Only 998 votes cast in Twin Falls School District

Plant facilities levy receives 76.7% approval

By BART JANSEN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Voters gave Twin Falls School District a landslide victory in a plant facilities levy Tuesday, approving the measure by a whopping 76.7 percent.

"I certainly feel it's giving us a great deal of pride in their educational facilities," echoed Trustee Gary Fay.

The election marks the beginning of a fourth decade of plant facilities levies for TFSD, which has used the money to maintain district property and equipment since 1958.

The 10-year levy, which began July 1, 1988, will raise $24.000 annually for the year beginning July 1, 1988. That amount could rise 5 percent a year without further elections.

Still, the levy election was a complete victory for the district. While voters were not required to vote at specific polling sites, the measure won support at each of five elementary schools.

GOP balks at proposal; talks go on WASHINGTON — Democratic negotiators offered a plan Tuesday to cut the federal budget deficit by up to $33.8 billion this year, but Republicans said it relied too heavily on tax increases and did little to rein in domestic spending.

Senior factions tangle at meeting in Hagerman

By TERRELL WILLIAMS Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — Senior citizens in Hagerman, who left their center in September in protest, marched back to the center Tuesday to demand the resignation of the board of directors.

Last August, a partial board of directors met and terminated site manager Wanda Duncombe. This action divided members of the center.

When petitions calling for resignation of all board members and an election of a new board were ignored, more than 100 seniors formed their own group, the Independent Seniors.

Wednesday, the Independents returned and, during a board meeting, once again demanded the resignations and election.

independents, are members Faye Tupper (Duncombe's sister), Elmer Boutler and Wes LeCompte.

Land swap OK clears way to build new state prison south of Boise

The Associated Press

BOISE — After some prodding by Gov. Cecil Andrus, the Idaho Land Board has approved a land swap to clear the way for construction of the new $30 million state prison south of Boise.

The department of Corrections will give the Idaho Building Authority title to the new prison land, and the authority will issue bonds to pay for the construction.

The main state prison was built on a 120-acre site in Boise. But Andrus cautioned Evans not to count on that payment as extra school funding.

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has decided to name federal appeals Judge Anthony M. Kennedy to the Supreme Court, White House officials said Tuesday.

Officials said the administration will try to mute the harsh political attacks that have characterized the debate on both sides over the nomination of Robert H. Bork and seek bipartisan support for Kennedy.

Soviet forces closing technological gap, institute reports

House approves single poll closing time in '88 election

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, concerned that network projections of election winners discourage voter turnout in Western states, voted 208-189 Tuesday to require a simultaneous poll closing time of 9 p.m. EST in presidential general elections.

By Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., that would have forbidden local election officials to announce presidential results until 8 p.m. MST. His amendment was denounced as "ensorship" and a "ridiculous, unworkable" proposal.

The bill's supporters argued that early projections of presidential election winners, based on "exit poll" interviews with voters leaving polling places, discourage voter turnout and may affect the outcome of state and local races, especially in the West.

President endorses cabinet-level VA

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, who criticized his predecessor's creation of the Department of Education and Energy, said Tuesday he wants to make the Veterans Administration a Cabinet-level department to give veterans "the recognition they so rightly deserve."

While Reagan was endorsing the creation of a new Department of Veterans Affairs on the day before the Veterans Day holiday, the House Government Operations Committee unanimously approved legislation that would give the Cabinet-level status to the VA, now the largest independent agency in the federal government.

Reagan made his announcement in the Cabinet Room at the start of a meeting with leaders of veterans' groups and members of Congress, triggering a round of cheers and applause.

"There is no better time or better way to salute those valiant men and women than to announce today my decision to support the creation of a Cabinet-level Department of Veterans Affairs," Reagan said.

"This is a personal decision that I have thought about for some time," he said. "Veterans have always had a strong voice in our government. It's time to give them the recognition they so rightly deserve."

Reagan came into office in 1981 complaining that government was too large and opposing the Education and Energy departments established under the previous Carter administration. He tried unsuccessfully to abolish them early in his administration.

White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater, asked how Reagan's endorsement fit his previous complaints about government, said making the VA a Cabinet department "would not necessarily increase its size or budget but would give it a greater say in the councils of government and would make it an active and working part of the president's Cabinet."

Veterans groups and their advocates in Congress have been pushing for elevating the VA to a department and making the administrator a Cabinet secretary.

Shultz says no Contra aid request until 1988

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, pledging to give the Central American peace process "every chance," said Tuesday the administration will not seek additional military aid for the Nicaraguan rebels until next year.

In a speech prepared for delivery to the Organization of American States General Assembly, Shultz said, however, that the United States will not "sit idly on the sidelines" if Nicaragua's leftist government attempts to achieve a military victory over the Contras.

Shortly before Shultz spoke, Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega arrived in Washington for an address Wednesday to the OAS meeting, attended by foreign ministers from more than 30 hemispheric countries. The State Department said Tuesday no meetings between U.S. officials and Ortega will be arranged during his three-day stay here.

Shultz said, "We will not abandon the resistance fighters to face advanced Soviet weaponry and Cuban advisers — with their resources exhausted. We will not permit the peace process to become a shield for the physical elimination of the Nicaraguan resistance. It does mean we will give peace every chance."

Shultz's pledge to hold off in seeking a congressional vote did not come as a surprise. U.S. officials had made known the administration's intention two weeks ago, citing the wishes of friendly Central American countries and congressional opposition to any additional aid request before January.

The officials have said the request would be made in January but Shultz was less precise, saying only that a vote would be sought "next year."

A month ago, Shultz had said the administration planned to seek more military aid for the Contras before Thanksgiving. Shultz said he would ask Congress for $270 million over 18 months.

Shevardnadze, Shultz may meet in Geneva

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz may have to hold another round of pre-summit talks with his Soviet counterpart before the two sides can wrap up a European nuclear missile treaty, U.S. officials said Tuesday.

If so, Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze would meet in Geneva before Thanksgiving to try to resolve a handful of knotty problems and have the treaty ready for President Reagan and Soviet General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev to sign at a Washington summit beginning Dec. 7.

On the positive side, a major hurdle was cleared by U.S. and Soviet negotiators when they reached agreement that the Soviets could send inspectors to American missile installations — in Britain, West Germany, Italy and Belgium.

Last week, at a Kremlin reception, Shevardnadze told Western reporters he might see Shultz again to make final summit preparations. "Another meeting is possible," he said.

Three U.S. officials, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, said Shultz preferred having U.S. and Soviet negotiators settle the differences without involving the foreign ministers.

Shultz and Shevardnadze discussed a possible Geneva meeting when the Soviet foreign minister was here two weeks ago to set the summit date with Reagan. Another U.S. official said Shultz had not taken the idea up with Moscow since then.

A decision could depend, in part, on how much progress Max M. Kampelman, the chief U.S. negotiator, and Deputy Soviet Foreign Minister Yuri M. Vorontsov make at a meeting scheduled next week in Geneva.

The principal issue in dispute concerns the data the Soviets so far are willing to provide on the number and location of SS-20 intermediate-range missiles that have not been deployed, a third U.S. official said.

Today is the day to honor veterans

After more than 37 years, Cpl. Jack L. Walker is coming home.

Fittingly, the word of Corporal Walker's identification after being listed as missing in action since the early days of the Korean War and of the return of his remains for burial near his home in West Virginia came during the week in which the nation observes Veterans Day.

Walker, then 18 years old, was listed as missing in action after heavy fighting on July 31, 1950, near Chnju in southern Korea. That was at the beginning of the bitter fighting around what became known as the Pusan Perimeter, where American and allied forces were desperately trying to retain a toehold in Korea.

The Pentagon said Walker was presumed dead late in 1953. This past May, Korean graveyard workers found his remains in a cemetery along with his dog tags. The Army's identification laboratory subsequently confirmed the identification.

This footnote to events now almost four decades past should reinforce hopes of eventual success of those who are continuing their efforts to secure an accounting of the fate of the men who remain on the MIA list from Vietnam.

There have been men listed as missing after most actions in every war this nation has fought. Some have turned up alive later, the fates of others have been learned later, but in many cases the men listed as missing remain on that list with no account of what became of them.

Today, on this Veterans Day, 1987 — the 69th anniversary of the armistice which ended World War I — it is fitting that residents of Twin Falls and the Magic Valley join with other Americans in paying tribute to the veterans of the nation's wars — the big ones, the small ones and those which are virtually forgotten.

This is the day when Americans should thank those who served their nation when it called them, and remember those who gave their lives in that service as well as those whose fates remain unknown.

Double dose was enjoyable

Residents of Magic Valley received a double dose of entertainment last weekend. First they were given a "shot in the arm" with "A Shot in the Dark" — a musical comedy performed in the round before very receptive audiences at the Turf Club which was packed for the Thursday, Friday and Saturday night shows. As usual the Magic Valley Little Theater cast gave a highly professional performance, and a good time was had by all, cast, crew and audience.

On Sunday, I was happy to see that the CSI auditorium was nicely filled for the bi-annual performance of the CSI Jazz Band led by Larry Curtis. This year the Burley High School band which placed third in the Pacific Coast competition last spring provided the audience with additional excellent music featuring some exceptional soloists.

We in Magic Valley are lucky to have available to us such good and inexpensive entertainment. Many of the shows I've seen in cities lack the quality we can enjoy here.

One suggestion has merit

"Pass Due Smoking Restriction!" In response to Mr. Willy Nicholson's letter deploring the excessive restrictions placed upon smokers, may I respectfully suggest he sign up for a course in logic at CSI?

The things you are worried about offending people, sir, the way they dress, the movies they watch, and the music they listen to do not affect your health. When someone is so unthinking and rude to smoke in small enclosed places, such as the cabin of an aircraft in flight, they subject everyone in that aircraft to the filthy exhausts and excrement of their childish addiction to tobacco as the air that you breathe in an airplane is the same air recirculated.

In your closing statement you echo the sentiments of all too many thoughtless and inconsiderate people. "It's my lungs and it will pollute them if I choose to. If you don't like my air, don't breathe it, or move elsewhere."

No non-smoker cares one single bit about someone smoking anywhere they choose, except our natural empathy toward someone who cannot control a harmful addiction, as long as it does not foul the same air that we must breathe. Then it becomes our concern and if the government does not do something about it, few people with your belligerent attitude would.

How you would like it, Willy, if you were to happen to be on a flight with me and my habit happened to be "spitting," and much of it were directed in your direction? You would be angry, hurt and hostile toward me because you could not understand anyone having such a stupid habit, or at having to sit there and accept the spray from each burst of spittle, even though it would not be near as harmful to you as your smoke is to us. We non-smokers feel no less disgust at having to accept the stink, the stench, and the harmful effects of having to inhale your smoke, and the same difficulty in understanding why anyone would voluntarily choose to perpetuate such an unhealthy and offensive compulsion.

I do like your suggestion of marking smokers with a large "S" though. Then we would at least be warned in advance and could get up and get as far from you as circumstances permits. There are those who might misconstrue what the "S" stood for though.

Team selections a farce

Canyon Conference Football Coaches: Your all-Canyon Conference A-8 football team choice is the biggest farce since Reaganomics was introduced. When are you and the media going to quit treating the Glenna Ferry Pilots like the Rodney Dangerfields of the Canyon Conference? How can you justify it when the first place team only gets two players named and Filer, tied for third place, gets six?

Offensively, who made the holes and the blocks that allowed Jon Hartway to gain over 1,000 yards rushing? Whose punts and kickoffs put you deep in your own territory? Defensively, who ate your running backs' lunches when you tried to run on us? Who intercepted your passes? Who nullified your offense when you did get lucky? Individually on the Glenna Ferry Pilot team, that's who. We had the best A-3 defense in the state, giving up only 4.5 points per conference game. Why, at least, wasn't our leading tackler named? Was your team based on athletic ability and statistics, or did some of you base it on familiarity, envy, prejudice, and maybe even some dirty politics?

Like it or not, guys, we represented the Canyon Conference at the State A-3 Playoffs. How could you allow this to be printed when our season was not over? Hoping it would take the wind out of our sails?

ON VETERANS' DAY — WITH THANKS.

Respect, benefits for veterans fading

For it's Tommy this, an 'Tommy that, an "Chuck him out, the brute!" But it's "Saviour of 'is country," when the guns begin to shoot; — Yes it's Tommy this, an 'Tommy that, an anything you please; But Tommy ain't a bloomin' fool — you, but that Tommy sees!

Swen

— Rudyard Kipling

What was America's response to 30 million of its citizens and their families whose lives were disrupted by their nation's call to arms?

What happened to the respect and benefits that had been promised at the recruiting station? Has the veteran been used, only to return home to find himself discarded like a spent bullet on the battlefield?

I asked those and other questions of Idaho veterans. "Go to Canada in case of another war" was what one vet told me he gave his teen-age son as advice.

Another disabled veteran put it this way: "A needy vet has misfortune two-fold. One, his financial position requires him to seek help. His second misfortune is the de-humanizing process of seeking help that makes euthanasia look inviting."

Guy Lawrence, Twin Falls, is a 100 percent disabled veteran. He tells me that the Veterans Administration wants him to give up his veteran's benefits and go on Medicaid.

Guy's wife, Doris, put it this way: "They didn't ask me when I was a new bride and pregnant, and they wanted Guy in the service. Did I have a car? Did I own my own home? Did I have any money in the bank? No, they took Guy and I had to go it alone. Now they want everything we have before Guy can get medical care."

The Lawrence's have refused to go on Medicaid and Guy is still being treated by the VA. Does the state have an obligation to care for returning heroes?

The earliest mention of veterans benefits in this nation came in 1636 by the Plymouth

Pilgrims. They adopted a law providing that "If any man shall be sent forth as a soldier and shall return maimed, he shall be maintained completely by the colony during his life."

The average age of our veterans is 53. By 1990 the men 65 and older will be veterans. Can the state provide them with the care and benefits we promised when they offered to give their lives for the country?

Eight percent of the federal budget now goes toward veterans affairs. VA hospitals can handle nine million veterans; 30 million are now at the age they are seeking medical care. Will the country provide the funds?

"It is ironic," a veterans service officer from Boise told me. "The two countries we defeated in World War II, Germany and Japan, provided more respect and benefits, including complete health care than we do."

VA figures reveal that only one-third of U.S. veterans receive VA health care, and 75 percent of them are charged for the care.

The VA has a motto "To care for him who shall have borne the battle, and his widow, and his orphan." What has happened to those promises?

During the later part of the 1970s, a new philosophy came into the halls of Congress. It was the proposition that nothing should set the veteran apart from the rest of the population.

This was in direct contrast to the concept held since the beginning of our country, that wartime veterans were to be set apart from the general population.

During the 1980s, there was an all-time low of elected veterans and more of those elected officials want the veteran to trade his veterans benefits for public assistance, or accept the age-old stigma attached to public aid. Idaho puts the two together, welfare-veterans affairs. For a veteran to get help from the system in Idaho, he must enter into the welfare system in some way.

Max "Pete" Kruse, Twin Falls, wanted information about his GI insurance. Pete stood in the "welfare" line to get this help. "If veterans are going to stand in welfare lines, they ought to have hats that say 'Veteran,'" Pete suggests.

Idaho was one of few states that did not provide a veterans bonus. Instead, as Edwin Nelson, governor of Idaho during World War II, told the Idaho Statesman: "Idaho will provide benefits far greater than a bonus to our returning heroes."

During this era there was a mill levy for veterans, one-half of one mill on the dollar. It was called a special tax for upkeep of memorials.

As the years passed since World War II the mill levy was discontinued and the unexpected balance reverted to the state general fund. Idaho state officials could not provide me with the amount of money collected under this mill levy and "reverted" to the general fund.

Andy Russell, a Twin Falls disabled veteran, puts Idaho's vote benefit this way: "He should have veterans preference on government jobs and he gets free copies of his discharge papers and divorce records."

The vast majority of the veterans I contacted tell me they would do it again, "but as one Vietnam vet told me, "What if they gave a war and no body came?"

To those who gave their time and life, no war ends until all the people who have participated in it have died or lost their memories. "And that is a promise," the elderly vet tells me waving his cane.

Swen is the pen name of Robert Johnson of Twin Falls, a longtime Times-News outdoor columnist and retired Times-News employee. He is a World War II veteran who served in the Pacific on the destroyer USS Nichols and witnessed the signing of the 1945 agreement to end the war aboard the USS Missouri in Tokyo Bay.

Like it or not, guys, we represented the Canyon Conference at the State A-3 Playoffs. How could you allow this to be printed when our season was not over? Hoping it would take the wind out of our sails?

Well, fellas, I think you have written your own destiny for next year. We have two-thirds of our starters coming back and some good ones coming up. You have made them mad and they will eat you up again.

You have not been the number one team by luck. It is from hard work, good coaching, a team effort, and most of all, good attitudes. We had all of these. I just hope that the voters for the A-3 all state team are not as biased as you.

Gulf policy totally wrong

In the Persian Gulf it now becomes clear that we have lost 37 American lives on the USS Stark and risk further lives in a full scale war. This is for the benefit of pro-Soviet, Iran and Iraq.

Three big lies have been promoted to support U.S. presence in the Persian Gulf. They are: 1. We are protecting the free flow of oil. 2. We are defending only U.S. flagged Kuwait tankers. 3. We are protecting the free flow of oil. Yet, we are defending only U.S. flagged Kuwait tankers. Iran has the greatest right to continue destroying Iranian shipping and Iranian attacks on U.S.-operated tankers has occurred with no U.S. response. 2. U.S. oil prices will rise significantly due to less oil. Yet, the U.S. gets only 5 percent of its oil from that region. 3. If we don't move in the Soviets will. Yet, our tanker shields are actually enhancing Soviet interests in the Gulf as Kuwait has taken the lead in bringing the Soviets into the region. A high percentage of the Kuwait tankers that we are protecting are leased from the USSR. U.S. policy is sheer madness.

Once known as Persia, Iran has a history as an independent nation stretching back into biblical times. On the other hand, Iraq's independence, never fully accepted by Iran, was recognized only as recently as 1930. During the past 30 years, Iraq has become strongly allied to the Soviet Union. But Iran, until 1979, was a firm U.S. ally. When the Carter Administration paved the way for the American-baiting Ayatollah Khomeini to take power in Iran by betraying the Shah, a Soviet-backed alliance between Iran and Iraq seemed likely. Intense religious differences not only prevented it, but led to war between the two nations.

If there is anything a Westerner ought to avoid, it is a holy war between competing Moslem factions. Because the U.S. has chosen to side with Iraq, Khomeini's virulent anti-Americanism has risen to white-hot proportions. What will be the fanatical hordes he controls now do?

It seems as though we are determined to provoke Khomeini into attacking U.S. vessels. If he does, American pressure to topple the Iranian religious zealot will grow. Then, a successor will be named who is more acceptable to the Washington-led Council on Foreign Relations (CFR) Builders of the New World Order, who installed Khomeini in the first place and turned Iran away from the West.

Present U.S. policy is unappealing and should be reversed if we are to stop the killing of more Americans and set the fanatical plans of the conspiratorial CFR who are continuing to use American blood and money to build their one-world government. Bring the boys home from the gulf.

Navy officials delay warhead missile test

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration, bowing to a request by congressional leaders, has delayed a test of the Navy's new Trident II ballistic missile with 12 dummy warheads, officials said Tuesday.

The new long-range missile already been tested with 10 dummy warheads, but the move to conduct a flight test with 12 has touched off a controversy over the future of arms control negotiations with the Soviet Union.

According to the administration sources, who asked not to be named, the Navy had planned to test the missile with 12 warheads as early as Thursday and no later than Nov. 20.

That schedule has been extended at the request of congressional leaders, who want to question Frank C. Carlucci about the matter during his confirmation hearings Thursday to become the next secretary of defense, the sources said.

Under previous arms control agreements, including the 1979 SALT II accord that has been abandoned by the Reagan administration, warheads on intercontinental ballistic missiles are counted based on the number that are carried in flight tests.

The Navy has always described the Trident II missile, which is now undergoing its initial flight testing at Cape Canaveral, Fla., as designed to carry 10 nuclear warheads compared to the eight now carried on the Trident I missiles deployed with the fleet.

Pentagon sources have also said, however, the missile is capable of carrying more than 10 warheads depending upon the type and target, and that when it comes time to actually deploy the new missile, some would carry as few as eight warheads and others as many as 12.

Critics, led by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, maintain that conducting a flight test now with 12 warheads will result in the Trident II always being counted as carrying 12 warheads, even though that is not the Pentagon's plan for deployment.

Swit backs veteran bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Actress Loretta Swit, who portrayed Korean War nurse Hot Lips Houlihan in the television series "M.A.S.H.," said Tuesday it's time we said "thank you" to the women who served in Vietnam with a statue in their honor.

"To ignore the contributions women have given is an outrageous neglect, and it's really sad," Miss Swit said as she lent her support to the drive to add a statue of a military woman to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington. She joined other supporters at a news conference where Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., said he had introduced a Senate resolution authorizing the statue, which would be added to the V-shaped wall and statue of three fighting men that makes up the memorial.

Supporters are turning to Congress after their proposal was rejected by the Commission on Fine Arts, a federal board that oversees placement of national monuments. Durenberger's measure, if passed, would overrule the commission's action and reduce its role in this case to an advisory one on artistic considerations.

Ted Danson 'Cheers' over Shelley Long's decision to leave

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Ted Danson, who plays Sam the bartender on NBC's "Cheers," says he's tired of being asked about his feelings about his former co-star Shelley Long.

"I can't think of one thing about Shelley that wasn't negative. Of course, Shelley is difficult. But who cares? It's the work," he said in an interview in the Nov. 14 issue of TV Guide.

"Does her being difficult take away from your enjoying the Sam and Diane relationship? To talk about her now seems like being on my honeymoon talking about my ex-wife. ... Give me a break."

Coming Long to new co-star Kirstie Alley, who plays Cheers' manager Rebecca Howe, Danson said: "Kirstie comes across as more vulnerable. And more relaxed. There was nothing relaxed about Shelley."

Rhea Perlman, who plays Carla, has "similar" impressions about Alley. "You immediately like her. She wants to be one of the guys. She doesn't care what she looks like, she's funky. She is totally different from Shelley — Shelley was never funky."

Beastie Boy Horowitz enters innocent plea

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) —

Adam Horowitz of the Beastie Boys rock trio pleaded innocent Tuesday to throwing a nearly full beer can that struck a young woman in the face during a riotous concert in May.

Horowitz, 21, entered the plea on the opening day of his trial at Liverpool Magistrates Court on a charge of causing actual bodily harm.

Horowitz, who arrived in court wearing a suit and tie, agreed his case should be heard without a jury. He was accompanied by his father, New York playwright Israel Horowitz.

The trio's record "Fight for the Right to Party" was breaking into the British charts at the time of the

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Trumpeter Al Hirt and his estranged wife, who accused him in court papers last month of beating and sexually attacking her, have reached a temporary truce.

Zide B. Jahneke Hirt agreed at a hearing Monday to leave her husband's French Quarter home by Dec. 1, and Hirt agreed to pay her $2,000 a month and provide her transportation. They married in March 1984.

Mrs. Hirt would not talk to reporters, but Hirt denied his wife's claims. "I'm a pussycat; I'd never hit a 98-pound woman," he said. "She hit me with a stick; I never touched her in my life."

The agreement holds at least until a Jan. 19 hearing on Mrs. Hirt's suit for a legal separation and $10,000 a month alimony.

New 'haute cuisine' isn't really pizza at all

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Department of Agriculture was not impressed with trendy chef Wolfgang Puck's new frozen "haute cuisine" pizza. In fact, the federal agency said it isn't pizza.

The USDA's labeling division contended that Puck's product did not contain any tomato sauce, and until it does it can't be sold as pizza. The agency sets standards to ensure that consumers get what they expect.

"I think it's ridiculous that some bureaucrat in Washington thinks they are going to tell us what a pizza is," said Puck, owner of the celebrity haunt restaurant Spago. "Tomato sauce has a cheap image on pizza, and we decided to have fresh ingredients."

But he agreed to add tomato chunks to his basil-pesto sauce. He also agreed to change the label because the USDA complained that the "country sausage" on his pizza was not made in the country at all, but in the industrial City of Commerce.

Proposed monument to honor blacks in Revolutionary War

WASHINGTON (AP) — They are perhaps the most anonymous of American warriors.

Even some students of history don't know that men like Abstimon Ailstock, Cato Cuff and Pomp Sherburne fought in the Revolutionary War. But these black patriots and 5,000 others who battled for American independence — and in some cases their own freedom — may soon be remembered next to Lincoln and Washington.

Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel is expected to approve plans within several weeks allowing a national memorial to the black patriots in Constitution Gardens between the Lincoln Memorial and Washington Monument.

The memorial project, which began two years ago and runs at least several years away as it weaves through Washington's bureaucratic web, is not a memorial to blacks but a monument to freedom, says the project's founding father.

"This memorial really isn't a monument to an individual, or a group of individuals," said Maurice A. Barboza, a 42-year-old black attorney. "It's a memorial to a concept, the concept of the struggle for freedom. And that's a universal concept, something which I think any American can identify with because it really defines us as a nationality and as a people."

Barboza said two centuries of ignoring blacks' role in the American Revolution continues to hurt race

New cannon given by NBC for film

TECUMSEH, Neb. (AP) — There's a new cannon in front of the Johnson County Courthouse, thanks to a World War II movie. A $50,000 donation from ABC television helped this small town, the setting for much of the miniseries "Amerika," pay for the cannon. The cannon stand had been empty since 1942, when the county gave up its Civil War-era cannon during a World War II scrap metal drive.

"Amerika," the network donated the money to the city and county to use as they saw fit.

The new, one-ton cannon dedicated Monday was made by a welder in Elk Creek.

"Amerika" depicted the United States after being taken over by the Soviet Union.

Station abandons cash giveaways

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A radio station says it has abandoned the rush-hour cash giveaways that angered police.

Ed Hopkins, program director for KAYL-FM, said he felt that people would be injured while trying to receive cash tossed to crowds by station personalities — has persuaded him to look for other methods.

On Oct. 29 and Nov. 5, KAYL disc jockey Andy Barber and news and promotions director Kim Kendrick threw more than $5,000 in $20, $50 and $100 bills off pedestrian bridges in Tulsa.

Police cited the two for creating a traffic obstruction following the first giveaway.

relations, and he thinks the memorial can help heal the wounds.

"It has an effect on the way we look at each other," he said. "If we think blacks made no contribution to the country, if we think they were all slaves at the time of the Revolution ... and blacks didn't have anything to do with the Civil War yet white people were dying in order to free blacks, it creates a tremendous pressure on young people to develop prejudices."

Barboza's mission has led him to sell his Virginia home, quit his job as a lobbyist for the American Bar Association and devote his time solely to the memorial.

He started with a little-boy-looking, faded photograph at his grand-mother's house.

Barboza remembers staring up at a yellowed photograph of his great-grandfather, a soldier in the Civil War, and wondering about the man and his era.

Years later, after graduating from Rutgers Law School and working as a lobbyist in the Health, Education and Welfare Department in the Carter administration, Barboza started a private project to find his roots.

Spending hours sitting through documents at the National Archives, Barboza tracked his lineage back to colonial times, discovering that a distant relative served in the Revolutionary War.

Proud of his heritage, Barboza urged his aunt, Lena Santos Ferguson, to join the Daughters of the American Revolution. That resulted in a four-year fight that drew national attention, ending with the DAR finally admitting her.

Spurred by that event, Barboza went to Congress in 1983 where he found a champion for his cause in a white Republican woman from Connecticut, Rep. Nancy L. Johnson, who represented Plainville, Conn., the town where the Barboza family grew up.

"Frankly, I, as a graduate in history from one of the best institutions in the nation, was never really conscious of the role blacks played in the American Revolution," Mrs. Johnson said in an interview.

"Certainly, our kids are not conscious, and there isn't a high school in America that shouldn't be conscious of this. Unless we correct the record, not just in textbooks but in the psyche of the nation, to recognize that our nation was actually founded in its freedom and independence by blacks as well as whites, we will never overcome the arrogance of prejudice."

Despite opposition from policymakers worried about overcrowding Washington with monuments and memorials, Mrs. Johnson and Sen. Al Gore, D-Conn., guided it through Congress. President Reagan signed it last year.

But Barboza wants the memorial in Constitution Gardens, in a grassy area in view of the Lincoln Memorial, Washington Monument and Constitution Hall, in the midst of Washington's prime tourist path, and that requires additional layers of bureaucratic approvals and legislative action.

The surrounding sites would have special meaning in relation to the black patriots' memorial, Barboza said.

The Lincoln Memorial would remind viewers that there were free blacks who fought in the Revolution "before the Emancipation Proclamation and others who fought in exchange for their freedom; the Washington Monument would remind of George Washington's original refusal to accept black soldiers; and nearby DAR Constitution Hall would recall Ferguson's recent struggle.

"It would make the most powerful statement," Barboza said.

Airline report card says American best for being on time

WASHINGTON (AP) — One in every four flights by the major carriers arrived 15 minutes late in September and 150 flights were chronically so, arriving tardy more than 80 percent of the time, the government reported Tuesday.

The airlines' on-time report card was issued by the Transportation Department in the first set of monthly statistics aimed at helping travelers choose airlines with the best service.

American Airlines had the best on-time arrival record in September while USAir was the tardiest among 14 carriers listed by the report, based on statistics supplied by the airlines themselves.

One-third of the chronically late arrivals belong to Delta Air Lines, the department said.

Meanwhile, the department said the number of airline complaints received by its consumer affairs office declined for the second consecutive month. It said 36 percent fewer complaints were received in October than had been reported in September.

In the report card on services, counting a flight as arriving on time if it was within 15 minutes of the scheduled time, the department said American Airlines posted the best record among 14 carriers, with flights arriving on time 84.5 percent of the time in September.

It added that in this category, USAir was the tardiest with an on-time record of 67.4 percent.

Overall, 77 percent of the 430,000 flights during September arrived at their destination within 15 minutes of their schedule, the department said.

Others with on-time arrivals of better than 80 percent were Southwest Airlines, 82.4 percent; Continental Airlines, 81.1 percent; Eastern Airlines, 80.4 percent; and Piedmont Airlines, 80.3 percent.

On the other end of the list were Pacific Southwest Airlines, with 70.5 percent of its flights arriving on time; Northwest Airlines, with 69 percent, and USAir with 67.4 percent.

The department said that 150 flights were found to be chronically late, arriving at least 15 minutes after their scheduled time 80 percent of the time.

Among other consumer statistics:

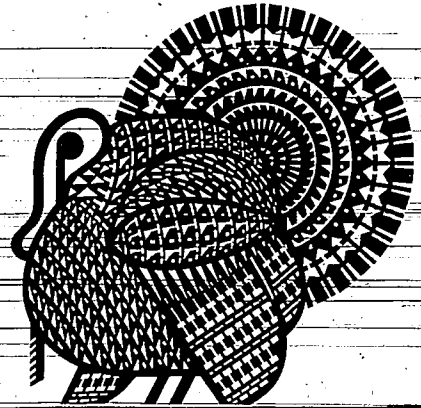

- Mishandled baggage: Northwest had the worst record, reporting 13 baggage complaints for every 1,000 passengers flown, followed by United Air Lines with 10

- Passenger bumping: Presidential Airways, a regional carrier, had the most passengers who were denied boarding because a flight was overbooked with 35.56 per 10,000 boardings, followed by Aspen Airlines, a commuter carrier, with 17.67.
- Consumer complaints: The department received 36 percent fewer complaints from air travelers during October.

Stallings willing to change water rights bill

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, said he may be willing to make changes in Swan Falls water rights legislation to satisfy objections of Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones.

The Swan Falls bill cleared the House Monday but attached to it was a committee report that Jones said sells out state control over its water resources to the federal government. Environmental groups want more federal say about how state water is used.

Stallings said Tuesday if Jones' objections prove to be legitimate, a statement can be added to the committee report saying the bill won't jeopardize the state's traditional control over the Snake River.

Jones said the committee report will be used to interpret the bill by the courts and federal agencies.

The Swan Falls bill is an attempt to gain federal approval of a state water rights agreement hammered out between the state and Idaho Power Co. in 1984. IPC is concerned about protecting its water rights on the river. The key point in the bill is it directs the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission not to interfere with the agreement that the state and IPC have made.

The agreement was an attempt by the state and IPC to settle a dispute that has tied up new water right grants by the state since 1983.

It has far-reaching consequences for the state's development because the agreement tells how new water rights for agricultural, municipal, industrial and hydro power uses should be granted.

The agreement guarantees IPC enough water to run its hydroelectric dams.

While Jones is against the committee report, IPC said it has no objections to it.

Everyone including the attorney general had his ear in the water when the legislation was formulated," says Logan Lanham, IPC senior vice president for public affairs. "We don't envision that it does give the federal government too much influence. Our position is the same as the governor's. The governor speaks for the state. We have no problems with the legislation as written. We conveyed that to Stallings and (Rep. Larry) Craig," said Lanham.

But Jones said because of the unacceptable House committee report, the state will have to work doubly-hard in the Senate to do damage control.

The Senate passed a much different bill that doesn't address the environmental concerns that are raised in the House bill.

The House bill requires federally approved studies to ensure that the Swan Falls agreement doesn't harm the fishery and wildlife in the river.

Jones charges that Stallings, by not raising objections to the committee report, "sold his district down the river."

Jones said the Second District congressman has given in to downstream interests, a reference to environmental groups concerned that the Swan Falls agreement gives too little water to fish and wildlife. Upstream interests are irrigated agriculture in southern Idaho.

Stallings countered that Jones, a Republican, is attacking him for political reasons. "I am very disturbed that he has decided to push politics in an issue so important to Idaho," said Stallings, often a target of Republican criticism.

"Hogwash. I don't care about that. I care about the water," said Jones, raising his voice.

Jones said he didn't object to the committee report earlier because his staff only got a copy Friday.

But Jones said he wrote Stallings Oct. 6, telling him it was critical that the state have input on the committee report because that is what will be used by the courts and FERC, the dam licensing agency, to interpret the agreement.

The House committee report will also be binding on the Snake River adjudication, Jones said.

Part of the Swan Falls agreement requires an adjudication, a court-ordered determination of water rights, to be conducted on all the water rights claims in the Snake River basin.

"We wanted it clear that (fish and wildlife) studies to be conducted would not be binding on the state," Jones said. For example, he said he didn't want the federal government to impose minimum stream flow on the state nor require measures to make up for damage to fish and wildlife.

Jones said Stallings' nature resources aide, Cary Jones, was thwarted by House Energy and Commerce Committee staff

Disfigurement doesn't stop his work

Roever tells story of emotional past

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An evangelistic meeting ended on an emotional note honoring veterans Monday night, as a Vietnam Vet whose face and part of his body were blown off by a grenade called his buddies home.

"I want you to come down and stand at the front so we can say thanks," said evangelist Dave Roever, himself a Vietnam Vet. One of the speakers, they came 50 strong, to the applause of about 2,000 people packed into the CSI gym.

"I'm going to say two words to you that did more to heal me than anything else," said Roever, whose voice choked with emotion. "Forgive this country for not saying it sooner. Welcome home."

Roever then stepped off the podium to greet some of the men, and a few in turn, hugged each other.

It was an emotional finale to an evening that in many respects resembled a standup comedy routine by David Letterman.

But although he joked about his disfigurement and his war experience and his coming home, his message was deadly serious.

Dave Roever never thought he'd fight in a war.

He never thought he'd have to kill.

He didn't want to go to Vietnam. He didn't want to die.

He was a preacher's kid who wanted to be a preacher.

Now, he's a preacher, but he had to go through hell and back to do it.

"People ask how I could fight in an unpopular war, but I've never heard of a popular war," said Roever. "I hate war. I hate the rape, and plunder and disfigurement and death it causes."

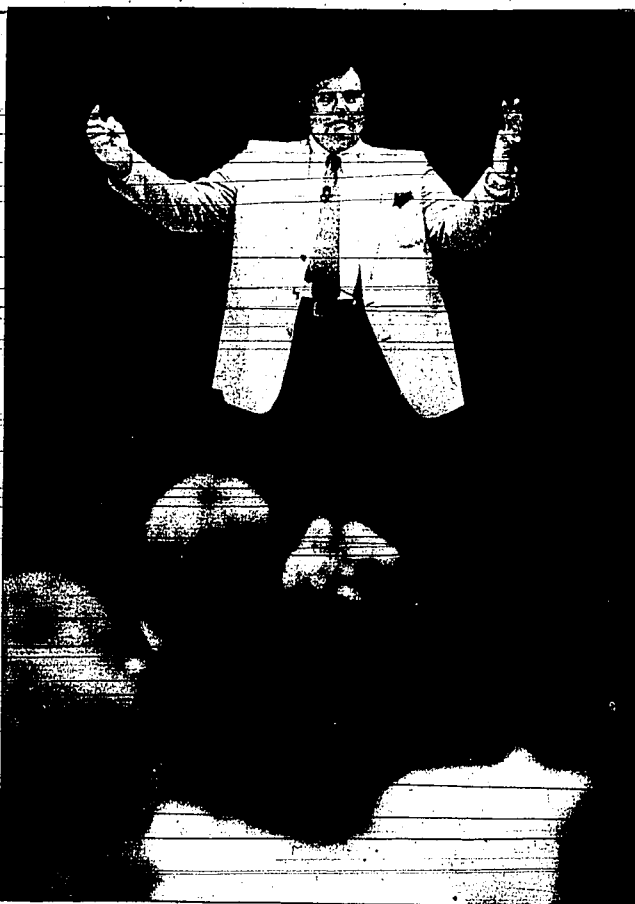

But Roever told the audience filled with young people that he also loved freedom of speech, and freedom of prayer, and freedom of religion.

"I'm glad I'm a free American," he said. And the patriotic crowd that was his all evening cheered and applauded.

Roever then recited in vivid detail the hand grenade that exploded in his face and left him scarred for life.

He had pulled the pin on a white phosphorus grenade, and was about to toss it in an enemy bunker when it exploded.

"Forty-percent of my skin came off. Half my face and chest were blown off. I was blind in my right eye; deaf in my right ear. My back was on fire. My left thumb was gone. My hand was severed in half. But I knew I was still alive because I looked down and saw my heart beating."

Roever said he ran to the river, but the water didn't quench the fire. He looked down and saw his skin floating all around him, and thought, "I'm beside myself." But then Roever got serious. "You know what my first thought was, I said, 'God, I still believe in you.'"

He was flown to the United States for surgery. Fourteen days later, when surgeons began to operate, the phosphorus that was buried into what was left of body re-ignited, and he began burning again.

After surgery, Roever said he made the mistake of asking for a mirror.

"I was so depressed," he said. "I could only think of suicide: I was a freak, a monster, and I heard the devil telling me to pull the plug."

Suspect being held in local homicide

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A 47-year-old Twin Falls man was being held in the Twin Falls County jail Tuesday night for the first-degree murder of another man who died earlier in the day of a stab wound in the chest.

Public Safety Director Tim Qualls identified the suspect as Roy Willard Haffner of 449 5th Ave. W. He said the victim, still unidentified Tuesday night, was fatally injured at Haffner's residence following a disagreement that took place about 3 p.m.

Qualls said his department was called by Haffner at about 3 p.m. and told of the incident.

"He (the victim) was taken to the hospital and he died three days of the stabbing," Qualls said. "At this time the investigation is underway and we do not know what kind of a weapon was used."

An autopsy is scheduled for this morning, Twin Falls County Coroner Calvin Edwards said. He said the victim was stabbed in the heart with a 9 1/2-inch instrument and pending the autopsy findings, is believed to have bled to death from the wound.

Edwards said the identification of the victim had been established Tuesday night, but would be withheld until next of kin could be notified. Deputy Coroner Jim Milson is serving in the coroner capacity on the case since he was on duty when the death occurred, Edwards said.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter said Haffner is being held for murder without bond, although the formal complaint will not be filed with the court until Thursday morning because of the Veterans' Day holiday. She said she expects Haffner will be arraigned Thursday afternoon.

Qualls said he could not add any further details of the homicide pending the continued investigation.

Hine given 5-years maximum Former employee receives sentence

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A former Twin Falls County employee convicted Sept. 21 of three counts of grand theft was sentenced Tuesday to a maximum five years on each count to run concurrently.

Charlene Hine, 43, was told by 5th District Judge George Granata, Jr., of Burley, that probation at this time would not be appropriate. He said a sentence that would deter her from repeating the offense and also deter other public employees from following the same path was necessary.

"Probation at this time would definitely depreciate the seriousness of the crime involved in this case," he said.

He ordered an indeterminate sentence of five years per count, but said the sentences would be served at the same time.

Judge Granata also retained jurisdiction in the case for 120 days and allowed Hine to surrender herself to the state board of corrections at the state prison in Boise at a date to be determined.

He said this would probably be at least a week, which should give her time to make necessary arrangements for her 15-year-old daughter and take care of other personal matters.

Under the retained jurisdiction, she will be sent to the state correctional institution at Orofino for 120 days. After that time, she will automatically return to court for a review of the sentence.

Hine, a former employee of the Twin Falls County sheriff's department, was convicted in September of taking $562 in prisoner work-release fees. The amount represented the total of three grand thefts from funds which were under her jurisdiction as an office deputy.

Judge Granata advised Hine she may appeal the sentence to the Supreme Court and the appeal must be filed within 42 days. Her attorney, Keith Roark of Hailey, said late Tuesday that he has not had time to review possibilities of an appeal with his client.

Roark told the court he has never seen the quality and variety of presentence letters supporting a belief that equals those received on behalf of Hine. He said they came from outstanding people including a district judge, a former prosecutor and other leading citizens.

Under the indeterminate sentence, the board of corrections will decide how much of the five

Idaho director says veterans must be awakened to service

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — As director of Idaho Veterans Services, Gary Bermeosolo tends to attract considerable demand whenever November rolls around.

Applying for VA benefits is limited, however, so he usually requests Bermeosolo's presence on Veterans Day must get their orders in early. And Twin Falls did just that when it filed its request for this year's two-weeks-before Veterans Day — the Veterans Day falling in calendar year 1986.

"They've been trying to get me here each year the last three years, but every time they asked it seemed like I had just made another commitment," Bermeosolo said Tuesday. "So last time I told them to call earlier, and they said, 'How about now?'"

"I said, 'Fine, and here I am."

Bermeosolo, who has been at the helm of the IVS since 1982, will give a speech at today's Veterans Day ceremonies hosted by the American Legion Twin Falls Post No. 7. Those ceremonies begin at 11 a.m. in the city park.

"What I want to do is reawaken a feeling of loyalty and to reinitiate a feeling of camaraderie — for people to walk away recognizing the needs and obligations of 'Vet,'" Bermeosolo said.

Bermeosolo, 40, also spoke at a meeting of the local American Legion Tuesday night.

"I think the major concern of Vets today is related to health-care issues; that the VA continue to provide sufficient care," he told the Times-News.

In today's budget-cutting climate, Bermeosolo said veterans are "concerned that their budget will be cut to a level insufficient for quality care."

"They keep getting leaner and leaner and leaner, and they keep imposing new standards as to eligibility. It's getting tougher to provide services."

Even so, Bermeosolo has numerous plans in the works, including remodeling of the old and building of the new.

The IVS is in the process of raising funds for remodeling the facility under a two-for-one matching grant program.

The IVS has also collected $65,000 in private donations for the remodeling. It hopes eventually to raise $100,000, Bermeosolo said. He added that he hopes to have construction on the project started by March 1, with completion coming before Dec. 1.

"According to Bermeosolo, the IVS is also looking toward building two new veterans homes, one each in Pocatello and Lewiston.

"The Veterans Administration has approved the project for Pocatello, but the federal funds are not available at the moment," he said. "We will be going to the Legislature for funds next year."

Bermeosolo said he hopes to have the home in Pocatello completed by 1990. For the home in Lewiston, which has not yet received VA approval, he said he is looking at 1988 as a target date.

According to Bermeosolo, the new homes are required because the needs of the state's 117,000 veterans — including 93,000 war veterans — have simply outpaced the services which the Boise home can provide.

Bermeosolo, who is a veteran of the Vietnam War, said he occasionally perceives "a potential callousness for veterans."

"We haven't been to look in 12 years at the number of legislators who are not veterans; it's higher than before — perhaps the highest that it's ever been."

He added, "Perhaps the only thing that will bring the feelings back would be another war, and we certainly don't want that."

Bermeosolo said he is particularly concerned about the lack of awareness concerning veterans which he sees among the country's youth.

"We have kids going into junior high now who don't know what a veteran is," he said.

Bermeosolo said he approached Jerry Evans, state superintendent of public instruction, with those concerns last year. The state has subsequently undertaken several measures directed at elevating such awareness, including the institution of a moment of silence each Veterans Day in those schools which are in the area.

"I think it's important that we get to the youth," he said.

Bermeosolo, who previously served as chairman of the Board of Ada County Commissioners from 1977-81, said that he has found his current work to be particularly rewarding.

"It's exciting to do things for people instead of to people," he said. "I think I've got the second-best job in the state of Idaho."

In addition to health-care issues, Bermeosolo's speech today will touch on the hiring practices of county service officers and the possibility of building a war memorial at the Veterans Memorial State Park in Boise.

Prosecution rests in Berg murder case when he tried to get a copy of the committee report. Stallings denied this.

Stallings said Stalling didn't listen to him about the importance of change in the legislative report because Lanham, IPC's president, was a candidate for public affairs and environmental groups were leaning on Stallings.

But Stallings said Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, and he talked about the committee report issue and resolved it was better to get the bill to the House floor while they had the opportunity.

"I got the opinions of Idaho Power Co. and (Gov. Cecil) Andrus' office that they did not share Jones' concerns," Stallings said.

The Swan Falls bill has been a high priority legislative item.

And until the Swan Falls matter is resolved by Congress, the state is holding off on issuing water rights permits for permanent uses such as irrigation.

No new permits have been issued since 1983, said Norm Young of the state Department of Water Resources.

Denver (AP) - Federal prosecutors concluded their case Tuesday against four defendants accused of civil rights violations in the slaying of radio talk show host Alan Berg with the testimony of an Order member who overheard details of the killing.

Kenneth Joseph Loff, a former New Yorker who moved to the Northwest in 1976, told a U.S. District Court judge Tuesday that four or five days after Berg was killed in 1984, he heard Robert Mathews, late founder of the white supremacist group, tell other Order members "we killed the bigmouthed Jew."

Loff recalled how Mathews said the assailants waited for the broadcaster near the driveway at Berg's central-Idaho townhouse.

Loff also said he heard defendant Bruce McCreary say "didn't make a sound, he went right to the ground."

Loff was on the witness stand for nearly three hours before the prosecution closed its case.

Richard Scutari, David Lane, Pierce and Jean Craig, are being tried for allegedly depriving Berg of his civil rights by killing him. All are members of The Order who are serving federal sentences for racketeering stemming from a 1985 Seattle trial.

All four defense attorneys moved immediately for acquittal of the charges, saying the evidence was insufficient to prove the government's case. But U.S. District Court Judge Richard Matsch ruled from the bench that he thought the evidence was sufficient enough to go to the jury.

Matsch also rejected motions to grant separate trials for Craig and Scutari.

"The trial will be suspended Wednesday because Veterans Day is a federal holiday. It will resume Thursday at 8:30 a.m."

Loff was convicted of racketeering charges in a Seattle trial in 1985, and is serving a five-year sentence. He is scheduled to be released from prison in July.

A member of The Order, Loff described himself as a close friend of Mathews. "I loved him like a brother," Loff said, even though he knew Mathews lied and committed crimes.

He said he believed that Mathews began "loosing touch" with reality after Berg's slaying.

In other testimony Tuesday, Randall Rader, a member of The Order, said the first words Scutari said to him after the Alan Berg killing were "Your gun jammed on the 13th round."

Rader of West Plains, Mo., who was paid to train Scutari and other members of The Order, told the jury that he sold the MAC-10 .45-caliber machine pistol used to kill Berg to a man for $500.

The man, Rader said, transferred it to The Order's arsenal weapons. Rader said he was paid $1,500 to go to Metairie Falls, Wash., to train Order members in weapons, field maneuvers and survival techniques at their Metairie Falls, Wash., camp. Scutari taught basic karate there.

Rader said on or about June 14, 1984, Scutari and Mathews left Washington for Denver. Lane told Rader later that day told that they were "were going on a big mission," he said.

The witness said he recalled the date because it was two days before his birthday on June 16. He said Mathews, Scutari, Lane and Pierce also were absent from a birthday dinner in his honor.

Mathews, who prosecutors allege was involved in Berg's slaying, died in a December 1984 fire at a Whidbey Island, Wash., hideout north of Seattle after a 37-hour standoff with authorities.

Rader said Scutari told him they were taking the gun Rader sold them to Denver. He said Lane reassured him that the serial number on the weapon had been removed.

"I saw them leave in a gun-metal-blue gray small sedan in the morning," Rader said. "Mathews said they would be back in about four days."

 will be serving.

Deputy Prosecutor Rockne Lamners asked for a 10-year sentence on each of the three counts. He said Hine had spent most of her working career in the legal field.

"She knew right from wrong. She is a genuine example of a law enforcement officer who went wrong," Lamners said.

Hine also noted that although the sheriff and two other law enforcement officers testified under oath that she had told them, when first confronted, that she "took the money," she had since continued to deny it.

"She has continued to deny the crime. You cannot rehabilitate someone who will not admit to their wrongdoing," Lamners said, in arguing against probation for Hine.

But Roever said he didn't die. Instead, he started getting hungry.

Probe resumes into Gov. Mecham

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) - The Arizona Supreme Court refused Tuesday to bar the attorney general from investigating Gov. Evan Mecham's unreported $350,000 campaign loan and freed a state grand jury to resume its probe.

The court, in a strongly worded 5-0 opinion, rejected a claim by the Republican governor's attorney that Bob Corbin's investigation violated confidential attorney-client relationships.

"The attorney general does not represent the governor when the governor is not performing official duties," the court said in an opinion written by Chief Justice Frank X. Gordon Jr. "The attorney general has a duty to investigate any claim of wrongdoing by public officers."

Corbin said he was pleased with the ruling, but declined to say how soon he and Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Thomas O'Toole would resume the "grand" jury investigation. It was halted by a stay issued by the Supreme Court.

A spokesman in O'Toole's office said the judge had not seen the ruling.

Mecham's lawyer, Murray Miller, did not immediately return a phone call seeking comment.

The grand jury plans to report the loan from Tempe developer Barry Wolfson, whether it was tied to any gubernatorial appointments, and other undisclosed matters.

"The high court rejected Miller's claim that Corbin had a conflict of interest because he had not ruled out running for governor himself. Such accusations are easy to make and hard to disprove," the court said.

The attorney general "is not the attorney for the governor; he is the attorney for the people and for the state as an entity," the court said.

"There is neither an appearance of impropriety nor an actual impropriety when the attorney general investigates possible misconduct of a state officer. ... Any other rule would render the attorney general's office impotent to investigate alleged misconduct," the court said.

There is an exception, Gordon wrote, when the attorney general has represented a government official in the specific matter being investigated. However, a court said, information presented by Mecham "falls far short" of proving that occurred with the Wolfson loan.

"No loan from Wolfson is listed on Mecham's campaign or personal finance reports.

 Hells Angels arrested with sting program

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Thirty-eight members of the Hells Angels in five states were arrested Tuesday in an undercover investigation involving drugs, weapons, explosives and conspiracy to murder members of a rival gang, the Justice Department said.

The government said it obtained indictments with the help of an FBI informant who rose through the ranks of the notorious motorcycle club during two years to become a "national officer."

Arrests were made in Alaska, Kentucky, South Carolina, North Carolina and California.

"Basically it's going to be what the Hells Angels are known to be associated with - narcotics and firearms," FBI spokesman Bob Deklin said in San Francisco.

According to a statement released in Washington by the Justice Department, the informant and undercover agents purchased $1.6 million in methamphetamine and cocaine from club members.

Salt Lake radio host reformats to neo-Nazi

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - A local radio personality said Tuesday he has publicly acknowledged his white-supremacist beliefs and announced his weekly radio talk show to "Aryan Nations Hour."

Dwight McCarthy, who has hosted the "Counter-Marxist Hour" on station KZZL since July, said the name and format of his live one-hour Saturday morning call-in show will change on Dec. 5.

McCarthy, who says he is a 37-year-old Vietnam veteran, plans to relay messages from the Rev. Richard Butler, leader of the northern Idaho-based Aryan Nations, and discuss other beliefs of the group in his show.

"I've been studying the Aryan Nations for five years," McCarthy said, adding that he decided recently to make public his support for the group's views. He did not think all of the reaction to his show would be hostile.

"I think quite frankly, that there's more fertile ground for a white supremacist view than people think," he said.

While not an official member of the Aryan Nations, McCarthy does have the support of the neo-Nazi organization, Butler said in a telephone interview from his Hayden Lake, Idaho, headquarters.

"He seems to be a very fine young man and I'm glad to have him with us," Butler said. "We will meet him down there (in Utah) in the next couple weeks, probably."

Butler said he talked with McCarthy over the telephone, and after being convinced that he shared Aryan Nations' beliefs agreed to allow McCarthy to use the group's name for his show.

Hills Angels arrested with sting program
 SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Thirty-eight members of the Hells Angels in five states were arrested Tuesday in an undercover investigation involving drugs, weapons, explosives and conspiracy to murder members of a rival gang, the Justice Department said.

The government said it obtained indictments with the help of an FBI informant who rose through the ranks of the notorious motorcycle club during two years to become a "national officer."

Arrests were made in Alaska, Kentucky, South Carolina, North Carolina and California.

"Basically it's going to be what the Hells Angels are known to be associated with - narcotics and firearms," FBI spokesman Bob Deklin said in San Francisco.

According to a statement released in Washington by the Justice Department, the informant and undercover agents purchased $1.6 million in methamphetamine and cocaine from club members.

PUC orders phone company to cut rate

BOISE (AP) - To offset reduced federal taxes, Pacific-Northwest Bell has been ordered by the Public Utilities Commission to reduce its Idaho revenue by $309.078.

The PUC said Tuesday that will translate into slightly lower monthly rates for suburban customers; elimination of the 65-cent-per-month charge for touch-tone service and an end to the trouble isolation charge.

That charge has been $25 for the first 15 minutes and $9 for each additional quarter-hour. It will be replaced by a 20-cent per month boost in the basic local service charge.

With those changes, Pacific Northwest Bell will accomplish the rest of the revenue cut by decreasing the charge for basic local service, the PUC said. Present rates are $6.60 or $8.50 per month for residential service and $18.20 or $22 for business lines.

The PUC said the company has been directed to make the changes by Dec. 1, retroactive to July 1.

Leaseholders enraged over state's rental payment plan

BOISE (AP) — A delegation of Priest Lake leaseholders had little luck Tuesday when members tried to get the Idaho Land Board to reconsider a plan to push rental payments to the state closer to the market value.

In fact, the members wound up with a scolding from two of Idaho's top officials to quit wasting the Land Board's time with attempts to win special treatment.

"No matter how hard we try, we can't satisfy you," said Jerry Evans, state superintendent of public instruction, to Jack Philcox, Cheney, Wash., and Jim McLean, Spokane, representing the leaseholders.

"I don't sense a great deal of sympathy with your proposals," said Gov. Cecil Andrus, saying board members were tired of Priest Lake leaseholders "coming in here year after year and complaining."

"I'm tired of having our meetings consumed by people coming here and seeking special treatment," the governor said.

The state leases land around Payette and Priest lakes, prime recreation areas, to private citizens who then can build cottages or houses.

Philcox and McLean said they were protesting state plans to raise lease rates from the current $1,080 per year to $1,370 starting Dec. 1. Under the schedule, the rates are scheduled to go up until hitting $3,915 by 1997.

The men said they weren't so concerned so much with next year's increase as the future increases.

Stan Hamilton, state lands director, said the goal was to reach a lease rate of 2.5 percent of market value, which is the Land Board's policy. He said once a property reached 2.5 percent of market value in annual rents, the increase would not go up.

Under prodding from Andrus, Philcox acknowledged that $1,390 was probably a fair rent for a lot he said was worth about $75,000 with the improvements he has made. "But it is not worth $4,000 per year," he said.

Andrus, Attorney General Jim Jones and Evans all expressed frustration with the presentation.

Evans said for the last nine years, the board has tried to come up with a fair rental rate. It has tried using assessed values, appraisals and even selling some of the properties to see how much they would bring.

"The state sold some comparable lots at Payette Lake during the summer at public auction. A similar sale at Priest Lake was blocked by a lawsuit, and the board eventually dropped the idea."

The leaseholders said the state's latest appraisals were "grossly inflated" because they didn't take into consideration adjustments such as the need for sewer and water installations.

"No matter how we go about it, you can find some problem," countered Evans. "The staff has worked very hard on this and we find it very frustrating that after all these attempts, we are back to ground zero with you."

Jones said the state's goal of getting 2.5 percent from the land, with proceeds going into public school endowment funds, was too low.

"It's probably too low, but I'm willing to stick with it. We have moved forward in good faith, and I don't see the need to back away at this time," he said.

Under questioning from Andrus, Philcox said his lot was probably worth at least $45,000.

Officials say Boise students short of satisfying state requirements

BOISE (AP) — The percentage of high school seniors in the Boise School District who are not meeting state graduation requirements is a little higher than administrators would like, but apparently is not alarming.

Officials said Monday that 113 seniors, or 7.4 percent, were not meeting graduation standards including the controversial C-average rule, adopted in 1984 by the Idaho Board of Education and modified in March 1987. The requirements take effect with the graduating class of 1988.

At Borah High School, 60 of the 565 seniors are not meeting the requirements; 28 of 495 seniors are falling short at Boise High and 25 of 465 seniors are not making the grade at Capital High.

Jack Craven, director of curriculum-instruction for Boise schools, said he did not have statistics to indicate whether the current number of students falling short of the requirements is greater than the percentage who fail to graduate from the three high schools each year.

Craven said he was neither upset nor pleased to learn that 7.4 percent of the seniors may not graduate.

"The district is focusing on the 7 percent," he said. "The district wants every child to function at his or her level of potential."

The C-average graduation requirement originally called for a minimum 2.0 grade-point average in 14 credits of English, math, reading and speech. A state survey released last year showed that 25 percent of juniors, this year's seniors, were not meeting that standard.

That statistic, coupled with criticism from administrators throughout Idaho, led the Board of Education to modify the requirement to give districts more flexibility in determining student competency.

School officials were given two additional options:

— Require students to score within one standard deviation of the mean on a statewide achievement test and receive a score of at least 3 on a scale of 5 on a statewide writing assessment.

— Allow local school boards to develop competency plans that are in keeping with guidelines established by the state board.

August Hein, state deputy superintendent of education, said districts have chosen either to keep the original C-average rule or use the statewide tests. No district has implemented its own competency plan, he said.

"Most of the feedback we're getting now is that between the two, it appears kids are being challenged to do better," Hein said. "We're not hearing that the number of kids who aren't going to graduate is unmanageable or alarming."

Risch, Otter discuss senate control

BOISE (AP) — State Senate President Pro Tem Jim Risch and Lt. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter were reserved in their discussions Monday about who controls the Senate.

In the past decade, the president pro tem has administered the Senate day-to-day, even though the Idaho Constitution says the lieutenant governor is the Senate's "presiding officer."

The lieutenant governor's role has been limited to presiding over floor sessions. Otter has questioned whether the constitution provides for a bigger role for the lieutenant governor. He has considered asking for an attorney general's opinion on the subject.

There are some responsibilities the presiding officer of the Senate should have to exercise, and my effort right now is to find out exactly what that is," Otter said on the first edition of KIDO radio's Open Line program.

"Obviously, the state Senate has the responsibility and the privilege or right to operate as it sees fit so long as it is within the boundaries set by the constitution. I suspect that until we get the whole Senate back to the capital city (in January), it's really not something we're going to be able to spend an awful lot of time and resolve."

Risch agreed and said the Republican Senate caucus next session may tackle the issue.

Risch said the jury is still out on the state's economic development efforts. He said Gov. Cecil Andrus seems determined to try to help the state's economy.

"There have been a lot of speeches and a lot of talk about economic development, but as far as what's been done, I don't think anyone has sat down yet and put together a tally sheet."

However, he said he did expect a tally sheet by the time the Legislature convenes in January.

Last week, Andrus and state Department of Commerce Director Jim Hawkins released an Economic Development Agenda that includes a program on ways state and local governments and others can help the economy.

Risch said he had not read the document yet. Otter said he had reviewed it "in part but would not make an assessment on it yet."

Les Bois racing season set

BOISE (AP) — Horse racing at Boise's Les Bois Park will start April 30 and end Sept. 25 next year, and Friday night racing will be added during June.

Western Idaho Fair Board members voted at a meeting Monday night to approve the racing calendar proposed by board President Jack Steneck. The calendar has 69 days of racing.

Last month, the Idaho Racing Commission accepted the Les Bois proposal for up to 70 days of racing next year. This year, Les Bois had a 54-day horse-racing season, from late May through Sept. 8.

Races are scheduled next year on Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays, the same as this year. In addition, races will be run May 30 for the Memorial Day holiday, and Friday night racing is scheduled in June.

July will begin with four days of racing: July 1-4. August includes the Western Idaho Fair, Aug. 19-26, except on opening day, because of a potential conflict with another event. September includes an extra race day, Sept. 5, for the Labor Day holiday.

Suit filed in miner's death

BOISE (AP) - The widow of a northern Idaho miner killed in an accident two years ago has filed a $750,000 lawsuit in U.S. District Court here over his death.

Commissioners uphold penalty

ST. ANTHONY (AP) - True to their part of the bargain, commissioners in Fremont and Jefferson counties have approved penalties for violating the federally mandated winter closure of the controversial Egin-Hamer road even though the road will probably not be built until spring.

Both county governing bodies adopted ordinances requiring the eight-mile, four-lane road to be closed from Dec. 1 to March 31 so elk migration is not inhibited and slapping penalties of $300 in fines and six months in jail for violating the closure.

But because officials in both eastern Idaho counties are still working with the Bureau of Land Management are still trying to put together an operating plan, it will be next spring before construction will begin on the road that created such controversy over the past year.

Per diem won't go abroad

BOISE (AP) - Per diem payments of $20 won't go far in a lot of foreign countries, the Idaho Board of Examiners was advised on Tuesday.

The board was urged to seek changes in state laws limiting to $20 per day the reimbursement for business expenses. The limit might be proper in the United States, but doesn't meet expenses in some foreign countries, members were told, and the departments of Commerce and Agriculture are sending workers abroad more and more to seek foreign trade.

The board voted to name a subcommittee to determine if the limit needs to be changed. The Idaho Potato Commission, which also does a lot of foreign travel, already has a specific exemption in state law.

Phone company wins delay

BOISE (AP) - Mountain Bell has won a delay until Nov. 30 in a Public Utilities Commission order to offer time-of-day service through automatic answering operations.

In a 2-1 decision announced Tuesday afternoon, the PUC granted a delay so Mountain Bell can ask for a waiver from the Justice Department to allow the service. Commission President Perry Swisher dissented without comment.

Clerk guilty of porno sale

POCATELLO (AP) - A Pocatello bookstore clerk, charged in the city's crackdown on pornography, has been fined and placed on probation after pleading guilty to selling and distributing obscene material.

John DeWitt, a clerk at the Pick 'N' Pay store, was ordered to pay $75 in fines and to reimburse the city for $39 police officers spent to buy magazines during their pornography investigation. DeWitt pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor charge in September in a plea bargain that saw the city drop a second obscenity sales count. Magistrate Boyd White also ordered DeWitt to cease further sales of material officials considered obscene.

Clerk testifies in trial

ST. ANTHONY (AP) - A clerk at an Ashton shopping center has testified that a 21-year-old Rexburg man accused in the slaying of Teresa Rice was in the store the night before Mrs. Rice was found dead there.

Recca Davis of Ashton testified Tuesday at the preliminary hearing of Barrynton Eugene Searcy. He is charged with first-degree murder and robbery in the July 15 slaying of Mrs. Rice, who owned the store with her husband Mike.

Mrs. Davis said Searcy was in the store when she left about 8:10 p.m. Mrs. Rice, of Chester, was killed sometime after she closed the store that evening.

Searcy's preliminary hearing, which was expected to last two days, began after Fremont County Magistrate Jerry Reynolds refused on Monday to close the proceeding to the public.

Reckless-gun-law passed

BOISE (AP) - The Ada County Commission has unanimously approved an ordinance making it a misdemeanor to recklessly fire a gun within 500 feet of an occupied house in Ada County.

"This would get the guy that goes out there recklessly knowing that he's shooting at a person in front of a guy's picture window," said Commissioner Mike Johnson, a member of the National Rifle Association.

The ordinance sets a penalty of up to six months in jail and a $300 fine for violators. Recidivists shooting or discharging a firearm that shows a disregard for the safety or property of others.

Winmill appointed judge

POCATELLO (AP) - B. Lynn Winmill, 35, has been appointed new 6th District judge here, succeeding the retiring George Harrgraves.

Gov. Cecil Andrus announced the appointment in Boise on Tuesday, calling Winmill "an experienced attorney who has broad support in the Snake River area."

Winmill, a Blackfoot native, is a graduate of Idaho State University and the Harvard Law School. He was student president at Idaho State and a National Merit scholar.

Winmill is Chubbuck city attorney and an associate in the Pocatello office of the law firm of Hawley, Troxell, Ennis and Hawley.

Andrus names board members

BOISE (AP) - Gov. Cecil Andrus has named the first members to the new Idaho Horse Board, charged with promoting the state's horse industry.

Appointed to serve that end next July 1 were John Hendricks of Boise, Edith Stanger of Idaho Falls and Chris Christian of Nampa. Forrest Hymas of Jerome and Earl Lilly of Emmett will serve until July 1, 1988, and Lea Ann Deaton of Sandpoint and Joe Swendig of Coeur d'Alene will serve through July 1, 1990.

The seven-member board was created by the Legislature last winter.

Rexburg man dies of injuries

RIGBY (AP) - An elderly Rexburg man has died of internal injuries suffered when his pickup truck rolled over him, authorities reported.

The victim was identified as Horace Perry, 70, Jefferson County Sheriff's officials said Perry had apparently left his truck in reverse when he got out north of Rigby Sunday night and the truck began moving backward. The open door knocked Perry down and the truck rolled over him.

Officials said Perry died during surgery at the Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center.

Bill's language may delay wilderness

BOISE (AP) - If the timber industry insists on so-called "hard" release language, there will be no Idaho wilderness bill approved this year or next, an environmentalist says.

"If they continue to pressure for new release language, the chance of getting a new wilderness bill for Idaho are zilch," said Ron Mitchell, spokesman for the Idaho Sportsmen Coalition. The same applies to Montana's wilderness debate, he said.

Joe Hinson, executive vice president for the Idaho Forest Industry Council, said the debate over an Idaho wilderness bill is not on acreage; it is over what will be done with the land not designated wilderness.

Both men appeared before the Idaho Land Board here Tuesday to discuss the wilderness issue and what is to be done with about nine million acres of roadless land in Idaho.

It has been under study for possible preservation as wilderness. The president of the Idaho Land Board, Gov. Cecil Andrus, has been working with Republican Sen. James McClure on wilderness legislation and announced after the Land Board meeting that he will meet with McClure again on Saturday.

"This is the latest chapter in a fight that goes back about a quarter century," when the 1964 Wilderness Act was adopted, said Hinson.

He said the forest industry needs about 1.7 billion board-feet of timber to harvest and faces the prospect of getting only 1.52 billion board-feet.

As it stands, Hinson said, if a Forest Service proposal is adopted, Idaho will add 1.3 million acres of wilderness. Another 4 million acres will be left roadless for further study.

The forest industry wants the remaining 4 million acres opened to development, with laws banning the endless appeals which have blocked many timber sales. That's the "hard" release language, he said.

Mitchell said several years ago timber industry spokesmen, federal officials and environmental groups such as the Sierra Club worked out "soft" release language, known as the Colorado language.

Since then, he said, 28 state wilderness acts have been approved and the Colorado language is working well.

Only wilderness bills in Idaho and Montana remain, and he predicted members of Congress will not go along with "hard" release language.

"The hard, cold facts won't be on the Montana or Idaho bills," he said. "The release language is working and is not a big problem for the forest industry."

ISU temporarily drops weapons ban clause

POCATELLO (AP) - The Idaho State University Faculty Senate has, at least temporarily, deleted a controversial provision in its proposed classified research policy that would ban weapons research.

Although some faculty members feel the issue remains alive, Graduate School Dean Edwin House said he believed there would ultimately be no specific weapons research ban in the final policy.

After the Faculty Senate action, the policy was returned to the school's Research Coordinating Council where Faculty Senate President Mahmoud Fouad said, "We hope it will come back so we can make up our mind."

The weapons research ban has been opposed by some faculty members on grounds of academic freedom and the school's relations with the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory where government research of all kinds is conducted.

In a pair of votes on Monday, a sharply divided Faculty Senate deleted the weapons ban in favor of what Fouad called an "ambitious provision" and then referred the policy proposal to the Research Coordinating Council for further amendment.

House, who heads the Research Coordinating Council, said he has not yet seen the Faculty Senate report, but he believed the weapons ban has almost likely been dropped. "I'm fairly certain that's not going to be in the document," he said.

The research council narrowly voted last spring to send the original policy to the Faculty Senate. The weapons ban could have been killed by the council at that time, but House voted to send it to the Senate to allow a full debate on the issue.

That purpose has largely been served, House said, since the Faculty Senate has discussed the ban at length and held a public hearing on it.

"I think that's what the university should be doing, and I'm pleased with that," he said.

A revised research policy will probably not be sent back to the Senate until January, House said.

Symms less optimistic of peace plans

WASHINGTON (AP) - After a weekend trip to war-torn Central America, Sen. Steve Symms says the prospects for peace there are a lot less bright than depicted in the news media.

Symms was part of a Senate peace plan observer team which visited four of the five countries that signed a peace agreement in August.

"The current impression in the news about the prospects for peace in Central America could be correct only if you define peace as the kind of peace they have in South Vietnam," Symms told a Washington news conference Tuesday.

"It's a mistaken impression that all is going well, because the process is much closer to being derailed than it is to succeeding," he said.

Symms said Nicaragua's communist government has yet to show any substantial headway in returning democracy to the country.

"They have some only 5 percent of the way in meeting requirements of the plan, while the other countries are in 90 percent compliance already," he said.

The plan calls for cease-fires between governments and insurgent forces, amnesties, an end to outside aid, respect for human rights and general democratization of the region.

Symms said the news media still is very limited and few political prisoners have been released.

He said Sandinista officials during the visit had the audacity to deny ever having political prisoners in their country. They told blatant lies to United States senators as if we had no access to any information at all," he said.

"The key to whether or peace process works is in the hands of the Nicaraguan government; if they are sincere, they have a lot of catching up to do," said Symms.

Iraqi planes hit Iranian tankers, power plant in latest raids

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq said its planes bombed two ships off Iran and a power plant in the southwest in a new wave of air raids Tuesday.

The official Iraqi News Agency said the warplanes hit "large naval targets," which usually means tankers, in the Persian Gulf, scoring "effective and accurate hits."

At an Arab League summit in Amman, Jordan, President Saddam Hussein of Iraq ended a long feud with President Hafez Assad of Syria — Iran's main Arab ally.

The move toward reconciliation linked Syria with moderate Arab states hoping to pressure Iran into accepting a U.N. Security Council resolution calling for a cease-fire in the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

The latest Iraqi claims raised to three the number of ships Iraq claims to have hit off Iran's coast in the past two days. There was no independent confirmation of the strikes.

Quoting a military communique, said that in addition to the tanker hits, jets carried out a "severe strike" on the Amidya power station in southwestern Khuzestan province, the center of Iran's oil industry.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, said a "non-military target" was bombed and damaged in Khuzestan. It gave no details.

The Iraqi communique also said Iranian shellfire killed two civilians and wounded eight in Zamaqi and Zamarin in northeastern Sulaimaniyah province.

Iraq has intensified air raids on Iran's oil installations, tankers and industrial targets since late August trying to choke off Tehran's oil exports, which pay for its war effort.

The latest raids came after Iraq threatened Iran with "mass destruction" to avenge a missile attack Sunday on Baghdad that killed 11 civilians and wounded 105.

Iraq said its fighters flew 63 combat missions Tuesday against Iranian positions along the 730-mile frontline, where both sides reported skirmishes.

Officials in Baghdad have said the Iraqi army is bracing for a new Iranian drive in the southern sector opposite the border city of Basra, Iraq's second-largest city.

Diplomatic sources and Western analysts have estimated that the Iranians have about 20 divisions, mainly Revolutionary Guards, massed in the south.

Iranian divisions vary in strength, but the buildup in the south has been estimated at more than 200,000 men.

Iranian fighters battled to within six miles of Basra in January and February.

To what extent the Assad-Hussein reconciliation will affect Tehran was not immediately made clear by officials.

While Syria's alliance with Tehran did not appear to be in any immediate jeopardy, the move will likely increase Tehran's isolation for failing to comply with the U.N. cease-fire resolution, which was passed in July.

Syria has faced increased criticism from other Arab states for its alliance with Iran.

Syria, Iraq set plan to reconcile

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Iraq and Syria agreed to seek an end to their long enmity, but Syria did not pledge to stop supporting Iran in the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war, according to reports Tuesday from the Arab League summit.

Syria also said it would veto any attempt to readmit Egypt to the Arab League, which suspended Egypt's membership because of the 1978 peace treaty with Israel.

The agreement to be President Hafez Assad's price for whatever contribution he makes to Arab pressure on Iran to accept a U.N. call for a cease-fire in the Iran-Iraq war, which began in September 1980.

Akram Barakat, an official spokesman for the 21-nation summit, said Assad and President Saddam Hussein of Iraq made their pledge to reconcile at a meeting Monday night. King Hussein of Jordan was the host and other key Arab leaders attended.

Barakat said the meeting marked "a positive start to a new era of brotherly relations between Syria and Iraq."

"God willing, good news will emerge as a result of this reconciliation for the best interests of both peoples and for the benefit of the Arab nation as a whole," declared Barakat, who heads Jordan's information office in Washington.

Summit delegates, who include 17 heads of state, spent their third day in closed session Tuesday trying to reach a common stand on the war, which has endangered Persian Gulf shipping and other nations in the area.

Syria has angered criticism of its support for non-Arab Iran, which is Moslem but Persian, by insisting that its influence in Tehran has helped keep the war from spreading to other countries.

Arab moderates led by King Hussein won a major victory by setting in motion a reconciliation between Iraq and Syria, which are governed by rival wings of the Baath Socialist Party.

A senior Arab official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said: "It's a serious rapprochement. They've agreed to work on eliminating differences and have begun by ordering a halt to the propaganda campaigns against each other in their official media."

He added, however, that it would be "a long and thorny process," and would not entail a change in Syria's alliance with Iran.

Remaining unclear were what effect the reconciliation effort will have on the war and to what degree it will isolate Iran.

Libya also has backed Iran, but Syria has been its strongest supporter in the Arab world.

King Hussein held three meetings Tuesday with Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, apparently trying to improve the sour relations that followed the collapse in February 1986 of a joint approach to peace with Israel.

Saddam Hussein of Iraq joined the third meeting. Arab sources said but they would give no details. A Palestinian official reported "a positive atmosphere" between the king and Arafat.

Even senior aides were barred for the second day from Tuesday's closed meeting of the Arab leaders.

Conference sources said foreign ministers of nine countries, plus Farouk Khatouni of the PLO political department, were drafting a final statement to be presented to a full summit session for endorsement.

"If things go as planned" the summit will end Wednesday, spokesman Barakat said.

Jordan's foreign minister, Faher Messer, said discussions in the closed meetings focused on the Iran-Iraq war and proposals for an international Middle East peace conference, Egypt and Lebanon.

Iraq and conservative Gulf Arab states have sought to reinstate Egypt, the most populous Arab nation, because of its military importance against Iranian threats.

Jibrane Kourieh, the Syrian presidential spokesman, said Tuesday, however, "Any attempt at the summit conference to end the suspension of Egypt's membership in the Arab league will only result in undermining all the positive conclusions which have been reached and might be reached."

Spain notifies U.S. it will not renew defense agreement

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Spain officially notified the United States Tuesday it will not renew a 34-year-old defense agreement because U.S. negotiators did not agree to pull out 72 F-16 fighters, a Foreign Ministry official said.

It was the first time either side gave notice to renounce the 1953 bilateral treaty originally signed between President Dwight Eisenhower and Gen. Francisco Franco.

Spokesman Innocencio Arias said Spain will only sign a new defense accord if the United States agrees to pull out 72 F-16s and five KC-135 refueling jets stationed at Zaragoza air base in northeast Spain. The current five-year extension of the agreement expires next May.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Bob Meade said U.S. Charge d'Affaires Adrian Basora received the notification, but noted that "our two governments have indicated the desire to maintain a strong defense relationship and plan to go on negotiating."

Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez promised a substantial reduction in U.S. military presence in Spain in return for a favorable vote on a March 1986 referendum for the country to remain in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The referendum passed. Chief negotiators Maximo Cajar of Spain and U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew told reporters at the end of the talks Nov. 6 that the two sides want to maintain a solid defense partnership and will try to work out their differences at another negotiating round set for mid-December.

Foreign Minister Francisco Fernandez-Oviedo told Spanish National Radio Tuesday that Spain had maintained its original bargaining position since the reduction talks began 16 months ago and would continue to do so.

The United States has stationed 10,600 troops at three air bases, a naval station and nine communication posts since the original treaty went into effect after 1953.

In the Nov. 6 talks the United States offered to withdraw one squadron or 24 F-16s, but Spanish officials called the proposal insufficient.

The United States earlier proposed an across-the-board 10 percent cut in all personnel and then offered to move the entire tactical fighter wing to a smaller air base near Seville in southern Spain.

Gonzalez has always emphasized Spain is not trying to get rid of the U.S. presence, but simply wants a smaller one.

Catholic marchers join rites

ENNISKILLEN, Northern Ireland (AP) — Hundreds of Roman Catholics joined Protestant mourners Tuesday as the grief-stricken town of Enniskillen buried three of the 11 people killed in an Irish Republican Army bombing.

Ministers urged forgiveness but also condemned the "barbarism" of the terrorists who planted the bomb that exploded Sunday during a Remembrance Day service honoring the war dead. Sixty-three people were injured.

A wave of denunciations followed of the outlawed IRA and its legal political wing, Sinn Fein.

But the politics and tensions of Northern Ireland seemed distant from the ecumenical outpouring that surrounded the first burials in this town of 13,000.

The Methodist Church of victim Marie Wilson, a 20-year-old nurse, overflowed with more than 1,000 mourners, including Catholic priests. Miss Wilson was the youngest victim. Her father, Gordon Wilson, was there with his arm in a sling, a result of injuries he suffered in the blast.

Wilson has said in an interview that his daughter's last words as she held his hand were "Daddy, I love you very much." Wilson has also said that he and his wife, Joan, bear no grudges.

Many in the congregation wept as the Rev. Thomas McGowan said: "I saw the spirit of Marie Wilson in the wave of compassion and practical caring that crossed over the religious divide as a shattered community came closer together in love and succor for the bereaved and injured."

Schools and businesses closed for the funerals. Youngsters in school uniforms attended the services instead.

As the throng followed Miss Wilson's hearse from the hilltop church to the cemetery, under gray and windy skies, several mourners sought out reporters to say that Catholics and Protestants were about equally represented in the cortege.

Poles worry costs may be too high

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A middle-aged woman bulldged her way through a small cluster of people standing in front of the meat counter at the bustling Koszyki Market, and asked the price of a poor quality piece of pork with bone and fat.

"Oh, Boze," she groaned when told it would cost 400 zlotys. "Oh God, Who can pay these prices?"

The price was the equivalent of $1.20 a pound and expensive in a country where the average wage is about $93 a month at the official exchange rate.

The farmer's wife standing behind the counter shrugged. "People who can afford to buy," they buy. Those who can't, don't."

Many Poles are wondering these days which group they will belong to after the wide-ranging price hikes widely expected to be imposed next year.

Government planners so far have been reluctant to specify how high they will raise prices if a referendum on the radical economic reform program of Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski is approved in voting Nov. 29.

Jewish settlers shoot school girl, clash ensues

DEIR AL BALAH, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — Jewish settlers shot and killed a 17-year-old Palestinian high school girl Tuesday after their cars were pelted with rocks during an anti-Israeli protest near the campus, officials said.

Police detained six settlers for questioning. Settlers told police they only fired warning shots in the air.

The victim was identified as Intisar al-Antar.

In Gaza City, 10 miles to the north, about 400 Palestinian students clashed with troops during a violent demonstration at the Islamic University. Arabs at a United Nations building near the campus said soldiers used tear gas and fired in the air.

Israeli and Palestinian officials linked the unrest to the Arab summit in neighboring Jordan.

Accounts of the shooting incident at the Sukineh Bint Al Hussein Girl's High School varied.

Gaza police spokesman Yigal Golan said Jewish settlers driving in two cars fired at Palestinians outside the school three stones at them.

Rouven Rosenblatt, head of the Gaza settlers council, said the settlers acted in self-defense.

"What must be understood is that the 50 schoolgirls started all this when they stood by our car and brutally endangered our lives by throwing stones at our car," he said, adding that the settlers fired only in the air.

A Palestinian who works in a nearby plant nursery said about 200 girls and boys outside the school were stoning cars with Israeli plates.

"One (Israeli) man stopped, he got out of the car, entered the school and opened fire," said the Palestinian, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Palestinian said the man used a pistol.

One Jewish settler, not identified, told Israeli army radio: "We were driving towards Tel Aviv and reached the school near Deir Al Balah. We immediately saw a roadblock and tried to bypass it, but about 50 schoolgirls attacked us with stones."

"We left the car immediately and fired a couple of shots in the air. And that was it."

Bokassa death sentence appealed

BANGUI, Central African Republic (AP) — The Supreme Court said it will begin Saturday to hear the appeal of the death sentence imposed on the nation's former ruler, Jean-Bedel Bokassa.

Bokassa was sentenced to death June 12 following conviction on charges of committing murder, arbitrary arrest and embezzlement during his 14-year dictatorship, which ended in 1979.

No date has been set for the execution, pending the court's decision on the appeal.

Tunisia to maintain all allies

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Tunisia will remain friendly with the West and rely more on private enterprise, the new prime minister said Tuesday at his first news conference since President Habib Bourguiba was deposed.

Hedi Baccouche said the constitution will be amended to introduce a "genuinely democratic system" and remove such pillars of the autocratic Bourguiba system as the office presidency and controlled press.

The constitution designates Baccouche as successor if new President Zine al Abidine Ben Ali dies or is incapacitated, but he said any vacancy would be filled by a free, democratic process. He also indicated, however, that no elections will be held until Ben Ali's term ends in October 1992.

Ben Ali, a 51-year-old army general, was in charge of internal security before becoming prime minister a month ago. He seized power in a bloodless palace coup before dawn Saturday. Ben Ali asserted that Bourguiba, 84, was physically and mentally unable to continue in the office he had held since independence from France in 1956.

Baccouche said the fundamentalist Islamic Tendency Movement, two of whose members were convicted of terrorism and hanged three weeks ago, was free to join in a peaceful political debate.

He said earlier that the movement, which appeared recent unrest in the North African country, would be allowed to function only under another name. The prime minister said the current name wrongly suggests that it represents Islam, to which more than 95 percent of Tunisians adhere.

There has been no outward show of opposition to Ben Ali's assumption of power, which was conducted with military precision. Baccouche said Tuesday every Tunisian and every visitor to the presidential palace knew Bourguiba was unable to function.

"Our dear president's incapacity... was abused by some members of his entourage for their own ends," he said.

Four prominent and unconditional Bourguiba supporters were in "preventive detention... for their own safety," he said, and political prisoners will be given a "case by case" review.

Bourguiba was moved Monday to the residence of his choice, the presidential palace in Morges, about six miles south of Tunis. Baccouche said. He added that the deposed president was "free in his movements" and allowed to receive relatives and friends.

Asked whether this meant Bourguiba could leave Morges if he wished, Baccouche said the former president-for-life was too ill to leave.

He said Tunisia's foreign policy would not be changed and the government would cooperate with "all friendly countries." Baccouche made special mention of close relations with France, the United States and Italy, which is less than 100 miles away, across the narrow waist of the Mediterranean.

Spain will train Mozambique police to combat guerrillas in rural areas, the national news agency AIM reported Tuesday.

It quoted Antonio Sanchez Jara of Spain's Foreign Ministry, as saying the training would enable special police units to "clear the countryside of bandit gangs."

Mozambique's Marxist government uses the word "bandita" to describe the Mozambique National Resistance, which has been active for 10 years.

Sanchez said the training program probably would be conducted in Spain, at least in its initial stage.

Mozambique receives most of its military supplies and training from the Soviet bloc, but Britain trains Mozambique soldiers at a base in Zimbabwe and France is considering some military assistance.

Reagan says dollar has fallen enough

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan, seeking to shore up the embattled U.S. dollar, declared Tuesday that the currency had fallen enough and that his administration is "not doing anything to bring it down."

Reagan's remarks, seeming to contradict recent suggestions by other officials that the administration would let the dollar fall, helped fuel a rebound in foreign exchange markets, where the dollar had plunged to new 40-year lows.

I don't look for a further decline, don't want a further decline from where it is right now," Reagan told reporters in off-the-cuff remarks at the start of a meeting with visiting Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

A weaker dollar makes U.S. goods more competitive abroad but reduces Americans' purchasing power and standard of living. Too sharp a plunge can rekindle inflation and drive away foreign investments needed to finance the federal budget deficit.

Although Reagan's comments buoyed markets at least temporarily, analysts suggested the shift did not necessarily signal a rethink in U.S. policy. They said the administration may have little choice but to accept further declines in the dollar, despite criticism from Europe and Japan. The alternative is raising U.S. interest rates, a course neither the White House nor the Federal Reserve Board seemed likely to embrace, the analysts said.

C. WILLIAM VERITY Markets should set level

Even as the president sought to bolster the dollar, his new commerce secretary, C. William Verity, said the markets should set the proper level for the dollar.

"We can do an awful lot of things and we probably will, but in the end it is the marketplace that will determine how far the dollar will fall if it will fall any further. And I happen to be a believer in markets," Verity said in a question session at the National Press Club after his first major speech as commerce secretary.

The dollar gained ground after Reagan's statement, rising to 134.15 Japanese yen in New York from 133.60 yen in earlier trading. The dollar closed in New York on Monday at 134.18 yen and fell in Tokyo on Tuesday to 133.85 yen, the first time it tumbled below the 134-yen level.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost nearly 60 points Monday, closed Tuesday down 22.05 points.

On the dollar, Reagan insisted: "We're not doing anything to bring it down," even though comments on the dollar last week by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III - later endorsed by the White House

- were blamed by traders for contributing to the recent fall. Reagan said he had not discussed the situation with his financial advisers, and spokesman Martin Fitzwater reiterated: "The president's comments were on his own."

But Fitzwater emphasized, "We are not seeking a lower level of the dollar." The White House also issued a statement disavowing a New York Times report that said unidentified administration officials welcomed a weaker dollar. The story quoted one official as saying "administration wants the dollar to 'drift, drift, drift, drift.'"

The unnamed White House administration officials quoted in today's New York Times article on the dollar were not speaking for the administration," the statement said. "The United States continues to cooperate closely with its G-7 allies to promote exchange rate stability."

The G-7 are the seven major industrialized nations - the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy - who have publicly vowed to work for currency stabilization.

Market tumbles, erases blue chip midday rally

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market took another tumble on Tuesday, erasing a midday rally in blue-chip issues that analysts traced to President Reagan's comments that he doesn't want further declines in the dollar.

Analysts said the market is sensitive to the possibility that declines in the dollar may drive foreign investors out of U.S. stocks and is disaffected with efforts to reduce the federal budget deficit.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 58.65 on Monday, lost another 22.05 points to close at 1,878.15.

The widely-watched market gauge which reflects price movements in 30 blue-chip issues had been down 44 points at midmorning, but pushed a few points ahead of Monday's closing level shortly before 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

It fell steadily in the final 90 minutes of trading in another abbreviated session that ended at 1:30 p.m. MST.

Declining issues outnumbered gainers by 3 to 1 in the overall tally of NYSE-listed issues, with 416 up and 505 down.

Volume on the Big Board came to 184.31 million shares compared with 160.69 million shares Monday. It was only the third time in the past four weeks that trading volume was below 200 million shares.

The market opened lower in what some analysts said was a carryover from sharp declines overnight on foreign stock exchanges and traded erratically at lower levels all morning.

Among the most actively-traded issues, General Electric fell 7 1/2 to 43 3/4, American Telephone & Telegraph was down 1/4 at 28 1/2, International Business Machines Corp. was off 1/4 at 117 3/4 and American Express fell 1 1/4 to 22 1/4.

Retail stocks were lower as some analysts have expressed a somber outlook for Christmas shopping. Sears fell 1/4 to 34, J.C. Penney was down 1/4 at 42 1/4, and K mart was down 1/4 at 27 3/4.

The automobile stocks also fell, with General Motors off 1/4 at 57 3/4.

Ford down 1 1/4 at 71 1/4 and Chrysler off 1/4 at 23.

Nationally, turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in foreign stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 209.80 million shares.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 315.19, down 5.24.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrial stocks fell 4.34 to 272.26, and S&P 500 stock composite index was off 1.17 to 239.00.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 5/8 to 244.54.

PSA to drop all service into Spokane

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Citing an inability to make money, Pacific Southwest Airlines announced plans Monday to halt service to Spokane on Jan. 6.

"It just isn't there for us," said Margery Craig, a spokeswoman for the San Diego-based airline. "We're sorry to do it, but if we can't make money at it, it just doesn't make economic sense."

PSA service to Seattle, Pasco, Yakima and Bellingham are unaffected by the decision to drop Spokane flights, she said.

PSA, which began serving Spokane in 1983, offers two flights daily to San Francisco. The airline discontinued four daily flights between Spokane and Seattle about a year ago.

The decision to discontinue service to Spokane is not a result of PSA's recent merger with USAir, Craig said.

Dennis Locke, aviation services manager at Spokane International Airport, said the impact on overall passenger service won't be great.

"They are not one of the major carriers as far as the numbers of operations and passengers," he said.

Think warm & cheery

Think country. Fresh air ... green meadows, grazing cows ... and a hearty breakfast served up in a cheerful, sunlit kitchen.

The lure of the country and a country breakfast has nostalgic appeal, especially on Sunday mornings when even city dwellers can stop to savor the special pleasures of a morning meal.

Instead of just plain eggs, try a famous Cheese Strata. The strata simply layers French bread and cheddar cheese, moistened with milk and eggs and then is baked to a silky, custard-like consistency.

Now, for dessert! Serve Bananas and Cream, a homestyle favorite featuring bananas with zesty Honey-Lime Cream and a variety of toppings.

Banola Breakfast can be served as a complete breakfast on hurried weekday mornings when nutrition is often overlooked. Prepare the granola ahead of time and simply add versatile sliced bananas each morning to make it a "banola" breakfast. Home-made granola is especially good for you since the bananas provide the extra fiber, B vitamins and potassium needed for active lifestyles.

Double Cheese Corn Bread combines shredded Edam and cream-style cottage cheese for cheese-rich flavor and creamy moistness.

DOUBLE CHEESE CORN BREAD

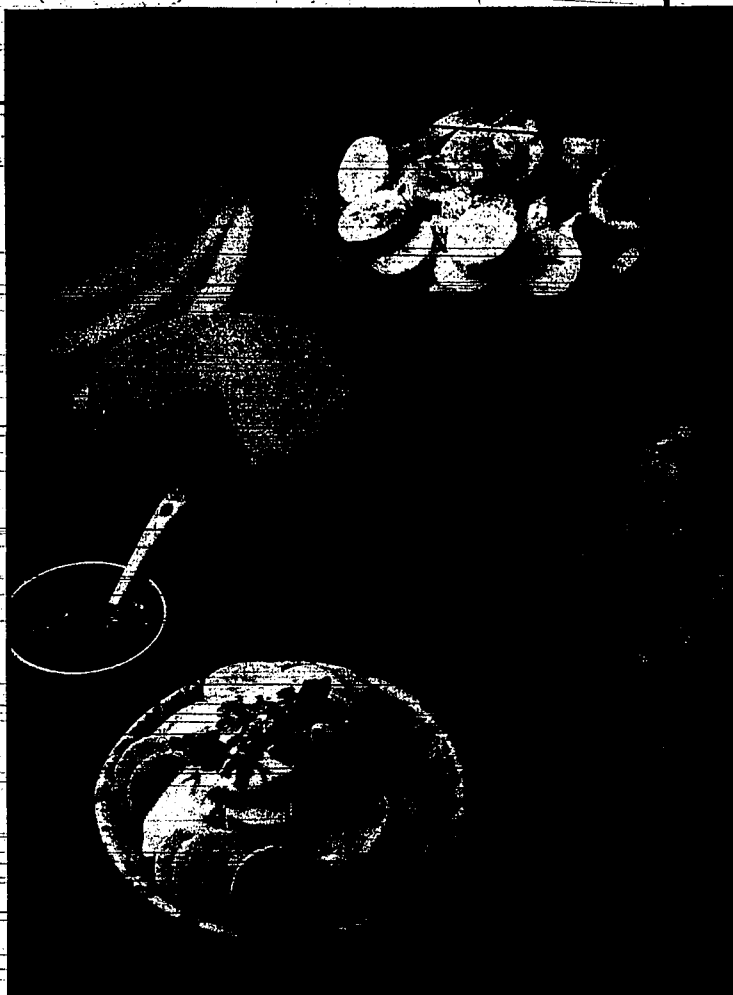

- 1 1/2 cups flour
- 1/2 cup cornmeal
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1 cup shredded Edam cheese (4 ounces)
- 1/2 cup cream-style cottage cheese
- 1/2 cup butter, melted

In large bowl combine flour, corn meal, sugar, baking powder and salt. In another bowl combine eggs, milk, 1/2 cup of the Edam cheese, the cottage cheese and butter; add to flour mixture. Mix just until moistened. Turn into 8-inch square cake dish (no greasing necessary). Smooth top; sprinkle evenly with the remaining Edam cheese. Bake in 350 degree oven 30 to 40 minutes until browned and springy to the touch. Invert onto rack, then invert again onto plate or board. Cut into 3-inch squares. Serve warm.

Makes 9, 3-inch squares.

FARMHOUSE CHEESE STRATA

- 5 to 6 ounces French bread, sliced 1/2-inch thick (1/2 of a 1-pound loaf)
- 3 cups shredded cheddar cheese (12-ounces)
- 5 eggs
- 1 1/2 cups milk
- 1 1/2 tablespoons coarse-grained mustard
- 1/4 teaspoon hot pepper sauce of the cheese. Continue layering bread and cheese, ending with cheese. In medium bowl combine remaining ingredients. Whisk to blend thoroughly. Slowly pour over bread and cheese. Press down lightly to saturate bread; cover. Let stand 1 hour, or refrigerate up to 8 hours. (If chilled, let stand at room temperature 45 minutes before baking.) Bake in 2-inch deep hot water bath in 350 degree oven 1 hour to 1 hour 15 minutes until set and browned. (Cover with aluminum foil, if needed, to prevent overbrowning.) Let stand 10 minutes before serving with wooden or plastic spoon.

BANOLA BREAKFAST

- 3 cups rolled oats
- 1 cup wheat germ
- 1 cup shredded coconut
- 1 cup walnut pieces
- 1/2 cup sesame seeds
- 1/2 cup honey
- 3 tablespoons molasses
- 1 cup raisins

Bananas - Milk, cream or yogurt - In 4-quart oblong baking dish combine all ingredients except raisins, bananas and milk; mix with wooden or plastic spoon. Bake in 300 degree oven until dry and toasted, stirring several times. Mix in raisins. Cool; store in airtight container. Serve with sliced bananas and milk, cream or yogurt. Makes about 7 cups cereal mixture.

Sometimes the old way is the best

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — In her 85 years, Marie Fuller has prepared a lot of family meals, but in this last year, she says she has pulled in her horns, so to speak. "I have quit trying to have family meals," she says, "there's just so many of us, by the time we get together."

Fuller says nowadays family gatherings are held at the home of her daughter, Ora Lee Wiseman. And, as to taking along something for the meal, she laughs and says: "I must admit, the last year, if there's anything to buy — I buy it."

Even so, when it comes to fixing everyday meals, she doesn't just heat up a TV dinner. She says she hasn't found any that taste good to her, and would rather cook her own food.

When she wants a baked potato, she puts two in the oven. "It's just fun to warm up the other one the next day in butter, and brown it," she says, "maybe it isn't good for you, but I like it that way."

She says she figures she has lived to be 85 years old eating this way, and is not going to cut out eating the things she likes. She tells her friends, "I've never gotten to this place, well for goodness sake, let's enjoy the rest of it too."

Meats and sweets, she says, have become less important to her, and she doesn't have a craving for either anymore. She says soups and salads have more appeal to her now.

She says she gets some "really fun" results by mixing two kinds of soup together. Sometimes she combines the thick and thin varieties.

A simple meal can also be creative, as evidenced by one she prepared for herself recently. She beat up an egg, added a little seasoned salt, put in part of a can of drained, water-packed tuna, and crumbled in about six crackers. After forming little patties, she browned them in butter.

"I'm kind of lazy about fixing these little things, but I think maybe that's what we need to do when we live alone," she says.

While she was growing up, her family lived on the Salmon tract, and didn't go to a store very often. They used what was on hand. She says she learned how to be resourceful when making a salad.

"We made homemade dressing when we lived out on the farm. The way I make my dressing now — I use Le Creme dressing and mix about half of that and salad dressing. Then I peel an apple and put it in; then I put whatever else I have — a handful of some kind of nuts, and if prunes are in season, they go in real well. Or, if celery is nice and fresh, you can use celery, or a banana or orange in it. That's the way we learned to cook out there, and that's the way I still cook."

About 15 years ago she came upon a recipe for Hobo Bread, baked in coffee tins. "I've nearly always had one or two of the cans in the refrigerator," she says. "It's just handy."

HOBO BREAD

- 4 teaspoons soda
 - 2 cups boiling water
 - 2 cups dark raisins
 - 4 cups flour
 - 2 cups sugar
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1 tablespoon oil
- Mix the soda and water together, and pour over the raisins. Let them stand overnight, without stirring. The next morning, sift together dry ingredients, and stir into the raisins. Add the oil and mix well with a spoon. (It is really thick.) Grease and flour three 1-pint coffee cans, and divide the batter into them, and bake at 350 degrees for 1 1/2 hour. Reduce heat to 325 degrees and bake another 1/2 hour. If necessary, toward the end, cover with foil to help prevent excessive browning. Test with a straw. Cooking time may need to be extended a little. Lay cans on side, and turn occasionally while cooling, loosen the bread. Be sure to do this.

"It freezes beautifully," she says. "Slice it and put on either butter or cream cheese. It can't be too rich, but it really is delicious and cheap."

Her next recipe, she says is "cookies for a lazy cook." See OLDSTYLE on Page C3

Calamari

Once fish bait, now a delicacy

By ALEX DOMINQUEZ
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Squid McNuggets may be a long way off, but the ugly little mollusks are finding their way onto the dinner plates of more and more Americans, alongside escargot and sushi, in these days of culinary adventures.

"Back in the late '70s you couldn't give squid away," says Bill Carroll, a squid pusher. "Now, a lot of restaurants have it on their menu. But most are calling it calamari." (The Italian word for squid is seppie, which you'll also find spelled "squid" because an unappreciated resource. "Mackerel, dogfish, monkfish, butterfish and squid were all species we found were under-utilized," Carroll says. "We determined squid had the greatest potential because there was a ready foreign market — waiting." But we knew the domestic market would be a tough nut to crack because it's not a traditional American food.")

Seminars and demonstrations were given to teach American fishermen how to catch the little white, tube-like mollusk. Once U.S. fishermen knew how to harvest it, joint growing popularity of ethnic and specialty foods, squid is becoming more accepted and a thriving U.S. industry has grown from scratch over the past decade.

"And unlike many other specialty foods, squid is cheap and plentiful, as well as nutritious.

Squid has long been harvested in U.S. waters, but mostly by foreign fishing fleets from Asia and the Mediterranean. However, when the U.S. extended its coastal boundaries to 200 miles in 1977 most foreign fishing fleets were banned from the rich U.S. waters, and suddenly squid became an untapped resource. "Mackerel, dogfish, monkfish, butterfish and squid were all species we found were under-utilized," Carroll says. "We determined squid had the greatest potential because there was a ready foreign market — waiting." But we knew the domestic market would be a tough nut to crack because it's not a traditional American food."

All the world's a slave to garlic

Mark Twain once said that Gilroy, Calif., during harvest was the only place in America where you can marinate a steak just by hanging it out on a clothesline.

Gilroy is the undisputed Garlic Capital of the world. They capitalize on this with an annual festival that has become so successful, that organizers had to turn away thousands this year.

"I can't imagine a world without garlic. So I think those folk in Gilroy for making it such a royal item in our pantry and giving us great recipes."

A whiff of garlic can bring a memory up from the depths so vividly that we are right there helping grandmother stir the spaghetti sauce or Aunt June can those garlic pickles or entering Louie's for pizza.

It's a staple in my kitchen. Fresh always, and most times those jars of chopped garlic are in the refrigerator door for emergencies.

There are a few simple recipes you might like to make ahead and keep on hand in the refrigerator or freezer that help when time is short (yes the holidays are breathing down our necks).

Remember the whole garlic is called a head and the individual parts are cloves. Garlic keeps best in the open. There are some interesting pottery containers you can set on your shelf with holes in them to let the garlic breathe, but an open topped jar works just as well.

When you find a special on garlic, stock up. An easy way to peel a garlic clove is to remove it from the head of garlic, cut off the stem end and smash it with the handle of your chopping knife. The clove will pop right out without tedious peeling.

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

By the way, if you're going to buy or ask Santa for a garlic press (one of those gadgets that mince or smash the cloves for a recipe) get the best you can. It will cost a bit more but it's worth it. I like the one with the little tool that cleans out all those holes that get clogged with garlic. I've been known to lose my temper trying to pick pieces out with toothpicks.

GARLIC BUTTER

Use a cube of butter, softened but not melted. 2 or 3 cloves of garlic, pressed or finely minced with a knife. All you do is cream the butter and add the garlic.

This keeps in the freezer a long time. You can roll it and wrap it in clear freezer wrap, then cut off rounds for recipes or dinner plates.

You can also add herbs and spices to this, like basil or dill or chives or even shredded cheeses. Spread these on your french bread and toast in the oven for a great treat.

A piece of garlic butter floating on top of a hot soup adds interest or put some on top of your steamed veggies.

There's a famous garlic sauce that really jazzes up sandwiches or used as dip for fresh veggies (crudités) or breads. It's called Aioli and is like a garlic mayonnaise. It keeps like an opened jar of mayonnaise in the refrigerator for a long time.

AIOLI

- 4 large cloves fresh garlic
 - 2 large egg yolks
 - 1 teaspoon dry mustard
 - 1/4 teaspoon salt
 - 1/4 teaspoon pepper, preferably white
 - 1 cup olive oil (or mix it with some salad oil)
 - 1 1/2 tablespoons lemon juice, preferably fresh
- Everything should be at room temperature. Combine the garlic, egg yolks, mustard and salt and pepper in a blender. Cover and blend at medium until smooth.
- With motor still running, remove the cover and slowly pour in half the oil in a thin steady stream. Stop the motor and scrape down the sides.
- Cover again and add the lemon juice and then the remaining oil in a slow steady stream. This will thicken and you can stop a couple of times and scrape the sides down.
- Try it with cold or hot fish or meats.
- This next recipe is from the "Garlic Lovers Cookbook" from Gilroy. You can find it in local bookstores.

This is just I've done in the summer, but really think it will be good this winter when we step far from home during cross country skiing.

COUNTRY PICNIC LOAF

- 1 round loaf sourdough
- 3 garlic cloves, chopped fine
- 1 rod onion, medium-sized and chopped fine
- 4 tablespoons olive oil
- 6 eggs, whipped

Onion soup, classic or lightweight, cuts nip of fall nights

By Newaday

On a chilly night, after the theater, or while watching football on television, enjoy onion soup. The warming classic is rich and deep, topped with toasted French bread and melted cheese.

If you want the essence of onions, but you don't want such a heavy approach, try a lightened-up version based on chicken instead of beef broth, and a topping of whipped egg whites flavored with Parmesan cheese, a sort of savory floating island, instead of the gooey crouton.

While the second version is lower in cholesterol and fat, it's primarily the flavor that takes a turn to the light. The source of inspiration for the airy version is Madeleine Kamman, the noted French cooking teacher and author.

CLASSIC ONION SOUP

- 4 tablespoons butter
- 7 cups sliced Bermuda or Spanish onions, about 3 large onions
- Pinch sugar
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1/2 cup red wine
- 6 cups beef broth
- 1 bay leaf
- 1 teaspoon thyme
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1 egg yolk, lightly beaten
- 2 tablespoons cognac

6 1-inch-thick slices French bread, toasted

1 1/2 cups shredded Gruyere cheese

1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Melt butter over low heat, add onions and cook over low heat about 45 minutes or until very tender but still golden. Turn up heat slightly, add sugar and cook, stirring, until browned, another few minutes. Add garlic and cook another minute, then pour in wine and cook over high heat 3 to 4 minutes. Add broth, bay leaf and thyme, and cook over low heat another 30 minutes. Taste and add salt and pepper as needed.

To serve, reheat over low heat, if necessary. Stir a small amount of hot broth into the egg yolk and add this to the soup, stirring well. Add cognac and divide among four ovenproof bowls. Top with bread, then cheese. Run under broiler briefly until bubbly. Makes 4 servings.

LIGHTWEIGHT ONION SOUP

- 3 tablespoons olive oil
 - 1 tablespoon butter
 - 7 cups sliced Bermuda or Spanish onions (about 3 large onions)
 - 2 cloves garlic, minced
 - 1/2 cup white wine
 - 6 cups chicken broth
 - 1 bay leaf
 - 1 teaspoon thyme
 - Salt and pepper to taste
 - 3 egg whites
 - About 1/2 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
- Heat oil and butter over low heat; add onions and cook over low heat

45 minutes or until very tender. Add garlic and cook 1 minute, then pour in wine and cook over high heat 2 to 3 minutes.

Add broth, bay leaf and thyme, reduce heat, and cook about 30 minutes. Taste, and add salt and pepper as needed.

To serve, reheat over low heat as needed. Whip egg whites until they hold stiff peaks, seasoning with salt and pepper. Divide soup among four ovenproof bowls. Make an attractive scoop of egg whites and place on top of each bowl. Sprinkle Parmesan on top of the whites and run under the broiler until golden. Makes 4 servings.

Squid

Continued from Page C1 ventures with foreign processors were set up, and now a domestic processing industry has emerged.

Richard Lord, information officer for the Fulton Fish Market in Manhattan, has watched the trend from its infancy. Lord, who gives cooking demonstrations to promote various seafoods, also knows about those wary stars.

"I was cooking squid at a demonstration in Milford, Conn., and a woman came up and asked me, 'Is this shrimp?'" Lord recalls. "She was shocked when I said it was squid. She asked her husband to give her without telling her what it was. She liked it. People are discovering it and it's starting to get into the mainstream, at least in the New York area."

Lord credits the popularity of Chinese and Italian food with much of the rise in squid sales, finding that as people order it in restaurants they then want to try serving it at home.

One of the most popular ways to prepare squid is to cut the tube-like mantle or body portion, into rings. The rings are then dipped in a batter or rolled in bread crumbs and fried. Squid also is frequently steamed and served cold in salads.

Anthony Grippo, co-owner of the North American Lobster Company and B-G Lobster and Shrimp Corp., which are based in New Jersey and New York, respectively, is one seafood wholesaler who has benefited from the squid's growing popularity.

Grippo estimates he will sell 3.5 million pounds of squid this year, all of it in the United States, compared with 2 million pounds last year and less than 100,000 pounds in 1979.

"It's been selling really strong for the last eight years," Grippo says. "Before that, we imported it from Taiwan because it wasn't produced locally."

"Actually it's a terrific food. For the meat you get a good buy, because in other foods there's bone or skin you throw away, but with squid there's almost no waste. It's a good value."

Unlike many other seafoods, squid is inexpensive and that has helped contribute to its increased demand. It is usually sold at just under $2 a pound and often can be found for much less.

Like many other seafoods, squid has all the health benefits commonly associated with fish. It's low in calories, very low in fat and high in protein.

One of the problems, seafood industry officials say, is that most people don't know how to clean squid. However, all that has to be done is to remove the head and tentacles — which are eaten — from the mantle, and then remove a clear, plastic-like bone from the mantle.

"People really want more seafood, the only problem is they don't know how to prepare it," says Mary Ellen Gowin of Wakefern Foods, which operates and supplies Shop-Rite supermarkets in the New Jersey area. "So we've started training our personnel so they can help our customers."

In addition to frozen squid, which Wakefern has always supplied, several Shop-Rites have begun selling squid fresh in their deli counters or in specialized seafood departments.

"It really has become more popular," Gowin says. "We find as we merchandise different kinds of seafood, there's a demand for it and we're getting good repeat business."

On a national level, one of the first big buyers of squid, according to Carroll, was Red Lobster Restaurants, the nationwide seafood chain, which purchased 300,000 pounds of squid last year. The restaurant put calamari rings on its menu in 1981 as an appetizer and the item immediately established a foothold.

"Sometimes older appetizers die out as new ones are introduced," says Dick Monroe, director of public relations for Red Lobster. "But calamari's popularity has continued to hold its own for six years now."

The mass media also has discovered squid. It is mentioned in a Barlees & James wine cooler commercial, although in a disparaging way. The thrust of the commercial is that their product can even make newfangled foods like squid taste better.

And a recent headline in Better Homes and Gardens magazine reads, "Elegant Stuffed Calamari." You've enjoyed calamari in restaurants. Now, you can make this exquisite and mild-flavored seafood at home.

"Actually, squid is almost in vogue," Grippo says.

1 medium green pepper, cored, seeded and chopped

1 can (3-ounce) small shrimp

3/4 cup leftover ham or pork, chopped

8 slices of hard Italian salami, sliced and diced

2 to 3 dashes dehydrated garlic powder

1 teaspoon chili powder

6 slices Monterey or American Swiss cheese

Slice the loaf of sourdough bread in half horizontally and scoop out enough bread of both sections with a sharp knife to form a dish-like loaf.

Sprinkle bottom loaf inside with garlic and onion and then drizzle olive oil over all. Set aside.

Using a non-stick frying pan sprayed with non-stick vegetable shortening, saute the whipped eggs. Add the green pepper and then stir in shrimp, ham or pork and salami. When the eggs are almost set, add the garlic powder, chili powder and pepper. Stir until all ingredients are hot and eggs have set.

Spoon this mixture over the garlic and onions in the bottom half of loaf, filling it completely. Cover with overlapping slices of cheese and top with remaining top half of bread. Wrap tightly in foil and keep warm. You can reheat this in a 350 degree oven and slice in pie-shaped wedges. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Enjoy!

Cold days call for hot potato salads

HOT POTATO-SAUUSAGE SALAD

- 1 package potatoes au gratin mix
- 1/4 cup sliced green onions
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 2 1/2 cups water
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 lb. German-type smoked sausage, rings or links
- 1/4 cup vinegar

In a large saucepan, saute onions in oil for two minutes. Add water, potatoes, cheese sauce mix and sugar, mixing until sauce is smooth. Bring to boil. Add sausage. Cover and simmer 25 minutes or until potatoes are tender. Remove and slice sausage. Stir vinegar into potatoes. Layer potatoes in serving dish with sausage slices. Serve warm. Makes 5 to 6 servings.

Microwave directions: Place onions and oil in microwave-proof casserole. Cover and microwave on full power for 1 minute. Stir in water, increasing amount to 3 cups. Cover and microwave on high 5 to 6 minutes or until boiling. Add potatoes au gratin mix, cheese sauce mix and sugar, stirring until sauce is smooth. Add sausage. Cover and microwave on high 20 to 25 minutes or until potatoes are tender. Rotate dish a quarter turn every 5 minutes. Continue as directed above.

Add a continental flair to a dinner menu with this warm, tangy salad featuring Idahoan Scaloped Potatoes. It especially goes well with broiled pork chops or baked ham.

FRENCH-STYLE POTATO SALAD

- 2 1/2 cups boiling water
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 2 tablespoons white wine vinegar

Microwave method: Bring water to boil in microwave-proof casserole, increasing amount to 3 cups. Stir in scalloped potatoes including seasoned sauce mix. Cover and microwave on full power 20 minutes or until potatoes are tender. Stir after 5 minutes. Continue as directed above.

Mondavi goes for an upscale design

By The Los Angeles Times

The Robert Mondavi Winery recently announced a reformulation of its low-end wines. The change involves adding varietal-grape designations to what had been simply called red, white and rose.

The move comes at a time when analysts project that much of the future growth in California table wines will be in the premium and super-premium categories, areas where Mondavi is well-represented. Greater attention to their mass-ket product, though, is likely to trigger other image improvements by competitors in the overall jug wine segment.

First introduced in 1977, Mondavi's 1.5-liter bottles were an attempt to offer a better-value jug at a price competitive, but not in step, with the stalwarts in the category such as E&J Gallo and Sebastiani.

Several devices were used to differentiate the products, including the use of a magnum bottle, vintage dating and a cork closure — novelties at the time.

- 1 cup butter
 - 1 1/2 cups powdered sugar
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla
 - 2 cups flour
 - 1 teaspoon soda
 - 1 teaspoon cream of tartar
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1 egg
- Cream together the butter, egg, salt and vanilla. Combine the flour, soda, cream of tartar and salt. Add this to the other mixture. Mix well, and divide in half. Form into rolls about 2 inches thick and wrap them in waxed paper. Refrigerate for up to about one week, and bake when desired, but not right away. Slice 1/2-inch thick, and bake on ungreased cookie sheet at 350 degrees for about 8 to 10 minutes. Watch they don't get too brown. Fuller puts either a few slivered almonds or whole almonds on top before baking.

Fuller advises against substituting margarine for the butter, because it makes a difference in the flavor. Next is a recipe for beans she has used for 20 years, she says she and her late husband, Orrin, enjoyed eating at their summer cabin, as well as at home. It is one she found in an Idaho Historical Society Auxiliary cookbook. The recipe is one that Idaho's Sen. Fred T. DuBois gave to the chef of the U.S. Senate. Sen. DuBois went to Washington in 1891, so this recipe has been around awhile.

SENATOR DUBOIS' BEAN SOUP

- 2 1/2 quarts water
- 5 ounces sliced ham-hock or a couple of slices of bacon (Fuller always uses the ham hock)

- 1 1/2 cups of washed navy beans, soaked overnight
- 3 tablespoons diced onion
- 1 cup mashed potatoes
- 1 teaspoon chopped celery
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1 teaspoon each of salt and pepper

Braise the onion in the butter until it is slightly brown. Combine all the ingredients in a heavy Dutch oven. Cover and simmer slowly, about 2 1/2 hours. "I like the thick soups too," she says, "but this is not as thick as the others, and it really is good. And, the mashed potato bit — you can either keep a cup of mashed potatoes to use, or mix up the packaged ones (instant potatoes). It thickens it a little bit, but not very much."

CLAM CHOWDER

- 2 slices bacon, diced
- 1 onion, chopped
- 1 large stalk celery, diced
- 3 large potatoes, diced
- 1 teaspoon seasoned salt
- 1 quart half and half
- 1 can clams
- 1 can shrimp
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 tablespoons butter

Fry the bacon and onion until golden. Add the potatoes, celery and water, and cook covered until the potatoes are tender. Then add half and half, clams and shrimp and heat. Blend together the flour and butter and add a little of the soup liquid to it to make it easier to mix. Add to chowder and heat — but don't boil very much, until the flour cooks, and chowder is slightly thickened.

She says lately she has been adding the shrimp and clams last, because she found they toughen up if cooked very much. When fixing this for her family, she increases the recipe. Everything but the clams and shrimp and half and half can be prepared the day before, cooled and refrigerated. The next day, heat it, and add those ingredients. This freezes beautifully, too.

She says her family really loves the shrimp salad she makes to go with the clam chowder.

SHRIMP SALAD

Cut or shred up about a half of small lettuce, add a can of small shrimp, about 1/2 can of ripe olives and just enough mayonnaise to mix it. Serve immediately after preparation.

Home/garden

Think of tulip beds on rainy fall days

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Now is a fine time to plant tulip bulbs to bloom in April (the great "Red Emperor" and its allies and the Darwin Hybrids, bred by crossing T. fosteriana and the Darwins) and May (the late-blooming cottage and breeder tulips).

In Washington the best buy for most gardeners is the Darwin Hybrid group, and of these my own favorite is "Jewel of Spring," a 20th-century yellow verging on ivory flower with a light edge of red—this red sometimes is not easily seen and is never conspicuous, so the effect is that of a great goblet of luminous color.

It consorts happily with pink azaleas, and is as permanent as any tulip I have tried. In good, well-drained soils in the sun, where the tulip leaves are allowed to die down naturally, it will come up every year without loss of size for years. I have a top left that has been in the same spot 15 years.

Probably all tulips of this hybrid group have strong constitutions, though none has lasted quite so long as "Jewel of Spring" with me. A superb large early tulip of T. fosteriana breeding is the white "Purissima," sometimes called "White Emperor."

The well-known vermilion "Red Emperor" is also very large and with some gardeners (not me) it actually increases. It blooms early in April in sheltered sunny spots with the daffodils and is usually gone before the azaleas are in full bloom (about April 25).

This may be just as well, as its brilliance is not always admired with softer colors. There is probably no tulip now on the market that is not lovely in itself. Sometimes I have planted single bulbs of a variety just to see what they look like, and out of 100 or so kinds I have not found one I did not like.

There is a tremendous shortage of very late tulips, possibly because gardeners want tulips early rather than late. The only one I can think of that will usually bloom with tall bearded irises is the breeder "Dillenburg" and its sport, "Orange Parrot." These have the additional merit of being intensely perfumed, which few tulips are.

It rarely occurs to the gardener, but tulips of the tougher sort ("Jewel of Spring" is typical) do rather well in thin grass in half shade, such as 20 feet from the trunk of an old oak where the ground is wetter but not much the kind of place where azaleas thrive.

In such places they look fine if planted with a light hand, and not too many. In a 40-foot square backed by azaleas and ornamentals, I have maybe 15 or 20 tough tulips rather widely spaced, each one perhaps three feet from the next, but not mathematically spaced. Somewhat like a few cows in a pasture.

I have had trouble, for some reason, finding Tulipa sprengeri, a beautiful smallish red-tawny flower. It is probably best raised from seed; once you find a source for seed. It is beautiful in short grass.

Naturally tulips in grass are not possible where the grass is mowed before summer, and the large tulips, even when thinly planted, do not look good in natural woodlands, and are best in quite artificial surroundings, as in those small woody azalea patches in front of city houses.

A number of gardeners fail to get daffodil bulbs in the ground in September (which I prefer) or October. I have planted dormant daffodil bulbs as late as February, which is fairly outrageous, and flowers the first year were on extremely short stems. Still, it's better than not planting them at all; if you should discover some in a bag you overlooked.

The eminent Victorian gardener William Robinson was the first to make popular the planting of daffodils in great drifts in the woods. One year he planted 60,000, another year 80,000, and another year 100,000, so he had plenty of daffodils. Sometimes these were not planted until March, a horrendous thing, but they settled down after a year or two and performed admirably.

Of course daffodils for naturalizing are very tough varieties, not the great "bouncing beauties of the show bench. One year I left a good many bulbs of the somewhat raggedy (but with a totally gorgeous disposition) old pink "Mrs. R.O. Backhouse," on top of the ground.

Raising humidity will improve plant growth

Most indoor plants grow best if the relative humidity is 50 percent or higher in the home. When our homes are heated during the winter the humidity can drop well below that level, increasing the humidity will not only improve plant growth, but improve our own personal comfort.

There are several ways to increase the humidity. The most effective is to use a humidifier. This is a simple machine available at most drug, hardware and department stores. It evaporates water from a reservoir, converting it into water vapor. As the amount of water vapor in the air increases, the relative humidity increases.

Humidifiers are very similar to vaporizers except that they do not heat the water to produce steam. Humidifiers are safer to use around plants or small children. However, vaporizers can also be used for generally raising the humidity in the home. Most humidifiers do not have any automatic on/off controls. They simply operate as long as they are plugged in and filled with water.

Some more expensive models have humidistats which measure the humidity level and automatically turn on and off at a preset humidity. These models are generally only available in larger stores and mail order catalogs.

Clothes dryers can add humidity to the home if the vent hose is disconnected so the moist air is exhausted inside rather than outside. To avoid the lint blowing into the house, fasten a nylon stocking over the outlet pipe or hose with a rubber band.

If you use a wood burning stove for heating, place a pan of water on top of the stove as it evaporates. Put a cinnamon stick in the water to add a spicy fragrance to the air. When you take a shower and steam up the bathroom, open the door and let the moist air filter into the rest of the house rather than exhausting it outside with a fan.

Since plants add humidity to the atmosphere through their leaves, placing them in groups will raise the humidity around them. You can also place a tray under plants and keep water in the tray to add another source of evaporation. Pebbles can be placed on the tray with the pots on top of the pebbles to raise them above the water level.

Computers lend accuracy to do-it-yourself home projects

By LOU DOLINAR
Newsday

Frank and Sahron Schlipf knew what they wanted in their new master bathroom — they just weren't sure they had all the details right. What they wanted was a typical luxury upgrade. A full-sized oval whirlpool, a separate stall shower, and a "dry vanity" in addition to the double sink and cabinet. Avid do-it-yourself buffs, Sharon designed and Frank planned to build the new addition. But did they have it right?

When they walked into their local plumbing supply house, they got a pleasant surprise: A computer looked over their shoulders, so to speak, making sure they optimized space and didn't commit any blunders common to amateur remodelers. They were using a service offered by a firm called Design Plus Inc.

The Pennsylvania firm was recently bought by Ejer, a leading manufacturer of bathroom fixtures. The service costs $300, $200 of which was applied to fixtures purchased after the design was accepted and is available at selected plumbing supply houses.

"We didn't want to go the route of a full interior designer," Sharon Schlipf said. But the computer service "came up with a couple of things. They laid out the vanity better, and utilized the space better."

That, in a nutshell, is why a homeowner or tradesman would want to use a computerized design service, says Jerry Katz, owner of a fixture and plumbing firm. The service, he says, does not replace designers, but rather brings a professional edge to a section of the home-improvement market not widely served. "The do-it-yourself market is one part of this group."

The other is plumbing. Instead of hiring a general contractor who has an in-house design service, a plumber — who handles most of the work in a bathroom anyway — can offer competent design in low- and medium-priced bathrooms. He serves as the general contractor, subcontracting out tile and structural work.

Ken Kringle, head of Design Plus, stresses that mere competence is beyond the skills of many people. "We see a lot of bad design. I remember one client who came up with a kitchen in which the only way you could open up the refrigerator was to pull it out from the wall and turn it halfway to the left. Another one: the only way to get to the kitchen was to jump over a countertop." More commonly, the firm corrects doors that open in the wrong direction and inadequate space for fixtures such as toilets.

Design Plus starts with a rough dimensional layout of the existing bathroom, provided by the homeowner or tradesman. Besides the size of the room, these layouts show the location of existing drain and supply lines. Typically, a homeowner can save a bundle if plumbing lines don't have to be relocated. Homeowners then fill out a five-page questionnaire on color and style preferences, mood (romantic, formal, informal), material preferences, fixtures and so forth.

From there, the approach varies according to the outlet that subscribes to the service, according to Kringle. Some just ship the questionnaire, and rough plumbing sketch off to the service. Katz, on the other hand, usually takes a shot at a new floor plan himself, in consultation with the homeowners.

Then the whole package is shipped off to Design Plus, where it is input into a sophisticated Computer Aided Design (CAD) program. The system has been refined since 1981.

The computer functions like a drafting table, and then some. Various stock designs for cabinets, fixtures and such are stored in its memory, and the firm's technicians can select and rearrange these on screen, in much the same fashion as you'd rearrange furniture in a room. A similar service is available for kitchens.

But electronic drafting is old-hat plenty of architects, contractors and even some home centers use computers to draw floor plans. Design Plus goes further: they red-flag potential problems like doors that swing in the wrong direction, for example, or inadequate clearances around toilets. "The plan is given an overall rating for function. Too low, and it's back to the drawing board."

lects ceramic tile, wallpaper, paint, even towels, in complementary colors.

Bear in mind this is all happening on one "view," the floor plan, on-screen. When the process is finished, the computer produces a number of other drawings: elevations of cabinets and fixtures, and most important, a three-dimensional overview of the entire room, which is then hand-colored. A sample board, with towel swatches, tile and paint chips and wallpaper samples, is included, along with a printout of manufacturers and model numbers.

"The 3-D view, from the top, looked great. Until then we had a vague idea of what we were doing. This showed us exactly how it would look," Frank Schlipf said.

If there is any weakness in this system, it is less a function of the design than of the shopping list of manufacturers provided. Only a handful of firms in the bath and accessory field are named. Ejer being the main plumbing supplier, Schlipf says, though, that she didn't feel compelled to stick to the list.

bought a different style of cabinetry from a supplier who was not on the recommended list.

"We're starting to expand the selection," said Kringle, particularly for wall and floorcoverings. For do-it-yourself buffs, there's another potential problem with this service: While it provides plans, it does not provide a plumbing sketch, specifying the layout and type of pipes used. For major remodeling work, such sketches must be filed and approved by local building departments. For the Schlipfs, it was Katz, not the computer, who provided this additional detail.

Letters of thanks

Election coverage appreciated in Heyburn
 I would personally like to thank The Times-News for their excellent coverage of the Heyburn city elections. It was a very close election and it was important for the voters to be well-informed. The attention that your paper has given to the city of Heyburn has not gone unnoticed.
 I would also like to thank the voters who elected me for a second term among the very qualified candidates for the position.
 There are many important issues that will come before the city council in the next few months and I will try to represent the residents of Heyburn and voice their wishes and concern. Once again, thank you.

Abused woman now faces blackmail

DEAR ABBY: My sister, "Nell," is about to divorce "Jim," who was a miserable abusive husband. Jim wants another chance, but Nell has given him more chances than she can count. Listen to this: Before Nell married Jim, she told him that when she was a child, she had been sexually abused by our father.

How can we prevent Jim from telling our mother now?

She thought Jim had a right to know in order to help him understand any residual hangups she may have suffered from that terrible experience. Nell never told our mother because our father threatened to kill her if she told anyone. Jim told Nell if she goes through with the divorce, he will tell our mother everything.

Abby, Mother would be devastated and it would be the end of their marriage. It would also hurt our father professionally and socially if this ever got out.

With the help of a therapist, Nell was able to overcome the psychological damage; forgive our father, and felt no need to tell our mother.

— OLD WOUNDS
DEAR OLD WOUNDS: I recommend that you choose the lesser of the two evils.

First, explain your dilemma to your father in order to prepare him to deal with the situation when you disclose this blackmail plot to your mother. It won't be easy, but it's far better than forcing your sister to stay married to Jim.

DEAR ABBY: You recently printed a letter from a person troubled by an 84-year-old abusive mother. In your reply you said, "Abused children usually abuse their own children."

Abby, that is not true. The majority of people who were abused as children do NOT abuse their own children because they remember well the pain they suffered at the hands of abusive parents.

Perpetuating the cycles of abuse is not inevitable, and to suggest otherwise does a grave injustice to the millions of parents out there who have overcome their own sad histories to give their own children the loving childhoods they did not have themselves.

— BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN THERE: You are absolutely right. I know better. I meant to say, "Most child abusers were themselves abused as children." Mea culpa for that goof. Thanks to you — and the many other careful readers who wrote to correct me.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's company is having a three-day weekend meeting at a resort hotel in the city in which we live. There are no planned evening activities, and spouses are not invited.

They have reserved a hotel room for my husband, and he insists on staying there rather than at home.

Also, he insists on my staying at home and not joining him at the end of the work day. I don't agree.

What are your thoughts?

— RESENTFUL

DEAR RESENTFUL: I don't blame you for feeling resentful. If your husband wants to attend meetings at a nearby resort hotel, fine. But he should come home to sleep.

Rams, Tigers will be pacesetters in Gem State Conference

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

Gem State

Whenever things change in the girls' basketball program at Post Falls, the Highland High School, they seem to change for the better.

With three players 6 feet or taller, the Rams — winners of three of the last five Gem State Conference championships — are favored to do so again by the league's coaches despite losing their top two scorers and two of their three top rebounders to graduation last spring.

The league's coaches say that if anybody challenges the Rams, it will be defending conference champion Idaho Falls, which returns its top two scorers and its best rebounder from a year ago.

How that bodes of the other eight teams in the far-flung conference is problematical since the GSC is split into two regions, in which its members will compete to qualify for the state Class A-I tournament in Post Falls in February. Highland is grouped with Twin Falls, Minico and Pocatello in Region III, along with Burley, which is not a conference member. Idaho Falls, Skyline, Bonneville and Idaho Falls High schools, Madison of Rimbürg, Blackfoot and Rigby make up Region IV. Both regions will send two teams to the state tourney.

The Region III champion Rams are coming off a 20-5 season in which they handled every conference opponent quite handily — except Idaho Falls.

"We're a very senior-oriented team," says 10-year Coach Randy Rehner. "The majority of our players have seen a great deal of playing time last year. We are tall on the front line and all three 6-footers played extensively. This team really has a drive and will be prepared to win."

The three returning starters are Carina Hoffman, a 6-foot, 1-inch senior center; Shelley Roberts, a 5-7 senior forward, and Mary Roberts, a 5-5 senior guard. None of the three averaged in double figures last season, but they didn't have to with Highland's balanced motion offense.

The two other 6-footers on the roster are Marcia Yastrop, a 6-2 senior forward who averaged 6 points and 5 rebounds in a reserve role last year, and Heather Williams, a 6-2 senior center who didn't start last season.

The Rams lost two of their three regular guards to graduation, however, which is a concern to Rehner.

"We need some people to take over the responsibility of controlling the ball and the tempo in our games," he says.

The top candidates for that job are both 5-4 seniors, Vicki Parker and Mori Dunn.

Idaho Falls

Like the Rams, the Tigers will have no problem with size. Two of Idaho Falls' returning starters are 5-10 and 5-11, respectively, and eighth-year coach Norm Kane has a junior and a senior coming up who are over 6-0.

"If there's a weakness for us, it's that we only have fair shooters," he says. "But we have a lot of experience, height, fair quickness and depth. Most important, I think, is that the girls are enthusiastic."

Back from last year's 20-7 Region IV championship squad are three starters: Brenda Evans, a 5-8 senior guard; Angie Trego, a 5-10 senior forward, and Mikki Kane, a 5-11 junior forward who averaged 10.5 points and 8 rebounds a year ago.

Joining them from the junior varsity will be Brenda Longhurst, a 6-1 junior center, and Chris Wilcox, a 6-0 junior center, along with Jamie Neville, a 5-9 senior forward; Lisa Hart, a 5-7 senior guard; Benny Young, a 5-6 junior guard; and Jena Griffin, a 5-6 junior guard.

Madison, starting its third year in the league, has been nearly as successful in A-1 as it was in A-2, largely because there aren't many teams that can handle six-year coach Garry Parkinson's double-post offense. And because Parkinson can consistently find two players to fit it.

This year is no exception, with 6-10 senior Vanessa Lee and 6-1 senior Wendy Hendricks, both returning starters, back to control the middle for the Bobcats. Lee averaged 10 points a game last season; Hendricks 8.

"We have fair overall height and fair overall quickness," says Parkinson, whose team finished 19-7 last year. "We have experience in 10 players, though, and we have had state tournament experience, which helps."

Madison returns all five starters from last year, including sharpshooting 5-9 senior guard Nikki Sue Baldwin, who averaged 14 points last season. The other in-

Castleford slightly favored for MVC title over Oakley

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

MVC

Four coaches think Castleford will win the Magic Valley Conference's girls' basketball title this winter while two others see Oakley and the last expects a toss-up with the champion showing up late in the year.

One who expects Castleford to do well is Wolves' Coach Laurie Gandiaga, who has three full time and one part time starter back, the second tallest center in the conference and Vic Reynolds, who is one of the Pacific District's best all-around athletes.

On the other hand, Oakley Coach Don Tompkins, who has the tallest center and the tallest overall team maybe in the entire Magic Valley, calmly states "this is the best skilled and tallest teams overall since I began coaching at Oakley."

Castleford Gandiaga, whose team finished 9-11 a year ago, makes few bones about what she anticipates from her Wolves.

"We have five seniors, four of them returning starters. We have an average height of 5-7 and average speed for the height. The girls have a lot of varsity court time, she points out.

All that adds up, she continues, to "team unity, which will improve as we play more games together."

Reynolds provides excellent versatility as a 5-9 who can play post or the perimeter. She is joined by senior classmates Donna Houk, 6-7 wing; Shante Moore, 6-6 point guard, and 5-7 Diane Jordan, 5-7 post.

The tallest player is 6-foot junior Joan Heath while junior guard Cathy Ruffing, 5-4, usually plays guard but can swing.

The Wolves posted a 9-11 record last year and Gandiaga says she will keep them in a passing game offensively and 2-3 zone on defense.

Oakley Tompkins has been around the block in high school athletics a couple of times, when he pronounces the virtues of a team they pretty well are there.

On a 10-girl roster he lists only 5-4 Holly Archibald as being less than 5-6. And if Tompkins' assessments are correct, the toughest part about this crew is it has no seniors, seven juniors and two sophomores.

The Hornets' "twin towers" are 6-11 junior Robyn Wyatt and 6-11 sophomore Jennifer Hardy.

In descending order, Tompkins can call on 5-9 juniors Jennifer Smith and Lesia Gorringer or 5-8 sophomore Cheyenne Lowe.

Two 6-7 juniors are Stephanie Hale and Kristina Cramer. Junior guards, in addition to Hale, are 6-6 Lori Judd, 5-8 Sonja Orban and the 6-6 Archibald.

The major problem obviously is a lack of experience. Hall got a few starting class last year as a sophomore but the others were in a squad-player role.

Tompkins says he will stick with the shuffle on offense and keep his height in a zone.

Murrtaugh Former Coach Stacey Winn isn't the only person back in the Murrtaugh program.

So are all five starters, the whole bench and most of the ticket sellers back from last year's guard, and 5-7 Diane Jordan, 5-7 post.

"That's our biggest asset so far is having everyone back," Winn says. "Most of these girls have started as freshmen and have a lot of varsity experience."

Having said that, Winn reports he has just two seniors on this

Indians get coaches' nod in SCIC

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

It's just about an even split in the South-Central Idaho Conference girls' basketball race this year, with the league's coaches narrowly favoring Buhl over Mountain Home and defending league champion Burley.

Two teams have excellent depth, another has middling depth and two are extremely young and untried.

SCIC

Like last year, Buhl, Jerome and Mountain Home will compete among themselves for the District 4 Class A-2 title and the Magic Valley's single berth in the state A-2 tournament in Post Falls in February. Mountain Home plays with the A-1 schools of the Treasure Valley while Burley's post-season hopes are pinned to its head-to-head competition with the other A-1 teams of Region III, including Twin Falls and Minico.

Burley Fourth-year coach Gordon Kerbs loses only one person from last year's starting unit — but that's a notable loss. Hettie DeJong has taken her 21-point per game scoring average and 10-rebound norm to the College of Southern Idaho. She was a mainstay in the three-year reign of Kerbs, who now boasts a 42-28 record, including a league championship and a second-place finish in Region III with last year's 18-7 team.

Tallest among the returning starters is 5-foot, 10-inch Lauric Barnes, who averaged 6.8 points and 5 rebounds per game, while 5-9 Cindy Williams (8.1 points), is just behind. Donna Allen, 5-8, average 9.6 points last year while point guard Jennifer Beck, only a junior, averaged 8.3 points and eight assists per outing.

Also returning are 5-5 guard Jill Cornwell (1.3 points) and 5-10 junior Julie Peterson (2.4 points).

Newcomers seeking their first letters are 5-5 junior guard Kandy Theompson and 5-9 sophomore Karo Watterson.

"Our inside size and depth at the post position will not allow us to match up well with some of the teams," says Kerbs. "But if we continue to improve our inside game"

Balance of power shifting eastward in Canyon Conference

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

Canyon

Deelo High School's girls' basketball team didn't make a lot of noise in the Canyon Conference last year, but it's getting lots of attention this season.

The Hornets, who finished third in the league and third in the District 4 tournament last winter with a 16-9 record, are all-but unanimously chosen by the league's coaches to win it this year.

"They have great, enduring speed and intense desire to capture what they felt capable of last year," says Wendell Coach Bob Thackeray.

It's been two seasons since anybody except — two-time defending league and conference champion Kimberly and its perennial challenger, Glenns Ferry, made a run at the league title — long enough that many fans have forgotten that the Canyon Conference winner traditionally has trouble making it to state tournament.

Deelo's secret isn't hard to find: four returning starters — three of whom won all-conference honors a year ago.

"We have good experience and speed," says 12th-year coach Lynn Payne, who has players that will adept well to either the 1-2-2 ofense that he favors of the man-man offense which he sometimes uses. The question mark, if there is one, is whether he has the size to sustain his 2-3 zone defense.

"Our weakness is lack of height," he says. "Our tallest girl is 5-9."

His rival coaches in the Canyon Conference don't seem to think he'll need it, what with last year's sophomore sensation Angie Tanner, a 6-foot, 7-inch guard who averaged 14.7 points. Also back is point guard Julie Payne, a 5-8 senior, and both forwards: Tiffanee Peterson, a 5-8 senior who averaged 8 points last year, and Tracey Giles, another 5-8 senior.

The newcomers include three members of last year's varsity: 6-7 senior forward Kym Wells, 5-7 senior forward Kristin Made and 6-2 senior guard Molested Dayley. Five-7 junior swingman Melanie Jenkins is up from the junior varsity.

Glenns Ferry How much respect can one player generate in the Canyon Conference?

Consider the case of Pam Pember, Glenns Ferry's 6-1 senior center who was a crucial element in the Pilots' last two second-place finishes in the league and District 4 and in their straight trips to the state tournament.

Pember is one of two returning starters at Glenns Ferry and one of only three seniors on the team. But the league's coaches respect her ability.

Carey's combination of speed, experience make Northside choice

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

Norinside

Carey and Camas County return four and five starters, respectively, so it's not hard to figure out who the favorites in the Northside Conference girls' basketball race, will be this year.

The conference coaches put Carey on top, with Camas a solid second. Perhaps the major difference the coaches saw was on the bench where the Panthers will have two junors and three sophomores for spelling the regulars while the Mushers, a young team to begin with, will have mostly freshmen in reserve roles.

Carey Experience and maturity are the major attributes Coach Heber Kirkland assigns to this team. The Panthers, 11-7 a year ago, will be starting four seniors, headed by floor general Thur Rush, a 5-foot, 8-inch point guard. The forwards, 5-7 Denise Peterson, and 5-8 Jessie Taylor, are back along with Kristen Young, a 5-9 center.

A year ago Peterson averaged 6.4 points and 4.6 rebounds; Taylor 7.3 points and 6.8 rebounds, and Young 8.3 rebounds.

Although only a sophomore, Jennie Hendrickson has one varsity letter and last year averaged seven points and six rebounds.

The remainder of the crew will be built with Bobbie Whitty, a 5-8 junior center; Kim Wglard, 5-6 junior guard; Debbie Reay, 5-5 sophomore point, and Michelle Kelsey, 5-0 sophomore wing.

Kirkland says the team strength is having experience in all positions and he likes the way this bunch rebounds.

"We also have young players able to spell the regulars at every position," he points out.

Camas County The experience available to Camas County Coach Margaret

Dugan is amazing, considering she lists just one senior on the team. That is Crystal Milloy, a 5-7 guard, and the rest of the returning starters will come from the sophomore and junior classes.

The juniors are 5-8 Tiffany Dalin and 6-1 Tina Reed while the sophomores are 5-8 Jennifer Dugan and 5-9 Maria White.

Dugan is trying to install a passing game offensively and multiple defenses, although she says she leans more toward zones.

Backing up that fivesome will be the freshman crew of 5-5 Mickey Millers, 5-7 Joy Jones, 5-6 Debbie Martin, 5-4 Yonnie Peters, 5-2 Karen Robbins, 5-3 Heather Maden and 5-2 Jennie Denton.

"We going for the gold this year," says the coach despite the youth of her team.

Dietrich Dietrich is another of those teams who brings everyone back and, of course, is the youngest team of them all.

Spartans' motion offense this season. Pocatello

"We have a good attitude," says second-year coach Val Christensen, whose team finished 6-13 in its first season. "They will play together as a team — they're team-oriented. And I think our rebounding will be improved this year."

The problem is only one member of that team — 5-5 senior off-guard Tina Stroud — was a starter last season.

"We're going to have problems scoring from the perimeter," says Pocatello coach, "but our speed and quickness will be a question and so will experience."

Last year's Murtaugh High School football coach Lee Neumann, arrived this year as Pocatello High School girls' basketball coach.

Trouble is, there weren't a lot of basketball-players there to greet him.

"We have a lot of inexperience," Neumann, who lost four starters to graduation, including 6-10 senior forward Debbie Masak, the Gem State's conference's No. 4 scorer last season and its No. 2 rebounder.

STEVE BEDROSIAN
40-save season

Relief specialist Bedrosian captures Cy Young

By RICK WARNER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Philadelphia reliever Steve Bedrosian, who led the major leagues with 40 saves, won the National League Cy Young Award Tuesday by the slimmest margin in the award's history.

Bedrosian, who set a major-league record with saves in 13 consecutive appearances, edged Rick Sutcliffe of Chicago 57-56 in voting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. Rick Reuschel, who played for Pittsburgh and San Francisco, finished one point behind Sutcliffe in third place.

Baseball

place votes, five more than Sutcliffe but only one more than Reuschel. However, Sutcliffe received more second- and third-place votes than Bedrosian or Reuschel.

"This is the ultimate," Bedrosian said during a news conference at Veterans Stadium in Philadelphia. "The thing I'd like most is to be in the World Series someday, but don't get me wrong—I'm really excited about this and I'll never forget it as long as I live."

The closest election prior to this year was in 1981, when Fernando Valenzuela of Los Angeles beat Tom Seaver of Cincinnati by three points.

For winning the Cy Young, Bedrosian received a $100,000 bonus from the Phillies.

Bedrosian, whose two-year contract runs out at the end of 1988, made $950,000 last season. At the news conference, he was asked if he would try to renegotiate with Phillies President Bill Giles.

"Well, we're going out to dinner tonight," Bedrosian joked.

Bedrosian had a 5-3 record and earned run average of 2.83 in 1987. He struck out 74 and walked 28 in 89 innings. Despite his outstanding season, the Phillies finished tied for fourth in the National League East with an 80-82 record.

The 29-year-old right-hander was traded from Atlanta to Philadelphia on Dec. 10, 1985, for catcher Ozzie Virgil and pitcher Peter Smith. In his first season with the Phillies, Bedrosian had 29 saves along with an 8-6 record and 3.39 ERA.

"I think I gained a little bit of confidence with Bill Giles bringing me over here," he said. "The team had confidence in me and I worked hard."

Bedrosian spent five seasons in Atlanta, where he compiled a 34-39 record. In his final season with the Braves, he switched from relieving to starting and ended up with a 7-15 record and 3.89 ERA.

Short-staffed Pirates pull off comeback win against Trojans

By The Times-News

HAGERMAN — If ever a home opener figured to be in trouble, it was this one.

The Hagerman Pirates, who started the practice season with bright hopes, went against arch-rival Wendell with a five-girl crew and saw that melt to four when one fouled out with three minutes left in the second quarter. The second girl left the game on fouls with Wendell on top by three with 48 seconds left. But Nikki McCammon came up with a three-point goal and then a follow shot at the 10-second mark to cap a comeback that allowed the Pirates to hand new coach Jeff LaCroix a 41-39 non-conference decision.

Hagerman's woes started growing two weeks ago when one player quit and another announced he would leave the team to become an exchange student to Brazil. Another player walked out last week and a fourth quit Tuesday morning, leaving LaCroix with his iron-grip five.

Sally Wendell couldn't put the pesky pirates away although the win looked solid at 39-33 with a minute left. Cindy Aja's three-point starter led the comeback with 50 seconds left and McCammon's three-pointer tied it seven seconds later.

The teams battled through a couple of missed shots over the next 36 seconds until Jackie Yarborough, who ended the night with 16 points, tried a shot. It bounced away but McCammon was there to bail it back in.

The loss dropped the Trojans to 1-2 for the season.

Dietrich 32 KSV 27

DIETRICH — Dietrich turned to an early offense Tuesday night to inch away from a tight game and top a season-opening 32-27 Nantahala Conference girls' basketball decision over the Ketchum Sun-

Girls' basketball

Valley Community School Cutthroats.

Dietrich Coach Jim McCreeley tried to use a patient offense in the first half but a rash of turnovers held things to an 11-10 halftime count.

"We changed our game strategy," he said with a smile. "At halftime we told them to start looking at the basket after the first pass. At least we started getting shots instead of turnovers."

That allowed Dietrich to move ahead 20-16 at the end of the quarter and the Devils managed to stay there the rest of the night.

KIMBERLY — Andee Piliant tallied in a missed shot at the buzzer Tuesday night to lift the Kimberly Bulldogs to a 38-37 non-conference girls' basketball decision over the Shoshone Indians.

Kimberly now 2-0, got off to an early start, failing to score in the first quarter as the Indians moved ahead 8-0 and 21-14 by intermission. But Shoshone waited for Kimberly in the third quarter, scoring just two points as the Bulldogs moved ahead 35-23.

No more than three points separated the teams through the fourth quarter which finally ended on Piliant's shot.

Castelford 40 Murtaugh 14

CASTLEFORD — The Castelford Wolves limited Murtaugh to four points in the first half and never looked back in collecting a 40-14 Magic Valley Conference girls' basketball win Tuesday night.

The Wolves, 1-1 for the season and in conference games, weren't red hot themselves but still managed a 16-4 intermission lead before icing it with 12 third-quarter points. Murtaugh doubled its total with seven points in the final period.

The loss dropped the Devils to 0-2 for the season and 0-1 in MVC games.

Valley, Declo win at tourney

JEROME — Declo and Valley marked themselves teams to watch in the second night of the Magic Valley Invitational Girls' Basketball Tournament here Tuesday.

The Canyon Conference powerhouses rolled easily into the second round, Declo beating Gooding 56-13 while Valley was measuring Jerome 56-37 in a third game. Glenns Ferry pinned a 45-20 defeat on Rath River.

The tournament moves on to today with Filer meeting Gooding in a loser bracket game at 6:30 p.m. and Oakley and Declo colliding in a tourney semifinal game at 8 p.m.

There was little to tell about any of the games. Glenns Ferry, 3-1, simply took the inside away from O-2 Rath River, limiting the Trojans to nine points in the first three quarter while putting two girls in double figures offensively.

Gooding, 0-2, managed but eight points in falling behind 2-0 Declo through three periods while the Hornets put eight girls in the scoring column.

Valley, 2-0, jumped on O-2 Jerome 16-4 in the first quarter to pretty much settle all-Jerome-County confrontation.

Oklahoma's 29-10 victory over No. 12 Oklahoma State cost the Sooners the services of quarterback Jumal Rolle and fullback Lydell Carr for the rest of the season but earned them 36 of 60 first-place votes and 1,164 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Nebraska, which has been second to Oklahoma in every poll this season, defeated Iowa State 42-9 and received 15 first-place ballots for 1,137 points. Last week, Oklahoma led 38-15 in first-place votes and 1,173-1,137 in points.

The other nine first-place votes and 1,111 points went to Miami of Florida, which is No. 3 for the seventh consecutive week after defeating Miami of Ohio 54-3. Last week the Hurricanes had seven first-place votes and 1,108 points.

Two weeks ago, Oklahoma led Nebraska 40-13 in first-place votes and 1,176-1,134 in points. The previous week, it was 42-12 and 1,179-1,134 and the week before that 47-7 and 1,184-1,122.

The LSU Tigers also suffered their first setback of the season, losing to Alabama 22-10, and fell from fifth place to 10th.

The Second Ten consists of Alabama, Auburn, Michigan State, South Carolina, Penn State, Indiana, Oklahoma State, ity enough to pick the Pilots to finish second to Declo.

"We have some height, which will help us this year," says first-year Coach Doug Moore, who is replacing veteran mentor Ken Fast this season. "Pam Pembert will be a four-year letter winner, which will help with experience. I think our defense will help us this year. We will block out well and get a lot of rebounds."

Pembert, who averaged in double figures in both scoring and rebounding a year ago, will be joined by point guard Renate Cunningham, a 5-7 junior who played behind the steady Kelli King last season.

Renate Cunningham will help with the ball-handling this year, says Moore. "But we're slow-footed and our outside shooting is questionable, although it's getting better."

For that, Moore will depend upon juniors Heidi Labrum, a 5-6 guard, and Judy Hernandez, a 5-6 forward. The Pilots, who lost leading scorer and rebounder Barbara Johnson to graduation, will have some support for Pembert up front in Kelly Mitchell, a 5-11 senior center, and Jan Solosabal, a 5-8 senior forward.

This is the senior season for Lori Reed, Valley's do-it-all 5-7 guard who has been averaging in double figures in the basketball floor since she was a freshman. But Reed won't provide all of Valley's firepower this season.

"We have five girls with a lot of varsity experience," says first-year Viking Coach Rod Malone, who replaced two-year coach Frank Dehoney this season. "Topping the list is Lori Reed and Joy Schutte. Both are strong players inside and outside, good shooters and rebounders. The key to our success will depend on the amount of help we get from the other players."

Reed, who averaged 14 points, 8 rebounds and 4 assists last year, has been building toward this season for a long time. But Schutte was a surprise last year with her 10-point, 10-rebound average. At 6-0, the senior ranks with Glenn Ferry's Pembert as the league's dominant inside player.

Valley also has an experienced point guard in Mandy Holland, a 5-5 senior, and another returning starter in 5-4 senior guard Natasha Mechem.

But beyond that, it gets thin. "We do not have much playing experience on the bench and our physical condition is not as strong as I would like it to be," says Malone, who inherits a ballclub that finished fourth in both the Canyon Conference and the District 4 tournament a year ago.

Filer won the league championship three years ago with speed and defense, but it will be offense and rebounding that will fuel the Wildcats if they make a run at this season.

"The kids are really determined, and I'm first-year coach," Valerie VanLoosen, who took over from four-year coach Wade Quessell this season. "They're all hard workers and very coachable. They're learn-we could be a very competitive basketball team. We're still not a great rebounding team, but we have improved from last season."

Kerbs said a major plus is this group knows how to win, and they will compete in every game. We should have a well-balanced offensive attack. It's a hard-working group and should be an exciting team to watch."

Coaches' choice

Here's how the five South-Central Idaho Conference coaches see their league's prospects this season (first-place votes in parentheses; not all coaches voted):

- Team.....Points
1, Buhl (2) 14
2, Burley (2) 10
3, Mountain Home 10
4, Jerome 9
5, Wood River 7

Mountain Home
There isn't a lot of height around Mountain Home either, but fourth-year Coach Kim Myers figures defense and experience will make the Tigers a contender every night.

"I have a lot of defensive experience, a lot of discipline, and a lot of offensive experience," says Myers, whose team finished 5-15 a year ago. "The girls just want to get at it (the season)."

Buhl
With three starters returning and the junior class providing some rebounding size, incoming Coach Joe Shepard thinks these Indians can become a contender.

"We have good team depth," says Shepard, who replaced five-year coach Janet Smutny. "We can go nine or 10 deep without losing a lot of on-court efficiency. This group also can shoot well from the outside and are blessed with pretty good quickness."

ing a lot. It's an up-and-coming JV team with some size — 6-0, 5-10 — but we're young."

There are three returning starters, led by 5-11 senior center Amy Lewis and 5-10 senior forward Tina Triplett. Jill Parrott, a 6-3 senior, who plays off-guard, is the third.

Up from the JVs are Tammy Coon, a 5-11 junior forward, and Tereasa Nelson, a 5-6 junior who will play point guard.

"Our big problem is depth," says VanLoosen. "There are only eight on the varsity. That's all that stand up."

Wendell finished dead last in the Canyon Conference volleyball standings this season and then won the District 4 tournament. So why should last year's 5-17 finish be a problem for the basketball team?

"The girls have a high level of confidence and desire coming off the district volleyball championship," says Thackeray, in his third season as head coach in Wendell. "We have fair overall speed, with a couple of good, quickness players. With the addition of a couple of good JV players from last year and some new help in two transfers from out-of-state, we'll have some much-needed bench depth."

Kimberly
With Cindy Holcomb departed to Weber State and Audra Urie to the College of Southern Idaho, two of the best front-line high school players the Magic Valley has seen in awhile are erased from two-time defending league and district champion Kimberly's lineup.

"That has everybody bearish on Kimberly's prospects, except third-year Coach Wes Remaley."

"We have some strengths this year," says Remaley, whose team lost only once last season, that in the semifinals of the state A3 tournament. "We're going to be quick and aggressive."

But Remaley hastens to point out the Bulldogs' chief limitation. "We're very young."

So many different players saw court time for Kimberly last year, that Remaley actually lists seven starters as lost to graduation,

Gooding
Last season was the great aberration at Gooding, which during Coach Joleen Toome's previous 10 years had usually challenged for either the conference and district championship or both.

But the Senators were 0-22 last season, and are extremely anxious to reverse that trend.

"We have 10 players that have the desire, determination and want to have fun," says Toome. "And we have some quickness on defense."

 year's team, center Jana Watts, 5-10, and guard Shani Cummins, 5-7.
 "We should be quick and able to move the ball up and down the floor," Winn says. But he notes he likes to have the maturity of seniors for the long campaign and points out while Watts is 5-10, she doesn't rank among the tallest post players in the league.
 If the Huskies can get the ball off the backboard before it goes through the net, they will have a chance to improve on last year's 3-12 season.
 Coach Terry Dowd, who has posted a 66-56 career winning record, will fight this campaign with some veteran players but none over 6 feet, 8 inches in height. And he is in perhaps the tallest alignment in Magic Valley.

 One reason the Huskies' hopes are bright is the point guard play of Audra Merrill, 5-5, who also can shift to the wing. She averaged 10 points per game last year. Ranny Price is the tallest at 5-8 and plays post along with Julie Nelson, 5-6 who also plays inside. Those three are backed by junior sisters Kriati and Kathi Johnson.
 Hansen
 Dowd feels that having more experienced players this year is a major plus.
 "In previous years we've had to fill in with freshmen or sophomores and regardless of their talent, there is always that experience and maturity gap," the coach said.

Shoshone
 Defending league champion Shoshone has been a force in the MVC and A-4 state girls' basketball circles since it moved down from the Canyon Conference and Class A-3 three years ago. No one is willing to denigrate Coach Ed Sandy and his charges.
 Sandy, who has been the only girls hoop coach Shoshone has known, sees repeating last year's 22-7 record and returning to state as two major problems.
 Only seven girls answered his basketball call — and that isn't enough to provide intra-squad scrimmaging.
 Three seniors will be called on to carry the bulk of the leadership, scoring and rebounding roles.

Handling the guard position will be 5-0 Tracy Guenechea while 5-8 Liz Fitzgerald and 5-6 Cary Hibbard will be counted on for points and rebounding.
 "The seniors have played a lot of basketball," Sandy notes.
 Hagerman
 It's easy to quantify incoming Coach Jeff LaCroix's problem: for the moment at least, he only has five players.
 "We have good quickness and good defensive skills and offensively these girls make good adjustments to the defense being used against them," LaCroix says. "They are very aggressive on offense and I feel they shoot well as a team."
 The debits are rebounding and a lack of offensive patience, he says. And while he has some height — and experience underneath — he said he'd like to have some "big bodies inside low" to displace some of the great rebounding this conference could produce.

 The two returning starters also provide some of the better height in 6-8 seniors Jackie Yarbrough and Sindy Aja.
 The other senior on the team is 5-7 guard Shauna Warr.
 Raft River
 Coach Olene Warr begins his 10th year at the Raft River helm in a rebuilding mode. His 16-5 team of last year lost all starters to graduation and two seniors and three juniors will be called upon to take their place.

Coaches' choice

Here how the Magic Valley Conference coaches see their league this season (first-place votes in parentheses):

Team	Points
1. Castelford (4/41)
2. Cady (2/34)
3. Shoshone 30
4. Raft River 22
5. Hagerman (1/19)
6. Hansen 12
7. Murtaugh — 8

 turning sophomore starters with two more sophomores and two freshmen in the newsmen list. That makes Dava Hurd the matriarch of the group — and she's only a junior.
 Coach Jim McCreedy says the strength of the team lies in the fact "they are all good athletes" and he anticipates a carryover of enthusiasm generated during a state tournament-winning volleyball season.
 Still, he says that youth is difficult to overcome and this will be a year the girls need to hone their skills.
 Starters returning are 5-9 Becky Southwick; 5-2 Tara Conant; 5-4 Wendy Staten; 5-9 Natalie Hubert, and 5-4 Tammy Shaw.

There's experience galore, but precious little height for the defending league champion Bliss Bears this year.
 Coach Diana Butler will sorely miss the graduated Shea Beneceter.

Coaches' choice

Here's how the Northside Conference coaches see their league this season (first-place votes in parentheses; not all coaches voted and some cast two first-place votes):

Team	Points
1. Crey (4/34)
2. Camas County (1/19)
3. Bliss — 15
4. Richfield 12
5. Dietrich 11
6. Ketchum-Sun-Valley 4

who at 5-11 did almost all of the Bears' rebounding in gaining a state title last year.
 But the Bears have a lot of savvy and will play defense. Still, with no one over 5-5, the team's major problem is obvious.

The Bears have two senior starting returnees in veteran 5-2 Fawline Sears, who averaged 10.1 points, 6.6 rebounds and 2 assists last year, and Kim Geer, 5-3, who had two points, two rebounds and one assist.

Richfield
 After three years of using basically the same starting lineup and posting a 17-7 record last year to culminate that reign, veteran Coach Jim Thomas is in the midst of a lot of change.

"If the players can learn team unity quickly, we will be a good team this year. If the players do not mesh early, it will be a long season," Thomas says.

Community School
 Ketchum-Sun Valley girls have been playing basketball just two years and still haven't found a victory.

First-year Coach John Remington feels that could be the major mental barrier his team faces this season.
 "We have never won a game and the girls need to learn how to win," he said, although there is mitigation in that the schools has no gym facilities and no junior high program.

 Although his team has 5-10 and 5-11 inside, Shepard says "we're not really big on the inside for rebounding."
 Wood River
 Youth is the byword of the Wood River program as only one senior is listed on the varsity roster.
 Coach Jim King, who Wolverines finished 3-12 last season, says that is the major weakness of the club that returns two starters in 5-6 Cherise Wood, and 5-4 Diane McKenzie. But he says there are a number of pluses that could put the team into a "spoiler" position later in the season.

While the Wolverines don't have the dominating center King feels height is one of the team's virtues.
 Jerome
 Although he's had seven years in the Jerome basketball program previously, this is an all-new experience for first-year Coach Ken Wright. The rest of his experience has been on the boys' side and he figures to apply a lot of his plus-sophomore developed "there" into his new position.
 Wright says that will manifest itself with a deliberate offense, noting "our goal will be to maintain patience, post up inside and try to break someone free."
