Contracts concluded

Independent, workers agree on pay

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Independent Meat Co. and its unionized employees have reached a wage agreement to end a protracted labor dispute dating back to February of this year.

According to Sam Miller, president of the United Food and Commercial Workers Union, members of the local union 368A voted on the agreement Sunday and it "was approved by a pretty good margin." The terms of the agreement were hashed out during a negotiating session on Nov. 17, he said.

"Pat Florence, president of Independent Meat, said Friday that the agreement calls for a 5.88 percent wage increase effective Dec. 1, followed by another increase of 2.94 percent in August of next year.

"We feel it's a very positive settlement, and I think the union feels the same way," Florence said.

The agreement, which affects only wages, will run through September of next year, said Michael McBride, marketing director for Independent Meat. A new three-year contract, open on all issues including benefits, insurance and working conditions, will at that time have to be drafted and agreed upon, McBride said Friday.

Miller expressed qualified satisfaction with the new wage pact.

"Under the circumstances, I think it was the best we could get," he said. "Even though none of us were completely happy with the settlement, I'm sure everyone in the company would have liked to be in a position to pay us more."

But George Fleetwood, an employee with the company and part of the union's negotiating team, said Friday that he was "absolutely not" satisfied with the result. He noted, however, that the union's options were limited.

"We could have gone on strike and possibly put the company in a bind where they may or may not have made it," he said. "But with all the unemployment going on, it would have been foolish for us to hit

Growers await sugar firm's action

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho sugar beet growers will be able to breathe a sigh of relief if a negotiated agreement between the growers and Amalgamated Sugar Co. is approved Monday by the growers' board of directors.

Myron Heutgig, secretary for the Idaho Sugar Beet Growers Association, said the company and the growers' negotiating committee came to an agreement last Friday with Amalgamated on a three-year contract that won't cut payments, but may alter the way sugar beets are grown.

The proposal has been under negotiation since March, and growers hired a professional negotiator after Amalgamated proposed reducing its payments to growers by about $9 million.

Heutgig said the proposal will be presented to the growers' 33-member board of directors Monday. Heutgig said the agreement means total payments per ton for the approximately $125 million state sugar beet crop won't change much.

The Times-News was unable to reach Amalgamated officials Friday.

About $50 million will be paid to growers in the Magic Valley area as a first payment under the contract, and that may top out to about $70 million or more under final payments scattered through next year.

The total payments under the schedule will remain the same. Under the Amalgamated contract, growers are paid an initial payment based on sugar content, yield and market prices of sugar.

Amalgamated pays the growers a series of initial payments between November and January and makes a final settlement by October of the next year.

Under the new contract, the first of the series of initial payments will be smaller, but the frequency of the payments for the initial settlement will be greater.

Negotiations at prison stall

By The Associated Press

Negotiations to end a week-long siege at the Federal Detention Center in Louisiana stalled Friday as inmates raised new demands. A U.S. senator said while authorities urged Cubans holding Atlanta's penitentiary to negotiate or surrender.

"It's fair to say that, when they looked at the proposal, they added things to it that made it impossible for us to accept it," Sen. John Breaux told a news conference.

"There comes a time when we just can't go any further. We can't have them asking for 40 acres, a house and a tractor," Breaux said. He declined to describe the demands or the terms of a tentative agreement reached earlier.

"Authorities in Atlanta likewise blamed inmates for the breakdown of talks on Thursday about releasing at least some of the 94 hostages at the U.S. Penitentiary.

Breaux said the talks which resumed Friday afternoon were suspended until the 950 or so inmates in the complex, which was burned in riots Saturday night, deliberated their next move.

"I am disappointed the Cubans did not follow through with an apparent agreement of last night, as we watched the negotiators shaking hands on television. Our government has gone far down the road with an offer. It is time for the Cubans to realize there is only so far we can go," Breaux said.

Inmates still held 28 hostages in Oakdale, after releasing one who was stabbed Friday. Cuban prisoners brought the alleged assailant, reportedly a mentally ill prisoner, to the gate and handed him over to federal authorities.

In Atlanta, negotiators took a tougher line, accusing the inmates of bad faith in talks Thursday and refusing to permit a Cuban-American delegation led by Miami Mayor Xavier Suarez to meet with the inmates.

"There is no one who speaks for the detainees as a group," said Justice Department spokesman Tom Stewart. "I don't see an end in sight right now."

Blaming inmates for the breakdown of negotiations about releasing 50 hostages on Thursday, a Justice Department statement said: "They are not helping their position by being unable to deliver on proposals seriously discussed."

Suarez, a native of Cuba, said he had expected that his group's offer to trade places with some of the 94 hostages would be turned down.

Earlier, Breaux had told hostages' relatives, who had waited expectantly at Sacred Heart Catholic Church, that the Cuban negotiators had not been able to persuade all the other inmates to agree to a deal.

"They could walk back in 10 minutes and say 'We agree, here's your hostages.' We don't know," said Breaux.

Negotiations resumed about 1 p.m., amid hopeful statements from federal authorities.

"These negotiations are largely now in the nature of clarifications. And we consider things are moving along in a satisfactory fashion," said Mark Shashan, a Justice Department spokesman in Louisiana.

Shopper season

While shoulder to shoulder crowds circulate in a shopping frenzy inside the stores, bumper-to-bumper conditions rule the parking lots during the official opening of the Christmas shopping season. Here, a couple returns to their car Friday at the Magic Valley Mall. The Friday following Thanksgiving is traditionally one of the biggest shopping days of the year.

For Idaho, forecast isn't encouraging

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Winter should be wet and stormy on the East Coast, cold in the Midwest and Deep South and "warm and dry in the Southwest," the government's chief long-range forecaster said Friday.

This pattern "most resembles that of two years ago," the National Weather Service said in a statement on the outlook for the December through February period in the lower 48 states.

Winter last year was influenced by the so-called "El Nino" warm equatorial current that flows from the western Pacific to the coast of South America. The current is still there but weakening, and the forecast "does not really depend very much on what happens with El Nino," said Donald L. Gilman, chief of the predictions branch on the Service's Climate Analysis Center.

Gilman's crew assembled the forecast from records of previous winters, an analysis of the weather this past fall, pressure and wind patterns and temperatures in key parts of the Pacific Ocean that generally mean certain pressure patterns later in the season.

These expected deviations from normal wind patterns at about 10,000 feet, will strongly influence the U.S. winter, Gilman said.

• The eastward-bound winter storm track from Texas through Georgia will start over the Gulf of Mexico instead of the Atlantic.

• Wind that normally blows onto the Pacific Coast from the West will turn northward and blow more onto the Pacific coast of Canada.

• The wind that normally blows out of Canada from northwest to southeast into the Midwest will blow more from north to south.

This means:

• Storms moving northeastward up the Atlantic Coast will pick up a great deal of moisture from the Gulf of Mexico. A 60 percent chance of extra precipitation on the Atlantic Coast is a "very strong" probability, Gilman said.

• California — but not Washington and Oregon — will get less rainfall, as it did last year, and all three states will get less cold air. Gilman said he hoped California would not repeat the drought of 1976-1977, and indications were that "once in a while the pattern will shift enough... so the storm will come straight in" instead of being deflected to Canada.

• It should be colder than normal from the Great Plains to the Appalachians. "If we're correct, the Midwest will see this as remarkably cold," simply because people tend to compare new weather with recent weather, and recent winters have been mild, Gilman said.

Senators may modify nuclear missile treaty

The Associated Press

Safeguards — A4

WASHINGTON — Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole said Friday that the Senate may modify the U.S.-Soviet treaty on medium-range nuclear missiles and he suggested that President Reagan might support the changes.

The Kansas Republican met for an hour Friday morning with Secretary of State George Shultz and said later that changes in the treaty "wouldn't necessarily require another negotiating round with the Soviets."

"In my view, the president might well be supportive of initiatives we develop on the (Capitol Hill) to strengthen the treaty," Dole said.

Shultz's visit was his first official function since he returned from Geneva, where he worked out final details of the treaty.

His closed-door meeting with Dole was also the start of the administration's effort to win Senate approval of the treaty. Shultz declined to speak to reporters after the meeting. But Dole issued a statement a short time later.

The treaty bans medium- and short-range nuclear missiles and will be signed next month by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

A two-thirds Senate vote is required for ratification. Democrats held a 54-46 margin; but conservative Republicans have said they will examine the pact closely to make sure it contains what they believe to be adequate protections against Soviet cheating.

"I was pleased with the outlines of verification procedures the secretary presented today," Dole said. "But I want to see all the details before I am satisfied with this crucial treaty component."

Girl's climb leads to mother's rescue

The Associated Press

JACKSON, Wyo. — An Evanston, Wyo., girl injured when her car she and her mother were riding in plunged 100 feet down a steep embankment into the Snake River, is being credited with rescuing her mother.

Donetta Della Penta, 9, climbed to the top of the embankment after suffering facial cuts and a sprained ankle in the Nov. 18 accident that claimed the life of her brother. There, she flagged down traffic and got help for her mother, Donetta Della Penta, who was unable to climb out of the river after the accident.

"There's a possibility they would have been spotted, but it was probable they couldn't be seen from the road," said Wyoming Highway Patrolman Dave Schiefel, 37, who lit the girl's hair to help her be seen.

"Without her going after help, there wouldn't have been any rescue," said Donetta Della Penta, taken to a Salt Lake City hospital after the accident.

The two, along with Nicholas Della Penta, 6, were driving to Evanston from Wilson on U.S. 89 when their vehicle slid off the road and rolled 100 feet down the embankment about 2 miles south of Hoback Junction, coming to rest on its wheels in the river.

"When we reached the bottom, I was out of the car, in the water,"

Donetta said. "I tried to get up, but I toppled over into the water further. The current swept me away. I can't swim. I could feel some shallower ground and started to push my way along. I grabbed onto a rock. My legs got swept under the ice."

"Bianca watched from the shore near the vehicle as Donetta floated about 150 yards down the river."

"I could see my mom floating down the water," she said. "I screamed out. I just stood there and watched her. Then I saw her stop. My mommy yelled for me to get help. I yelled for help a couple times down there. Then I started climbing."

Bianca reached the top of the embankment after using tree branches to pull herself up the slope.

On the road, Bianca waved down a van carrying Dan Cutler and Norman Mahoney, of Casper, and Mark Pierce of Mills. While Mahoney and Pierce ran down to the river to help Donetta, Cutler put Bianca in the van and drove north to the Main Train Station at Hoback Junction, where the Teton County Sheriff's office was called.

"One of them hunkered down and asked if I knew where my injuries were," Donetta said. "He got into the water and held me tight. I must have looked pretty bad."

By the time the two men got Donetta to shore, other people had

According to Florence, the company and union had been close to finalizing the agreement for about 30 days. He said the general outline was agreed upon, but that "we just had a few points to work out."

Miller described the negotiations as having been technically demanding, but said they were very congenial on both sides.

"The dispute stemmed from the company's actions in instituting a 15-percent rollback in wages in February. With but one dissenting vote, the union's 135 members voted on March 1 to reject that wage cut."

The company's employees, who have been working without a wage agreement since that time, originally called for a wage freeze rather than cuts. The company, alternatively, insisted upon the rollback with a 6-percent pay increase to be effective Jan. 1.

Until last week, the two parties were unable to reach an agreement despite repeated efforts which at one point even included a federal mediator.

Since the 15-percent rollback has been and continues to be in effect, the agreement will eventually place the employees' wages at approximately 6 percent less than what they were making when the rollback was initiated.

According to McBride, the initial cuts were necessary because of increasing consolidation and competition within the meat-processing industry nationwide.

"Over the last three or four years, we've seen some tremendous wage rollbacks in the industry, usually believing 16 and 30 percent," he said. "We were pretty much forced to follow suit."

McBride said the new wage agreement now puts Independent Meat's employees "on a par with other employees nationwide."

The latest wage increases can be attributed to the company's recent plant modernization and improved productivity, McBride said. He also pointed to the success the company has enjoyed in market-expansion areas, including California, Oregon, Washington and Alaska.

"Now we're able to give back some significant increases, to give them (the employees) something to go on as far as wages are concerned," McBride said.

According to Miller, the company "lost a number of skilled employees" during the dispute. He said that most of those workers found jobs elsewhere before leaving, and that many of them went out of state.

McBride estimated the number of employees who left the company at "about a dozen." Fleetwood points to a higher number, though, estimating that between 40 and 50 employees have left since March.

According to Fleetwood, most of the new workers which have come to the company since that time have also joined the union.

"In essence, we're starting out with a lower initial payment," Heutig said. "Now, we'll get two to three payments, starting smaller, and moving up to a full initial payment by Jan. 31."

The agreement also includes a change in the way Amalgamated will determine bonus payments for quality crops.

In the past, the only bonus available to growers was based on sugar content — the higher the sugar content of a grower's beets, the higher price Amalgamated would pay per ton.

Under the proposed contract, Amalgamated will also measure the conductivity of the beets, which is an indicator of a certain chemical makeup of beets that makes its new processing procedures more efficient.

What that means, Heutig said, is that growers will have to be more precise in their use of nitrogen fertilizer, because too much nitrogen can make sugar beets harder to process.

However, Heutig said that doesn't mean farmers shouldn't use nitrogen, but work with Amalgamated to determine the right amount of nitrogen to use. "The company agreed under the contract to 'make every reasonable effort' to test all fields for the growers."

A second change in quality-related payments is to correlate the test for conductivity with a test for nitrogen in each load of beets to determine which growers are using the proper amount of nitrogen.

Since nitrogen use is the only tool a grower has to lower the conductivity of his beets, Heutig said the company agreed to test beets for nitrogen content and provide bonus payments to growers with lower-than-average nitrogen levels in their beets.

Those bonus payments won't affect the company, Heutig said.

"They (nitrate bonus payments) take money from the high nitrate farmers and give it to the low nitrate farmers," Heutig said.

Another sticking point at the beginning of negotiations in March was a company proposal to cancel the pact if the U.S. Congress, the U.S. Department of Agriculture or the Commodity Credit Corporation made any changes in the federal sugar program.

That proposal was replaced with an agreement that if changes in the sugar program affect the intent and performance of the grower-Amalgamated contract, both sides would return to revise the contract.

The negotiations between the growers and Amalgamated, which are normally relatively quiet, were marked this year by controversy when Amalgamated announced at the onset of negotiations that it wanted to cut payments to growers by $9 million.

The growers responded by hiring their first-ever professional negotiator, John Bushnell, who was formerly a chief executive officer at a competing sugar company.

Treaty verification safeguards sufficient, White House says

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The U.S.-Soviet treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear weapons "is not 100 percent perfect," but contains sufficient verification safeguards to reduce any Soviet incentive to cheat, a senior Reagan administration official said Friday.

This official, briefing reporters covering President Reagan's vacation visit in Santa Barbara, also said he knew of no plans by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to remain in Washington beyond Dec.

10, the third and final day of his scheduled three-day summit with Reagan.

There had been hints from the Kremlin that Gorbachev was prepared to remain an extra day or two if the pair was making headway in talks on halving the superpowers' arsenals of long-range, or strategic, missiles.

"Every hour has just about been accounted for and the departure time (for Gorbachev) has been set," he said, adding that he had heard nothing from the Soviets on any contingency plan to extend the general secretary's stay.

And the official, who discussed these matters on condition of anonymity, also said he hoped conservative critics of the intermediate-range nuclear forces (INF) treaty, which is to be signed at the Washington summit, will "hold their fire" until administration officials have had an opportunity to explain it.

"If, after we have explained it, there remains opposition," he said, "then we will have to deal with it at the time."

Conservatives in the Senate have indicated they will fight ratification of the treaty, but White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr. said earlier in the week that Reagan will mount a "full-bore" campaign to win its approval.

Under the terms of the pact, the United States will eliminate about 350 short- and medium-range weapons in the intermediate-range class, and the Soviets will get rid of about 1,600 in the same class.

Within 60 days of ratification, a complex verification process will take effect with "baseline inspections" by the two sides of some of the other sides' factories that had been "making" the short- and medium-range missiles.

After three years, there would be a series of "close-out" inspections. During that period, however, there will be a series of "short-notice" inspections to check on the destruction of the missiles.

"What we're going to be doing in the first three years of the treaty is destroying all these missiles," he said, "in effect, completely obliterating them as operational systems."

As a further measure of protection, this official said, U.S. representatives could hypothetically fly to Moscow, and within four hours notify the Soviets of a desire to visit a site of suspected activity, and would have to be taken to the site within nine hours from then.

Burley to get new processing plant

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Come early next year, the Burley Fresh Pack company will have lost a general manager.

The town, however, should have gained a new potato processing plant, and with it should come at least 60 new jobs.

Curtis Biggs, general manager of Burley Fresh Pack, said Wednesday that he is planning on opening his own potato processing plant, which he hopes to have operational by January or February of next year. He is currently finalizing a lease agreement with the J. R. Simplot Co., under which he can use the company's downtown building formerly used as a dehydration plant.

Biggs said he hopes to have the lease, which will cover a three-year period, signed within the next week.

Dave London, general manager of Simplot's

Heyburn plant, said Friday that the negotiations have been underway for about 35 to 40 days.

"I really don't have a timetable yet," he said. "It looks good, though."

Prior to assuming the reins at Burley Fresh Pack, Biggs worked as general manager for five years at Mart Produce in Rupert. He said he has been considering starting his own business venture, however, for about the last year and a half.

"I guess I wanted something on my own," he said. "And it's good for the community."

According to Biggs, his plant will probably hire "about 60 or 65 people." He said he expects most of those jobs to be low-to-middle income positions.

"I'd like to have people with some experience, but that's not absolutely necessary," he said.

Besides putting the finishing touches on the lease arrangement, Biggs said he needs to take care of various other matters before the plant can become operational. He said the primary task remaining is installation of specialized equipment, principally rail docks and truck docks.

"We've already started on both, but they're just not completed yet," he said.

According to Biggs, the plant will be geared toward washing, packaging and then selling potatoes. The end product will be marketed all over the United States, but its sales will probably be concentrated in the East, Biggs said.

As for the inputs, Biggs said he expects to buy most of his potatoes through private sales rather than under contract.

Biggs said he had previously tried to secure some type of economic-development grant for his business, but was unsuccessful. He said he tried to obtain such funding primarily through the Region IV Development Association in Twin Falls.

Offer of cruise may spur drive

$24,000 in pool coffer

By BART JANSEN

TWIN FALLS — Citizens for a Better Community, a volunteer group raising money for a new Twin Falls City pool, announced a one-week Caribbean cruise for two to jump start the fundraising drive that's crept away from a starting line last August.

Only about $24,000 has been raised in a proposed $150,000 campaign.

"Our fundraising efforts are just getting started. We have not wanted to interfere with the United Way Campaign, as we recognize its importance to the community," said Lance Clow, chairman of Citizens for a Better Community.

"However, beginning with December for six months, we plan to have an all-out effort to raise the $150,000 necessary to complete the funding of this pool from a community-wide effort," he added.

City officials expected to raise $150,000 from voluntary contributions on city water bills during the winter before beginning construction next spring. The city already set aside $770,000 for the pool, and First Federal Savings and Loan contributed $80,000 toward the $1 million project.

But City Finance Director Rick Thompson said that as of Wednesday only $23,811 toward the $150,000 had been donated, mostly through larger contributions and businesses, and included only $6,594 from people on their water bills.

To increase the flow of water-bill money, the Citizens group began the "Let's Make It Happen" sweepstakes for monthly prizes and now the grand prize trip, which was underwritten by Twin Falls Bank and Trust and Magic Carpet Travel.

Anyone contributing $3 on their water bill will automatically be included in the sweepstakes and others may complete an entry blank at any Twin Falls office of First Federal Savings and Loan.

Contributions can also be sent directly to the Twin Falls Swimming Pool Fund at P.O. Box 1907, Twin Falls, 83303-1907.

The first monthly drawing will be Dec. 15 and prizes include two Cactus Pete's getaway evenings, two all-sports season passes for the College of Southern Idaho, a family swimming pass for two years and a season golf pass at the Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course.

Park planned in honor of college

The Associated Press

ALBION — Plans are under way at Idaho State University to develop a campus park commemorating the former Albion State Normal College, where hundreds of Idaho teachers got their educations.

"We're really excited about it and we'd really like the city of Albion to be behind us," said Darrell Buffalo, director of the physical plant at ISU and head of a committee obtaining artifacts for a park from the Albion school.

ISU President Richard Bowen originated the idea for a commemorative park. The Campus Planning and Cultural Affairs Committee plans to arrange for the redesigning and naming of a park already in place on the Pocatello campus by displaying relics from the Albion college.

Buffalo attended an Albion City Council meeting recently and asked for an artifact from the former teacher's college. He said the committee would like to obtain some of the lamp poles that lighted the walkways at the school's campus.

"We've got a walkway through the park and the lamps would look really nice," Buffalo said.

The city council agreed to try to locate the old molds for the lamp poles so ISU can cast off of its own.

Andrus seeks to open Richfield connection

The Associated Press

BOISE — Gov. Cecil Andrus is trying to get the government of Japan to allow Ward's Cheese Co. of Richfield to sell its goods in that country.

"This is just another example of our market being open and accessible to foreign manufacturers, but their markets being closed to our products," the governor said Wednesday, in letters to U.S. trade officials.

"In this case we have an Idaho product, for which there is a demonstrated market in Japan, and the Japanese seem intent on erecting a barrier against it being sold there. I cannot believe the U.S. government will stand still for such unfair trade treatment," Andrus said.

Ward's Cheese Co. has developed a special cheese product, natural whey cheese, which it intends to sell in Japan. The product was developed in cooperation with a Japanese trading house and U.S. dairy products exporter. Three trial shipments of the product have been shipped so far, and two more shipments are planned before Jan. 1.

The governor said it appears Japanese authorities want to establish a new customs system which in effect would restrict access for the product to Japanese markets. Andrus said he sent a letter to the agricultural attaché at the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo, asking for a review of the trade situation and action to help the Idaho company develop and expand sales of the product.

"In light of the huge surplus Japan enjoys in its trade with the United States, it ill behooves the Japanese authorities to erect barriers against a product that was permitted free access under the old system," the governor said.

A recreational opportunity

Christmas tree permits now available

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Christmas trees are again in season and may be hunted on federal land throughout Magic Valley.

The Sawtooth National Forest is pleased to offer this recreational opportunity for families to select and cut their own Christmas tree," said Roland Stoleson, forest supervisor.

[But be prepared for snowy weather. Forest officials said that while snow hasn't accumulated much yet, it may fall before the open weekends and require skis, snowmobiles or snowmachines to get into the cutting areas.]

[Pinyon and lodgepole pine trees will be available from the U.S. Forest Service.]

Permits for stalking and cutting trees in the Kelchum Ranger District and Sawtooth National Recreation Area went on sale Monday and are available at Forest Service offices in Ketchum and the SNRA headquarters north of Ketchum and Stanley.

Forest Service permits are $2 for trees up to eight-feet tall and 50 cents for each additional foot.

Field Ranger District will sell a limited number of permits beginning Dec. 4.

Burley and Twin Falls ranger districts will sell permits only at cutting sites during the first two weekends in December. Personnel will be at the Burley site from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and Twin Falls rangers will be at their sites between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. on both Saturdays and Sundays.

Christmas trees will be available in the One Mile Canyon of the Raft River Division of the Burley Ranger District. Pinyon pine and juniper are available there.

The cutting area for the South Hills is in the Forest Service Springs area, about two-miles east of the Diamondfield Jack parking lot.

Kelchum Ranger District permits will be on sale until Dec. 24 and the office on Sun-Valley Road is open between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. on weekdays and between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. on weekends.

Kelchum district trees may not be cut within 200 feet of the highway or main roads or within 200 feet of campground boundaries, summer home areas or private land. Trees also find sanctuary on Bald Mountain, Trail Creek, Eagle Creek from its mouth through Neal Canyon and Deer Creek from the forest boundary to War Dance Gulch.

Ranchers hope pipeline will increase Jarbidge area grazing

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If ranchers can prove they are doing a good job managing the range, they would like to increase grazing in the Jarbidge Resource Area, says Frank Bachman, a Bruneau rancher.

The area south of Mountain Home is served by a new stock water pipeline that the U.S. Bureau of Land Management says will take grazing pressure off some areas and lead to a better distribution of cattle on the range.

"We don't expect an automatic increase just because we have water," says Bachman. He is one of a dozen ranchers with a BLM grazing permit immediately south of Bruneau.

"If we can do a good job managing that resource and it produces a lot more total forage, then I think we should be entitled to use some of it," he says.

The range is rated in poor condition because the native vegetation between the sagebrush is gone due to historic overgrazing, says Gary Carson, Jarbidge Area Resource Manager. However, some of the forage has improved due to natural fires and reseeding programs," he says.

The Jarbidge Resource Area runs from south of Mountain Home to the Nevada border.

The new pipeline called Echo II is an 11-mile extension that is grafted onto an existing 35-mile system and runs south of it. The extension was aimed at making the existing pipeline more efficient and getting cattle away from Clover Creek where they have damaged riparian zones important to stream bank preservation, fish habitat and aesthetics, says Carson. Clover Creek is the water source for the pipeline.

The pipeline was subject to legal challenges by environmental groups but BLM prevailed and the pipeline was recently completed. Ranchers paid for more than a third of its $300,000 cost, says Bachman.

Echo II will increase the number of cows on the range and bring no improvement in the land, says Randy Morris of Mountain Home, a spokesman for the Committee for Idaho's High Desert, an environmental group.

Morris says BLM doesn't know what the impact of the redistributed cows will be and the agency is spending money on pipelines when it doesn't have the funds for fences to keep cattle away from the river banks.

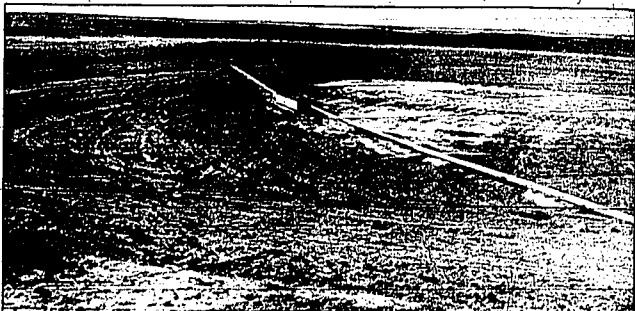

BLM says it has a number of fencing projects along Clover Creek.

Carson says the pipeline system had to be improved because it leaked and was inefficient. The pipeline improvements were also in response to a BLM-wide policy shifting the maintenance of livestock watering pipelines from BLM to ranchers, he says. However, before the maintenance was shifted, the pipeline system was improved, Carson says.

Echo II replaces an old pump station and connects two reservoirs. The project included the construction of a reservoir capable of holding 2.25 million gallons.

The new pipeline system is more efficient in a number of ways, says Bachman, the Bruneau rancher.

The distance the water has to be lifted from the creek to the plateau

A reservoir with a 2.25 million gallon capacity was constructed as part of the project is 180 feet less than with the old pipeline. The old pump burned eight gallons of fuel per hour and pumped 80 gallons per minute. The new pump burns four gallons per hour and pumps 220 gallons per minute.

Watering troughs are located along the pipeline and the extension of the system means ranchers will not have to haul water to locations they did previously. The antelope and deer on the plateau can also use the troughs.

An adult steer can drink up to 20 gallons of water per day during the summer, Bachman says at this time ranchers are running the same number of cattle on the Jarbidge range as before but the pump is running less because it is more efficient.

Federal gasoline tax to cost cities

POCATELLO (AP) — A new federal requirement that cities begin paying federal gasoline taxes will cost cities thousands of dollars each year, City Clerk Pete McDougall says.

Pocastello and other cities in Idaho do not have to pay the 9.5 cent per gallon federal gasoline tax, but pay the 14.5 cent per gallon state tax.

New rules from the U.S. Treasury take effect Jan. 1 and will be applied to cities, counties and the state.

Officials are not happy about the prospect. "Because some bureaucrats found a loophole in the 1986 Tax Reform Act, we're being forced to shell out some $13,000 extra each year in gas tax money," said McDougall. "This really is a bad law and one I don't think we can afford."

Kermit Kiebert, the new director of Idaho's Transportation Department, said the effects of the law will be "devastating."

Kiebert said preliminary estimates show his department will pay in excess of $159,000 annually.

"It's just totally insane," Kiebert said. "This is really a financial bombshell that's going to rip the fur off the kitty."

The requirement would apply to gasoline purchased for city use, and also to the Pocastello Urban Transit system, which uses only minimal amounts of gasoline. PUT's buses are diesel-powered.

However, diesel fuel might also fall under the same requirements because a similar provision is included in House and Senate tax bills this year.

If that legislation is enacted, McDougall estimates the city may pay up to $17,000 more each year in diesel fuel taxes. Kiebert was unable to provide estimates on the impact to IDOT, which uses vast quantities of diesel fuel in its equipment.

Compounding the problem is the fact that city, county and state budgets already are set with provisions to cover the increased expenses, McDougall added.

There are provisions to refund the gas tax to local and state governments at the end of the year, but McDougall said that's not much consolation because the city has to pay up front.

Talk about double taxation, the effects of the mandate will ripple right down to the property taxpayers," added Kiebert. "This just doesn't make any sense, especially if someone on the federal level believes this is one way to balance the budget."

Malad City. BLM permits for pinyon pine and juniper in Utah are also available. Permits are $3 each with a limit of five per person from Elko's BLM office at 3900 E. Idaho St. The office is open 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays or permits are available by mail at P.O. Box 831 in Elko, Nev., zip code 89801, before Dec. 12.

Maps of recommended cutting areas are available upon request. Humboldt National Forest allows cutting Alpius fir in the Independence Range north of Elko, Nev. The Buhl Forest District sells tags for the Independence-Jarbridge area.

Self-inflicted shooting victim moved to Logan

MALTA — A Utah resident who accidentally shot himself Wednesday in a 0.22 rifle was transferred Friday from the Cassia Memorial Hospital to the Logan, Utah, hospital, according to area officials.

Cassia Memorial officials said that Richard Miller, a resident of Hyrum, Utah, was transferred to be closer to his family. Miller, 50, was listed in stable condition Friday.

According to Cassia County Deputy Sheriff Dennis Dexter, Miller accidentally shot himself at approximately 11:30 a.m. Wednesday. At the time of the shooting, Miller was driving on some land he owns about 10 miles south of Malta. "He told me that he had seen a coyote, took a shot at it, and then got back into his vehicle," Dexter said Friday. "When he started driving, he went over a rock or something and the gun went off."

According to Dexter, the bullet went through one of Miller's arms, hit a rib, and then went around the body cavity. The bullet did not hit any internal organs, he said.

Dexter said passersby who heard the gunshot took Miller into Malta, where he was then transferred by ambulance to Cassia Memorial.

Commission has delayed gas appeal

POCATELLO (AP) — The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission has delayed action on Nu-West Industries' appeal for access to low-cost natural gas.

FERC decided Tuesday to delay action on the Soda Springs' fertilizer producer's appeal of an earlier ruling, said Tamara Young-Allen, a FERC spokeswoman.

Nu-West wants to buy spot-market gas and have it shipped by Northwest Pipeline Inc. Northwest and FERC cannot agree on a suitable rate to be charged by the fledgling fertilizer company.

Nu-West officials say that unless they can get access to the lower-priced gas, the company may not be able to compete with the J.R. Simplot Co. plant near Pocatello, which currently buys the lower-rate gas.

Ms. Young-Allen said commissioners gave notice of an intent to act on the appeal within 30 days. FERC's next meeting is scheduled for Dec. 9, but commissioners could act before then on the appeal, she said.

Craig, Harlan, Nu-West plant manager, said he is unsure what the commission's action means.

Judge mulls evidence motion

CASCADE (AP) — A state prosecutor says he needs to be allowed to present evidence linking Edward Neil Smith, 29, with the slaying of an Altus police officer.

After a hearing on Friday, 4th District Judge George Carey took under advisement a defense motion to suppress evidence. Deputy Attorney General Peter Erbland called the case to the court.

Smith is accused of killing Altus police officer Mark Patterson, 40, in April, 1986, south of Cascade. Police allege that Smith and his twin brother, Don, killed and robbed Patterson on April 8.

His body was found in a car along Idaho 55 just south of Round Valley.

A few days later, the Smith brothers were accused by Officer Gary Mass as they arrived on a bus at Yuma, Ariz. Don Smith and the officer were killed in a shootout. Edward Smith was captured after a widespread manhunt.

He was sentenced in October of 1986 to two concurrent life prison terms, with another eight years added for escape. Idaho officials said they decided to try Smith here because he did not receive the death penalty in the Arizona case.

Erbland said he wants to add evidence linking Edward Smith to two guns, a 22-caliber pistol and a .38-caliber handgun, which he said were used both in the Patterson slaying and in the Yuma shootings.

Also, he said, a gray airplane belonging to Patterson was found among the Smiths' belongings at the Yuma bus station.

More traffic fatalities occur on rural roads

BOISE (AP) — Motorists in Idaho are nearly five times as likely to die on rural roads than urban streets and highways, officials said.

Charles Spilman, president of Traffic Safety Now Inc., said 258 people died last year on Idaho's highways. Of that number, 214, or 82 percent, were on rural roads, compared with 44 deaths on urban stretches.

That compares with the national average of 68 percent of the traffic fatalities occurring on rural roads.

Spilman and state Department of Transportation officials say several reasons exist for the high rate of deaths on Idaho's rural roads.

"Ninety-six percent of Idaho's roads are classified as rural, and motorists tend to speed on less traveled roads."

Those injured seriously may die because access to hospitals and other medical facilities is poor in many rural areas.

Rural roads have more bumps, are narrower and may not be maintained as well as urban roads.

Seat-belt use on rural roads is poor nationwide, lagging behind seat-belt use on urban roads.

In addition, Idaho has one of the worst records for all types of roads. Only about 28 percent of all motorists buckle up — the third-lowest percentage in the nation. Kansas and Oklahoma had the worst seat belt compliance.

"It's a sad situation because it's a fact that safety-belt use saves lives," Spilman said. "If belt use was as consistently high in rural areas as it is in urban areas, we could save thousands of lives."

He said many residents of small towns are independent and resent wearing seat belts, contributing to the high rate of fatalities for the number of miles driven in Idaho.

"There are 3.72 fatalities for every 100 million miles driven in Idaho's rural areas, compared to only 1.96 fatalities for 100 million miles driven in the state's urban areas," he said.

2 found dead in plane wreckage near border

CAMBRIDGE (AP) — Two California men were found dead in the wreckage of their light airplane in a mountain area near here Thursday night, 13 days after they took off on a flight from San Diego, Calif.

The Washington County sheriff's office said a rancher spotted the wreckage at Hitt Mountain, eight miles west of Cambridge and near the Idaho-Oregon border.

Dead were the pilot, Grady Gaylord, 68, and his son, Larry, 25, both of San Diego. The two men left San Diego Nov. 13 in a single-engine Cessna 180. Officials said Gaylord reportedly planned to stop in Caldwell to inspect property he was considering buying.

Gaylord was flying over the Paradise Mountain Military Operations Area about 30 miles north of the Nevada border when his plane disappeared from the FAA radar screen, said Lt. George Kneeshaw, commander of the air wing of the San Diego sheriff's department.

A widespread search was conducted in the southwestern corner of Idaho after Gaylord was reported missing, but it was centered up to 100 miles southeast of where the airplane actually crashed.

The search was suspended on Monday after no leads were turned up.

Investigating officers said the airplane was found about 4,000 feet in elevation and there were indications it struck a high-voltage power transmission line when it crashed.

Movie theaters can open on Sabbath

JERUSALEM (AP) — A judge ruled Sunday that movie theaters in Jerusalem can show films on the Jewish Sabbath, an issue that has brought clashes between the city's secular and Orthodox Jews.

Mayor Teddy Kollek, meanwhile, denounced Orthodox "extremists" for publicly expressing joy over the death of an archaeologist they accused of violating Jewish religious law by digging near Jerusalem's walled Old City.

Judge Ayala Prokashy ruled that an ordinance outlawing the showing of movies on the Sabbath was illegal because local governments have no authority to pass religious laws, municipal attorney Shabtai Ziv told The Associated Press.

The Orthodox interpret religious law as prohibiting driving and conducting business on the Sabbath, which lasts from sundown Friday to sundown Saturday.

There have been heated and sometimes violent confrontations between secular and Orthodox Jews since August when three major movie theaters began showing films on Friday nights.

The municipality had filed suit against the Orna and Beit Aviv theaters, charging them with violating a city ordinance that bans commercial movies on the Sabbath.

Ziv said the municipality had not yet decided whether to appeal Sunday's ruling.

Attorney Avraham Mezerah, who represented the Beit Aviv and Orna theaters, said the courts passed rulings similar to Prokashy's.

"This is a revolutionary decision and a far-reaching step for Jerusalem," Mezerah said in a telephone interview. "All the theaters in Jerusalem can now open their doors on Friday and Saturday without fear of being closed by an inspector — that will happen no more."

Rabbi Yitzhak Peretz, a law-maker from the Orthodox Shas party, said: "This decision is an earthquake ... that will enlarge the tension between the secular and the religious Jews. We will have to fight against it."

Ultra-Orthodox protesters have taken to the streets to protest the Friday night movies, often fighting with police who responded with tear gas.

Kollek condemned the people responsible for posters appearing on the walls of the Mea Shearim quarter hailing the death of archaeologist Yigal Shilo.

Shilo died of cancer Nov. 14 at the age of 50.

Christian leaders apologize to Indians

SEATTLE (AP) — Standing on the downtown corner believed to be the site of an ancient Indian burial ground, an Episcopal bishop and an apostle from Northwest Christian leaders to Indians and Eskimos.

"Dear brothers and sisters. This is a formal apology on behalf of our churches for their longstanding participation in the destruction of traditional Native American spiritual practices," Bishop Robert Runcie said, reading from a statement drafted by the ecumenical Church Council of Greater Seattle.

The church council has in the past defended Indian treaty rights. Nevertheless, members of the council declared on Saturday that they have not been above reproach.

"We have frequently been uncaring and insensitive and have not come to your aid when you have been victimized by unjust federal policies and practices. In many other circumstances, we reflected the rampant racism and prejudice of the dominant culture with which we too willingly identified," the letter said.

It went on to call on Christians to respect traditional Indian ways of life and pledge to help protect sacred places and support the right of Indians to conduct traditional spiritual ceremonies.

The declaration was delivered to Indian leaders Saturday at a gathering of about 25 people, including Lummi elder Joe Washington, who offered a prayer for the ceremony.

The God we pray to is the same God you pray to," Washington said. The apology will be controversial, predicted the Rev. William Cate, president of the church council. The letter will be sent to 26 regional tribes and 1,800 Christian congregations.

"Some people will say we're selling out to paganism, that we ought to be quite a little fuss," Cate said.

But, in Cate's view, the letter will give American Indians hope "that this society will become less racist and begin to treat them with more justice."

The apology was proposed last March in a letter to the council from Lummi activist Jewell Praying Wolf.

James. James wrote that Indian people continue to struggle to maintain their traditional beliefs and practices.

Signatures on the documents represented these church groups in the Pacific Northwest: Lutheran Church in America, American Baptist, Christian Church, Episcopal, United Church of Christ, Catholic, Presbyterian, American Lutheran and United Methodist.

Pope beatifies 85 English martyrs

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Sunday beatified 85 Roman Catholics who were executed for defying the Anglican church in the century following Henry VIII's break with Rome.

The group included 63 priests and 22 laypeople who lived in England, Scotland, Ireland and what was then called Gaul.

Nearly all of them were condemned to death for violating a 1585 law forbidding the ordination of Roman Catholic priests and providing for the prosecution of those who aided such priests.

Beatification is an important step in the Roman Catholic church in the process toward possible sainthood.

In the audience for the beatification ceremony in St. Peter's Basilica were the Duke and Duchess of Norfolk, both Catholics and cousins of Queen Elizabeth.

There was also a representative of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Anglican prelate Robert Runcie, and the bishop of Birmingham, Mark Santer.

At the end of the pope's homily, given in both Italian and English, he wished further progress toward fuller communion among Catholics and Anglicans.

The martyrs "offered their lives rather than deny the truth of their faith," John Paul said.

"All rejoice that the hostilities among Christians, rendered so evident in the time of these martyrs, are overcome and substituted by a fraternal love and by a reciprocal esteem," he added.

Astrologers in Japan years ago said girl babies born in 1966 would grow up to murder their husbands. So a sizable number of baby girls born there that year were given birth certificates dated either 1965 or 1967.

Republican, Democratic leaders nervously eye Iowa race

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Nervous Iowa politicians are watching growing criticism of the state's cherished "first-in-the-nation" presidential status and say, "We can't pick a leader."

Critics claim the state is tiny and unrepresentative, and both Democratic and Republican leaders in Iowa concede the criticism is somewhat accurate. But Iowans have a vested interest in the Feb. 8 caucuses because the selection process not only attracts attention to the state, it also brings in as much as $10 million and gives both of the state's political parties an organizational boost.

"It is more of a practical concern if you don't go with a winner under any circumstances," said Michael Mahaffey, Iowa's Republican chairman.

For months, Iowa has been the main stomping ground of the presidential campaign with candidates spending more than 500 days in the state since the first of the year. The state's role has been heightened by the fact that there is no incumbent in the White House and there are scrambling fields in both parties.

But at the same time, Democrats are concerned about polls that show party activists in Iowa are more liberal than elsewhere in the nation. And Republicans are worried about the growing influence of the fundamentalist Christian movement and the boost it could give former television evangelist Pat Robertson.

Presidential candidates to be seen on debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation will get its first glimpse at all 12 presidential candidates together at one forum Tuesday night but without any exchanges between rivals of opposite parties.

The two-hour live debate from the Kennedy Center, sponsored by NBC and moderated by Tom Brokaw, is the first this year with all six Democratic and all six Republican presidential contenders on the same stage.

NBC originally had envisioned a free-for-all forum in which candidates could have debated one another across party lines. However, that idea was dropped after some GOP candidates objected.

Instead, the six candidates from one party will be questioned by Brokaw as a group for 15 minutes. Then, each of the six can ask one other candidate in his party a question under a "draw" arrangement aimed at assuring that all get equal time.

During each half-hour segment, the candidates from the other party will be out of camera range.

Bill McAndrew, an NBC spokesman, said the first hour of the debate, which begins at 7 p.m. MST, will be devoted to foreign policy. The second hour will be on domestic policy issues.

The chairmen of the two parties were to toss coins to determine which goes first. Each candidate will draw the name of an opponent of whom he can ask one question.

Among the candidates, there is a 15-second limit on the time each can ask a question and one-minute time limit on the response.

Meanwhile, Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore drastically cut back his Iowa operations, complaining that the Democratic caucuses are controlled by liberals. Former Secretary of State Alexander Haig has done the same to concentrate on New Hampshire in the GOP battle.

While party activists dismiss the moves as practical actions by long-shot candidates, they concede some criticism is accurate and say caucuses must be more pragmatic this year.

"If we end up with President Al Gore in 1989, it's probably going to be the end of it," said Phil Roeder, a spokesman for the Iowa Democratic Party.

"In all honesty, we do have a lot of groups that take advantage of this by pressing their own agendas," Mahaffey said. "I don't think it makes a lot of sense for us to worry about our image. We don't need to package our image."

At the heart of the criticism are projections that only 100,000 activists from each party will attend the precinct caucuses, hardly enough to represent the two parties much less the nation as a whole.

"They may be nice people, but if they are out of whack with the rest of America, it's going to backfire down the road," Richard M. Cohen, a senior politics producer at CBS News, wrote.

Iowa should give up having the early presidential caucuses, James Flansburg, editorial page editor of the Des Moines Register, wrote in a column Friday. "They're not worth the pounding that we're getting from people who don't understand them and from people who for their own reasons want the quadrennial presidential nominating process to begin elsewhere."

The criticism is particularly harsh on the Democratic side, where critics note the party has lost four out of the last five presidential elections. While Walter Mondale easily won the 1984 Democratic caucuses in the state, he was swamped by President Reagan and even lost Iowa in the general election.

"What's good for the party and what's good for the caucuses all comes back to that electability issue and whether or not we can pick somebody who can win," Roeder said. "That's the big reason people have been so slow to pick."

"With the Iowa-bashing that's going on, nobody's coming up with any alternatives," he said.

In fact, there have been several alternatives offered. Southern politicians created a "Super Tuesday" on March 8, aimed at cutting into the influence of early tests. Others — including Mondale — have suggested rotating the first test among a number of states.

Mahaffey is philosophical about the debate.

"Once we are done being first, whenever that is, you are going to see all this happen to somebody else," he said.

Reagan says task set for congress

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan urged members of Congress on Friday to move quickly on the "vital task" of implementing the $75 billion budget-cutting deal he struck a week ago with their leaders.

"We must join together in a bipartisan way to preserve our economic gains and keep our nation strong," Reagan said in a letter sent to all 535 members of Congress.

The president noted that on Nov. 20, he and congressional leaders had reached agreement on a two-year program of budget deficit cuts, totaling $75 billion.

In his letter, he said the agreement "is our best hope for achieving deficit reduction without resorting to indiscriminate across-the-board cuts that would devastate essential services."

Reagan signed an executive order Nov. 20 authorizing an automatic $23 billion budget cut under a provision of the Gramm-Rudman Act, saying then that he wanted action immediately to attack the red-ink problem.

But Reagan and congressional leaders also said at the time that they hoped an agreement could be reached that would avert full implementation of the Gramm-Rudman Act, which amounts to $11.5 billion in domestic programs and $11.5 billion in Defense Department operations.

Sedition trial involves racism lawyer claims in Ohio 7 case BOSTON (AP) — The sedition trial of a community activist involves weighty and rare charges, but in its first three months, it has been a tedious, costly proceeding so tiresome it gets no attention even from courtroom gadflies.

Christopher King, 37, is accused along with members of the Ohio 7 of 15 bombings, two bank robberies and two shootings from 1976 to 1984 in a plot to overthrow the government.

The government says King, a black, was associated with the four white men and three white women even though he has been in prison since 1982.

"You know the Amtrak," King said in an interview. "This is the railroad. Non-stop."

The trial has crept at a snail's pace since it began Sept. 8, bogged down by scores of prosecution witnesses and numerous objections from Barry Wilson, King's attorney. The trial is expected to end early next year.

Sedition cases are always suspect because they come so close to violating First Amendment rights, said Professor Arthur Kinoy, a constitutional law expert at Rutgers University.

In federal custody without bail since February, King sat in court this week wearing a gray pin-stripe suit, paisley tie and tortoiseshell glasses. "This whole thing is racist. The whole thing started because I was sitting in a car with a white person."

Iraq reports attacks on ship; U.S. nearly fires on planes

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq said Friday its aircraft raided two tankers off Iran, and an American cruiser came within seconds of firing missiles at three Iraqi jets racing toward it at low altitude. They veered away.

Baghdad radio reported an attack on a "very large naval target," meaning a "supertanker," occurred at about 9:30 p.m. Thursday and another at 5 p.m. Friday. It did not identify the ships and there was no independent confirmation of air strikes.

They were the first raids on ships Iraq has claimed since Sunday. In the two weeks ending that day it reported 20 attacks, half of which were confirmed, in its attempt to destroy the oil exports with which Iran finances its military budget.

Lloyd's, the London insurance exchange, issued a report Friday saying 1987 would be the worst year of the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war in terms of damage to commercial shipping in the gulf, with 144 ships attacked by both sides since January. That figure compares with 110 attacks in 1986, the worst previous year.

Since the war began, 412 vessels are known to have been "attacked or damaged due to acts of hostility" by the two sides, Lloyd's said. The report said 98 others were trapped at gulf ports, 75 of them Shatt-al-Arab, the estuary that forms the Iran-Iraq border at the head of the gulf.

Although Iraq has claimed no attacks on ships since Sunday, U.S. Navy officials said it has sighted a 1 Mirage jets in the air nearly every day.

Iraq's main targets are Iranian or chartered tankers that shuttle crude oil from the main export terminal at Kharg Island, which is bombed almost every day, to make shift facilities in safer waters about 450 miles down the gulf.

Settlement unresolved with India

BHOPAL, India (AP) — Union Carbide and the government of India said Friday they failed to agree on an out-of-court settlement in the Dec. 3, 1984, gas leak disaster that killed more than 2,800 people and injured more than 200,000.

District Judge M.W. Deo said he would consider a request for interim relief to help surviving victims of the world's worst industrial accident.

"I have been really moved by the fact that the third anniversary of the disaster is drawing close," Deo said.

The government initially filed suit for $3-billion in damages from the U.S.-based multinational firm.

Two weeks ago, sources close to the negotiations said the two sides were close to agreement on a $500 million out-of-court settlement. The sources spoke on condition of anonymity.

But on Friday, attorneys told Deo they had not reached an agreement.

In the three years since methyl isocyanate, a liquid chemical used in making pesticide, leaked from a tank at the Union Carbide subsidiary plant in Bhopal, lawyers have been arguing in and out of court.

After reporting they were near agreement, the two sides failed to meet two court-ordered deadlines for a settlement, on Oct. 30 and Nov. 18.

Deo said he would conduct a hearing Dec. 21 on Union Carbide's request that the court consider additional preliminary statements in the case. He said further hearings would start Jan. 11 and continue on a day-to-day basis.

Haiti's election war sees lull

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Officials were delivering ballots and boxes Friday to voting stations throughout Haiti, taking advantage of a lull in election-week violence that has cost at least 21 lives.

Haitians are to choose a president and legislature Sunday for the first time since the Duvalier dictatorship began three decades ago.

It ended in February 1986 with the flight of Jean-Claude Duvalier, who inherited the presidency from his father Francois. A military-dominated junta has governed Haiti since.

According to radio reports, at least 21 people were killed by gunmen, vigilantes or soldiers between Sunday and Wednesday nights, most of them in Port-au-Prince. No killings were reported Thursday night and the capital and countryside remained quiet Friday.

Troops were sent into the streets Wednesday after neighborhood vigilante organizations killed several people in fighting with armed gangs apparently trying to disrupt the scheduled elections.

Gunmen and arsonists have attacked campaign headquarters, election offices, radio stations and a company printing ballots. However, a Western diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, said he did not believe rumors of a coup or new surge of violence calculated to block the elections.

"I wouldn't say we're over the hump, though," he said. "I don't think that can be said until Feb. 7, when the elected president is sworn in."

Some ballots cannot be delivered because drivers fear attacks by the gunmen who have tried for weeks to disrupt the election, Jules said.

Government censors approve new Biko movie showing

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Government censors surprised their critics Friday by authorizing "unabridged" showings of the movie "Cry Freedom" about Steve Biko, the young black activist who died in police custody 10 years ago.

The film opened this month in the United States and Britain. Some reviewers have called it "the most powerful anti-apartheid movie ever made for mass audiences."

Several South African journalists who saw "Cry Freedom" abroad had predicted South Africa's white authorities would not allow it to be shown in any form.

Biko's death in detention made him a martyr to opponents of the apartheid system. The movie's other central character, exiled journalist Donald Woods, is a "banned" person who cannot be quoted in South Africa.

Braam Coetzee, who is responsible for censorship, said a committee saw the movie Thursday and approved it for showing without cuts or age restrictions.

"Everyone tried to rid themselves of any preconceived idea or attitude when they viewed the film," said Coetzee, who oversees the censorship process as director of publications control. "The decision arrived at is an indication of the committee's objectivity."

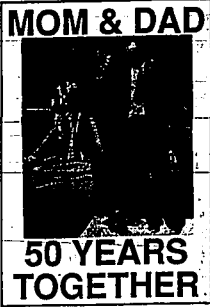

Typhoon death toll rises; 300 killed

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The number of people dead or missing from Typhoon Nina topped 300 on Friday, with about 168,000 Filipinos left homeless.

Relief agencies gave a preliminary death toll of 286 and said 23 people were missing.

The government-run Philippine News Agency put the death toll at 368, but gave no source for its figure.

President Corason Aquino declared a state of calamity in 11 provinces Friday. Her proclamation forbids profiteering and allows the government to commandeer food and other relief supplies.

State attorney general has eye on gas prices

BOISE (AP)—Boise-area gasoline dealers are getting a strong hint from the attorney general that if some prices don't drop soon, there may be another investigation into possible gasoline price-fixing.

Attorney General Jim Jones has sent letters to area dealers raising "questions as to whether consumers are being treated fairly."

Particularly, Jones noted that although there has been a drop of about 4 cents per gallon in wholesale prices in the last month or six weeks, there has been no corresponding drop in retail prices.

And Jones says for the last year, there has been no wholesale price difference between regular and unleaded gasoline, yet Boise-area dealers persist in charging up to 4 cents per gallon more for unleaded.

"Most other areas of the state have witnessed the disappearance of the price differential, which is no longer justified by market factors," Jones said.

The attorney general encouraged dealers to "review" their prices and make certain they are not violating law.

"In addition, I would appreciate it if you would compare your prices with those outside of the Boise area to see whether local customers are being treated justly."

"If prices are not adjusted downward, we shall be required to look into the matter," he warned.

Gasoline prices in the Boise area on Friday generally ran $1.03 to $1.09 per gallon for regular at self-service stations with unleaded about 4 cents per gallon higher.

In recent weeks, motorists in the city have been complaining that Boise's gasoline prices appear to be higher than other areas of the state and nation.

In October, Jones said a preliminary review of pricing in the Boise area did not disclose anything suspicious. But since then, he said, "I have been intrigued by the remarkable stability in the Boise market in recent months."

More wheat sales possible

WASHINGTON (AP)—American farmers will be able to sell an additional 2.35 million metric tons of wheat to the Soviet Union under an expanded wheat export program announced Friday by the Agriculture Department.

The government previously had given farmers the go-ahead to sell nearly 6.4 million metric tons of wheat to the Soviet Union. Since April, the Soviets have purchased more than 5.7 million metric tons under that program.

The additional 2.35 million metric tons, added to the 603,000 metric tons remaining under previous allocations, brings the amount of U.S. wheat available for sale to the Soviet Union to just under 3.5 million metric tons, the department said.

Under the program, the wheat is bought by the state at competitive world prices. But the export is subsidized by the U.S. Commodity Credit Corporation to enable U.S. exporters to compete at the lower commercial prices that prevail on the Soviet market.
