son of antique dealers in Millbrook, N.Y., he dropped out at 17, he says, when he was kicked out of the Pomfret School in Connecticut.

With only their taste and intuition to guide them, the Tompkins backed into the rag trade. If he had had his way, Doug, who is a world-class expert in rock climbing and white-water kayaking, would still be selling outerwear, as does his closest friend, Yvon Chouinard, the owner of Patagonia. In 1964 Doug started a mountaineering store in North Beach called North Face.

San Franciscans still remember the store for its slick, modern design. Filled with Kelty packs, ice clamps and other climbing gear, it was one of the more beautiful stores in the city at the time.

And on the walls for inspiration — not unlike the large, glossy faces in the Espirit store here — were huge, black-and-white photographs of guys hanging from alpine and pions doing Class VI climbs.

Doug sold North Face, the shop and the label, in 1969 for $50,000. It's now a $40 million business. "No regrets," he says.

Engagements

Melody Capps and Kevin Newbry

Capps-Newbry

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Donald Capps announce the engagement of their daughter, Melody, to Kevin Newbry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Newbry, all Twin Falls.

Capps, a 1982 graduate of Twin Falls High School, is employed at Bill Meyers, Inc.

Newbry, who graduated in 1979 from Antelope Valley High School in Lancaster, Calif., and in 1985 from the University of California at Los Angeles, owns MVAP and does custom farming.

The wedding is scheduled for Nov. 14 at Calvary chapel.

Brian Hunsaker and Cherie Santos

Santos-Hunsaker

FILER — Mr. and Mrs. Larry M. Kilm, Filer, announce the engagement of their daughter, Cherie Lynn Santos, to Brian Ward Hunsaker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred R. Hunsaker, Logan, Utah.

Santos, a 1982 graduate of Filer High School and a 1984 graduate of College of Southern Idaho, attends Utah State University where she is majoring in elementary education.

Hunsaker, who graduated from Logan High School in 1985, served an LDS mission in Atlanta, Ga., and now attends Utah State University where he is a member of the football team and majoring in business/finance.

The wedding is planned for Dec. 16 in the LDS Temple in Logan.

Message to executives

Take time out for leisure

CLEVELAND (AP) — More executives are finding it harder to deal with tension-filled situations caused by on-the-job stress, says a psychiatrist at Case Western Reserve University.

According to Dr. Herbert Meltzer, common symptoms of stress include exploding over minor problems, being irritable with employees and showing a lack of interest in work.

To cope with such problems, Meltzer suggests, executives should establish clearly defined goals, learn to handle setbacks, avoid isolation by sharing decision-making with key employees and taking time out for leisure activities.

British reflagged friendly ships during gulf piracy of 1800's

KUWAIT (AP) — A cargo ship flying the flag of the world's greatest power is attacked by a fleet of small vessels in the Persian Gulf and armed men clamor aboard.

"One screams 'God is great' as he hits crewmen's throats.

The merchant ship was British. The pirates were Moslem corsairs. The year was 1808.

As the Americans justified Iranian attacks on neutral shipping to intervene in the gulf last July, so the British used the pretext of fighting Arab pirates to move into the gulf more than 150 years ago.

Arab scholars hotly dispute the account given by 19th-century British historians of the attack on the trading ship Minerva by Qawasim Arabs in 1808.

They say the British used the "myth" of Arab piracy to justify big-power meddling in the gulf that sounds reminiscent of Iranian denunciations of U.S. intervention in the gulf now.

Britain and its powerful East India Company counted on the gulf for trade routes to India, the jewel in the British crown, giving the waterway a vital importance, much as the non-Communist world now relies on the passage through which about 20 percent of its oil is shipped.

The attack on the Minerva was only one of dozens attributed to Qawasim pirates from Ras al-Khaimah, now an emirate in the southern gulf, and recorded in British annals.

The description given by C.R. Low in his 1877 "History of The Indian Navy" is perhaps the most vivid.

Dozens of pirate dhows, or traditional wooden sailboats, attacked the British ship, sending boarding parties scrambling over its bulwarks. Then:

"Wretched captives were bound and brought forward singly to the gangway, where one of the pirates cut their throats, with the exclamation... 'Allah Akbar,' regarding this terrible deed as a propitiatory sacrifice to the Deity. The captain was said to have been cut up into fragments, which were thrown overboard."

Perhaps the most prominent critic of the British accounts is Sultan Mohammed al-Qasimi, the present ruler of Sharjah, whose doctoral thesis is titled "The Myth of Arab Piracy in the Gulf."

He wrote that in spite of the emotive language "in such British histories, there is little hard information about the attack on the Minerva, and what is available is contradictory.

But the attack on the Minerva captured the British public's imagination, especially when the wife of one of the dead officers, a Mrs. Taylor, was held for ransom.

In his book, "Ras-al-Khaimah: Flame in the Desert," Michael Deakin wrote: "All over Europe, newspapers wrote in tones of indignation, of sergias and slavery, of unmentionable delights and tortures awaiting the tender Mrs. Taylor and her 'rose-colored' flesh."

"She had been paraded through the streets of Ras al-Khaimah, they said, or maybe she had been displayed naked in the slave market."

But Deakin added: "There was not a grain of truth in any of the accusations" and Mrs. Taylor was treated with consideration.

She was later released, by one account after the British paid a ransom of 1,000 Maria Teresa dollars.

By 1819—the British had lost patience, spurred by what Arab historians call exaggerated accounts of piracy.

A naval task force entered the gulf, pounded Ras al-Khaimah with cannon fire for six days; then seized the town and razed much of it to the ground.

Ostensibly to protect shipping lanes from further piracy and suppress the slave trade, the British in 1820 signed a treaty with the southern gulf sheikhdoms which stated:

"In the name of God, the compassionate, the merciful."

"There shall be a cessation of plunder and piracy by land and sea on the part of the Arabs, who are parties to this contract, for ever."

But how could the signatories to the treaty be distinguished from the pirate boats? The British decided to "reflag" the peaceful Arab ships.

"The friendly Arabs shall carry by land and sea a red flag, with or without letters in it, at their option, and this shall be in a border of white," the treaty noted.

It also bound the sheikhdoms to stop trading in slaves and specified what action would be taken in case of renewed piracy:

"Such tribe shall be held to have broken the peace, and the friendly Arabs shall act against them in conjunction with the British, and God willing, the war against them shall not cease until the surrender of those who performed the act."

A large British naval squadron was stationed for some time at Ras al-Khaimah to enforce the treaty provisions.

Nowadays, Iran attacks neutral shipping in the Persian Gulf to retaliate for Iraqi attacks on oil exports, its economic lifeblood.

Kuwait has reflagged 11 of its oil tankers with the Stars and Stripes to entitle them to U.S. Navy protection.

Bipartisan ad draws big response

NEW YORK (AP) — An advertisement calling for a bipartisan plan to reduce the federal budget deficit has drawn such a strong response that another ad is planned for later this week, a group of former Cabinet officers said Monday.

Nearly 200 top business executives, lawyers and former government officials signed the first ad, which filled two pages of Monday's editions of The New York Times.

"We've been receiving a lot of calls from people who wanted to add their names but they didn't do it in time," said Peter G. Faison, secretary of commerce in 1972-73, "I will probably run another ad in a few days."

Seven former U.S. Treasury secretaries and six other former Cabinet members signed the statement, along with such business leaders as Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca and the chairman of Eastman Kodak, Yarox, Mobil and AT&T.

They endorsed multiyear deficit reductions aimed at balancing the budget by 1992, including a cut of $30 billion to $40 billion in the first year; cuts in all spending except programs for the poor; tax increases, if needed, to offset the savings; encourage consumption but do encourage savings and investment; more global economic cooperation to right trade deficits, stimulate Third World growth and share military and economic burdens with American allies.

Defense spending "must be restrained to levels consistent with our essential national security needs," the group said. "The burdens of deficit reduction should be shared fairly among all of us who can afford them."

The ad is the work of the Bipartisan Budget Appeal, which was founded five years ago by Peterson, former Treasury Secretary William Simon and his fellow former Treasury secretaries W. Michael Blumenthal, John B. Connally, C. Douglas Dillon and Henry H. Fowler.

The group has published reports on the budget deficits and has purchased similar ads in the past.

TAX INCREASES ARE ALWAYS BAD FOR TAXPAYERS

Well folks, those smooth politicians are at it again, making it sound like the budget deficit is the taxpayer's fault - and taxpayers should want to start paying more taxes. - The truth is higher taxes are only good for politicians: More tax revenue means more money to spend; (tax & spend, tax & spend, tax & spend, ad infinitum, ad nauseum) more money to buy votes with, more power, more ego inflation ect. Politicians think taxpayers are so dumb! It's like as if Swensen's thought they could convince grocery buyers that higher grocery prices would be good for them. But Swensen's swears customers are not that dumb: The budget deficit is entirely a politician problem - not a tax shortage problem. To make the most of tax reduced grocery budgets shop Swensen's and save this week!

Arab leaders seek to unify against Iran, try to halt war

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Top Arab leaders sought a united front against Iran on Monday and defined common goals of containing the Iran-Iraq war and getting foreign fleets out of the Persian Gulf, Jordan's crown prince reported.

Crown Prince Hassan, younger brother of King Hussein, said a five-hour closed session of the Arab summit also directed attention to the possibility of bringing Egypt back to the Arab fold. Other Arab nations have shunned Egypt since it signed a peace treaty with Israel in 1979.

The 7-year-old war continued. Iraq said its warplanes raided a tanker in Iranian waters after pledging "mass destruction" to its enemy in revenge for a missile attack Sunday on Baghdad, the capital of Iraq. Eleven women and children were reported killed in the missile explosion.

Iran said its jets bombed military targets in northwest Iraq and artillery shelled Iraqi frontline positions.

Syria and Libya support Iran, which is Muslim but Persian, against Iraq, a fellow Arab country. Hassan addressed a news conference in English after Monday's summit session, held without aides at the heavily guarded Plaza Hotel. He leads Jordan's delegation because King Hussein is acting as a host.

He told the journalists the session had "the edge of frankness and candor," because it was private. It also helps dispel misconceptions that arose from the lack of personal contact between some leaders since the last fully attended summit in 1982, he said.

"I would say we've certainly blown away a lot of cobwebs during these sessions," the crown prince declared. "This has not been easy, but at the same time what is reassuring is that the process is ongoing."

He said the identity and unity of the Arab world are at stake, adding "We cannot fail. We do not intend to fail."

Seventeen heads of state are attending the summit of the 21-Arab League member nations, which began Sunday.

Foreign Minister Taher Maari of Jordan, the official conference spokesman, said the sessions will last "until they reach decisions. There's no deadline for the summit."

Arab foreign ministers requested the emergency summit to press for an end-to-the-Iran-Iraq-war, which threatens shipping and the security of Arab nations in the Persian Gulf, but the agenda was left open to other matters.

Hassan would not give details of the discussions, but said there was a "definite shared interest in scaling down the level and intensity not only of the regional conflict ... but also of international involvement in the Gulf situation."

Iran's official news agency quoted President Saddam Hussein as saying he will continue fighting even if the summit does not produce a united Arab front against Iran. Most diplomats believe that will be the case.

Hussein has tried to reconcile Assad with Saddam Hussein of Iraq.

Bomb rips apart commuter stop

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — A bomb exploded on a major road where thousands of commuters waited for buses home Monday, blowing people to bits and setting vehicles ablaze. Police said at least 82 people were killed and 105 injured.

Rescue workers put the death toll at more than 50 and said it may reach 70.

Bodies and body parts lay scattered on the street and sidewalks in the capital's Maradana neighborhood. The air smelled of burning flesh. Ambulances and private cars bore away the dead and wounded.

At least 25 damaged cars and buses littered the area. One bus was completely burned. Broken glass from nearby buildings covered the street.

Whether the bomb was planted inside a car or bus was not known. It went off at about 5:40 p.m. near a police station and a main bus stop slightly over a mile east of downtown Colombo.

Thousands of people had lined the Maradana Road waiting for buses home to the eastern suburbs. There was no immediate claim of responsibility. Police at the scene blamed nationalist Sinhalese opposed to a peace pact arranged by India to end the civil war by rebelling of the Tamil minority, although the Maradana area and eastern suburbs are mainly Sinhalese.

A Parliament debate on implementing the peace agreement was scheduled to begin Tuesday.

Iraq says hits on ship, oilfield part of threatened retaliation

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq said its warplanes hit a ship off Iran and an Iranian oilfield Monday, apparently as part of the "mass destruction" Iraq threatened in retaliation for a missile attack on Baghdad that killed 11 civilians.

The official Iraqi News Agency said the jets raided a "large naval target," which usually means a tanker, and scored an "accurate and effective hit."

Other jets bombed oil installations at Marum oilfield in south Iran and flew 98 missions against enemy positions along the 730-mile front, INA said.

Iran said its planes bombed a military garrison in the Erbil region of Kurdistan in north Iraq while its long-range artillery pounded "economic targets" and Iraqi troop concentrations along the battlefield.

The report by the official Islamic Republic News Agency was monitored in Cyprus.

There was no independent confirmation of the attacks, and neither side commented on the other's claims. The raids came as Arab leaders met for a second day in Amman, the capital of Jordan, where they hoped to pressure Iran into agreeing to a cease-fire in the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

Iran has denounced that intent as "sheer stupidity."

Iran's missile strike on Baghdad Sunday, the summit spokesman said, "the attack killed 11 civilians and wounded 105, including 38 children."

Baghdad's Al Thawra daily, voice of the ruling Baath Socialist Party, said the assault underlined Iran's "blatant defiance" of the Arab summit.

It said Tehran would "pay a heavy price when the hour of retaliation has come" and said Tehran's rulers "are not unaware of Iraq's means of mass destruction."

Iraq says it has new long-range missiles capable of reaching Tehran, 400 miles east of the warfront. Iraq's powerful air force outnumbered Iran's badly depleted air strength by about 87.

INA quoted a military spokesman as saying Monday's raids were in line with Iraq's "legitimate right" to deprive Iran of its oil exports, "which are being utilized for its aggressive purposes."

It also said Iranian guns shelled Sulaymanieh in northeast Iraq and wounded eight civilians, including two children.

Iran said Sunday it fired two missiles into the Iraqi capital in retaliation for recent Iraqi air raids against "non-military targets."

It claimed the missiles hit the state-run television and radio headquarters and the central communication center.

But Iraq's official media said just one missile struck Baghdad, exploding in a densely populated area, demolishing 10 houses and damaging 60.

An Iraqi official said a 6-year-old girl wounded in the missile strike died Monday.

He told reporters and foreign diplomats on a government-organized tour of the wrecked quarter that the child's mother and two other children were killed when their home was flattened.

"The little child and a newly born sister baby were the only survivors of a family whose father is an army officer currently at the front," said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The missile gouged a crater 10 feet deep and 40 feet wide.

One wounded girl, Shura Maki Fakhrudin, 9, told reporters visiting a hospital that she was watching television with her three brothers and sisters when the missile slammed into the house next door.

In Amman, Iraq's president, Saddam Hussein, told other Arab leaders that they must unite to confront Iran.

Central bank chiefs reaffirm commitment to finance system

BASEL, Switzerland (AP) — Central bank chiefs from the leading industrial nations today reaffirmed a commitment to keep the world financial system running smoothly but did not unveil any new policy initiatives.

At the close of two days of talks, the officials issued a joint statement saying they agreed on the approach required to cope with the recent upheaval in the world's financial markets.

But they offered no hints as to whether they reached agreement on specific measures to be taken to restore confidence in the markets.

The central bankers — from the United States, Japan, West Germany and eight other major trading nations — expressed satisfaction with their ability to "maintain the smooth functioning" of the financial system following a worldwide collapse in stock prices last month and the decline of the U.S. dollar.

The joint statement said the officials "stressed the importance" of efforts by governments to adopt budgetary policies aimed at correcting trade imbalances like the huge U.S. trade deficit and the large West German and Japanese trade surpluses.

They also welcomed last week's coordinated interest rate adjustments by the central banks of West Germany, France, the Netherlands and Switzerland, which were aimed at calming volatile currency markets.

Earlier, the U.S. and Japanese central bank chiefs met and expressed common support for efforts to stem the decline of the dollar.

Satoshi Sumita, governor of the Bank of Japan, said the U.S. and Japanese central bank chiefs expressed common support for efforts to stabilize the weakening dollar.

Sumita gave few details of his talks with Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve, the American central bank.

Sumita said he and Greenspan shared a desire to re-establish stability in the foreign exchange markets, where the dollar has been under heavy selling pressure. He did not elaborate.

The dollar opened today in Tokyo at a new record low of 134.75 Japanese yen, down from 135.60 at the close of trading Friday. It recovered somewhat after the Bank of Japan was reported to have purchased dollars in support of the U.S.

Emerging from a morning session with central bankers from the 11 leading industrial nations, Sumita said they had not discussed joint measures aimed at arresting the dollar's slide.

Sumita said that in his meeting with Greenspan, he was not asked to make new reductions in Japanese interest rates. On Sunday he had indicated Tokyo was not prepared to make any such reductions.

Greenspan was not available for comment, and other participants declined to speak with reporters.

S. Korean opposition picks Kim

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea's main opposition party formally nominated Kim Young-sam for president Monday and urged followers of a rival opposition leader to support Kim as a way of ensuring government defeat.

Kim, the 59-year-old president of the Democratic Reunification Party, was the third candidate to officially enter the race. He joined government candidate Roh Tae-woo and former Prime Minister Kim Jong-pil, who formed a splinter opposition group to back his bid.

Kim Dae-jung, Kim Young-sam's main rival in the opposition and a former adviser to the Democratic Reunification Party, also has declared his candidacy and is forming a new party to back it.

Party delegates passed a resolution calling on those who defected with Kim Dae-jung to return to the Democratic Reunification Party.

Foes of the government have urged Kim Dae-jung and Kim Young-sam to decide on a single candidate between them, fearing their two candidacies will split voters and improve victory chances for the governing Democratic Justice Party.

In his acceptance speech to 800 cheering delegates comprising the party's presidential convention, Kim Young-sam stressed the need for a single opposition candidate but offered no new ideas for resolving the opposition split.

He also pledged to end decades of authoritarian rule.

"Korean history now calls for an end to the military dictatorship and for the accomplishment of a peaceful, democratic revolution," he said.

Kim Young-sam promised to become an honest president and head a clean government.

He also announced that Chung Sung-wha, the former army chief of staff and a former army general, would be a party adviser.

Chung was sentenced to seven years in prison by a military court for alleged involvement in the October 1979 assassination of President Park Chung-hee. He was freed on parole after serving eight months.

Chung told party delegates he was eager to help usher in civilian politics in South Korea. He assailed President Chun Doo-hwan and his military supporters as "political soldiers."

South Korea's first direct presidential elections in 18 years are scheduled for mid-December. Chun agreed to them after huge demonstrations in June by protesters demanding widespread democratic reforms. They complained that the electoral college system of choosing a president favored the government.

Chun is to step down after his seven-year term expires Feb. 24. His departure will mark the first peaceful transfer of power in South Korean history.

Later, Kim spoke to supporters outside Seoul and urged the Cabinet of Prime Minister Kim Chung-yul to resign and make way for a neutral interim government to ensure fair elections.

"What is really important for us is fair elections. The easiest and surest way of guaranteeing fair elections is to form a neutral government," he said.

Indian crocodile crawls from sewer

MADRAS, India (AP) — A huge crocodile crawled out of a sewer in a crowded street Monday and was overpowered by authorities stuffed with burlap sacks in his mouth.

People tried to kill the 7-foot-long creature with stones when it emerged.

The beast retreated into the sewer but kept baring its teeth at passers-by, causing panic throughout the street, witnesses said.

Police said officials from Vandalur Zoo arrived and stuffed the crocodile's mouth with burlap sacks. They overpowered the crocodile and took it in a truck to the zoo.

G. Kumar, who was involved in the capture, said the crocodile probably strayed out of the Cooum canal and into the sewer.

Helicopters evacuate Bourguiba, entourage from palace

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Helicopters carried Habib Bourguiba and his entourage away from the presidential palace Monday and Tunisians of all political views rallied to Zine el-Abidine Ben Ali, who ousted the 84-year-old leader.

The "president-for-life," who had governed since independence from France in 1956, suffers from a heart condition, arterioclerosis and progressive senile amnesia. Ben Ali, his prime minister and constitutionally designated successor, deposed him early Saturday in a bloodless palace takeover.

At 11:30 a.m. Monday, seven National Guard helicopters left the grounds of the presidential palace that Bourguiba built over the ruins of ancient Carthage outside Tunisia.

A fleet of cars, trucks and ambulances was seen leaving the grounds. The curfew of police and armored cars that had surrounded the palace since Saturday withdrew.

Bourguiba was flown to a presidential residence in the vineyards of Mornag, about six miles south of the capital, said a spokesman for new Prime Minister Hedi Baccouche.

Access to the Mornag residence was barred by a dense security cordon. Bystanders, including children from a nearby school, said they saw the choppers landing.

Officials said privately that Bourguiba resisted a government decision to move him to another presidential palace near Sfax, Tunisia's second-largest city 145 miles south of Tunis. They said he might be moved to Sfax later.

Prominent Tunisians of all political persuasions endorsed the new regime, including leaders of Islamic fundamentalists and the militant labor movement, which had opposed the autocratic Bourguiba government for years.

The fundamentalist Islamic Tendency Movement, two of whose members were hanged for terrorism three weeks ago, called Ben Ali's takeover a "positive and historic act."

Labor leader Habib Achour, who had been jailed repeatedly on charges of corruption and subversion, approved Ben Ali's action and was promptly freed from house arrest.

Ahmed Mestiri, a former interior minister, said Ben Ali committed a "courageous act" in removing a man who had become an obstacle to all progress. He leads the main opposition Movement of Socialist Democrats.

Many exiled politicians expressed support for Ben Ali and prepared to return to Tunisia. They include Mohamed Mzali, whom Bourguiba ousted last year after seven years as prime minister.

Mzali was sentenced in absentia to 10 years in prison for alleged corruption and "illegally leaving the country."

Moslems, Christians protest

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — More than 100,000 Moslem and Christian demonstrators chanted "No to hunger, no to the war!" joined forces on Beirut's Green Line, a symbol of divided Lebanon, to protest the country's worst economic crisis.

The "three-hour" demonstration was the biggest anti-inflation rally staged in a growing campaign by Lebanese against government failure to cope with the deteriorating economy and the militias who effectively run much of the country.

Protesters from Christian east Beirut and the capital's Moslem west side demanded "massacre" end the 12-year-old civil war which generated the crisis.

About 50,000 Moslems climbed over militia-built earthworks to join hands with Christian demonstrators in the no-man's land at the Green Line's midcity-Museum crossing.

"We can't take it anymore," said Bahia Mortada, a Shiite Moslem housewife, as she hugged a woman from the Christian side.

"We want to eat. We want to live together. We hate the war and those behind it," she lamented.

Jacqueline Khoury, a 24-year-old Christian university student, declared: "We want to live decently like other people in the world. Let the militias and their leaders fight their dirty war somewhere else."

Similar anti-inflation demonstrations were staged in the northern city of Tripoli, Lebanon's second largest city, and the southern ports of Sidon and Tyre. Beirut has about 3 million people. Tripoli's population is about 800,000.

The rallies were held on the fifth day of an open-ended nationwide strike called by the 300,000-member General Confederation of Labor Unions to protest the "imminent threat of starvation."

"No more east side, no more west side. We want our country united," chanted 20,000 teenagers taking part in the Beirut demonstration.

"There are always enough dollars to buy ammunition for civil war fighting, but when it comes to improving our living conditions, money disappears," read one placard.

Protestors, police clash in Bangladesh

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Demonstrators demanding the resignation of President Hussain Muhammad Ershad threw stones and homemade bombs Monday at riot police who responded with tear gas and baton charges.

Opposition leader Khaleda Zia and a half-dozen members of her Bangladesh Nationalist Party suffered minor injuries. One policeman was seen bleeding from the forehead.

Mrs. Zia and about 1,000 supporters defied a ban on public gatherings of more than five people shortly before sundown Monday when they marched down Tophkhana Street in the center of the city.

The clash came on the eve of the opposition's call for a "Dhaka Siege," a day of mass rallies and general strikes against the government.

Ershad, a former army general who took power in a bloodless coup in 1982 and was elected president last year, said he would not step aside.

Speaking to foreign reporters less than three hours after the clash, he said the Dhaka Siege had failed before it started.

Throughout the capital, riot police and paramilitary forces occupied major intersections.

Traffic in the city of 4 million, was less than half the usual amount. Bus, train and ferry boat services have been curtailed, and many people have not returned from the countryside after last week's Moslem holiday marking the birth of the prophet Mohammed.

Reporters and other witnesses saw people in the procession hurl stones and small bombs at police. Police retreated, regrouped and charged.
