Los Angeles Times

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic — Talks aimed at a cease-fire in Nicaragua resumed here Monday night despite one of the largest offensives by U.S.-backed rebels in six years of war.

The Sandinista government in Managua said rebel forces attacked the country's three most important mining centers Sunday and were still fighting in one of the towns. It also reported that a civilian cargo plane was downed Monday by rebel missile fire.

Bosco Matamoros, a spokesman for the rebel negotiators, said the offensive was part of a "political-military strategy" to force the Sandinistas to "open up the democratic process" through concessions in the talks here.

But Victor Hugo Tinoco, the chief Sandinista negotiator, dismissed the attacks as a "propaganda exercise" of military significance. He said his delegation was here to arrange the "mechanical" details of a cease-fire, not engage in political negotiations.

The resumption of talks here, nearly three weeks after a first round deadlock, indicated that neither side wants to be blamed for a definitive breakdown before the U.S. Congress votes on an administration request for $270 million in new military aid.

"The Contras and President Reagan are desperate for more money so they can continue their war against Nicaragua," Tinoco said. "That's the objective of these attacks."

"This is an obstacle to our efforts," he added.

The rebels claimed to have killed or wounded 100 Sandinista soldiers in the attacks on the towns of Siuna, La Rosita and Bonanza in remote northeastern Nicaragua. The Defense Ministry in Managua reported 23 government soldiers and 24 Contras killed in Siuna and La Rosita, and 63 civilians wounded in Siuna.

Nicaragua's Roman Catholic Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, arriving to mediate the talks here, called the bloodshed "lamentable" and said it could have been avoided by the acceptance of his trust proposal in the first round of negotiations here Dec. 3 and 4.

grew over legislation to fund the government for the remainder of the 1989 fiscal year.

Wright acknowledged last week that these revelations had succeeded in reversing congressional sentiment.

The Sandinistas have had a history of snatching defeat from the jaws of victory," he said.

Nevertheless, Wright and other liberal House Democrats were clearly surprised last weekend when conservative Senate Democrats refused to side with them in opposing Reagan's request for inclusion of continued Contra aid in a $600 billion omnibus spending bill.

Reagan insisted that he would veto the bill if it did not include military assistance.

"Our problem was that the Senate Democrats, who are without courage and without conviction, caved in," said Rep. Mike Lowery, D-Wash., explaining why House Democrats were forced to accept the compromise plan providing continued military assistance through Feb. 29.

Under the agreement, the Contras will receive $3.6 million in medical supplies, clothing, food and shelter through the end of February. In addition, they will get about $4.5 million for operating aircraft to deliver that aid to the troops along with about 12 million pounds of weaponry purchased with previously appropriated funds. The arms deliveries will be halted Jan. 12, three days before Contra leaders convene to assess the progress of the peace process — but Reagan can resume them a week later if there is no cease-fire in Nicaragua.

Although the compromise stipulates that aid to the Contras must be suspended if either the House or Senate votes against it, in early February, liberals claim that the scheme has given Reagan increased political leverage to prevail at that point.

In addition, according to Lowery, the compromise plan allows the administration to obtain Contra aid on the "installment plan" — requesting only a small amount in February and then making another, larger request after July 1. Congress usually looks more favorably on such incremental changes.

For those reasons, Republicans were overjoyed by the compromise. An aide to House Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ind., described the deal as a tremendous breakthrough for Contra supporters.

Republicans acknowledge that there is still a big unknown factor that could undermine their position in February: If the Sandinistas and the Contras should agree to a cease-fire by early February, the request would probably be rejected by Congress.

The oil company brought in two freighter boats Monday to spray water on the platform to cool it down, Brooks said.

KENAI, Alaska (AP) — An offshore oil drilling platform in Cook Inlet burned out of control Monday as firefighting boats sprayed seawater to cool the three-story structure, officials said.

There were no injuries reported, and all 49 platform workers escaped safely after one of the rig's wells blew out Sunday evening, the Coast Guard said.

The flames appeared to be fed by natural gas escaping from the well, said a spokesman for the platform's operator, Marathon Oil Co.

"We have got a gas-related incident," said Tom Brooks, environmental engineer for Marathon. "We do know there is no crude oil involved." The Coast Guard dispatched a helicopter and buoy-tender early Monday but called them back later in the day when they found no oil slick or need of assistance.

saw the vessel engulfed in fire, said Arnel Galang, 18. "It rotated, maybe twice, and I saw it slowly sinking."

Alodia Bacal, 18, said: "People were screaming and running, then all of a sudden there was smoke everywhere." Her father, Salvador, was rescued, but her grandfather, uncle and cousin were missing.

No Americans were believed to be aboard the Dona Paz, the U.S. Embassy said. About 90,000 American civilians live in the Philippines.

The Philippine navy said the oil tanker had 13 crew members and was taking 8,000 barrels of petroleum to Misamis Island.

Ship traffic is customary for Filipinos who cannot afford air fares in a country of 70 million people. Vessels frequently are overloaded, with passengers sleeping on deck.

"Passenger" manifests "do not include those who buy tickets not including meals and other services," said inter-island vessels often carry far more than are listed on the documents.

Hundreds of relatives gathered outside the shipping line's offices in Manila awaiting word of family members.

Enrile said he came to the docks to meet his sister-in-law and niece; then heard the ship had sunk and they were missing.

"I had invited them here for Christmas," he said. "It would have been their first trip to Manila."

Survivors said both vessels had their lights on and none recalled hearing a starting horn. Both captains were among the missing.

Samuel Carillo, a passenger, said he was walking to the canteen of the Dona Paz after speaking with the captain when he felt a sudden jolt and an explosion.

"I went up and there were flames all over and I jumped," he said.

Others spoke of panic. Frantic passengers screamed the names of parents, children and other loved ones while thick, choking smoke poured over the decks.

"I felt a crash," said Salvador Bacal, Alodia's 44-year-old father. He booked and his wife were flames all over. Then I went to look for my daughter, who was also shouting for me. Suddenly, smoke filled the ship.

Francisco Mingote, on his way to Manila seeking work, said he began shouting for his friends to wake up. "I heard many people shouting 'Maroon! Poppal! Where are you?'" he said.

But Mercer said he and others are still concerned.

And Jones apparently agreed. "When people have a lot of skepticism of public servants in general, I think it's good to put a statement on record," Jones said.

"I can only hope to bolster people's feelings that something is being done."

Jones' proposed bill, however, would not force lawmakers to abstain from voting. Instead, it would leave the matter up to the rest of the Legislature to decide whether to force the individual lawmaker to abstain from a final vote.

Jones said he did not want to get the state mired in red tape. As part of the bill, Jones also is proposing conflict-of-interest laws for city and county officials.

Jones said his bill would outline uniform standards "dealing with conflicts of interest at all levels."

Presently, the code contains a number of provisions, but there are a lot of loopholes and inconsistencies," he said.

He said the most trouble involves government officials contracting with the entity where they work.

He said the bill would prohibit all such contracts unless the "official makes full public disclosure, does not participate in the preparation of the contract and does not vote on it."

Mercer said Jones also agreed to look into charges the Department of Water Resources acted illegally in delaying water hearings and extending water applications beyond the time allowed by law.

Jones said he has asked one of the attorney's to check on the problem, "but we haven't gotten to it yet."

Jury convicts 3 in Howard Beach case

NEW YORK (AP) — Three white teenagers were convicted Monday of manslaughter in the death of a black man who wandered into their neighborhood a year ago and was chased by a gang onto a freeway.

A fourth defendant was acquitted on all charges.

Convicted were Scott Kern, and Jon Lester, both 19, who originally had been charged with murder, and Jason Ladson, 17, originally charged with manslaughter. Michael Pirone, 16, charged with manslaughter, was acquitted.

Prosecutors said the defendants were part of the gang who attacked three black men outside a pizzeria in the largely white Howard Beach section of Queens on Dec. 20, 1986, and chased one of them, Michael Griffith, 23, onto a freeway where he was struck and killed by a car.

Kern, Lester and Ladson also were convicted of assault on 37-year-old Cedric Sandiford, a key prosecution witness, and Kern and Lester of conspiracy.

After Pirone's acquittal on charges of manslaughter, riot and assault was read by jury forewoman Nina Kraus, shouts of "Murderers! Murderers!" erupted in the courtroom.

One man threw a handful of replicas of South African passbooks into the air, and several of the two dozen court officers carried three screaming protesters from the room.

The verdict came during the 12th day of deliberations and as black demonstrators, citing the case as an example of racial discrimination in the city, blocked rush-hour traffic on the Brooklyn Bridge and stopped trains in several subway stations.

There were dozens of arrests.

The charges against the four youths stemmed from what special state prosecutor Charles J. Hynes called a night of "fear, terror and hatred" in the otherwise quiet, middle-class Queens neighborhood of Howard Beach.

Earlier Monday, the judge denied defense motions for a mistrial following a report that the jury forewoman offered to sell her trial diary to three newspapers.

State Supreme Court Justice Thomas Demos said the report in the Daily News on the trial diary was "hearsay" and insufficient grounds for a mistrial, defense attorneys said.

Group blasts inequities in state Medicaid plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of a Ralph Nader-affiliated health group charged Monday that state Medicaid programs are rife with inequities that prevent millions of poor people from getting adequate health care, especially in the South.

The Public Citizen Health Research Group said the federal government should pay the entire cost of the $49.5-billion Medicaid program and set uniform national standards "so that all people with low incomes have an equal right" to treatment.

The activist group released a 267-page report, "Poor Health Care for Poor Americans: A Ranking of State Medicaid Programs," that ranks the states on five categories: eligibility policy; scope of services; provider availability; quality of care and reimbursement policy.

Minnesota's Medicaid program came off best overall, followed by Wisconsin, New York, Massachusetts and Connecticut. At the bottom, starting with the lowest rated, were Mississippi, Wyoming, Arizona, Alabama and Missouri.

Dr. Sidney M. Wolfe, the group's director, likened the health care situation for the poor in America to the plight of blacks in South Africa.

"The findings of this report are really a screaming reminder to millions of poor people that, as is the case in the Union of South Africa, health care is not a right," Wolfe told a news conference.

The physician said South Africa and the United States are the only major industrialized nations that "don't grant health care as a right."

"We have to take South Africa, obviously, moved leagues forward."

The federal government now pays 66 percent of all Medicaid costs, ranging from 50 percent in wealthier states to 78.5 percent in Mississippi. Nearly 24 million poor people were covered by the program in fiscal 1987 at a total cost of $45.5 billion, with states kicking in almost $22 billion, according to statistics from the Health Care Financing Administration.

While it has improved access to health care for millions of people, Medicaid has nonetheless proven grossly inadequate for millions of others, the report says.

"There is no excuse for the kind of inequitable treatment of the poor sick population that exists today," the report said. "They must not be tested medical care simply because they are poor and live in a state without the financial ability, political will or social commitment to provide it."

Helicopter hits oil rig, burns; 14 persons die

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — A helicopter carrying 13 offshore oil workers began a Christmas week shift in the Gulf of Mexico crashed and burned on the deck of an oil rig Monday, killing 12 of the workers and both pilots, the Coast Guard said.

The lone survivor was flown by Coast Guard helicopter 100 miles to the burn unit of West Jefferson Hospital in suburban New Orleans. He was reported in critical condition.

Chuck Kuhnrich, a spokesman for the Coast Guard, said the rig's operators confirmed 14 fatalities, and said the bodies would be flown to Abbeville, where a morgue was set up.

Edward H. Billarreal, division manager of Forest Oil Corp., which operated the rig, said the 13 oil workers were employed by Penrod Drilling. They were flying to the rig to begin a two-week Christmas shift, he said.

"It was landing on the helipad and apparently — emphasize apparently — it hit one of the legs on the rig and crashed onto the deck," said Billarreal.

"I don't know the exact weather conditions. I can only speculate it was apparently windy."

The fire from the crash was quickly controlled before it spread to the rig, he said.

The rig, identified as Penrod 83, is located about 60 miles south of Morgan City in the area of the Gulf known as Eugene Island Block 190.

The pilots were employees of Petroleum Helicopters Inc. of Lafayette, Billarreal said. A person who answered the telephone at the company's refused to talk about the crash.

The survivor was identified as Anthony Fann, 23, an oil worker from Destrehan, La.

Jim Pittman, spokesman for West Jefferson Hospital, said Fann suffered third-degree burns over 80 percent of his body.

No names of other victims were available. Officials at Penrod said most were from Louisiana and Mississippi.

Senate receives ozone agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) — An international agreement to save the Earth's ozone layer was sent to the Senate on Monday by President Reagan, who asked that it be given "early and favorable consideration."

The protocol, signed in Montreal on Sept. 16, by two dozen nations, calls for a 60 percent reduction by the end of the century in two groups of chemicals, chlorofluorocarbons and halons, that are destroying the blanket of ozone protecting the Earth from the sun's harmful ultraviolet rays.

Once ratified, the accord will control production and consumption of the two chemicals. The agreement is the first worldwide treaty on reducing pollutants by fixed amounts.

Jones served us well on Swan Falls issue

Who should get credit depends on which side of the political fence you sit, but it seems to us that Attorney General Jim Jones and his deputy, Patrick Kole, have done Idahoans a favor in their determined, 11th-hour, and ultimately successful clarification of the Swan Falls agreement.

Final legislation on Swan Falls was whisking through Congress in November when Jones raised a number of questions about both the language of the law itself, as well as with the "committee report" from which Congressional intent could be inferred in later years. Jones' reading of these was that the legislation left state control of the Snake River water very much up in the air; he asked for clarification.

The first response was, not to worry. Neither Rep. Richard Stallings, nor Gov. Cecil Andrus, nor Idaho Power Company saw any problem with the language.

But Jones persisted, turning up the heat on the issue in a series of public forums.

Others took a closer look at the language and expressed reservations too, including Southern and Eastern Idaho irrigators; Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, who chairs the Idaho Senate Natural Resources Committee; and U.S. Sen. James McClure, the ranking Republican on the Senate Interior Committee.

The result of that attention were changes in the language which, Jones says, will better protect the state's water, particularly for future agricultural use. But without the scrutiny and visibility Jones gave the issue at the last moment, the changes probably wouldn't have occurred.

We have several interesting points in this event.

One, Idahoans should take a lesson from the fact that, once an "agreement" gets to Washington, all bets are off. Jones, as Idaho's lawyer, read the fine print.

Two, Idaho Power Company, which has its water right protected under the agreement, didn't seem very concerned about the language protecting others' rights for non-hydro use. Nor did Andrus' office.

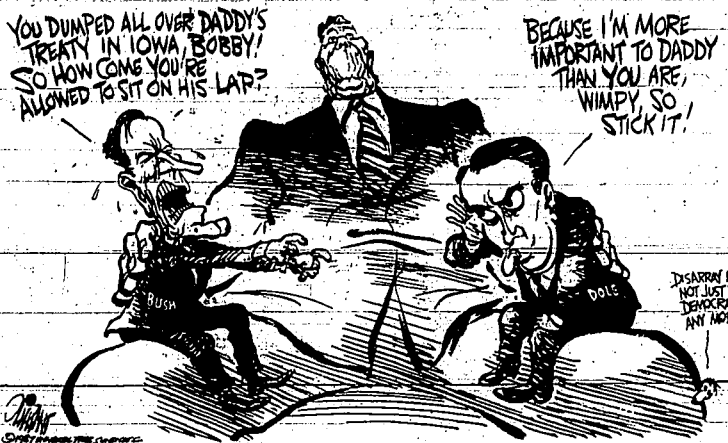

How, we should all ask, has either served us by effectively signing off on the previous language?

Three, political considerations are never very far below the surface. It took Jones leaning on McClure, to get the latter's cloture threat to hold up the legislation to get the language changed. As politics is a game of compromise, we should watch now to see who traded what for this.

Four, Jones' outcry won't reflect well on Stallings, who perhaps should have given the matter closer attention.

Fifth, there is a lesson here in Jones' approach. The feisty Attorney General isn't ever likely to miss a chance to bash a few Democrats if he can, and he beat up on Stallings more than a little in this incident.

But political aside, Jones raised important questions and spoke out for the state's interest at a time when others weren't. That's an appropriate role for Idaho's attorney general and staff.

Letters

How about senators' pay?

Senator Symms made a statement in the paper about the senior citizens help pull the wagon, to bring the deficit down. That we shouldn't get a raise in Social Security.

How about him and the rest of the senators and their raises? They think nothing of giving themselves a $12,000 raise when Social Security got 1.5 percent. Which most people got less than $20 a month than Medicare took half of that.

Why don't the senators and congressmen vote to give that raise back? Congressman Stallings, to me, is the only honest one in Washington. He says they don't deserve that raise with all the farmers losing their farms.

I would like to see Symms live on what I get from Social Security, a small state pension of $180 a month. So it adds up $796 a month. And I don't ask for charity.

When it comes to cutting the deficit, the first thing they think of is cut Medicare, Social Security and veterans. Why not cut their salaries 10 percent? They can afford it — the only thing, it would hurt their pride and they wouldn't be able to live so high on the hog.

As for the retired military and people working and getting Social Security, you can't live on Social Security alone and live decently. And the military pensions are not that much unless you were a high ranking officer. So Mr. Symms, stop and think before you open your big mouth about people on Social Security. You ought to try and live on it.

So why don't you be like Mr. Stallings and give your $12,000 to colleges for scholarships? Be honest, don't be money hungry.

I will do everything in my power to get people to vote against you because you don't care about us lower class people that have to struggle for a living.

Z. MALLER

Gun club serves a purpose

On Sunday, Dec. 20, 1987, an article by Don Puder appeared in The Times-News. This article covered the last meeting of the Buhl City Council. The meeting had many interesting issues, but the one that caught my eye was the proposed sale of the Buhl Gun Club by the city of Buhl.

According to the article, the proceeds from this sale will be used, according to law, to maintain the Buhl Airport. Now don't misunderstand me. I think every small town should have a nice airport, even though very few benefit from its existence.

Now let's talk about the Buhl Gun Club. This club was built, at no expense to the city of Buhl, by several citizens and business people and was completed in 1950. Over the years the membership has been as high as 100 and as low as 15 members, but that is not what is important. The real issue is that the state of Idaho, since 1979, has required that every hunter from 12 to 14 years of age complete a hunter safety course before he or she can be issued a hunting license. According to the Idaho Department of Fish and Game since this law was enacted the death and injury accidents of these young people have dropped dramatically.

Buhl is very fortunate to have this fine facility to teach and train their young people. The Gun Club is not only used by Buhl, but the Clover District, Castleford and Filer also use the Club for training.

The first class, under the direction of two fine men, C.L. "Red" Cramer and Riley "Bud" Maxwell, was completed in December 1979. These classes consist of lectures, visual aids, and actual shooting and handling of firearms on the range. These dedicated men, with no compensation, have instructed over 250 students since the program was started. Doug Scott of Buhl also teaches a hunter safety course and has been active in this endeavor for many years.

I believe the parents of these young people and other concerned citizens should contact the Buhl City Council and show some support for keeping the Gun Club because this is one of the safest facilities in the Magic Valley for these students.

Since the Gun Club does not cost the taxpayers of Buhl one red cent, I see no reason for selling it.

KENNETH E. JONES

Letter placement was an insult

The editorial decision to place the letter concerning the Twin Falls County Prosecutor's handling of child protection cases on page 9 of the food section (Times-News, Dec. 16, 1987, page C-9) was a deliberate and calculated insult to the prosecutor, stemming from the paper's feelings concerning its inability to cover the grand jury process. This decision seriously impairs the standing of The Times-News as a respected voice in community affairs and speaks of biased editorializing of community discussion.

I appreciate the space provided by The Times-News for public commentary although I sometimes wonder about the appropriateness of discussing personality conflicts with our readers.

The performance of K. Ellen Baxter, a county prosecutor has been criticized frequently on your editorial page by Times-News editorials, letters to the editor and even guest editorials by convicted felons. Surely a letter in her defense from eight child protection workers from the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, people who have seen the prosecutor work on a professional level, deserves to be on the editorial page rather than buried in the letter of thanks in the back of the paper.

If letters written of the prosecutor are printed on the editorial page, then letters praising her performance deserve to be there also.

I trust that an apology is forthcoming. Until then, The Times-News has seriously undermined its credibility as a community sounding board.

Yule greetings on the 'Canal'

As a farm boy who grew up in the depression days of the '30s, I was always cognizant of the many sights and sounds of Christmas. The thrill of colored lights literally held me mesmerized and continues to do so to this day.

Now on a Christmas Eve four days shy of my 20th birthday, I crouched in a coconut log bunker and watched the gun flashes in the Japanese cruisers off Oahu as they lobbed eight-inch shells over our heads toward the airstrip at Henderson Field. The sound that these big projectiles made was something else. Then the 60 caliber tracer bullets from around the perimeter would sparkle in the darkness as first one gun and another would fire into the dark green jungle.

I'll tell you folks, Guadalcanal is a rotten place to be on a Christmas Eve or any other time of year for that matter. Situated 10 degrees below the equator it was hot, humid, over run with huge mosquitos and a large portion of the Japanese Army.

As Christmas morning arrived and the enemy ships retreated back up the "slot" toward Bougainville, I found my mess skillet and remembering a rumor of fresh eggs and steak being flown in from Darwin, headed for the mess tent about a half-mile away on the far side of the Tenaru River.

Every try to walk across a 200-foot wide, 40-foot deep chasm on a Corps of Engineers single file rope bridge. Let me say here and now it's a sticky wrecked. No one was in sight as I stepped onto the bridge and all went well until I reached the center of the span and to my horror I saw a island native attired in the customary loin cloth step onto the far end of the bridge and head my way. Well, now this is a no and I waved frantically for him to go back but to no avail; and as his large flat feet slipped the rope deck that bridge started swaying like a creature in torment. Clinging desperately and breathing prayers, "Why me, why me," was flabbergasted when the native edged past me and opening a large mouth stained red from chewing betel nut, he said in his best pidgin English; "Merry Christmas Joe." Well, the eggs turned out to be powdered ones and the steak was canned luncheon meat, but washed down with hot 24-hour-old coffee it wasn't half bad. Now some 40 years later please include an old G.I. and let me say to all of Magic Valley, "Merry Christmas Joe, and how do you like your eggs?"

Signs of the dawn of a new age abundant in world today

"So you really think there is something to this notion of the return of Christ?"

I had posed the question to Dr. B. J. Hunter, known affectionately to his friends as "Doc." Doc was the research director of the Institute for Religion and Science in a Planetary Age. His work at the Institute involved exploring ways to harmonize religious and scientific views about the world and human nature. It was considered one of the bold adventures of the late 20th century.

Doc's research team had just released an extraordinary report entitled "Project Avatur: A Scientific Case for Christ's Return." Tonight was Christmas Eve and a group of friends had gathered at Doc's home to discuss the report.

"Well, yes, there is something to the idea of Christ's return," said Doc enthusiastically. "But if you're one of those who expect the event to occur very dramatically as in Jesus coming on the clouds of heaven, you're going to be sorely disappointed in what I have to say."

"Proceed with your story, Doc," piped up one of the friends. "Well, do our best to keep our minds open to your heretical ideas."

chair, lit his pipe and gazed deeply into the crackling fire. "Let's start at the beginning then," he said in a rather dramatic whisper.

"A few years back a group of us were discussing certain religious views about the return of Christ and the coming of the Kingdom of God on earth. Now the people in this group just happened to represent most of the major religious traditions including Hindus, Buddhists, Taoist, Jews, Christians, Moslems and Bahai's.

"As our conversation progressed it became apparent that the concept of the 'return' was not unique to the Judeo-Christian tradition. Buddhists, for example, await the return of the Maitraya Buddha who is to usher in an age of universal brotherhood. Hindus describe it as the periodic return of an Avatar. They look forward to the coming of the Lord Krishna as the 'Kalki Avatar' who will usher in a new age of spiritual enlightenment. It was from this tradition, by the way, that we chose the name for our project, 'Project Avatur.'

"Now at first we were puzzled by these different ideas. But when we realized that the concept of the return of Christ or Maitraya or Krishna refers to a particular process associated with the spiritual and social evolution of humanity."

"Could you explain this point more clearly, Doc?" asked a young woman.

"I'll try," said Doc. "Placing this process in social and spiritual development in a broad but simple educational context, we can regard the whole world as a classroom, all humanity as the students, and God as the superintendent of the school."

Now, as the students progress they are in need of teachers to guide them. The various messengers of God serve as divine educators and each one is commissioned by the superintendent to provide a particular part of the curriculum for an appropriate stage of the students' development."

"So what you're saying, Doc, 'I conjectured, 'is that the appearance of Moses, Jesus, Buddha, Baha'ullah each represent the 'return of the divine educator.'"

"Exactly right," said Doc.

"But what's the purpose of this process?" I asked.

"The objective of this divine education appears to be twofold," said Doc. "On the personal level it is to help us release our human potential and to attain eternal salvation. On a collective level it is to unify mankind through the creation of a universal culture which represents the unfolding of the Kingdom of God on earth."

"So where is humanity now in this great plan of God?" asked another friend.

"We believe that humankind is presently entering that great age of peace and spiritual enlightenment foretold by all the prophets of the past. This was the central message proclaimed by Baha'ullah, the prophet and founder of the Bahai' faith, in the 19th century. Baha'ullah taught that God has set in motion historical forces that are bringing about worldwide recognition that all humanity constitutes one family living on one planet. He also asserted that in this age the followers of all religions would join together in that universal fellowship foretold by Buddha, Isaiah and Jesus."

"But how can this be?" I asked. "If Baha'ullah was indeed the return of Christ and the Avatur for this age, why is our world in such a mess? Where's the peace and unity that should have been unsharred in with his coming?"

Doc Hunter puffed on his pipe while reflecting on my question and then left us with these thoughts:

"Let us recall the words of Jesus regarding the coming of the mighty counselor, 'As it was in the days of Noah, so will it be in the days of the son of man.' (Luke 17:26). We believe that Jesus' history lesson on the days of Noah actually points to a drama that is played over and over again, every once in a while in human history. The scenario is predictable: Proclamation — Rejection — Warning — Tribulation and Reconstruction — Spiritual Renaissance."

"Today we appear to be in a period of tribulation and reconstruction associated with the birth of a world civilization. All around us we see the signs of the dawn of a new age.

Through the miracles of modern science we are beginning to conquer outer space and to remake our world into a global village. Our greatest challenge now is to conquer inner space, the human heart.

It is encouraging today to witness millions of people of diverse faiths, ethnic origins and nationalities joining forces in a kind of New Age Movement. Responding to the vast potentialities latent within this age, they are working together to construct a new Ark of Salvation — an Ark of World Unity and Peace.

"Let us rejoice!" exclaimed Doc enthusiastically. "The days of the son of man are gradually unfolding before our very eyes. Ere long every one will realize that this is the beginning of the long-awaited Aquarian Age. The promised day is come."

This week, The Times-News publishes a series of articles by Magic Valley authors on the meaning of Christ's return. Today's author, Harry Massoth, Buhl, teaches classes on world religions at CSI.

Navy opens more sea jobs to women

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy Secretary James H. Webb, prodded by the results of an internal study, on Monday increased the number of seagoing combat support jobs open to women and ordered a new crackdown on sexual harassment.

Appearing at a Pentagon briefing, Webb said he also had adopted what he described as the "first clear, concise definition of combat missions" within his service, providing top military brass with a standard to guide future decisions on the role of women.

Unless a ship or aircraft has as its primary objective the goal "to seek out, identify and engage the enemy," the jobs on that ship or aircraft should be open to women, Webb said.

"The difficulty has always been in defining what is combat and what is not," Webb said.

He added, "I would say that this represents the first time in naval history, as far as you can go, unless Congress removes legal restrictions on women serving in combat jobs."

On the policy, when fully implemented, will have the effect of almost tripling the number of seagoing jobs open to women — from a new total of almost 15,000.

There are currently about 54,000 women on active-duty in the Navy, or about 9 percent of the force. Of that total, about 5,200 are now serving on 86 Navy and Military Sealift Command vessels — many of them small ships, including "tugs," tenders and auxiliaries of various types.

Unless the combat exclusion law is changed, women will never be deliberately sent "in harm's way," Webb said. But two-thirds of the ships assigned to the Navy's Combat Logistics Force, for example, do not normally accompany combat "battle" groups and thus should not be ruled off-limits to women, he said.

Webb announced the new initiative after releasing an internal study he ordered last September in the wake of a scathing report by an outside advisory group. The group, the Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services, reported that women in the Navy and Marine Corps deployed in the Pacific region were frequently the victims of sexual harassment and abuse and appeared to be locked in dead-end jobs that offered few chances for advancement.

Webb's study panel, comprised of 28 officers and enlisted sailors, largely verified those findings.

The Navy's existing personnel management system for enlisted females "severely limits women's access to ratings (jobs) available to them," career-enhancing assignments for both enlisted women and female officers are limited, breeding serious frustration and "sexual harassment" in the Navy and is exacerbated by "inefficiencies in leadership and educational systems," the group reported.

"Over half of the 1,400 Navy women interviewed in 10 worldwide locations indicated they had been victims of some form of sexual harassment in the Navy, nearly all those interviewed reported observing some form of sexual harassment," the study added.

Virtually all of the harassment reported in the study was "verbal" in nature, Webb said, and it is probably impossible to completely eliminate such conduct within "an authoritarian (military) structure."

Nonetheless, he continued, more frequent and better focused training sessions for male sailors — coupled with strong directives to commanders attempting to sensitize them to the issue — should have an effect.

Feds probe Northrop missile test data charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is investigating whether Northrop Corp. or its workers broke the law by allegedly falsifying test data for parts on air-launched cruise missiles, a congressional study said Monday.

Air Force officials investigating Northrop's cruise missile contract found that flight data transmitters, or FDTs, "were not properly tested, some that failed tests were not properly reported or repaired, and others that were repaired were not fully tested," said a report released by the House Armed Services Committee.

The component is designed to keep the missile on a stable course.

"Northrop's analysis of FDT test records showed that for approximately 29 FDTs, certain records were missing and others were falsified," said the report, prepared for the committee by the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress.

An Air Force review of the matter led to a criminal investigation by the Justice Department, it said.

The disclosures parallel those of another House panel, the Commerce and Energy subcommittee on oversight and investigation, which uncovered test falsification in Northrop contracts for the cruise and MX missile programs.

Northrop Vice Chairman Frank W. Lynch told the oversight committee last Oct. 28 that 30 managers of the branch that produced the improperly tested guidance components for the MX had been fired, demoted or otherwise disciplined.

On July 2, Northrop announced that it was dismissing the manager and three employees of the facility that made the cruise missile component, and transferring production of the unit at another company in Norwood, Mass.

A KIM IS THE RULER

Kim sounds like nothing more than the nickname for Kimberly, however spelled, but in fact, Kim comes from the Old English for "ruler."

"Most men are more intelligent than their wives." When scholars so proclaimed in psychology magazines, feminists fumed. Sounded as though the writers meant men are smarter than women. Not at all, said the scholars. They meant, they said, women prefer to marry men whose intelligence they admire, but men don't often propose to women just because they admire the intelligence of those women.

Mia Farrow, Woody Allen get new 'satchel' of joy

NEW YORK (AP) — For prolific Woody Allen and Mia Farrow, two productions in one week: a new movie, "September," and a baby boy, Satchel.

"He is fine, the baby is fine, the only problem is, he looks like Edward G. Robinson," said Allen, according to his spokeswoman, Leslie Lodge.

Norma Lee Clark, an aide to Allen's producers, Jack Rollins and Charles H. Joffe, also confirmed Monday that the baby was born but would give no details.

The Daily News quoted friends of the couple as saying the 9-pound baby was born Saturday morning in New York and was delivered by Casarean section.

Satchel is the first biological child for Allen, 52, who is the legal father of two of Farrow's five adopted children. The child is the ninth for Farrow, 42. Five of her children are adopted.

Allen and Farrow have said they have no plans to marry. Allen's latest film, starring Farrow, opened Friday.

According to the News, Allen's friends speculated that the name Satchel was in honor of either Hall of Fame baseball pitcher Satchel Paige or Lou Gehrig, whose nickname "Satchme" came from his larger nickname, Satchel Mouth. Allen plays jazz clarinet most Monday nights at a Manhattan nightclub.

In an interview earlier this year, Allen said of fatherhood, "I think it will deepen me. I hope so. Either that, or it will put me in a crazy house."

Rather walks away with petulance award

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — CBS anchorman Dan Rather won "The John McEnroe Cup For Petulance Under Fire" for storming off the set when a tennis match delayed his broadcast, forcing the network to "go black" for six minutes in his absence.

The award was one of "TV Guide" magazine's seventh annual J. Fred Muggs Awards listed in the Dec. 21 edition for the year's top goofs, gaffes and oddities.

The magazine gave the "Watch Bettle as He Bobs, Waves and Feints" award to deposed Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos, who sent a New Year's tape to supporters showing himself jogging, weightlifting and shadowboxing. A Honolulu TV station aired the footage after Marcos insisted he wasn't healthy enough to testify before a grand jury investigating alleged kickbacks.

"The 'Go Ahead, Make My Day' award went to television reporter David Horowitz, who was forced at gunpoint to broadcast a rambling four-page statement about the CIA. The studio intruder finally surrendered his weapon, which turned out to be a toy gun.

Drizzle doesn't get U2 or fans down

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The Irish rock group U2 ended its eight-month, worldwide tour here with two sold-out weekend concerts that were recorded for an upcoming documentary film.

About 53,000 fans braved light rain at Arizona State University's Sun Devil Stadium to watch U2 deliver a 26-song, 110-minute performance.

"What happened to the weather?" lead singer Bono asked the crowd. "It's all right because in Ireland, it's always like this. For all of you people who were on your knees praying for it to rain, thank you for making these boys' from 'Dublin feel at home'."

Under clear skies but brisk 50-degree weather Sunday night, the critically acclaimed quartet treated an audience of about 60,000 to a 22-song, 114-minute final show, capped by their latest hit, "Baby, Please Come Home For Christmas."

Richardson relates to role as Hearst

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — British actress Natasha Richardson

says she can identify with Patricia Hearst, a member of the Hearst publishing family who was violently kidnapped in 1974 but then joined her radical captors.

"I've researched this enough that I can see how it could've happened," she said.

Richardson, daughter of actress Vanessa Redgrave and director Tony Richardson, talked Saturday about playing Hearst during a break in shooting the film "Patty," which is based on Hearst's 1982 book "Every Secret Thing."

The actress wore a shabby brown wig, combat boots and an old coat over a machine gun for a scene in which Patty helps her kidnappers, the Symbionese Liberation Army, rob a bank three months after her abduction.

Paul Schrader, who directed "Mishima," "American Gigolo," and "Blue Collar," helms Hearst. She was brainwashed by her captors.

Hearst, now a housewife and mother in Connecticut, was a consultant on the film, which will be released next summer.

Toddler survives 20 minute submersion in frozen canal

GARDNERVILLE, Nev. (AP) — Doctors revived a 19-month-old boy Monday after he was trapped under water for 20 to 25 minutes when his mother's skidding car flipped, broke through ice on a frozen canal and sank.

Stephen Edmonds was in critical condition at Washoe Medical Center in Reno, where he was flown out by helicopter following the morning wreck. Authorities said his mother, Deborah Edmonds, 21, suffered many injuries and was released from an emergency clinic.

Paramedic Don Stangle, who dove into the canal and pulled the boy from the car after smashing through a rear window, said the boy had no pulses at first but after about 15 minutes "started breathing on his own, but not regular or well."

Douglas County Sheriff's Deputy Greg Curtis, who with Stangle, paramedic Bobby Wartog and volunteer fireman Steve Morgan also plunged into the 6-foot-deep canal, said he detected heart activity as the boy was sent by ambulance to the Carson Valley Emergency Clinic.

"Don got the baby and handed him to me," said Curtis. "He was white. But when I looked up the heart monitor, there was a little activity. I just hope the little kid makes it."

Dr. Richard Newbold told the child in the ambulance at the emergency clinic until the helicopter arrived to take him to Washoe Medical Center in Reno.

Stangle said that when he got to the accident scene "I just stripped down and went in. Bobby was right behind me. But we couldn't get the door open. We came out and just about froze to death."

Curtis then got a cable hooked onto the car, a late-model 4-wheel drive wagon, and the rescuers were able to winch it, over onto the passenger side.

"That water had to be 20 degrees," said Stangle. "There was ice on top, stiff enough for us to walk out about three feet and then jump in."

Deputies said the car skidded on ice and slid sideways down an embankment on the approach to a small bridge over the 20-foot-wide city canal. The car smashed through about three inches of ice and sank with its wheels barely showing above water.

Officers said the mother managed to get out of the car through a broken window but couldn't find her son.

"All I remember is seeing four wheels and people screaming. There's a baby in there and I went in," said Stangle.

"The reason the baby has a chance to make it is that this was a cold-water drowning," he added. "He was probably under water for 20 to 25 minutes."

Workers suspended over Santa hat dispute

NORTH BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — About 20 workers, suspended for refusing to take off Santa Claus hats at work, protested today outside their factory.

Other workers wearing similar hats honked to protesters as they drove into the Okonite Cable Co. plant.

The suspended workers are to return Tuesday and Wednesday, and their union was negotiating to determine whether they could continue to wear the hats.

"This is Christmas time; it's not like we're wearing a heat with an obnoxious on it," said Tenny Zebiegalski, president of Local 1392 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

All union members were urged to wear the Santa hats to work today, according to William Miller, recording secretary for the union.

Many did; but there was no word on further suspensions. A security guard at the plant answered the telephone, but refused to divulge any information.

The factory disciplined the first workers with Santa hats on Thursday, when two machine operators were suspended indefinitely, Miller said, adding that a third worker was suspended Friday. When a majority of the plant's employees returned Saturday wearing hats, Miller said they were told to go home.

Company officials who visited the factory on Thursday were embarrassed by the holiday headgear, Miller said.

The hat action comes one month before the contract expires for the company's 200 workers.

Schools ban all busywork

WILLARD, Ohio (AP) — Students in the Willard city school district will never be "busy" again.

The city school board has adopted a policy that all homework assignments have a valid learning purpose, putting an end to so-called busywork.

Students cannot be given 600-word essays to write as punishment, and will not have to spend their after-school time copying pages from dictionaries.

The board's action last fall merited mention in a recent Ohio School Boards Association newsletter.

Separated twins turn 1

GUTHRIE, Okla. (AP) — A pair of pudgy 1-year-old twins are sharing a special birthday this week, and their mother is looking forward to explaining why they don't have belly buttons.

When Faith and Hope Cox were born last Dec. 23, the sisters were joined at the abdomen and shared one liver, one gall bladder and part of a bowel.

The girls were separated last Christmas Eve at Oklahoma Children's Memorial Hospital, have outgoing intestinal problems and had what was hoped would be their last operations in October.

Their mother said Faith is starting to walk, and Hope is talking about it.

"They feel distinct personalities," said Charles Cox. Hope is the loving, cuddly type.

Near-failure of chanterelle mushrooms hits Oregon hard

By The Associated Press

Oregon mushroom exporters have fallen on hard times following near failure of the tasty and lucrative chanterelle mushroom crop, experts said this week.
It's a "wipe out," said Dalton Hobbs, spokesman for the Oregon Department of Agriculture, in a statement on the vagaries of the drought.
Pickers and buyers confirmed

Hobbs' appraisal of the harvest. "We lost $100,000 of our mushroom business this year," said Charles Harkins, one of the Eugene area's biggest buyers of mushrooms and other wild edibles collected in Oregon's forests.
"Basically, it's been a crop failure," Harkins said, of the chanterelles, the state's most valuable mushroom variety.
Over the past several years, wild mushroom pickers have flocked to Western Oregon's coastal and Cascade forests in increasing numbers because of lucrative markets both in the United States and Europe for the variety that grows naturally in the state.

In fact, the sale of domestic and wild mushrooms is the fastest growing produce industry in the state, said Jerry Larson, a trade development analyst for the Oregon Department of Agriculture.
Normally, the total annual value of wild mushrooms exported from Oregon exceeds $8 million, Larson said. He estimated that 3.5 million pounds of chanterelles alone are shipped from Oregon annually, mostly to Germany, and more could be sold if they were available.

Because of their scarcity this year, the few chanterelles coming into buyers' hands are bringing a premium price.
Pickers lucky enough to run across stands of chanterelles are receiving as much as $4 per pound, depending on quality, Harkins said. A year ago, buyers were paying the pickers $1 to $1.75 a pound for the fleshy fungi.

Harkins said the chanterelles sell at wholesale for $5 to $9.50 a pound this year and some buyers who sell directly to restaurants are receiving up to $15 a pound.
A random check of produce departments in Eugene-area grocery stores failed to turn up any of the tasty, golden chanterelles for sale. Some produce people still expect a supply now that the fall rains have started.

However, Harkins and others are doubtful the chanterelles will develop this late in the season.
"Normally, the season runs from September to about Dec. 1," Harkins said. "But this year, we had a short crop in August after those late July rains — and then the dry weather set in."

Boesky may do time in California prison

NEW YORK (AP) — The judge who sentenced Ivan F. Boesky to three years in prison had recommended sending the stock speculator to a minimum security federal prison in Lompoc, Calif., the judge's office said Monday.
Claire Wasserman, secretary to U.S. District Judge Morris E. Lasker, confirmed by telephone that he issued the recommendation, which Boesky had requested when Lasker pronounced the sentence Friday.

Convicted spy Christopher Boyce was incarcerated in Lompoc's maximum security section but escaped, and Lasker authorities on a charge for several months before they captured him in the Northwest.
Among those who have served time in the minimum security facility are former Nixon aide H.R. Haldeman and firework magnate W. Patrick Moriarty, who was convicted in a major government bribery and influence-peddling scandal.

Boesky, 60, is the central figure in the biggest insider trading scandal in Wall Street history. He requested incarceration at Lompoc because he would not be surrounded there by others convicted of securities fraud, his lawyers said.
Boesky is scheduled to surrender to Bureau of Prison authorities March 24. He will be eligible for parole after one year.

Lompoc, on the Pacific coast about 160 miles northwest of Los Angeles, has both minimum- and maximum-security sections.
Over the best-known speculation of Wall Street, Boesky was sentenced 18 months after he stunned the financial world by paying the Securities and Exchange Commission a record $100 million to settle charges of insider trading, the misuse of confidential information to buy and sell stocks.

In exchange for his cooperation with federal investigators, Boesky was allowed to plead guilty to a single criminal charge, conspiracy to lie to the SEC. He also was exiled from the securities business for life.
An announcing the sentence, which could have been a maximum five years imprisonment, and a $500,000 fine, Lasker praised what Boesky's cooperation into the government's widening probe of Wall Street corruption.

Relief cosmonauts en route

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union launched the Soyuz TM-4 capsule into orbit Monday, carrying three cosmonauts to the Mir space station. A two-man mission headed by Yuri Gagarin's son, Boris, is ending the world's longest space flight. The government newspaper, Izvestia, disclosed a few hours later that a similar full crew mission, involving two of the same cosmonauts, was attempted more than four years ago but ended in disaster. Soviet television carried a live broadcast of Monday's liftoff from Baikonur, the space center on the remote Kazakhstan steppes, at 2:18 p.m. Vladimir Titov, mission commander, saluted to his crew members Musa Manarov and Anatoly Levchenko. The cosmonauts were launched for the ride through snow-laden countryside to the launch site. They were lifted to the rocket by an elevator swept by steam. They blasted out of sight into a low cloud layer that obscured all but the rocket's fiery tail. But the ground stage of the rocket booster exploded and Titov had to eject the capsule from the rocket, the newspaper said.

Union warns of discontent

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — The nation's trade union chief warned Monday of worker discontent and urged a crackdown on Communist corruption. The union leader, Miloslav Zavadil, echoed the comments of the new Communist Party leader, Milos Jakes, who in his first speech at party leader called for an anti-corruption fight against corruption. The warning from Zavadil was issued by last week's Communist Party Central Committee meeting. The resolution outlined the new Communist Party's economic reforms in a five-year period. It admitted serious problems in the present system of management in housing its efficiency. The party's ruling Presidium, led by Jakes, said the government were instructed to complete a long-term plan by March.

Deaths hid, article says

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet magazine says Josef Stalin altered figures in the 1930s, hiding millions of deaths that resulted from his policies. The article in the magazine, Ogonyok, by Adam Oshroby, says Stalin's policies for millions of deaths in the early 1930s and have said the suffering of that period was perhaps worse than the better known purges later in the decade. But previously the Soviets have attributed the suffering, which was especially severe in the breadbasket regions of the northern Caucasus and the Ukraine, on a crop failure. Ogonyok, which has been in the forefront of Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev's policy of greater openness on some issues, published the article in its latest edition. Farmers were forced onto collective farms, beginning in 1929. Ogonyok said the Ukraine and the northern Caucasus region were hit with an extremely poor harvest in 1932, just at the time when Stalin was demanding heavy requisitions to sell abroad to finance his industrialization program. Famine gripped first of all that part of the population of the country which normally fed it. Children suffered first. Whole families died in the villages. It is known that in order to fulfill the plan in those difficult circumstances in many places the grain was "collected" by force, without exception. It is known that in 1932, Soviet purchases of machinery and equipment required by Stalin's industrialization drive, made up about one-third of the world exports in 1931 and almost half in 1932, Ogonyok said. "But what did we sell in exchange? Just a few things, including grain." In 1933, milk production was no higher than it had been during the height of the Russian Civil War 12 years earlier because many cattle had died, Ogonyok said.

Polish police nip Solidarity protest

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Police stopped about 1,000 people from staging a pro-Solidarity march in the Baltic port city of Gdynia, an opposition activist said Monday. The protesters were emerging from a Sunday evening Mass at the Redeemer Church and tried to march behind two banners reading "Solidarity Gdynia" and "Federation of Fighting Youth," said activist Bogdan Borusewicz. He said marchers got about 50 yards from the church before being stopped by riot police. He said about 30 people were detained, but had no information on whether they had been released. The Mass was to mark the anniversary of the Dec. 18, 1981, imposition of martial law in Poland, which resulted in the banning of Solidarity, the East bloc's first legally independent trade union.

Restrictions unable to stifle discontent in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — An expanding array of laws and emergency regulations restrict dissent in South Africa, but opponents of the government still find ways to make their feelings known.

Theater companies stage hard-hitting protest plays, political cartoonists ridicule the president, clergymen pray for detainees at Christmas services, black township residents withhold rent.

When a police helicopter flew over a recent anti-government protest at Johannesburg university, white students arranged scores of chairs on a lawn to spell out the question of what the surveillance team should do.

The government, which has jailed thousands of its opponents and outlawed many forms of protest, says it believes in the concept of free speech but will not tolerate calls for overthrow of the existing political system.

Home Affairs Minister Stoffel Botha, in charge of censorship and press regulations, said recently that total freedom of expression could be dangerous because many blacks were "exceedingly vulnerable to simplistic ideology, agitation and inflammatory speech."

Regulations imposed under the 18-month-old state of emergency prohibit calls for consumer boycotts, civil disobedience and various other forms of protest. Other laws restrict reporting about the security forces; outlaw a range of "subversive" statements, require permission to hold outdoor meetings and allow government censors to ban publications, films, plays and songs.

But to those with sufficient determination and imagination, outlets for dissent remain. Among them:

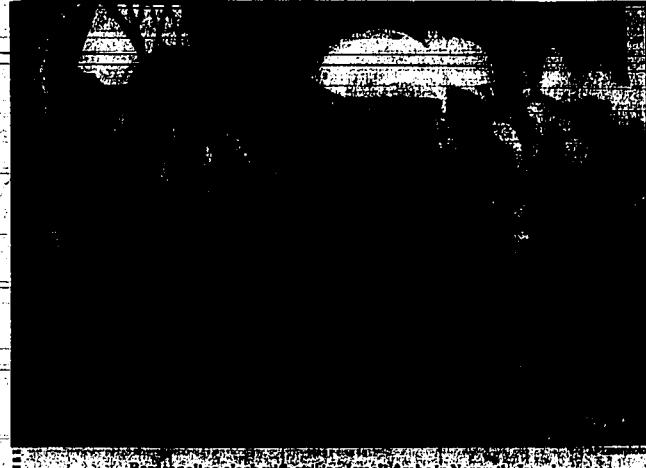

The courts. Suits filed against the police sometimes produce out-of-court payments from the Law and Order Ministry, which activists depict as tacit admissions of improper police conduct. Even when the suits fall, court proceedings provide a forum for witnesses to publicize accusations against authorities with full immunity.

Although the censorship ban may work, there is still room for strong protest. A book titled "Two Dogs and Freedom" contains drawings by black children of soldiers firing at township residents. A song by white rock star Johnny Clegg salutes activists who died in detention. A play last month at Johannesburg's biggest theater complex, "You Can't Stop the Revolution."

Campus protest. Increasingly, the predominantly white, English-speaking universities have become centers of anti-government, anti-apartheid activity, including occasional clashes between students and riotous 7th October 1985 protests and faculty at five campuses demonstrated against new regulations which threaten to reduce government subsidies to the schools unless administrators curtail dissent.

The press. The major English language newspapers, although condemned by some militants as pro-capitalist and overly cautious, often run editorials and letters from readers assailing the government and urging bolder racial reforms.

Border police clash with striking Israeli Arabs in Nazareth, Israel

Violence spreads in Israel

Jerusalem (AP) — Israeli soldiers shot three Palestinians to death and wounded at least 26 in the West Bank on Monday, one of the bloodiest days since Arab riots began in the occupied territories two weeks ago.

Riots and confrontation spread to Arab areas of Israel. Thousands of the nation's 700,000 Arab citizens held a general strike of sympathy with the 1.5 million Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel captured from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war.

Stone-throwing and tire-burning were reported in Jerusalem. Violence reached for the first time to Nazareth, other Arab towns in Israel and even the Tel Aviv suburb of Jaffa.

Monday's deaths brought the confirmed death toll to 19 and the unofficial number to 28 since Dec. 8.

Riots began after an Israeli businessman was killed in the Gaza Strip, and several Arabs died the following day in a traffic accident involving an Israeli truck. Violence was fed by rumors that the truck driver ran down the Arabs deliberately.

Maj. Gen. Amrath Miztas, West Bank military commander, appeared on Israel's Arabic television and promised to protect Arabs who went to work despite the strike.

"We feel that only the people of these areas should be responsible for earning a living or sending children to school," he said.

Mentioning violent protest, stone-throwing and blocking of roads, he said: "We will have to intervene into all these things and to act decisively against those who incite (others) to go out to the street."

Protesters violently and brutally attacked soldiers Monday in the West Bank town of Jenin, where the youths hurled 20 firebombs, and in nearby Toubas, where large stones were thrown in the general said.

The incited crowd did not listen to army appeals to disperse; did not react to tear gas and rubber bullets, he declared, and said three Arabs were killed and 10 wounded in this tiny town.

At the Dhabeh refugee camp near Bethlehem, Israeli photographer Eli Hirshkowitz said he saw eight women and about four youths try to take a rifle from a soldier. It went off accidentally, wounding at least one Arab youth, he said.

The Arab-run Palestine Press Service, said 248 Arabs had been wounded by gunfire and 478 injured by beating in two weeks. Nearly 1,000 had been detained, it said.

Figures released by Brig. Gen. Ephraim Lapid, spokesman for the Israeli army, said about 100 Arabs had been wounded and fewer than 200 arrested since Dec. 8.

Israel radio reported 80 arrests Monday, including 31 in in Jerusalem. Army radio said 25 protesters were arrested in Jaffa. Ten Arabs and a police officer were injured, the report said.

Israel television said 25 policemen were injured, one seriously, in rioting inside Israel, where only police and paramilitary border police are deployed to control violence.

The television said 2,300 policemen were engaged in dispersing demonstrations. In addition to policemen engaged in regular police duties.

Five policemen, including Galilee district commander Yakov Genot, were injured as they forcibly evicted 10 members of the radical Arab-Kach Movement from an ancient Jewish synagogue at the Arab village of Shefaram, the television said.

"Law and order comes before putting on a pretty image,"

Hopes dim for Swiss white Christmas

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — A seventh straight day of unseasonably warm weather Monday worried resort operators who had been hoping for a white Christmas at many winter resorts.

The town of Fjotza in southern Ticino canton recorded the day's balmy high of 69 degrees, while Adelboden in the Bernese Oberland topped 64 degrees. In the flatlands, Zurich and Bern recorded afternoon highs of about 60.

The Swiss Meteorological Office predicted partly sunny skies, warm temperatures and little precipitation for Thursday and Friday.

Skiing was reported to be reliably possible only at stations above 6,800 feet. The warm climate and rain last weekend played havoc with attempts to spread artificial snow.

Fear mounted at several tourist spots that business could seriously suffer if winter fails to come this week. Hanspeter Danuser, director of the St. Moritz tourist office, said winter sports events usually held on a weekend in the area were endangered.

Men botch hospital robbery

BOLOGNA, Italy (AP) — Three gunmen burst into a hospital Monday in an attempt to rob the payroll office, triggering a shootout with police in which one of the bandits was killed and the other two injured.

The incident occurred on the ground floor of the Malpighi hospital about 9:15 a.m. as dozens of hospital employees were waiting in line at the payroll window, police said.

A plainclothes policeman and a security guard confronted the gunmen as they ordered three office workers to empty the safe.

In the ensuing gun battle, one of the bandits was killed on the spot and another fell wounded. The third, who also was wounded, was captured a few yards from the hospital.

No hospital employees were injured.

Council approves 75-year land lease for pool

By BART JANSEN
Times-News Staff Writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council tonight voted to lease "closer to a multipurpose swimming pool Monday by approving a lease for the 75-year lease with the Twin Falls School District would be for 75 years, with the city owning and operating the pool. The lease would include the right to use the pool for hot water from a district well and closure of Stadium Boulevard.

The school district agreed in principle during the summer to lease land at the corner of Locust Street and Stadium Boulevard, north of the high school tennis courts.

The city plans to build and manage a new pool at the site and, in return for the land, agreed to close Stadium Boulevard at the school board's request because Sartooth Elementary and the high school sit on either side of the road.

But negotiations dragged on for months over specific provisions of the lease.

Council members had hoped to have a finished pool by next summer and wanted to quicken the pace and begin narrowing potential bidders for the project in January.

"I think it shows we're willing to go ahead with the concept of the pool," said Councilman Gale Kleinkopf after the vote.

The lease provides:

- Stadium will be closed during school days between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Language will be added to allow further closure if the need arises. Also, if Stadium ever becomes a throughway between Madrona Street North and Eastland Drive North, the city will permanently close Stadium between Madrona and Locust.
- The city will provide a continuous two-way, left-turn bay for cars along Locust from Filer Avenue to Falls Avenue. Pedestrian crossings and mid-street islands will be installed on neighboring streets including Locust, Stadium, Wilmore Avenue and Spruce Avenue.
- In addition to building the pool, the city will install a 6-foot, chain-link fence along the eastern boundary of the land between the pool and Sartooth. Another 6-foot, solid-wood fence will be built across the northern boundary of the land. Area residents to the north complained about possible noise from the new pool.

- A 6-foot berm will also be built immediately north of the pool.
- The pool will be partially heated by the school district's geothermal well. The city and district each hold water permits for a geothermal aquifer. The city will switch its direction permit for up to 0.95 cubic feet per second to the district's well site.
- The district currently draws 0.5 cfs to heat Sartooth and the high school.
- The city and district will share costs of pumping and improving the well site.
- While the city and school district initially expected the lease to run for 50 years, that limit was extended to 75 years. The district also agreed not to sell the land during that time.

K49AZ dispute solved

Will move to channel 2

By BART JANSEN
Times-News Staff Writer

TWIN FALLS — K49AZ will move to channel 2 by Jan. 7 under an agreement reached Monday, but it still has to move people are watching it remain there.

The method for determining K49's ranking remains a dilemma.

Deputy Attorney General Peter Richardson announced Monday during his presentation to the Twin Falls City Council that Attorney General Bruce Jones signed the agreement Wednesday, settling the months-old dispute over K49's dial position.

The council unanimously ratified the agreement at its regular meeting. Twin Falls was involved because it sold a cable franchise to Kinix Videocable, which in turn decided where stations are placed.

Richardson said officials from Kinix Broadcasting Co., which owns Kinix Videocable, and American Community Broadcasting, which owns K49, have each said they will accept the agreement.

Richardson said he is satisfied.

The agreement also lowers the amount K49 has to pay for appearing on the cable system. Richardson said K49 was either the only station paying to be included on cable or paid much more than others.

K49 paid $3,500 a month during its first six months, and $2,000 a month since then, but those payments were deferred until January. The agreement calls for $500 a month payments, retroactive to last May.

Christopher Anderson, 9, of Filer drops money into a Salvation Army bucket at the Blue Lakes Mall. Bell ringers for the agency are scattered around the Twin Falls shopping areas, reminding shoppers to help the needy during the holiday season.

Richardson said he is satisfied.

The agreement also lowers the amount K49 has to pay for appearing on the cable system. Richardson said K49 was either the only station paying to be included on cable or paid much more than others.

K49 paid $3,500 a month during its first six months, and $2,000 a month since then, but those payments were deferred until January. The agreement calls for $500 a month payments, retroactive to last May.

"It was one of the chips in the bargaining process," Richardson said.

City Attorney Shane Bengoechea said Twin Falls asked for the attorney general's assistance because of alleged collusion and various restraint-of-trade violations for blocking the low-power station out of prime stations 2 through 13, which are available to all cable subscribers, regardless of the type of television set they own.

The attorney general's office is the only state entity for anti-trust and other restraint of trade conflicts," Richardson said. "That was the hook to get us into the case."

After a year on channel 25 and 19 during its first year of operation last July, K49 manager Kris Harvey argued that the low-power station deserved to be aired on a prime station between 2 and 13 that every television can receive.

Harvey said the channel position prohibited her from reaching half the 14,000 cable subscribers who didn't have special channel selectors above 13. The channel positions contributed to the station's $150,000 in losses the first year.

State to spread drug grants among local law agencies

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — Law enforcement agencies received more than $900,000 in federal anti-drug abuse funds here Monday, including $290,000 in state funding that will be shifted to local drug efforts.

After handing out 12 grants to local law enforcement agencies, Gov. Cecil Andrus had an instruction for the police chiefs and other officials on hand.

"Sit on," said Andrus. "Go right after them."

The state received $1.2 million in anti-drug funds. Mack Richardson, director of the Department of Law Enforcement, said the state decided to send most of its portion of the money to local law enforcement agencies.

"They are the front-line troops. They continually come up against this criminal element on a daily basis," Andrus said.

Richardson said there's a possibility Congress will cut the funding in half next year. He said his agency decided not to commit itself to staff and anti-drug programs for which there might not be money next year.

Instead, the money went to local agencies.

Richardson said the state had 18 requests, and was able to fund 12 of them, using much of the state allocation.

"They all are good, viable programs. It's too bad we didn't have more money for all of them," said Richardson.

Andrus said the grants show the state's continued dedication to the anti-drug effort. He said in a year, he hopes to see the results of the stepped-up enforcement program.

If the bulk of the anti-drug money were spent in Boise, it wouldn't be used nearly as effectively as it can be used by local agencies, the governor said.

Bannock County received $129,652 for what local officials call the "Crack Down" project.

Bingham County receives $45,000 for the sheriff's office drug enforcement unit. Blaine County gets $40,350 for the Blaine County Task Force and Clearwater County's sheriff office will use $65,000 for an information-communications network.

The Coeur d'Alene Police Department, Post Falls Police Department and Kootenai County share $161,900 for a task force.

The Elmore County sheriff's office will use $48,500 for an offender apprehension task force and the Lewiston Police Department gets $60,000 for the Quad City Area Joint Drug Enforcement Task Force.

Madison County will use $85,000 for the Drug Task Force; Nampa Police Department, $98,728 for the city county narcotics unit and Payette County gets $29,000 for the Drug Apprehension Program.

Twin Falls received $80,000 for the Magic Valley Narcotics Task Force Increased Apprehension Program.

County slates funds for equipment

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News Staff Writer

TWIN FALLS — Local law enforcement officials said Monday that the $80,000 grant received by the area's narcotics task force will be funneled principally into funding for equipment.

The eight-county agency, officially titled the Magic Valley Narcotics Task Force Increased Apprehension Program, was one of 12 local drug-enforcement agencies to receive a state grant Monday. According to Cheryl Elms, grants manager with the state Department of Law Enforcement, the $80,000 received by Magic Valley's task force was the fifth-highest sum issued.

Ron Axman, leader of the task force, said Monday that the grant will be applied primarily toward equipment expenses, with money also being used for overtime wages and residual funds. The task force had originally requested a grant of between $130,000 and $135,000, he said.

"I think because of the number of counties in the task force we were able to get together a good enough package to get it through the board which reviews it in Boise," said Axman, who is a detective with the Twin Falls Police Department.

Elms said the state received 18 applications from local law-enforcement agencies. Those applications were initially reviewed by the 15-member Drug Policy Advisory Board, which was responsible for making recommendations to the Criminal Justice Council.

The council, comprised of 13 members, made the final selection concerning equipment applications.

State officials praised Magic Valley's application, citing specifically its precise definition of goals and the fact that the task force is such a broad-based cooperative effort.

"They already had a task force in operation which was a plus," said Bill Overton, chief of public affairs for the law enforcement department. "They've already shown it could work, and the rationale behind the application was well spelled out."

Elms added that the reviewing committees "felt" they had a great expectation for success.

Tim Qualls, Twin Falls public safety director, said Monday that the task force has been in operation since 1983. It is staffed with employees from the various law-enforcement agencies within the Magic Valley, he said.

Axman said the task force "puts together narcotics cases for the eight-county area," adding that it is in conjunction with the local law-enforcement agencies.

"In 1986, we had 19 task-force cases within the Magic Valley," Axman said. "Sixteen were successful — obviously three were not. We've had a very good success ratio."

As for the specific drugs circulating within the Magic Valley, Axman said the task force "sees a whole host of different types. Probably our biggest problem with drugs is with marijuana, but we're also seeing a continual influx of cocaine into the area."

Axman said other drugs used in the area include heroin, methamphetamine and polybutene, a hallucinogenic also referred to as "magic mushrooms."

McClure warns against delays

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sen. James McClure says there will be unnecessary delays if Rep. Richard Stallings introduces his own version of legislation protecting two southern Idaho natural treasures.

The Senate last week passed legislation to protect the historic City of Rocks area near Oakley, and the Hagerman Fossil Beds along the Snake River.

In a letter to Stallings Monday, McClure urged Stallings to allow the Senate bill to pass in the House, and not introduce his own versions.

"Introduction of separate legislation at this point will only delay passage of these important measures," McClure said.

McClure said Stallings announced last month he planned to introduce separate legislation designating the Hagerman Fossil Beds as a national monument.

Renowned educator Anna Hansen Hayes dies

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News Staff Writer

TWIN FALLS — Anna Hansen Hayes, one of the earliest residents of Twin Falls County who went on to attain national and international renown in the field of education, died Saturday in Salt Lake City at the age of 101.

Hayes was born on July 23, 1886, at the pioneer community of Rock Creek, south of Hansen where her parents came as Danish emigrants to establish farms.

She is remembered by the longtime residents of this area as an outstanding citizen of Twin Falls and a genuine lady.

Clara Guat Walker, Twin Falls historian and former newspaper editor, was a friend of Hayes and her late husband. He said he met her "at a grand old lady."

"She had been an important part of the history of our area and the state of Idaho," he said Monday. "She will be missed by everyone who remembers her."

Phyllis Harris of Hansen recalls assistance from Hayes in writing her own history of that community and that Hayes spoke in April 1974 at the dedication of the Hansen Library.

"We felt very flattered that she would speak at the event," Harris said. "She was a charming lady in my association with her. When she spoke at the dedication, she donated a copy of her latest book, 'Buckskin and Smoke,' and also donated a number of books from her personal library."

Another long-time associate of Hayes during their years in the Parent-Teacher Association functions around the country, Ruth Roan of Twin Falls, said Hayes was her ideal.

"We traveled together to conventions and other business meetings around the country," Roan said. "She was a wonderful person and a great example for me. I would have loved to follow in her footsteps."

Roan said Hayes could speak before any group and on any subject and was one of the "most interesting" speakers she had ever known. She was open-minded, always the gentle woman and had a good sense of humor, her friend recalled.

Hayes became interested in the Parent-Teacher Association, and in addition to serving in local organizations, was named Idaho PTA president in 1932 and later National PTA president, a position she held from 1949 through 1952.

Her father, John F. Hansen, was an early day storekeeper in the Hansen and Rock Creek area.

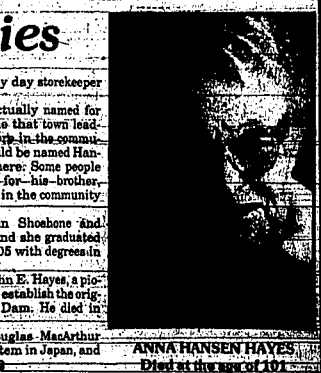

Harris says the town of Hansen was actually named for Hayes' father. "Several people have told me that town leader of the time wanted him to build his store in the community and he promised if he would the town would be named Hansen in his honor. He also taught school there. Some people say the town may have been named for his brother, Lawrence, who owned and operated a bank in the community at one time."

Hayes obtained her early schooling in Shoshone and Albion, the nearest schools at that time, and she graduated from the Albion State Normal School in 1905 with degrees in primary teaching and library supervision.

In December of that year, she married John E. Hayes, a pioneer and an Oakley, and the couple came to this area to help establish the original irrigation projects, including Milner Dam. He died in 1922.

Anna Hayes served with the Gen. Douglas MacArthur team assigned to revise the educational system in Japan, and

Latest residential fire brings toll to 20

By The Associated Press

Five children died Monday when flames engulfed their home near Portland, Ore., bringing to 20 the number of people killed in residential fires since Sunday. A 6-year-old child suffered serious burns in the Cascade, Ore., fire and was airlifted to a Portland hospital. Three others escaped the blaze, fire department spokesman John McAdoo said.

The parents of the children, ages 3 to 9 years, had left the 1 1/2-story house at 11:30 p.m. Sunday and the fire was reported about 45 minutes later, McAdoo said. No cause has been determined.

Three children, ages 1, 2 and 3, died when fire gutted a mobile home at the outskirts of Fresno, Calif., shortly after dawn Monday. Their mother and 7-year-old daughter escaped, said Capt. Roger Tognoli of a MidValley Fire Department. The cause of the fire was unknown, he said.

On Sunday, an 8-year-old Fresno boy died in another home fire after bedding fell onto a floor heater next to a hideaway bed. Two men and a woman died early Monday in an apartment fire in New York's Bronx borough, but firefighters rescued two others who were about to jump from a fifth-floor window.

The fire was believed to have started where the bodies were found, a rear bedroom of the top-floor apartment, Fire Chief Mel Kalachman said. The fire may have been caused by cigarette smoking in bed, he said.

In Columbus, Ga., a man died early Sunday in a violent attempt to rescue his 2-year-old daughter from a burning house. Neighbors said the 43-year-old man rescued an 8-month-old daughter, then returned for his elder daughter. Firemen found both victims in a front bedroom.

A neighbor restrained the man's wife as she tried to follow her husband into the burning house. The fire probably was sparked by defective wiring in the attic, said a fire department investigator, Lt. Robert Walker.

Three members of a Winfield, Kan., family died in their home early Sunday after a smoldering cigarette apparently fell from an ashtray and set fire to a chair, fire officials said.

A badly burned Long Beach, Calif., boy was in fair condition Monday at Memorial Medical Center after an apartment fire killed his mother and injured her boyfriend Sunday.

The 6-year-old burst through a window in an escape route he said his mother taught him. The 30-year-old woman died in the pre-dawn blaze, which firefighters said began in a floor heater. Her 29-year-old boyfriend suffered from smoke inhalation and was in serious condition Monday at St. Mary Medical Center, hospital spokesman Tom McCullough said.

It was the fourth death caused by a heater accident since a cold spell gripped Southern California more than a week ago.

In Alliance, Ohio, two brothers, ages 18 and 20, were killed Sunday and another man was injured in a fire in the upstairs apartment of a 2 1/2-story building, a fire official said.

Investigators on Monday blamed a stove burner that was left on as the cause of a fire late Friday that killed six children in Pleasantville, Ohio. The blaze also injured a woman who was the mother of three of the children and the aunt of the others.

The 28-year-old woman was in satisfactory condition Monday in the coronary care unit at Lancaster-Fairfield Community Hospital.

Utah base to maintain B-1B bombers

HILL AIR FORCE BASE, Utah (AP) — Hill Air Force Base's Ogden Air Logistics Center has been tabbed to undertake a variety of maintenance tasks on the B-1B bomber officials say.

Employees in the OALC's Directorate of Maintenance recently obtained the technical order for work on the B-1B's main landing gear.

Eventually, the depot will be responsible for maintenance and repair work on 370 items of the B-1B, the Air Force said.

Although officially accepted by the Air Force, the B-1B is new in the service's inventory of aircraft and repair, and maintenance is still being handled by the prime contractor, pending breakdown and distribution of the various technical orders detailing the type and frequency of maintenance work.

There are 7,400 items (on the B-1B) for the Air Force to establish organic repair technical orders on, said Jeannie Hathenbruck, logistics officer for landing gear, wheels and brakes in the Directorate of Materrial Management. "Maintenance for the B-1B is currently being performed by the contractor through an interim contractor support program and until the Air Force can establish its own repair capability it will remain that way," Hathenbruck said.

OALC is the first air logistics center to acquire a technical order and break it down to fit depot-level repair specifications, base officials said.

"Our maintenance people will be working on the hydraulic control assembly located in the main landing gear of the aircraft," said Hathenbruck.

"This establishes a first for the Air Force in repair capability. This was done through the initiative of several Ogden ALC employees and with the cooperation of employees from the team management division at Oklahoma City," he said.

The Oklahoma City ALC at Tinker Air Force Base, Okla., is overall program manager for the B-1B, Hathenbruck said.

Andrus hands out awards for recycling drives

BOISE (AP) — An Idaho student recycling project produced more than 1.3 million pounds of recyclable materials and $41,000 for schools, Gov. Cecil Andrus says.

The governor on Monday presented 39 prizes, ranging from a new car and school computers to free hamburgers and T-shirts, during the awards ceremony.

A total of 1,366,000 pounds of recyclable materials was collected during the two-month "Idaho Is Too Great to Litter" education program. Project coordinator Tamara Harney of American Recycling in Twin Falls said that translated $41,000 for the schools involved.

"This recycling project has been a tremendous success and the students who participated have taught all of us a valuable lesson," the governor said.

"It's easier than most people think to turn trash into cash and best of all, the Idaho schools are $41,000 better off," he said.

A 1988 Subaru, donated by Idaho Motors, Christian Schools' first place winner in the high school division.

Jessica Allan, seventh grader, North Bonneville Junior High, Idaho Falls, which was the first place school in the junior high-mid-level school category, will receive an expense-paid trip for four to Disneyworld and Epcot Center, Orlando, Fla., sponsored by the Idaho Bankers Association. She collected the most pounds of recyclable materials at her school.

First, second and third-place prizes will be awarded to 37 elementary schools, including Apple Computers for first-place schools, sponsored by Coca-Cola Bottling Co.

Officials want changes in indigent care plan

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — County officials will seek three amendments to the state's indigent care codes, including a bill qualifying Idaho for federal Medicaid payments on prenatal care.

Bonneville County Commissioner Clyde Burtenshaw says two of the bills amend a measure overwhelming passed by the 1987 Idaho Legislature. Under this bill, the state qualifies for a two-thirds federal funding match from Medicaid on some hospital stays, nursing home costs and medicine purchases.

The third, and perhaps most controversial, bill extends the state-federal funding match to prenatal care. Medicaid will cover two-thirds of the prenatal costs. The state, and not the counties, must apply for federal assistance and pay the remainder of the costs.

The state's share of the prenatal care bill would be slightly over $2 million, a figure confirmed by a legislative study committee last week in making the same recommendation.

With many legislative observers predicting a caretaker session of few revenue increases, Burtenshaw concedes that the bill may have problems, simply because of its costs. However, he said the bill could ultimately save money for counties. "The return is there. It's a good investment, the figures show," he said.

Other states which have adopted the Medicaid prenatal patch have seen savings, Burtenshaw said. Two $1 spent on prenatal care either by the state or federal government, $3 is saved on later treatment, he said.

By making prenatal care more available to indigent patients, county officials hope to prevent some premature births. In extreme cases, a premature birth can cost a county up to $500,000, and can become a health concern for the state at a later point.

"That's where a lot of our bills come," Burtenshaw said.

The prenatal bill would go to the Legislature with the support of the Department of Health and Welfare, Burtenshaw said, and may also be addressed by Gov. Cecil Andrus in his State of the State message Jan. 11.

The first would resolve a conflict over Medicaid confidentiality which occurs when state bills are reverted back to counties.

When medical bills exceed the state-imposed caps, the counties are billed for these costs. However, confidential federal Medicaid records are not released to counties, since the counties would be forced to make these records public.

Suspected con man, bigamist pleads guilty

COALVILLE, Utah (AP) — A man who authorities contend married 13 women in 18 years pleaded guilty to one count of bigamy in a plea arrangement after motions to suppress evidence were denied.

Third District Judge Homer Wilkinson denied a defense request Monday to suppress admission of documents pertaining to other marriages of David Bruce Geer, 39, West Valley City. Geer was denied Geer agreed to plead guilty to the third-degree felony bigamy charge, in exchange for the prosecutor's pledge to drop one count of falsifying government documents, said Aloma Richins, secretary at the county attorney's office.

Wilkinson set sentencing for Jan.

19 and ordered a pre-sentence investigation. Geer's charge could bring a penalty of up to five years in prison and a fine of up to $5,000.

Geer remains in the Summit County Jail in lieu of $20,000 bond.

Scott Mann of the state Bureau of Organized Crime said earlier that Geer met a dozen women through a telephone dating service.

Geer made an estimated $70,000 last year, a much of it apparently from women he promised to marry, and is under investigation in Texas in connection with the alleged taking of $20,000 from his latest "sponsee," Mann said.

For most, white Christmas appears in dreams

The Associated Press

The season of "Merry Christmas" is here. Highways and department stores are jammed. Jangling bells ring by sidewalk Santas issue their call to remember the needy. One doesn't need to hear the late, Big Crosby to know that it's beginning to look a lot like Christmas.

Yet things are not complete, especially if you live in an area where the temperature tends to dip below freezing and stay there. You need a quick fix of weather. A scan of the skies shows a pale gray. Turning the dial on the radio the closest thing to a forecast is Elvis having his blue Christmas without you. So you pick up the phone to call the National Weather Service and the recorded voice says, "Partly sunny Christmas day, high temperature in the lower 50s. A chance of rain by evening."

No snow! A Christmas without any of the white stuff. The one day of the year you want more snow is going to be 50 degrees. Might as well move to Miami where it's really warm.

Christmas and snow, snow and Christmas. Lined in an eternal duo. But why? Surely there must be a reason behind snow and Christmas. How far back does this whole thing go?

Perhaps the best way to handle the question is to look back at Christmas past. The first Christmas day has long been a subject of dispute. Most biblical scholars recognize that Dec. 25 has a symbolic meaning, but no one knows for sure the actual birth date of Christ. Speculation runs from late fall to early April. Whenever it was, the chances of snow having made it to Bethlehem then are very small.

Dean Gulezian, a forecaster with the Philadelphia office of the National Weather Service, cannot say for sure what the weather of the ancient Holy Land was like. But he can give more than an accurate idea of what it is like in modern Israel.

"Take the area around Jerusalem, for example. The average high temperature in December is 59. The normal low is 45. It is usually well above freezing. Frost or snow, are very, rare events," Gulezian says.

As might be expected, temperatures at other times of the year do not offer any better chances for snow. "In April, for example, the normal high then is 73, the low 50," Gulezian says. Sometimes the temperature even climbs well above that. "According to Guinness, the record for April is 102. At that rate, Santa would feel far more comfortable in a bathing suit than the traditional fur. And Rudolph's blinking nose would be almost useless."

As Christianity spread to the more northern corners of Europe, chances were good that Christmas would bring white snow eventually. At first Christmas itself was not an idea that caught fire. Origen, a 2nd-century theologian, feared that the very idea of celebrating Christ's birth would be treating him as an earthly monarch, like some king or Parach. But other doctors of the church looked more kindly on the concept.

Perhaps it was some time in this era that Christmas and snow first found each other. Unfortunately, no one was around to take note of the event. As the Dark Ages descended on Europe, the time seemed almost tailor-made for the arrival of a white Christmas. The painters of Medieval miniatures delighted in contrasting a warm hall at high Christmas feast with a chill blanket of white hugging the landscape.

There are some, however, who say that white Christmas was the result of a meteorological event known as the Little Ice Age.

Estimated to have lasted from the early 1400s to the 1850s, "it was nothing like the great ice sheets of the prehistoric era that plunged the world into an ice box for eons. There were warm periods, but when the winters were cold, they were very cold."

According to scholar Lowell Ponte in his book "The Cooling," its first effects came after a long warm spell. In 1431, the year Joan of Arc burned at the stake, the Little Ice Age began with a winter that froze every river in Germany and devastated French vineyards.

Winters seemed to arrive earlier than in the past. And big sheets of water, such as Hudson's sander Sea, suddenly were icing up. In the winters of the 1680s England's long-haired foot of a king, Charles II, and his court could often be seen walking briskly over London's frozen river, Thames. Snow and ice on Dec. 25 was no longer the exception.

Other important effects of "the big chill" were plentiful. Ponte believes that the cold led to the destruction of the Viking settlements in Newfoundland and Greenland. "Viking ships found sailing routes to the new lands more and more difficult," he says. By 1492 Pope Alexander VI was complaining that due to cold and ice no bishop had visited Norse Catholics in 80 years. Indian raids increased on the weakest colony. "In both places the last Norseman may have died by bow or spear. But the climate change was what destroyed these colonies," writes Ponte.

During the American Revolution, the cold, Ponte contends, worked in favor of the colonists over the British. "It bred toughness and independence in the people," he says. Its impact on the climate in France also led to the famine that sparked the "early" days of the French Revolution.

What caused this great cool-down is still debated. Karl Loeper of the Allentown, Pa., National Weather Service office, lays at least part of the blame on volcanoes. "As I remember from forecasting school, they told us the theory was that because of all the dust—the (volcanoes) put into the air, it blocked the sunlight, cooling things off."

These volcanic eruptions were not just a one-time thing. In 1669, for example, Sicily's Mount Etna exploded, killing 20,000 people and sending up a high dust cloud. Indonesia's Mount Tambora exploded with a roar in 1816, releasing 6 million times more energy than that of an atomic bomb. It is said to have killed more than 12,000. It was Mount Tambora's explosion, some believe, that led to the famous 1816 year without a summer.

According to Loeper, there was frost every month of the year. Agriculture production fell and unrest in Europe led to mass immigration.

On Feb. 7, 1819, the struggling family of John Dickens welcomed a son into the world. Perhaps more than anyone else, it was Charles Dickens who firmly set white Christmas in the imagination of our time. Of his five Christmas books, it was the first, "A Christmas Carol," written in 1843, that has proved the most enduring.

"The story of hard-hearted skindint, Ebenezer Scrooge, sweet little Tiny Tim, and the ghosts is known to just about everyone who has flicked on a television around

Dec. 26. In the book, snow played the best supporting role. The ghostly visitors take Scrooge from his cold, damp, foggy, and, in the book, snowless London, to past, present and future Christmases.

The first ghost takes Scrooge to the countryside of his youth. This city is gone. The darkness and the mist had vanished. "For it was a clear, cold, winter day, with snow upon the ground." But it is spirit of Christmas Present that shows Scrooge a London that seems far removed from the fog-girt Victorian metropolis of his money-changing hole.

It is into this environment that Dickens puts his immortal Cratchit family. Their own innocences and virtues seem reflected in a white, snowy world. It is only when Scrooge slips into his own scary future that we are back in the cold, snowless, world of the unreformed skindint. When he gives in to the spirit of Christmas, sunlight and white snow return to the re-born Scrooge's life.

Other authors soon followed Dickens' footsteps, and snow quickly became a Christmas-time tradition.

Hollywood turned the tradition into a cliché. Dickens' story was a natural and movie makers were not content with just snowing-up the Christmas Present. By the time they were finished, the sound stage was hip deep in phony flakes.

Among the most popular versions of the Christmas classic was the 1951 production from Britain starring Alastair Sims, which seems to lean less on the snow than MGM's 1938 film with Reginald Owen.

But it took Bing Crosby and Irving Berlin to make a white Christmas into a national obsession. In 1942, the story goes, while he was sitting next to his Hollywood swimming pool, Berlin wrote "White Christmas," one of many holiday songs for the film, "Holiday Inn."

When Bing Crosby gave life to "White Christmas," even his co-star, dancer Fred Astaire, had to take a back seat. The song proved so popular that in 1954 it spun off another Irving Berlin songfest of a movie with Crosby and Danny Kaye. They called it simply, "White Christmas." The title said it all.

Short of a new Little Ice Age, chances may be pretty slim for any deep snow where you'll be on Dec. 25. So if your Christmas turns out to be warm, just search the dial for the 1944 classic, "Meet Me in St. Louis," and, as Judy Garland sings in the movie, "have yourself a merry little Christmas Day."

Care survey doesn't worry welfare chief

BOISE (AP) — The state's welfare chief sees little cause for concern about the quality of health care for Idahoans despite a private survey that ranks Idaho's health system for the poor among the 10 worst in the nation.

"We have not seen that report yet so I can't react to the specifics," said Allen Korhonen, director of the Division of Welfare.

"But in general, it looks to me like what this group did was take a look at the state plan provisions and the number of services offered by each state," Korhonen said. "They concluded that not all states offer the same services, and for those that offered the fewest, they were characterized by a lower rating. That's not appropriate."

The report released Monday by Public Citizen Health Research Fund ranked the Medicaid programs offered by the states and the District of Columbia in "eligibility, policy, scope of services, availability of services, quality of care and reimbursement policy."

It found a wide disparity in the services offered in each program and a substantial difference in the financial support per Medicaid recipient with those in poorer states having fewer resources behind them despite higher federal contributions.

Idaho ranked 43 among the states in the survey, considered one of the most extensive on the state-federal health program.

But Korhonen said the survey rankings merely penalized states that, for budgetary or policy reasons, offered fewer optional health services above the basic care covered by Medicaid.

But, Korhonen emphasized, "I can see absolutely no justification for a firm based in Washington to offer criticism of the quality of care out here. Health care is provided by the private sector, and those are the same doctors, the same hospitals, the same nursing homes providing care to all Idahoans."

Air rescue team ceases its operations

MOUNTAIN HOME (AP) — Because of a funding cut, the 40th Air Rescue and Recovery Squadron at Mountain Home Air Force Base has ceased operations.

The Air Force squadron's prime mission was providing rescue support for Air Force fliers at Mountain Home. Members also voluntarily staffed the Military Assistance to Safety and Traffic unit, said Paul Anderson, chief of Idaho's Emergency Medical Services.

Tricky rescues were the squadron's specialty, he said.

"One of the biggest worries is that when it's needed, it's needed very badly," Anderson said.

MAST units also came to the rescue when medical helicopters from hospitals in Boise, Coeur d'Alene and Spokane were busy.

The units also had equipment the hospital helicopters didn't.

"One of the biggest concerns is that if a hoist is needed for a mountain rescue to airlift people out, we won't have it," Anderson said.

"MAST did."

The nearest helicopters with hoists are in California and Virginia, Wash., he said.

However, Idaho Adjutant Gen. Darrell Manning said the Idaho Air National Guard may be able to fill the gap by starting a rescue unit similar to the Air Force's.

"We do not have the funding, the people or the aircraft for the mission," Manning said. "We have a mission in the National Guard Bureau, and they will work with Congress on funding the program."

He said it would be two or three years before the program could become a reality.

"If the funding were approved and the manpower approved, we could provide that kind of service," Manning said. "There is very high ability outside the National Guard to provide that type of service. No other military organization could."

MAST units in Spokane, Utah and New York also were cut in September.

Meridian woman killed in crash

BAGLE (AP) — One woman was killed and five others were injured in a collision early Sunday morning in Eagle.

Sue Newton, 36, of Meridian, died at 4:33 p.m. at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center of massive chest injuries, according to Ada County Chief Deputy Coroner Lynn Bowerman.

Her passenger, Steve Newton, 47, was treated and released at St. Alphonsus, a nursing supervisor said.

The accident occurred just before 1:00 a.m. when Newton's car, southbound on Eagle Road, failed to stop at the stop sign and a vehicle going west on Franklin Road struck it broadside, Ada County Sheriff's Sgt. Jeffrey Katz said.

Katz said none of the occupants in either car was wearing a seat belt.

Terry R. Jackson, 30, of Boise, driver of the car on Franklin Road, was in serious condition Sunday night at St. Alphonsus, a nursing supervisor said.

One of the passengers, Dee McCarrel, a woman in her 20s, was in critical condition at the same hospital.

The other passenger in the Jackson vehicle, Rodney Shaffer, 27, was treated and released.

AIDS confidentiality bill opposed by corrections officials

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A bill that would make it a class A misdemeanor to release personal information about people with AIDS and other communicable diseases has been bogged down by opposition from state corrections officials.

The legislation, sponsored by Sen. Wian Richards, D-Ogden, would protect medical and personal records of such patients from a court subpoena or search warrant.

Approval of the bill had been recommended to the legislative Health Interim Committee by the Utah Department of Health.

The committee voted last week to support the bill's concept, but held off adopting the measure after objections were raised by Lynn Lund, Utah Department of Corrections inspector general.

Lund raised the possibility of an inmate bringing suit against the state, claiming he contracted AIDS in prison. The state's attorneys couldn't find out if the inmate was infected before coming to prison and they couldn't use medical records to find out.

Health Department officials were asked to meet with corrections officials and representatives of the American Civil Liberties Union to rewrite the bill before the Legislature convenes in January.

Aryan Nations still eye Utah despite cancellation of show

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Rev. Richard Butler, founder of the Aryan Nations, says the cancellation of a white supremacist radio show in Salt Lake City will not stop his group from advancing its cause in Utah.

Butler vowed to return to local air waves and blasted the Jewish Defense League as "terrorists" after JDL national chairman Irv Rubin publicly claimed responsibility for the withdrawal of the Aryan Nations Hour on station KZZI last week.

Director Robyn Blumner said the Constitution guarantees the Aryan Nations the right to speak, but not the right to any particular forum.

However, Rubin said the issue is not freedom of speech. "This is a situation where Mr. Hinton is a moral coward... a degenerate selling air time to Nazis."

Butler said the Aryan Nations are not Nazis. He also vowed to "crush" the Aryan Nations or others who publicly call for an end to Jews.

Butler also reiterated his organization's plans to open a regional office in Utah sometime next spring.

3 charged in bar bouncer's death

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Three Provo men were charged Monday with first-degree murder and other charges in the weekend shooting death of a bar bouncer and wounding of two patrons, authorities said.

Nielsen said the shootings apparently stemmed from an altercation that occurred at the bar about 2 1/2 hours earlier between two of the suspects and another bouncer.

Officer recovered a .45-caliber handgun from the vehicle of one suspect.

Police obtained descriptions of the suspects and received a search warrant. Manley was arrested two hours later in his car. Fuga and Tauliili were arrested at their homes within a couple hours, Nielsen said.

FBI seeks witnesses in Navajo police case

MEXICAN HAT, Utah (AP) — Nearly three weeks after the charred bodies of two Navajo tribal officers were found in a burned out police van, investigators still are seeking crucial eyewitness evidence to their slayings.

The FBI and tribal police have questioned about 100 Navajos, offered a $5,000 reward and made three at meetings attended by quiet Monument Valley residents, but while they vow to solve the slayings, they are not near to making arrests.

Police believe that before dawn Saturday, Dec. 5, three or more people took the officers' bodies and vehicles into Copper Canyon, west of Gouldings, apparently planning to dump them in Lake Powell.

'Safe and armed' valve at root of postponed test

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — NASA and Morton Thiokol officials, having unraveled technical problems that forced postponement of a crucial weekend test-firing of the redesigned-space shuttle booster rockets, rescheduled the demonstration for Wednesday afternoon.

Morton Thiokol spokesman Rocky Raab said Monday that the rescheduled test — four days after an already twice-delayed Saturday firing — would take place 1 p.m. at the aerospace company's test bay 25 miles west of Brigham City.

The test-firing, the second of four fullscale booster demonstrations required before the shuttle resumes missions in June, was called off 3:30 p.m. MST Saturday when a problem developed in the 126-foot-long rocket's ignition-control system.

The system automatically aborted the test, already delayed past its original 1 p.m. firing time by computer and technical woes.

The rescheduling decision late Monday came after two days of exhaustive, round-the-clock tests by engineers which revealed that a problem with ground support circuitry was responsible for the failure of the ignition-control system.

At the core of the problem was the system's "safe and armed" valve, a device designed to prevent the rocket from firing when it is in its "safe" position. On Saturday it failed to properly open to align the ignition system, Raab said.

"It was determined that there was insufficient power to the 'safe and armed' device (located in the rocket's top section)," Raab said. "A decision has been made to replace the device and make appropriate power supply modifications in the ground support equipment."

He added that the Wednesday test-firing time was subject to those actions being completed and verified by Tuesday afternoon.

The test-firing was considered an important milestone in the nation's return to manned space flight. The shuttle program was grounded following the explosion of Challenger and deaths of its seven-member crew shortly after liftoff Jan. 28, 1986.

The redesigned-shuttle booster has been subject to hundreds of experiments since a presidential commission blamed a faulty booster seal for leaking super-hot gases that ignited an external fuel tank and destroyed the Challenger.

NASA and Morton Thiokol engineers in Utah notified other NASA officials at the Marshall Space Flight Center near Huntsville, Ala., of their findings during a Monday afternoon telephone conference.

The National Weather Service predicted "marginal" conditions for Wednesday's launch, Raab said.

He said that weather is not a determining factor by itself on whether a test-firing goes ahead, but it is "part of a very complicated equation" including visibility, potential for adequate dispersal of smoke, precipitation and other factors.

Raab said the delay in the test-firing was not expected to affect NASA's plans for resuming shuttle missions in June.

"The managers don't think it will have any effect — either the NASA managers or Morton Thiokol managers," he said. "The launch date depends more on delivery of the flight motors than the test schedule, and the (motor) delivery is on schedule."

Light snowfall slickens roads

TREMONTON, Utah (AP) — A brief storm skipped along the Wasatch Mountains early Monday, dusting icy northern Utah roads with half an inch of snow before moving south, the National Weather Service said.

The storm slowed to 20 mph during the height of the storm, which struck about 7:30 a.m., authorities said. The storm dropped half an inch of snow at Tremonton, Brigham City and Ogden and about a quarter of an inch at other Utah locations, including the Salt Lake Valley.

The storm was moving into central Utah Monday afternoon.

This was just a mist, weather flow with a little wiggle, a little impulse and that's what gave us a bit of snow," Alder said.

The storm was moving into central Utah Monday afternoon.

Spokane digs out from snowfall

SPOKANE (AP) — Spokane residents began digging out of the biggest snowstorm so far this season as 7.6 inches blanketed the streets and made this month the second-wettest December ever in the city.

Snow began falling in earnest in the northeast corner of Washington about mid-afternoon Sunday and lasted well into the night, making driving hazardous.

No major accidents were reported as a result of the vigorous Pacific funnel storm system that headed east to Montana.

The Washington State Patrol branch in Spokane responded to 78 minor accidents since 3 p.m. Sunday, a dispatcher said this morning.

All 36 of the city's plows were in action this morning clearing major streets, bus routes and hilly areas of the city.

The snowfall lifted precipitation for the month to 4.78 inches. The wettest December ever in Spokane was in 1964, when 6.13 inches were recorded, said Rex Thompson, a National Weather Service meteorologist-technician.

Thompson said there is "a good chance" December 1987 may break the record.

"We're 10 days away (from the end of the month). All it takes is one or more systems to come in here," he said.

Another storm system was building in the eastern Pacific and was expected to reach Eastern Washington by Wednesday, Thompson said.

Both the Pend Oreille and Stevens County sheriff's departments said there were no major emergencies caused by the storm.

Small quake hits Utah site

TREMONTON, Utah (AP) — A small earthquake, registering 3.6 magnitude in the Richter scale, rattled a remote site on the north end of the Great Salt Lake about 25 miles northwest of here, the University of Utah Seismograph Stations said.

The earthquake was recorded at 6:15 p.m. Sunday.

No damage or injuries were reported from the quake, which was not reported felt, he said.

Brown said the quake occurred in an area that has been seismically active since a 6.0 shaker struck the Pocatello, Idaho, area 12 years ago.

The morning line

Good morning. It's Tuesday, Dec. 22, an eventful day for sports in the Intermountain West. The biggest show will be in Boise, where the undefeated Broncos will host fifth-ranked and unbeaten Wyoming at 7:30 p.m. in a basketball showdown that has been sold out for several weeks.

Meanwhile, in Birmingham, Ala., WAC runnerup BYU (9-3) will take on Atlantic Coast Conference runnerup Virginia in the All-America Bowl at 6 p.m. (Channel 9 in the Magic Valley). The Cavaliers, 7-4, pattern their offense after BYU's wide-open passing game, so this figures to be a 3-hour-plus ballgame. Of local interest, Burley's Tim Knight, a BYU junior who has tracked up all-WAC noseguard Dave Futrell for most of the season, has been getting more and more playing time at tackle during the last part of the season and should see some action tonight. He wears uniform No. 76.

Closer to home, there's a big Magic Valley Conference girls' basketball game scheduled for 6:15 p.m. at Raft River High in Malin. Raft River, 7-3, overall and 5-1 in the MVC, will host Oakley, also 7-3 and unbeaten in four league games. This game and the rematch in Oakley on Jan. 19 will probably determine the conference title; only one other league member — Hagerman — has less than two conference losses.

Arizona voted No. 1

By WILLIAM F. RAWSON
The Associated Press

Lute Olson said Monday that his Arizona Wildcats deserve to be ranked at the top of The Associated Press college basketball poll, but it won't be easy to stay there. "I think given the schedule that we've played and the impressive manner in which we've won that it's probably deserving at this point," Olson said of his team's No. 1 ranking — the first time the Wildcats have ever achieved that lofty position. Arizona, 9-0, moved into the top spot even though runner-up Kentucky received more first-place votes.

Arizona received 26 first-place votes and 1,096 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters, while Kentucky, 6-0, had 29 first-place points and 1,088 points.

The teams switched places in the poll after Arizona won its last two games — 77-63 over Arkansas-Little Rock and 110-71 over Washington.

Kentucky had to struggle to beat North Carolina-Charlotte 54-81 in the championship game of the Kentucky Invitational, after defeating Miami, Ohio, 85-71 in the opening round of the tournament.

"I truly believe there are a lot of teams that could be seriously considered for the top spot," said Kentucky coach John Calipari.

Unbeaten BSU hosts No. 5 Wyoming

BOISE (AP) — Wyoming, although 6-0 and ranked fifth nationally, will be hard-pressed to avoid an ambush in tonight's game at Boise State, according to Cowboy Coach Henry Dees.

The Western Athletic Conference Cowboys, who dispatched Nebraska, 87-58 with an outstanding second half of play Saturday, can't afford to take Boise State, which is 6-0 itself after Saturday's 89-49 rout of Gonzaga, lightly, he said.

"Boise State will be tough," Dees stated after the Nebraska game. "It'll be an ambush. Custer couldn't make it up there."

Dees is well-known for his hyperbole. He worried about Denver of the NAIA, undermanned Colorado, and outgunned Texas Tech. Each time the Cowboys won easily.

What concerns Dees most about tonight's game against the Broncos of the Big Sky Conference is his team's inability recently to put two good halves together.

Against Nebraska the Cowboys trailed 9-3 early and held a slight 38-34 halftime lead before blowing the Cornhuskers out in the second half.

"I worry about a team that plays on and off basketball," Dees said afterwards. "I am going to work on that until the last day of the season."

ISU names two finalists for head grid coaching job

POCATELLO (AP) — Two veteran Oregon coaches were named Monday as finalists for the vacant head coaching job at Idaho State University.

Athletic Director Tom Jewell said on-campus interviews would be conducted Tuesday and he hopes to name a new coach by the end of the week.

The finalists are Garth Hall, of former coordinator at Oregon State University, and Bill Maskill, linebackers coach at the University of Oregon.

Jim Koetter was fired after the previous season. Idaho State had a 3-7-1 mark, including an embarrassing 63-0 loss to Montana. Koetter was 8-4 in 1983, his first year, but the Bengals posted losing records the last three years.

Overall, Koetter was 24-31-1 in Koetter's five years.

Hall is an assistant under Dave Kragthorpe, Koetter's predecessor at ISU.

Sputtering Dallas dumps Rams from playoffs

By KEN PETERS
The Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Roger Ruzeck kicked a team-record five field goals and the Dallas defense slowed Charles White and the rejuvenated Rams Monday night as the Cowboys ended a four-game losing skid with a 29-14 victory that knocked Los Angeles out of the playoffs.

The loss snapped a winning streak by the Rams, who had won five straight after getting off to a 1-7 start.

The Cowboys, also 6-8, used a versatile, balanced offense and an opportunistic defense to beat the Rams.

Ruzeck, who broke the club record he has shared with three other kickers, hit all five of his field goal attempts — from 24, 42, 44, 47 and 37 yards. His fifth gave the Cowboys a 29-14 lead with five minutes to play.

The Rams cut the deficit to eight points on reserve Steve Dila's 16-yard touchdown pass to Kevin House with 2:38 remaining, then recovered an on-side kick. But Dallas' Michael Downs intercepted a Dila pass and the Cowboys ran out the clock.

Dallas' defense, led by end Jim Jeffcoat and tackle Randy White, limited White, the NFL's leading rusher, to 86 yards on 26 carries, sent quarterback Jim Everett to the sidelines with a sprained ankle in the final period, and turned three

Los Angeles turnovers into 13 points.

Steve Pelluer, getting the nod over the veteran Danny White, completed 15 of 30 passes for 183 yards, including a 27-yard touchdown throw to Doug Coe that gave Dallas a 26-7 lead midway through the third quarter.

Dallas' fourth touchdown came on a 1-yard run by Harschel Walker to climax an 80-yard march on the Cowboys' first possession of the game.

Walker finished with 108 yards rushing on 23 carries, and 54 yards on six receptions.

White, who still holds a 187-yard lead over his former Rams teammate, Eric Dickerson of the Indianapolis Colts, in the NFL rushing race, scored the first Los Angeles touchdown on an 8-yard run in the opening quarter.

Everett, under pressure from the Dallas rush much of the game, scored on a 1-yard bootleg in the third quarter for the Rams' other points.

Everett completed 12 of 24 passes for 189 yards, going with two interceptions, before being out.

The Rams missed a scoring opportunity earlier in the final quarter when Mickey Suttom partially blocked a Dallas punt to give Los Angeles the ball at the Dallas 33.

But Dila was unable to move the Rams and Mike Lanford missed a 47-yard field goal attempt.

Tom Dorsett, who gained 52 yards on 12 carries for the Cowboys, became the fourth runner in NFL history to top 12,000 career yards.

Dorsett came into the game 16 yards shy of the plateau, which also has been reached by Walter Payton, Jim Brown and Franco Harris.

The Cowboys opened up some breathing room with 10 points in the third quarter, building the lead to 26-7.

Ruzeck kicked a 47-yarder to cap a Cowboys march with the second-half kickoff, then Coe caught the touchdown pass from Pelluer midway through the period.

That touchdown came after Everett Suttom intercepted an Everett pass at the Rams' 39-yard line.

The Cowboys had capitalized on a pair of earlier turnovers — a fumble by White and an interception of Everett — for six points in the first half.

White, who had tied the game at 7-7 on an 8-yard touchdown run in the first quarter, bobbled the ball away at the Los Angeles 26-yard line, with Jeff Rohrer coming up with the loose ball.

Ruzeck kicked his 24-yarder with 22 seconds left in the period to put the Cowboys in front 10-7, and Dallas led the rest of the way.

Ruzeck's third field goal, a 44-yarder with six seconds left, was a sure three points — which would have pulled Los Angeles to within 13-10 — in order to try for seven.

Lanford kicked a 45-yard field goal with 1:16 left in the half, but the Cowboys were offside and the Rams took the penalty, wiping out the field goal.

Two plays later, Jesse Penn intercepted Everett at the Dallas 16 and returned it 21 yards. Pelluer then marched the Cowboys to the Ruzeck field goal for a 9-point lead.

Later in the game, Penn went out with a fractured ankle.

Idaho State romps past Western State

POCATELLO (AP) — Forward Chase Brown scored 19 points to lead the Idaho State University Bengals to a 123-77 non-conference basketball victory over Western State of Colorado Monday night.

Idaho State grabbed an 18-2 lead as the Mountaineers committed 16 fouls in the first two minutes.

Jim Rhodes scored 14 of his 18 points in the first half as the Bengals hit 72 percent to take a 61-33 halftime lead.

ISU, of the Big Sky Conference, shot 69 percent for the game and improved its record to 4-3.

Top 20: Third-rated Panthers come back to tip Akron Zips

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Sean Miller scored 10 of his 18 points in the second half and Bobby Martin snipped a late tie with two foul shots as No. 3 Pittsburgh pulled from an 11-point second-half deficit to defeat Akron 67-63 Monday night.

Pittsburgh led 4-3 by 11 in the third time at 4-3, led by 14:47 remaining. Pittsburgh pulled within 46-45 on a baseline jumper by Demetrius Gore with 11:11 left.

Akron pushed the lead back to 51-47 on an inside basket by Shawn Roberts with 8:59 to go, but Pittsburgh, 6-0, ran off 11 straight points to take a 58-51 lead with 5:13 remaining. Charles Smith scored six of his 12 points during the Pittsburgh surge.

College basketball

Rhodes scored seven points in overtime Monday night to lead No. 1 Iowa State to a 76-66 victory over Eastern Illinois.

Rhodes, a senior center who set a school scoring mark with 54 points in the Cyclones' overtime victory over Iowa Saturday, had been held to just two points in the second half of regulation play.

The Panthers' Tony Hemphill sent the game into overtime with a desperation, turn-around 3-pointer with five seconds to play that tied the score 64-64, Eastern Illinois, 5-2, never led in overtime.

Forward Jeff Grayler led Iowa State, 9-1, with 21 points, while Rhodes had 19. Elbert Robinson, 13, and Gary Thompson, 11.

The Panthers led 41-44 with 11 minutes to play but Grayler led the Cyclones' comeback through his rebounding and defense.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Virginia's football team has been preparing for several years to play Brigham Young without knowing it.

That's because Virginia, which meets BYU Tuesday night in the All-American Bowl, borrowed offensive ideas from the Cougars, known for their wide-open play.

"We practiced against ourselves in preparing for BYU," Virginia Coach George Welsh said Monday. "We wish we had the Cougars to train their only other postseason trip ever when they defeated Purdue in the 1964 Peach Bowl, said, "We adopted some concepts from BYU. They have been a pioneer in the passing game, and we wanted to open things up."

Virginia, 7-4, was runner-up to Clemson in the Atlantic Coast Conference, while the Cougars, 9-3, finished second to Wyoming in the Western Athletic Conference.

BYU Coach LaVell Edwards, taking the Cougars to a bowl game for the 12th straight year, noted that his team started 3-3 before closing with six victories.

"It has been one of the most satisfying years I've had," he said.

Virginia lost four of its first seven games before winning the final three.

College football

"A bowl game was a little beyond our expectations," Welsh said.

David Futrell, BYU nose guard, outlined what he wants the Cougars defense to accomplish against Virginia and its quarterback, Scott Secules.

"If we get 90 or three takeaways, under a few sacks and a couple interceptions, it will be good defense," he said.

"I can see where there will be plenty of points scored with our offense and theirs. Secules has a great release and doesn't get sacked a lot."

Secules said WAC teams "can go on pass defense. I hope I can do a good job of reading and find situations we can take advantage of. Our team is upbeat."

Welsh said that Secules, an All-ACC player, "has great confidence and is a smart quarterback."

BYUs' passing, led by Sean Cowie, "is tactically difficult to handle," Welsh said. "They do a good job against the blitz and will be a test for our defense."

"The underrated thing about BYU is their defense."

In the nightcap, Oakley switched from man-to-man to zone defense and erased a 17-12 first half deficit by outscoring Valley 18-6 in the second period.

Jeff Nelson had 17 points and 10 rebounds for the Hornets, while Chuck Jones contributed 10 points and nine boards.

Dietrich and Valley will play for the consolation title Wednesday at 6:15 p.m. in the Oakley High gym.

"The win avenged a loss by the Pilots to the Tigers earlier this season.

The game was close throughout until the Pilots began hitting their free throw in the last quarter and controlling the boards. Tim Willis and Shan Phelps ended the game with eight rebounds apiece, while Dana Crandall had seven.

The Mountain Home junior varsity prevailed in the preliminary, 76-44.
