Reagan's war comment draws friends' fire

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As Washington prepared on Friday to receive Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, the Reagan administration reported Soviet progress on human rights and President Reagan came under fire for saying his arms control critics accept "the inevitability of war."

Angry right — A10

of Jews and dissidents and other issues with his Soviet counterpart.

The report found the Soviet performance under Gorbachev's regime disappointed dramatically in some cases but "violations continued" and the structural and legal apparatus that makes official repression possible remained in place.

Reagan ran into flak at home, from friends.

The president briefed congressional leaders on his summit preparations and engaged in what one called a "good strong colloquy" with Senate Republican leader, Bob Dole of Kansas.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., said Dole asked Reagan to explain his comment in a television interview Thursday that "opponents of the treaty" down in their deepest thoughts have accepted that war is inevitable. Reagan also said critics — most of them conservatives — were "ignorant of the advances that have been made in verification" to guard against Soviet cheating.

"I don't think that anyone sitting around that table was ready to admit being ignorant," House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said later.

Dole refused to discuss what he told Reagan, but he made public a letter to the president saying it was only prudent for senators to withhold judgment on the treaty until a text is available. Dole wrote: "Mr. President, this issue is not a test of loyalty to our party or to you, as some have tried to portray it."

Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., said he was "appalled" by Reagan's remark. Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., said "What an appalling charge for the president of the United States to make — this senator does not see the inevitability of war and that is why I dare question what might be in this treaty."

But the treaty won praise from some Republicans and some Democrats. Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said he was "cautiously optimistic that it will be fit for Senate approval."

Reagan brushed aside reporters. "I am not going to take any questions," he said. "We have only a limited time here this morning and a busy schedule today."

It is our belief in the avoidability of war that makes us take these issues so seriously," Frank Gaffney Jr., ousted two weeks ago as the Bush's top — and — military specialist, told reporters, in response to Reagan's comment.

Suit seeks to halt store's operations on moral grounds

Property owners won't renew lease

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A group of Twin Falls citizens have filed a suit against the Front Page Book Store to stop it from distributing what the group calls obscene materials that constitute a moral nuisance.

But the move by the group, called Determined Citizens Against Pornography, comes 30 days before the owner of the property, Jay and Barbara Moyle of Filer, planned to allow the Front Page corporation's lease to expire. They said they did not intend to renew the lease.

The Moyles merely own the building housing the store. The Front Page Book Store is a separate corporation that operates the business.

Jay Moyle said he never leased the property to Front Page, "but they're best good renters."

Barbara Moyle said she examined the business when it was located on Main Street three years ago. After deciding Front Page would be a suitable tenant, the Moyles rented their building at 1178 Blue Lakes Boulevard.

"It's gotten progressively worse," Jay Moyle said. "We're doing it now, but the time's coming, it's done."

The lawsuit was filed under an Idaho statute that allows private citizens to ask the courts to close down a business that is a "moral nuisance."

The Determined Citizens decided to file lawsuit after asking both the Twin Falls City Council and the Twin Falls County Commission to pursue the closure of the book store, said Brent Nielsen, attorney for the citizens' group.

When both the city and county refused to pursue the matter, citing the costs of pursuing a civil case, Determined Citizen member Scott Fife spent two years investigating the business, including buying and renting pornographic materials starting in March 1987.

Fife submitted 16 magazines and five videotapes which the plaintiffs say are pornographic and obscene to support the claim.

The group is asking the court to:

- Hold a hearing to determine if the court should prohibit the business from operating until a final determination can be heard.
- Decide whether the magazines and videos submitted with the case be determined pornographic.

"That the owners of the bookstore and the business be permanently prohibited from selling its inventory and instead turn that inventory over to the state to be destroyed."

- That the building be closed and kept empty for one year.
- That all money paid to the Moyles as rent be taken from the

McClure shoots down ban on 'plastic guns'

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate on Friday rejected legislation outlawing so-called "plastic guns" that can escape detection by metal detectors and X-ray security machines used in airports.

The Senate voted 47-42 to table, or kill, an amendment by Sen. Howard Thurmond, D-Ohio, and Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., which they had attached to a measure authorizing funds for the Veterans Administration.

Police groups and others supporting the plastic gun legislation are attempting to prevent the spread of weapons that have low metal content. They argue that weapons could carry the weapons without triggering the detectors.

Two guns currently being manufactured contain less than 8.5 ounces of steel, which is the minimum metal content required in the legislation. The National Rifle Association, which opposes the measure, argues that the weapons can still be detected by existing equipment, and that instead of turning them, airport security efforts should be intensified.

Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, who opposes the Thurmond-Thurmond proposal, said the legislation is still pending in the Senate Judiciary Committee where it could be considered more thoroughly.

"It is highly illogical that our legislation," said McClure. "It has not been considered in the proper forum. It should not be here today."

Before the vote, McClure said if his tabling motion were defeated, he would filibuster the gun legislation, thus tying up the voters' bill and the entire Senate which wants to leave for a Christmas recess by Dec. 18 but must first pass a deficit reduction plan and a money bill to keep the government running.

Metzenbaum said the plastic gun prohibition was necessary "if we want to do something about terrorism. It would do it now."

He said he had proposed to attach the measure to an airline safety measure, but withdrew it, despite support from the bill's managers, because of the threat of a filibuster by proponents of the gun lobby.

Metzenbaum said a Judiciary subcommittee attempted to take action on the bill earlier this week but was thwarted by a parliamentary technicality.

"Enough is enough," he said, adding that officials from the Federal Aviation Administration, Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms and the Secret Service "testified in July that the amendment was needed to protect airline passengers."

Twelve major law enforcement organizations, including the International Chiefs of Police, "all say that the information is needed," he said. "Why not have it."

Metzenbaum "knew" the "only groups opposing this legislation are in the gun lobby."

Hundreds pay respects at Stover rites

By JANE ROBINSON
Times-News writer

JEROME — Under somber, gray skies, about 500 mourners gathered to pay their respects Friday to three slain members of the Stover family who died Monday in a violent family conflict.

The two surviving Stover children, flanked by relatives, walked behind the three flower-draped coffins bearing James Stover, 60, and her two daughters, Kristina, 16, and Korinne, 13.

Jim Stover of Ketchum and Shala Stover of Salt Lake City, clung tightly to each other for support, and kept their heads bowed during much of the service as their mother and two sisters were eulogized as warm, caring individuals "who will be missed."

"June Stover was the ideal woman," said LDS Bishop Frank Scherzer. "She was a devoted mother and a supportive wife. She loved her family. She was always there for them."

Kris was remembered as the "girl with the winning smile," and Korrie was characterized as shy, but an honor student in school.

The three were found shot to death in their Boise home after one of the girls phoned 911 emergency about 5 a.m. Monday and pleaded for help.

The father, William M. Stover, 50, a former Harrison Elementary School principal and Mormon Church leader, was found with his wrists slashed and one hand almost severed inside the home.

He was flown to Salt Lake City for treatment and was being held under armed guard, awaiting his return to Boise to face three charges of first-degree murder and use of a firearm in commission of a felony.

LDS Bishop L. Dell Waldron broke down during the service when he mentioned William Stover.

"He needs our love and support, now more than ever," said Waldron, his voice choked with emotion. "It is not ours to judge."

Friday's hour-long service in 2nd Ward of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Chapel in Jerome was presided by another memorial service for the three in Boise.

About 300 family members and friends mourned the three on Thursday at the chapel of the Boise 27th LDS Ward. Bishop Gideon Allen, who conducted the memorial, said the service

Driver, 5, follows family tradition

The Associated Press

RYE, N.Y. — It seems that 5-year-old Rocco Morabito was just following family tradition when he took his baby sister for a 19-mile ride in the family station wagon during Friday morning's rush hour.

Rocco's grandfather and great-uncle were both driving when they were 6 or 7, a family member said.

Police Officer Robert Vogel said he was having coffee at a deli on a busy four-lane road when bus driver David Casera ran in shortly after 7 a.m. to announce there was a child driving a car.

Vogel spotted the tan car "weaving ever so slightly" at about 20 mph and flipped on his lights and siren.

The car immediately pulled over to the curb and didn't even hit the curb. It was a beautiful job of pulling the car over," he said.

The child, who could barely see over the dashboard, had the automatic seat pulled all the way up and the steering wheel down, he said.

However, as the 3-foot-tall driver started to get out on the passenger's side, Vogel realized the transmission wasn't in park and he reached in to stop the rolling car. Rocco and his 2-year-old sister, Brandy, began crying and calling for their mother, Vogel said.

"I calmed them down and told them their mommy would have to come down," Vogel said. "The kid said, 'Mommy doesn't have a way to get here. I've got the only car.' Then he says, 'I can drive. I'll go get her.'"

Rocco, dad — in pajamas — and Brandy, and his sister — who was wearing only a pajama top, where taken to the stationhouse in this New York City suburb where their grandfather was waiting.

The unidentified grandfather, who had heard the incident over a police scanner, "gave him a stern talking to," Vogel said.

"We advised him that perhaps he shouldn't be too hard on such a small youth. We were lucky, though. Nothing happened. It's amazing that they didn't get hurt."

As police put it together, Rocco got the keys from his mother's pocketbook, which was atop the station garage door and backed the locked wagon down a narrow 80-foot driveway bounded by a house and a fence.

Brandy followed Rocco and was only faked for the "fida" after an argument, Vogel said.

Senators approve bailout bill

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate on Friday passed a $4 billion bailout bill for the troubled Savings and Loan System.

The bill would provide $4 billion to help pay for the cost of liquidating failed savings and loan institutions.

 Moyle and turned over to the state of Idaho.
 Order the defendants to pay for investigative costs, court costs and reasonable attorneys' fees for Determined Citizens.
 The group has already obtained a court order from 6th District Judge Daniel Meehl to enter the Front Page bookstore and photograph the store's inventory. The took their pictures Thursday, Nielsen said.
 The suit "is brought under an Idaho statute passed in 1976. That statute provides for each of the remedies the plaintiffs are asking for. If a judge decides a business is a moral nuisance.
 Despite the suit, the Front-Page company for two years, the Moyles say they are offended by the current content of the store. When the lawsuit was served on them at their home near Filer, the exhibit Fife collected were brought along.
 "I'll admit, I don't approve of what they're doing," Barbara said. "I couldn't buy the stuff. I never had such trash brought into my home."
 It would have been kind of nice if our neighbors came to us before serving papers. It would have saved a lot of their money," Burtman said.
 The Moyles said they live near Lorraine-Patton, on the plain. The Fife said he said, "I don't know if they had seen piano lessons from the wife of another plaintiff, Ron Grif.
 According to Fife, the store consists of a small entry area where primarily non-sexual material is sold. In the main retail area of the store are shelves and shelves of sexually explicit and graphic material. There are video tapes," Fife alleged. Other sexual items are available, Fife says, including inflatable dolls, lotions and games.
 The store also includes a video arcade area where there are four private video booths about four feet by three feet each with a seat, a television screen and a small plastic con-tainor on the floor.

 Fife said the floors of the booths were covered with a liquid that appeared to be human semen.
 "It is obvious ... that these receptacles are for the express purpose of facilitating masturbation by the customer as they view the sexually explicit videos," Fife said in his affidavit.
 "The bottom line is that it's clearly in violation of Idaho law," Nielsen said. "These people feel that, to keep it open, is like leaving a store down the street selling cocaine, and everybody knows it does, but nobody does anything about it."
 In a telephone interview Friday afternoon a man who identified himself as the manager of the Front Page, but did not reveal his name, refused to comment on the case.
 That Idaho law defines moral nuisances and lewd matter as matter that an average person, applying contemporary community standards and considering the matter as a whole, would find the material:
 •Tends to incite lust.
 •Depicts patently offensive representations of ultimate sexual acts, normal or otherwise, masturbation excretory function or exhibition of genital areas.

lack literary, artistic, social or political value.
 Harold Nelson and Dwight Teeter, who wrote a communications law textbook, put it this way:
 "Some of the seamier kinds of sexually explicit writings and films are produced by some pretty slimy individuals — people you would not invite home to dinner. Even so, their basic rights of expression must be upheld. Our language is so clumsy an instrument that the verbal formulation which does away with repellent trash may also be used — when the dogs of censorship bay most loudly — to silence and punish politically and socially important expression."
 However, Nelson and Teeter say, one of the bigger difficulties in prosecuting obscenity cases is to determine just what current community standards are.

Bailout

 The administration has been hinting that this bill might draw a veto because of provisions that would set up a secondary market similar to the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae), under which farm mortgage loans would be pooled and shares sold to investors.
 The so-called Farmer Mac would heighten competition for the Farm owners-owned network of 37 banks and hundreds of local lending associations that together represent the nation's largest agricultural lender.
 The system, which farmers often view as a traditional mainstay of U.S. agriculture, is reeling from $4.8-billions in losses in two years, primarily because of the rural crisis of the early 1980s combined with borrowing at rates up to 16 percent to raise capital to lend to farmers.

 Advocates of a secondary market, notably the American Bankers Association, say competition will help make the Farm Credit System lean and efficient. They point to third-quarter figures indicating that, like the farm-economy itself, the system may have put some of its worst problems behind it.
 Easy approval of the Senate's bill had been predicted Wednesday night after lawmakers put on the finishing touches but postponed a vote until Friday. Most of the real work of drafting the complex measure came in six weeks of detailed subcommittee action with Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., presiding.

 The next step will be a conference committee to resolve differences between the bill and a rival version approved 365-49 by the House on Oct. 6. The House measure would provide up to $2.5-billion in federal aid to the system over five years.
 Leahy said House Agriculture Committee Chairman E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Texas, "has assured me that he believes a sound package can be developed from the bills reported from each house."

 carried a "message of forgiveness."
 "Bill (Stover) is the one that needs much faith and prayer," he said.
 Ada County Sheriff Capt. Tom Taylor said Friday officers still have not had a chance to question Stover to determine a motive for the shotgun slayings.
 "It depends on what doctors tell us," Taylor said. "As soon as they give the okay, we'll talk to him."
 Taylor said Stover had agreed to extradition back to Idaho. Stover was flown to Salt Lake City on Monday to receive medical care and before he was formally charged.

Taylor said Stover was returned to Boise on Monday.
 Two Ada County sheriff's deputies have been watching Stover in the hospital to ensure he does not injure himself again, and deputies also will watch him when he returns to Boise.
 "We will take every precaution to ensure that he does not injure himself," said Ada County Under-sheriff Doc Pfeiffer. "Because he's attempted suicide before, we have to assume he will do it again."

Summit

 "It is our conviction that nuclear weapons, in particular, have been absolutely essential over the past 40 years to preventing war, of any kind," Gaffney said.
 Other hardline conservative activists acknowledged they probably lack the strength to block Senate ratification of the treaty, which would eliminate the superpowers' short and intermediate range nuclear missiles.

Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., expressed misgivings about the treaty, citing "the possibility of cheating" by the Soviets. He also said the pact would leave the Soviets with a large advantage in conventional troops and weapons in Europe and said that means "we're playing their game."
 The first shots were fired in a fight over what might come out of the next Reagan-Gorbachev summit — envisioned in Moscow in 1988.
 Both Gorbachev and Reagan this week expressed hope that they would sign a treaty in 1988 cutting by 50 percent their strategic nuclear weaponry, which would be the most dramatic arms control step in post-war history.
 Gaffney said he is "horrified" by a signal from the administration that it may no longer insist on a ceiling on Soviet land-based intercontinental ballistic missile warheads, a potential roadblock to a strategic arms control treaty.

Bishops accuse army

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Roman Catholic bishops said Friday the army was involved in the killing spree that destroyed a free election, and urged Haitians to keep the military-run junta from making its own election rules.

Opposition groups called a general strike beginning Monday to oust the junta, which has ruled since President Jean-Claude Duvalier fled the country Feb. 7, 1986, ending nearly 30 years of family dictatorship.

The city was quiet Friday. The body of a man with the top of his head blown off lay in the sun most of the morning in front of the national cathedral.

In Washington, the Senate condemned the breakdown of the democratic process in Haiti and held the junta responsible for the violence. On election day last Sunday, gangs of men armed with machine guns and machetes roamed Port-au-Prince, killing people at random in the streets and slaughtering others at voting stations while military patrols did nothing.

When voting stopped the violence abated, but at the end of the day 24 people were dead, 76 were wounded and the first real election since Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, Jean-Claude's father, was like another corpse in the streets.

They rejected a junta election decree, which dissolved the autonomous Electoral Council and asked churches and other civic organizations to name a new one.

Prints don't match

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The fingerprints of a mystery man who killed himself with poison this week do not match either of two suspects in a 1983 North Korean spy scandal in Japan, officials said Friday.

Japanese officials had suggested earlier that he might be one of the two, a Korean using the Japanese name Akira Miyamoto.

The dead man and his woman companion, who survived, took poison before being questioned about the disappearance Tuesday of a South Korean jetliner that may have been bombed. They were passengers on part of the flight and were believed to be Koreans living in Japan.

No trace has been found of the Boeing 747, which flight officials believe crashed either in jungles near the Burma-Thailand border or in Burmese waters of the Andaman Sea. Korean Air Flight 858 originated in Baghdad and was bound for Seoul with stops at Abu Dhabi, Amman and Bangkok.

South Korean officials have said they believe the plane, which had 116 people aboard, was destroyed by a bomb and communist North Korea was responsible.

Safari tour plane crashes

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A small plane carrying 12 Americans on a safari to photograph gorillas slammed into a mountainside in northwestern Rwanda, killing the tourists and their Kenyan pilot, officials said Friday.

Some of the passengers screamed and frantically threw their belongings out of the plane as it careened out of control before crashing about 4 p.m. Thursday, according to witnesses quoted by Rwanda's government-owned radio.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman identified the Americans as Thomas Akeley of Sycamore, Ill.; Jill Cowan of The Woodlands, Texas;

Andrew Foster of Flint, Mich.; Franz "Rick" Heber of Monument, Colo.; Daniel Schwartz of Tampa, Fla.; and Ernest Farino, Shirley Farino, Becky Ferguson, Nancy Gerald, Mary Slater and Donald Wilberforce, all of Amarillo, Texas.

Also killed was Thelma Yambao, a Filipino native who became a U.S. citizen about a month ago.

Rate falls full percent lower than '86

Unemployment rates lower than normal

By the Times-News and Associated Press

BOISE — An extended bout of good weather through the fall has kept unemployment rates in the Magic Valley lower than normal. The predicted unemployment level for November in Twin Falls is 4.6 percent, said Lon McDonald, state labor force analyst at the Twin Falls office of the Idaho Department of Employment. That rate is 1.8 percent below October's rate and a full 1.2 percent below November 1986. "Excellent weather and generally improved optimism about the economy combined to keep more people working this November," McDonald said. "Construction, retail, service and farming all have not reduced employment as rapidly as in average November." Overall, Idaho's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate slipped below the 5 percent barrier last month for only the second time in eight years. Total employment in the state hit its highest level since 1979, the Department of Employment reported.

"It is evidence of the continued improvement in our state's economy," Director Julie Kilgus said. In the Magic Valley, however, the labor force appears to be continuing to decline. In November, 375 fewer people were employed in 1987 than in 1986.

"We have experienced some labor force drop," McDonald said. "We've had some rather nice, low unemployment rates caused by lost labor force."

Part of the drop in the Magic Valley work force is due to migration of workers to other areas, McDonald said.

"But it's possible that we're in for a renewed increase in labor force," McDonald said. "It could be that the corner's been turned." Late in September, Boise-based Trus Ltd announced it would open a wood-window manufacturing plant in Twin Falls that would eventually employ 400 people. That announcement was the first fruit from the labors of renewed economic development activities in Twin Falls.

Since then, a ski-goggle manufacturer has announced plans to open a plant in Twin Falls and a potato-processing plant is close to beginning operation in Jerome.

Nationally, the unemployment rate also dropped a notch to a decade-low 5.9 percent as over 300,000 more Americans found work. The statistics covering the first full month of economic activity since the Oct. 19 stock market crash could work to quell the concerns of some analysts about Idaho's economic fortunes since Wall Street's free-fall.

The preliminary state report showed November unemployment at 4.9 percent, down a notch from October to match September's decade low, at the same time there was strong expansion in both the total labor force and the number of Idahoans with jobs. Unemployment in nearly every area of the state was down from year-ago levels.

But the report was clouded somewhat by dramatic revisions in employment statistics for the first half of 1987.

While the job picture in Idaho remained significantly brighter than it was a year ago, the revised figures turned what had been thought was an economically strong winter season with a record work force and high employment into a more typical period that was relatively unaffected by the extremely mild weather.

Total employment figures for the winter months were scaled back between 6,000 and 9,000 jobs from decade-high levels, and in June the unusual shutdown of plants throughout the food processing industry sent the total labor force to a 62-month low with employment plunging below 395,000, the lowest level since September 1983.

Still, the state will post its first • See RATE on Page A6

Upgrade may have advantages

City reviews plans to improve sewer

By BART JANSEN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls City Council is reviewing plans to improve sewerage treatment, as the city strives to keep its cup from running over.

While Twin Falls' treatment plant currently runs within federal guidelines, the city's consulting engineers recommend "increasing plant capacity. Peak loads create the average flow and threaten to overflow if a unit failed."

"The real importance of this is reliability," said Bob Pharmed, project manager from the city's consulting engineers CH2M Hill. So the Boise firm recommends Twin Falls expand its sewer capacity — first by improving the existing plant and then by expanding the plant.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency requires plants be able to handle full load even after one treatment unit fails. Twin Falls' plant meets that requirement, Pharmed said, but capacity is growing perilously close to limits.

The first phase of CH2M's proposals, slated for early 1988, would improve "in-plant" capacity by replacing pipes, raising walls around tanks and improving air supply.

"The waste is also more soluble, which basically affects the treatment system considerably," Pharmed said. He explained the system needs more oxygen to support the bacteria that consume waste.

The full council discussed this first phase of improvements during a lunchtime work session Thursday. The council informally agreed to pay for improvements within the plant through city deposits and eventually from a lawsuit would pay for proposed expansions.

City water department reserves total nearly $1.5 million. And a federal jury awarded Twin Falls $3.4 million, although a third of that amount is still under appeal, in a lawsuit stemming from the city's formerly inadequate wastewater treatment.

Council members agreed that proceeds from the suit should go toward improving the plant. They cited potential advantages to luring industry to Twin Falls by improving sewage facilities.

Councilman Gale Kleinkopf asked whether an additional sewage capacity would help attract industry.

"Oh, sure," Pharmed said. "The City of Payette — that's how they got Coca-Cola to come in. The city upgraded the water treatment plant and gave it (additional capacity) to Coke free."

However, City Manager Tom Courtney added that increased "in-plant" capacity during the next year is planned strictly for the city. Future expansion, several years down the road, is what could be offered to new businesses, he said.

CH2M Hill's tentative schedule for these initial improvements calls for completing detailed designs by Jan. 15 and advertising for bids Feb. 24. The construction contract would begin April 5.

CH2M Hill proposes designing improvements in the wastewater treatment plant and then overseeing bids and construction for Twin Falls. Its fee for inspecting the construction must still be determined, but the rest carries a price tag of $64,670.

Councilman Rick Carr, asking how ignorance in the area, asked how Twin Falls is certain that price is fair, since the same company advises the city and then sets its own fee.

But Courtney defended CH2M Hill, saying their price is within the expected "12 to 17 to 20 percent" of total project cost.

"The real problem is to get someone capable and responsible to do the job," Courtney said. "If the job's done right, it may appear expensive at the front end, but it pays off in the long run."

Miracle baby Crystal Lynn John sits at home with parents Jim and Ellen and grandfather Bobby after prezel incident

Grandfather claims it was a miracle Few twists of good fortune save child

By KEN ARMSTRONG Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — For 15-month-old Crystal Lynn John, the potentially tragic episode all began with a pretzel.

After having eaten a small pretzel at about 2:45 p.m. Friday, the infant immediately began choking. She then fell down on the floor. Her eyes dilated, and she started turning blue.

Forty-five minutes later, thanks to a few twists of good fortune which would make any pretzel curl with envy, Crystal was breathing normally. Her grandfather, Bobby John, calls it a "miracle."

For Randy Hudspeth, a nurse practitioner with the Twin Falls Clinic, the drama probably couldn't quite be classified in the same category as turning water to wine. It definitely did make,

However, for a less than routine afternoon.

According to Hudspeth, he was doing his usual patient rounds at the West Magic Care Center, a nursing care facility on Fillet Avenue, when he heard a commotion coming from the facility's front desk.

"There was just a lot of screaming in the halls, and when I went out to check it I just saw a father with a limp baby in his arms yelling for help," Hudspeth says.

Allison Mills, a registered nurse at the care center, says she and the other nurses were in a meeting when they, too, heard the screaming.

"We just heard someone yelling, 'Get a nurse, get a nurse,'" she says. "All of the nurses came out of report (the meeting between shifts) and when I got there Randy was doing mouth-to-mouth."

I got a stethoscope and started listening for heart sounds."

According to Hudspeth, Crystal was blue by the time he arrived at the front desk. She had a pulse, but she was not breathing, he says.

Hudspeth laid the infant flat on the front desk, and then applied suction to her nose and mouth. After the airways were cleared, he began cardiopulmonary and mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

Five minutes later, the baby finally responded.

Crystal was not the only one having problems, however. Her grandfather, who had accompanied her father, Jimmy, on their mad dash to the facility, soon also hit the floor.

"The grandfather hyperventilated and collapsed in the lobby during all this," Hudspeth says. "We had to have him breathe into a paper sack. After about 20 minutes he was fine, and then the ambulance came and they took over."

Eventually, Crystal too was breathing normally and out of danger. She was taken to an emergency ward as a precautionary measure, then to the family's doctor and finally home.

At the nursing care center two hours later, there were nothing but smiles and congratulations.

"I think it's terrific," said Joyce Ellis, the care center's administrator. "I think he (Hudspeth) did a wonderful job."

Ellis said it was the first time she could remember that the facility had helped save a non-patient in such dramatic fashion. Hudspeth said it was not the first time he had saved someone, but it was just as scary as the first. • See BABY on Page A6

City moves pool ahead with innovative plans

By BART JANSEN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Despite continuing delays slowing progress toward a new pool, Twin Falls City Council informally agreed to move ahead with innovative building plans.

City Manager Tom Courtney said the new plan to accept bids uses a new way to accept those bids. He said that since bidding will be more complicated, the contenders should be winnowed to a handful, who each feel more likely to win the contract, and thus offer better plans.

Twin Falls will ask contractors to design a pool and then name their price. Courtney said when a similar "design-bid" plan was used to build the state prison, several top firms were selected from many competitors that initially applied.

This pre-qualifying yields fewer competitors, each with greater confidence in succeeding, so they take greater care with their plans and cost estimates, he said.

Instead of the level of effort that would go into a patty design and cost estimates, they are going to do a much better job," Courtney said.

The full council agreed with that plan during a work session Thursday. They anticipate naming a five- or seven-member committee including city staff, council members and a disinterested architect and engineer to shadow on those plans.

on which to build the pool. School officials are still considering after several revisions, a proposed contract with the city.

The city plans to build a pool on school district property along Locust Street north of the high school. Initially, the district agreed to lease the land for a nominal fee in return for closing the adjacent Stadium-Boulevard during school days, to protect school children from increased traffic.

But details remain unresolved. Council members wondered if they could agree with a school board, when that group can't agree among themselves.

"That's what concerns me — if it takes this long just for them to agree among themselves, then may be it's a magic well, first something with it," said Councilman Jim Vickers.

But Courtney and City Attorney Shane Bengoechea each said revisions so far have been minor and agreeable. Courtney said Superintendent Carl Snow expected the school board to vote on the issue at its January meeting.

Still, Councilman Rick Carr said, "The thing that bothers me is why it's taking until January — it's only Dec. 8 now."

The school board's next meeting is Tuesday. City officials had planned to have residents swimming by summertime. • I think if we keep moving we'll be O.K.," Courtney said.

Cable dial move makes it worth effort

By PAT MARCANTONIO Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The return of Bingo next week to K49AZ signals the station's return to health, especially with its move to channel 2, said officials of the low-power station.

But the move on the King Videocable Co. system is still weeks away.

Company Manager Chris Talkington said the state attorney general's office has not completed the document that sets out terms for the take place six weeks after the agreement is signed.

The cable company verbally agreed in November to move K49AZ from channel 19 to channel 2. The agreement with K49AZ was reached with the help of the attorney general's office, which intervened at the request of the city of Twin Falls. Harvey had alleged the cable company was restricting its business by refusing to move the station to the lower tier, which all television sets can receive without special equipment.

The cable company agreed to give the station channel 2 for one year, but it will have to prove its popularity to remain on the lower tier.

Deputy Attorney General Peter Richardson, who is drafting the agreement, was out of the office Friday and unavailable for comment.

Although the move is weeks away, K49AZ officials are attempting to revive the image of the station that only weeks before appeared ready to go dark.

Station owner Wil Ris of Washington, D.C. met in Twin Falls with Harvey on Thursday to inform them that the rumors of the station's death were "greatly exaggerated."

"Essentially, what we wanted was to communicate our real optimism," said Ris, a lobbyist.

Ris said the cable company did a "wise and honorable thing" by agreeing to move K49AZ. But he wouldn't comment on whether K49AZ nudged the company along with the threat of a lawsuit. He deferred questions about nudging to the attorney general's office.

Richardson previously said an anti-trust implication was an undercurrent in the negotiations.

Without the move to channel 2, Ris said, "we could have survived, but under very adverse circumstances, the kind to make one wonder if it was clearly worth the effort. But on channel 2, it's clearly worth the effort."

Before the agreement was reached, Harvey had said the station's growth would be faster and stronger.

station's fate was uncertain after November.

The station has plans to take advantage of its new home. Ris said a local board of directors will be formed at the first of the year to provide critical comment and direction for the station. There are plans to expand to Hagerman and Burley and provide local programming, such as public-service coverage during 1988 political races.

Opportunities for local investment in the station is also under development, he said. But he couldn't comment further because of security restrictions.

"We are in the position that if we don't get another dollar, we are fine and we can grow and prosper and thrive with the revenues we have," he said. With investors money, however, the station's growth will be faster and stronger.

Baby

Holding her hands about an infant's length apart, Mills said, "When your mind is tuned to geriatrics and then you get something this big, it's hard."

Back in his apartment following all the excitement, Bobby John was also wearing something of a smile on his otherwise lined face. His contemplative speech was flecked with use of the word "miracle."

"We lost the baby — that is, he said, "This world took that baby from me, and God gave her back. If that ain't enough to make a human being change his ways, then there ain't nothing that will do it."

As he sat by a table on which sat several pictures of his granddaughter, John also paid recognition to the role proximity had played in the day's events.

Most fortuitously, his apartment — where Crystal swallowed the prelate — is but a mere 50 feet behind the nursing facility.

"According to John, that fact saved her life.

"If we had put her in the car and taken her to the hospital, she would have been dead before we got there," he said. "The baby had turned blue as a cryolo. Her eyes had dilated, her arms were just hanging and she wasn't breathing. She was as limp as a rag doll."

So the family used the best available option. Along with the grandfather, Crystal's father gathered her up in his arms and they ran through the kitchen door in the back of the nursing home. Then they started screaming for help.

Equating his granddaughter's life with his own, John was quite obviously pleased with the way things transpired from there.

"Mister, I gotta tell you, and this is Grandpa speaking," he said. "I owe that rest home and that doctor my life."

John said he was also feeling blessed for another reason this week. Not only was his granddaughter saved, but he is about to be reunited with one of his daughters who he hasn't seen since she was just 15-months-old — the same age as Crystal.

The daughter, Cindy, hasn't seen her father for 27 years because she and her mother were informed — mistakenly — more than 20 years ago that her father had died in a trucking accident.

But at a recent banquet in Hanford, Calif. honoring an All-Star Wrestler who is married to one of John's nieces, Cindy overheard the niece mention the name "Bobby John."

Within an hour, she and her father were on the phone together. According to John, his daughter and her family are now planning to visit "in the very near future."

construction of a secondary city treatment plant — between 1974-1976. A federal jury awarded Twin Falls $1.2 million in 1984 from Envirotech Systems Inc., which manufactured pollution-control equipment, but the damages are under appeal in a trial set for January, 1989.

CH2M-Hill's proposal also calls for re-evaluating the plant again for modifications to begin. Sewage usage has changed significantly since an initial study in January and February, 1986.

During October, 1987, average flow through the facility stood at 6.6 million gallons per day. That was up from 5.1 mgd early last year. The same comparisons show pollutants were up 28 percent and suspended solids were up 57 percent.

Also, many of CH2M Hill's recommendations since last year have already been implemented, Pharmacy is updating their report would cost another $6,250.

The council agreed to vote Monday at its regular meeting on a contract with CH2M Hill.

Judges to review transcripts

TWIN FALLS — Fifth District Judges Daniel Hurlbutt and Daniel Meehl have formalized their decision to review transcripts of a September grand jury and determine if the transcripts can be released to defense attorneys.

The written order, which followed a hearing Wednesday on several challenges to the grand jury called to investigate drug-related crimes, also states the judges will decide on a case-by-case basis whether the transcripts will be open to scrutiny.

Five attorneys have challenged 11 of the 17 indictments in the case on a variety of grounds.

If the defense attorneys win their challenges, the indictments against their clients will be thrown out.

But during the hearing Wednesday, the defense attorneys argued that they needed to examine the transcripts for facts to support their charges.

Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Joel Hurlbutt argued at the hearing that the defense motions were unsubstantiated and said the indictments should proceed toward trial in district court.

Hurlbutt and Meehl did not set a timetable in their order for when they will release their decision on opening the transcripts.

yearly average unemployment rate below 6 percent in the 1980s unless the entire bottom falls out of the economy in December, according to the statistics for the first 11 months of 1987.

A recent department wage survey also showed no significant change in wages from last year to this, and in some occupations, the survey showed wages rose slightly.

The state's November jobs rate was the lowest since November, 1979, when the Idaho economy was riding out the end of a boom decade.

The number of Idahoans off the job remained relatively stable from the previous two months, at just over 21,000, while total employment rose to 412,400, its highest level since the number of workers with jobs was over 413,000 in December 1979.

At the same time, the state labor force, which slumped below 430,000 during the summer, jumped back over that plateau to hit 433,700, its highest level since April.

Kilgour credited mild weather that allowed construction workers to remain on the job through November at the same time retailers were manning up for the holiday shopping rush. Coupled with additional hiring in the food processing sector, she said, those job increases offset tourism and timber.

The revisions for the first half of the year showed that January and February, originally thought to be among the strongest employment months in state history, actually offered workers a worse situation than they had a year earlier.

During both months, the labor force was below the 1986 levels and last January's total employment was over 1,000 lower than 12 months earlier.

But while the revisions indicated Idaho's economic expansion was not as strong as first believed, they also showed that there was not the retreat from growth as 1987 wore on that the original figures had suggested.

Regionally, the seasonally adjusted unemployment rates for November, October and November 1986 were:

— The Panhandle, 6.6 percent, 6.9 percent, 9.3 percent.

— Lewiston area, 4.8 percent, 5.7 percent, 5.4 percent.

— Canyon County, 5.5 percent, 6.9 percent, 7.2 percent.

— Ada County, 3.6 percent, 3.6 percent, 4.3 percent.

— Pocatello area, 5.8 percent, 6.7 percent, 7.7 percent.

— Idaho Falls area, 4.6 percent, 4.5 percent, 4.5 percent.

What's what

HATING HORSES

A seasoned rodeo cowboy contends most every man in his game eventually comes to hate horses. Rodeo horses are mean, he says. "Job of the rider is to beat them. Helps to hate them. Sort of like playing the old Raiders."

Q: Isn't the elephant the only mammal that outlives humans?
A: Occasionally an elephant might, not routinely. Usually it's

TURTLES

There are more turtles than people on the 15 Galapagos Islands, and that is as it should be. Galapagos is Spanish for "turtle."

It was clear to almost everybody, 90 years ago that New York City would never grow to a million population -- just because there wouldn't be room enough to stall the horses.

A doctor who specializes in low back pain suggests you stand up straight when you brush your teeth instead of bending over the sink. His related advice is, "Take your shower there rather than before."

In ancient Egypt, when a woman's husband was convicted of a crime, she and her children were punished, too -- usually by enslavement.

It's a physiological fact that women see better than men in dim light.

WORD GAMES

The number of letters in a name doesn't have much to do with the number of syllables in it. Take Maine. It's the nation's only state with a single-syllable moniker. But it spells out longer than a couple of states: Ohio and Iowa, with three-syllable nomenclature.

That graceful porpoise got its name from an old French word meaning "pig fish."

Vandals begin yearly Christmas acts

IDAHO FALLS (AP)—Each holiday season, the city of Idaho Falls loses several trees when vandals chop-down evergreens when parks. And Idaho Falls officials would just as soon like to see this annual tradition come to an end.

"It just amazes me that people do that, but it happens every year," and parks superintendent John Johnson says. "It's just a sad thing to see."

Although parks employees try to patrol the city's 300 acres of parks, Johnson says his knowledge of vandals has been caught in 10 years, because most of the thefts apparently occur after midnight.

Wilderness talks on track

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus says his negotiations with Sen. James McClure over an Idaho wilderness bill are a couple of months behind where he wanted to be, but he still hopes to have a wilderness proposal ready by the end of the year.

The governor told a news conference here on Friday that he planned to confer by telephone with McClure that day or on Saturday.

The two state leaders have been working since September on a bill designating new wilderness areas in Idaho for permanent protection and releasing other areas for possible development.

"So far, the negotiations have been on a professional and not a political posture, and that will speak well for Idaho if we get it passed on that basis," the governor said.

He acknowledged that he hoped earlier to have the wilderness legislation completed by now, but said there was no particular disagreement holding up the process.

He said it's a matter of information-sharing — in many areas, which takes a lot of time.

Timber access to increase in decade

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's timber industry will need access to timber in roadless areas, but the industry will need to access only about 15 percent of that area in the next decade, meaning that 85 percent of the roadless timberland can remain roadless for the next 10 to 15 years.

Those were among conclusions reached in a study by the University of Idaho for Gov. Cecil Andrus. The governor asked the College of Forest, Wildlife and Range Sciences to conduct its own analysis of 10 forest management plans from the U.S. Forest Service, and how they would impact Idaho timberlands. The key issue is how much timber should be made available for logging from national forest lands.

The governor has been negotiating with Sen. James McClure on an Idaho wilderness bill. It will decide the future of about 9 million acres of Idaho roadless areas.

The governor disclosed Friday night he and McClure agree the Idaho wilderness bill cannot pass Congress unless it contains "soft" release language.

Hardline conservatives assail Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hardline anti-Soviet conservatives, one of them denouncing President Reagan as "a successful idiot for Soviet propagandists," formed a new group Friday to oppose the arms treaty Reagan plans to sign during next week's summit meeting.

The Anti-Appetement Alliance issued a statement saying, "We will seek to implement the defense and foreign policy platform on which Ronald Reagan ran for president and was twice elected."

"The president may have abandoned his earlier positions, but we have not," the statement said.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, asked about the group's remarks, said, "They never supported Ronald Reagan and never will. They have never been his constituency."

Vice President George Bush during a campaign stop in Iowa on Friday, saying they are "way off on the political extreme right."

"I don't care what some of those noisily people attacking our president think," said Bush, the only leading GOP candidate for president to back the treaty without reservation. "I don't think it called for. I don't have any respect for it and I don't approve of it."

While the immediate focus of the group's outrage was next week's meeting between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and the two leaders' plans to sign an arms reduction treaty, the conservatives have long been frustrated by what they consider the administration's failure to follow a conservative agenda.

At a news conference to announce formation of their alliance, the conservatives lashed out at Reagan in personal terms far harsher than they have used before.

"Ronald Reagan is a very weak man with a strong ego, a strong staff," said Howard Phillips, chairman of the Conservative Caucus and co-chairman of the Anti-Appetement Alliance.

"He becomes a useful idiot for Soviet propaganda," said Phillips. Richard Viguerie, a conservative fund-raiser and the other co-chairman of the new group, said Reagan is now aligned with his former adversaries, the liberals, the Democrats and the Soviets.

"We feel alienated, abandoned and rejected by the president (I feel I no longer know him).

Phillips conceded that defeat of the U.S.-Soviet treaty that would eliminate intermediate range nuclear missiles from Europe would be "an uphill battle."

Neither Phillips nor Viguerie were early supporters of Reagan when he ran for president, and both have been sharply critical of the administration since he took office. In 1980, they supported Rep. Phil Crane and then former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally for the GOP presidential nomination, and didn't back Reagan until their earlier favorites had been knocked out of the race.

But while sometimes criticizing the president directly, they more often have concentrated on blaming aides for what they saw as administration failures.

The conservatives were particularly dismayed by Reagan's statement in a television interview Thursday night that opponents of the proposed INF treaty "have accepted that war is inevitable."

The president insulted the conservative movement last night, said L. Brent Bezell III, chairman of the Conservative Victory Committee.

"They can't find the words to express their anger," Viguerie said when asked what the reaction of other conservatives was to the president's comment.

"He was an apologist last night of Mikhail Gorbachev," said Viguerie.

The group's statement said Reagan "is poised in a kind of limbo that may result eventually in neutralization of Western Europe and a shift to reliance on conventional arms for defense against the Soviets. That shift would require the Western alliance to spend hundreds of billions of dollars on personnel and conventional equipment at a price the West is not likely to pay."

"Having Mr. Reagan in a new kind of limbo is not in the interest of world domination," the administration is plunging head long into another Munich."

Said Phillips, "The question is, who is more foolish, Ronald Reagan or the conservatives who still look to him for leadership."

Cuban inmates surrendering

ATLANTA (AP) — Cuban inmates who took control of a federal penitentiary 12 days ago put down their weapons one by one Friday and boarded buses for new cells elsewhere as their 89 hostages savored the agreement reached late Thursday to end one of the longest prison standoffs in U.S. history, the 85-year-old prison remained in control of the detainees, some of whom were armed with machetes 4 feet long, authorities said.

It may be 24 hours before all the inmates have been removed, U.S. Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten said.

"When the surrenders stop, we'll go in and take back the place by force if necessary," Charles W. Charlton, a prison spokesman John Vanarus. "There is no indication that certain individuals have refused to come out but it is a good possibility."

Man given temporary heart

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A 60-year-old man received an emergency artificial heart implant Friday, the first by artificial heart pioneer William DeVries in more than two years and his first temporary implant ever.

Walter Jones Jr. of Louisville went into surgery at 7:30 a.m. at Humana Hospital Audubon, said hospital spokeswoman Donna Hazle.

The operation ended more than 10 hours later after the Jarvik-7 artificial heart proved too big for Jones' chest, forcing DeVries to switch to a smaller model and in effect do the operation twice, she said.

Jones was listed in critical condition. "Dr. DeVries is very pleased with the function and fit" of the implanted chest, Ms. Hazle said.

The patient will remain on the artificial heart until a decision is made either to seek a donor for a transplant or to implant a permanent artificial heart, Ms. Hazle said Friday night at a news briefing.

Warships return from gulf

By The Associated Press

Hundreds of families from Virginia to Florida received an early Christmas present Friday as fathers, brothers, husbands and boyfriends returned from six months' duty in the Persian Gulf.

The guided missile frigates USS Kinkaid and USS Howes tied up at South Carolina's Charleston Navy Base, where Santa Claus looked on from the windswept pier.

The USS Kidd, flagship for the destroyer squadron operating in the Persian Gulf, docked in Norfolk, Va.

Detachments from Helicopter Anti-Submarine Squadron Light 42 and 44 returned to base at Mayport Naval Station, Fla., along with the frigate USS Flatley.

Fourteen crewmen on the Flatley then saw their babies for the first time.

The ships, carrying a total of nearly 900 crewmen, left port last June to help escort oil-rigged Kuwaiti oil tankers through the gulf and keep watch for possible hostile acts.

War powers issue simmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate adopted a procedural rule Friday which could make it easier for critics of President Reagan's Persian Gulf policy to invoke the War Powers Act.

The rule change was discussed briefly late in the afternoon and adopted without dissent or substantive debate. It was offered by Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va.

Under the new rule, it would only take a majority of senators to decide whether a resolution seeking to invoke the War Powers Act should go to the top of the Senate agenda.

The old rule required a two-thirds vote, which has been impossible for supporters of the War Powers Act to achieve. Democrats hold a 54-46 margin in the chamber and efforts to invoke the War Powers Act have garnered between 55 and 60 votes, which has not been enough under the two-thirds rule.

Reagan signs defense bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Friday signed a $296 billion defense authorization bill that emerged from a congressional dispute over arms control.

"The president is pleased that the objectionable provisions of this bill pertaining to arms control have been deleted or modified in an acceptable form," presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

The bill authorizes $296 billion in defense spending, including $3.9 billion for the president's "Star Wars" missile defense program, his Strategic Defense Initiative, for which he requested $4.5 billion.

"This funding level will permit a strong technology program; however there will be delays in important experiments in both space- and ground-based technologies," Fitzwater said.

The Senate approved the bill Nov. 19 by 86-9 after the measure had won approval from the House the previous day, 264-158. Most of the opposition came from conservative Republicans.

Reagan had threatened to veto an earlier version, passed by the House last May, which would have cut defense spending more drastically and imposed harsher arms control restrictions.

The administration feared that the bill would hamper the United States in negotiations.

Senate passes vets' bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted 88-0 Friday to approve a veterans bill that includes cost-of-living increases in veterans compensation benefits and amendments providing for AIDS and drug abuse testing in VA hospitals.

The increase in benefits for veterans with service-connected disabilities matches the 4.2 percent increase given to Social Security recipients starting this month.

The legislation also includes some new benefits for veterans exposed to nuclear radiation during World War II or in later testing in the 1950s and 1960s. Disability and survivor benefits would be included for veterans exposed to radiation and who later suffer certain types of leukemia and other cancers related to radiation exposure.

Most elements of the package already have passed in different versions in the House.

In approving the veterans bill, the Senate voted Thursday to include employees at Veterans Administration hospitals under the Reagan administration's program of random but mandatory drug testing for some federal employees in sensitive jobs.

Toy guns illegal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mayor Tom Bradley on Friday signed an ordinance outlawing the sale and manufacture of realistic toy guns in the nation's second-largest city, but the ban won't take effect until after Christmas.

The ban followed recent publicity about deadly mistakes involving toy guns.

NFL playoff hopefuls jockey for final spots

By the Associated Press

The Indianapolis Colts are out of contention for the playoffs as they enter a fourth time in the NFL. But "I don't want to say that," says Colts coach Marvin Levy. "I don't want to say that it really makes much of a difference."

"They're going to feature the running game," Hebenheimer said. "Eric Dickerson is the running back you know about. Albert Bentley is the running back you may not know as much about."

The Colts and Browns, both division leaders, met Sunday as the NFL playoff hopefuls began jockeying for position with just four games left in the season.

The Colts, tied with Buffalo and the New York Jets atop the AFC East, lost Hogeboom to a dislocated shoulder in last Sunday's 61-

37 victory over Houston. He was replaced by Gene Pryor, who played when Hogeboom was injured during the season.

Houston's loss last Sunday dropped them into a tie at 6-7 with Pittsburgh, one game behind Cleveland in the AFC Central.

(Heading into the final month of the season, only one division has become a runaway — the NFC East where the Washington Redskins, 8-3, have a three-game lead over Dallas, Philadelphia and St. Louis. The Redskins are in St. Louis and could clinch the division with a victory.

To help settle the AFC East, Buffalo travels to Los Angeles to play the Raiders, and the Jets are in the Monday night game at Miami.

The AFC West-leading San Diego Chargers, 8-3, are at Houston, while Denver, a half game back at 7-3, plays host to New England, and Seattle, a little distance at 7-3.

San Francisco leads the NFC West with a 9-2 record but can't shake New Orleans, a game back at 8-3. San Francisco is at Green Bay, and New Orleans is at home against Tampa Bay.

The Chicago Bears are the only team in the NFL to clinch a playoff berth. At 9-2, they hold a two-game lead over the Vikings and play in Minnesota on the "Sunday night game."

The rest of the NFL schedule has Atlanta at Dallas, Kansas City at Cincinnati, the Los Angeles Rams at Detroit and Philadelphia at the New York Giants.

Colts at Browns

The last time Dickerson played in Cleveland, he was with the Rams. He was traded later in that season. On Dec. 31, and will be making his NFL start for Indianapolis. He has 491 yards rushing this season, while Bentley, the man whom he replaced, has 561.

Dickerson says Indianapolis throws the ball more than Los Angeles, and that makes it easier for him to run because the defense won't stack the line as readily.

Cleveland has won the last six meetings of these two teams but are coming off a 38-24 loss to the 49ers last week.

Redskins at Cardinals

If the Redskins win, they'll clinch their fourth NFC East title in seven years. Coach Joe Gibbs says he will start Jay Schroeder at quarterback even though Doug Williams is healthy again. Schroeder was injured two weeks ago in a 20-17 loss to the Seattle Seahawks. He rushed for 221 yards and two touchdowns, and a 91-yarder, to rival the Raiders.

"I watched the game on Monday night and I got so scared I slept with the lights on all night," Bills Coach Marv Levy said.

Jets at Dolphins

The shutout loss to Buffalo was the first since 1982 for the Dolphins, and quarterback Dan Marino saw a streak of 30 straight games with at least one touchdown pass broken.

The last time the two teams met, the Jets beat Miami 37-31 in overtime on Oct. 18, and they have not swept the Dolphins since 1980; New York beat Cincinnati 27-20 last week.

Miami hopes for victory

Wants shot at national title

By The Associated Press

Second-ranked Miami hopes to end the regular college football season the way it started and finished the last one — with a victory over South Carolina and a shot at the national championship.

A triumph over eighth-ranked South Carolina on Saturday night would conclude a second straight 11-0 campaign for the Hurricanes and set up another national championship showdown, this time against No. 1-ranked Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl.

When Miami defeated South Carolina 34-14 in the 1986 opener, the Gamecocks were an unknown commodity with freshman quarterback Todd Ellis directing a brand-new pass-happy run-and-shoot offense. The 1987 Gamecocks have matured to an 8-2 record, six consecutive victories during which they have outscored the opposition 230-39 while surrendering 176.8 yards a game and a 6.6 average per play.

"I think South Carolina will be better than Notre Dame," Miami wide receiver Michael Irvin says, referring to last week's 24-0 victory that ended Notre Dame's national championship hopes. "And since they're not national champions, they want to stop somebody else from being. It's just the American way, I guess."

But not the South Carolina way. The Gamecocks couldn't care less who winds up No. 1.

"Everybody's flirting with the idea that if we beat Miami, we are going to foul up the bowl situation," says offensive tackle David Poinsett. "But basically what we're looking at is that they came up here (Columbia) last year and embarrassed us."

The regular season comes to an end this weekend with three other games — Army-Navy in Philadelphia, Arkansas at Hawaii and Brigham Young vs Colorado State in Melbourne, Australia.

CSI's David Henderson gets control of the ball after stealing it from Snow's Ron Green. A foul was called on Green on the play.

CSI defense had control in Snow defeat

By LARRY HOVEY Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Strange to say it about a 40-point win, College of Southern Idaho did what it had to do to beat Snow College 109-69 in a Region 18 men's basketball game here Friday night.

Things didn't go smoothly for the Eagles offensively as Tank Collins went to the sideline with two fouls in the first 30 seconds of play. Collins had perhaps the worst shooting start of his career here and generally it just was missing on a cylinder or two.

But when the usual wasn't working on offense, the boys went to other routes. Mauro came up with nine great assist passes — to the point that Coach Fred Trenkle wondered if he wasn't over passing. Collins got back in the game at the second half and canned 13 points in seven minutes.

The truth, however, was that usual defense was there and CSI depth simply ground the Badgers into submission.

CSI will be trying that same formula — but hoping the offense is there earlier — tonight when Dixie, ranked No. 2 in Region 18 in a pre-season coaches poll, comes in to test the Eagles. The women teams will tipoff at 5:15 p.m. with the men's game starting about 7:30 p.m.

"I felt our defense was very good. Our guys played hard," said Frankie. "We just put 10 people on them and I felt they got very tired."

Trenkle said he liked the changes made with the early substitutions, noting "CS (Games) always gets something going. Tonight he took the charge, then made a steal and we kinda took off."

At the same time 6-foot, 10-inch sophomore Bryan Tucker blocked a couple of inside shots, and that change some Badger shooting technique.

While the story may have been different, the final minutes went according to script. Mauro hit four straight three-pointers coming to the wire to pick up 14 points for the night and Collins wound up with 19, getting five slams.

Collins and Demar Beck traded two field goals each to get things started and Snow last held a lead at 8-7 on a Ron Green field goal at 8:7. Kent Jurvis, taking a Mauro feed, sent CSI ahead with an inside shot and then added a free throw. Tucker and Cio Dasiwiro benefited on back-to-back assists by Mauro to run things to 14-8 before Snow started scoring again.

The lead hung around seven to 10 for the next few minutes but CSI started to inch away again late in the half.

Debatable candidates not unusual in Heisman Trophy race

By SALLY JENKINS By The Washington Post

The last, greatly argued question of the college-football season takes the form of a grim-faced hunk of statue, arm outstretched and looking like it's about to trip. The 53rd annual Heisman Trophy will be awarded Saturday in a kitchenette banquet salon, probably to Notre Dame's Tim Brown amid only moderate suspense, but unusual discussion.

Brown, a wingback who produced 35 percent of his team's yardage at a variety of positions, is favored to win the 50-pound sculpture given annually by the Downtown Athletic Club in New York to the outstanding college football player in the country.

But not everyone believes Brown is the winner. Said Pittsburgh running back Craig "Ironhead" Heyward, "Let him earn it. He and Miami defensive back Benny Blades said flatly, 'He's not worthy.'"

Brown has lost 12 pounds; his last two games, and at this point is suffering from a combination of hopeful nerves and weary doubts. His unconventional season — at wingback, spectacular at times, ended with two disappointing performances. He gained 112 yards in a 21-20 loss to Penn State, then caught three passes and dropped three more in a 24-0 loss to No. 2 Miami. All of which has caused this surge of skepticism about his worth.

Probably, those last two games will not affect the voting greatly: a Nov. 7 survey taken of 147 voters (about 15 percent of the total) by the Gannett News Service showed that Brown had 80 first-place votes compared to nine for Florida freshman running back Emmitt Smith and 11 for Syracuse quarterback Don McPherson. But Michigan State's Lorenzo White, Pittsburgh's Heyward, and multi-talented two-way player Gordie Lockbaum of Holy Cross also will get lots of consideration.

"I've been trying not to pay much attention," Brown said. "You never know. I'm going to be there Saturday, nervous like everybody else. At this point it's really exciting, but if you think about it, you also just want to get it behind you, and say I made the best shot at it could."

Debatable Heisman winners are nothing new; in fact they can be dated to the very first one: Chicago's fly Berwaringer, who over Georgia Christian's Sammy Baugh in 1935. In some quarters it is known as the trophy that is supposed to go to the best college-football player and rarely does.

Brown, a receiver-running back, may have been the most effective player in America this season, returning punts, running back kickoffs, carrying out of the backfield or lining up at end. If he wins, he would be only the fourth non-quarterback or running back to get the award, the last being Nebraska wingback Johnny Rodgers in 1972.

Commission approves increase in nonresident tag quotas

The Associated Press

POCATELLO — The Idaho Fish and Game Commission has agreed to requests of the state's guides and outfitters, agreeing to a 6.6 percent increase in the 1988 nonresident deer and elk tag quotas with 700 additional tags set aside for outfitters.

As it wrapped up its final meeting of the year in Pocatello on Friday, the commission approved the issuance of 14,500 nonresident deer tags, 11,665 nonresident regular elk tags and 1,650 nonresident panhandle elk tags.

Of those totals, the set-aside for outfitters and guides will be 2,700 deer tags, up 500 from this season, and 2,700 elk tags, up 200 from this year.

Grant Simonds of the state Outfitters and Guides Association asked for the increase so his members could take advantage of heavy demand expected from out-of-state hunters in 1988.

This year, the general nonresident quota and the outfitters' set-aside on deer tags were both sold out in March, more than three months before the set-aside period ends.

While outfitters did turn back 100 nonresident elk tags on the July 1 termination of the 1987 set-aside, Simonds said demand for Idaho tags was expected to increase significantly in 1988 because of Montana's decision to set its nonresident elk hunting fee as much as $100 more than Idaho's.

Under state law, up to 25 percent of the nonresident elk and deer tag quotas can be set aside solely for use by outfitters until July 1. Any tags "unclaimed" by outfitters by then are returned to the general pool and sold to individual nonresidents on a first-come-first-serve basis.

The commission also set the spring steelhead fishing season for Jan. 1 through March 31 on the Salmon, through April 15 on the Snake and Clearwater rivers and through April 30 on the Little Salmon River.

But because low water and high water temperatures from this year's drought has limited the run back to Idaho, the commission significantly reduced the limits on the Salmon and imposed a closure between the bridges at Clayton and Ellis to protect a large B-run spawning population in the East Fork.

The limits on the Salmon will be two days, two in possession and four for the season. On the Little Salmon the limits will be two per day, three in possession and six total, and on the Snake and Clearwater the limits will be two a day, four in possession and six for the season.

The decision partially adopted the proposal of Mitch Sanchez, executive coordinator of Idaho Steelhead and Salmon Unlimited, who claimed the state has been negligent in pursuing a fair share of the fish for Idaho sports anglers.

Sanchez called for the lower limits on the Salmon but in exchange for an additional 15 days of fishing in April. The commission said it would consider extending the spring season on the Salmon if additional fish show up.

Currently, however, the commission estimated only about 68,000 steelhead have made it back to Idaho waters, some 30,000 short of expectations.

Board gives minidome new name

POCATELLO (AP) — From now on, the Minidome at Idaho State University will be formally known as the Milton P. "Dubby" Holt Sports Arena.

The Board of Education voted Thursday for a school request to rename the facility in honor of Holt, former athletic director and coach.

Holt was instrumental in getting the Minidome built at a time when there were few domed arenas for indoor college football.

Burley, Rams meet in crucial region game

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — The last time the Burley Bobcats lost a girls' basketball game, the date was Feb. 14, 1987. It was a St. Valentine's massacre to Madison and the loss kept the hopeful Bobcats out of the state Class A-1 playoffs in their second appearance in the region III playoffs.

If Burley has any hope of dethroning Highland from the top of the Region III ranks, their first and toughest test will come tonight here at 8 p.m. at the Highland gym.

Girls' basketball

In fact the last time Burley lost to a Region III opponent, it was a 63-43 defeat at the hands of the Rams in Pocatello on Feb. 11. That game was for an automatic berth into the state championships.

Since last season's loss to Madison, the Bobcats have reeled off seven straight victories and have a 2-0 Region III record.

Highland sits on top of the Region with a 3-0 record, 7-0 overall.

This clash was supposed to occur back on November 14, just nine months after the Bobcats' last loss. The game never happened because Highland was playing for the state football championships.

But that decision was nothing but good news for Burley Coach Gordon Kerbs.

"We're definitely a better team now than we were three weeks ago," he said after Burley dusted off Shelby 53-46 in a non-conference game Friday night.

Last year, teams could concentrate on Burley's hot shooter, Hettie DeJong. After she graduated, the Bobcats have been impressing the opposition with their fine post play.

Since that date, the two squads have combined for nine victories between them.

Tonight's contest looks like a classic.

Since Burley has beat region foes Pocatello and Twin Falls and Highland has beaten Minico along with the Indians and Bruins, the team that wins this game has the inside track of hosting the entire post-season Region III tournament, even though the season is less than 10 games old.

"It could be a great game," said Twin Falls Bruins Coach Paul Stover, who last lost to both squads this year.

Highland has the advantage in height, but Burley is quicker. Both teams are talented, both teams are aggressive, both teams rebound well and they rely on good solid defense," he said.

The big obstacle for the Bobcats is the pressure of playing at the Highland gym, a gym where they haven't lost since January of 1984.

There is no time to end that, but I imagine Burley has something to say about that," said Highland Coach Randy Rehner.

The Rams have two starters back from last year, but the team is dominated with seniors.

Corina Hoffman, a 6-foot senior center, and Shelly Roberts, a 5-6 senior forward, are just two of the nine seniors on the Highland squad.

Rehner looks at tonight's game as a stepping stone for the top seed.

"Everyone you play within your region, you're talking about seeding and court advantage," said Rehner, whose Rams have beat Minico, Twin Falls and Pocatello all on the road this year.

"The same plan for Kerbs is easy. There's two things we have to do. We got to rebound...we have to contain Highland on the boards. And we've got to handle the pressure," he said.

One team is going to lose tonight, but Burley isn't going into this game with a negative attitude.

"They (Burley) excited and ready to play them," said Kerbs.

Chargers at Oilers
Both teams made it two losses in a row last week — Houston to Indianapolis and the Chargers to Denver, 31-17, despite a 322-yard passing performance by Dan Fouts.

While still explosive on offense, the Chargers have improved defensively this season. They led the AFC with 39 quarterback sacks.

A shoulder injury sustained two weeks ago against Cleveland might force Houston quarterback Warren Moon to the sidelines. If he can't play, Brent Pease would move in.

Patriots at Broncos
Denver has won three in a row, and the Patriots haven't won at Mile High Stadium since 1968. New England, 5-6, lost 34-31 in overtime to Philadelphia last week.

In their victory over the Chargers last week, the Broncos gained an NFL season-high 522 total yards, with John Elway passing for 347.

Jobless rate hits decade low

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's job market ignored the stock market crash as a manufacturing boom helped put 315,000 more Americans to work last month and drop unemployment to a decade-low 5.9 percent.

The November jobless rate, reported Friday by the government, was a one-tenth point decline from October's civilian unemployment of 6 percent and matched September's 5.9 percent. The last time it was lower was in July 1979 at 5.7 percent.

The surge in new jobs shows American business is still high on the economy," said Richard Rahn, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

The Reagan administration also rejoiced over the numbers.

"This is especially encouraging in the view of the recent stock market declines," said White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater. "The economic expansion continues into its 60th month and signs indicate that it will continue much longer."

Over the past two months, both before and after the Oct. 19 stock market fall, private businesses have added 612,000 jobs to their payrolls, 415,000 of them in manufacturing alone.

Federal, state and local governments have increased their payrolls by another 195,000 jobs, according to the figures Friday from the Labor Department.

"Even with the crash, the U.S. job-creating machine remains incredibly strong," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Brothers, a Wall Street brokerage house.

"It is a surprise to virtually everyone, including the Federal Reserve, it shows that the economy has such strong momentum that it's going to take a lot more financial trouble — higher interest rates and lower stock prices — than most people thought to slow it down," he said.

Sinai and several other analysts said the figures are prompting them to revise their predictions of fourth-quarter economic growth upward.

As measured by the gross national product, economic growth the first nine months of this year is running at an annual rate of 3.7 percent. Both before and after collapse of stock prices, most analysts, including the administration, had expected it to slow to 2 percent the final three months.

Based on Friday's employment report, Sinai and Mike Penzer, chief economist for the Bank of America in San Francisco, now expect fourth-quarter growth of 3.2 percent.

Jim Cochrane, chief economist for Texas Commerce Bank in Dallas and Houston, and Michael Evans, a private Washington analyst, put it even higher at 4 percent.

"A lot of it is being driven by the lower dollar," said Cochrane. "Employers are adding capacity for 1988. This really reflects a long-term optimism on their part."

Since October 1985 when exports started rising and factories started adding workers instead of laying them off, manufacturing employment has grown by 381,000. But it is still 200,000 below what it was in August 1984.

The only skeptics appear to be retailers. Employment in general merchandise stores dropped by 35,000 in November after adjustments for normal seasonal variations.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said holiday-related hiring, normally a major component in the November figures, was less than expected, indicating that retailers have few expectations for banner Christmas sales this year.

"But even before the collapse in stock prices, Sinai said, retailers had told analysts they expected their worst Christmas season since 1982, when the U.S. economy was just beginning to come out of its most recent recession.

"There's some hint of an effect from the crash here," Sinai said. "But retailers had already expected some slowdown because of debt burdens, consumers spent out on autos and low savings rates."

Evans, reflecting a pessimism not yet evidenced by most analysts, said the November job figures indicate that retailers are closer to what really is going on in the economy than anyone else.

"If you look at the last three recessions, there has been this type of acceleration in hiring just before the turning point," he said, forecasting an economic downturn in February. "Production going up 4 percent and consumption going up zero is a mismatch."

The record 113.5 million Americans at work last month raised the share of the nation's population holding jobs to an all-time high of 89 percent, including the 7,705,000 women force, personal stationed in the United States.

In addition to the 70,000 new manufacturing jobs last month, health services added 47,000 workers to their payrolls, construction employment rose by 35,000 and transportation companies, utilities and wholesale trade businesses each added 25,000.

Employment even rose by 15,000 in health services, insurance, and real estate industries, which supposedly had been hit hardest by the stock market crash.

With the military calculated as part of the labor force, the November unemployment rate is 5.8 percent, also one-tenth of a percentage point drop from October and compared with a 6.8 percent level a year earlier.

Meanwhile, the number of jobless workers declined by 58,000 last month to 7.1 million, compared with nearly 7.9 million a year ago.

Dow nears depths of historic plunge

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices declined again Friday, and the Dow Jones industrial average edged closer to the depths of its historic fall on Oct. 19.

Traders said that while there was no specific reason for the latest slump, a general lack of buying interest prevailed over the market amid lingering doubts about the economy.

"The major investors and players are no longer there," said Larry Wachtel, a market strategist and first vice president at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

"The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which tumbled 72 points on Thursday, slipped 9.79 to 1,766.74. That left the closely watched index at its lowest point since it plunged more than 500 points to 1,738.41 on Black Monday.

In the broader market, about 11 stocks fell in value for every three that rose, on the New York Stock Exchange, with 1,297 down, 352 up and 343 unchanged.

As measured by Wilshire Associates 500 Equity Index, stocks total $22.07 billion in value.

Blue Board volume totaled 184.8 million shares, much lower than the 204.18 million in the previous session.

Prices got off to a shaky start from the opening bell following early declines in the dollar.

Blue chips rallied by late morning, but quickly lost ground as buying interest waned amid continuing uncertainty over key market factors such as the strength of the dollar and the economy.

The Dow industrial average remained sharply lower for most of the session until right before the close when some late buying based on technical factors allowed the market to resume its losses.

Analysts said the market was still reacting to Thursday's disappointing sales reports from leading retailers, and to worries about the government's attempts to cut the massive U.S. trade and budget deficits.

Market participants tended to ignore the Labor Department's report that unemployment fell by 0.1 percentage point to 5.9 percent in November.

Among active blue chips, International Business Machines rose 1 1/4 to 107 1/4; American Telephone and Telegraph was unchanged at 26; Eastman Kodak was down 1/4 to 44; and General Electric gained 1/8 to 40.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 217.07 million shares.

The NYSE's composite index fell 1.10 to 125.91.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials lost 1.43 to 255.43, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was off 1.29 to 223.92.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index stood at 231.90, down 4.65.

The NASDAQ composite index, over the over-the-counter market closed at 292.92, down 5.83.
