Andrus joins verbal battle over water

The Associated Press

IDAHO FALLS — Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus has entered the fray over a document supporting congressional legislation mandating federal approval of Idaho's water rights settlement.

Not surprisingly, Andrus is again on the other side of the fence from Republican Attorney General Jim Jones.

The bill was approved unanimously by the U.S. House on Monday amid warnings from Jones that language in a supporting document would undermine Idaho's control over its water if the provision is not changed in the Senate.

But after talking with other water rights attorneys including those for Idaho Power Co., Andrus said he has not been able to find another lawyer who sides with Jones.

"I can't find anyone who takes the same view as the attorney general," Andrus said. "He seems to be out there by himself. ... Everyone else wants it behind us and approved."

During House debate on the bill both of Idaho's congressmen, Democrat Richard Stallings and Republican Larry Craig, urged approval at though Craig raised the issue concerning Jones and Stallings said he would speak with Sen. James McClure about action during Senate consideration to satisfy the attorney general.

"If there is some kind of glitch in this committee report I have total confidence in Senator McClure's ability to give us the protection on the Senate side," Andrus said.

Idaho Water Users Association Director Cheryl Chapman conceded Jones may have a point, but he remained among the majority pressing for Senate passage of the bill, the last regulatory hurdle for the 1984 agreement that ended the battle between the state and Idaho Power for control of the Snake River.

Jones has blasted Stallings for failing to delay the House vote on the bill until questions over the supporting document could be resolved, but Stallings, backed by Craig turned down that request.

Health officials advise anti-HIB vaccinations

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Following two deaths in Twin Falls and another eight cases of Hib-related illnesses throughout Magic Valley during 1987, state and local health specialists are advocating vaccinating all children between 2 and 5 years old.

"It prevents just one mortality, it's a worthwhile program," said Bob Medlin, immunization coordinator for the state Department of Health and Welfare. "It's super important for any child who's going to be enrolled in a daycare facility."

Hib, hemophilus influenzae type B, typically attacks the upper respiratory system of young children and often resembles common flu or ear infections. Hib brings serious medical complications, including meningitis and epiglottitis, and can be fatal.

Cheryl Becker, epidemiologist for the South Central District Health Department, said there have been 10 Hib cases during 1987 in Magic Valley. With two months to go, that is already more than the seven regional cases during all of 1986, she said.

Twin Falls Pediatrician Jack Trotter said two children have died from Hib recently including a 2-year-old who could have been vaccinated and another child younger than that.

The federal Centers for Disease Control estimates Hib infects one in 200 children. And Medlin noted that the $3 shot carrying few side-effects and available through the South Central District Health Department, is a cheap and easy way to avoid potentially life-threatening symptoms Hib can bring.

The vaccination isn't available for children less than 18 months old, but it is available under doctor's orders for children between 18 and 24 months old. In fact, it is recommended for children in that age range who are also in a high-risk en-

Cease-fire terms set by Ortega

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega on Friday laid out a detailed plan for reaching a cease-fire in three weeks with the Contras fighting his leftist government and a mediator agreed to carry the response, opening cease-fire negotiations.

Ortega, indicating flexibility, called his plan "a proposal, not an ultimatum." Contra leaders, reacting to news reports in Miami, criticized the plan and termed it "a proposal for an orderly surrender."

A week visit in Nicaragua — B1

Ortega's 11-point plan was received by Nicaraguan Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, who agreed to act as a mediator between the two sides. The plan pledged to convene Ortega's offer to the Contras and seek a response, opening cease-fire negotiations.

The plan calls for a cease-fire to begin on Dec. 5 and for rebel troops inside Nicaragua to move to one of three cease-fire zones. The rebels would lay down their arms on Jan. 5 before independent observers, and then be granted amnesty.

The plan specifies that Contras in the field are not to get any military supplies during the cease-fire, but would allow food, clothing and medical care to be provided them by a neutral international agency.

In Miami, the six members of the Nicaraguan Resistance directorate issued a statement calling the Sandinista proposal "a unilateral measure that sidesteps the existence of an armed conflict."

Agustin Calderon, the senior member of the directorate, specifically rejected the plan for the Contras to disarm and gather in cease-fire zones, saying, "We do not see ourselves moving into gulags as the Sandinistas propose."

"This is the first step," Ortega said after a two-hour meeting with Obando y Bravo at the Vatican Embassy. The session also was attended by House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, who has angered some in the Reagan administration by making himself a central figure in the Central American peace process.

"It is a proposal, not an ultimatum," said Ortega, who appeared in the sunshine on the embassy steps to smile and shake hands with the cardinal, long one of his harshest critics.

"The important thing is that as soon as possible we are able to begin this process of arranging the cease-fire," Ortega said, distributing copies of an 11-point plan he had delivered to Obando y Bravo.

The cardinal, who was returning to Nicaragua via Miami on Friday, said he would relay the Sandinista government proposal to Contra leaders in the next day or so, either in Miami or in Central America.

"I am here because I want peace for my country," Obando y Bravo said. "And when I talk about peace, it has to be based on truth, and based on love."

Ortega said steps also were being taken to create a "support team" to aid the cease-fire negotiations, to include Paul Warnke, a Washington attorney, who was head of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency under President Carter. Warnke also attended the meeting.

Price-report shows inflation stays tame

Americans kept on buying in October

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans spent freely on all goods except automobiles in October, the government said Friday in a report indicating no immediate blow to consumer confidence from the stock market crash.

The Commerce Department said retail sales edged down 0.1 percent as a sharp, 3.1 percent dip in auto sales more than offset gains elsewhere. Excluding autos, sales were up 0.7 percent, the strongest jump since February.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department provided dramatic evidence that inflation remains tame. Wholesale prices fell 0.2 percent in October as cheaper food and energy combined to produce the first drop since July 1986.

For the first 10 months of the year, the Producer Price Index for finished goods, which measures price activity one step short of the retail level, advanced at an annual rate of 3.0 percent.

Retail establishments sold $127.4 billion worth of goods in October, down $137 million from September. The Commerce Department adjusts the figures for seasonal variations, but not for inflation.

"We got good news today. ... Consumers thus far have not made any necessary connection between the pending is going to remain small," she said.

The October report reflects activity throughout the month and includes sales during the 12 days after Oct. 19, when the stock market's historic plunge wiped out an estimated $500 billion in wealth.

However, Lawrence Chimierne, president of Wharton Economics, a Philadelphia-based forecasting firm, said it was too soon to gauge the stock market's effect on consumers.

Last month's small overall decline followed a 1.1 percent drop in September — a figure revised downward from the earlier estimate of minus 0.4 percent — and increases from June through August.

For the first 10 months of the year, sales were up 4.2 percent over the same period last year.

Nearly all of the weakness in October came from the 3.1 percent drop auto sales, which was anticipated as dealers struggled through the end-of-the-model-year incentives that had boosted summer business. Auto sales had slipped 3.8 percent in September.

In a separate report relating to auto sales, the Labor Department said 1987 model cars sold in October cost an average $399.01 more at the retail level than similarly equipped 1987 models sold a year ago.

Of this price increase, $245.66 went into improvements or new features, the report said.

The price increase in 1988 models compares with a $776.38 increase between the 1986 and 1987 models, of which only $47.31 went into improvements or new features.

The Commerce Department offered these specifics of last month's retail sales activity:

- Sales of durable goods, items expected to last three or more years, were down 1 percent following a 2 percent fall a month earlier. All of the weakness came in autos.
- Sales of furniture and home furnishings were up 1.6 percent after a 0.2 percent decrease. Sales at hardware and building supply stores improved 1.7 percent, following a 0.7 percent upturn.
- Sales of non-durable goods rose 0.5 percent, reversing a dip by the same percentage in September. All categories, except gasoline station sales, showed improvement.
- Sales at department and other general merchandise stores were up 1.3 percent, reversing a 1.1 percent fall.
- Sales at grocery stores eased up 0.2 percent after dropping 0.7 percent a month earlier.

Budget negotiators get back on track

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — White House and congressional budget talks got back on track Friday as Republicans and Democrats put aside acrimony and focused again on plans to reduce the federal deficit by $76 billion over the next two years.

"I think we're back on course today," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif. "I think there seems to be a willingness today to lock in some of the specifics, things we talked about Wednesday."

But he really addressed the stark realities of what we're up against," said Rep. Robert Michel, R-Ill., the House minority leader.

The budget talks, which were begun following the Oct. 19 stock market crash, appeared near success on Wednesday but then ran into trouble Thursday with each side accusing the other of stubbornness.

The goal of the three-week-old talks is to reassure financial markets and cut the deficit for fiscal 1988, which began Oct. 1, by at least $25 billion by next Friday, as required by the Gramm-Rudman budget balancing law.

House Majority Leader Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., the chairman of the talks, told reporters Friday that "some of the slack in our discussion that occurred yesterday has been taken up now, and we're moving toward the track of reaching an agreement."

The bargainers broke for the weekend after discussing a proposal to cut the fiscal 1988 deficit by about $31.8 billion and the fiscal 1989 shortfall by $44 billion to $50 billion.

The plan contains about $10 billion in new taxes this year and about $10 billion next year. In addition, the Internal Revenue Service would be given money to increase enforcement of current tax laws and fees would be increased for some government services.

The Pentagon would be allotted about $285.5 billion this year, with a small inflation increase next year. Domestic agency accounts would be trimmed as well, by about $2.5 billion, while entitlements such as farm subsidies and Medicare also would be reduced by about $5 billion this year.

Jones renews charges of Stallings sellout over water bill

WASHINGTON — The dispute over Rep. Richard Stallings' Swan Falls water rights bill turned sour on Friday as Attorney General Jim Jones renewed charges that Stallings sold out the state's control over the Snake River to achieving congressional staff and environmental groups.

Stallings, D-Idaho, said the accusations were "absolutely outrageous." Parties on all sides of the issue contacted this week said Jones' charges were unfounded, and even a group he claims supports his position said they do not completely agree with the attorney general.

Jones' allegations stem from a report released last Friday by the House Energy and Commerce Committee on Stallings' measure. Before the bill passed the House unanimously last Monday, Jones had asked Stallings and Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, the bill's co-sponsor, to pull it from the floor.

The Republican blamed Stallings for allowing the committee to insert language that Jones "thinks" will hurt the state's control over the Snake River.

"Stallings has sold Idaho water interests down the river," Jones charged in a statement.

Last week Jones attacked a committee staffer named David Finnegan for inserting "clandestine" language in the panel's report on the bill that Jones says gives the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission the right to regulate stream flows for the Snake River in the interest of environmental groups.

Jones said in an interview Friday that Finnegan was sneaking around the committee to protect environmental groups' interests, and that Stallings was irresponsible for letting this happen to Idaho's state rights" because Jones had sent two letters to Stallings warning that the report's language could be harmful.

Stallings said it was "offensive" for Jones to accuse him of permitting a staffer to undermine Idaho's state rights.

"There are absolutely outrageous charges," Stallings said. "I'm embarrassed that the Attorney General of Idaho has stooped to such partisan shenanigans."

The Attorney General has hurt his office's credibility with the Energy and Commerce Committee with his talk of clandestine activity," Stallings admonished in a statement released Thursday. "This is a very important committee and Idaho will need its help in the future."

Finnegan said this week that he did not know what the hell Jones is talking about.

Jones does not like a provision added to Stallings' Swan Falls bill that gives FERC the authority to order that an environmental study be performed by two wildlife protection agencies in conjunction with the Idaho Power Co. The utility is a prime user of Snake River water for hydroelectricity, and a major participant in the Swan Falls agreement.

Jones said that the provision would give the feds the right to use the study, if it is critical of the Swan Falls agreement's impact on river ecology, to interfere in the state's allocation of Snake River waters in the interest of environmental groups.

During Friday's interview, Jones was asked to specify exactly where in the committee report language was to be found that gave FERC authority to intrude on Idaho's right to regulate the Snake.

Jones proceeded to read from the report, but was only able to find language discussing FERC's role in ensuring the study would be carried out. He could not identify a provision relating to FERC's use of the study to order changes in the state's allocation of the river's water.

"At one point during the interview Jones became hostile to the questions and used abusive language."

"Listen here, I know I'm right on this," Jones insisted. "At some point in the future, when the feds use this to get control over our water, they have to admit they were wrong and I was right."

Interviews over the course of the week with several parties to the Swan Falls accord revealed that Jones is virtually isolated in his interpretation of the bill's impact.

A top aide to Andrus said Friday that the governor had consulted with a variety of legal and water rights experts and could not see how FERC's authority to order a study would give the agency the right to usurp the state's sovereignty over the Snake River.

"If the study shows that the agreement would harm the river's ecology, then environmental groups can sue the state," Stallings said. "But I don't see where it gives the federal government authority to intrude on Idaho's control over water rights."

Craig, who co-sponsored the bill, said Friday that the Attorney General's objections gave him enough reason to make a statement on the House floor last Monday raising Jones' concerns for the record.

"But Craig thought Jones' request to kill the bill was bad ideas."

"There is nothing wrong with this legislation," he said.

Logan Lanham, a senior vice-president with Idaho Power, said he does not share the attorney general's concerns. He said that Idaho power will cooperate with the requirement for the environmental study, and that he saw nothing "clandestine" about the language added to Stallings' bill.

"Idaho Power is in bed with the environmentalists," Jones said. "The people who will get hurt are the farmers when FERC starts dictating how much water has to stay in the river."

Kent Foster, a lawyer for the Committee of Nine, which represents 15,000 agricultural water users in southeastern Idaho, said that they were "paranoid" about the bill, but he does not share Jones' view that the bill would necessarily give FERC the power to regulate the Snake's water.

"We are concerned but we would settle for a written assurance from FERC that the study would not be used by federal agents to control our access to water," Foster said.

"We don't see it quite the way Jones does," Foster added.

Stallings accused Jones of "using the committee report as a political smoke-screen to kill the bill," but said he was puzzled by Jones' motives.

"A representative of his office met in an early negotiating session, conducted with the committee all summer," Stallings said. "He accepted a settlement that put the environmental study in the bill weeks ago." Andrus' aide said that Jones had politicized the issue in order to ingratiate himself with agricultural interests who are sensitive about their water rights.

Ortega

The Nicaraguan president said he regarded as "constructive" a proposal by Honduras for dismantling Contra base camps inside its border in exchange for certain actions by Nicaragua, including a halt to incursions by Sandinista troops and an end to mining of border areas.

The goal, Ortega said, is to bring about the "national reconciliation" called for in the Aug. 7 five-nation Central American peace accord aimed at bringing the Contras back into the political life of Nicaragua. The United States, whose official policy has opposed his government, must now show more trust, Ortega added.

"The United States should trust Nicaragua," he said. "Nicaragua has offered enough proof, and this is more proof of our willingness to obtain peace."

Wright, who has been deeply involved in the peace process since he and President Reagan advanced their own peace proposal in August, said that while Ortega's proposal showed "elements of good faith," he also saw "some rough areas that are going to need to be smoothed out."

"I believe the process is moving in the direction of peace," Wright told reporters on Capitol Hill. "Peace is not yet attained, but the movement is in the right direction."

environment with other sick children, such as daycare facilities.

Children receiving this shot between 18 and 24 months should receive a follow-up vaccination at 2 years old. Shots are available, and are recommended, for all children between 2 and 5 years old.

"Most of them (Magic Valley, HIB) patients are younger, the problem being that brothers and sisters were older and carrying the bacteria, Becker said.

Trotter said vaccinating older children is hoped to provide "herd immunity" — preventing older immunized children from giving it to younger siblings or friends. Most HIB cases occur between 3 months and 5 years, he said.

"That's what we're hoping," Trotter said.

Noting that 75 percent of HIB cases occur in infants, Medlin said shots must be developed for younger children as they already are for diphtheria, pertussis and tetanus.

Diagnosis is often difficult and must be identified by a doctor.

But HIB features "some severe symptoms" such as stiff neck, change of consciousness accompanied by a high fever or difficulty swallowing.

Among serious medical problems stemming from HIB are meningitis and epiglottitis.

"Symptoms of meningitis can happen very, very quickly," Becker said of the nausea, vomiting and high fever.

She also recommended contacting a doctor whenever a small child has a fever and a high fever, adding that those symptoms point to the hospital. Epiglottitis can also prevent breathing and thus could be life-threatening in minutes, he said.

Health workers said parents observing serious symptoms should contact their doctors.

"At least call them," Trotter said. "But to prevent HIB, health workers also advocated immunizations for all children between 2 and 5 years old; and children between 18 and 24 months old in daycare facilities."

Becker said the shots cost $3 at the South Central District Health Department. SCDDH holds immunization clinics every Wednesday between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. and those hours are extended to 7 p.m. the first Wednesday of every month.

"Pulling the legislation from the House floor, after concentrated efforts to get on a busy House calendar, would have ended its chance for consideration," Stallings said. "I refused to jeopardize the program and the state."

The bill requires the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to approve the water rights settlement that guarantees Idaho Power adequate stream flows for its generating network and still gives the state the opportunity for some limited development on the Snake River Plain.

But until the commission endorses the pact — no new permanent water rights can be issued by the state.

The riding legislation is similar to a rider tacked on to an appliance energy standards bill passed by Congress a year ago, but vetoed by President Reagan because of his opposition to the appliance standards. The President has said he will sign the water rights measure if sent to him separately.

Wyoming man dies in jail

POCATELLO (AP) — A Wyoming man being held at the Bannock County Jail in Pocatello died Friday from what Under-sheriff Bill Lynn called self-inflicted strangulation. Glendo Rex Roberts, 34, described as an Indian from Fort Washakie, Wyo., was found dead in his cell at about 6:30 a.m. Friday, Lynn said. Jail personnel were unable to revive Roberts, who was last seen alive at about 6:10 a.m. Roberts had been in the jail since Wednesday when he was arrested by Idaho State Police officers for drunken driving, driving without a license and lack of liability insurance. He pleaded innocent to the drunken-driving charge, but was serving 90 days for driving without a license.

Trial date set in murder case

CALDWELL (AP) — Trial has been set for Feb. 29 here for a 21-year-old Wilder man charged with first-degree murder in the bludgeoning death of a Caldwell woman. In a Friday 3rd District Court appearance before Judge James Doolittle, Noel Rodriguez pleaded innocent to the murder and an accompanying "aggravated" battery complaint. Rodriguez is charged with the beating death Oct. 10 of Rosalinda Salinas Sanchez, 29. The battery charge alleges Rodriguez beat the woman's daughter, Erica.

Water levy fails; try again

HAYDEN LAKE (AP) — Officials here say they plan to try again on a $750,000 special levy rejected by local voters this week. The Hayden Lake Irrigation District wanted to borrow the money to drill at least two wells to ease a water contamination problem. It requested two-thirds approval but the levy did not even win majority approval, with 186 against and 187 in favor.

Foodbank needs donations

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Foodbank Warehouse, which serves 84 charitable organizations in Idaho, has received 70 percent more donated food this year than last — and it still isn't enough. The warehouse here already has distributed 356,261 pounds of food to organizations with feeding programs.

"Nevertheless, we are not meeting the demand," said Wanda Michaelson, director of the Idaho Hunger Action Council. "Emergency food banks in Idaho are seeing a dramatic increase in requests for aid this month," she said.

Phone fund to be examined

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission has called a meeting here next week to discuss the possibilities of creating a new universal service or high-cost fund.

Such a fund would distribute funds from telephone charges so that all local exchange companies could keep what the PUC termed "reasonable, affordable rates." The meeting is scheduled for next Friday, with all regulated Idaho telephone companies ordered to attend. Unregulated, mutual and cooperative phone companies have been encouraged to participate.

The commission has given the companies until next month to see if they can come up with a joint recommendation for a high-cost fund.

The commission has notified the state's phone companies it intends to issue a high-cost fund proposal by the end of next month. The companies face a Dec. 18 deadline to file their joint or individual proposals.

RV users seek gas tax cut

BOISE (AP) — A group of recreational vehicle users is pressuring the state Board of Transportation for a cut of state fuel tax revenues even though receipts from the current tax have run so short that critical road maintenance is being ignored. Less Reigum, a spokesman for the group, told the board that while RV owners along with snowmobiles and other off-road vehicle users contribute about 1 percent of the state fuel tax they benefit little from projects financed by the tax since most of their use is off the maintained roads.

The group asked for board support of a proposal that would divert 3 percent of the $60 million a year collected in fuel taxes for improve projects targeted at recreational vehicles. The proposition failed to gain significant support among lawmakers last winter.

Scott: Liability suits high

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A leader in last winter's successful campaign to rein in the cost to society of spiraling civil damage suits says liability insurance rates in Idaho have continued to rise despite enactment of the tort reform package. "But they haven't tripled or quadrupled as they have in the past," said Donna Scott, a former Republican House member from Twin Falls who is now a field coordinator for the Idaho Liability Reform Coalition.

Analysts gear up for legislative session

BOISE (AP) — With the 1988 session just two months away, legislative and administration analysts are working their way through sheaves of agency spending requests under a GOP leadership admonition that lawmakers will not be as generous with taxpayer dollars as they were last winter. As has become traditional, state agencies led by education interests are again requesting nearly 15 percent more in general tax support in the new budget for the year that begins next July.

State Schools Superintendent Jerry Evans says the 10.1 percent increase proposed for public schools is just enough to maintain the system and make a little headway in the campaign toward quality education that lawmakers effectively endorsed last winter with support from a $100 million wide-ranging tax hike. But despite official optimism that Idaho's overall economy has finally started to grow, legislative analysts see only a modest increase in revenues from the current tax structure, and lawmakers appear less than supportive of another round of tax hikes during an election-year session.

"The election of last year told us that people wanted more spending in those areas" of education and economic development, GOP Senate President Pro Tem Jim Risch of Boise has repeatedly said. "But the people are telling us now to do the best we can with what we have." But based on a preliminary assessment by analysts in the Legislative Budget Office, what the Legislature and Gov. Cecil Andrus can expect to have without some kind of tax manipulation will not even be enough to maintain current government operations, let alone underwrite any of the program improvements contained in the $755 million budget requests.

Although last winter's tax package pushed general revenues up 12 percent to just under $656 million, real growth from the tax structure was projected at less than 3 percent. Legislative analysts see little change in that for the coming budget year. They advised the House-Senate budget-writing committee this fall to expect revenue growth from the general economy to run at only about 2 percent again.

That would be $4.6 million short of the amount needed to just finance a bare-bones 1988-1989 state spending blueprint that freezes government and teacher salaries and cuts adjustments for inflation to less than half the rate nearly all economists are projecting for that period. Compounding lawmakers' election-year tax-and-spending quandary will certainly be a renewed request for an increase in the state fuel tax.

Statewide salary scale could lessen problems

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A statewide-teacher-salary schedule would lessen the number of strikes caused by pay disparities between public school districts, says state Sen. Terry Sverdsten, R-Cataldo.

State legislators will want a greater voice in how increased education money is spent, lessening local-school-board authority, Sverdsten told nearly 700 school board members and superintendents attending the annual Idaho School Boards Association convention Thursday at The Coeur d'Alene resort. Opposition to Sverdsten's plan was evident. "Lakeland School District" board Chairman Tom Taggart said he plans to introduce a resolution that local boards retain their salary-setting authority. In his resolution, Taggart asks the ISBA to take a stand against Sverdsten's proposal.

Under Sverdsten's plan, the state would set a salary range to give lower-paying districts a chance to catch up to other districts. He didn't explain how the schedule would affect teachers in the higher-paying districts.

Sverdsten also warned board members not to expect much of an increase in state funding for education next year.

"I don't foresee any tax increases coming out of this session, which means money to schools won't be higher this year," he said. Next year Sverdsten predicted more teacher

Economic conference broadcast statewide

BOISE (AP) — State telecommunications history will be made here next week when a statewide economic diversification conference will make use of a new satellite uplink to broadcast the proceedings over a wide area.

Project Enterprise meetings are planned at the Boise State University campus on Wednesday, and it will mark the first use of the new AT&T satellite uplink, the first such facility constructed in Idaho.

Several sites throughout the state are scheduled to receive the telecast, giving audience members from Montpelier to Coeur d'Alene an opportunity to ask panel members in Boise questions by direct-telephone access. A toll-free number will be flashed on the screen during the teleconference's panel discussions.

"In addition to the 14 sites, we have another dozen towns that will also probably provide a downlink location," he said. He said sponsors have been advised that at least 20-25 people plan to attend in the smallest towns, with about 100 expected in Pocatello, Sandpoint and Coeur d'Alene. Receiving sites still are being

Investigators now doubt Soviet agents entered embassy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Military investigators, after a month of interrogating convicted spy Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree, are increasingly doubtful that Soviet agents ever entered the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, Pentagon officials said Friday.

The officials, who agreed to discuss the matter — only if not identified, said Lonetree has steadfastly insisted during de-briefings that he passed information to Soviet agents after becoming involved with a Russian woman, but never allowed any outsiders into the building proper.

The assertion by the 26-year-old Marine guard appears to be supported by the results of lie-detector tests and psychological reviews, the sources added.

Although no final conclusions have yet been drawn by investigators, "there is a feeling now that he is leveling with us," said one source.

Lonetree, convicted in August of passing embassy floor plans and the names of CIA agents to the Russians, was at one point accused along with another Marine of allowing KGB agents to prow inside the embassy during repeated late-night forays.

That charge was ultimately dropped before Lonetree's court-martial began, because it was based on a statement that was recanted by the second Marine, Cpl. Arnold Bracy, and military investigators couldn't obtain any corroborating evidence.

Even though Lonetree and Bracy were acquitted on the charge, Pentagon and State Department officials remained convinced that Soviet agents had penetrated the building. The State Department adopted a "worst-case" approach to the security breach, turning to courtiers to handle classified messages rather than using the embassy's electronic communications gear.

According to the sources, that worst-case assumption is now being questioned.

Lonetree, following his conviction, agreed to cooperate with U.S. counter-intelligence agents in return for a promised five-year reduction in his 30-year sentence and a grant of immunity from further prosecution for any additional incriminating information he might disclose.

The debriefings began in mid-October and are still going on, with Lonetree being transported almost daily to the offices of the Naval Investigative Service here from the Quantico, Va., Marine Base.

One source said Lonetree appeared to be "cooperating freely" with the Navy agents.

"He insists that while he passed information and got involved with the Soviet lady, he never let the Russians inside the building," the source continued. "He's taken some polygraphs and he's been closely monitored. We can't shake his story."

Laser test on drone successful

WASHINGTON (AP) — An experimental high-energy laser system was successfully tested for a second time last week against a jet-powered drone, this time at an extended range, the Defense Department said Friday.

The test, conducted Nov. 2 by the Navy at the White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico, saw the laser system "successfully engage and destroy a drone target, missile in flight," a Pentagon statement said.

The distances involved were not disclosed, but the statement said "the range to the target was twice that of the first test, which was conducted on Sept. 18."

The laser beam quickly destroyed vital components of the missile, which then went into a spin and steep dive into the ground. This engagement further demonstrates the potential for lasers to provide a defense against fast-moving targets," the Pentagon said.

The Pentagon had announced the results of the first test on Oct. 5, describing the Navy's September experiment as the first instance in which the so-called Mid-Infrared Advanced Chemical Laser had been fired against a flying target.

Pentagon and Navy officials described the latest test as essentially the same as the Sept. 18 experiment, except that the laser was fired a greater distance to strike the jet-powered drone.

Navy Cmdr. Bob Pritch, a Pentagon spokesman, said the range, altitude, impact time and other details of the experiment were classified.

Although not part of the "Star Wars" missile research effort, the Navy work has been described by the Pentagon as "the most realistic to date of the potential damage that can be inflicted on a missile by a laser system."

The Navy experimentation is part of the so-called "Balanced Technology" initiative, an effort to determine if lasers can be used to defend surface ships against missile attack. The laser technology used by the Navy, however, is also being studied by Star Wars scientists.

The laser being tested by the Navy uses a chemical reaction to produce the beam, concentrated light, and was developed for the Navy by TRW Inc. The laser itself is coupled to a "beam director," built by the Hughes Aircraft Co., and the laser and beam director are operated with a control system developed by UNISYS, the Pentagon said.

Missile drops small bombs on test flight

WASHINGTON (AP) — A successful test last week of a land-attack variant of the Tomahawk cruise missile was the first in which live bombs were dropped on targets, the Navy said Friday.

The Nov. 3 test, conducted at San Clemente Island off the coast of southern California, was announced last week by officials at the Pacific Missile Test Center. The Navy released additional details Friday along with a videotape of the trial.

The Tomahawk cruise missile resembles a flying torpedo with short, stubby wings and tail fin. The jet-powered missile can be equipped with either conventional or nuclear warheads and skims the water or ground to avoid radar detection. It can be fired by either submarines or surface ships at distant targets.

The Navy, as part of its development program, has been working for some time on a variant of the Tomahawk that can drop clusters of small bombs — each about twice the size of a hand grenade — on up to three different targets.

According to spokesman Bob Holtsapple, that variant makes the Tomahawk much more cost effective, since the $1.5 million missile can be used against multiple targets instead of just one.

The Navy had previously tested the new variant on four different occasions, but each time with inert bomblets.

Senate committee gives Carlucci OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Armed Services Committee unanimously recommended Friday that Frank C. Carlucci become secretary of defense, while congressional negotiators virtually completed work on a Pentagon budget reducing military spending for the third consecutive year.

By 20-0, the committee approved President Reagan's choice of Carlucci to succeed Caspar W. Weinberger as defense secretary. The nomination was sent to the full Senate which is expected to confirm Carlucci early next week.

Weinberger is retiring after seven years of presiding over the biggest peacetime military build-up in U.S. history. Pentagon spending doubled during his tenure.

But a different situation will confront Carlucci, who is now the president's national security adviser and who also spent the first two years of Reagan's presidency as Weinberger's chief deputy.

"This is a terribly, terribly inefficient way to do it; this boom and bust cycle," Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, told a news conference.

Aspin was among leaders of a

FRANK C. CARLUCCI
Closer to taking office

House-Senate conference committee which has been working to settle on a congressional compromise budget measure for the Pentagon.

The committee had to iron out more than 6,000 differences between Senate and House versions of the legislation authorizing military spending for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1. The House had proposed $289 billion while the Senate proposed for $302 billion.

The panel's work is "virtually complete" and will be finished next week when some House members return to Washington and approve the package, according to Aspin and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The conference committee came up with two different spending levels. One proposes to authorize $296 billion in Pentagon spending while the other proposes $289 billion.

The number finally accepted will depend on separate negotiations between the White House and Congress over a deficit-reduction package aimed at averting the automatic spending cuts of the Gramm-Rudman law. Those reductions would hit the Pentagon much harder than any other federal agency.

If the lower Pentagon budget is finally used, two of the reductions would be the Navy's A-6 bomber program and the Marines' AV8B Harrier. Both would be canceled. Whichever figure is used, Pentagon spending, when adjusted for inflation, will decrease for a third straight year after five years of increases.

The major differences involved a series of arms control restrictions proposed by Democrats who control both chambers. Reagan had threatened to veto the bill unless those provisions were changed, but the White House and the congressional negotiators agreed to a complicated compromise.

It is the arms control compromise package which is now holding the bill up, Aspin and Nunn said. "We have a few members who have to agree on those provisions and that should be done early next week," said Aspin.

Under the compromise, Congress dropped its demand that Reagan observe the unratified 1979 SALT II nuclear arms treaty and promise adherence to the so-called "strict" interpretation of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty.

For Star Wars, the bill proposed $3.9 billion, which is far less than the $5.3 billion Reagan sought. It is a compromise between the $4.5 billion figure voted by the Senate and the $3.1 billion total passed by the House.

Anthony Kennedy at a brief news conference

Kennedy says no; reporters must wait

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Anthony M. Kennedy, the latest U.S. Supreme Court nominee, held a news conference Friday to tell reporters he couldn't answer questions because of the pending Senate confirmation process.

"Due respect for the Senate of the United States does require that I refrain from comments and observations and responses to the inquiries of the press," the federal appeals court justice told four dozen reporters and students gathered at McGee School of Law.

Kennedy returned to his home in Sacramento on Thursday night after spending five days in Washington, D.C., meeting with Reagan administration officials and key senators.

President Reagan announced his nomination to the Supreme Court on Wednesday. Kennedy, 51, is the third nominee and the third federal appeals court judge — for the seat vacated by the retirement of Justice Lewis Powell. The first choice, Robert Bork, was defeated by the Senate. The second, Douglas Ginsburg, withdrew after admitting he had smoked marijuana.

The only question Kennedy would answer Friday was when he would return to Washington.

"In the middle of next week or the following week, it depends on the schedule of the Senate," he replied. "The news conference had been announced Thursday by McGee, where Kennedy has taught a night course on constitutional law since 1964. The Sacramento law school is part of the University of the Pacific in Stockton."

Kennedy read a 1½-page statement, some of which was directed to the McGee students lining the back of the room, and then left after only a few minutes before the reporters and cameras.

"My understanding of the decorum and traditions that prevail is that it would intrude upon that confirmation process if we were to attempt to conduct a parallel discourse outside the confines of the Senate, and, therefore, questions in reference to personal matters and my family, judicial matters and individual philosophy must appropriately be addressed in the first instance to the Senate Judiciary Committee," he said.

Kennedy told his students he would not be able to teach the second quarter of constitutional law. He also suggested to reporters that they consider enrolling in his courses on First Amendment and communications law. The students will tell you that the tuition is very reasonable and that the instructors are excellent.

The school gave reporters several brochures, including one advertising summer courses in Europe.

Proposal made to free Lebanon hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration officials reacted coolly Friday to a proposal by the sister of American hostage Terry Anderson that President Reagan appoint a special envoy to lead efforts to free her brother and other captives.

"For a year, the United States has been frozen in its approach to the plight of the Americans held hostage in Lebanon," Peggy Say of Batavia, N.Y., wrote in an op-ed column in The New York Times.

"President Reagan should now appoint a special envoy — a man or woman of achievement and stature — to work toward freedom for the hostages," she said.

Her brother, the 40-year-old chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, has been held prisoner by pro-Iranian elements in Lebanon. On Dec. 10, Anderson will have been held captive for 1,000 days. Seven other Americans are among 22 foreigners taken as prisoners in Lebanon.

Responding to questions about Mrs. Say's proposal, White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said the administration continues to explore "every possible method" to win the release of Americans held prisoner in Lebanon.

But he said of Mrs. Say's recommendation: "We think there are some problems with it. We'll consider it, but we have a lot of people working on this right now, in a lot of agencies."

Fitzwater said that much of the administration's efforts related to the hostages "has to be secret."

Because of this, he said, "It may be that a low profile is more productive than a high profile."

Fitzwater said that "while that (a high-profile envoy) may be satisfying to people here back in the states, we have to be very careful that our efforts are most productive in actually getting them back."

At the State Department, spokesman Charles E. Redman also expressed reservations. "High-profile efforts such as the naming of a special envoy are less likely to yield results than our quiet efforts," he said.

Robbers take gallery works

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Two armed men stole three Picasso prints and 26 other art works valued at $1 million from a gallery Friday, police said.

Jairo Quintero, owner of the Quintero Gallery, and two assistants were tied up and gagged, but not hurt, when the robbery took place Friday morning, police Sgt. Dennis Koronkiewicz said.

A well-dressed man armed with an automatic gun and another man in blue jeans took 29 art works from a single portfolio in a storage closet, Koronkiewicz said. Many other paintings in the gallery were not stolen, he said.

"They specifically went and took this one portfolio," Koronkiewicz said.

Lawyers may add challenge to drug tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 200 Justice Department lawyers have expressed an interest in a plan by private attorneys to challenge the Justice Department's mandatory drug testing program.

Some of the Justice Department attorneys who met Nov. 6 to discuss the program are likely to join in a lawsuit challenging it.

Others attending the session indicated they fear retaliation from superiors if they join the lawsuit.

"We say random mandatory drug testing is a violation of the Fourth Amendment," having unreasonable search and seizure, Stephen Sachs, a former Maryland attorney general who plans to work with the American Civil Liberties Union in filing the suit, said Friday.

On Sept. 25, the department announced it will institute a drug-testing program to cover all those among the department's 60,000 employees who are in "sensitive" positions, including thousands of career attorneys.

The department is in the process of defining what points are regarded as "sensitive" and the court challenge will be filed once the department comes up with a detailed plan.

Nureyev makes visit to Soviet Union

PARIS (AP) — Ballet dancer Rudolf Nureyev will return to the Soviet Union to visit his mother for the first time since he defected to the West in 1961, the Paris Opera said Friday.

Nureyev, 49, now an Austrian citizen, is dance director of the Paris Opera Ballet.

"After 26 years far from my country, I have obtained authorization to go to the Soviet Union to see my family, my mother being very old and ill," he said in a statement. "I am very touched."

The Opera, citing the private nature of the visit, refused to provide the dates of the trip.

Nureyev, thanked the Soviet and French authorities who had made the trip possible.

The dancer will be accompanied by an assistant in the office of French Culture Minister Francois Leotard, who has been working on a project for the Paris Opera Ballet to perform in the Soviet Union.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Kirkpatrick-Center museum is saying hats off to Adm. William J. Crowe.

Ninety of the 787 hats in Crowe's collection are on display at the museum.

Crowe, an Oklahoma City native who is chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has collected a London bobby's helmet, a temple dancer's spiked headress, even a hat once owned by Yasser Arafat of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The center threw a party earlier this week when Crowe came to see his hats on display, and he declared: "They never looked so good."

Dutchess joins efforts in foster parent plan

EAST GREENWICH, R.I. (AP) — The Duchesses of Gloucester, Brigitte Eva van Deus, visited the headquarters for the International Foster Parents Plan to learn more about the program.

The 41-year-old wife of Queen Elizabeth's first cousin, Richard, holds the honorary title of patron in chief for the Foster Parent's United Kingdom operation.

She said her visit Thursday was to learn about the organization's worldwide network and to share information about the British program.

Of the rumored marital problems between Prince Charles and Princess Diana, the duchess said: "There's really no question to ask... (Charles and Diana) are really quite happy."

Clapton, Harrison still best of friends

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Beatle George Harrison feels no hostility toward Eric Clapton for marrying his ex-wife, Patti Boyd, and considers the rocker "one of my best mates."

"There was always this idea we hated each other. Never ever. It was over for Patti and I anyway. I still like the ex-wife, she's great," Harrison says in the Nov. 30 issue of Us magazine.

"As for divorce, we should have gotten divorced four years before that. That didn't bother me. It bothered Eric at the time. Now Eric is getting divorced from her, too. But we all still love each other."

Harrison, who produced the movie "Shanghai Surprise" with Sean Penn and Madonna, was asked if he would work with the couple again.

"It's not worth the trouble," he said. "They have good qualities. But whenever that element in him is set off, he comes unglued. That's his problem — that side of him nobody wants to know about. He's good. And he'll be very good when he learns to temper his moods."

Unlucky Friday 13th is perfect wedding day

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Many people think of Friday the 13th as something to be feared, but Rebecca Guillot, who finds the day so welcome she's getting married on it.

Just listening to the number of 13s that have crossed Guillot's path is enough to make people cross their fingers... Her sister began dating her husband-to-be on a Friday the 13th, and their wedding anniversary is Dec. 13.

born on a 13th. Guillot and her fiance first pledged their love on a Friday the 13th back in high school. And she worked 13 months at her mother's boutique.

So on Friday, this year's third Friday the 13th, the 23-year-old Guillot and Mark Griffin were married.

"We're going to stand under a ladder and get married," she quipped, recalling the startled reactions from friends and relatives as they realized the wedding date.

Fear of the number 13, called triskaidekaphobia, is a well-known superstition; fear of Fridays, less so. But combining the two is a double whammy that makes even the slightly superstitious shiver.

But Guillot and Griffin aren't fazed; in fact, they're amused by their friends' reactions.

"Friends have told me this marriage is destined to fail, just because of the date," she said, recalling how some even tried to convince her to get married a day later. But Guillot wasn't about to let anything stop her from getting married on exactly the same date she and Griffin first promised to wed.

"The date doesn't really bother me," added Griffin. "I break mirrors, drive my red car under ladders and over black cats all the time." But there is one number 13 that the couple is not interested in.

"We're definitely not having 13 children," Guillot said.

Miss Austria takes crown in Miss World contest

ULLA WEIGERSTORFER Beating the bookmakers

LONDON (AP) — A blonde veterinary student from Austria was crowned Miss World on Thursday night in the 37th annual contest beauty pageant, held at London's Royal Albert Hall.

The 5-foot-11 Ulla Weigerstorfer from Vienna was chosen from 67 countries ranging from the American Virgin Islands to Yugoslavia. The 20-year-old was not favored by bookmakers.

The favorite going into the contest, Venezuela's Albani Lazada Jimenez, was first runner-up and Anna-Margret Jonsson of Iceland was second runner-up.

Miss Weigerstorfer, who succeeds Gaëlle Jeanne-Marie Laronde of Trinidad and Tobago, was crowned, with an estimated 500-million people in 50 countries watched the 90-minute show live by satellite.

named winner of the Queen of Beauty trophy for Europe, one of five continental prizes.

Miss Venezuela, a 22-year-old television interviewer from Caracas, was named winner for the Americas.

The other Queens of Beauty were: Miss Nigeria, Mary Ngzi Bideseh; 19, for Africa; Miss Hong Kong, Pauline Po Ling Yeung; 20, for Asia; and Miss Guam, Franciel Caracol, 24, for Oceania.

Miss Austria was chosen from six finalists. In addition to Miss Venezuela and Miss Iceland, they were: Miss Poland, Monika Nowosad; Ewa, 23; Miss Argentina, Katerina Ciscatto, 17; and Miss Colombia, Claudia Escobar Zapata, 21.

last year's seven finalists but didn't make the top three.

The overall winner gets $8,800 and a $44,000 yearlong contract to promote clothes and beauty products worldwide.

For the first time, the contest required entrants to parade in leotards instead of swimsuits in what some viewed as a concession to feminists who considered the bathing suit competition sexist.

"We have to keep up with the times," says Julia Morley, who runs the pageant with her entrepreneur husband, Eric. "Bathing costumes are old hat."

The contest received less than normal coverage by Britain's tabloid newspapers, and the oddsmakers said they had taken in fewer bets than ever.

Miss United States is Clothilde Cabrera, a 23-year-old receptionist from Tampa.

Astrid Lindgren turns 80 Pippi's creator to celebrate birthday

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Forty-two years after she created the rebellious character Pippi Longstocking, author Astrid Lindgren plans to celebrate her 80th birthday in grand style.

Two receptions at the stately Grand Hotel and the opening of a play based on her book, "The Brothers Lionheart," are scheduled for today. Mrs. Lindgren, Sweden's most widely read author, says she will try to get through the day "as smoothly as possible."

For Mrs. Lindgren, the celebrations follow months of traveling, receiving awards and attending film festivals.

"I don't have five minutes' free time this side of Christmas," she said, declining yet another interview.

Many of her 70 books have been translated into 60 languages. Twenty-nine films and television programs have been based on her stories.

production of an American film version of Pippi Longstocking is under way.

"She combines' adoption and revolt," said Margareta Stromstedt, a long-time friend and the author's biographer.

Pippi is an unruly child with incredible strength who rebels against society and makes institutions, like the police and charitable ladies.

Among Mrs. Lindgren's other characters are the children of Noisy Village, who live a happy, orderly and well-adjusted childhood in the Swedish countryside.

She is without age, Mrs. Stromstedt told The Associated Press about Mrs. Lindgren.

"Astrid belongs to the same generation as my parents, but I feel she is a friend of my own age, and my children have always considered her as a friend of their age."

Mrs. Lindgren once said she wrote for the child within herself, meaning she put herself on the child's level and then wrote her feelings and fantasies.

Three weeks ago she received the first Leo Tolstoy medal in Moscow.

Mrs. Lindgren was born Nov. 14, 1907, the daughter of a farmer in Smoland, a hilly wooded province of southern Sweden. She often said her "favorite" character, the good-hearted rascal Emil, was modeled on her father Samuel August Ericsson and the stories he told her of his childhood.

Unwed and pregnant at age 19, she left her community for Stockholm, where she worked in an office. Five years later she married Sture Lindgren. In 1934, the couple had a daughter, Karin.

Iraqi air force continues attacks on shipping, sinks tugboat

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq's air force reported attacks on five vessels during a "massacre" of ships in Iranian waters, and sank a salvage tug Friday while apparently trying to hit a supertanker for the third time in two days.

Ferian Gulf shipping executives said two crewmen were reported killed and four wounded when a radar-guided Exocet missile hit the tug Friday morning.

Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Service, based in London, said the tug "subsequently sank." It was owned by the Senco company of Singapore, but was not identified by name.

At U.N. headquarters in New York, Secretary-general Javier Perez de Cuellar said Iran chose Mohammad Larijani, a deputy foreign minister, as its emissary for U.N. talks aimed at ending the 7-year-old war. He said he would meet this month with Larijani and with Iraq's envoy, Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz.

The tug was the latest reported victim of an aerial blitz in which Iraq has claimed 11 attacks on ships in Iranian waters since Monday, including five in a 20-hour period — through — midday — Friday. Three raids were confirmed independently.

Shipping agents said the tug apparently was near the 264,081-ton Fortuneship L, a Greek tanker chartered by Iran that was disabled by an Iraqi missile Wednesday night and hit a second time about 24 hours later.

Iraq regularly attacks tankers and oil installations in an attempt to destroy the exports with which Iran pays the cost of the war.

Baghdad radio quoted a military spokesman as saying the air raids were "within the framework of our pursuit of the enemy's targets in the gulf waters ... and our planes have achieved the widest massacre of the enemy's targets." It said the attacks were on five "large maritime targets" — the term it uses for ships.

The attacks coincided with reports from Tehran indicating Iran is preparing for a major new land offensive in the southern sector of the 730-mile border war front.

Sources in gulf shipping circles, all speaking on condition of anonymity, said they had few details of the tugboat sinking just south of Kharg Island in the northern gulf, Iran's main oil export terminal. An official at Senco's Singapore office was reached by telephone but would give no information.

The Fortuneship L was carrying a load of crude oil south when hit Wednesday night and was being towed to port for unloading and repairs when the second attack occurred Tuesday.

Iran uses its own and chartered supertankers to move crude from Kharg Island, a frequent target of air raids, to makeshift terminals about 450 miles down the gulf that are harder for Iraqi planes to reach.

Salvage executives said the Eriandamp L caught fire Thursday night after one or two of the sea-skimming Exocets hit its cargo holds. Experts say crude oil tends to smother explosives but sometimes will burn.

BORIS N. YELTSIN
"Big boss syndrome"

Officials denounce Yeltsin

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris N. Yeltsin, tapped by Mikhail S. Gorbachev to head the Moscow party almost two years ago, developed a "big-boss syndrome," thought himself infallible and flouted orders from the top, an official report said Friday.

One Moscow Communist accused his former chief of "treason to the cause of perestroika," the report issued by Soviet news media said. Perestroika is the Kremlin's program to overhaul the economy and society.

Rumors meanwhile swept Moscow that the 56-year-old Yeltsin, who was fired Wednesday after Gorbachev condemned his "personal ambitions," was hospitalized with heart trouble.

Officials contacted at the city's party headquarters and the editorial board of the state-run Tass news agency said they could not confirm the rumors, but refused to deny them.

"I am not a doctor, so I cannot tell you whether comrade Yeltsin has a health problem," said a functionary at the Moscow party committee reached by telephone. He declined to give his name.

A black Chuka station wagon of the type used for official business was seen moving through traffic Friday afternoon near the Kremlin with its curtains drawn.

Emergency vehicles with flashing blue lights also headed toward the seat of Soviet power. The reason for the vehicles' movements was not immediately clear.

Yeltsin is not known to have a history of health problems and appeared fit during the Oct. 19-20 sessions of the Supreme Soviet parliament. His presence at the two-day event was his longest recent appearance in public.

Pravda, the party daily, printed an extraordinarily detailed transcript of the Wednesday meeting of Moscow party leaders that removed Yeltsin for "major shortcomings." The report also was summarized by Tass.

The accounts constitute an uncommon admission of strife in party ranks, and gave the first glimpse of a dispute in the Soviet leadership since Gorbachev became party general secretary in March 1985.

Riot ends quietly in French prison

CHATEAUXROUX, France (AP) — Scores of inmates sicked and burned buildings and took the warden and 11 others hostage in a 17-hour-murder that ended Friday when the rioters released the captives unharmed and surrendered quietly.

Police said five inmates were injured, one seriously, in fights and "settling of accounts" that broke out among prisoners during the night.

The chaplain told reporters the inmates complained about prison conditions, which they said were "becoming oppressive."

"The worst was avoided at the St. Maur Prison thanks to negotiations conducted throughout the night with the most responsible of the prisoners," said Capt. Philippe Legorius, head of a special gendarme intervention group called to the scene.

Tupperware slates late-spring closing date

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — After five months of indecision, Tupperware Co. has announced exactly when it will close its Jerome plant employing close to 700 people.

The company said last June it was going to close its plant by the end of the year. However, they did not issue a firm date until Friday.

Jerome Plant Manager John Forbes announced Friday that, based on sales forecasts and expansion plans in the company's other two plants, Tupperware estimates the closure will occur in a window of time between April and June 1988.

But the 700 employees of the plant still won't know when layoffs will start because those details haven't been worked out, Forbes said.

"This is more definite than it's been," Forbes said. "They don't know exactly when they'll be laid off, but they know the time frame."

Tupperware said in June that it will be closing the Jerome plant to focus its production east of the Mississippi River where two of its three plants are located and also to change its distribution system.

Tupperware has three manufacturing plants, in Jerome, in Halla, Tenn., and in Hemingway, S.C. None of the plants were operating at full capacity when Tupperware announced its move.

The company also offered Jerome workers the option of moving to one of its eastern plants when the Idaho plant closes down.

Although the labor force as a whole in Jerome don't know exactly when they will lose their jobs, the hourly employees interested in jobs at the company's other plants have been getting encouraging news.

Both the Tennessee and South Carolina plant managers have interviewed interested Jerome workers, Forbes said, and most of those workers should get jobs at the other plants.

About 40 Jerome workers said they were interested in jobs at the company's Tennessee plant and Forbes said about the same number were offered jobs at that plant.

And Forbes said the South Carolina plant manager said he will offer jobs to any hourly employee who is interested.

Tupperware will begin moving its molding machines out of the plant the week of Nov. 23 when they will take 10 of its 79 machines east.

Forbes said that about 50 of Jerome's molding machines are being used and the removal of the 10 machines in November won't affect the workforce.

CSMA director Lawrence Reed discusses the 'repressive' Sandinista government while George Tallabas listens

Repressive image lingers with group

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If Lawrence Reed were to compress into five words the message spurred by his visit to Nicaragua last week, he might select the platitude axiom: "Don't believe everything you hear."

Reed, executive director of the Center for the Study of Market Alternatives, returned Tuesday from his week-long visit to the Central American country. He was accompanied on the trip by three other people, including the center's assistant director, Barbara Sall, and Caldwell businessman George Tallabas.

"The CSMA is a public-policy think tank located in Caldwell.

After saying that other visiting organizations have tended to concentrate in Managua and have traveled "strictly under the guidance of government people and have therefore come back with pretty much one point of view," Sall said Friday that her group opted for an alternate path.

"We went out on our own to get a feel for what the people were saying," she said. "We believe we got a pretty good feeling — the best one could get in a seven-day period."

Reed, Sall and Tallabas were in Twin Falls Friday to discuss their findings with a group of people assembled by Tom Stivers, former secretary of the state house of representatives.

According to Reed, their travels brought them into contact with black-long bread lines, restricted religious expression, a shackled press and strong popular discord with the Sandinista government.

"This is a very repressive regime," Reed said. "It's because of the regime that there is a war. Even if there were no U.S. involvement, there would still be a war, there would still be strong resistance."

While Reed had few kind words for the Sandinista government, he reserved his harshest criticism for such organizations as Witness for Peace, which he said "covers up and whitewashes the regime."

"They will fabricate to conform with their preconceived notions," he said. "It's despicable in my book. I think they're collaborators of oppression."

Reed said that much of the distortion stems from the Nicaraguan government's Human Rights Commission, which is run by an American nun, Sister Mary Hartman.

"She (Hartman) is quick to say this is a wonderful regime ... but admits that she's never been in El Chipote and never intends to go," he said.

El Chipote is a prison in Managua which, according to Reed, is home to many of the country's political prisoners.

According to Tallabas, "Those people who are really suffering, they were really happy to see us because they said they had never before had any Americans come down and talk with them."

He added, "The people just went up and grabbed you. They wanted to tell you their story."

That story was one of discontent with the course the country has taken since the overthrow of the Somoza dictatorship, Tallabas said.

"The general message was that the Sandinista government made an awful lot of promises in 1979, during the revolution, and that an impression of the general Soviet populace and a steadfast belief in the advantages of the free-enterprise system. The former changed; the latter did not."

"I went over there with a very hawkish attitude toward the Soviet Union," he said. "I didn't have any trust in them at all. I didn't like them and I didn't have any use for them."

"But after I got there, I found out that only 5 percent of the people are Communists."

While Whittom wasn't particularly attracted to that 5 percent, describing them as "people who were climbing over the top of each other to get to the top," he said the great majority of the population left a distinctly different impression.

"The 95 percent of the people who aren't Communist are just common folk people trying to get by," he said. "They were one of the most loving, caring people I have met."

Whittom, however, has few kind words for the system within which those people are working. He said he was "appalled" at the lack of machinery available for farming, noting that most work was done by hand.

"I have a picture of three people herding five heads of cattle. Keeping them out of row crops just because they didn't have any fencing," he said.

Cassia decides on a school bus bid

By DONNA SCHORZMAN
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The Cassia County School Board voted to reject the lowest bid for three new buses at its meeting this week.

The lowest bid was submitted by Amtrain Northwest for Ward-bus bodies, but the board unanimously voted to reject the bid in favor of the bid submitted by Blue Bird.

The difference in the bids was less than $300 per bus, and the maintenance costs incurred by the Ward buses the district already owns justifies the expense, board members said.

Leon Robinson, transportation supervisor, said that the Ward bodies, seats and the electric switches must constantly be replaced. He also said there has been a problem with the tie-down bolts breaking.

Superintendent Norman Hurst told the board that the repair bills from body shops to maintain the Ward buses will outweigh the higher cost of the Bluebird buses.

Board member Gene Copeland said, "If these body bolts break, that can be a safety hazard, so that would justify the difference."

Goode Motor Inc. submitted the lowest bid for the bus chassis and this bid was accepted.

The board also heard a request from Bob Jacobs. Jacobs asked for a waiver of the policy of withdrawing from a class for his daughter Tara. The district policy allows students to withdraw from a class and transfer into another one during the first two weeks of school. If they drop a class after the two week period, they can only be transferred into no credit classes, and must take an F for the class they dropped.

Jacobs maintained that in the case of his daughter, who is a top student at Burley High School, the rule should be waived. He con-

It's a different world, Whittom says

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Though the Soviet Union and the United States both dominate the geopolitical "First World," according to Bill Whittom, the two countries are nevertheless worlds apart.

Whittom, who is currently in his 11th year as Rupert mayor, visited the Soviet Union two years ago with a group of private individuals and government leaders. Whittom said he was profoundly affected by his two-week visit, and that since returning he has tried to make those effects even more far-reaching by sharing his experiences with others.

As part of that effort, Whittom described his discoveries and conclusions to the Twin Falls County Farm-Bureau annual meeting Thursday night at the Jurl Club.

"I question whether the USSR can get turned around as quickly as Gorbachev would like to see it," Whittom told the Times-News Wednesday. "I think they're going to have a real tough time, because they've been 70-plus years with the people the way they are now."

"I just don't think they know how to deal with such things as privatization."

According to Whittom, he began the trip harboring numerous preconceptions, including a negative impression of the general Soviet populace and a steadfast belief in the advantages of the free-enterprise system. The former changed; the latter did not.

"I went over there with a very hawkish attitude toward the Soviet Union," he said. "I didn't have any trust in them at all. I didn't like them and I didn't have any use for them."

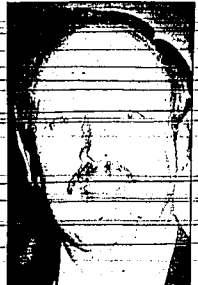

"But after I got there, I found out that only 5 percent of the people are Communists."

While Whittom wasn't particularly attracted to that 5 percent, describing them as "people who were climbing over the top of each other to get to the top," he said the great majority of the population left a distinctly different impression.

"The 95 percent of the people who aren't Communist are just common folk people trying to get by," he said. "They were one of the most loving, caring people I have met."

Whittom, however, has few kind words for the system within which those people are working. He said he was "appalled" at the lack of machinery available for farming, noting that most work was done by hand.

"I have a picture of three people herding five heads of cattle. Keeping them out of row crops just because they didn't have any fencing," he said.

Closing arguments set in Berg trial

DENVER (AP) — Testimony ended Friday in the trial of four white supremacists accused of civil rights violations in the death of a Jewish radio talk show host, and the judge rejected motions for acquittal or mistrial.

The rulings by U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch cleared the way for closing arguments to begin Monday. The judge then will issue instructions to jurors who listened to more than 100 witnesses since testimony began Nov. 6.

Jean Craig, Richard Scutari, David Luce and Bruce Pierce, all members of a neo-Nazi group called The Order, face federal civil rights charges in the June 18, 1984, slaying of Alan Berg, who often spoke out against the Ku Klux Klan and other white supremacist organizations.

Only one witness was called for rebuttal arguments: Randall Rurney returned to the stand to testify he had seen Gary Yarbrough before and after the Berg killing, and that Yarbrough had a full beard both times.

That apparently was to rebut testimony by one of Berg's former neighbors, Darlene DeWitt. She said she saw a man run down an alley several hours before Berg's death and in court identified a picture of Yarbrough which testimony indicated showed him clean-shaven.

Rader's testimony was apparently intended to dispel suggestions that Yarbrough and Order founder Robert Matthews killed Berg.

Mathews died in fire at his Whidbey Island, Wash., hideout, during a standoff with federal agents in December 1984 and Yarbrough is in prison after being convicted in a 1985 Seattle racketeering case against 23 white supremacists. The four defendants in the Berg trial also were convicted in that case.

Students up on condom dispensers

BOISE (AP) — Boise State University students like the idea of installing vending machines on campus to dispense condoms, according to an advisory vote conducted this week.

"We figured students would vote this way," BSU Student Body President Perry Waddell said of the proposal aimed at stemming the spread of acquired immune deficiency syndrome. "Now it's a matter of taking the recommendation to the administration and seeing what they decide."

The advisory ballot asked students if they favored installing condom vending machines in the Student Health Service building, Student Union Building and residence halls.

Students approved in each case: 555 to 160 for the Student Health Service building, 436 to 277 for the Student Union Building and 472 to 243 in the residence halls.

The vote was conducted Wednesday and Thursday in conjunction with the election of student body senators.

"A growing number of universities are doing this as part of AIDS prevention and it seemed like something we should consider," Waddell said.

The student body Senate now will discuss the poll with other student groups and prepare a proposal to present to BSU administrators for approval.

David Taylor, Boise State's vice-president of student affairs, said he and other administrators would withhold their opinions until the senate prepared a proposal.

"Right now, there are as many different opinions as there are administrators," Taylor said.

Reactor restart gets qualified OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House-Senate conference committee report Friday tied restarting the N. Reactor at the Hanford nuclear reservation to assurances from the Department of Energy that "it is safe to operate."

But the committee also said that if the department is "unable to make a timely restart" of the aging defense production reactor, it should be mothballed.

While the defense conference panel did not define the phrase "timely restart," congressmen from the Northwest said they were split as to its meaning anywhere between six months and the end of the current fiscal year on Sept. 30.

"It opens the window for restart, but we don't know the size of the window," said Rep. Sid Morrison, R-Wash., whose district includes the Hanford reservation.

The N Reactor, which has operated for nearly 25 years, was shut down in January for $68 million worth of safety improvements prompted by a nuclear accident at Chernobyl in the Soviet Union.

The conference committee report represents a carefully crafted compromise between House legislation that required the energy secretary to certify the reactor was safe before it could be restarted, and Senate legislation that called for the reactor's outright mothballing.

Conference committees are appointed to iron out differences in House and Senate versions of the same bill. The conference committee report still has to be approved by both chambers before being sent to the president.

In addition, the House and the Senate have yet to agree on funding for the restart and operation of the reactor.

The House has passed a bill that includes such funding, but an appropriations bill now pending on the Senate floor does not, said a spokesman for Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., who has staunchly opposed restart of the reactor.

"Nothing is final until there is a decision on appropriations," said Rick Ruff, a Hatfield spokesman.

Sen. Dan Evans, R-Wash., said however, he believed there would be sufficient funds available to allow DOE to restart the reactor.

"I think it is an appropriate move," Evans said of the conference committee's action. "A very big first hurdle has been cleared."

Blaze leaves family homeless

CASTLEFORD — Castleford volunteer firefighters battled an apartment-blaze in the early morning hours Friday that left a young family homeless.

Castleford Fire Chief Bob Sample said the fire in a four-plex apartment building on Main Street started about 2:55 a.m.

"Nobody was hurt, we got everybody out," he said. Three people and a small child were in the apartments at the time.

Nine volunteer firefighters fought the blaze for six hours, Sample said. The fire, which caused an estimated $200,000 damage, was started by a stove. But Sample said the exact cause is still under investigation.

Sample said the fire began in Apt. 2 where Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Quinton, and their two-year-old son were living. He said the fire destroyed their belongings.

There was also fire damage to two adjoining apartments.

Visit

When you go there as an American who is not attached to the Sandinista government, you are immediately convinced that his campaign of hatred against the United States has failed, completely," she said.

The foursome met numerous other Americans during their time in Nicaragua, including Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, and New York City Mayor Ed Koch, who is spearheading an independent commission monitoring compliance with the Central America peace agreement signed by five of the region's presidents last August.

In addition to speaking to people throughout the countryside, the group — which was accompanied by a cameraman from KTVB in Boise — met briefly with Tomas Borge, Nicaragua's minister of the interior.

As for the future, Reed recommended something of a wait-and-see posture.

"I think it's premature to dump the peace process, but I'm very pessimistic that it will happen," he said. "If January comes and it's apparent that the Sandinistas have just been dragging their feet to kill Contra aid — which I suspect I would recommend further military aid for the Contras."

But in the meantime, Reed said that he would like to see an accurate picture of the Nicaraguans' conditions and sentiments presented to the American public.

"Contra abuses have taken place and we all know that," he said. "But it's never been to the extent that it's been played up to, and it pales in comparison to the abuses of the Sandinista regime."

"I think the fair approach ought to be that whenever human rights abuses occur, they should be highlighted and condemned."

Along those lines, Reed said that he would like to see a congressional committee investigate the country's current state of affairs through interviews with such anti-government organizations as Mothers of Political Prisoners as well as those epitomized by Hartman's commission.

USSR

According to Whitton, the Soviet Union's agricultural system is also fostered by antiquated watering systems and an underdeveloped network of rural roads. But looking at the country's low agricultural output, he places ultimate blame on the fact that it lacks the incentive inherent in its economic structure.

"They didn't show a lot of concern," he said. "It wasn't their farm wasn't their wheat crop wasn't their cattle. There wasn't much desire to make it better."

Almost paradoxically, however, Whitton said he would prefer that no tonic be injected into that stagnation.

"The most scary thing I hear today from Gorbachev and his puppets is that they're thinking of revamping their agricultural system to allow a little more free enterprise, a little more entrepreneurship," he said. "And that could hurt us badly. We just made a big sale to them the other day."

Whitton added, "They have such a massive amount of land that if they went to free enterprise it could turn them into a production monster."

Whitton also doubts that the Soviet people could adjust to such changes on a broader, sociological level.

"I think the sad thing is that if we went over there and cut the wires, broke the Iron Curtain, then it would be like turning animals in a zoo out into the wild," he said. "The government would do everything for them. The drive and desire just aren't there."

Whitton also noted other byproducts of the system, including rampant alcoholism, prostitution and a vigorous black market. He said he received offers of up to $400 for a pair of jeans in Leningrad.

As for Whitton's own motivation in originally making the trip, he said it was simply the proverbial quest for knowledge.

"I went over there because I

Hi Fi killer seeks court date to hear oral arguments of writ

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A judge on Friday scheduled a Dec. 17 hearing on a motion to overturn the death sentence of convicted Hi Fi Shop murderer William Andrews.

Third District Judge David Young told the manacled death-row inmate that he would hear oral arguments on Andrews' request for a writ of habeas corpus in which his attorneys argue that the trial judge in 1974 failed to properly instruct the jury.

Andrews' petition, filed last month, contends that 2nd District Judge John F. Wahlgren should have instructed jurors that Andrews could have been convicted of second-degree murder in the torture-killing of three people at the Ogden stereo store April 22, 1974.

Instead, jurors were left to believe their only options were to acquit Andrews or convict him of first-degree murder, defense lawyers contend. Andrews, 32, of Jonesboro, La., and Pierre Dale Selby were convicted and sentenced to death for the murders. Selby was executed Aug. 28 by lethal injection.

Andrews' third appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court is pending, with the state having just responded this week.

Assistant Attorney General David Thompson said the state would move to have the 3rd District petition dismissed on procedural grounds. If it is dismissed, Andrews can appeal to the Utah Supreme Court and to federal appellate court, but Thompson said afterward he did not expect the latest appeal to drag on for long.

Because Andrews already has had a petition for habeas corpus denied by the U.S. Supreme Court, it is unlikely courts will be receptive to a new appeal, Thompson said.

Andrews did not speak during the 20-minute proceeding.

The judge granted a request by defense attorney Joe Tesch that Andrews not be manacled during the Dec. 17 hearing so that he can write notes and freely confer with his lawyers.

"There is no history whatsoever of this young man ever having acted up in court. We think although he was convicted of murder he has never killed anyone," Tesch said.

A contention that is part of Andrews' Supreme Court appeal is that he was out of the Hi-Fi Shop basement when Selby shot the victims and two others who survived.

However, the state has contended that Andrews helped pour lethal doses of liquid drain cleaner the victims were forced to drink, and that the high court already has ruled that a convicted murderer need not have actually killed the victim if he is part of a conspiracy to do so.

Rocket motors to be burned

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The rocket motors from a Pershing II missile will be burned at western Utah's Tooele Army Depot Nov. 21 in a test of the military's demilitarization procedures for the intermediate-range nuclear weapon, the Army said Friday.

The announcement came as arrangements are being made for a summit meeting next month between Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and President Reagan. The 264-day motorings are to be highlighted by the formal signing of a superpower agreement to eliminate intermediate-range missiles.

However, Army officials would not say outright that the test-burn was tied to the treaty, or whether further missile burning was planned. Such questions were referred to the Pentagon, which had no immediate comment.

The United States has 108 of the nuclear-tipped Pershing II missiles in Europe, and they, along with several hundred ground-launched Cruise missiles, are targeted in the treaty for elimination.

TAD spokesman Allen Kenitzer confirmed the test-burn, saying it would be conducted in a 40-foot-deep pit being excavated in the sprawling desert installation's South Area, about 50 miles southwest of Salt Lake City.

He referred further questions to David Harris, director of public affairs for the U.S. Army Missile Command at Redstone Arsenal, Ala.

Tooele is being done at our request," Harris said in a telephone interview. "What we want to do, specifically, is run a test to verify the demilitarization procedures for the rocket motors of the Pershing II missile."

He said the Army planned to burn both the first- and second-stage motor of the missile, containing 7,600 and 4,900 pounds of propellant, respectively. The motors will be placed in the pit one at a time, after which explosive charges will be attached to their casings.

When the charges are detonated, the plastic casings will split, exposing the propellant, which will then burn, Harris explained.

Mill owner seeks to rent to aid workers

KAMIAH (AP) — The owner of Kamiah Mills says he is negotiating to lease space in a neighboring mill to give jobs to employees who were thrown out of work by an Oct. 20 fire.

August Klause, owner of Kamiah Mills, a subsidiary of Empire Lumber Co. of Spokane, said Thursday that he and officials of Triple R Forest Products were working toward an agreement for Kamiah Mills to lease time, space and equipment at Triple R.

The fire put about 45 people out of work.

"We're trying everything we can to get people back to work and keep the kids in school," Klause said. "We would lease the night shift and operate with our people."

The investigation into the cause of the planer mill fire is continuing. Klause said rebuilding the Kamiah mill will depend on an Idaho Supreme Court decision on construction of a energy co-generation plant at the mill.

"We're going to be answered," Klause said. "The Hutchins-Timberline mills at Weippe, which saw timber for Kamiah Mills, have continued to operate since the fire and there is no expected shutdown there, Klause said."

The Idaho Supreme Court has already upheld the IPUC decision once.

Prison inmates file suit over strip, confiscation rule in Oregon prison

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Prison inmates are suing the state to challenge a policy of confiscating clothing and bedding when inmates disobey rules, corrections officials say. Robey-Eldridge, a state Corrections Division spokesman, said Thursday that the items are seized when inmates use them to clog toilets and flood the cells and tiers. They are returned when each inmate's behavior improves, he said.

In one incident, inmates collected their own feces and urine in cups and threw it on guards as they entered the cellblock to stop the toilets from flooding, Eldridge said.

The lawsuits were filed in U.S. District Court in Eugene this month by inmates confined to the segregation units of both the Oregon State Penitentiary and the Oregon State Correctional Institution.

The inmates contend that the stripping policy violates their constitutional rights. They also complained that they have been prohibited from smoking and that their access to some reading and writing materials has been restricted.

Eldridge said the division had to prohibit smoking in the segregation unit to keep inmates from using matches to create an explosive device.

The smoking policy was ordered more than six months ago after one inmate shot another with a homemade weapon made from matches, paper clips and magazines, Eldridge said.

On Monday, some inmates held up toilet tissue to a light bulb and blew on the paper to ignite it. "It started a small fire on the tier, which had the potential of being life threatening," Eldridge said.

Some corrections officers suffered sprains as they removed some of the inmates and their property from their cells, he said.

Clothing and bedding had been returned to all the penitentiary inmates by Thursday, he added.

Board to set research plan

POCATELLO (AP) — A new state Board of Education committee on academic research makes its first visit to an Idaho college here next week.

The 15-member Advisory Committee on Academic Research was set up by the board to review research at Idaho State, Idaho, Boise State and Lewis-Clark State College, and make recommendations on the best way to spend state support for higher education research.

Ed House, dean of the graduate school, will moderate ISU's presentation, prepared by 16 faculty members and administrators.

The advisory committee plans a morning tour of research facilities followed by afternoon hearings. The visit will end with a meeting with the school's administration.

The review committee includes members of the Board of Education, two state legislators, one representative of each school, three outside educators and two members of the public.

Despite good news, market loses ground

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market found in subdued trading Friday, running into resistance from sellers after Thursday's broad rally. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 25.20 to 1,935.01, finishing the week with a net loss of 24.04 points. The average jumped 61.01 points in Thursday's session. Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 7 to 6 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 672 up, 924 down and 381 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 174.92 million shares, against 206.28 million in the previous session. The market had some favorable news on inflation going for it, in the form of the Labor Department's report that the producer price index of finished goods dropped 0.2 percent last month. Separate government figures showed a smaller-than-expected 0.1 percent decline in retail sales for October. That news came atop Thursday's report that the nation's trade deficit narrowed in September. However, analysts said many traders were leery of chasing after the market's recent rally, suspecting that more time might be needed for stocks to recover from the shock of last month's crash. One presumed obstacle to any sustained recovery in the market is an unknown amount of stock held by investors through the crash and now earmarked for sale when and if conditions improve. In addition, brokers said, uncertainty persisted over the prospective outcome of talks in Washington on possible measures to shrink the federal budget deficit. White House and Congressional negotiators finished the week with no agreement to announce, but there were expectations that they might agree on a plan soon. Among Friday's volume leaders, Ford Motor rose 1/4 to 76 1/2 and Eastman Kodak gained 1/4 to 49 1/2, but American Telephone & Telegraph slipped 1/4 to 29 3/4 and International Business Machines was down 1/4 at 121 1/4. Gordon Jewelry chalked up all the day's best percentage gain among NYSE issues, up 2 1/4 at 13 1/4. The company said it plans to make a tender offer next week for 2 million of its shares at $16 a share. Squibb dropped 1/4 to 73 and Merck fell 1/4 to 17 1/4. Analysts said Merck apparently is to market a drug that would compete with Squibb's anti-hypertension drug Capoten. As measured by Wilshire-Associated index of more than 6,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $2.91 billion, or 0.87 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped 1.28 to 137.80. Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 195.47 million shares. Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrial fell 4.55 to 281.12, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 4.77 at 245.64. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market dropped 1.03 to 322.97. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 251.44, down .11.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sales of existing homes, hurt by rising mortgage rates, fell in 28 states during the peak summer sales season, a real estate trade group reported Friday. The National Association of Realtors said 14 states, concentrated in depressed energy and farm regions, suffered sales declines of 10 percent or more from July through September compared with the same period a year ago. The biggest setbacks were in Colorado, where sales were down 28.3 percent, and Wyoming, where sales fell 29.5 percent. Both states were hurt by a slump in oil and gas exploration caused by falling energy prices. Overall, the seasonally adjusted annual rate of sales of existing single-family units during the summer, down 3.3 percent from the same period a year ago. In addition to Colorado and Wyoming, other states with big declines in sales during the summer were Idaho, down 24.4 percent; Nebraska, down 23.4 percent; Arkansas, down 22.7 percent; and Montana, with a 20.1 percent sales decline. Other areas with double-digit declines were Illinois, Missouri, Mississippi, Washington, Michigan, Ohio, Wisconsin, Utah and the District of Columbia. While sales were falling, home prices were rising. The median sales price climbed to $85,400, 5.8 percent higher than a year ago when the midpoint price was $80,700. New York City and Boston held onto their spots as the costliest housing areas in the country with median sales prices of $183,000 and $181,800 respectively. The Northeast has seen prices climb much faster than other regions of the country as heavy demand has outstripped supplies. Home sales were up 70.7 percent in Delaware, the biggest increase of any state, followed by a 50 percent gain in Alaska, and a 34 percent increase in Nevada. But the few bright spots in sales were outweighed by a general slump in activity with declines in 28 states and the District of Columbia. The declines ranged from a modest 0.5 percent dip in Florida to double-digit tumbles in 14 states. While most cities had price increases compared to a year ago, 10 of the 63 areas surveyed saw price declines. The biggest drop was in Las Vegas where a 5.7 percent decline pushed the median price of an existing home down to $76,000. The most inexpensive housing in the country was found in Louisville, Ky., where an existing home sold for a median price of $63,300 during the summer, down 0.7 percent from the summer of 1986.

Home sales plummet sharply during summer

IRA deductions untouched for some

Starting in 1987, the Tax Reform Act puts new restrictions on IRA deductions. But for some taxpayers, the deduction remains untouched. These taxpayers can continue to annually contribute and deduct $2,000 ($2,500 total for spousal IRAs).

Sylvia Porter

part allocable to earnings on the contribution is taxable and subject to a 10 percent penalty. However, if you are eligible for an IRA deduction, those tax savings could exceed the tax you would owe for the plan withdrawal.

IRA deductions untouched for some

If you are an active participant in an employer-paid retirement plan (including a Keogh) and have a joint adjusted gross income of $50,000 or more ($35,000 if single), the tax eliminated your IRA deduction. For those with joint incomes in the $40,000-$49,999 range ($25,000-$34,000 for singles), the maximum IRA deduction limit is reduced proportionally. What do you do if you still qualify for the IRA deduction, try to make maximum use of it. If you don't qualify for the deduction, you can still make a $2,000 (or $2,250 spousal) IRA contribution for 1987. And doing so can still cut your tax bill for years to come. Here's how: While the contribution itself is not deductible, IRA earnings grow untaxed until they are withdrawn. By compounding without any tax bite, amounts contributed to an IRA can increase your wealth faster than if those same dollars were put into taxable investments. If a temporary cash crunch is all that's keeping you from making your 1987 IRA contribution, here are some strategies that may help you come up with those dollars. (The deadline for making 1987 contributions is April 15, 1988).

Third in a series

1. Use your anticipated tax refund: Say you do not have $2,000 in hand to make a contribution before you file your return, but you expect a big tax refund from the government for the 1987 tax year. File your 1987 return as soon as possible and claim your IRA deduction. Reason: You stand a good chance of getting your refund back before April 15 (now, of course, the refund may be even bigger because of the IRA deduction). You then use all or part of your refund to make your contribution. The deduction you claimed on your return will stand up, as long as you make your contribution by April 15, 1988. 2. Withdraw voluntarily: If you belong to a profit-sharing plan that permits voluntary non-deductible employee contributions, you may be able to get a $2,000 deduction without spending any additional money. Withdrawing from the plan $2,000 of your voluntary contributions and using the money for an IRA contribution. Starting in 1987, only part of a withdrawal from an employee contribution account is considered a tax return capital. The other part (the

Geneva mill opens 2nd blast furnace

OREM, Utah (AP) - The increasing price of steel scrap here spurred the reopening of a second blast furnace at Geneva Steel of Utah, company spokesman Jack Bohan says.

Because of the higher costs, Geneva is using more hot metal from the blast furnaces, which produce iron from ore, to replace the use of some scrap in the steelmaking process, he said.

Geneva already is doing better than its owner, Basic Manufacturing and Technologies of Utah, had expected. More than 1,600 employees are working at the plant, some 300 more than the company anticipated hiring.

CORRECTION

The time for the Auction for the Carpenters Apprenticeship Training Trust-Rocky Mtn. Dist. Council was incorrect. It should have been 10:00 A.M. Nov. 14, 1987

Cowboys inform Dorsett he'll play behind Walker

TONY DORSETT Demoted

DALLAS (AP) — Herschel Walker is the Dallas Cowboys' back of the future — the near future, Coach Tom Landry said.

Walker is scheduled to start for the first time at tailback Sunday against New England, Landry said Thursday.

Walker's start could spell the end of the Tony Dorsett era in Dallas. Dorsett, 33, has gained more than 1,000 yards in eight of his 10 seasons with the Cowboys.

"Our future rests in Herschel. Everybody knows that," Landry said after meeting Thursday with Dorsett. "He knows where we're headed. We're moving through a transition period where eventually we'll put him (Walker) at starting tailback."

The team had been struggling for 1 1/2 seasons with the problem of how to play two Heisman Trophy winners in the same backfield.

Injuries to both running backs last year kept coaches from resolving the problem, but this season the running game and the team (4-4) have languished despite both runners being healthy.

Since the NFL players' strike ended in mid-October, Walker and Dorsett have expressed the need for the Cowboys to feature one back instead of splitting the workload.

Despite Walker's starting Sunday, Landry said, "Tony will come in some time along the way. We'll still have formations where they'll both be in there at times. But our basic one will be with Timmy (Newsome) at fullback and a tailback running the ball."

But after his meeting with Landry, Dorsett said he still was unclear about the situation.

"I said, 'Coach, I can see what's going on. I want to know what my role is.' I still haven't got a definition, but everybody knows that Herschel is the future back," Dorsett said. "I don't know exactly what his thinking is. I am not going to spend a whole lot of time trying to figure it out. But we are going to try and make this work."

Walker, 25, said reports that came out of a telephone conference call with New England writers, indicating he would like to be traded and was considering quitting after the 1987 season, were misleading.

"I answered questions that they gave me and they probably took those answers and left out the questions, which is unfair to me. But it's also unfair to them. I answered the questions," Walker told The Dallas Morning News.

"I met with coach Landry and I just wanted to let him know that I'm here to play football. I'm frustrated but I'm not saying, 'Take me out, I'm going to leave.' If I can become better at my role, I'll be more comfortable."

Dorsett has little choice than to accept his role, as the league's trading deadline was Nov. 3. The Cowboys said they made no attempt to trade Dorsett and would be prohibited from doing so until after the Super Bowl.

In last week's loss to Detroit, Walker gained 65 yards to Dorsett's 29 but did not carry the ball in the fourth quarter, which touched off another round of Walker's complaints about his role.

In the wake of Sunday's disaster at Buffalo, the Denver Broncos have worked overtime, all week — protecting the punter as they get ready for Monday night's game against the Chicago Bears in Denver.

"When you have two punts blocked in a game," said Broncos Coach Dan Reeves, "you can be sure teams are going to test you. It's not going to end this week, and it's not going to end two weeks from now."

One thing about that 17-17 tie against the Green Bay Packers at Milwaukee early in the season is that the Broncos won't have to wrack their brains this season trying to figure out the NFL's tie-breaking procedure.

"I don't think we're going to have to worry about any tie-breaker situations this year," said Reeves. "With the half-game we have, we've got to make sure we're a half-game ahead, not a half-game behind."

If former Bronco Mark Cooper worked out for the Tampa Bay Bucs Friday, you didn't hear it from the Bucs. Here's what Tampa Bay public relations director Rick Odoso said when asked Friday if Cooper, as he said he would, worked out for the team:

Chargers put 7-game winning streak on line

By The Associated Press

The San Diego Chargers have found a way to pass the Raiders by, and it hasn't been only on the strength of Dan Fouts' throwing arm.

With a sound running game and a revitalized defense, the Chargers like on struggling Los Angeles at San Diego on Sunday night: The Chargers have won seven straight and lead second-place Seattle by two games in the AFC West.

The 36-year-old Fouts needs only four touchdown passes to equal Sonny Jurgensen's 255 career TD passes, which rank third on the all-time NFL list.

"I'm playing like this is my last shot," Fouts said.

The Raiders, 3-5, have lost five straight and haven't lost six in a row since the start of the 1962 season. Coach Tom Flores has scouted Rusty Hilger at quarterback and "put Marc Wilson back in" the starting role.

"The record that we have is not something that we're used to. It's very painful," Flores said. "The chances of a playoff spot are remote, but they are there ... We're approaching this as a tough game that we have to win."

San Diego Coach Al Saunders is wary of the Raiders despite their record.

"They're going to explode on somebody," Saunders said. "There's no question they've got tremendous talent, defensively and offensively and you have to have an outstanding game to compete with a team and an organization like that."

Flores said Marcus Allen remains the starting running back, but that rookie Bo Jackson would get plenty of playing time and both Heisman Trophy winners may be in the backfield at times.

There should be some unscrupulous Sunday in the AFC East, with all five teams — Indianapolis, Miami, New England, Buffalo and the New York Jets — have 4-4 records.

Indianapolis is at home against Miami, New England plays host to Dallas, Buffalo visits Cleveland and the Jets journey to Kansas City.

In Sunday's other games, it's New Orleans at San Francisco, Detroit at Washington, Houston at Pittsburgh, the Los Angeles Rams at St. Louis, Tampa Bay at Minnesota, the New York Giants at Philadelphia, Cincinnati at Atlanta and Green Bay at Seattle.

Chicago visits Denver on Monday night.

Gary Hogeboom, sidelined with a rib injury, returns at quarterback for Indianapolis, which was beaten by San Diego 16-13 last Sunday as Eric Dickerson committed a key fumble. Dickerson, however, ran for 138 yards on 35 carries in his first start since the trade with the Rams.

The Colts will attempt to stop Dan Marino, the NFL's top-rated passer. He has thrown TD passes in 28 consecutive games. The Dolphins beat the Colts in the first meeting, a replacement game.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry is talking about starting Steve Pollner at quarterback in place of Danny White and said he is giving running back Herschel Walker more playing time. Backup Steve Grogan remains at quarterback for the Patriots, who will host the Seattle Seahawks in five meetings.

The Buffalo-Cleveland matchup could result in a passing duel between the Bills' Jim Kelly and the Bernie Kosar of the Browns, 5-3. Bills' running back Rob Riddick is hurt, but rookie linebacker Cornelius Bennett bolsters the Buffalo defense.

The Jets beat Seattle 30-14 Monday night, but lost tight end Mickey Shuler and wide receiver Wesley Walker because of injuries. Kansas City, 1-7, attempts to end a seven-game skid.

Washington, 6-2 and the leader in the AFC East, is a big favorite to beat Detroit, 2-5, which is coming off a win over Dallas last week. The Lions have lost all 13 meetings in Washington. The last time the Lions won was 14-10 in 1966.

Houston quarterback Warren Moon has prime receivers in Drew Hill and Ernest Givins. Pittsburgh's Mark Malone is the lowest-rated NFL quarterback. Both teams are 5-3.

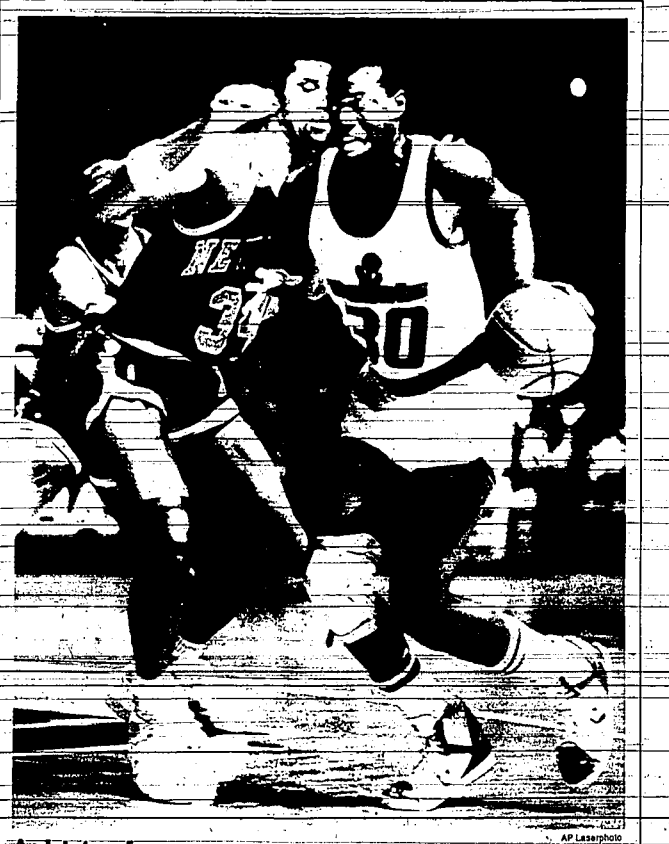

St. Louis, 3-5, made a great comeback against Tampa Bay last week, while the 1-7 Rams have lost four straight.

Tampa Bay holds a victory over Minnesota in a replacement game. Back at quarterback for the Vikings is Walter Wilson, who took over for Tommy Kramer in and tossed two touchdown passes in the second half of last week's 31-20 victory over the Raiders.

Green Bay, 3-4, looks for another standout game from quarterback Randy Wright, who was impressive in a loss to Chicago. Seattle, 6-3, tries to rebound after a 30-14 rout by the Jets last Monday night.

Steve Young will start at quarterback for the San Francisco 49ers. Coach Bill Walsh announced after Friday's practice, and Joe Montana's status remains in doubt for the important game against the New Orleans Saints, 5-3, host the NFL's No. 1 rated defense.

Montana has a sprained knuckle on his right index finger, an injury suffered in practice on Wednesday.

Climate cools for commercial ventures of ever-fuller Fridge

The Denver Post

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — William Perry still flashes that gap-tooth smile from the occasional billboard hereabouts, but for the most part, commercial America seems to have fallen back from its all-out raid on the Refrigerator.

For most of the past two years it has been a colorful, flavorful and exceptionally filling repast, but now the hunger that burns in the belly of Chicago craves something else: It just might be time to push away from the table, clear the dishes and determine what kind of football player lurks beneath the flesh and hype.

Bears Coach Mike Ditka, who often publicly scolds Perry to keep his 220-plus pounds under control, still sees great promise for his namethrough defensive tackle. But he voices doubt about whether Perry simultaneously can fill his potential and his stomach.

"It's not like he's not playing pretty good," Ditka says. "I just think it's unfortunate because we all need to discipline ourselves somewhere in life. He's got to do that. It's not this year or next year maybe, but it's going to take two or three years off his career unless he changes. And that's what you don't want to see happen. I'd like to see him have as much earning power as he can, but I don't know if that'll happen. I've beaten that horse quite a few times. It's tired of me beating it."

Perry's weight became an issue this season even before training camp, when Ditka warned him not to bother showing up if he tipped the scales at 325 or higher. He expressed dismay that Perry hadn't collected the $40,000 bonus in his contract for working out three times a week at the team's headquarters during the off-season. Perry argued the summer in his hometown of Aiken, S.C., building a house.

"When he told Ditka over the telephone that he'd been running twice a day, the coach half-jokingly speculated Perry's course ran "from the refrigerator to the bathroom." Later, Ditka even criticized Perry's wife, Sherry, for "apparently not valuing the significance of her husband's weight and doing her part to keep it under control."

Responding to the intermittent tirades and criticism, the Fridge keeps cool.

"We got that straightened out," he insists. "I wasn't upset. It's Coach Ditka. He's going to say something about anything. I let him say what he's going to say and keep on going. He's the coach. He's going to say things. You can't let it nag you and bother you. You've got to play."

"We got along great. We have an understanding about each other. I know what he expects out of me — he expects me to go out and play and perform well. So that's what I'm doing."

Ditka never has said Perry short on ability — just self-discipline. If the Fridge weighs less than 325, he contends, he's the best defensive tackle in football. "If he ever maximizes his talent," Ditka adds, "no one will touch him."

If Perry follows the Ditka dietary doctrine of less-is-more, he could not only stay trim and extend his career, but he could also maximize the earning potential to which Ditka alludes. There could be a lot of football — and a lot of appearances and endorsements — between now and the time the Fridge seriously confronts a possible career as a professional wrestler — an option he says he'll explore "when I get through playing football" — in 12, 16 or 60 years.

He made an impressive debut last year during Wrestlemania II, when in a 15-man battle royale he lasted until the latter stages of the match, when Big John Studd finally heaved him out of the ring.

For the moment, however, business isn't booming as it did in 1985, Perry's rookie year, when he took the nation by storm as the lovable lug the Bears inserted as a running back in storcyarage situations. Perry's agent, St. Louis-based Jim Steiner, estimates endorsements and appearances now total less than half of what they did in 1985 and '86.

Tillis roughs up world champ Tyson in four-round charity exhibition

CHICAGO (AP) — It was only a four-round exhibition, but heavy weight champion Mike Tyson knew he had been in a fight Friday night — after tangling with James "Quick" Tillis.

While Tyson played around in the first round with weak jabs and flimsy punches, Tillis went after the champ right from the opening bell with a flurry of punches aimed mainly at his mid-section.

Tyson, admittedly 8-10 pounds overweight at 222, was sent to the ropes seven times during the first two rounds, but only four times in the final two.

It was Tyson's first fight, in fact his first day in a gym, since his Oct. 16th bout with Tyrrell Biggs in Atlantic City, N.J., trainer Kevin Rooney said.

"I'm not at my tip-top best," Tyson said. "I'm still very immature as a fighter. I'm still learning."

The exhibition was part of a fund-raising night of boxing to help rebuild the burned-out Holy Angels Catholic Church in Chicago.

Its pastor, the Rev. George Clements, has become nationally known for having begun a far-reaching program to encourage families to adopt black orphans and for having adopted three sons himself.

Tyson's next fight will be against former champion Larry Holmes on Jan. 22 in Atlantic City, N.J.

Sooners lose another running back

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — University of Oklahoma halfback Bernard Hall has been suspended from the team, the sports information office confirmed Friday.

Assistant sports information director Larry McAlister said Hall was suspended by Coach Barry Switzer for disciplinary reasons. McAlister said he did not know if the suspension was for one game or the season.

Switzer was not available for comment.

The 6-2, 210-pound Hall, who played quarterback in high school, was signed by the Sooners in 1986 only as a backup.

Hall was sidelined by Proposition 48 during his freshman year and died of his estranged wife, was placed on indefinite suspension last Saturday.

Dawkins was traded to the Jazz Oct. 8, by the New Jersey Nets.

His wife, Kelly-Barnea Dawkins, did not play.

He started the year at halfback but was moved to tight end during the season. He saw very little playing time behind Keith Jackson.

Hall was moved back to halfback last week after Lydell Carr suffered a knee injury against Oklahoma State. Carr is out for the remainder of the regular season.

Switzer said he was not available for comment.

Jordan gets Bulls off to best start in franchise history

CHICAGO (AP) — For once, Michael Jordan didn't have to do all the work.

It was able to score 36 points in the flow of the game. Jordan said after the Bulls ran their record to 4-0, the best start in the team's 22-year NBA history, with a 103-85 victory over the winless New Jersey Nets. "I don't feel pressure to score 40 points every game. It's nice to have five fresh faces to come in and keep the intensity going."

It was the third straight game in which Jordan led the Bulls in scoring, but he didn't have to work as hard this time.

Although Jordan scored 18 of his 36 points in the fourth quarter, he was able to rest for long periods of time in each half.

The game was won by the bench. Bulls coach Doug Collins said, "They did a good job on defense. When we can rest Michael and keep the lead, that shows we have depth."

"We came out and established a good fast tempo," said Nets coach Dave Wohl. "We played good defense. Creatively, we were really struggling. Our game is way behind where we want."

After the Nets led 25-23 after the first period, Jordan scored 12 straight points in the second quarter to lift Chicago to a 51-38 halftime lead.

Buck Williams scored six points midway through the third quarter to lift the Bulls to within 64-61 with 3:14 left in the quarter.

Mike Gminski led New Jersey in scoring with 23 points.

Collins praised the play of Rory Sparrow, who played his first game after being picked up from the New York Knicks in a trade Thursday, and Horace Grant, who scored 12 points and led the Bulls in rebounding with nine.

"Rory Sparrow played well coming off the bench," Collins said.

"Horace Grant was down after the last game. I told him there are 82 games in the season, and he has to be ready. He needed a good game and had his own against Buck Williams."

Scottie Pippen followed Jordan with 16 points.

"You had to credit the coaches," he said. "The guys coming off the bench have to contribute and relieve the starters. We won tonight because we got that."

L.A. Clippers 94 Golden St. 94

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mike Woodson scored 15 of his 33 points in the third quarter and Reggie Williams added 20 Friday night as the Los Angeles Clippers ended a nine-game losing streak against Golden State with a 97-94 NBA victory over the Warriors.

Golden State trimmed a 10-point deficit midway through the fourth quarter to 93-92 with a 10-2 spur capped by Dirk Minnifield's two free throws with 35 seconds left before Williams hit a running hook shot for Los Angeles.

hook over 7-footer Benoit Benjamin to bring the Warriors within a point, but Quintin Dailey sank a pair of free throws. Eric "Sleepy" Floyd, who led the Warriors with 19 points, had a chance to tie the score, but missed an off-balance three-point attempt from straightaway at the buzzer.

The Warriors, who have dropped four of their first five games, rallied from a 16-point deficit early in the second quarter and pulled within 49-49 at the end of the half with a 13-3 burst.

They took the lead briefly on Rod Higgins' 15-footer with 8:45 left in the third quarter, but Floyd was stripped of the ball twice in a 21-second span by Larry Drew and Woodson, leading to a pair of slam dunks by Woodson that gave the Clippers a 72-62 margin with 1:53 left in the period.

Williams spearheaded a 9-0 run early in the second quarter as Los Angeles upped its biggest lead of the game to 38-23. The Clippers' No. 1 draft pick from Georgetown hit a 20-footer, followed with a driving layup, missed a three-point attempt, that teammate Michael Cage followed in, and then set up Darnell Valentine's 17-foot jumper.

The Clippers scored 11 straight points early in the opening period and Williams beat the 24-second buzzer with a three-pointer just three seconds from the end of the quarter, giving Los Angeles a 29-19 lead.

Utah 109 Phoenix 92

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Karl Malone scored 23 points and John Stockton added 13 points and handed out 12 assists Friday night as the Utah Jazz downed the Phoenix Suns 109-92 in NBA action.

Walter Davis led the Suns with 25 points, while Eddie Johnson added 23 for the leaders.

With Phoenix leading 34-32 early in the second period, Malone, Stockton and Darrell Griffith led Utah on a 21-3 streak and the Jazz went on to take a 59-44 lead at the half.

Phoenix closed to within 87-77 with 8:45 left in the game, but Utah scored eight straight points and its margin was never less than 16 points after that.

Mark Eaton blocked seven shots and Thurl Bailey four for the Jazz. Eaton also grabbed 11 rebounds.

San Antonio 103 Dallas 95

DALLAS (AP) — Dale Ellis' seven points keyed a 12-0 Seattle spurt late in the fourth quarter and the SuperSonics went on for a 103-95 NBA victory over the Dallas Mavericks Friday night.

Seattle's defense shut down Dallas for a stretch of 5:38 in the final period, improving a 9-1 record to 10-2.

Dallas pulled to within 90-89 on Derek Harper's drive with 6:38 to play, but the Mavericks did not score again until a minute remained.

Philadelphia 113 Detroit 94

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Vinnie Johnson came off the bench to score 27 points, including 23 in the first half, and Bill Laimbeer sparked a third-quarter surge as the Detroit Pistons defeated the Philadelphia 76ers 113-94 in an NBA game Friday night.

Johnson's 16 second-quarter points helped the Pistons to a 65-53 halftime lead.

After Maurice Cheeks cut the Detroit lead to 57-56, the Pistons went on a 23-8 run early in the third quarter to take an 80-64 lead. Laimbeer had 10 points, mostly on long-range jump shots, during the run. He had 12 points for the quarter and finished with 22 for the game.

Trailing 87-86 at the start of the fourth quarter, Philadelphia out-scored the Pistons 12-2, but Detroit then scored six straight points and a layup by Rick Mahorn gave the Pistons a 95-77 lead with 6:49 to play.

Adrian Dantley added 18 points and John Salley had 13 for Detroit, while Charles Barkley had 31 points and 17 rebounds for Philadelphia.

Cliff Robinson, who signed his contract with the Sixers Tuesday after holding out, made his first appearance of the season and scored six points.

The Pistons defeated Philadelphia in all five games last season and have now won four straight at the Spectrum.

Boston 128 Cleveland 114

BOSTON (AP) — Larry Bird scored 34 points, Danny Ainge 28 and Dennis Johnson 23 Friday night as the unbeaten Boston Celtics rallied for their fifth NBA victory, 128-114 over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Jolted by a 22-6 Cleveland run at the end of the first period and at the outset of the second period, the Celtics fought back to beat the Cavaliers for the 23rd consecutive time since 1978 in Boston Garden.

Boston narrowed an 11-point deficit to 64-58 at halftime, survived another burst that boosted the Cavaliers' lead to 74-64 in the third period and then took charge. Johnson, held to six points in the first half, scored 11 points and Bird, nine, in leading the comeback. Boston outscored Cleveland 34-26 for a 92-90 lead after three quarters.

Helped by rookie Mark Acres, who scored eight points in the final period, the Celtics pulled away from a 104-104 tie on Johnson's 16-foot shot with just under seven minutes remaining.

Acres scored after a pass from Ainge. Johnson drove for a layup and Robert Parish stole the ball and ran half the court for another layup, completing a decisive eight-point run. Johnson finished with 13 assists.

Cleveland, 1-3, was led by Dell Curry with 25 points, Phil Hubbard with 23 and Brad Daugherty with 22.

Washington 108 New York 101

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — The Washington Bullets made an NBA record 60 foul shots, including 30 straight in the first half, and won their first game of this season Friday night as Moses Malone scored 30 points in a 108-101 victory over the winless New York Knicks.

The Bullets broke the free-throw mark of 59, set by Syracuse during a five-overtime game against Anderson, Ind., on Nov. 24, 1949. Boston, in 1954, and Chicago, in 1970, held the regulation record of 58.

Washington shot 60-for-69 from the foul-line and outscored New York 32-6 on free throws in the first half. The Bullets, 1-3, made just one shot from the field in the fourth quarter but still held off the Knicks, who are 0-5 and the only winless team in the NBA.

The Bullets used a 16-4 burst early in the second period to open a 45-38 lead, and added a 13-3 run that gave them a 62-48 lead just before halftime.

Reserve forward Mark Alarie scored 11 points and Malone nine in the second quarter as Washington outscored New York 36-20 to take a 62-60 halftime lead, and the Knicks never recovered.

Rams rout Spartans in region lidlifter

By RON GATES - Times-News writer

RUPERT — Defending Region III champion Highland kept Minico off the scoreboard for the first five minutes Friday en route to a 68-26 victory in a regional and Gem State Conference girls' basketball game.

The blowout in the two teams' regional opener — the Rams' second round in as many outings — left Highland one-half game back of Burley in the regional standings. The Rams are 3-0 overall and in the conference.

A Burley-Highland confrontation, originally scheduled for tonight in Pocatello, was postponed under Dec. 5 because Highland's football team was playing for the state Class A-1 Division I championship in Moscow Friday night.

More-Ram-tail-timber, 6-2 forward Heather Williams, picked it up with all nine of her points over the next eight minutes while Minico went scoreless from the field. The result sent Highland into the locker room at halftime up 34-16.

In the junior varsity preliminary, Highland won 32-21.

Bonneville 58 Twin Falls 32

IDAHO FALLS — Bonneville exploded for 15 points before Twin Falls got on the scoreboard here Friday night and went on to rout the Bruins 58-32 in a Gem State Conference girls' basketball game.

Using a full-court press and fast break, the Bruins ran up a 19-6 first-quarter lead and a 30-18 halftime advantage. Bonneville put the game away by scoring straight points in the third quarter.

The Bears shot 41 percent from the field and were paced by 6-foot senior center Linda Byington, who led nine of her teammates into the scoring column with 16 points. Teammate Catherine Simmons added 10.

The loss dropped Twin Falls to 1-2 for the season and 1-1 in conference, while Bonneville improved to 2-1 and 1-1, respectively.

Burley 66 Mars Valley 47

BURLEY — Burley's zone defense broke open a close first half here Friday night, lifting the Bears to a 66-47 conference girls' basketball victory over Mars Valley and to their third win in as many games this season.

Burley led just 17-16 at the end of the first quarter, but started pickup up turnovers off the zone to take a 35-20 halftime lead.

Jennifer Beck and Cindy Williams led the scoring parade for the Bobcats with 17 points apiece, while Donna Allen added 16. Williams also had 12 rebounds.

The Burley junior varsity also prevailed, 42-29.

Eagles split at regionals; face Ricks this afternoon

By The Times-News

OREM, Utah — The College of Southern Idaho stayed alive in the race for the Region 18 junior college volleyball championship here Friday by splitting a pair of matches.

The Eagles lost to top-seeded Utah Valley, the host of this four-team tournament, 15-12, 7-15, 15-4, 12-15, 10-15 in the opener and then beat Dixie College 19-2, 15-10, 15-5 in the consolation round. That win put CSI into a 1 p.m. consolation bracket final match with Ricks College, which lost to UVU in the championship semifinals Friday night.

"I thought as a team, we played pretty well," said CSI Coach Ben Stroud. "In the fourth game, we were leading 9-3, but gave up five points in a row. The game was tied at 10, but we tied it again. In the fifth game, we were never really in it. They're just a real powerful team."

At stake for the champion is a trip to the National Junior College Athletic Association tournament in Miami later this month.

"I think we still have a shot at it," said Stroud. "We're playing about as well now as we have all season."

Today's CSI-Ricks match is scheduled for 1 p.m. with the winner to meet UVU for the championship at 5. If UVU loses that match, they will be a second championship match to follow.

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) — Defending champion Andy Bean shot a 3-under-par 69 Friday for a one-stroke lead over Sandy Lyle after three rounds of the $600,000 Kapalua International Golf Tournament.

Bean completed three rounds in 200, 16 shots under par and a tournament record. Lyle takes a 201 total into Saturday's final round of the chase for a $150,000 first prize.

No one else was within six strokes of the lead.

Rams rally to win A-1 Division I title

MILK BOWL '87

MOSCOW (AP) — Senior quarterback Chris Hoge threw for 320 yards and two touchdowns Friday night, including a late scoring strike to Rick Ockey, and Highland held on for a 27-24 victory over Coeur d'Alene in the Idaho A-1 Division I high school football championship.

Prep football

The third-ranked Rams had to come back from a 24-14 third-quarter deficit to drop the third-ranked Vikings at the Kibbie Dome. Coeur d'Alene's Dave Spellman missed a 38-yard field-goal attempt with 45 seconds remaining that would have tied the game.

Hoge's game-winning 20-yard touchdown pass to Ockey capped a drive that began when Highland's Travis Bull intercepted a Jason Han-ning pass at the Rams' 9 yard line. Ockey ended the night with seven catches for 136 yards. Hoge connected on 17 of 37 passes.

Highland jumped to a 14-0 first-quarter lead on a 37-yard pass from Hoge to running back Jason Miller and a 1-yard Miller scoring run.

The Vikings responded with 24 unanswered points, including two touchdowns on short runs by junior running back Steve Currie and a 49-yard scoring strike from Hennig to Jerry Rupinski.

MOSCOW (AP) — Garden Valley running backs Chris Fenton and Ty Ray scored two touchdowns each as the second-ranked Wolverines smothered top-ranked Rockland 48-22 Friday night at the Kibbie Dome for the Idaho eight-man high school football championship.

The second-quarter on Bulldog quarterback Mike Steidley scoring passes of three yards to Casey Laaley and four yards to Ruben Figueroa.

The Wolverines went ahead for good—just before the half—on a two-yard Ray touchdown run, then broke the game open in the third quarter after Ray's second touchdown dash of four yards.

In the fourth quarter, running back Craig Elliott broke loose for a 65-yard scoring jaunt, breaking the 1984 championship game record of 58 yards set by Sheshone's Alan Sizamore.

Replacement Sooners tune up for Nebraska

By HERSCHEL NISSENON
The Associated Press

Top-ranked Oklahoma will unveil its version of the replacement Sooners on Saturday.

Oklahoma's top two rushers, quarterback Jamelle Holloway and fullback Lydell Carr, suffered knee injuries and will be out of Oklahoma State last week against the Sooners' host Missouri, when the final tuneup before next week's showdown against No. 2 Nebraska, which is idle.

"We have good, young, talented players to replace Jamelle and Lydell," but they are not experienced," Coach Barry Switzer says of redshirt freshman quarterback Charles Thompson and junior fullback Robert Anderson.

"We believe in them. If they believe in themselves, they will be a key factor in our season." You gotta believe, and halfback Patrick Collins does. "It hurts to lose two great players," he says. "But at Oklahoma State, you can replace great players with great players."

College football

Special invitations go out.

An "A" team from Michigan is involved in the Big Ten's day of decision. But that team is Michigan State, not Michigan, and the party of the second part is Indiana, not Ohio State.

"This state is used to having showdowns for the championship at the end of the year. This year, it comes a week early," Michigan State Coach George Perles says.

"This year, instead of it being in Ann Arbor, it's in East Lansing. The 13th-ranked Spartans can clinch the Big Ten championship and a trip to the Rose Bowl by defeating No. 16 Indiana.

Fifth-ranked UCLA, trying to become the first Pac-10 team since 1976 to go through the conference season unbeaten and untied, entertains Washington. A UCLA victory and a Southern Cal loss to Arizona sends the Bruins to the Rose Bowl.

Elsewhere, the muddled bowl picture will become much clearer, as it always does the week before the official invitations go out.

The Southeastern Conference race, which was LSU's to win until the Tigers lost to Alabama last week is now up for grabs. Twelfth-ranked Auburn, the leader at 3-0-1, visits No. 3 Georgia, which is tied with No. 10 LSU and No. 11 Alabama at 4-1. LSU is at home Saturday night against Mississippi State while Alabama visits No. 7 Notre Dame.

Arkansas, ranked No. 20, leads the Southwest Conference at 6-1 and can clinch a tie if it wins at 3-19 Texas A&M. The Aggies and Texas — which entertains Texas Christian — are 3-1 and still in the Cotton Bowl picture.

Elsewhere, fourth-ranked Florida State, hoping to somehow get a shot at the national championship, meets Division I-AA Furman under the lights in Tallahassee. No. 6 Syracuse, one of only four teams with perfect records, entertains Boston College and No. 9 Clemson is at home against Maryland, needing only a tie to wrap up the Atlantic Coast Conference crown.

In the Associated Press Second Ten, No. 14-South Carolina is at Wake Forest. No. 16 Penn State is at Pitt for a night game. No. 17 Oklahoma State at Kansas and Mississippi at No. 18 Tennessee.

Oklahoma's Thompson is faster than Holloway and has seen enough action — most of it in mop-up roles — to rank as the Sooners' third leading rusher with 614 yards on 62 carries, at 3.3 average.

"I can't predict how I'll feel when the game begins," Thompson says. "I'll just do the things I can and hope that things happen for the best."

Anderson, who rushed for 191 yards against Oklahoma State after Carr was hurt, says he "knew it was my turn to prove to myself and the coaches that I could play as well as he does. Me and Lydell are similar, although he is bigger and stronger. But I'm just as tough."

Switzer says the Sooners "believe in ourselves" and thinks they "will respond positively. We think we're good football team."

So does Missouri Coach Woody Wideman, who says Oklahoma is a top-tier injury, but they're hitting the most talented team in the country," he says.

UCLA hopes to have star tailback Gaeton Green against Washington. Green suffered a pinched nerve in his neck two weeks ago and missed last week's game with Oregon State.

The Bruins' injury list was a lengthy one but Coach Terry Donahue says that "anybody who's able to play, and play successfully, will play."

"The Washington game is a crucial encounter for us. This could be the most important game of the year for us, depending on what happens with USC and Arizona. And yet, it may not impact the conference race."

"For us, it's at stake. Washington has a bowl bid at stake. I'm sure they're going to get a bowl bid if they beat UCLA; they might get one if they don't."

Washington quarterback Chris Chandler suffered a hip pointer last week and sophomore Cary Conklin may get the start. The Huskies lead the Pac-10 in pass defense and UCLA's Troy Aikman is the national leader in passing efficiency — 131-of-194 for 67.5 percent, with 1,936 yards, 15 touchdowns and only three interceptions, two of them on deflections.

Michigan State has a six-game unbeaten streak thanks to a defense that leads the nation against the run, yielding only 60 yards a game — and only 27.5 in six Big Ten games (low and Purdue were held to minus yardage). The conference record is 34.6 by Michigan State's 1965 team.

Indiana Coach Bill Mallory rates Michigan State's defense "in the same category as Michigan's in the couple of years ago. Their front seven players are all very good and they have a linebacker in (Percy) Snow who's all over the field and a safety in (Todd) Krumm who's as good as there is in the league."

Notre Dame and Alabama, two of the glamour names in college football, will have an unnecessary extra added attraction — two of the nation's most exciting players.

Tim Brown, Notre Dame's explosive kick returner-wide receiver-halfback, is second nationally in all-purpose yardage, averaging 176.85 yards a game and coming off a career-high 294-yard effort against Boston College.

Junior tailback Bobby Humphrey, the most prolific runner in Alabama history (3,051 yards), is 11th nationally in rushing with 119.7 yards a game and fifth in all-purpose yardage at 162.78 after rushing for 177 yards in last week's 22-10 upset of LSU.

Rash of prep injuries hits Washington

By NICHOLAS K. GERANIOS
The Associated Press

CASHMERE, Wash. — As football player Mike Hanev lies in a coma at a Wenatchee hospital, state athletic officials have no clear picture of how often injuries occur among the state's 21,000 high school football players.

Officials say the number of catastrophic injuries like Hanev's is not great, but they cannot provide firm statistics.

"They're very rare," said Ralph Bayard, executive director of the Washington Interscholastic Activities Association. "It happens maybe once a decade."

He said the Bellevue-based association, which has about 700 member schools, does not keep track of injuries.

"The office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction also keeps no injury figures," said Jeff Carpenter, who handles sports for the office.

But an informal survey of sports journalists and athletic officials revealed a series of catastrophic football injuries dating back to the 1960s.

Hanev, 18, a star for Cashmere High School, collapsed in practice Nov. 3 from a torn blood vessel in his head suffered during practice. Doctors at Central Washington Hospital operated to relieve pressure on his brain.

He is on life support systems and remains in critical condition at the hospital, said spokeswoman Kris Pomianek.

Hanev's condition has not changed much since surgery, and it is too early to tell if there is permanent brain damage, she said.

His injury is apparently the most serious high school football injury in the state of Washington since a Sequim High School player was killed in a 1982 game.

Phil Millard died after he was injured while making a tackle during a football game in Bellingham.

Also, a pair of high school students were paralyzed in separate accidents in the Seattle area in 1975.

Chris Thompson, of West Seattle High School, suffered a neck injury that left him a quadriplegic. A King County jury originally awarded him $6.3 million in damages, but the case was later settled for $3.8 million.

An outgrowth of that case was a sports injury release form required by Seattle schools for participants in extracurricular activities.

Conrad Sigert of Ingham High School in Seattle was also paralyzed in a football injury in 1975, receiving a $350,000 settlement.

In 1964, Wenatchee High School player Ron Weeks died of a football injury.

Few other cases of permanent paralysis or death from football injuries in recent years could be documented, although some sources thought they could remember others.

While catastrophic injuries draw the most attention, perhaps a more important issue is the large number of total injuries among high school athletes, said Mike Rice, a lecturer in sports medicine at the University of Washington.

Rice has been conducting a survey of athletic injuries since 1978, including 3,695 football players.

Millard's death is the only fatality or case of paralysis he has found since the survey began, Rice said.

"Football is the fourth highest sport for injuries," he said. "No. 1 is girls cross-country, No. 2 is wrestling and No. 3 is girls soccer."

The high number of injuries in the girls sports reflects poor conditioning and overtraining, he said.

National injury statistics are kept by the National Athletic Trainers' Association, based in Greenville, N.C.

The association conducted a study of 105 high schools during the 1986 season, and projected the results nationwide among the one million high school football players.

Based on the projections, there were 636,279 injuries that resulted in the player having to leave practice or a game in 1986, with 62 percent sustained in practice.

Based on other studies, the association said there are an average of 36 injuries involving death or permanent paralysis among high school players each season.

The 17 deaths last season were a big jump over the five in 1985, said John LeGear, spokesman for the association.

Yanks obtain Chisox ace Dotson in trade

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees acquired former 20-game winner Richard Dotson from the Chicago White Sox on Friday to help stabilize a situation that forced the Yankees to use 15 different pitchers as starters in 1987.

The trade was the fifth between the two clubs in less than two years and involved the fourth player — pitcher Scott Nielsen — to be dealt from one of the teams to the other, then back again.

The Yankees obtained Dotson and Nielsen by sending outfielder Dan Pasqua, catcher Mark Sadars and left-handed minor league pitcher Steve Rosenberg to Chicago.

Resides Nielsen (the two clubs have re-exchanged catcher Ron Hassey and minor leaguers Mike Soper and Glen Braxton. Hassey, in fact, has gone from the Yankees to the White Sox to the Yankees to the White Sox).

"I did mention to somebody today that I could be back to the White Sox next week," Dotson said tongue-in-cheek from Reno, Nev. "I've played with a few of the guys who went back-and-forth."

Lou Piniella, the Yankees manager last season who was moved into the general manager's spot on Oct. 19, called the right-hander Dotson a quality pitcher and said he would "make a significant contribution to our starting rotation in 1988."

"He's a proven winner and, with his addition, I think we have greatly improved our staff," Piniella said in a statement.

Dotson, 28, had an 11-12 record with a 4.17 earned run average this year in 31 starts. His best year was 1983 with the White Sox when he had a 22-7 record. He led to 14-15 in 1984 and won only 9-4 in 1985 when he underwent shoulder surgery in July. He was 10-17 in 1986, leading the American League in losses.

He missed four starts last season with a sore shoulder.

"I pulled a muscle in the back of my shoulder," Dotson said. "It was unrelated to the surgery. I made a start before the season was over. There was no pain. I felt great."

"We talked to different clubs about Richard Dotson," White Sox General Manager Larry Himes said in a statement.

Cardinals' owner tours facilities in Baltimore

BALTIMORE (AP) — St. Louis football Cardinals owner Bill Bidwill, after touring the city and meeting with local officials Friday, said he saw nothing to rule out Baltimore as a possible site should he decide to move his NFL team.

Bidwill met separately with Gov. William Donald Schaefer and Mayor-elect Kurt L. Schmoke, and looked over the football facilities in suburban Baltimore as well as a proposed stadium site downtown.

Bidwill reportedly has been considering moving the Baltimore, Jacksonville, Phoenix and Memphis as possible new homes for the Cardinals.

The Maryland Legislature has approved funding for a $235 million project to build baseball and football stadiums at Camden Yards, an industrial site downtown.

Bidwill said the possibility of having some input into the design of the football stadium would be a "big factor" in his decision to move.

The architects they're dealing with are capable of building a first-rate football stadium. If we can have some input, that's great.

His Cardinals owner said he was not interested in owning a share of a stadium.

"Our primary interest is as a tenant," he said. "There are a combination of factors if we decide to move and the financial aspect could be important."

When told that local residents were already pulling for the Cardinals to move to Baltimore, he replied, "It would be premature if they were to get excited."

Bidwill, who toured through residential areas of Baltimore earlier in the week, declined to do so during this visit.

"I did that in Jacksonville because I'd never seen the residential area there," he said. "I've seen the residential areas of Baltimore over the years."

Bidwill said he began considering leaving St. Louis three years ago when he decided that Busch Stadium had become inadequate.

"We played to 94 to 95 percent capacity in a ballpark that seats 51,000 people," he said. "When I had good teams we couldn't average more than 51,000. ... We just can't keep up (with the rest of the league)."

when the Colts moved to Indianapolis in 1984.

For Bidwill to move his team, he must receive 21 of 27 votes from his fellow club owners.

"If a decision is made, it will be made through an application for transfer before Jan. 15, as required in league bylaws," he said.

The Maryland Legislature has approved funding for a $235 million project to build baseball and football stadiums at Camden Yards, an industrial site downtown.

Bidwill said the possibility of having some input into the design of the football stadium would be a "big factor" in his decision to move.

The architects they're dealing with are capable of building a first-rate football stadium. If we can have some input, that's great.

His Cardinals owner said he was not interested in owning a share of a stadium.

"Our primary interest is as a tenant," he said. "There are a combination of factors if we decide to move and the financial aspect could be important."

When told that local residents were already pulling for the Cardinals to move to Baltimore, he replied, "It would be premature if they were to get excited."

Bidwill, who toured through residential areas of Baltimore earlier in the week, declined to do so during this visit.

"I did that in Jacksonville because I'd never seen the residential area there," he said. "I've seen the residential areas of Baltimore over the years."

Bidwill, who pointed out that over the past 17 years the average attendance at an NFL game had risen from 51,000 to 68,000, said support was waning for the football Cardinals.

"When we were winning the division and the baseball teams was not doing very well, we (St. Louis) were considered a football town," he said. He said he does not look forward to moving the Cardinals.

"I've lived in St. Louis for 27 years," he said. "I've enjoyed living there, it's my home. It's a lovely city. I would not enjoy leaving."

Cowboys release veteran Dutton

DALLAS (AP) — Veteran defensive tackle John Dutton has been released by the Dallas Cowboys, the team announced Friday.

Dutton, 36, in his 14th NFL season, had been replaced at starting left tackle by Kevin Brooks.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said, "It is very difficult to make a decision like this, when it involves a player like John Dutton. He has been a solid player for the Cowboys for a long time."

"But I have to consider what is best for the team now and in the future. I felt this was a move that needed to be made in order to get some of our younger players into the flow of things."

The Cowboys acquired Dutton from the Baltimore Colts at mid-season in 1979 to play left end when Ed Jones left football for a year to pursue a pro boxing career.

Unhappy Payton may seek a trade

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Walter Payton has become comfortable with fame, fortune and the idea of his impending retirement, but not, it seems, with his changing role on the Chicago Bears.

The 33-year-old Payton, the NFL's career rushing leader and one of football's best-paid and most popular players, announced before the season that this would be his last year.

But even he was not prepared for the diminished role into which he was cast in his 13th NFL season, and the depth of his unhappiness was dramatized in a front-page story in Friday's Chicago Sun-Times.

The Sun-Times reported that running backs coach Johnny Roland, one of Payton's closest friends, said Payton has talked of retiring before the season ends. But the paper said Roland dismissed the talk as frustration.

The Sun-Times said Payton avoided during an interview discussing the subject of retiring before the season ends, but did say he has thought a new team might be the answer. He said he had considered trying to go to another team even before the season began.

During a brief meeting with reporters at the team's training site Friday, Payton stressed he was still unhappy, mostly because he felt his close relationship with a number of teammates — including all the running backs — was fading.

"Every time I came up here, it felt like a small part of me was being taken away," Payton said. "I don't know why. Maybe because this is my last year," he added. "I don't know what the reasons may be."

"I care about the team and that's why I said what I said," he continued.

"I couldn't go on doing what I was doing and feeling the way I was feeling, and not saying anything because it was killing me."

Second-year pro Neal Anderson, a former No. 1 pick who has Payton's power and considerably more speed, has gradually taken over Payton's role as the Bears' big-play back.

Payton also said he feels like he is "scuttling the progress" of Chicago's other running backs and his close friends — Matt Suhey, Thomas Sanders and Calvin Thomas.

But the lack of opportunity has not the only backfield because the Bears have found themselves in the unusual position of trading appointments in recent weeks and have been forced to play poorly.

Payton entered the season with a 16,193 career rushing yards and a 4.4-yard-per-carry average. This season, those numbers are 160 yards and 59 carries in five games — a disappointing 2.7 yards per carry.

"The thing that means more to me than football and all the records is the friendships I've made among the running backs. Now it's either tearing them away from me, or because I feel so strong, I'm tearing myself away from them. I can't deal with that," Payton said.

Chicago backup quarterback Mike Tomczak contends all Payton needs is a good game in which the Bears win. He also says Payton is still the player, who makes the Bears click.

"The storybook is not over yet," Tomczak said. "There are still many pages to turn."

Payton is the second of the league's prominent running backs to express unhappiness this week.

Herschel Walker of the Dallas Cowboys said in a conference call with New England writers that if he didn't get playing, he would like to go to a team where he could play more.

On Thursday, Walker said his remarks were misinterpreted.

"I answered questions that they gave me and they probably took those answers and left out the questions, which is unfair to me. But it's also unfair to them the way I answered the questions," Walker said.

"I'm frustrated but I'm not saying, 'Take me out. I'm going to leave. I'll be a better player at my level. I'll be more comfortable.'"
