Officials fear plunge Stability in dollar is sought

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The Reagan administration said today, as the dollar plunged around the world, that it wants to see stability in the U.S. currency and that a further decline would be counterproductive.

The United States wants to see stability in the dollar, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. "We feel strongly that any further decline or excessive fluctuation could be counterproductive."

The spokesman made the statement as President Reagan began a week-long California vacation and the dollar hit record lows in Tokyo and plunged against the West German, Swiss and Dutch currencies.

The spokesman refused to comment on the post-Christmas drop on the New York Stock Exchange.

Asked if the recent exchange-rate stability agreement among the United States and its major economic allies has had any effect, Fitzwater said, "I won't make any judgments about it... This is our position."

His statement was similar to one issued last Tuesday by the Group of Seven industrial democracies — the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Canada — that the dollar had fallen enough.

In that statement, the group declared that "a further decline of the dollar could be counterproductive by damaging growth prospects in the world economy."

Fitzwater said the United States is in consultation with its major economic partners "on a daily basis" but he would not comment on whether the group's statement specifically had been discussed.

"At another point, he said, 'I think it's fair to say that all of our statements and actions are coordinated to a degree. But I can't be specific about how formal that process is.'"

Asked whether the United States was prepared to intervene to break the dollar's fall, he said, "There are any number of consultations that go on continually in the financial world but we don't discuss specific actions."

He declined to say what the administration attributed the decline of the stock market and the dollar. "We don't do psychoanalysis," he said.

Asked if the United States has determined that a "floor" had been reached in the fall of the dollar, he said, "I wouldn't try to interpret that" and said he'd stick with the language of his statement.

The spokesman said the president had not spoken recently with Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, but had met with him at the White House last week for "general discussion" on the economy.

Last week's statement by the so-called "G-7" nations was widely viewed as a signal that central banks, including the Federal Reserve, would intervene in currency markets to keep the dollar from dipping much below its current levels. Intervention is the direct buying and selling of a currency by a central bank.

However, despite such apparent recent intervention, the dollar has continued to slide in recent days. Overall, the dollar is now worth only about half of its 1985 value against the West German mark and the Japanese yen.

A declining dollar makes foreign goods more expensive in the United States but U.S. products more competitive abroad.

That can help ease the U.S. trade deficit. But too sharp a decline in the dollar can rekindle inflation and drive foreign investors away from Treasury bills and other dollar-denominated U.S. securities — eventually forcing up interest rates.

Scandal chosen top story

By The Associated Press

The Iran-Contra hearings, which shook an administration and — briefly — made Oliver North a household name, ranked as the top news story of 1987 in a year-end poll of Associated Press member newspaper editors and broadcasters.

The year brought news as diverse as a summit conference, terrible airplane crashes, troubles in the Persian Gulf, scandals in politics and TV evangelism, two futile efforts to fill a Supreme Court vacancy, a stock market crash and the rescue of a little girl from an abandoned well.

The stock market crash came in a close second to the Iran-Contra hearings in the voting on the year's top 10 stories.

Ballots were returned by 494 Associated Press newspaper editors and broadcasters who ranked the year's headline events from one through 10. A first-place vote counted 10 points, a 10th-place vote one point.

The Iran-Contra hearings received 3,573 points; the stock market crash 3,500.

The hearings ended with Lt. Col. North a momentary hero, and the man who may have masterminded the operation, CIA Director William Casey, dead.

The deaths took most of the summer and received testimony from 300 witnesses, among them Adm. John Poindexter, the former national security adviser, and Secretary of State George Shultz, who complained that North and Poindexter had deliberately kept him in the dark.

The $500 billion market collapse of Black Monday, Oct. 19, the worst market panic of modern times, seemed to catch even Wall Street experts by surprise. In retrospect, analysts noted the bull market had been slipping since it peaked in late August. Stocks prices, in fact, began falling sharply in the week preceding the crash when the government reported the nation's trade deficit had worsened, triggering worries about inflation and the dollar.

The third story on the top-10 list, with 2,923 points, was the three-day summit meeting of Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev in December.

The leaders of the two superpowers signed a treaty to ban medium-range nuclear missiles and proclaimed it a historic turning point. The two shared trumpet fanfares, artillery salutes and champagne toasts, and wound up calling each other "Ron" and "Mikhail." Most liberals praised the treaty, many of the president's fellow conservatives denounced it.

Fourth, with 1,870 points, was the phase in Persian Gulf violence.

Extent of wilderness questioned

The Associated Press

BOISE — Wilderness designation is not as important as many environmentalists contend in providing adequate habitat for fish and wildlife, says the head of the U.S. Forest Service's Intermountain Region.

"There's a good deal of confusion, I think, between what constitutes good wildlife habitat and such things as wilderness," Stan Tixier said. "There are a few species of wildlife that really require a wilderness-type habitat, but not many."

But although the Forest Service or other agencies generally can improve habitat — even for such solitary animals as grizzly bears — through careful management, Tixier said, "It's preposterous to say that the Forest Service is against wilderness."

Tixier made his comments in an interview with the Idaho Statesman. He said the Forest Service took the lead in setting aside pristine public land in the 1920s, 40 years before Congress passed the Wilderness Act. The 10-year national forest management plans now being developed continue that process with recommendations on which lands should be preserved as wilderness.

"Now I think nearly everybody is in favor of some wilderness," Tixier said. "The question is how much is enough wilderness. We've gone through quite a process in our forest plans to study that issue."

But despite the use of a complex rating system to evaluate the characteristics of roadless areas proposed for wilderness designation, environmental groups continued to criticize the Forest Service for its road-building activities in other forest areas, he said.

Tixier said the agency is trying to cut costs by maintaining or upgrading existing forest roads rather than building new ones. But he said there remains a need, beyond the demands of the timber industry, to build some new roads.

"I think this road issue is kind of blown out of proportion because obviously if we can't build roads to access timber sales we're not going to be able to sell timber," he said. "But the roads are used for a lot more than timber. Our road network on the forest is used by recreationists and hunters, by us for management and fire access and that type of thing."

Changes in sugar program could affect local beet growers

By MARTA CLEAVELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Any change in the existing domestic sugar program could have a substantial effect on beet growers in the Magic Valley, said Vic Jaro, plant manager for Amalgamated Sugar Co. in Twin Falls, and consequently on the entire local economic landscape.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture announcement this month that it will cut the sugar import quota by 25 percent has spurred Congress to consider changing the domestic sugar program.

"I never want to see the United States become dependent on foreign nations for sugar or anything else. Not with how productive I am, and how productive my neighbors are," said Mark Felthausen, a beet grower near Kimberly.

Sugar beets are one of the highest cash crops in the Magic Valley. Magic Valley beet production this year generated an estimated $93.7 million from the production of 2.5 million tons of beets on 102,000 acres, according to George Grant, Rupert, of the Sugar Beet Growers Association. That is 52 percent of the beets processed at Amalgamated Sugar in Twin Falls and Paul.

But a mounting flurry of attacks on the special protections sugar producers receive "are coming from Congress. Several bills have been introduced to cut the sugar loan rate and raise the import quota."

The import quota accurately reflects the sweetener needs of the country," said Allan Lipman, president of Amalgamated, based in Ogden, Utah.

But some in Congress and in the Reagan administration don't think it reflects accurately the country's foreign policy priorities. The U.S. State Department claims the quota reductions harm the economies of dependent nations — such as the Philippines and the Dominican Republic — that rely on American sugar markets.

The State Department complains about it. And, maybe even —

 • Began with the Reflagging of Kuwait Oil Tankers — they could travel under U.S. Navy escort. In May, Iraq's air force attacked the U.S. Navy's grizzly, Stark, killing 37 Americans. Iraq said it was an accident. The United States accepted the apology. Through the summer and fall, one reflagged tanker hit a mine, U.S. helicopters sank an Iranian minelayer and a speedboat, an Iranian missile hit one of the reflagged tankers, wounding its American master, and U.S. warships and commandos destroyed three Iranian oil platforms in retaliation.

• Fifth, with 1,855 points, was the drawn-out and acrimonious effort by President Reagan to appoint a replacement for retiring Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell. His first choice was Robert H. Bork, an appellate judge favored by conservatives. Bork's nomination failed in the Senate finally rejected Bork 58-42. When it was discovered that Reagan's second choice, Douglas H. Ginsburg, another appellate judge, had smoked marijuana in the 1960s and 1970s, Ginsburg asked that his nomination be withdrawn.

• Sixth, with 1,784 points, was the story that broke in March with the Bakker engaged in a motel room, back in 1980 with a church secretary, Jessica Hahn, then 21, and allegedly paid her hush money to keep the affair quiet.

• In seventh place, 1,700 points, were two political debacles. Ex-Sen. Mark Hatfield's resignation after press disclosures of his relationship with a Miami model, Donna Rice. Reporters had spotted them at a Washington town house. Another candidate, Sen. Joseph Biden, also withdrew from the race for the Democratic nomination after he was found to have lifted material from other politicians for his campaign speeches. In December, Hart re-entered the race, saying, "Let the people decide." Eighth, 1,285 points, was the spread of the AIDS virus. Between 1981 and the end of 1986, the federal government had received reports of some 30,000 cases of AIDS. That figure grew by 20,000 during the past year alone. The year also recorded 11,900 AIDS deaths. AS year's end no cure had been found for AIDS. But treatment improved with the government's approval of the drug AZT, which retards the virus although it is expensive and has dangerous side effects that limit its use. Other experimental agents showed promise. Doctors also began the first human trials of vaccines to prevent further spread of AIDS.

Ninth, 1,185 points, were airplane crashes in Detroit and Denver, both on takeoff. In Detroit, Northwest Airlines Flight 255 crashed Aug. 16 and tumbled in a fireball onto a highway interchange, killing 156 people; two of them motorists. A 4-year-old girl, Cecelia Cichan, was the only passenger to survive. In Denver, Nov. 15, Continental Airlines Flight 1713 flipped over and broke into three pieces when a wing tip scraped the runway. Rescue of some victims took longer than six hours; 28 of the 82 on board were killed.

In 10th place, with 874 points, was the story that captured the heart of the nation in October — the rescue of 19-month-old Jessica McClure from an abandoned well in Midland, Tex. It took rescuers 68 hours to drill through solid rock to reach the top. When she was released, healthy, a month later from the hospital, her father spoke for thousands of Americans whose contributions paid Jessica's $30,000 hospital bills: "By the grace of God and some heroic men, we have our baby back."

source's against the cost of fighting backcountry blazes.

He said the Forest Service plans to conduct a "major agency review" of the Deadwood fire. But, "I'm presuming, for instance, that we're going to find that a lot of resources enhancement has actually taken place. We probably created a lot of elk habitat as a result of the burn."

 tially Congress will impose domestic production quotas," Lipman said. "But that would do more harm than it would do good there."

In reaction to the import reduction, Congress passed and President Reagan signed an emergency bill over the weekend approving special added quotas for the Philippines and the Caribbean nations to restore their quotas to the 1983-84 level for one year. To avoid creating a surplus here, however, the additional sugar would be refined, then exported at a reduced price to compete on the world market.

"If I really believed the people of those Third World countries were going to be better off from selling to the U.S., then I could go along with it," Feldhusen said. "But it is the government, not the people, that benefits."

Brent Seikr, agricultural assistant to U.S. Rep. Richard Stalling, D-Idaho, noted that Japan imports 90 percent of its sugar from Cuba.

The administration should encourage Japan to buy its sugar from the Dominican Republic if it is so worried about their economy," he said.

The government controls the volume and the price of sugar in the United States. Supply is limited to the amount of demand by restricting imports, so there is no excess. This also keeps prices at or above the rate set by the government. The current loan rate for beet sugar is about 21 cents a pound, the U.S. market price is 23 cents.

"Obviously, this is a program for the American farmer," Lipman said. "But the sugar program is one of the few farm programs that runs at no cost to the government."

Searle predicted there will be no changes in the sugar program in 1989, but didn't rule them out in the near future.

A new bill in Congress would cut the loan rate over a four-year period from its current level of 18 cents a pound to 12 cents. Import quotas would be increased until they reached the 1983-84 level.

The bill has 25 co-sponsors so far in the House, said Searle.

"We'd have to see 200 signatures on it to move that bill out of committee," he said. "You'd be talking about making a fundamental change in the Farm Act, and Congress doesn't want to open that up again."

However, the House Sugar, Rice and Cotton Subcommittee chair, Rep. Jerry Hucksby, D-La., has been talking to sugar industry officials about the possibility of imposing some domestic production restraints to protect the program from the potential of being eliminated altogether, Searle said.

Three or four meetings have been held in Washington to discuss solutions, Lipman said.

"We've skirted the domestic quota issue and said, 'maybe we need it if this and this and this don't work.' It's a last resort alternative," Lipman said. "My personal opinion is that the sugar act won't be changed until it comes up for automatic renewal in 1990. Plenty can happen between now and then."

"By all accounts, it will depend on who is in the White House in '89," Searle said.

Domestic sugar production restrictions have been imposed in the past. Several times between 1934 and 1974, production and acreage allotments were utilized, according to LUGA Angelo, a sugar analyst at USDA.

If price supports were dropped and import quotas lifted, foreign sugar would flood the United States and the price of sugar would plummet from the current 23 cent a pound to the world market price of 8 cents, Angelo said.

Little Salmon to be closed for fishing

BOISE (AP) — Steelhead fishing on a stretch of the Little Salmon River near New Meadows will be closed for at least 120 days following a semi-truck wreck that spilled hundreds of gallons of a toxic fungicide into the stream on Dec. 19, game officials say.

An emergency closure is in effect from the confluence of the Little Salmon with the Main Salmon River up to the Smoky Boulder Road on U.S. 96, said Deputy Pittman, salmon and steelhead fisheries expert for the Idaho Fish and Game Department.

The closure is in effect for 120 days unless it is lifted before that time, Pittman said. The whitefish season also is closed in that area.

About 500 gallons of Vitavax 200 poured into the water after a truck owned by Southern Refrigerated Transport of Murfreesboro, Ark., overturned. The fungicide, which is used to treat seed for disease or mold, turned the water a bright magenta.

The spill is believed to have produced a complete fish kill near the site of the wreck and destroyed thousands of other fish to the confluence with the Main Salmon.

Temblors hit Cascade area

CASCADE (AP) — Two earthquakes reportedly rumbled through parts of Cascade early Sunday, but no damage or injuries were reported and the U.S. Geological Survey could not verify the reports.

"It sounded like a locomotive, a roar, and it felt like a rumbling vibration," said Cynthia Coash, who lives in the Arrowhead Mobile Home Park on the south edge of the western Idaho mountain community.

The apparent quakes occurred at 2:02 a.m. and at 4:16 a.m. MST Sunday, she said. "The second tremor was not as powerful as the first."

Frank Baldwin, a physical science technician at the USGS Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., said Monday there were no seismographic readings to corroborate the reports. But that does not mean the temblors did not occur, he said.

PUC grants Bell time-of-day extension

BOISE (AP) — Mountain Bell has won a third delay in an Idaho Public Utilities Commission order to offer free time-of-day telephone service through its directory assistance operators.

The PUC agreed on Monday to set back the deadline for implementation of its order from Tuesday to next Monday. Mountain Bell originally had until Nov. 15 to begin the service, but has requested postponements so it could ask for a waiver from the U.S. Department of Justice.

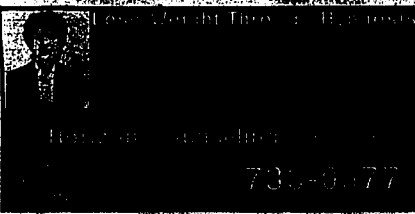

Mountain Bell has said to comply with the commission's order, it would have to risk violation of a federal court order that broke up the old nationwide Bell telephone system.

The company has asked U.S. District Judge Harold Green — who presided over the Bell divestiture — for a waiver from a portion of his 1984 decision so it can comply with the PUC order.

The commission ordered Mountain Bell to provide time-of-day information service through directory assistance operators throughout its Idaho service area.

Mountain Bell provides time, weather and temperature service in portions of its service area that are not competitive.

The PUC granted two previous delays in implementing its order, and said once again Monday that Mountain Bell needs time to allow the Justice Department to process its request for a waiver.

Monitors of rights a lonely, brave few

The Watch Committees on the Americas, Asia and the Helsinki Accord have been doing excellent work keeping track of the state of human rights in countries around the world. Their periodic reports have been melancholy catalogs of mistreatment of human beings by other human beings, leavened too seldom by occasional reports of progress.

Now another associated committee, the Human Rights Watch, has taken a look at what has been happening to the people who monitor human rights in their countries. The account, though not unexpected, is appalling.

Ten human rights monitors have been murdered in the past year, five of them in Colombia, two in El Salvador. Two more have disappeared. Hundreds more — hundreds! — in the 39 countries surveyed have been tortured, beaten, jailed, forbidden to practice law and harassed in many other ways.

Human Rights Watch says its list is not "an index of repressiveness. Some countries — Saudi Arabia and North Korea are examples — are so repressive that, as far as we know, no one is able to engage in any human rights monitoring; or if anyone does this, no information about their efforts has reached their country's borders."

Chile, Czechoslovakia, South Africa and the Soviet Union figure importantly in the survey because, "Human Rights Watch says, these are countries "in which there are ongoing struggles between important human rights movements and repressive governments."

It might be added that in these countries there is some hope that the sufferings of the present are a prelude to more humane societies in the future.

In them and in all the other countries where people abuse one another in the name of religion, ideology, power or greed, the person who says "It must not be this way," is lonely, frightened and very brave.

Babies to bananas, 1987 quite a year

BOSTON — Every year, I like to close out my calendar with a good solid confession of the mistakes, misjudgments and misstatements that found their way into this space over the past 12 months.

I have found this annual purge good for the soul, rather like a dip into icy reality.

This year, however, I considered passing up the chance. What were my piddling errors compared to the wrong Wall Street calls of Oct. 19? What modest errors of my judgment could compete with the folks who bet the farm on sales of an Ollie North T-shirt? It was not I who called Robert Bork a shoe-in. Or Joe Biden an original.

Besides, there's been a bumper crop of meaculpa this year, not all of them entirely wholehearted. Jimmy Bakker admitted that he went astray, but said it was Jessica's fault. Gary Hart did a limited, qualified, temporary hangout on the A word, but blamed the media. Michael Deaver tried to excuse his lying on account of his drinking. And nearly everybody involved in the Iran-contra scandal tried to cover the means with the ends.

Nevertheless, out of respect for truth and tradition, I will go ahead with my rite of passage. I give you in escalating order, a number of corrections, elaborations and updates for 1987.

To begin on a gium note, last Aug. 2001 gave an Equal Rites Award to the Massachusetts judge who lectured battered wife Pamela Dunn for waiting his time bringing complaints against her husband to court. Dunn, I noted, was later found dead, and her husband was awaiting trial. In fact, the husband had been convicted of her murder before the column ever appeared.

That mistake went almost unnoticed. But when I used the expression "recovered" alcoholic in recent column, the mail came in. There are no recoveries, although I wrote my correspondents. Once an alcoholic, always an alcoholic. Some described themselves as non-drinking alcoholics. Others said they were, and always would be, "recovering." This was more than a matter of semantics and I stand corrected.

So too in the mysterious case of Gary Hart. Last spring, when Gary was complaining about character assassination, I suggested that he had committed "character suicide." Well, hush my mouth and call him Lazarus: Gary rides again.

Speaking of second acts, I was the one who thought the custody case of Baby M couldn't get any more complicated. How many parents could claim one kid? What has happened since the surrogate mom left, the New Jersey courthouse?

Mary Beth Whitehead got pregnant, divorced and remarried (in that order) to a fellow named Gould. She still wants visitation rights. And now her ex-husband, Richard, says he should have them too. In the divorce proceeding, I specifically testified that I wished to reserve my right to visit with Sara-Melissa. Baby M? If all those families get to visit her, the M is for mobile.

On to M for miniskirt. At first horrified glance at the new abbreviated fashion, I laid down Goodman's law: Anyone who wears a fashion the first time around is too old to wear it in revivification. Wrong, exclaimed many women in my peer group. Many of them now take their knees out in public at night. "The legs," said one, "are the last thing to go." Down goes Goodman's Law.

Speaking of legs and other bodily parts, when I called this the year of the bimbo, I used the word as a synonym for airhead, or bubblehead, if you prefer. The linguists said (and not gently) that bimbo had a much more serious connotation. The word that came from the Italian, Okamy, for baby, later came to mean prostitute. Okay, but I take the final word from my language mentor Bill Safire. He says that bimbo now calls up "the image of one glibly attractive, bony and leggy and devoid of cunning." Perhaps we should bury the hatchet. Perhaps we should bury the whole word.

But while we are on the subject of sex, safe, and otherwise, I owe an apology to the banana growers of the world. This has been a tough year for their crop. Fawn Hall was fined for eating one in the Washington subway. But something much worse happened. Some members of the media stopped peeling bananas and started dressing them in condoms.

I admit it, I laughed at the banana dressed in a condom for a televised AIDS prevention lesson. I wrote "The only thing that an audience could have learned from this public-service vignette was not to have sex with an unprotected banana." Mes culpas. We learned more than that.

I learned something about the sense of humor in the world gone bananas. The growers association protested this misuse of their product. Writing to one television executive, they said, "The choice of a banana...constitutes arbitrary and reckless disregard for the unsavory association that will be drawn by the public and the damage to our industry that will result therefrom. The banana is an important product and deserves to be treated with respect..." Has anybody auditioned a zucchini?

Letters/ 'When Christ Returns' series reveals interesting perspectives

Critical question is personal

The Times-News feature "When Christ Returns" has revealed several interesting perspectives regarding a yet-to-come event. I like the idea of posing this question during the time when so many are involved in acknowledging His birth.

There is such a distinct emphasis placed on the birth of Jesus Christ and yet this portion of his existence is but a moment in comparison to what the Bible says about Him. It was when Jesus Christ became a man that He really made an impact on mankind.

Yet it seems many don't give Him much consideration beyond the few weeks in December when we celebrate His birth. In fact, you don't have to go very far in most areas of our country today to find those who are in fervent opposition to Jesus Christ and what he stands for.

It's the "grown-up" Jesus who made some very exclusive claims to who He was and why He'd come to earth. Following on the heels of John the Baptist, Jesus Christ came not only preaching repentance for sins (willful disobedience to God's law) but He also claimed to be the son of God. He knew His life on earth would fulfil a very special purpose.

According to God's law, sin requires a blood sacrifice. In Old Testament times that blood was provided by the sacrifice of bulls, lambs, goats, or birds. Jesus came proclaiming to be the "Lamb of God" whose blood would, once and for all, atone for the sins of mankind. Scripture tells us that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God, therefore, we all need a savior.

At this point, there is an option afforded each of us as human beings. Once the truth of the gospel of Jesus Christ has been understood, that individual has a decision to make. Is that person going to accept Jesus Christ as Savior acknowledging Him as such or is that person going to believe in or look for "another christ," looking toward someone or something else for ultimate salvation?

Jesus did not come with the intention of sharing His position as Savior with anyone else. None other than I know of has shed blood to die and then been raised up from the dead to substantiate His claim. Christ's claims were and still are very exclusive. In John 1:12 and 13 Jesus says "But as many as received Him, He gave the right to become Children of God, even to those who believe in His Name, who were not born of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."

Many made a decision about Jesus Christ back in the time when He ministered on earth...they rejected His claim to Deity and nailed Him to a cross. Some, however, did believe. They experienced the "miracle" of inner and eternal salvation available only to those who decide to accept Him as Savior.

The decision isn't so much what one does with the baby Jesus...that non-threatening little life born in such humble circumstances. The critical question comes when you ask yourself, "What have I done...what am I doing with this Jesus, who scripture says is, at this moment, at the right hand of God the Father making intercession on behalf of me?"

deficit, which is a detrence to the workers of this country.

In addition, why are we not collecting money for our services in the Persian Gulf? Here we are protecting the oil producing nations in the gulf, and giving it free-of-charge to nations that won't even let us set foot on their land. We import about five percent, or less, of that oil, yet we are spending millions of dollars of the taxpayers' money protecting nations that'll spit in our face when it's all over. And you can bet your last buck, that this will happen. Perhaps the Reagan administration figures we better protect Japanese oil so that we can borrow more money from them, which already has the country obligated to them. Next thing will be selling Alaskan oil, cheap to the Japanese, to pay off our debt. And don't be surprised if it don't happen by that bunch in confusion if they D.C. All they worry about is how they can fleece the American people out of some more wage increases. And it's as simple as that!

otherwise we would not attend schools or write letters or go to libraries. When we leave ourselves open to this destructive vice, our acquired knowledge of such leads to moral decadence. The levels of eroticizing that pornography will stoop to will never stop until they reach the bottom of the pit of hell.

Is cannibalism next — we already have torture murders.

They say it's too expensive to prosecute pornography?

In just three years researchers said we will be spending $3.5 billion a year for AIDS patients. I am in sympathy for the innocent victims of this epidemic, yet I think of those precious dollars that are being expended for what Prof. O.W. Socarides of Albert Einstein College of Medicine said is a "learned, acquired behavior."

How many tax dollars are spent on investigations of 87 percent of the child molesters of girls who admitted trying out sexual behavior modeled by pornography?

How much time is spent by the vice squads who report that 77 percent of those crimes were with boys?

Why must the FBI track down 29 serial murderers who revealed that pornography influenced their thinking and behavior?

Who will be the next victim when 10 out of 18 rapist confessed that pornography had influenced them?

Do we think we can escape the consequences or immorality? Past and present history is proving otherwise.

small step and try to help. I have "adopted" two causes that have touched my heart greatly.

One is encouraging adults to further their education. Whether this means taking college level courses, getting their GED, or learning how to read is an adult.

I am a part-time volunteer tutor with the CSI Literacy/Basic Skills Program. This service is free to all adults. One adult student and one tutor meet two hours per week for a total of 50 hours.

If you are interested, they train volunteers free of cost. When CSI re-opens in January call 733-9564, ext. 354 (Ruth Scott, VISTA Volunteer), or talk to Bruce or Roxine.

CSI also has adult GED classes taught by professionals. I believe the entire cost of the GED program is still under $50.

The other cause is preventing homeless neighborhood cats and dogs. Spays and neuters are the only answer.

Because the costs are lower, I encourage people to take their pets to a "same day spay" clinic, like I do.

Like the "human" centers, same day surgery is lower in cost and allows the patient to heal more quickly at home surrounded by loved ones. If it is safe enough for me, my spouse and kids, I figure it just might be OK for my pet, too. To my knowledge, only two local vets currently offer this service.

Another vet, who shall remain nameless, charges $40 for a cat (female) spay. The "same day surgery" vet charges $25. Both are skilled and caring. If you have $15 to spare, what's a pet to you, I don't know. If you want a pet, ask your vet first. Since we don't have a cat shelter, some take in homeless cats.

Eug, they can't afford to keep doing it if people won't adopt them. PLEASE adopt a homeless pet. It is always nice to have someone to love.

And spay or neuter your pet or homeless neighborhood cat or dog at whichever vet you prefer.

Spending nation into oblivion

Congratulations on publishing the article written by Charles LeVendocay, editorial page editor of the Casper, Wyo. Star-Tribune. The title to that piece is certainly correct: "Arms spending erodes health of nation." And anybody, in my opinion, who cannot see this, cannot see the forest for the trees.

We are spending ourselves into oblivion, and like LeVendocay said, greed has been the calling card during this administration. Military contractors are making billions of dollars and are not satisfied with the prices they bid on their government contracts, they have to fleece the taxpayers out of so-called over-runs on every project. When are the politicians who are supposed to be the managers of this country make these contractors live up to the price they bid on, and nothing more?

It is a sad fact that in the Reagan administration there has been the biggest turn-over of cabinet members since the crooked Harding administration and the Teapot Dome incident. In fact, at last count it was over 100 and it looks like it's not over yet. It seems ethical standards don't mean a helluva lot to these people, leaving their jobs in disgrace or under indictment seems the criteria these people work on these days.

The Reagan administration brings that the economy and employment is the highest in many years; the only thing they don't say is in which countries. Our foreign policy is a diabolic disaster, along with the trade

Pornography is not protected

No one is so blind as they who don't want to see, headlines shout, and attorneys hedge behind fancy rhetoric, money is not available, no one will go to war against pornography!

Pornography is not protected by the First Amendment, contrary to what Attorney Gordon Nielsen said. The U.S. is in the middle of a push to restrict the sale of pornography because of voyeurism...check the word in your dictionary, it is the traveling act of pornography. The main purpose of pornography is to bring sexual arousal. Little by little the pornographic has to become more daring, once a voyeur becomes jaded, new situations must be eroticized so the pornographer can continue to make his profit. The difference between legitimate and sinful appetites is that sinful appetites are insatiable!

Pornography violates human dignity, it is not protected by the First Amendment, it is photographs, magazines, films or video tapes these materials are officially defined as illegal. Illegal to send through the mail, illegal to import from foreign countries, and where minors are involved, illegal to produce. Even those who claim pornography is harmless must at least recognize the power and influence of words and ideas,

Hart to get matching funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gary Hart's reborn campaign for the White House won approval Monday for a much-needed infusion of $100,000 in federal matching money, the first installment of what could be nearly $1 million from the U.S. Treasury.

The Federal Election Commission voted 6-0 to certify the Democratic presidential hopeful as eligible for matching funds, based on money he raised last spring before dropping out of the race the first time.

"It's great," said Hart campaign manager Sue Casey in a telephone interview from Denver. In addition to knowing the money is on the way, it means we will get on the ballot in several states.

Eligibility for matching funds is one criterion used in some states in deciding which candidates are listed on the primary ballots. In South Dakota, for one, only candidates who have qualified can be listed on that Feb. 23 ballot.

Casey said the money, due to be sent out by the Treasury on Jan. 4, would go to pay for plane tickets, telephone bills in Denver and New Hampshire and office rent.

FEC spokesman Sharon Snyder said the commission approved Hart's "threshold submission" after receiving a letter from the former Colorado senator dated Dec. 18, declaring officially he is back in the race.

In May, Hart dropped out of the battle for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination amid a "flood" of criticism about his relationship with a Miami model. He applied for matching funds after his withdrawal, but the FEC turned that request down.

On Dec. 15 Hart jumped back into the race, declaring "I don't have any money." Then he resplended for matching money, based on the funds raised in the spring.

Presidential candidates can win eligibility for federal matching funds by raising at least $5,000 in individual contributions of $250 or less in at least 20 states. Once eligible, all individual contributions up to $250 are matched dollar for dollar by money from the treasury. Those funds come from the voluntary $1 checkoff on personal income tax returns.

FEC auditors certified matchable contributions to Hart from 21 states, totaling $118,138 as the basis for the full commission vote. A candidate receives only $100,000 in matching funds from a threshold submission, with the remaining funds considered the second time the campaign files for matching money.

Bernis Schneider, a Newport Beach, Calif., attorney working for the Hart campaign, has said previously that Hart's spring campaign raised enough in matchable contributions to qualify for $940,000 in matching funds.

Judge's order blocks parental consent law

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A judge on Monday blocked California from enforcing a new law requiring women under 18 to get parental consent before obtaining an abortion.

Superior Court Judge Morton Colvin granted the injunction sought by the American Civil Liberties Union on behalf of doctors and family planning groups, who contended the law violated the pregnant girls' right to privacy.

The injunction would block enforcement of the law until a trial on its constitutionality. An immediate appeal was expected.

"In a brief ruling, Colvin said he found a 'reasonable likelihood' that would be taken unconstitutional after a trial, and also said there would be 'irreparable harm' unless enforcement of the law was blocked in the meantime.

The law, sponsored by anti-abortion groups, requires an unmarried woman under 18 who wants an abortion to first get written consent from one parent. As an alternative, she could seek approval from a judge on the grounds that she was mature enough to make the decision on her own, or that an abortion was in her best interest.

It was partly modeled on laws in 12 other states, which have been challenged in court with varying results. The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that the federal constitutional right to an abortion can accommodate a properly drawn parental consent law, but challengers in the California lawsuit contend it is barred by the explicit guarantee of privacy in the state constitution.

The state reported 30,000 abortions by unmarried girls under 18 in 1981. The state Judicial Council estimates that 10,000 to 12,000 a year would seek court hearings, which would be confidential.

City guards children as police hunt killer

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Parents locked their children in houses and school officials beefed up safety programs Monday as police hunted the person who said Satan forced him to kill two young boys.

"Police reported no new leads in the search for the killer of Frankie Barnes, 9, and Jason Wolf, 6, but Cmdr. Walter J. Clark said, "We have evidence and roads to go down, and we're not at a dead end."

Frankie's body was found Saturday in Tongue Pond in Cranston, about a half mile from his home in Providence's west end. He had been missing since Nov. 4.

Dr. Kristin Sweetney, the deputy state medical examiner, said Frankie died of stab wounds and drowning. She said he had been dead for several weeks.

"Jason disappeared Dec. 14 when his mother sent him downstairs to check the mail. His body, which authorities said was beaten and sexually abused, was found Dec. 21 near Moshogou Pond, across the railroad tracks from Frankie's home and two miles from his own house.

Clark refused to confirm or deny that police had received a note from someone claiming to be the killer. According to WJAR-TV and The Providence Journal, the note said Satan had ordered the author to kill the two boys.

"I hope you will kill me, cops, because I don't know why I killed the children," the note said. "Keep boys and kids away from me."

The note led police to the pond where Frankie was found, the Journal said.

Cranston Police Chief Kenneth Manosco said Monday there was no sign that Frankie had been sexually abused, but Clark said the different types of assaults did not necessarily indicate that the boys were killed by two different people.

"We still have other evidence," he said, declining to be more specific.

Meanwhile, parents locked their children indoors and the few people on the streets of the city's west end eyed strangers warily.

The West End Community Center's playground was empty.

Man kills two, wounds four

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark. (AP) — A man holding two revolvers killed two people, wounded four and briefly took a hostage in a 45-minute crime spree Monday, and officers later found six more bodies at his house, authorities said.

R. Gene Simmons, Sr., 47, of nearby Dover, surrendered to the Russellville police chief at the office of a trucking company where he had once been employed, police said.

Before the six bodies were found, Police Chief Herb Johnston said he would file information charging Simmons with two counts of capital murder and four counts of attempted capital murder. A bond hearing was set for Tuesday before a Pope County Circuit Court.

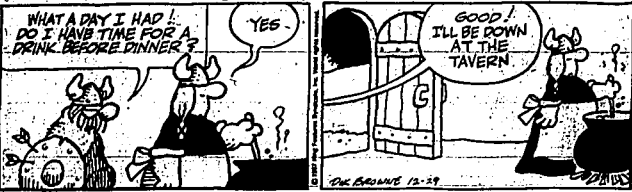

Meanwhile, authorities hunted for and arrested Simmons' home for additional victims. Pope County Sheriff Jim Bollen said five of the six victims found at the house were members of Simmons' immediate family. Of the five relatives, two were males and three were females; Bollen said, but no other information was available.

DON'T MILK THAT COW!
If you don't own the cow, don't milk it. That's not a Chinese proverb, either. It's a Texas law.

Q. Who are those people who won't let women eat eggs in the belief that eggs make women too sexy?
A. Three groups in South Africa: the Tembo, the Fingo and the Nguni. Oldtimers among them still claim a woman who eats eggs becomes so eager for romance she chases any man in sight. If this interests you, sir, I believe the Agriculture Department offers booklets on how to raise chickens.

Client writes: "I contend a man won't make sacrifices for a woman he can't trust." Interesting—but our Love and War man doesn't agree. It's not trust but hope that inspires sacrifice, says he. Take Samson. He never did trust Delilah, yet he gave up his hair, strength and eyesight for her.

HEISMAN

Contrary to previous report, Paul Hornung of Notre Dame was not the only football player to win the Heisman Trophy the same year his team had a losing season. Am now told Jay Berwanger, University of Chicago team couldn't claim a winning season, either, when he became the first Heisman winner in 1935.

You know that writer's cramp you get in your hand after addressing too many Christmas cards? There's a technical name for it. "Graphospasm."

SLEEPING CROPS

In 1936, a farmer in Japan lodged

a complaint with the electric authority there for installing a bright light over a road next to his field. Claimed it kept his crops awake at night and they needed their sleep.

U.S. newspapers nationwide ran the story in high humor, implying the farmer was some sort of a pagan oddball, and everybody laughed. Though translation might've messed up what the farmer meant, it's clear now he was right. We know more about it today, maybe almost as much as he knew then.

Judge rules Gooding landfill contract void

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — The contract for operating the Gooding County landfill has been declared void by Fifth District Judge Phillip Becker.

In a memorandum decision issued recently, Becker ruled the process used to award a three-year contract to Cecil Miles and Fred Willard was improper.

The entire procedure failed to conform to Idaho Code, Becker said. He said the Gooding County Board of Commissioners could not accept any of the bids offered.

Becker's decision came as the result of a court challenge to the Miles-Willard contract filed earlier this year by Vern Mason. Mason is a long-time operator of the Gooding landfill facility, and an unsuccessful bidder for the three-year contract awarded last fall.

In introducing his decision, Becker said, "It is amazing that a relatively simple matter such as this could produce so many issues of concern. For this court to address and resolve all of the issues involved would be comparable to an adjudication of all the rights of the water users on the Snake River. I will therefore confine this decision to a minority of the controlling issues."

He told the commissioners that a bid process was not necessary for awarding a "service contract" to operate the landfill. But he said if the county decided to use a bid system it had to follow state law.

Investigative Becker printed in the process included:

- The notices of bid found in the Gooding County Leader contained specifications and instructions that were different from the specifications approved by the county commission. Becker said this made it so bidders were not on an equal footing because they were using different specifications.
- The bids were opened without allowing two weeks between the published notice of bid and the opening as required by state law.
- The accepted bid is void because it did not follow the bid specifications adopted by the Commission.

Mason had asked that the existing contract be voided and then a contract awarded to him, or whatever remedy the court decided was proper.

Becker said a contract cannot be awarded to Mason either, because the entire process was in violation of Idaho Code and no bids submitted under that irregular process could be accepted.

He returned the matter to the commissioners and mandated that they "enter into a contract for the operating of the Gooding County landfill, in the manner prescribed by law."

County clerk John Myers said Monday that Willard and Miles are continuing to operate the landfill, pending legal advice from the county's attorney Lynn Nelson. He said the commission will discuss the matter at a special meeting before the end of the year.

Motions want suit dropped, new judge

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The judge assigned to rule on a lawsuit seeking to close the Front Page Book Store is in the process of being disqualified and an attorney for one of the defendants has asked for dismissal of the suit.

The motions to disqualify 6th District Judge Daniel Meehl and dismiss the suit were filed in 6th District Court last week.

The lawsuit against the Front Page was filed by Determined Citizens Against Pornography, who allege the store is violating state law by selling pornographic materials.

R. Keith Roark, who is defending the Front Page, its employees and the registered agent of its corporation, asked to disqualify Meehl. Roark, who could not be reached yesterday, is also defending an employee of the Front Page in a criminal case in Pocatello.

Meehl is on vacation and could not sign the disqualification order, which isn't official until he does. However, it appears 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt will be assigned the case slated for oral argument Jan. 12.

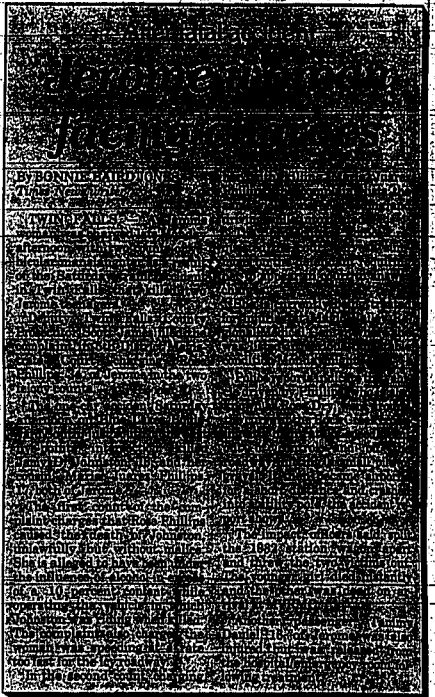

Under Idaho law, neither attorneys or lawyers are required to specify the reasons a judge is disqualified.

In a related development, Twin Falls attorney Riley Burton has asked for the dismissal of the suit. Burton is representing the owners of the building that houses the Front Page on 1176 Blue Lakes Boulevard.

The property owners, Jay and Barbara Moyle of Elmer, are facing the confiscation of rent money from the Front Page and the closure of the property to any use for one year.

The civil lawsuit to close the book store, which the plaintiffs say is selling illegal pornography, was filed early this month. The unusual lawsuit was filed under Idaho moral restraint laws obligating private citizens to sue in close a business they believe to be a moral nuisance.

In addition to the sanctions against the Moyles, the 15 plaintiffs have asked 5th District Court to close the business down until the suit can be resolved; to decide that the magazines and videotapes in the store are pornographic and therefore illegal; to force the owners of the Front Page to turn their inventory over to the state; and to

Twin Falls County, deputies targets of suit over seizure

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two Twin Falls County residents have filed a $50,000 lawsuit against the county and three deputy sheriffs, saying the deputies were unreasonably forceful while trying to collect a judgment in April.

John W. and Juanita Evans are asking for $50,000, unspecified medical expenses, attorneys' fees and court costs in the civil lawsuit filed in 5th District Court last week.

Twin Falls County Sheriff Jim Mann declined to comment on the case, saying it had been referred to the insurer for Twin Falls County.

"That insurer, a company set up by the Idaho Association of Counties, will assign attorneys to handle the case."

Judy Felton, chairman of the Twin Falls County Board of Commissioners, said the complaint has been sent to the association's office in Boise and the association usually assigns an attorney within two weeks. Chuck Holden, president of the association, was unavailable for comment Monday.

The Evans say when the three sheriff's deputies — Harold Jensen, Gary Kaufman and Mark E. Stevens — arrived at their door April 15, they thought the judgment previously entered against them was either on appeal or they didn't owe it.

But the deputies went ahead with collection procedures, including insisting on seizing machinery, and used unnecessary physical violence against L. Juanita Evans, the suit alleges.

The Evans say the deputies were "rude, loud, vulgar, threatening and unnecessarily demanding." They also said the deputies threatened L. Juanita Evans with arrest and Jensen forcibly stopped her from using her phone and assaulted her.

The lawsuit alleges L. Juanita Evans suffered from emotional distress, chest pain, elevated blood pressure and physical pain from the assault. In addition, the Evans say the deputies did not try in good faith to verify the ownership of the property they were trying to seize.

During the course of the attempt at seizure, the Evans say they offered a personal check, which was approved by a lawyer, in payment of the judgment.

However, the lawsuit alleges the sheriff's deputies refused the check, saying the Evans would have to go to a bank to get a certified check.

In addition to $50,000, court costs, attorney's fees and medical costs, the Evans are asking for an unspecified sum of money they paid a mechanic who was supposed to be working on machinery the deputies were seizing. According to the suit, the deputies ordered the mechanic to quit working on the machinery.

Permits being checked for springs diversion

By JANE ROBISON

TWIN FALLS — Bob Burke is waiting for a late Christmas present from the Army Corps of Engineers.

The Wendell resident fighting Rim View Trout Company's proposed expansion at Niagara Springs had his spirits lifted last week when he learned Rim View may not have received the proper permits to build the concrete diversion structures in the creek.

Burke earlier charged the diversions destroyed the scenic beauty of the natural springs creek. And he has been fighting to get them removed, along with trying to prevent further water diversions at the site.

A corps official in Boise last week partially agreed.

"Based on the information I have, I believe the work on the structures was done without permits," said John Olson, a corps biologist based in Boise. "And that was my recommendation to Walla Walla."

If no permits were obtained, the corps could take legal action against Rim View Trout Company and Idaho Power Company, which built the concrete diversions last summer, Olson said.

But Olson said the corps' division office at Walla Walla was checking its records, and it may take until mid-January for a final answer.

"It's not clear, right now, what approval was given to Idaho Power," Olson said.

At the Niagara Springs rearing, Rim View's owner, Earl Hardy, testified he helped pay for half the construction cost of the TWIN FALLS — Another hydro project is being proposed on the Snake River, this time near Buhl, and although it is in the preliminary stages, it has one Gooding County official worried.

"The smack dab in the river and on a 100-year-old flood plain," said Joyce Scanlon, Gooding County zoning administrator. "I immediately sent a letter to FERC asking them not to allow it."

But the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in September issued a three-year preliminary permit to Empire Hydropower Project and applicant Western Land Investment, Inc. of Twin Falls.

Hydro project worries Gooding official

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

Western Land president Robert Jones, said Tuesday his company wants to do "everything possible to comply" and answer concerns.

"We're wide open to any thoughts that can be done," Jones said. "We want to comply with all agencies and make it as simple as possible."

The project, located just below the Clear Lakes grade bridge about 5 miles north of Buhl, would be a run-of-river power plant producing 3 megawatts, Jones said.

It is the latest in a series of proposed hydro projects along the Snake, so many, in fact, that the Northwest Power Planning Council is considering protecting a third of Idaho's streams from more hydro development.

One proposal that stirred intense debate was Tacoma City or Ligula plan to build a dam near Bliss.

But unlike Tacoma's plan, Jones said the Empire project would not require a dam in the Snake.

Instead, he said his company wants to divert a portion of the Snake River flow into a 1,800-foot waterway with the power plant located at the end of the canal.

Jones, one of the owners of the Riverside Power Company project three miles upriver from the Empire proposal, said hydro power right now "is a gamble."

"If we put this on line today, there definitely would be a problem," he said. "But we're gambling that the crisis in energy will be here sooner. This is a down-the-road deal."

Districts appeal Hurlbutt's order

BOISE (AP) — Five Treasure Valley irrigation districts have appealed a 5th District judge's order commanding the multi-million-dollar adjudication of all water rights in the Snake River Basin.

The Boise-Kuna, Nampa & Meridian, New York, Wilder and Big Bend-Irigoien districts filed a notice of appeal to the Idaho Supreme Court last Wednesday in 8th District Court in Twin Falls. The notice arrived in Boise on Monday.

The companies—representing hundreds of irrigators in southwestern Idaho and eastern Oregon, object to Judge Daniel Hurlbutt's Nov. 19 order to begin the process of sorting out the legal status of water-rights claims throughout southern Idaho.

Specifically, they contend the Boise River should not be included in the adjudication process, which is expected to take at least 10 years and cost more than $25 million.

William Ringert, a Boise attorney representing the Nampa & Meridian Irrigation District, said the companies contend the state lacks jurisdiction to adjudicate the water-rights of claimants in the Boise River Basin.

The five districts represent about 167,000 acres of irrigated land, said Ringert, a Republican state senator.

Hurlbutt is presiding over the adjudication, which is expected to evaluate some 180,000 water claims statements. Even people who have valid water-rights claims have to refile under the adjudication, he believed to be the largest ever attempted in the West.

The judge ruled this fall that besides the Snake River Basin itself, the process would include water in the Boise, Weiser, Payette, Lemhi and Clearwater river systems.

Hurlbutt's commencement order triggered the start of water-claim filings with the court. Managers of canal and irrigation companies are authorized to file on behalf of their shareholders. The Idaho Department of Water Resources will rule on the validity of each water-rights application, subject to court approval.

Ringert said that the adjudication would continue while the Supreme Court considers the irrigation districts' appeal, but that Hurlbutt probably would issue a stay order on the processing of water-rights applications on the Boise River until the high court issues a ruling.

Mountainside 'D' plans await board ruling

KAYSVILLE, Utah (AP) — Plans for a mountainside letter "D" for Davis High School have been put on hold while the Davis School District drafts a policy on such demonstrations of school spirit.

Davis student body officers have obtained a commitment from a Fruit Heights landowner willing to donate land for placement of the D. The students—also—have raised—through private donations or fundraisers, about $3,000 of the $4,000 needed for the project.

No school money or public funds are involved.

Two high other Davis County schools—Bountiful and Viewmont—already have mountainside letters. Layton High has an outline of lights that are turned on for special occasions.

Chalane Casdorph, Davis' student body artist, said the entire $4,000 needed for the letter should be in hand after a Jan. 23 dance.

But depending on what the school board finally decides, the fund-raising effort may be for naught.

Board member Ray Briscoe brought the project to the board's attention and has been outspoken in his opposition to mountainside letters.

"I feel the schools need to have spirit and they have to care about what they do and have creative camaraderie and all that," Briscoe said. "But that doesn't take a slab of concrete."

A former Bountiful High School teacher, Briscoe said his distaste for mountainside letters crosses all school boundaries.

"If I could get the board vote, I'd take a jackhammer up and take the B off. Same with the V," he said.

Olander family had been snowmobiling on two machines Monday afternoon. They were somewhere in the Dangling Ridge area, the woman told officers, when one machine became stuck or broke down. The party separated and Brenda Olander and the couple's older daughter walked back to the family truck and trailer.

Burglars break window, take merchandise

TWIN FALLS — Burglars did some genuine window shopping during the holiday week, causing more than $1,000 in loss and damages at the Sears store, Twin Falls police reported Monday.

Police reports showed that a front window at the store at 403 Main Ave. W. was broken and someone entered the display area or used some sort of instrument to pull merchandise out of the display window.

Another theft, listed Monday by local police, involving more than $600 in vehicle parts.

Robin Golay told police someone took engine parts and other items from his 1957 pickup truck while it was parked in the 100 block of 6th Avenue South. He reported the missing parts Sunday afternoon.

award attorneys' fees and court costs to the 15 plaintiffs.

The 15 plaintiffs are connected to not-for-profit corporation, Determined Citizens Against Pornography, which has been active in the past in trying to get the Twin Falls city and county governments to take action against the store.

When both the city and county refused to pursue the action, citing the high cost of prosecuting pornography outlets, Determined Citizens member Scott Fife contacted his own, two-year investigation of the store, buying magazines and videotapes.

Although pornography book stores have been prosecuted, mostly unsuccessfully, in other areas of Idaho, most of those suits have been criminal misdemeanor cases.

This lawsuit is unusual because a private group of citizens are not asking for criminal penalties but the actual closure of a business and a prohibition against it from reopening under civil law.

Groom's late legal maneuver is suspect to bride's parents

DEAR ABBY: The day before our daughter's wedding, her fiancé unexpectedly took her to his lawyer to sign a prenuptial agreement, that gave her no claim to any of his assets should they be divorced. There were other stipulations relieving him of all financial responsibility for children — should there be any. The lawyer told my daughter that if she didn't sign the agreement "right now," there would be no wedding! Naturally she was upset, shocked and intimidated, but because she didn't want to call the wedding off, she signed the agreement.

Our daughter is a working woman, but her husband earns far more than she does. Her father and

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

I have no objections to a prenuptial agreement, but we think she should have had some time to think it over — and even consult an attorney so she would at least understand the terms of the agreement, which she does not.

We don't want to interfere, Abby, and our daughter is reluctant to make an issue of it, but we would appreciate your opinion.

— PARENTS OF THE BRIDE

DEAR PARENTS: There could be a question concerning the validity of an agreement that was signed under the — circumstances — you described. Pressure, haste, intimidation and not understanding the terms of the agreement could render the agreement invalid. Your daughter — should — consult — an attorney. I think your son-in-law took unfair advantage of her.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent letter, an Arizona reader added a few couplets to your dieter's prayer. The addition was, in fact, taken verbatim from the late Victor Buono's "The Fat Man's Prayer," which he recorded in 1971 for an album titled

"Heavy!"

While I doubt that any plagiarism or deception was intended, the Arizona correspondent failed to mention Mr. Buono, and I thought it appropriate to give him his due credit. He ends his bumble album with:

"Fetid, fingered, rancid, rank and frowny, "No wonder all my poetry is lousy."

— ADAM STERN, LA CRESCENTA, CALIF.

DEAR MR. STERN: Victor Buono was a "heavyweight" in more ways than one. Furthermore, his poetry was far from "lousy" — witness the first few lines of his "Fat Man's Prayer":

"I think that I shall never see ...

my feet.

"Lord, my soul is ripped with riot fluted by my wicked diet."

"We are what we eat," said a wise old man.

"And, Lord, if that's true, I'm a garbage can."

And judging from the number of letters I received, the brilliant actor/poet is well remembered.

Thanks to all of you who wrote to set the record straight.

Districts appeal Hurlbutt's order

BOISE (AP) — Five Treasure Valley irrigation districts have appealed a 6th District judge's order commencing the multimillion-dollar adjudication of all water rights in the Snake River Basin.

The Boise-Kuna, Nampa & Meridian, New York, Wilder and Big Bend irrigation districts filed a notice of appeal in the Idaho Supreme Court last Wednesday in 8th District Court in Twin Falls. The notice arrived in Boise on Monday.

The companies, representing hundreds of irrigators in southwestern Idaho and eastern Oregon, object to Judge Daniel Hurlbutt's Nov. 19 order to begin the process of sorting out the legal status of water-rights claims throughout southern Idaho.

Specifically, they contend the Boise River should not be included in the adjudication process, which is expected to take at least 10 years and cost more than $25 million.

William Ringert, a Boise attorney representing the Nampa & Meridian Irrigation District, said the companies contend the state lacks jurisdiction to adjudicate the water-rights of claimants in the Boise Project Board of Control.

The five districts represent about 167,000 acres of irrigated land, said Ringert, a Republican state senator.

Hurlbutt is presiding over the adjudication, which is expected to evaluate some 180,000 water claims statewide. Even people who have valid water-rights claims have to refile under the adjudication, believed to be the largest ever attempted in the West.

The judge ruled this fall that besides the Snake River Basin itself, the process would include water in the Boise, Weiser, Payette, Lemhi and Clearwater river systems.

Hurlbutt's commencement order triggered the start of water-claim filings with the court. Managers of canal and irrigation companies are authorized to file on behalf of their shareholders. The Idaho Department of Water Resources will rule on the validity of each water-rights application, subject to court approval.

Ringert said that the adjudication would continue while the Supreme Court considers the irrigation districts' appeal, but that Hurlbutt probably would issue a stay order on the processing of water-rights applications on the Boise River until the high court issues a ruling.

Mountainside 'D' plans await board ruling

KAYSVILLE, Utah (AP) — Plans for a mountainside letter "D" for Davis High School have been put on hold while the Davis School District drafts a policy on such demonstrations of school spirit.

Davis student body officers have obtained a commitment from a Fruit Heights landowner willing to donate land for placement of the D. The students also have raised, through private donations or fundraisers, about $8,000 of the $4,000 needed for the project.

No school money or public funds are involved.

Two high other Davis County schools — Bountiful and Vivmont — already have mountainside letters. Layton High has an outline of lights that are turned on for special occasions.

Chalane Casdorff, Davis' student body artist, said the entire $4,000 needed for the letter should be in hand after a Jan. 23 date.

Depending on what the school board finally decides, the fund-raising effort may be for naught.

Board member Ray Briscoe brought the project to the board's attention and has been outspoken in his opposition to mountainside letters.

"I feel the schools' need to have spirit and they have to care about what they do and have cohesive commander and all that," Briscoe said. "But that doesn't take a slab of concrete."

A former Bountiful High School teacher, Briscoe said his distaste for mountainside letters crosses all school boundaries.

"If I could get the board vote, I'd take a jackhammer up and take the B off. Same with the V," he said.

Rescuers were bringing the two down from the mountain area late Monday night and it was not known why they had been unable to return to the snowmobile parking area before dark.

Olander family had been snowmobiling on two machines Monday afternoon. They were somewhere in the Deadline Ridge area, the woman told officers, when one machine became stuck or broke down.

The party separated and Brenda Olander and the couple's older daughter walked back to the family truck and trailer.

Burglars break window, take merchandise

TWIN FALLS — Burglars did some genuine window shopping during the holiday week, causing more than $1,000 in loss and damages at the Sears store, Twin Falls police reported Monday.

Police reports showed that a front window at the store at 403 Main Ave. W. was broken and someone entered the display area or used some sort of instrument to pull merchandise out of the display window.

Another theft, listed Monday by local police, involving more than $600 in vehicle parts, was the Robin Golay told police someone took engine parts and other items from his 1957 pickup truck while it was parked in the 100 block of 8th Avenue South. He reported the missing parts Sunday afternoon.

U.S. willing to study idea of gulf force

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department said Monday it would be willing to study without commitment a Soviet proposal for the creation of a United Nations naval force for the Persian Gulf if the U.N. Security Council approved an arms embargo against Iran.

Deputy spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said, however, that the United States would oppose any linkage between the proposed U.N. naval force and the U.S. task force in the Gulf, which has been deployed to protect American shipping.

The Soviets have proposed the creation of a U.N. naval force to police an arms embargo against Iran.

The Security Council issued a statement last Thursday indicating it was ready to begin drafting an embargo resolution, which would be designed to force Iranian compliance with a cease-fire resolution approved last July.

The Council statement apparently was triggered by an escalation in the Iran-Iraq war.

At least 26 ships have been attacked in the gulf by Iran and Iraq this month — the most devastating assault on shipping of the 7-year-old war.

Oakley said called a mandatory arms embargo "the most urgent business before the Security Council."

She said no date has been set for a start on drafting an enforcement resolution and she called for prompt action.

The administration has always been cool to the notion of a U.N. naval force to police an arms embargo but U.S. officials said the cautious interest expressed by Oakley Monday did not represent a policy change.

She also said she opposes any plan to create a U.N. force simultaneously with approval of an embargo resolution. He has also said that the best way to ensure that an embargo is effective is to persuade all countries to abide by it.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"There are a lot of people who must have the table laid in the usual fashion or they will not enjoy the dinner."

— Christopher Morley.

In a search for tricks at no-trump, one usually goes after the suit that can produce the greatest number of tricks. Occasionally even a reasonable rule must be broken because of the clues offered by the bidding or lack of it.

Dummy's heart-Jack won the first trick, and in full accord with custom, South attacked in spades. East won and returned a heart, and the defenders had five quick tricks for one down.

To make the game, South had to resist the temptation to play his most solid suit first and had to attack in the minors instead. At trick two, he leads a low diamond to dummy's king. South must now switch to clubs, leading the queen from dummy and East follows his own Jack under it when East fails to cover.

How is South to know that he should look for all this in the minors instead of setting up the spades? The answer is in the bidding. Had West held the spade ace as well as a known strong heart suit, would he not have bid one heart over South's one diamond?

Interest rates, jitters cut back home sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of existing homes dropped 4.6 percent in November for the biggest decline since June, a real estate trade group said Monday, blaming the weakness on volatile interest rates and jitters caused by the stock market collapse.

The National Association of Realtors said existing, single-family homes were sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.41 million units last month, following increases of 3.6 percent in October and 1.2 percent in September.

The nationwide resale price for homes declined as well, falling $600 to a median price of $84,200 in November. That figure, the midpoint for all such sales, was still 4.7 percent higher than a year ago.

Analysts were disappointed by the November drop in sales, which was the largest since a 7.2 percent fall in June. Some predicted further declines in the month ahead, citing nervousness about the economy generated by the record plunge in stock prices and rising mortgage rates.

The housing industry is being closely watched following the stock market turmoil because many economists believe home sales closely reflect changes in consumer confidence.

The government will report on November sales of new homes on Wednesday.

Mortgage rates rose sharply just before the Oct. 19 stock market crash, only to decline in the following weeks as the Federal Reserve pumped money into the economy to cushion the shocks from the stock turmoil. But rates have started rising again in the past three weeks.

The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. said 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaged 10.83 percent last week, up from 10.55 percent on Nov. 27. They had hit a high this year of 11.58 percent in mid-October.

All regions of the country posted sales declines in November. Sales were down 6.3 percent in the West to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 600,000 units. They fell 4.3 percent in the Northeast to an annual rate of 660,000 units, and dropped 4.9 percent in the Midwest to an annual rate of 880,000.
