Revamped Swan Falls bill clears Congress

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

WASHINGTON — The Swan Falls water rights bill cleared Congress Friday with changes that put "year" in Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones' fear about too much federal control over state waters.

"I think we ought to be in pretty good shape. Things are remedied the way I hoped they would be," Jones said Friday.

After an earlier version passed the House Nov. 9, Jones waged an 11th hour campaign in Washington, D.C., and Idaho to change the legislation because he objected to a House committee report attached to the bill.

The amended bill limits the scope and effect of fish and wildlife studies in the Swan Falls legislation. Whether this will be acceptable to federal fish and wildlife agencies and environmental groups is unclear.

The Senate version was passed by unanimous consent. The House acted without a recorded vote.

If President Reagan signs the legislation passed Friday, it should put an end to a long and bitter water rights controversy that has tied up the issuance of major new water rights by the state since 1983.

The Swan Falls bill, in effect, gives the federal stamp of approval to a 1984 pact between the state and Idaho Power Co. over the future use of the Snake River, southern Idaho's lifeline.

Keith Higginson, director of Water

Resources, refused to issue new water rights for major uses until the Swan Falls legislation was approved.

Jones was initially rebuffed by House Energy and Commerce Committee Chairman John Dingell in his attempt to get the legislation changed.

Jones took his campaign to the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

Jones' representative Pat Kole, a deputy attorney general, was in state Department of Water Resources, refused to issue new water rights for major uses until the Swan Falls legislation was approved.

Jones was initially rebuffed by House Energy and Commerce Committee Chairman John Dingell in his attempt to get the legislation changed.

Jones took his campaign to the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

Jones' representative Pat Kole, a deputy attorney general, was in state Department of Water the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee staff, says Bruce Strong, a deputy attorney. However, no language was worked out earlier this week, Strong says.

Dingell, chairman of the House Committee on Energy and Commerce, refused to make changes in the bill and in a Dec. 7 letter to Jones accused him of "relegating on a good faith agreement."

The agreement Dingell refers to is part of the House bill and involves federal and IPC-financed studies regarding the protection and enhancement of the Deer Flat National Wildlife Refuge near Boise.

But Jones says Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, gave Dingell a telephone call Thursday and changed Dingell's mind.

Dingell's staff could not be reached for comment Friday but the revised "bill" would have never passed the House without Dingell's approval. Both McClure's and Rep. Richard Stallings' staff say Dingell accepted the change. Stallings, D-Idaho.

Purchase contract signed Trus-Joist gets building

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Trus Joist Corp. got its building Friday, the last business day before its purchase agreement would have expired.

"We hope this is a very special Christmas gift for all of the people of Magic Valley," said Lee Wagner, president of the Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, referring to the purchase of the Kellwood building.

Wagner was flanked by state and local community and business leaders announcing the purchase at the press conference — and contract signing. He lauded instrumental people from Gov. Cecil Andrus to Twin Falls Economic Development Director Vince Kibbert for bringing Trus Joist to Twin Falls.

Twin Falls attorney John Hepworth, who represented the Boise-based company for the ceremony, also praised participants at state and local levels.

"Trus Joist views the consummation of this agreement as a reaffirmation of its commitment to the pro-moval of the state of Idaho, and an important step forward in insuring the maintenance of a vigorous economic recovery for our state," Hepworth said.

The deal culminated three months of negotiations between Trus Joist, interested in manufacturing special windows in Twin Falls, and the chamber and city. Their complex financial arrangement marks the first time an Idaho city has taken advantage of state law allowing cities to finance economic development and invest in themselves.

"The financial arrangement is unique because it represents the first time any city in Idaho has used the authority under a 1982 state law to purchase bonds as an investment," according to a state Department of Employment publication.

The Twin Falls Industrial Development Corporation issued $350,000 in bonds to the city, which sold them back to the city. The chamber used the proceeds to buy the Kellwood building and will pay

Justice Department sues to force Connie Hansen to submit 3 reports

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department on Friday sued the wife of former Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, accusing her of failing to file financial disclosure forms when she worked for the federal government and when she ran for Congress.

The lawsuit against Connie Hansen, whose husband served 11 months in prison for his 1984 conviction on four counts of falsifying financial disclosure statements to Congress — came after the Justice Department said it made unsuccessful attempts to persuade her to file the forms.

She was accused of violating the Ethics in Government Act of 1978 on three occasions — in January 1985 when she became a consultant for the Department of Housing and Urban Development, in February 1988 when she left HUD and in 1988 when she ran unsuccessfully in a Republican primary and an incumbent's old seat in Congress.

The suit filed in U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Va., seeks to require Mrs. Hansen to file the financial disclosure forms, to enjoin her from violating the law in the future and to assess her a $15,000 civil penalty for violating the law on three occasions. The maximum penalty under the law is $5,000 per violation.

The law establishes financial disclosure requirements for congressional candidates and executive branch employees in the higher pay brackets.

It specifies that executive branch employees covered by the law must file, within 30 days of their entry into federal service, a financial disclosure report.

The report must include all outside income of $100 or more and gifts from non-relatives of $100 or more that the employee has received during the previous calendar year.

The law requires candidates for

Lois fails to get budget bill

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rep. Lois Capps, D-Iowa, failed to get her bill, which would require the federal government to pay for the cost of the nuclear waste program, passed by the House on Friday.

The bill, which would require the federal government to pay for the cost of the nuclear waste program, was defeated by a vote of 217-213.

The bill would require the federal government to pay for the cost of the nuclear waste program, which is currently being paid for by the states.

The bill would also require the federal government to pay for the cost of the nuclear waste program, which is currently being paid for by the states.

Farm Credit bailout whizzes by House

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House on Friday voted 365-18 to approve a $4 billion federally guaranteed bailout for the financially troubled Farm Credit System and sent the plan to the Senate for final action.

"The situation in rural America is such that we need to act," Agriculture Committee Chairman E. (Kit) de la Garza, D-Texas, said before the House acted on the newly minted product of a House-Senate conference committee. Senate action is expected Saturday.

He described the bill as a response to the financial crisis that swept over the Farm Belt in the early 1980s, although acknowledged that the strain has eased somewhat.

By rescuing a traditional mainstay of U.S. agriculture, the bill represents "a message" to rural America that Congress cares about them in their plight, de la Garza said.

The nation's bankers as well as farmers, however, have a sizeable financial stake in the bill, which creates a major new market in farm mortgage-backed securities. It also would benefit those with stock in the system and the bonds that it already has issued.

Administration officials have said in recent days that they have not reached a position on the measure. There were suggestions of a possible veto of the earlier version, primarily because of the feature providing for sale of mortgage-backed securities.

Critics have said a bailout for the Farm Credit System is no vehicle for establishing a new competitor in the secondary mortgage market. The American Bankers Association, which had pushed for creation of the secondary market in farm mortgage-backed securities, says more competition will ultimately help.

The conference committee bill produced two days ago relies primarily on the Senate version of the legislation for the financing provisions that are its centerpiece.

"The funding mechanism in this bill is much better than in the House-passed bill," Rep. Edward R. Madigan, R-Ill., said. "The safeguards against throwing good money after bad in this bill are much better than in the House-passed bill."

The bill would authorize $4 billion in 10-year bonds to shore up the $50 billion network of 37 banks and hundreds of local lending co-ops. Interest would be paid by the government for five years after which it would be assumed by the system.

Taxpayers provide the ultimate guarantee of the bonds but the more likely cost is estimated at between $1 billion and $1.5 billion for the effort to revive the 70-year-old system which has lost $3.5 billion in two years.

New shock waves hit when the system's Federal Land Bank in Jackson, Miss., plagued by non-accrual loans, last week stopped buying back stock that borrowers are required to purchase. It also said it would be forced to seek alternative sources of money to lend to farmers.

Borrower stock would be guaranteed by the bill.

The bill also would authorize a secondary market to pool farm real estate loans and use them to back securities similar to those of the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae) and other home mortgage secondary markets.

Idahoan under threat of harm

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A pro-Iran group in Lebanon on Friday threatened to harm four hostages held — three Americans and an Italian — if Israel continues to pull down Palestinian demonstrations in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. At least 17 Arabs have been killed in 11 days of violence there.

The threat was made by Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, a militant organization that said the statement delivered to a Western news agency in West Beirut.

The statement was accompanied by photographs of two of the four hostages, who were abducted Jan. 24 on the campus of Beirut University College.

The photos showed Jesse Jonathan Turner, 40, of Boise, Idaho, a computer science professor, and Robert Polhill, 54, of New York City, a lecturer in accounting.

The other hostages are Alann Steen, 48, of Boston, a communications instructor, and finance professor Mithalshwar Singh, 60, a native of India who is a legal resident of the United States.

In all, 21 foreigners are missing and presumed kidnapped in Lebanon since March 1986. They are eight Americans, four Frenchmen, three Britons, a West German, an Italian, an Irishman, an Indian and two unidentified foreigners.

Among the missing Britons is Church of England envoy Terry Waite, who disappeared in Beirut on Jan. 20 while on a mission to negotiate with hostage holders.

American Terry Anderson, 40, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, is the longest-held foreign hostage in Lebanon. He was abducted March 16, 1985.

Disbarred attorney faces jail, service time

WEISER (AP) — Disbarred attorney Michael Sweet has been ordered to serve 30 days in jail over the next year and perform 500 hours of community service after being convicted in connection with allegations that he stole $85,000.

Judge James May imposed the sentence on Thursday, additionally ordering Sweet to serve one year of probation. But May withheld final judgment, meaning Sweet's record could be cleared if he successfully completes the sentence.

Just a month and a half after he was disbarred by the Idaho Supreme Court in April, Sweet was charged with grand theft for allegedly embezzling $25,000 from a trust account he managed and defrauding two clients of a total of $31,000 by charging them for work he did not perform.

The charges followed nearly a year of investigation by the Attorney General's office after it received complaints from clients and other attorneys.

back the city as below-market interest. Both the city and chamber initiated the deal to turn Trus Joist, and its anticipated 400 new jobs during the next three years, to Twin Falls. Hopworth reinforced that effort, saying that without the financing "this announcement might have been a place in Redding, Calif., or one of the other many fine communities which actively sought to be the home of the new facility."

Needed roof repairs hindered by the weather are among reasons delaying Trus Joist's move into Twin Falls. Trus Joist's Cole Waldo said Friday during a telephone interview. He said a definitive occupation schedule will be set up after Jan. 1.

Waldo added that Trus Joist is still searching for a general manager to run the plant. The College of Southern Idaho, with its vocational training, was also instrumental in bringing the company to Twin Falls.

The building cost $225,000. Wegner said the rest of the money went for fees such as $17,000 for bonding services from Skidmore, Brown, and Mack law firm, and $1,500 for handling charges for First Security Bank.

The building sale will actually close one year from yesterday. By next Dec. 18, Trus Joist will have to pay the chamber $442,500 — the amount Trus Joist expects to receive in a block grant from the state Department of Commerce.

And during that year, Trus Joist will pay the chamber $2,125 a month in rent.

IPC sells power out of state and its dams are licensed by a federal agency, they say. One part of the agreement specifies what Snake River flows should be maintained at IPC's Swan Falls dam near Boise.

Hansen is a former seven-term congressman who was released from a federal prison in October after serving more than 11 months behind bars. He was convicted in 1984 on four counts of falsifying financial disclosure statements to Congress by omitting more than $330,000 in transactions, some involving Texas billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt.

Hansen contended that many of the unreported transactions actually were made by his wife and therefore weren't required to be included on disclosure forms.

Court shuffles hearing dates

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Supreme Court is moving verbal arguments in eight cases from January to February so the court's newest member can help decide them.

Court Clerk Fred Lyon said Friday the cases include three death penalty appeals and a lawsuit over legality of the Idaho lottery.

Boise attorney Byron Johnson, 50, was appointed on Thursday by Gov. Cecil Andrus to succeed Charles Donaldson, who died of a heart attack Oct. 9.

Johnson said it will take him a while to wind up his private law practice. He has devoted about 50 percent of his practice to work for the Idaho Education Association on teachers' rights and other education issues.

The first-degree murder cases involve Charles Pain, Albert Beam and Donald Fetters. All of the men were convicted of Canyon County slayings and sentenced to death.

All of the cases have been before the Supreme Court before, with the court in each case upholding the conviction and death penalty.

The defendants are seeking post-conviction relief.

Fire marshal warns of standards

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Parents should not be lulled into a false sense of security by fire safety regulations contained in state day-care licensing legislation approved last March, state Fire Marshal Bill Wallis says.

Wallis has written a disclaimer on the cover of the day-care law's fire safety regulations, stating that they meet only minimum requirements.

that it would provide a level of fire safety that would meet the adopted fire safety standards for other occupancies in Idaho.

But Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho Falls, who engineered a compromise day-care licensing bill during the last legislative session, said Friday that the bill was not meant to head off the fire marshal.

"I don't understand the disclaimer," Crapo said. "There is nothing in this bill that cuts back from the existing fire code, and for him to imply otherwise is wrong."

Crapo said the bill adds a new minimum standard on top of the existing regulations. He said the bill gives the marshal authority to inspect day-care centers and close them if they do not meet fire standards.

"I've been told that a lot of fire officials wanted broad, extensive standards," Crapo said. "They did not get that."

But fire officials will know where the day-care facilities are located and can respond accordingly in case of a fire, Crapo said.

Fire safety was the primary focus of criticism of the day-care licensing law during a meeting in Idaho Falls on Thursday sponsored by the state Department of Health and Welfare.

Jury refuses damages

BOISE (AP) — A federal court jury here has refused to award damages to a former inmate at the Idaho State Prison, who claimed he was sexually assaulted by other inmates.

After a week-long trial, a six-member jury ruled that there was "a pervasive risk" of physical and sexual assaults upon inmates by other inmates at the prison.

But it refused to award damages against former warden Darrol Gardner, present warden A.C. Arave and Larry Wright, chief of security.

Jerry Lynn Baker, who since has been paroled, alleged in a lawsuit filed in 1984 that he was raped and assaulted by other inmates minutes after he was put into close custody at Cellblock 8 of the main state prison.

In a lawsuit filed by former inmate Dean Schwartzmiller, Baker, alleged his civil rights were violated because the prison failed to protect him from the possibility of rape and assault.

The jury received the case Thursday afternoon and began its deliberations Friday morning. After about 90 minutes, the jury ruled that although conditions at the prison led to the possibility of rape and assault, the three former and current prison officials were not personally to blame.

Jury clears doctor

BLACKFOOT (AP) — A Bingham County jury here has ruled that Idaho Falls physician Rulon D. Robinson was not negligent in his care of a Teton woman following a surgical procedure.

The jury's decision Thursday wound up a malpractice trial which started early last week. The jury exonerated Robinson of negligence and said he was not the cause of the problems, pain and suffering of Julie Baker.

Farm subsidies cut in spending package

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Under pressure from congressional leaders, House and Senate conferees put the final touches on a deficit-reduction package Friday that is expected to cut farm spending by about $2.5 billion over the next two years.

The agreement will cut farm subsidies in fiscal 1988 and 1989, but they will be smaller than the 8.5 percent reduction that otherwise would have occurred under a Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget reduction request.

Meanwhile, Friday appropriations conferees reached tentative agreement on most provisions of the agriculture section of the catchall continuing resolution to finance fiscal 1988 federal programs.

The agreement included an unprecedented stripping of power from George S. Dunlop, the assistant secretary of agriculture for natural resources and environment, who oversees about 50,000 soil conservation and forestry workers.

At the behest of Chairman Jamie L. Whitten, D-Miss., the House abolished Dunlop's job and assigned soil and forestry work to Secretary Richard E. Lyng. Whitten complained that Dunlop, whose name was not mentioned during the debate, had undermined congressional directives on conservation spending.

The compromise created a new assistant secretary for special services; a spot to which Lyng presumably could transfer.

Whitten insisted that he has nothing personal against Dunlop, a former close aide to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. He said that Dunlop had ignored orders from Congress to maintain soil conservation spending.

The budget conferees, divided by hours of wrangling over proposed cuts and major program changes, came to terms late Thursday after they received an old-fashioned tongue-lashing from House Majority Leader Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash.

Foley, a former Agriculture Committee Chairman, accused the lawmakers of attempting to "snooker" Congress by using the budget process to establish new programs and avoid hard decisions.

Weakening storm brings more snow to southern Rockies

By The Associated Press

A storm system over the southern Rockies weakened Friday as it dusted higher elevations of Arizona, New Mexico, southeastern Utah and southern Colorado with snow showers.

Saturday morning over the southern Colorado mountains, where a storm one week earlier dropped up to 28 inches.

Four inches of snow fell overnight at Wolf Creek Pass, Colo., with up to 3 inches reported in the higher elevations of the San Luis Valley and 2 inches at Tallurita, Colo.

Showers were scattered over the lower elevations of New Mexico, with drizzle and fog across western and northern Texas. Showers and a few thunderstorms reached from southern Kansas across Oklahoma, western Arkansas, and eastern and southern Texas.

A low pressure system over western Ontario produced snow from eastern North Dakota across northern and central Minnesota and northern Wisconsin into Upper Michigan. Three inches of snow fell during the morning at Duluth, Minn., and in the Tomahawk area of Wisconsin's Lincoln County, while 2 inches of snow fell at Marquette and Eau Claire, Wis.

Elsewhere, a little rain and mountain snow extended across parts of Washington state, northern Oregon and the northern Rockies.

Murphy defies panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Friday reprimanded Rep. Austin Murphy, D-Pa., for ethics violations, but the lawmaker defiantly charged that he had been made a scapegoat and that his office had been burglarized during the inquiry.

By a 324-68 vote, the House made Murphy, a five-term congressman, its first member to be disciplined in more than three years.

The representative from a steel and coal district near Pittsburgh was cited for hiring a "no-show" employee, misusing congressional property and twice having someone cast electronic votes for him on the House floor.

A reprimand was the least severe penalty of the options available to the House. Murphy could have faced censure, loss of seniority or even expulsion. He said afterward that he intends to seek re-election next year.

After the vote, Murphy lashed out at the House ethics committee, which he said sought to make an example of him to demonstrate its might in the face of criticism by Republicans and watchdog groups that it has been too lax.

Contra aid effort continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — Working under a presidential veto threat, congressional budget negotiators sought Friday to delay an aid package for Nicaragua's Contras that would permit a limited continuation of weapons aid to the rebels.

Discussions among congressional leaders and President Reagan's national security adviser, Army Lt. Gen. Colin Powell, were aimed at finding a compromise that would keep the weapons flowing for a short time, but not be seen as upsetting a five-nation Central American peace process.

Under current law, the Central Intelligence Agency has the authority to make airdrops of lethal supplies to the Contras in the field until Dec. 31.

House negotiators said their proposal for a scaled-back $5.6 million "humanitarian" aid package would not interfere with those airdrops, an assertion they hoped would help win Senate and administration support.

Senators thought we were trying to eliminate that delivery period, said Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., one of the negotiators. "This says that, beginning Jan. 1, there is no more lethal delivery."

Some Senate negotiators said the House plan would not satisfy the White House. But Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, said he planned to offer an alternative that would increase the non-lethal aid figure to $7 million over the next two months and permit drops of weapons until about Jan. 15.

Soviet grain sale set

WASHINGTON (AP) — Subsidies have been approved for the sale of an additional 725,000 metric tons of U.S. wheat to the Soviet Union, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

Melvin E. Sims, general sales manager for the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, said the sales were covered by subsidies authorized Nov. 27 for the Soviets to buy 2.35 million tons of wheat under the Export Enhancement Program, or EEP.

By qualifying for EEP, exporters can sell commodities to designated overseas customers at reduced prices in order to meet foreign competition and then collect free government surpluses of grain or other commodities as a bonus.

Sims said the bonuses for the wheat sales averaged $42.05 per bushel, or about $1.15 per bushel. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 38.7 bushels of wheat or soybeans, or 39.4 bushels of corn.

The latest sales, amounting to about 28.6 million bushels, were handled by eight companies: Continental Grain Co., 250,000 tons; Archer Inc., 100,000; Carhill Inc., 100,000; Louis Dreyfus Corp., 50,000; Marubeni America Corp., 25,000; Union Equity Cooperative Exchange, 100,000; Nicholson America Inc., 50,000; and Deepex International, 50,000.

The Soviets still have 742,200 tons of wheat available under the current EEP authorization, Sims said. In earlier dealings, the Soviets on Nov. 9 were authorized 2.4 million tons of wheat under EEP.

Anti-satellite weapon may be next to be cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force has proposed the abandonment of its ASAT, "satellite killer" weapon, giving up for budget reasons a program that had been repeated and demanded by congressional leaders, officials said Friday.

The Air Force recommendation is part of a package of proposed cuts to the fiscal 1989 budget now being reviewed by Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci, said the officials, who asked not to be named.

Carlucci has yet to make a decision on the recommendation. But given the ASAT program's past troubled history on Capitol Hill, said one source.

In a related development, the Pentagon announced Friday that Carlucci had ordered a special, "fast-track" study of the headquarters staff of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and major military commands around the world.

The primary objective of the review should be to reduce manpower levels and overhead costs," Carlucci wrote in a memorandum to the armed services. Carlucci added he was naming Derek Vander Schaaf, the Defense Department's deputy chief of staff, as the study team's leader.

"I expect a report of findings and recommendations to be submitted to me no later than Feb. 1, 1988," Carlucci wrote.

The new study is the latest move in a drive by the Pentagon to shave $32.9 billion from the Defense Department's fiscal 1989 budget. The sources said Friday the service has further recommended shutting down its squadron of high-speed SB-71 "Blackbird" reconnaissance planes.

IPC releases Niagara data

By JANE ROBINSON
Times-News writer

GOODING — Idaho Power Company averted a showdown by complying with an order from the Department of Water Resources Friday to provide water data from its Niagara Springs steelhead hatchery.

The records it provided showed discrepancies in water measurements taken by Idaho Fish & Game, which operates Idaho Power's steelhead hatchery at Niagara Springs. Idaho Power officials said the measurements were approximations because Idaho Power had no measuring device until 1986. And they said they were at a loss to explain the discrepancies in various reports showing how much water was used.

At the same time Idaho Power complied with DWR's order for water records, Rim View Trout Company asked that it not be forced to make its records public, setting the stage for yet another confrontation.

"I have a concern the information may be used beyond the scope of these proceedings," said Rim View's attorney, state Sen. Bill Ringier, R-Boise.

Ringier was upset that low measurements taken by the U.S. Geological Survey at Rim View Trout Company's diversion made it into the newspaper.

The figures showed Rim View diverted up to 160 cfs of water in 1984, although it holds a license for less.

But DWR Director Keith Higginson said the information was a matter of public record.

And although Higginson said he was unaware of law allowing evidence to remain confidential, he gave Ringier a week from Monday before it turn over its records so it can test the legal grounds to prevent them from being made public.

The move was immediately challenged by Parks Department attorney Rinda Ray Just. Just said that if Rim View fails to comply, all of its testimony in the Niagara Springs rehearing be stricken from the record.

Higginson said he would take her request under advisement.

Testimony concluded Friday afternoon in the two-day rehearing on a minimum stream flow in Niagara Springs Creek, a little area off the beaten path that has the potential of creating new water law in Idaho.

Most of Friday's testimony revolved around Idaho Power's contention that loss of its Niagara Springs waters would affect the quality of the steelhead smolt it produces and also possibly jeopardize its Federal Energy Regulatory Commission license.

Idaho Power, which owns the steelhead hatchery at Niagara

Spings that is run by Idaho Fish & Game, is required to produce 400,000 pounds of steelhead and return them to Idaho's rivers to mitigate construction of its Hell's Canyon Dam.

Idaho Power's fish biologist Larry Wimer said the steelhead returned to rivers generates an $11 million income in Idaho from sport fishing.

He estimated the cost to Idaho Power in raising the 400,000 pounds of steelhead between 85 to 95 cents a pound. He said that figure did not include capital costs.

Wimer, under questioning, also said if half of percent of the steelhead returns, "we're pretty comfortable."

Wimer said Idaho Power could probably raise 400,000 pounds with out its full 182 cfs of water, but few of them would probably survive.

But at the end of Wimer's testimony, Idaho Power appeared to weaken its own case when it presented the FERC agreement that contained a section allowing steelhead to be raised at another facility if Idaho Power did not have sufficient water at Niagara Springs.

The language was pointed out by Higginson.

Earlier, Wimer testified that Idaho Power had to raise the 400,000 pounds at Niagara Springs.

After the hearing, Idaho Power's attorney Bob Stahman said he did not think Idaho Power hurt its case.

"It took six years to negotiate that agreement, and I doubt we could get all the parties involved of several states, FERC, Indian representatives and everybody else back together," Stahman said.

"Besides, we don't want to have to build a facility at Sanberry Springs."

Stahman also said that regardless of Higginson's decision, there will be appeals.

Marns Mercer, president of Hagerman Valley-Claatsop-Alsea and one of the protestor's 62 further water diversionists at Niagara Springs, said at the end of the rehearing the public's case looked good.

"I don't think there were any surprises today," he said.

Retired Wendell farmer Bob Burka, who has led the fight to save the creek from further water depletions, also said he felt better about Friday's portion.

"I finally got acquainted with the procedures, and my questions today I was able to get answers," said Burka.

Rim View Trout owner Earl Hardy also enjoyed a measure of success Friday.

Hardy's payee three pending water applications filed at least 4,000 Magic Valley residents, was able to convince Burka, Mercer, pro-ester Edward Shokal, Idaho Parks & See RELEASES on Page B3

MVRMC proceeds on cancer center

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The concept of a regional cancer-treatment center at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center became more than a concept Friday morning.

The hospital's Board of Trustees voted unanimously at a special meeting to proceed on a development of the project. A deciding factor was a unanimous recommendation of the medical staff that MVRMC "begin immediately to design, build and operate a comprehensive cancer center" to be affiliated with a larger cancer-care facility.

The board also established the formation of a steering committee, to be composed of medical staff and trustees, to see the project through to fruition.

A Nashville, Tenn. architectural firm has already developed a site plan of the proposed center, which will be located adjacent to the hospital. Administration of John Bingham said. The firm will now work on cost estimates, which should be completed sometime next month.

Rough estimates have placed the project at $2 million, much of which will be spent purchasing equipment for radiation treatment, Bingham said.

Trustee Dr. A.C. Emery added, "This is an area people really want to get into."

At an early morning board meeting, Bingham said the center's major services will be radiation, medical — as in chemotherapy — and surgical treatment of cancer.

To support the major services, the center should provide support services, such as specialized staff, a CT scanner, clinical laboratory, hospice program for terminal patients, cancer screenings, emergency services, pharmacy and an out-patient program, to name a few.

MVRMC is already providing many of the services, such as a scanner and preventative screening program, Bingham said.

These services, some of which have to be expanded, will have to be brought under one umbrella in order for the hospital to offer comprehensive cancer treatment, he said.

Resolution provides court funds

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Board of Commissioners passed a resolution Friday setting up a $200,000 line of credit to help pay its district court funds.

All of that money may not be needed during the next year, commissioners said, but the fund began slipping into debt during December, only two and a half months into the fiscal year.

Any borrowing would require the first taxation over from Twin Falls County to pay for district court support services.

The fund's $170,000 budget is $25,000 less than last year's budget and nearly $80,000 less than what the court asked for. Fifth District Judge Daniel Harbort ordered Sept. 11 that commissioners "secure adequate funding" to support that budget.

While saying judges are working sincerely within a $170,000 budget, Commissioner Chairman Judy Felton said the fund's debt in December is projected at $20,000.

Until this year, the fund was supported entirely by fines and fees collected over from Twin Falls County. But income from those sources during October and November was running at a $140,000 annual pace, while expenses accumulated at a more than $200,000 annual clip.

California group buys ScottPolar

TWIN FALLS — ScottPolar Corporation, a long-established industrial and commercial refrigeration company in Twin Falls, announced Friday it has reached an agreement to be acquired by Toromont Industries, Inc.

Toromont plans to keep ScottPolar in Twin Falls under the current name, said Phil Jones, ScottPolar's chief financial officer.

However, its sales, manufacturing and engineering operations will be moved to Los Angeles early in 1988 for training and installation group will remain.

Some employees will be relocated to Los Angeles. Others will be let go either temporarily or permanently, Jones estimated about 20 employees will be affected.

Negotiations for the arrangement have been ongoing for several weeks.

"We've been looking for an equity source for some time," Jones said.

The closing will occur between Dec. 29 and 31.

Jack Scott, whose family founded the company over 40 years ago in Twin Falls, will be chairman of the board, and will retain a position in the company. See SCOTT on Page B2

County, residents differ on ambulance funding

By JANE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — The residents of Gooding County want continued ambulance service, but are divided on how to pay for it.

A capacity crowd, attending Thursday's public hearing on the formation of an ambulance taxing district, sent a clear, if difficult, message to county officials: Keep the ambulance emergency service, but don't raise our taxes.

The hearing was called after 60 residents signed petitions requesting the County Board of Commissioners form an ambulance district to support ambulance service in the county.

A taxing district to support ambulance service can be formed without a public vote. State law provides that the county commission serves as the board of directors for such a district.

But several people at the hearing requested the county hold an election before forming any ambulance district, even though it is not required by state law. A petition bearing 480 signatures was presented to commissioners asking that no new taxing district be formed without a public vote.

A second concern of residents had to do with accountability for the money used to support the Gooding Ambulance Service and a public explanation of the need for more money.

Gooding County presently subsidizes the privately operated ambulance service with a $3,000 per month payment. The county also owns the ambulance vehicles, provides major maintenance on the equipment and buys the insurance.

Service operator Gilbert Schmidt said at the hearing that his largest expense is payroll and without new money he will be unable to attract or keep qualified people because he cannot offer them full-time employment.

"We have to meet the same standards as full-time people, the same training requirements and procedures," Schmidt said.

Gooding Ambulance Service buys the gas and oil for the vehicles as well as routine supplies. Schmidt has voiced concern that money will not be available to purchase new ambulance vehicles or critical equipment when the need arises.

Schmidt told the commission last month he could not operate without more county support, and the commission increased the subsidy from $2,000 to $3,000. He said ambulance service will be difficult to continue without the stable funding of $95,000 annual tax collection from a district would provide.

He said his service collects about $5,000 per month from patients, which represents about 85 percent of his accounts.

Don Muth of Hagerman told the commission, "There should be a full, published public accounting of where the money goes before making any decision to raise our taxes."

And former county commissioner Will Thomas said, "If we need it (the tax district), we need it, but we need to see some justification. We came to get some answers but we're not getting them."

Schmidt said he was unwilling to make public disclosure of his private business affairs, but Muth said, "If it uses public funds, we must have public disclosure."

A possible solution to the problem was suggested by former county commissioner George Lemmon of Teton County, who said, "I am in favor of reducing the Gooding County Memorial Hospital budget and using the funds to operate mobile hospitals. What we need is lifesaving emergency care that can help people and then get them to the regional medical center."

Ed McNeill agreed and said, "I would sleep a lot better knowing help could come to me. The handwriting is on the wall — the Gooding hospital cannot afford the technology it will take to modernize and we are going to need adequate ambulance service to take people where they can get help."

Some residents wanted to know what the legal ramifications of a district formed without a public vote would be, and whether or not the

Idaho may still make supercollider first cut list

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho will still make the first cut in the national competition to attract the $4 billion superconducting supercollider project despite press reports to the contrary, predicts the coordinator of the state's efforts.

The National Academies of Science and Engineering will submit their choices to the U.S. Department of Energy on or about Jan. 4, 1988 with the final announcement to come a week later, says Rick Tremblay, administrator of the division of science and technology for state Department of Commerce.

When Idaho is selected for the short list, it will be the underdog, unless every citizen in the state, congressional leaders, chambers of commerce, colleges and universities and private citizens all make this priority number one, he says.

"Once we are on the short list, we are in danger of losing the best opportunity the state has ever had. This project is tailor-made to Idaho. The spin-off should revitalize every vessel in this economy, and have a profound positive effect," Tremblay says. It will also benefit the Northwest as a region.

Tremblay spoke to a local professional engineers meeting at the Canyon Springs Inn.

"Tremblay says Idaho's proposal using the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory site west of Idaho Falls fits well into the national concern about controlling the deficit.

Because the federal government already owns the land at INEL, Idaho's proposal would be cheaper than other states' proposals, INEL also has the support facilities for the project, including one of 50 supercomputers in the world, administration buildings, canteens, medical facilities and transportation.

Idaho Power Co. provides some of the lowest cost electricity in the nation, he says.

"If it is located here, it is already part way built," Tremblay says.

Tremblay says Idaho's weaknesses include its higher education system but he says Idaho's graduates compare favorably to graduates from other states' universities.

Should Idaho not make the short list, Idaho will back other western states vying for the project. Among the competing states are Utah and California.

INEL would benefit in any event because it could offer expertise in geology, hydrology and tunnel modeling.

The superconducting supercollider project involves building a 62-mile-circular-tunnel where racing proton particles could be manipulated into collisions. Physicists hope the information from the collisions would help them understand the basic elements of matter better.

Scientists will be able to reproduce the environment of the universe a billionth of a second after it was created, says Tremblay.

Europe and the Soviet are also working on supercollider projects and U.S. involvement is necessary if this country is to maintain its technological lead that makes the American lifestyle possible, Tremblay says.

The scope of the United States' supercollider effort is massive. It would take 4,000 production people six years to build the project. Its operation would require a staff of 2, See IDAHO on Page B2 will also have to be geared to cancer treatment. For example, family, psychological and financial counseling services must be ready to deal with the impact on a family that comes with cancer in a family member, Bingham said.

According to Bingham, there's certainly a need for a center.

Each year between 1980 and 1986, the hospital admitted more than 200 cancer patients, Bingham said. But, a hospital committee found that during the same period, more than 600 patients from the Magic Valley left the region for radiation treatment. Most went to Mountain States Tumor Institute in Boise.

The resolution passed this week by the medical staff urged the board to solicit proposals from larger cancer treatment and research facilities - called tertiary centers - to affiliate with an MVRMC cancer center.

Because of restrictions on the county-owned hospital, the relationship with a larger cancer facility may have to be one of trading expertise, education and referrals instead of financing through joint-venture, Bingham said.

"What we are looking for is the expertise of a tertiary facility so we have full continuity of care," he said.

Twin Falls County Commissioner Martin Hempleman said, "This will pretty much be our baby."

The now-defunct Long-Range Planning Committee had been discussing the ways to provide cancer treatment through a cooperative venture with the Boise facility.

Previously Bingham said that MSTI requested that both MVRMC and the Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital participate in a MSTI satellite.

The planning committee was disbanded earlier this month because its chairman, Dr. Ben Katz, said it couldn't do its job if the county remained publicly-owned.

Bingham said Friday that the physicians wanted the support of the clinic for a MVRMC cancer center, which will offer a mid-range level of care.

They have not been budgeted for the project, but Hempleman expected the hospital will be able to handle the financial end.

While a cancer-treatment center might treat MVRMC to a better financial future, Bingham said the patients needs are primary.

"I think it will be in the best interests of the patients," Tormentor Industries is a holding company for several different firms. One is Kimmel-Motz Refrigeration Corp. based in Los Angeles, which is similar to ScottPolar. Tormentor plans to have the two subsidiaries cooperate on their manufacturing, research and development, and sales activities.

Annual sales at ScottPolar run between $5 million and $12 million, and it employs approximately 100 people. About half work at the home office in Twin Falls. The remainder

Whether the business will vacate any space in Twin Falls was also unknown to James. However, no changes will be made there before the company's current one year building lease expires.

and Idaho Fish & Game to drop protests on one of his water applications.

Hardy filed to reuse 90.3 cfs of Rim View's own water to expand his commercial trout hatchery at Niagara Springs.

Fish & Game and Parks withdrew their protests on condition that the water was Rim View's water and no other treated water and that it not be diverted back into Niagara Springs.

After Hardy testified that Rim View meets EPA water quality standards and that it added settling area for waste to handle the increased production, the protests were dropped.

But the Niagara Springs case is far from over.

Hardy's two other applications, one to reuse 90 cfs of Idaho Power's water and one to divert an additional 115 cfs of water from the creek, have yet to be heard.

Higginson says no indication at the end of Friday's testimony when he might issue a decision.

If Higginson lets stand the earlier Niagara Springs decision extending the reach of the minimum stream flow from the headwaters to the Snake River, it would allow the state for the first time to take back water rights already granted in the name of public trust.

Scientists from all over the world would be attracted here and the location at INEL would make Idaho the world capital in fundamental physics.

Study finds Christian concepts vary according to continent

NEW YORK (AP) — Christian outlooks seem to vary widely among people according to their continents, with Asians and Africans more optimistic about future church prospects.

Continental differences also show up in beliefs. Younger churches of Asia and Africa, for example, are much more likely to be divine providence as a protection against contemporary dangers than churches of other continents.

Others to see God as "the liberator," while churches elsewhere — especially in Western Europe — are less likely to do so.

Women move to stop gambling - BEIJING (AP) - Women in eastern Henan province are organizing night patrols and joining police to stamp out the spreading vice of gambling. The Henan News Agency said Friday. The official report said 800,000 women from 3,640 rural communities around Yancheng city have joined women's anti-gambling associations to combat gambling, described as a serious problem in the province. It said the women are attempting to locate gambling spots and, through persuasion, they have seized 50,000 people, mostly men, and kicked the habit.

Biot police break up student demonstration

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) - Police hunting tear gas grenades dispersed rioters and arrested 1,600 people Friday in a crackdown on students who headed an opposition call to oppose the government election victory in the recent U.S. election. Students besieged police with firebombs and rocks in scenes reminiscent of the violent summer, except for the lack of support from bystanders. Frightened pedestrians tried to flee the choking gas. Squads of riot police in green combat fatigues and black helmets fired water of tear gas and charged the rioting students. Protesters shook clenched fists and screamed "Invalid election" and "Down with the military dictatorship." Wednesday's vote was the first direct presidential election in 16 years, the government agreed to after weeks of violent demonstrations in June that eventually were joined by hundreds of thousands of people from the working and middle classes. Opposition leaders refused to accept the victory of Roh Tae-woo, candidate of President Chun Doo-hwan's government, and claimed the government won by fraud. They called for a pan-national struggle to keep Roh from assuming power when Chun's term ends Feb. 25. The National Election Commission issued formal confirmation Friday of Roh's election. He got 36.6 percent of the vote, followed by opposition candidates Kim Young-sam with 28 percent and Kim Jong-pil with 27 percent.

The nearly 4½ pounds of cocaine was found in the men's washroom of the six-car train, which originated at New York's Grand Central Terminal.

City Saturday, while Green Bay can keep alive its hopes for a first playoff spot since 1982 with a road victory over the New York Giants.
