A good cold turn

There's nothing unusual about skiing this time of year, as long as it is on snow. Water-skiing in subfreezing weather takes dedication and a purpose. Local water skiers have dedicated and the purpose was a fund raising effort for Challenge Park near Shoshone Falls. Dave Anderson, above, cuts a turn in the frigid Snake River as snow on rocks is visible in background. At right, skiers were treated to a hot tub and champagne after their jaunts. The Magic Valley Jaycees and 17 shivering skiers raised more than $2,600 for park improvements.

'88 greetings focus on new arms accord

The Washington Post

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev Friday exchanged televised New Year's messages to the Soviet and American people calling for completion in 1988 of an accord that would make deep cuts in the strategic nuclear arsenals of the rival superpowers.

The five-minute messages celebrated improvement in U.S.-Soviet relations and "the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces (INF) treaty signed last month at the Washington summit. But Reagan also made diplomatic reference to persistent U.S. Soviet differences on human rights, "regional conflicts" such as in Afghanistan and his Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI).

In some instances, regimes backed by foreign military power are oppressing their own peoples, giving rise to popular resistance and the spread of fighting beyond their borders," Reagan said. "Too many mothers, including Soviet mothers, have wept over the graves of their fallen sons. True peace means not only preventing a big war, but ending smaller ones as well."

The president then praised the courage of the Soviet people during World War II and said, "Let us consecrate this year to showing no courage for war but courage for peace."

Gorbachev's conciliatory message referred only obliquely to U.S.-Soviet differences and not at all to the SDI. Reagan's "Star Wars" missile defense plan opposed by the Soviets.

But the Soviet leader did try to answer concerns that the INF treaty eliminating medium- and shorter-range nuclear weapons would leave the Soviets with an overwhelming conventional-military advantage in Europe.

"We would like without delay to address the problem of cutting back drastically conventional forces and arms in Europe," he said. "We are ready for discussion on resolving other problems including regional ones."

Gorbachev called the INF treaty "the first step along the path of reducing nuclear arms" and said it has brought our two peoples closer together. Reagan said the treaty is "just a beginning" and urged completion of an agreement to halve superpower strategic nuclear arsenals.

"Perhaps we can have a treaty ready to sign by our meeting in April," Reagan said, referring to the summit that he and Gorbachev have agreed to hold in Moscow in the next six months. "The world prays that we will. We on the American side are determined to try."

Saying he holds "a vision of a world safe from war," the president

PTL trustee aims to recover millions

The Associated Press

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — PTL's trustee will take action to recover what the Internal Revenue Service says is $9.36 million in excessive compensation paid to Jim and Tammy Bakker, an attorney for the television ministry's trustee said Friday.

R. Bradford Leggett, an attorney in Winston-Salem, said he filed Chapter 11 bankruptcy trustee duties conducting their own investigation of the excessive payments.

"Subject to whatever the trustee authorizes, based on what we might recommend, we could start with depositions in respect to and if not complied with, begin taking whatever court action might be indicated," Leggett said.

The IRS filed reports on excessive compensation Dec. 16 in U.S. Bankruptcy Court to support its argument for revocation of PTL's tax-exempt status. The IRS claims it owes $62 million or more in taxes from June 1983 to June 1987.

The IRS filing, reported by the Winston-Salem Journal, said that top PTL officials received $24.86 million in excessive compensation between 1981 and 1986, of which $9.36 million went to the Bakkers.

The IRS report said the "amounts paid to or assets transferred to or for the benefit of Jim Bakker more nearly resemble the distribution by a wholly-owned corporation of its net earnings as a dividend to its shareholder rather than as a compensation for services actually provided."

In return for the privilege of tax exemption, federal law prohibits churches and charities from allowing individuals to take money except as reasonable payment for services.

Leggett said the Bakkers, who founded PTL and resigned last year, collected the excessive pay and benefits without the approval or knowledge of the PTL board.

The Bakkers are spending the winter in a house in Palm Springs, Calif., where a telephonic call unanswered by a man who identified himself as a family friend named Bob. He relayed a request for comment to the Bakkers, then said they did not want to discuss the matter.

James Tones, an attorney in Hendersonville, N.C., who represents the Bakkers, said Friday he had not seen the report and could not comment on it.

Judge Rufus Reynolds approved a reorganization plan on Dec. 22 that divides the television ministry's assets between the church and First Mill C.S., into for-profit and non-profit corporations.

He also issued a preliminary injunction that prevents the IRS from

Presidential campaign pace to pick up

The Associated Press

CONCORD, N.H. — The New Year will mean a faster pace and a change in focus for candidates who need to make their mark in New Hampshire's leadoff presidential primary just seven weeks away.

"It's time now for retail politics, more Main Street campaigning, and it's time for more TV," said Thomas Rath, a political commentator.

"Until now, the campaigning has been to line up support, raise money, deal with strategies, talk to the activists," said Rath. "The campaigns have been having money just for this moment and they'll be spending it on television. You'll see a lot more of paid media TV."

Charles Brereton, author of "First in the Nation," a history of the primary, said television "is becoming overwhelmingly important" because of the way the state is growing.

"With three of four voters living in the southern counties, you've got to concentrate where the voters are," he said.

Rath expects that both television ads and candidates' visits "will be aimed for the middle, the 30-to-35 percent of the electorate registered as independents."

Brereton said the growing importance of the lower caucuses and the Southern primaries has contributed to the importance of television advertising for the New Hampshire primary, which falls on Feb. 16 this year.

"They used to live here four, five days at a time," he said of primary candidates in past years. Now, because of competing demands in other states, "they come in for a day or two and leave."

"In addition to steering campaign dollars toward Boston television, growth in the state's southern tier, bordering Massachusetts, has forced candidates to campaign more in that part of the state," he said.

With crowded fields in both Republican and Democratic primaries, Brereton said the stakes are especially high for second-tier candidates.

"Voters really can't keep track of more than two or three candidates," he said. "Last time, we had seven Democratic candidates, but it was really a Gary Hart, Walter Mondale and Alphonse D'Amato race."

"This time it's probably going to be a Hart (Paul) Simon and (Michael) Dukakis race."

Hart's re-entry, Brereton suggested, "may prevent the bottom-rung candidates like Democratic Rep. Richard Gephardt from rising to the top three in New Hampshire to stay credible."

On the Republican side, Brereton sees it as "pretty much a (Vice President George) Bush (Bob) Dole race."

State probes bogus bank draft scheme to refinance loans

By CRAIG LINCOLN
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Department of Finance is investigating a scheme that surfaced recently in the Twin Falls and Carey areas using what the department says are worthless bank drafts to refinance loans.

Federal and state indictments have been brought in Kansas, Ohio and South Dakota against promoters of the scheme, said Calvin Gos, bureau chief of the Finance Examination Bureau, Idaho Department of Finance.

A law enforcement official familiar with right-wing groups says right-wing, while supremacist groups have been linked to similar activities in other areas.

"I do know that the Klan groups have been active in that kind of activity," and Pose Comitatus and other groups like that," says Larry Broadbent, undersheriff for Kootenai County and recognized as one of the leading experts on right-wing organizations.

However, Gos said he isn't sure who is setting up the scheme in Idaho.

"We have some suspicions, but we're not exactly sure," he said. "We have some names of people in other states where it's been very active. I guess, at this point, I hes- itate to identify any particular persons."

FBI Special Agent Rich McDaniels of Pocatello said his agency can't comment on any investigation of the FBI only by conducting.

However, Bob D. Adamson of Carey said he knows of some people who have used the right drafts, and "I've participated in it myself."

Adamson wouldn't comment further on the program, but he has been told the company issuing the drafts would be sending out a press release soon.

According to Gos, the scheme works like this: A promoter talks someone, often a farmer, into purchasing a "right" draft. A right draft is a financial instrument offered by an institution, quite often a bank, to pay another institution a specified amount of money.

However, the right draft is issued by promoters of this scheme are issued by companies that apparently don't exist.

Those companies operate under the names International Credit Exchange, also known as World Credit Exchange, and Acapulco, Mexico; Common Title Bond and Trust of Rosville, Calif., and Carson City, Nev.; and Liberty Mutual Bond and Trust of Las Vegas, Nev.

Those companies offer interest rates as low as 4 percent and several years to repay the loan, but they aren't regulated banks or financial institutions.

"For the most part, they aren't even corporations, although they may be a very loose partnership or very loosely structured business," Gos said. "People need to realize they aren't dealing with a financial institution — even the ones out of Mexico, or for that matter, any other country — and their signatures are not regulated financial in-

California no-smoking law ignored, endorsed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A law banning smoking on all commercial planes and bus trips beginning and ending in California took effect Friday, but some airlines "blow smoke" at the law by ignoring federal regulations allowing smoking sections.

Several smokers among airline and bus passengers traveling New Year's Day said they agree with the law. "I think it will help some people quit smoking," said one.

Antrak spokesman said the railroad is not bound by the state law and would not enforce the ban, so train passengers were not immediately affected.

United Airlines also has threatened to ignore the law, but spokesman Rob Whitely in Chicago said Friday that United had to comply with the law, "while maintaining that California lacks jurisdiction to ban smoking on commercial flights."

The few responses we've heard from passengers have been positive, he said late Friday.

Pacific-Southwest Airlines first said it would not honor the law, then announced it had reversed its position. However, PSA said it would wait until Tuesday to begin applying the law.

California law, said Karen Jones of San Jose, a smoker about to return home on a plane from Los Angeles International Airport, when told about the new law.

"That's OK. I need prodding not to smoke anymore. I feel for the non-smokers. It's a good thing," she said.

The California law, the first of its kind in the nation, calls for fines as much as $100 for passengers who smoke in defiance of the ban, and up to $500 for third and subsequent offenses. Enforcement is up to the carrier.

American Airlines and Alaska Airlines were among the carriers ignoring the law.

revoking PTL's tax-exempt status through May 1.

"We are in the process of making application for a new tax-exempt status for the reorganized PTL," Bakker said. "When the reorganized PTL goes in May 2, we want to make sure it has tax-exempt status."

The IRS said the PTL board did not always know what was going on, but said it was the board's responsibility to see that the ministry operated in a way consistent with its tax-exempt status.

The IRS said the Bakkers received at least $1.66 million in payments to Bakker, of which it considered $133,100 to be reasonable. Bakker's salary alone in that year was $228,486.16. His bonuses totaled $640,000, the IRS said.

It also noted that a fancy shower, given for the Bakkers' daughter, Tammy Sue, cost $370,435.

For example, in 1984 IRS listed more than $138 million in payments to Bakker, of which it considered $133,100 to be reasonable. Bakker's salary alone in that year was $228,486.16. His bonuses totaled $640,000, the IRS said.

American among 13 victims as fire burns Bangkok hotel

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Guests in a burning hotel died but windows into a swimming pool and scaled the outside of the nine-story building to "escape" smoke and Thailand on a New Year's Day fire that killed 13 people, including an American.

The fire at the First Hotel began at 4 a.m. Bangkok time in a party room and raged for four hours before firefighters had it under control. Thirty-six people were injured. The dead included a woman who fell from the helicopter flying her to safety.

Investigators spent the day searching the gutted building for more victims and trying to determine the cause of the blaze. Police said they believed they had accounted for all 400 guests who were registered at the 218-room hotel.

Police quoted some guests as saying they heard no fire alarm. Witnesses said many people climbed out windows and scaled the sides of the building to reach the roof so helicopters could reach them.

Aref Huwak, a retired soldier in the Jordanian army, said he jumped from his fourth-floor room into the swimming pool and that other people then jumped on top of him.

Daniel James Ryan, 27, of Jacksonville, Ariz., burned to death after he decided to wait for rescuers instead of trying to flee, said a friend, Lois Kolman.

Roland said he and Ryan tried first to flee down the stairs, but smoke forced them back to the top floor. Roland said he then climbed out the window to get to the roof, but actually got to him.

Roland eventually climbed down from the roof on a firefighters' ladder.

The two men had arrived in Bangkok on New Year's Eve for a vacation from their jobs as aircraft mechanics at Boeing Co. in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia.

Six other Americans were registered at the hotel, but all escaped un-safely, said U.S. Embassy spokesman Ross Petzing.

Brenden Ryan, the victims included seven Singaporeans, two Malaysians, one Taiwanese, and an Australian. One body was unidentified.

The Australian victim, Jane Thel, fell to her death from a ladder attached to a helicopter flying her to safety. Rescue worker Vichien Saotung said the woman fell onto the roof of a house about 50 yards from the hotel.

Singaporean Shiao En-Loo lost two daughters, ages 4 and 6, her husband, and her mother-in-law. "I live alone now," she said, weeping.

The hotel's night manager, Anichart Sangthivith, said the fire started at a switchboard of a second-floor room that is used for parties.

Today: patches valley low clouds and fog, clearing during hours. Increasing clouds. High mid 20s. Light winds. Tonight and Sunday: cloudy with chance snow to night then clouds and chance snow decreasing Sunday. Lows near zero. High mid 20s. Winds 5 to 15 mph.

Northern Utah and Nevada:

UTAH — Fair today with areas of morning fog and increasing clouds. Mostly cloudy Sunday and warmer with widely scattered showers. Lows tonight near zero to 20 above. High today in the 20s and low 30s and Sunday mostly in the 20s.

NEVADA — Cloudy with a chance of snow Saturday and Sunday. High temperatures in the middle and lower 30s Saturday night to the lower teens to lower 20s Sunday.

High pressure will continue to dominate the weather, producing stagnant conditions. A weakening of this high will occur today as the next low pressure system moves into the north.

Satellite pictures Friday showed widespread areas of fog and low clouds hovering over most valleys in the northwest.

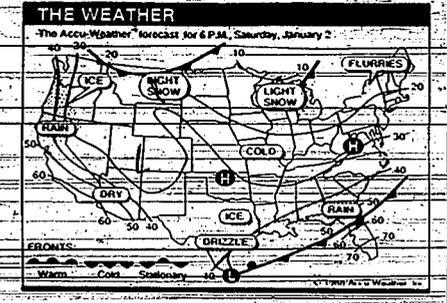

Above Friday's fog, many clouds were found in most parts of the valley areas. The weather warmed Saturday from a cold minus 10 degrees, the state's low, to a mild 3 p.m. temperature of 17 degrees.

Current temperatures around the state ranged from a warm 34 in Lewiston to a cool 16 at Challis.

Lewiston was the warm spot in the state Friday at 65 degrees while Stanley was the coldest at 30 degrees below zero.

The extended forecast for Southern Idaho Monday through Wednesday, a good chance of snow especially Monday and Wednesday. Highs from the mid 20s east to mid 30s west. Lows from the single digits east to near 20 west.

Warmer in the nation, the warmest temperature Friday was 82 degrees at Naples, Fla. The coldest report was 31 degrees below zero at Alamosa, Colo.

Temperatures plunge below zero; north winds make it seem colder

By The Associated Press

Marquette, Mich., had a wind chill temperature of 41 below zero at late morning.

Temperatures dropped below zero Friday across the north-central states and in the Rockies, and strong northerly wind made it feel even colder.

Early afternoon temperatures were still below zero across northern Minnesota and were generally in the single digits across the north-central and upper Mississippi Valley.

Wind chill readings during the morning were 30 degrees below zero, or colder across parts of North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Hibbing, Minn., had a low of 18 degrees below zero, and western Pennsylvania. Gale warnings were issued for Lakes Ontario, Erie and Huron.

Shaw developed along a cold front from the western Gulf Coast across the central Gulf States to the middle Atlantic Coast during the morning.

"Unseasonably cool" weather continued in the Southwest and a frost advisory was posted overnight for the agricultural areas around San Diego, Calif.

Temperatures around the nation at noon MST ranged from 5 degrees below zero at International Falls, Minn., to 82 at the Southwest Regional Airport in Fort Myers, Fla.

superpowers must make progress toward peace by taking advantage of the enormous store of good-will existing between the Soviet and American peoples.

"If they could only do that, what is but a dream today would come true — a lasting peace, an end to the arms race, wider-ranging trade cooperation in combating hunger, disease and environmental problems, and progress for ensuring human rights and resolving other humanitarian issues," Gorbachev said.

The Soviet leader predicted that major changes would continue to occur in his country and accelerate international cooperation.

"There will be profound changes in our country along the lines of continued perestroika, democratization and radical economic reform," he said.

The leaders' messages were telecast live by Cable News Network and ABC. NBC showed the messages between the conclusion of the Rose parade and the beginning of the first New Year's Eve ball.

Only CBS balked at repeated White House requests to carry the Gorbachev message at or near the same time that Reagan's message was being viewed in the Soviet Union. CBS used excerpts of the two speeches in regular news broadcasts.

Superconductors' use shown by new motor

ARGONNE, Ill. (AP) — Scientists have developed what they say is the world's first electrical motor based on the properties of new superconducting ceramics. The unit, called the Meissner motor, operates at 50 revolutions per minute. "It's too small for practical use and produces negligible power, but it demonstrates for the first time that these motors are possible," Roger Peopel, an Argonne ceramic physicist, said Friday. "We're all very excited about it. It has great potential," he said. Superconductors are little-understood materials that transmit electricity without energy loss. If the process can be controlled, the right materials developed, superconductivity offers the promise of cheaper electrical power, faster and more efficient electronics, and powerful magnets that can be used for everything from revitalizing high-speed trains to building new atom accelerators. Superconductivity has been known in certain materials, but only when they were cooled to 459.7 degrees below zero Fahrenheit. Achieving that temperature required costly and hard-to-handle liquid helium. But recent research has produced materials that become superconductors at higher temperatures. The Meissner motor built at Argonne consists of an 8.5-inch circular aluminum plate with 24 small electromagnets mounted around its circumference. The plate rotates above two disks of yttrium-barium-copper oxide, a ceramic material that becomes a superconductor at 230 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, Peopel said. "It's the same situation you feel when you push north poles of two magnets together," Peopel said.

New edition of book on college aid issued

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Association of American Colleges said Friday it has prepared a new edition of its financial aid map for higher education. The report, "Financial Aid: A Practical List of Resources for Women," includes a list of more than 60 scholarship and loan programs, most geared specifically for women. Among them are the Zonta Amelia Earhart Fellowships for women pursuing graduate studies in newspaper, science and engineering; Avon Products Foundation Scholarships for mothers who head households and are taking courses leading to careers in sales; and Soroptimist Training Awards for mature women seeking to enter or return to the job market. The financial aid booklet is an outgrowth of the association's Project on the Status and Education of Women. Julie Kuhn Ehrhart, author of the 18-page booklet, said there are many financial aid dollars out there available to women students, no matter what the educational goals or financial situation. Copies are available for $3.50 from AAG, 1818 R Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009.

Indoors and out, Americans greet '88

By The Associated Press
Millions of Americans welcomed the new year Friday in outdoor chill and indoor warmth with parties, colorful parades and college football bowl games.

Thirty members of the Colorado club even climbed a 14,000-foot high Pike's Peak in howling winds and set off fireworks visible 60 miles away in Denver.

Crowds along the 5 1/2-mile route of the Rose Parade in Pasadena, Calif., estimated by police to total a million, watched the 60-foot procession festooned with nearly 15 million flowers, 22 bands and 275 horses. Fire inspectors and a float driver were injured in parade incidents.

In downtown Dallas, thousands of spectators braved temperatures in the low 30s to watch the Cotton Bowl stadium celebration.

On the East Coast, Philadelphia celebrated in traditional fashion with the Mummers Parade, featuring comics and string bands strutting in sequins and feathers. Early morning rains caused an hour-long delay.

In Boston, some 500,000 people crowded into the arc around the Common for the city's 12th annual East Night celebration, highlighted by a parade, outdoor concerts, performances and a 15-minute burst of midnight fireworks.

President Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev exchanged optimistic New Year greetings, each expressing hope that they will reach a second arms control treaty in the first half of the year.

In Las Vegas, random gunfire from New Year's Eve parties killed at least two men and officers seized a small arsenal while arresting seven shooters.

Several fatal fires marked the new year, including one in Los Angeles where firefighters were unable to save a woman and three children in a burning apartment even though they could hear scratching through a door that was secured by deadbolts.

There were other New Year's celebrations: • Near Colorado Springs, Colo., 30 members of a climbers club reached the summit of Pike's Peak and set off a 20-minute firework extravaganza that could be seen in Denver, 60 miles to the north.

It was terribly cold, said David Kosley, the club's newest member. "We figured the wind chill to be between 65 and 80 below zero. The actual temperature was about 25 or 30 below zero."

In Kansas, two Army lieutenant colonels from Fort Riley jumped out of an airplane over the prairie at the stroke of midnight. The two, carrying flashlights visible for three miles, landed safely at the Vassar airport.

It just seems like a good way to start a leap year, said Welch.

In-Las Vegas, random gunfire from New Year's Eve parties killed at least two men and officers seized a small arsenal while arresting seven shooters.

New federal regulations limiting carry-on luggage went into effect with little fanfare. United spokesman Joe Hopkins said in Chicago that the new regulations only slightly modified the airline's practice.

Five spectators at the Rose Parade were injured by a runaway horse and a float driver was critically injured when he fell beneath the wheels of a float during the parade. By parade time, police said they had arrested more than 400 spectators, most of them for public drunkenness.

Reports of shots heralding the end of 1987 were widespread in Southern California, but law enforcement agencies said the practice, which had become a kind of ritual in recent years, appeared to have fallen off slightly.

Word sleuths want 'safe sex' banned

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — People who think they're on the "cutting edge" of society by practicing "safe sex" in "alternative lifestyles" should learn the English language, a group of word sleuths said Friday.

English, developed annually by the Linguists of Lake Superior State University at a big party on campus.

Jack J. Dietrich of Albuquerque warned, "Excessive use suggests homosexuality. In some instances it is slanted to ribbons."

Also on this year's list were redundancies, including "secluded privacy" and "free gift," and government lingo like "trickle-down effect" and using "and" as a verb.

The group said the "oxymoron" for the 1988 campaign year is "political science," and wondered what kind of oxymoron there other than a "round square."

The group said "If this is a scientific breakthrough, banishment is revoked." "Orientate," the group said, "is the correct word. 'Orientate' is another example of the trend toward polysyllabification, according to the hunters."

Child care pros low paid
WASHINGTON (AP) — Adults who care for children earn less on average than janitors, cleaners and garbage collectors according to a study by the Child Welfare League of America.

The league said the median salary for social workers with a master's degree was $21,200, or $848 less than the $22,048 pulled down by auto sales people.

Also on the list this year are: "Womanizer," "The hunters wondered if anyone could be a 'manizer'."

The league said Friday it examined salaries for more than 50 occupations and found that people who care for children were near the bottom of the pecking order.

David S. Liederman, executive director of the Child Welfare League, said, "These child care professionals are the very people we depend upon to help abused and neglected children. They are also the people we call upon to help teen-age mothers, runaway, and youth with drug and alcohol problems."

"On a roll," as in "That's his third touchdown tonight. He's on a roll." Being on a roll is fine for hamburgers, hot dogs or sesame seeds, but not people, the hunters said.

600 flee flooding in Hawaii
HONOLULU (AP) — Flooding caused by heavy rain forced nearly 600 people from their homes Friday in schools, churches and shopping centers as the rain at side-west in the Waialeale area, on southeastern Oahu, where there were reports of water as deep as five feet. He said high-flying vehicles from Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station were sent to help get residents out of the area.

Police closed several flooded stretches of road and rain had washed boulders onto roadways in some areas.

"Irregardless" for regardless. The group called use of irregardless as "irregardlessly irregularity."

Soviets face new reforms in new year

MOSCOW (AP) — Millions of Soviet workers and managers on Friday entered a brave new world where profits and wages count more than ever, an economic vision that has led to widespread worry and even strikes.

On New Year's Day, a law went into effect that revamps how state-owned factories and firms are managed, loosening top-heavy central controls that have existed since the days of Josef V. Stalin.

The law, and 11 accompanying decrees trimming and reorganizing planning organs and the state economy bureaucracy also revive aspects many felt had vanished with the demise of the czars and the advent of socialism.

As the reforms proceed, there will be layoffs. Food prices will go up as the government trims the $97 billion in subsidies it pays yearly to keep down the price of bread and other staples.

Wages may be set in line with job performance or an enterprise's profitability, and workers who don't meet up may be fired.

Officials have estimated 15 percent of the country's 48,000 enterprises would go bankrupt if deprived of state funds, and the new law, passed in June by the Supreme Soviet, says firms not economically in the red may be liquidated.

The law on state enterprises is the keystone of Communist Party chief Mikhail Gorbachev's plan for "perestroika" or wholesale restructuring of the stagnant Soviet economy.

They say prices will be gradually forced down by the saturation of the market with goods and services, rather than by administrative interference.

Factory workers, in what seemed like Soviet adherence to the capitalist law of supply and demand.

According to Tass, more than 8,000 cooperatives exist nationwide, and 200,000 Soviets — a fraction of the country's 284 million inhabitants — are working in cooperatives or have their own businesses.

The new rules of the Soviet economic game are so radically different that the 66-year-old Gorbachev has recently assured his countrymen that perestroika is not an abandonment of socialism, but a strategy to modernize it.

Gorbachev has also had to use a salesman's wiles to promote the benefits of change, and he told Soviet New Year's Eve that although "intense and hard work" lies ahead, economic reform will ultimately benefit them.

The life of everyone will then definitely become materially better and socially richer," he declared.

There is wide skepticism, however, and even opposition to tampering with the social contract under which the Soviet state paid workers low wages but allowed them to keep their jobs for life, with little or no regard for performance.

The average factory and office worker earns about $342 monthly, by government estimate.

We pretend to work, and they pretend to pay us," an old Soviet saying went. But since Gorbachev came to power in March 1985, that logic has been disrupted.

It is particularly important that the actual pay of every worker be closely linked to his contribution to the end result, and that no limit be set on it," the Soviet leader said in June.

In the city of Chekhov, 45 miles south of Moscow, a strike broke out in September among bus drivers protesting a new pay system tying part of their income to group performance and fulfillment of all scheduled bus runs.

Reports of labor strife are extremely rare in the Soviet Union, but Abel Aganbeyev, an economist close to Gorbachev, told reporters November that the economic changes prompted numerous strikes.

At a motor-manufacturing plant in Yaroslavl, workers unfurled protest banners in December and demanded to meet with management after being forced to work up to 20 Saturdays a year to make up for snags on the assembly line and crimps in supply.

Before the law took effect Jan. 1, a Soviet economic manager was judged chiefly if not solely by how well he fulfilled production goals set by Moscow bureaucrats.

Whether a plant satisfied its customers, made quality products or ran economically was secondary, and often immaterial.

Under the new rules, managers at factories responsible for 60 percent of the country's industrial output will be free to bargain with suppliers and wholesale customers for some products.

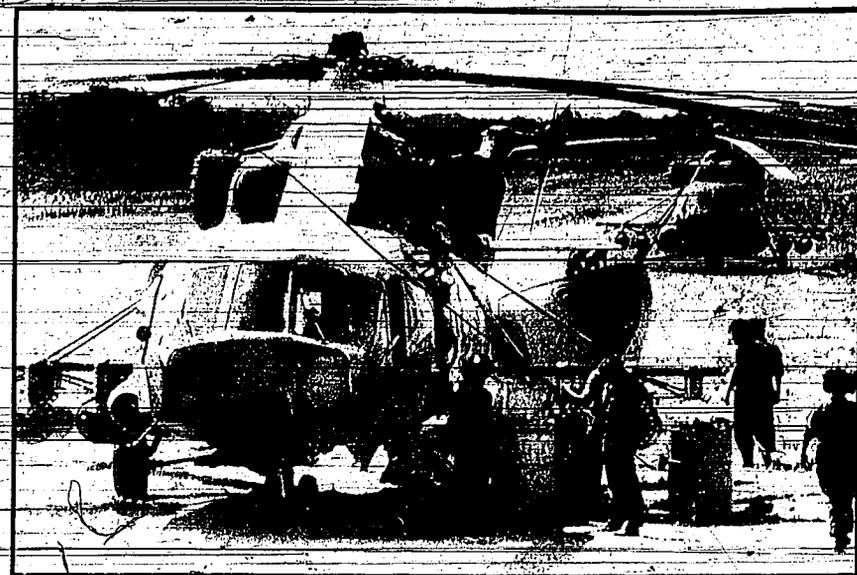

Enterprises that succeed will be allowed to keep some of their profits, while those that lose money are liable, in theory at least, to be declared bankrupt and closed.

All civilian production is to be functioning under the new rules known by the Russian term of "khozruchoy," or self-accounting, by 1991.

Economist Nikolai Shmelev, however, said this week that the law on state enterprises has been weakened by conservative bureaucrats trying to "suffocate the revolution with pillows."

In an article in the weekly Moscow News, Shmelev said government contracts still account for more than 80 percent of industrial output, most of it from state-owned factories, and less than 20 percent of their products.

In some branches, ministries continue to rake off 80 percent to 90 percent of a factory's profits.

Using missiles, Contras have grounded Sandinista helicopters such as these Soviet-built Mi8 gunships

Contras successfully emerge as force

Sandinistas frustrated in attacks

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Surface-to-air missiles supplied by the United States to the Contras have forced the Sandinista army to abandon use of the Soviet helicopters that are its strongest military advantage, according to diplomats, military sources and analysts here.

"With these missiles no pilot is going to feel safe," said a Western diplomat. "We can say the war has changed."

He and others interviewed also said the Sandinistas suffered enormous frustration at not being able to stop Contra resupply flights.

The Contras this past year started receiving hundreds of U.S.-made Redeye missiles, which are shoulder-fired, heat-seeking rockets. The materiel was part of the $100 million aid package approved by Congress.

The Contras claim to have downed 26 Soviet-supplied helicopters this year. The government admits to six. Independent observers put the total at 12.

"It's an enormous figure," the Western diplomat said, agreeing with the total of 12. "We're talking about a tenth of the fleet."

The leftist Sandinista government started receiving transport and gunship helicopters from the Soviet Union in late 1984. Both carry mounted rocket pods and machine guns capable of firing 950 rounds per minute.

The helicopters served as ground support for advancing government troops, quick deployment and medical evacuation. Almost all government offensives had helicopter coverage.

During a recent five-day trip with the Sandinista army during what was billed as a major offensive, not one helicopter was seen or heard, Capt. Silvio Gonzalez, the head of the operation, said air support "complicates things." He declined to elaborate.

Asked about the missiles, he said, "That has nothing to do with it."

On another occasion the air force recently flew two Mi-8 helicopters extremely low, a maneuver that severely reduces the effectiveness of anti-aircraft missiles. The pilot, when asked if the altitude was because of the Redeyes, said: "No, it's the terrain."

The Defense Ministry refused to respond to a written request for an interview to discuss the missiles and the failure to stop resupply flights.

"The Contras use of the missiles is starting to equalize the two forces," said the Western diplomat who, like others, spoke on the condition of not being further identified because of the sensitivity of the subject.

A source who said he could only be identified as a Western observer said the Contras have set up situations by burning trucks or staging small attacks to bait the Sandinistas into using the helicopters.

Most of the 10,000 or so Contras slipped into Nicaragua this past year from basic camps in rugged, isolated regions in Honduras, CIA flights, most of which leave from El Aguacate air strip in Honduras, resupply the rebels with parachute drops.

Although troops have been able to nab the booty at times before the Contras got to it, the Sandinistas have been able to shoot down only one resupply plane. On Oct. 5, 1986 a soldier fired a shoulder-carried surface-to-air missile at a C-123 cargo plane laden with supplies.

Eugene Hansen of Marinette, Wis., was found alive, convicted and later pardoned. The Sandinistas on Dec. 6 forced down a small plane piloted by an American, James Jordan Denby of Carlinville, Ill., but there has been no connection made with supplying the rebels.

A Defense Ministry bulletin claimed there were more than 80 small flights violating airspace last month, most from Honduras for resupply and reconnaissance.

Earlier the government said there were about 16 to 20 supply drops per month. The Sandinistas reported more than 40 resupply flights during October.

The Western diplomat said the Sandinistas had hundreds of anti-aircraft guns and missiles. Most of the major weaponry to combat planes was moved out of the capital and into resupply zones, the sources said.

Defense Minister Humberto Ortega, whose brother, Daniel, is president, responded to a reporter's question about the supply flights by saying, "It's very difficult. The flights come at night in the jungle zones. They have good communications, very modern, very exacting."

One diplomat remarked that the Contras had successfully emerged as a fighting force in 1987.

"The Contras are now at home in Nicaragua," he said. "They get their food, equipment, arms and ammunition. They don't really have the social base yet, but the peasants help by force or friendship. They have the capacity to attack not just a point, but a zone."

The diplomat ruled out any battlefield victories, noting the Sandinista army also was strong and determined.

"I don't agree with the United States that it's not a good army. The Sandinistas grew from nothing and it's incredible what they have developed in eight years," he said.

Quiet prevails on the Gaza Strip on Fatah Day anniversary

JERUSALEM (AP) — A big deterrent force of Israeli soldiers prevented any rioting on the anniversary of Friday to mark the anniversary of the first attack carried out by the PLO's main guerrilla group.

The army's promise to release some Palestinian detainees was seen as a factor contributing to the quiet in the occupied territories where Arab youths had been expected to demonstrate violently to commemorate Fatah Day.

Soldiers confronted stone-throwing demonstrators in a half-dozen incidents, but no shooting was reported and the Israeli military command said no one was injured. Most shopkeepers in the occupied territories observed a commercial strike.

The Palestine Liberation Organization had called on Arabs to demonstrate against the 20-year occupation on Friday, the 23rd anniversary of Yasser Arafat's Fatah guerrillas. Fatah fighters launched their first raid on Jan. 1, 1965.

Rioting in the West Bank, Gaza Strip and Arab east Jerusalem last month left at least 22 Palestinians killed by army gunfire.

The army repeatedly warned it was ready for more trouble and poured thousands of troops into the West Bank and Gaza. Police stationed four armored vehicles in the Arab eastern sector of Jerusalem.

It was believed to have been the first time armor was used for riot control there since the formerly Jordanian half of the city was captured in 1967.

Army commanders said they would view this weekend as a test, and promised to release some of the more than 1,000 Palestinians under detention if calm prevailed.

At the Al Anmer refugee camp north of Jerusalem, a soldier grabbed a young demonstrator and hit him, but lost him in a tug-of-war with the boy's mother. The woman slapped the soldier on the side of the head until he released the crying boy, who appeared to be 9 or 10. But wanted down an alley, said Assamit Press photographer Max Nishit.

The scene was repeated moments later when a second woman struggled with a soldier holding her son. Other soldiers intervened and persuaded the first trooper to set her free.

The army imposed a curfew on Al Anmer and on the Bittun refugee camp in Nablus, where disturbances were also reported.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir rejected U.S. criticism of Israeli policy, which has included mass arrests, detention without trial and the threat of deporting ringleaders.

"It is impossible to dictate from afar how to defend oneself against military attacks and riots," he said in a speech in Tel Aviv.

Shamir indicated Israel would ignore a U.S. warning that deportations could spark new violence. "We are talking about a limited number of expulsions because there is no other choice and there is a real need."

An army spokesman said the worst clash was in the narrow alleys of the marketplace in Nablus, the West Bank's largest city. Troops fired tear gas and rubber bullets to disperse a crowd of throwing stones, he said.

In the Gaza Strip, worshippers emerged from the city's main mosque after Moslem Sabbath prayers chanting slogans and throwing stones at the only Israeli jeep within range, AP correspondent Karin Laub reported.

More jeeps rushed to the area, but a clash was averted when demonstrators and soldiers moved aside to allow a funeral procession to pass.

Authorities intended until Jan. 10 a closure order against Gaza's Islamic University, which had been scheduled to reopen Saturday, university officials said.

In Jerusalem, 5,000 worshippers filled the Al Aqsa Mosque and spilled out into the courtyard of the revered shrine to listen to a sermon promising punishment for Israel.

"God does not like oppressors, and God gives you a promise that followers of Islam will achieve their objectives if they adhere to the right path," Sheikh Mohammed Hussain said.

Iraqi raid first of new year

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq said its warplanes launched their first Iranian raid of 1988 on Friday, attacking a ship off Iran's coast hours after hitting another in the same area.

Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit said 1987 was the most dangerous year for Persian Gulf shipping since the Iran-Iraq war began seven years ago.

Iranian President Ali Khamenei warned that the gulf, a major world oil route, would be off limits to others if the United Nations imposed a naval blockade on his country in an effort to end the war.

The official Iraqi News Agency reported "accurate" effective Iranian naval tactics "at 10 p.m. Thursday and another at 10 a.m. Friday."

Neither Iran nor shipping sources in the region confirmed the claims, but delays of several days are not unusual for confirming such reports.

Iran usually attacks with Iranian ships, but one of its own merchant ships on ships trading with Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, which it accuses of aiding Iraq's war effort.

According to Lloyd's, there were 178 attacks on merchant vessels in the gulf last year.

The pace of attacks escalated in the year ended October and November each saw 21 attacks, but there were 34 in December. Lloyd's said. The worst previous year was 1985, when 107 attacks on commercial shipping were recorded.

The Iranian president told worshippers at Tehran on Friday that if a naval blockade were imposed on his country, "the Persian Gulf will not only be closed for us, but for all the regional states of the Persian Gulf."

His remarks were carried by Tehran radio and monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus.

Iranian Parliament Speaker Hushoni Rafsanjani in December made a similar threat to choke off the gulf, which carries about 20 percent of the non-communist world's oil supplies.

The United States has been pressing for an arms embargo to enforce July 20 ceasefire resolution passed by the U.N. Security Council.

Mass transit free in Liechtenstein

VADUZ, Liechtenstein (AP) — The Principality of Liechtenstein on Friday became the first country in Europe to offer free mass transit in an effort to discourage private commuting and combat pollution.

For a one-year trial period, buses to and from the capital and the 10 other villages of Liechtenstein can be used free of charge.

The decision was taken by Parliament after surveys indicated pollution was taking its toll on trees.

Among pine trees, the damage was up to 82 percent, according to a survey published only last week.

Dr. Herbert Wills, deputy head of the state government, said the situation was worse than in neighboring Switzerland. Forests make up more than a third of Liechtenstein's total surface area.

The 82-square-mile country on the Upper Rhine has no railroad.

Identical twins remained paired for life

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — Until Bull Fuller died last week at 80, he and his identical twin, John, were separated only by a foot.

Once was when John presented Bull at birth by two minutes, and a second time—three decades later when Bull joined the armed services for two years.

The two never married and lived with their mother until she died 20 years ago. They slept in twin beds in the same bedroom, dressed in identical clothes every day and drove matching mini-vans. They also ate identical breakfasts every morning: half a banana, 80 raisins, a glass of orange juice and a cup of coffee.

John Fuller said he began to prepare for his brother's death last summer when Bull moved into a nursing home. He visited him every day for three hours and was with him when he died just days after the twins' 80th birthday.

"I said to him 'Do you want something more to eat?' and he said 'No, I'm not,' and he slumped over and died," said Fuller. "I think it was good that he went quickly like that."

Since then, except for "some of the littlest things that trip you up and make the tears roll," Fuller has remained upbeat about the twins.

Fuller talks gleefully about a life that sounds like a grand adventure, filled with the kind of games and pranks only twins can play, games the Fullers continued long into adulthood.

"At the funeral, the reverend said we never grew up," said Fuller, who often refers to himself and his brother in the present tense. "That's true. We're young in mind. So many people stay in just their own generation. Bull and I kept in touch with young people."

Fuller recounted the many times the twins fooled others about which twin was which, a practice they enjoyed even while working together at Northeast Airlines. John Fuller was a mail manager and Bull was an instrument technician until they both retired 26 years ago.

The twins turned even mundane tasks into sources of amusement. Every year, they designed their own Christmas cards depicting two elves.

nicknamed "Number One and Number Two," John, "because of my two minutes," and Bull was "Number One," because of his two minutes.

Photographs of the twins over the years invariably show them in identical outfits.

"The person who got up first every morning decided what we would wear," said Fuller, who added that they never fought. "If you couldn't get two of something, we wouldn't buy it."

The twins' devotion to each other was matched only by their lifelong dedication to the Boy Scouts. When they were 12, they became the nation's first twin Eagle Scouts.

John Fuller still directs three Boy Scout troops and leads Scout camps out. Until several years ago, the twins often drove a group of Boy Scouts out West on camping vacations in the 24-foot camper still parked in their backyard.

Fuller said the twins "had plenty of girlfriends but never married because they were younger but never married because of the type of work we did and our schedule."

"We figured that if you went to a weekend party and spent $50 on you and your date, you could use that same money and take 10 boys on a camping trip," said Fuller.

Fuller said he and his brother were continually busy with their Scouting work and many church events.

"If you keep occupied, you keep out of trouble," said Fuller, pointing out of many projects in progress around his living room. "I have enough to do now to keep me busy for the next 20 years."

Fuller said he cries rarely over the loss of his twin and only has trouble sometimes at night when he thinks of his brother. "I have a whole lot to be grateful for," he said. "I have the same way he did before his brother's death. Only breakfast has changed. Now instead of having just half a banana, I have a whole one," said Fuller, and I'm putting weight on because of it."

Hacker enters Time's computer

CHICAGO (AP) — Time magazine's Chicago bureau was forced to change the password in its computer system after a hacker from Missouri gained entry, a spokesman says.

Time reporters noticed a problem earlier this week when they were unable to receive messages from headquarters in New York, said Paul Wittman.

The magazine contacted its computer company, which found that a hacker from the 816-area code in the Kansas City area broke into the system and fiddled the password. Wittman said Thursday.

Leo Grigg, Time's acting bureau chief in Chicago, declined to comment.

"They've changed the password in the bureau, and nothing has happened since," Wittman said. "Nothing was compromised."

Wittman said there was no evidence that the hacker tampered with news stories being prepared by the bureau.

U.S. considers her illegal after 75 years

REDDING, Calif. (AP) — Draped in silver satin and wearing a paper arch, 95-year-old Stefania Babinski proudly portrayed the Statue of Liberty as she wheeled her chair around her nursing home one recent Halloween.

Now the matriarch of five generations of Polish-Americans who has lived in the United States since 1912 may lose her state medical benefits because government officials consider her an illegal alien.

The Shasta County welfare office said Mrs. Babinski a notice earlier this year advising her she was "not legally present" and therefore not eligible for the Medi-Cal allowance that helps pay her room and board at her rest home.

"I never had any doubts she was legal," said Rose Potemko, 66, of Redding, Calif., one of Mrs. Babinski's five children. "She belongs here. This is her country."

But the family swallowed its pride several weeks ago and applied to make Mrs. Babinski a legal resident under the Immigration and Naturalization Service amnesty program.

"We had to arrange special transportation for her to get a physical to prove she wasn't bringing in diseases from Poland," Shirley Steins, 49, Mrs. Babinski's daughter, said Wednesday. "It's a little late; it was a farce."

The family had to pay $186 in fees and was told Mrs. Babinski will need an AIDS test.

Mrs. Steins has since learned that state officials in San Pedro who oversee the amnesty program may have found Mrs. Babinski's original papers documenting her entry through Ellis Island, all the proof needed that she is legal and entitled to Medi-Cal.

"The information being developed may indicate she is a legal resident," said Gregory Ward, chief legalization officer at the INS office in Redding.

Meanwhile, the family is awaiting a ruling from an administrative law judge in the next two weeks on the threatened Medi-Cal cutoff.

"The judge said ... he will decide she comes under the designation of that people, so she won't need a green card," proof of legal residency, said Ms. Steins. Boat people are accorded refugee status that allows them to receive welfare benefits.

Robert Creighton, who as deputy director of Shasta County's Social Services Department oversees the Medi-Cal program, would not discuss the case except to say Mrs. Babinski's benefits will continue until the issue is resolved.

Ms. Steins believes her grandmother will be deemed legal, but she is angry her family has been put through the ordeal.

"It has been terrible. My mother (Mrs. Potemko) for three months has been charging around to the Social Security office looking for documents," she has been in tears most of the time. Ms. Steins said.

The trouble began when an eligibility worker's review of Mrs. Babinski's file revealed she lacked proof of ever having had a green card. Mrs. Babinski no longer communicates adequately and could not produce papers.

"Two years ago, they knew she was from Poland and they wanted documentation, so I gave them her marriage certificate and other things proving she had been here for 75 years," said Ms. Steins. "That was enough then, but now it is not enough."

Mrs. Potemko had proof only of the naturalization of her father, Stanley. The welfare office would not accept a shopping bag filled with rent receipts, medical bills and a marriage license.

"Length of stay does not a citizen make," said Richard Guffith, an INS officer in Redding, where the family applied. "It's interesting that she's been here that long and had no problems."

Mrs. Babinski raised her family in an inner-city Detroit neighborhood. She is an late husband, but neither Democrat had two sons in the Navy during World War II and displayed the American flag every Fourth of July and Ping Day.

"They were proud to be Americans and raised us up to be the same way," Mrs. Potemko said. "If we didn't vote, we were considered sloppily citizens."

"If she knew she were being branded illegal, it would hurt her. They did everything good Americans could do."

Homeless shelters fill Sub-zero temperature batters northeast

By The Associated Press

The season's first hard frosts in the Northeast filled shelters for the homeless to overflowing.

Temperatures crashed below zero in Northern New England and wind chill factors were below zero all across the middle Atlantic Coast.

In the Boston area, look for more homeless than normal because of the cold. All 2,567 beds in Boston were taken, 220 men went to an overflow shelter at an armory and about 60 women went to an overflow shelter at a hotel.

AWM Maguire, executive director of Boston's Emergency Shelter Commission.

Boston police were pressed into service during the night to help locate people on the streets and get them to emergency shelters.

One shelter in Hoboken, N.J., has been taking in more people than is permitted by law. "We have a different plan when it's this cold," said the Rev. Geoffrey Curiale, at the shelter in the Hudson Valley.

A shelter in Washington, D.C., run by the Community for Creative Non-Violence, which is under renovation and can house nearly 600 people, had to turn people away Tuesday night, said staff worker Brian Anders.

City-run shelters in Washington began at capacity on Tuesday nights since the fall and the cold did not bring a noticeable increase in demand, said Lorraine Rue, deputy chief of the District of Columbia's Office of Emergency Shelter and Support Services. She said no one turned away.

Philadelphia man drapes in coats to fend off cold

Some for the homeless who may be turned away from the big-bag facility during the cold spell.

"We're doing our best to make sure that no one is out on the streets in this weather," she said.

Richer said, "Our numbers here jumped drastically since October because it's a serious problem."

"Homelessness is not seasonal," she said. "Last year we were at 150 percent capacity at this time. Now we were probably at 215 percent." The shelter, which comfortably houses 25 people, averages 67 to 69 per night, she said.

A spokeswoman for the New Horizons for New Hampshire shelter in Manchester said 16 men and 16 women sought shelter Tuesday night. The shelter's capacity is 50 men and 20 women, said the spokeswoman, who did not wish to be identified. Temperatures in the state averaged 3 to 7 degrees below zero, the National Weather Service said.

In Texas, which also has had freezing weather, a Dallas shelter for the homeless, that had locked its doors, because some of its occupants broke no-smoking rules and later threw ice at the building, opened its doors again Tuesday.

"You have to do something to get their attention, and that's what we did," said John Gardner, director of the 39-year-old Union Gospel Mission.

Single-digit temperatures and whipping winds sent 87 homeless men and women to New York City's 23 shelters and an additional 1,578 to 130 privately run shelters, officials said.

But many spend the night on subways, in train stations until police run them out after 2 a.m., or at the Port Authority Bus Terminal, where they pay $2.50 for a bus ticket so they can get past guards.

"It's pitiful to see these people in here," said George Brogan, 62, one of the men who bought a ticket and looked for a place to sleep in the cavernous bus terminal. "Young people, sick old people, people needing help."

WHICH LEG IS LONGER?

Q. What are the odds my legs aren't the same length?
A. City-filly.

New in Japan is a high-tech toilet that checks your pulse, temperature and blood pressure, then runs a urinalysis. Results print out on a liquid crystal display. Correspondents say this fascinating fixture needs about five minutes of a

COMPLIMENT

How long should it take a good barber to give a man a haircut? That one has been kicking around for decades. I'm talking about $10 barber here, not $20 stylist.

Anyhow, a national magazine once put on a "contest" among barbers. No clipper, scissors only. Winner finished the job in 29 seconds.

First and last compliment I ever got from a City-Edgie went like this: "I know you can do it, young fellow. Put some life into the obit page."

Ichima's winter temperatures average a bit higher than Boston's.

The darker the man's suit, the more authority he's thought to have. Cloners say that's the impression onlookers get, no matter what the facts.

Why human taste buds are more sensitive at sea level than at higher altitudes I do not know, but such is the coiffonment of the experts.

Q. What's the most widely used of ...commens worldwide?

A. Henna. Oldest, too.

EXERCISE
You know those old double-decker buses of London? With drivers below and conductors above? Researchers about 36 years ago checked sufficient records to find the seated drivers had far more heart attacks than the conductors; who walked back and forth all the time. People long had known about the general health benefits of exercise. But these researchers say the London bus study was the first big key to how moderate exercise tends to fend off heart disease.

Q. What did "7-Up" stand for originally?
A. Seven ounces, bottoms up. Sort

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: There is a great deal of tension and strain connected with today's activities, and unless you make a special effort to remain calm, you'll get absolutely nothing accomplished all day today.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You may get a message from afar today, which could confuse you, but study it well and it might just be an opportunity to advance.

TADRUS (April 20 to May 20): This is not a good day to make any radical changes in business or your routines, especially in the morning. Don't trust your usual advisers.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): A partner could be annoying today, but don't let this keep you from getting your work done. This evening is a good time for new contacts.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Stay calm at work today, and you'll find a way to advance your ambitions. This evening should be spent with your mate.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Don't be extravagant where pleasure is concerned; if you spend your money, any merrymaking should be done in the afternoon or evening.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 21): Try not to argue at home this morning, or you'll put that harmonious atmosphere there. Get out with your mate and paint the town red tonight.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Contact those individuals who can be of great assistance to you, but make sure any conversations are short and to the point.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Show that you value your relationship with your mate, and don't do anything which could cause strife. Don't argue over any bills.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): A partner may be a bit flighty today, but be sure you keep your feet planted firmly on the ground. Handle community affairs wisely.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You can easily turn unfavorable conditions into constructive ones at this time, be sure you are extremely careful while driving tonight.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Don't allow a frivolous associate to prevent you from enjoying a recreation you had planned. Try to spend more time with your mate.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Find out what your kin desire, and try to fit it into your busy schedule. This is not a good day to invite guests in, but use tact if you do.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... the child will be highly sensitive and should be guided to place his or her energies in constructive and positive channels. Don't try to force your progeny into a college education; after experiencing the manual side of life, your child will make this decision independently.

CSI runs record to 12-1

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — For much of the first half, the College of Southern Idaho's men's basketball team had its hands full matching Big Bend Community College on the scoreboard.

The Eagles spent much of the time five to seven points ahead but Big Bend ended the half hitting 18 of 34 attempts and only in the closing seconds was CSI able to pull into its 13-point lead.

But all that changed as the second half started. CSI hit the first seven points to blow into a 20-point advantage over the Washington Junior college and roll into a 17-74 non-conference victory.

With tonight's battle with Clark Community College being canceled, CSI will not have another non-regional game until it meets the BFO Braves on Jan. 30.

Between now and then, however, the Eagles will be facing two rough regional trips into Utah and host in-state rivals North Idaho and Ricks College.

CSI, now 12-1 overall, will travel to Eastern Utah and Colorado Northwestern next weekend.

Tank Collins and Mauro Gonzalez Sr. will lead them in pacing the latest CSI victory. But the thing Golden Eagle line grew thinner when freshman center Cain DaSilva left the game with pain behind a knee.

"He said he felt something pull yesterday in practice," reports Coach Fred Trenkle. "Tonight he felt it pop during the game. There was a lot of pain there. We won't know what it is until tomorrow but there's definitely a knot behind the knee."

Trenkle said he didn't expect to win by the final margin, noting "I knew coming in Big Bend would be pretty tight on the wall. In the first half we played defense pretty well for two or three passes and then something would break loose. I felt that beat us to every loose ball all night," he said.

The major difference in the game came when Big Bend's shooting percentage dropped significantly in the second half.

"At halftime our statistics were hitting 18 of 32 attempts but we were also shooting a very good percentage," Trenkle said.

Hurricane wrecks Oklahoma

Miami wins national grid title

By HERSHEL NISSENSON
The Associated Press

MIAMI — The demons are gone for Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson.

The No. 2 Hurricanes won two years of frustration and ended college football's national championship by defeating No. 1 Oklahoma 20-14 Friday night in the Orange Bowl.

They did it behind Steve Walsh's two touchdowns and a dominating defense.

"If there's such a thing as exorcism this is it," Johnson said after being carried off the Orange Bowl field by his players.

"It's unbelievable what this University of Miami football team has been through the last four years. Everybody throws rocks at us but I'll tell you what, they've got heart," he said.

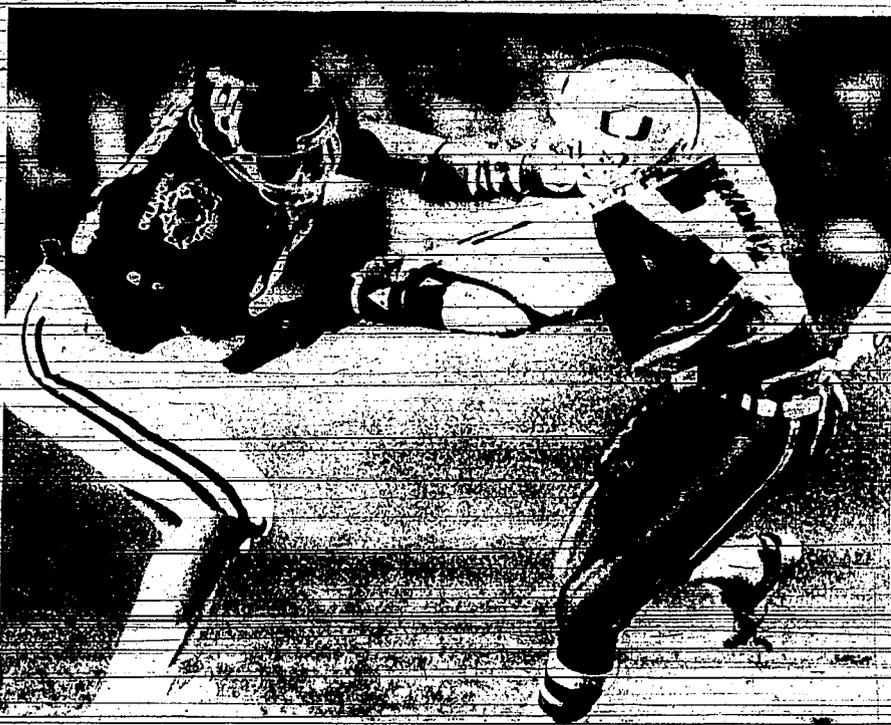

"They've been hurting for the last three or four years and so have I, so this makes the hurt a little better. The other guys win every once in a while," Johnson said.

The win gave Miami a 12-0 record, for the first time in its 62-year football history and left little doubt that the Hurricanes, the only unbeaten-untied team in the nation, will be crowned national champions for the second time in five years when the Associated Press releases its final poll on Sunday.

The Sooners finished 11-1 and had the nation's longest winning streak snapped at 20 games.

"It's something we wanted for three years," said Walsh, the Miami quarterback. "We've been in the other locker-room-like Oklahoma."

Sugar: Orange unbeaten, not untied

By ED SHEARER
The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Auburn played for the tie and Syracuse lost any chance for the national championship.

Win Lyle's 30-yard field goal with one second remaining gave sixth-ranked Auburn a 16-10 tie with No. 4 Syracuse in the Sugar Bowl Friday, ending the Orangemen's hopes of a perfect season and a national title that might have gone with it.

The first-ever Sugar Bowl tie left Syracuse with an 11-0 record and was as bitter as a loss since the Orangemen needed a victory to become one of only two possible teams with perfect records this season.

The other two, both 11-0, tangled in the Orange Bowl Friday night when top-ranked Oklahoma met No. 2 Miami.

"Why would you not go for the tie?" Auburn Coach Pat Dye said. "Our kids played just as good as their kids. If they wanted to win, they should have blocked the field goal."

"If I hadn't felt we got a few bad calls early in the second half, I probably would have gone for it," Dye said he simply didn't want to lose.

"My decision was not to get bent, and I'm disappointed we didn't win, but I'm glad we didn't get beat tonight."

Syracuse Coach Dick MacPherson said he wasn't having thoughts twice about trying to win in the same situation.

"I would not have gone for the tie," MacPherson said. "Absolutely not. You have to make a decision why you came here in the first place. I don't like ties."

MacPherson said he didn't expect Dye would go for the tie.

"If I thought in my wildest imagination he would go for a field goal... I made a job of myself by telling my football team a field goal was as good as a touchdown because he'd 'Dye' have to go for it," MacPherson said.

"We were shooting for 12 and 0, he said. "We didn't get it. If anybody else is 12 and 0, we have to step back and give them the crown, God love 'em."

Dye said kicking the field goal was not a split-second decision.

but the rest of us wanted to win. A tie is better than a loss, but we wanted to go out with a win," MacPherson said. "Coach Dye has been in this business a long time and he knows what's best."

Jeff Burger completed 11 of 12 passes for 63 yards in the tying drive that got Auburn to the Syracuse 15, where the Tigers spent their final time out with four seconds remaining. Dye chose to go for the tie.

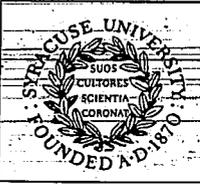

"He's the boss," Burger said of Dye's decision to go for the tie. "Settling for a tie or not isn't my business."

Syracuse, which had never led, took a 16-13 advantage with only 2:04 to play on a 38-yard field goal by Tim Vesilang.

Vesilang's field goal came at the end of a 64-yard drive sparked by All-American Don McPherson, who completed four of five passes for 46 yards and added six yards on three punts.

"Maybe the kicker was excited," Vesilang said.

Fiesta: Huskers fumble away a victory

By MICHAEL WILSON
The Washington Post

TEMPE, Ariz. — How fitting that a coach and a team whose entire season has been defined by the Big Gamble should have to roll the dice for another longshot Friday.

Twice in the fourth quarter of this wild madcap of a Fiesta Bowl, Coach Bobby Bowden was about ready to elevate both hands in despair as Nebraska appeared ready to clinch victory. But Nebraska's fumble on the 5-yard line got Bowden's heart beating again. And with less than two minutes to play, Florida State was saved by a penalty against Nebraska for having an illegal receiver downfield, which negated a long gain to the 2.

But the play of the game came with three minutes left when Bowden elected to go for the touchdown on-fourth-and-goal from the 15. Danny McManus defied the odds by completing the pass to Ronald Lewis to give the No. 3-ranked Seminoles the 31-28 victory over No. 6 Nebraska.

"I feel luckier than I feel good," said Bowden, who could have been considered down a break ever since Oct. 3 when his team's attempted two-point conversion failed against Miami, virtually eliminating Florida State from the national title chase.

The Seminoles (11-1) probably will have to settle for a No. 2 ranking at best when the last wire service polls are announced Monday, because the Orange Bowl winner is bound to be voted No. 1. But the victory was hardly meaningless for Florida State. "We'll probably finish higher in the rankings than the

Citrus: Tigers drub PSU, 35-10

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Clemson did what Joe Paterno said it could and what Danny Ferrigno said it couldn't. The Tigers rolled the six with passes and scored past Penn State in the 42nd Citrus Bowl.

Rodney Williams passed for 214 yards and Clemson's powerful rushing attack produced 285 yards and five touchdowns Friday.

The Citrus Bowl, one of the oldest college football bowl games, pits the Nittany Lions their worst defeat in Citrus history, 38-0.

A record Citrus Bowl crowd of 53,162 watched as the 14th-ranked Tigers dominated with a pass-perfect blend of running and passing that ended with the fifth season as Clemson coach, said would DALLAS — Tim Brown has his Heisman Trophy. He has a lucrative professional career in front of him. And, bless him, he has his towel back too.

Brown didn't catch a pass in the second half of the Cotton Bowl Friday, but he did catch an obscure number of Texas A&M's 12th-ranked "Mar" kickoff team volunteers from the student body who play on kickoffs — from behind to recover the blue towel he tucks into his pants. It was an explosion of frustration that says a lot about the way the game and Brown's Notre Dame career... ended. A&M tormented

Rose: Michigan State ends Big Ten's slump

PASADENA, Calif. — After six years of frustration, it took a wiry speed merchant of a wide receiver and a fumbled snap to give the Big Ten a victory in the Rose Bowl.

Michigan State beat USC 20-17, before a crowd of 103,847 in a dramatic game that found the winning Spartans, deserving as they were of victory, hanging on at the end.

MSU got its winning points when John Langlois kicked a 36-yard field goal with 10:46 left in the final period. The kick was set up by an acrobatic catch by Andre Rison, 6 feet 10 inches and 180 pounds, who took Bobby McAllister's desperation pass on third-and-nine down the right sideline for 28 yards to keep the Spartan drive going.

After the winning field goal by Langlois, USC, behind the irrepressible Rodney Peete, drove all the way back to MSU's 30. There on third-and-two, the ball was snapped to Peete, but he never got his hands on it. The muffed snap was kicked into the MSU defense backfield, where it was picked up by Todd Krum, ending USC's last real chance.

At halftime, it appeared as if there might be a deviation from form. The Pac-10 of recent vintage has almost turned this into an annual bloodletting, taking the last six Rose Bowls from the Big Ten, not to mention 12 of the last 13 and 16 of the last 18.

But Michigan State, which came to the West Coast minus the usual circus-the-wagons and avoid-the-Hollywood-glitz approach of recent Big Ten representatives, played it as loose on the field as it had in the week leading up to the game. Michigan State took a 14-3 lead at the half.

Hall of Fame Bowl: Alabama, meet UM

By FRED GOODALL
The Associated Press

TAMPA FLA.—On paper, it's two 7-4 teams playing in an upset bowl on the day after the national championship is decided. In reality, Saturday's Hall of Fame Bowl between Michigan and Alabama is almost because it's the first meeting between two of college football's most successful programs.

College football

"That's hard to believe, but it's exciting and adds some luster to the game," said Bill Curry, who's coaching his first season as coach at Alabama. Curry, who's been coaching against that tradition with this tradition is a very exciting thing to our players and it helps their attitude."

The game is scheduled for 11 a.m. MST and will be televised live in the Magic Valley on channels 7 and 38.

Michigan, which headed south without Coach Bob Schembacher, who's recovering from heart surgery, feels the same way.

"As long as I've been alive, I've looked at Alabama as one of the teams in the country," Doug Mallory, the Wolverines' senior defensive back, said. "I'd say we're all caught up in the idea of playing them."

As excited as the teams are about facing one another, though, neither can boast of wanting to meet here. Michigan began the season with a goal to play in the Rose Bowl, while Alabama had its sights on the Sugar Bowl.

The 1 p.m. EST game in Tampa Stadium provides an opportunity for one of them to ease the frustration of winding up the regular season with losses against bitter rivals. Michigan fell to Ohio State 20-0, while Alabama lost to Auburn 10-0. Michigan also lost to Michigan State, Indiana and Notre Dame, finishing fourth in the Big Ten. Alabama, fourth in the Southeastern Conference, owns impressive victories over Louisiana State and Penn State, but dropped decisions ive coordinator, was named acting head coach when Schembacher was hospitalized last month. He has consulted with him daily and has said the Wolverines will not take on a job to look under his direction.

No one is looking for any credit for Schembacher, who's been coaching all active Division I A coaches with 214 victories in 26 years at Miami of Ohio and Michigan.

"If we win, I'm not going to look at it as a win for me, but as a win for the Michigan program and Bob," said Moeller, who's undivided head assistant coaching boss. Under Schembacher around a three-year stint as head coach at Illinois, he's nationally televised content.

NBC at Tampa Stadium features the two of the nation's top running backs in Michigan's James Morris and Bobby Humphrey of Alabama.

Morris, the Wolverines' all-time leading rusher, gained 1,469 yards and scored 11 touchdowns in 1987. Humphrey ran for 1,265 yards and 11 TDs, and also caught 22 passes for 170 yards and two scores.

Statistically, Michigan is the most impressive team — averaging 394 yards per game on offense to Alabama's 312, while limiting opponents 216 to 285 yards. Alabama's defense allowed 316 yards per game.

Gary Moeller, Michigan's offensive coordinator, was named acting head coach when Schembacher was hospitalized last month. He has consulted with him daily and has said the Wolverines will not take on a job to look under his direction.

Judge supports NCAA ban on Mira, O'Neill

MIAMI (AP)—Two suspended Miami starters were shut out of Friday's Orange Bowl game when a judge refused to grant them an injunction to play the day after an NCAA panel turned down their appeal.

Following some 12 hours of arguments that began on Thursday, Dade County Circuit Judge Michael Salmon turned down a request by linemen George Mira Jr. and offensive tackle John O'Neill for an injunction, saying there was "no government question involved in the case."

Whatever the court decision, university officials agreed earlier not to play the suspended players. NCAA sanctions against Mira and O'Neill are worth $2.5 million in bowl money.

The complicated appeals process began when Mira and O'Neill were suspended after drug tests were found in NCAA drug tests Dec. 31. The NCAA contacted the players had ample opportunity to notify examiners that they had ingested the banned drug, believed to mask steroid or narcotics use.

Mira said he took the drug to which he was subjected, for which he was fined $100,000. He said it was banned by the NCAA. O'Neill said he took half of a pill to overcome a "baby blinder" in providing a urine sample.

The NCAA decided Thursday to suspend Mira and O'Neill for one year. The reason is due to the lack of convincing evidence of documented medical history demonstrating the need for regular medical attention.

Both top-ranked Oklahoma and No. 2 Miami were 11-0, but looking to reverse their immediate pasts while they battle for college football's national championship.

Switzer and Johnson, one-way out from the same old block one — were trying to right their bad-guy images.

"You think winning cleanses these things," Switzer snapped. "This drug doesn't fix a player and it's wrong."

His father was murdered; his mother committed suicide. A Switzer has always hung over, and he carries the tag by himself. "I'm not out of class to anyone," the business' Switzer has never been sanctioned since Switzer took over as head coach, although the NCAA is continuing a preliminary investigation into alleged improprieties.

Switzer's team have won three national titles and his winning percentage is the third best in the history of college football.

Still, the negative images surrounding the case are worth more the crazy hands and injured quarterback Jamez Holway sashayed the sidelines in a full-length fur coat while Switzer drew the smirks.

If anyone understands, it is Johnson. They have known each other for 26 years and are friends in their own way.

"That means they might not talk all year, except for Oklahoma-Miami games and some off-season functions both attend," Johnson said, admitting he did not know what his brother does for a living. "I love my brother, but I just don't really talk to anyone."

Johnson, 44, has been characterized maybe unfairly as a mercenary. A highly successful professional who keeps moving to wherever he gets the best offer, Janis Joplin may be the most famous person ever to come from Fort Worth, Texas, but Johnson never got out of class. "I'm attracted by his share of interest and intrigue."

At Miami, the most winning team in the nation during the past five years, his tenure has been dotted with off-the-field incidents involving the Hurricanes.

"Anything something happens, it brings out the dirty laundry," Johnson said. "But that does not put an umbrella over the entire program."

Switzer and Johnson laugh that Switzer and Johnson laugh that probably accurate notion that neither team would be invited by President Reagan to Washington for winning the national title. The lone college football player to receive such an honor was Penn State last year.

Peach Bowl: Indiana encounters Vols' Cobb

ATLANTA (AP)—Tennessee coach Johnny Majors says he doesn't know if the 16th-ranked Vols would have made it to Saturday's Peach Bowl against the Indiana Hoosiers without the emergence of redshirt freshman Reggie Cobb, who rushed for nearly 1,000 yards and tied a Southeastern Conference scoring record.

"It's immeasurable, it's impact. His coming to the front early was a tremendous bonus," said Majors. "I think he's earned 2.5 million."

Majors said he's been all over the Peach Bowl appearance.

Indiana, 8-3, is making only its fourth bowl appearance in school history, but second in a row under coach Bill Mallory.

The Hoosiers are scheduled for 11:30 a.m. MST before a capacity crowd of 69,709 at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. It will not be televised locally.

"I was optimistic that Reggie could help our running game, but he's come along long way. He's been a real boon. We would have struggled offensively without him," said Coach Majors.

"I learned the offense and got stronger. It really helped," said Cobb, who rushed for 979 yards and 11 touchdowns. "I feel like I've been given the chance."

He said his redshirt year was a bonus.

Cobb praised his offensive line for helping him tie the conference touchdown record.

"I have to credit them. When we got inside the 20-yard line, we hit another gear. When we get there, we feel we should score," he said.

"The Hoosiers have their own big play man in All-American wide receiver Ernie Jones, who was a freshman in Mallory's first season when Indiana went 0-11.

"I'm proud of being a part of establishing a winning program here. Going 0-11, it was tough," said Jones, who caught 89 passes for 1,115 yards and 12 touchdowns this season and was the Big 10 Player of the Year.

"We just didn't have a feel for it in these days. But we went to a bowl last year, and that's this year, which will help recruiting and hopefully more bowl bids," he said.

Throwing to Jones will be sophomore quarterback Dave Schnell, who connected on 103 of 174 passes for 1,489 yards and 12 TDs. Backup senior Dan Krammer who hit on 54 of 110 passes for 823 yards and 3 touchdowns. Krammer started the last two regular season games when Schnell was felled by appendicitis.

Anthony Thompson leads the rushing attack with 947 yards.

Complimenting Cobb for Tennessee is quarterback Jeff Francis, who completed 121 of 201 passes for 1,612 yards and eight touchdowns.

Parcells: September players' workout dealt New York Giants fatal blow

NEW YORK—After a season that fell far below expectations, New York Giants Coach Bill Parcells searched through the ashes Monday for something positive at his final day after the game news conference.

"Obviously, I'm disappointed with the way the playoffs went. I'm glad we played better the last week of the season," he said. "That's encouraging. At least it leaves you with a better taste in your mouth."

Parcells said, tends to improve each week.

"I don't think we ever recovered from the 0-5 start, psychologically," Parcells said. "I think that was a very difficult time to overcome because the margin of error is so minimal. I thought there was a chance here and there to make a run. There were some opportunities, but we could never put enough wins together in a row to put us in a position of advantage of the opportunities."

The death blow may have been the Nov. 2 Monday night game at Dallas. The Giants were 1-5 after a 30-7 win over the St. Louis Cardinals, and led the Cowboys 24-14 early in the fourth quarter. But the Giants self-destructed on their final six possessions, committing four turnovers, and lost 33-24.

"Had we won down in Dallas and won the next two weeks, it would have been 4-5, the way things were evolving we might have had a better chance," Parcells said. "But there's absolutely no doubt we might have and all those things. We're still 6-6 with our regular team and 60 percent football will not get you into the playoffs."

Parcells said he was not a consistent fan of the team. "I think all three phases we had problems from time to time. The defense didn't make the plays in the fourth quarter that we had to make. Offensively, our turnovers were up, our defense was up, and our special teams weren't very good at all."

But Parcells doesn't expect the Giants to struggle for long. "I don't think our team is so far down in every area that you can't see the opportunity to improve on the point areas you could be effective," he said.

The first step towards improvement will come in the next several weeks as the coaching staff evaluates the team and plots strategy for the next training camp. After that, Parcells will leave his own players to college and all-star games and prepare for the upcoming draft.

Among the important factors for next year are whether nose tackle Jim Burt, defensive end Leonard Marshall and offensive right tackle Karl Nelson can recover from injuries and illness. Burt had two discs removed from his back Dec. 10, and his availability for next season is uncertain. Marshall had surgery Dec. 10 to set a dislocated left shoulder, and his availability for next season because of Hodgkin's disease, will have arthroscopic surgery on his left shoulder Jan. 5.

Marshall should be all right, but as a precautionary move, Parcells signed defensive lineman to return for a 14th season. He will be 35 on Feb. 16, signed a one-year contract Monday for an estimated $390,000. He's expected to play a backup role to 1986 first-round pick Eric Dorsey next season. Nose tackle Eric Howard and defensive end John Washington, both second-year starters, have been capable replacements for Burt and Marshall, respectively.

"Our three front-line players are young and talented, but it's still important to have some leadership up there," Martin said.

"Of Burt, Parcells said: "I just want him to go well. If that involves playing again, then I'll give him that opportunity."

There also is concern about the injured toe of tight end Mark Bavaro. A specialist will examine it soon, and surgery is a remote possibility. The injury was called a turf toe when it first occurred during the preseason. "It's more than a turf toe — we know that," Parcells said. "He seems to be able to live with it, but I don't think it's comfortable."

Neither is a 6-9 season.

Ex-Bullet Vincent tanks 33 in win over ex-teammates

LANDOVER, Md. (AP)—Denver's Jerry Vincent scored 33 points in his first game against his former Washington teammates, matching his season high and helping the Nuggets to a 124-109 NBA victory over the Bullets Friday.

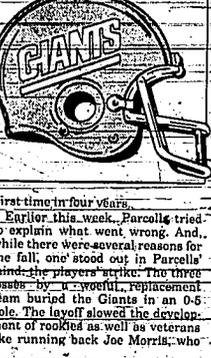

After Denver had 27 points and Lafayette Lever added 60 for the Nuggets, while Michael Adams, who accompanied Vincent to Denver in a preseason trade, had 10 assists.

English scored 11 points in the third period, including three straight field goals after the Bullets had pulled even for the first time since the first period. After a field goal by Terry Catledge, Lever scored five consecutive points to complete a 23-12 run that Denver led 67-63.

The Bullets were able to close to within four points, but Denver went on to lead 93-80 after three periods.

Catledge scored a season-high 27 for Washington, which had scored 107 points. Jeff Malone added 20 and Moses Malone 18.

Only one of the two players acquired by Washington in the Nov. 2 trade with the Nuggets was in uniform. Mark Ainsworth scored 17 points for the Bullets, and the other former Nugget, Darrell Walker, is on the injured list.

Three victories in their final four games will make the off-season a little more pleasant for the Atlanta, who finished 6-9, last in the NFC East and out of the playoffs for the first time in four years.

Earlier this week, Parcells tried to explain what went wrong. And, while there were several reasons for the fall, one stood out in Parcells' mind: the players' strike. The three weeks of a players' strike, replacement team buried the Giants in an 0-6 hole. The layoff allowed the development of rookies as well as veterans like running back Joe Morris; who

New York 115 L.A. Clippers 96

NEW YORK (AP)—Kenny Walker scored a season-high 26 points for the second straight game and Gerald Wilkins added 20 Friday night as the New York Knicks handed the Los Angeles Clippers their fifth straight NBA loss, 115-96.

Wilkins and Walker, who had 25 points in a victory over Portland on Wednesday night, each scored six points when the Knicks pulled away by outscoring the Clippers 23-9 in the last six minutes of the game.

Mike Woodson led the Clippers with a season-high 36 points, and Michael Cage had 16 points and 18 rebounds.

Leading 81-76 entering the final quarter, the Knicks opened a 90-90 lead with 7:53 remaining, but the Clippers cut the deficit to 92-87 two minutes later.

Walker, who entered the game averaging 17 points, then hit a jumper to ignite his 23-point streak, and Mark Jackson followed with three free throws that gave the Knicks a 97-87 lead with 4:59 remaining.

Largent gets another chance to reject Oilers

HOUSTON (AP)—The Houston Oilers launched one of the greatest individual careers in National Football League history.

They waived wide receiver Steve Largent.

"When I was released by the Oilers, it was the first time in 20-something years that I'd played football that anybody had said to me I wasn't going to play for my team," Largent said.

Largent received a call from the Seahawks several days later and started proving the Oilers wrong by earning All-Rookie honors his first season.

Heaton will get another look at what he missed Sunday when Largent and the Seahawks play the Oilers in the American Football Conference Wild-Card playoff game in the Astrodome.

Kickoff is at 2 p.m. CST. In 12 seasons with the Seahawks, Largent has become the all-time NFL leading receiver with 782 catches.

He also holds NFL records with 10 seasons of 50 or more catches, eight consecutive 1,000-yard seasons and 162 consecutive games with a reception.

Largent passed San Diego's Charlie Joiner as the all-time receiver in a 41-20 loss to Kansas City last week.

He has 12,041 career yards and 105 yards to surpass Joiner as the all-time career yardage leader. Largent caught 912 catches for 912 yards this season.

But it all could have ended in 1976 when Largent returned to Oklahoma after being cut four weeks into preseason.

"I already had made the trip back to Oklahoma City and was preparing to move out to something else," Largent said. "I was going to Tulsa and look for work with the Oilers. A fourth round pick by the Oilers from Tulsa, didn't realize that he had been recalled from waivers and traded to the Seahawks for an eighth round draft pick in 1977."

Largent had to wait to be traded to the Oilers-1977 training camp and Largent is still catching passes, sometimes surprising even himself.

"When I came into this league, I wasn't sure I could play, much less back NFL records," Largent said. "It's all been like a dream and an honor and privilege to get my name in up there with all the NFL greats."

Largent's name is among the NFL greats because of his over-achieving work habits and his desire to prove the experts wrong.

"I've had people put a challenge to me to get 100 or too slow or too small," said Largent, 5-11, 191.

"That has motivated me to try to prove people wrong. I try to work hard to take advantage of the abilities God gave me."

Seattle Coach Chuck Knox placed Largent in a class of two "injudicious work habits."

"In 15 years as a head coach, I've had only one other player who would come to work every day and you performance day in and day out, every year in and year out and that was Merlin Olsen," Knox said.

Only four teams have won nine straight. The Vikings have lost three of their last four.

Saints Coach Jim Mora gets upset by references to the Vikings having intercepted the playoffs.

"I've been in the league for 27 years and I've earned the right to be here," he said.

Saints 9-game winning streak at risk against Minnesota

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—The NFL's most larcenous secondary forces one of the league's most dangerous receivers Sunday as the New Orleans Saints and the Minnesota Vikings meet in a playoff game long awaited by both teams.

The Saints went 20 years without ever making the playoffs, and the Vikings, once Super Bowl regulars, haven't been in postseason play since 1982.

Eric Williams got a wild-card berth with a 67-yard catch, the Saints with a 12-9 mark that is second in the league only to the 13-2 of NFC West champion San Francisco.

"But we also could look at it as something to build on for next year," Kiser added.

Alabama, which has won four postseason games in a row and 10 of its last 11, is making its 28th bowl appearance in the past 29 years. The Crimson Tide leads to the nation with 40 bowl trips and owns more postseason victories than any other school with a 22-13 record.

On the other hand, Michigan has struggled in bowl games under Schombacher. The Wolverines are 3-11 since he became coach in 1969, including a 1-7 mark in the Peach Bowl.

Gary Moeller, Michigan's offensive coordinator, was named acting head coach when Schombacher was reinstated last year. He has consulted with him daily and says that the Wolverines will not take on a new look under his direction.

Judge supports NCAA ban on Mira, O'Neill

MIAMI (AP) — Two suspended Miami starters were shut out of Friday's Orange Bowl game against Oklahoma when a circuit judge refused to grant them an injunction to play the day after the NCAA panel turned down their appeal.

Following some 12 hours of arguments that began on Thursday, Dade County Circuit Judge Michael Salmon turned down a request by linebacker George Mira Jr. and offensive tackle John O'Neill for an injunction, saying there was "no government question involved in the case."

Whatever the court decision, university officials agreed earlier not to play the starters rather than risk NCAA sanctions and lose $25 million in bowl money.

The complicated appeals process began when Mira and O'Neill were suspended after diuretics were found in NCAA drug tests Dec. 11. The NCAA contended the players had ample opportunity to notify examiners that they had ingested the banned drug, believed to mask steroid or narcotic use.

Mira said he took the diuretic, which lessens fluid retention, for medical reasons and wasn't aware of its status. He said the NCAA O'Neill said he took his diuretic to overcome a "dry hider" in providing a urine sample.

The NCAA decided Thursday to deny Mira and O'Neill exceptions on medical grounds. "I'm not real close to anyone in the business," he said. "The General Public never been sanctioned since Switzer took over as head coach, although the NCAA is continuing a preliminary investigation into alleged improprieties."

Switzer's teams have won the national title and a winning percentage in the third best in the history of college football. Still, the negative images surround Switzer, 50. Brian Bosworth wore the crazy headbands and injured quarterback Jameel Holway snatched the sidelines in a full-length fur coat while Switzer drew the amiriks.

If anyone understands it, it is Johnson. They have known each other for 24 years and are friends in their own way. "That means they might not talk all year, except for Oklahoma-Miami games and some off-season functions both attend."

"I'm not real close to anyone," Johnson said, admitting he did not know what his brother does for a living. "I love my brother but I just don't really talk to anyone."

Johnson, 44, has been characterized — maybe unfairly — as a mercenary. A highly successful professional who keeps moving to wherever he gets the best offer, James Johnson may be the most famous person ever to come from Port Arthur, Texas, but Johnson attracts his share of interest and intrigue in his own way.

At Miami, the most winning team in the nation during the past five years, his tenure has been dotted with off-the-field incidents involving the Hurricanes.

Anytime something happens, it brings some dirt laundry. Johnson said "But that does not put an umbrella over the entire program."

Yet it is with sarcastic grins that Switzer and Johnson laugh at the probably accurate notion that the Switzer team would be invited by President Reagan to Washington for winning the national title. The lone college football team to receive such an honor was Penn State last year.

"That's hard to believe, but it's exciting and adds some spice to the game," said Bill Curry, who's completing his first season as coach at Alabama. "The opportunity to go against that tradition with this tradition is a very exciting thing to our players and it helps their attitude."

The game is scheduled for 11 a.m. MST and will be televised live in the Magic Valley on channels 7 and 38.

Michigan, which headed south without Coach Bo Schombacher, who's recovering from heart surgery, feels the same way.

Peach Bowl: Indiana encounters Vols' Cobb

ATLANTA (AP) — Tennessee coach Johnny Majors says he doesn't know if the 16th-ranked Vols would have made it to Saturday's Peach Bowl against the Indiana Hoosiers without the emergence of redshirt freshman Reggie Cobb, who rushed for nearly 1,200 yards and tied a Southeastern Conference scoring record.

"It's immeasurable, his impact. His coming to the front early was a tremendous bonus," said Majors, whose team finished 9-2-1 and will be making its seventh straight bowl appearance.

Indiana, 8-5, is making only its fourth bowl appearance in school history, but second in a row under coach Bill Mallory.

The kickoff is scheduled for 11:12 a.m. MST before a capacity crowd of 59,709 at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. It will not be televised locally.

"I was optimistic that Reggie could help our running game, but he's come a long, long way. He's been a real bonus. We would have struggled offensively without him."

Majors said Cobb, a 5-foot-11, 205-pounder, ran for 1,197 yards and 17 touchdowns and caught 13 passes for another 188 yards and three TDs to equal SEC records of 20 touchdowns and 120 points in a season.

Cobb said he was somewhat surprised by his success, "but I felt I could do it if given the chance."

He said his redshirt year was a bonus.

"I learned the offense and got stronger. It really helped," said Cobb, who idolized Georgia's Herschel Walker but said he did not try to imitate the Heisman Trophy winner's running style. "I don't try to imitate anybody. I've got my own style of running," he said.

Cobb praised his offensive line for helping him tie the conference touchdown record. "I have to credit them. When we get inside the 20-yard line, we hit another gear. When we get there, we feel we should score," he said.

The Hoosiers have their own big play, senior All-American wide receiver Eric Jones, who was freshman in Mallory's first season when he Indiana went 0-11. "I'm proud of being a part of establishing a winning program here. Going 0-11, it was tough," said Jones, who caught 59 passes for 1,115 yards and 12 touchdowns this season and was the Big 10 Player of the Year.

"We just didn't have a feel for it in those days. But we went to a bowl last year and again this year, which will help recruiting and hopefully more bowl bids," he said.

Coming to Jones was sophomore quarterback Dave Schell, who connected on 103 of 174 passing attempts for 1,489 yards and 12 TDs, and backup senior Dave Kramaras, who hit on 54 of 110 passes for 823 yards and 3 touchdowns.

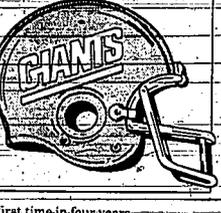

Kramaras led the two regular-season games when Schell was followed by appendicitis.

Sophomore tailback Anthony Thompson leads the rushing attack with 947 yards. Cobb for Tennessee is quarterback Jeff Francis, who completed 121 of 201 passes for 1,512 yards and eight touchdowns.

Parcells: September players' workout dealt New York Giants fatal blow

NEW YORK — After a season that fell far below expectations, New York Giants Coach Bill Parcells searched through the ashes Monday for something positive at his first day after the game news conference.

"Obviously, I'm disappointed we're not in the playoffs, but I'm glad we played better the last month of the season," he said. "That's encouraging. At least it leaves us with a better taste in your mouth."

Three victories in their final four games will make the off-season a little more pleasant for the Giants, who finished 6-9, last in the NFC East and out of the playoffs for the first time in four years. Earlier this week, Parcells tried to explain what went wrong. And while there were several reasons for the fall, one stood out in Parcells' mind: the players' strike. The three losses by a would-be replacement team buried the Giants in an 0-6 hole. The layoff slowed the development of rookies as well as veterans like running back Joe Morris, who Parcells said, tends to improve each week. "I don't think we ever recovered from the 0-6 start psychologically," Parcells said. "I think that was a very difficult thing to overcome because the margin of error is so minimal. I thought there was a chance here and there to make opportunities, but we could never put enough wins together in a row to really take advantage of the opportunities."

The death blow may have been the Nov. 2 Monday night game against the 0-5 Atlanta Falcons after a 30-7 win over the St. Louis Cardinals, and led the Cowboys 24-14 early in the fourth quarter. But the Giants self-destructed on their final six possessions, committing four turnovers, and lost 33-24.

"Had we won down in Dallas and won the next two weeks like we did and been 4-5, the way things were evolving, we might have had a better chance," Parcells said. "But that's should-haves and might-haves, and all those things. We're 50 percent football, will not get you in the playoffs."

"We just were not a consistent football team," Parcells said. "In all three phases we had problems from time to time. The defense didn't make the plays in the fourth quarter — that we had — to matter. Offensively, our turnovers were up, our penalties were up, and our special teams weren't very good at all."

"I don't really expect the Giants to struggle for long. I don't think our team is so far down in every area that you can't see the opportunity to improve to the point where you could be effective," he said.

The first step towards improvement will come in the next several weeks as the coaching staff evaluates the team and plots strategy for the next training camp. After updating statistics on his own players, Parcells will leave to scout college all-star games and prepare for the upcoming NFL draft.

Among the important factors for next year are whether nose tackle Eric Howard and defensive end John Washington, both second-year players, have been capable replacements for Bert and Marshall, respectively.

"Our three front-line players are young and talented, but it's still important to have some leadership up there," Martin said.

Of Bert, Parcells said: "I just want him to get over it. He loves playing football, but I'll give him that opportunity."

There also is concern about the injured toe of tight end Mark Bavard. A specialist will examine it soon, and surgery is a remote possibility. The injury was called a turf toe when it first occurred during the preseason. "It's more than a turf toe. We know that. The fact that it seems to be able to live with it, but I don't think it's comfortable."

Ex-Bullet Vincent tanks 33 in win over ex-teammates

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Denver's Jay Vincent scored 33 points in his first game against his former Washington teammates, matching his season high and helping the Nuggets to a 124-109 NBA victory over the Bullets Friday.

Alex English had 27 points and Lafayette Lever added 20 for the Nuggets, who accompanied Vincent to Denver in a preseason trade, had 10 assists.

English scored 11 points in the third period, including three straight-field goals after the Bullets had pulled even for the first time since the first period. After a field goal by Terry Catledge, Lever scored four consecutive points to complete an 11-2 run that put Denver ahead 72-63.

The Bullets were able to close to within four points, but Denver went on to lead 93-80 after three periods.

Cliff LeMay scored a season-high 27 for Washington, which has lost four straight games. Jeff Malone added 20 and Moses Malone 18.

Only one of the two players acquired by Washington in the Nov. 2 trade with the Nuggets was in uniform. Mark Algieri scored seven points for the Bullets, and the other former Nugget, Darrell Walker, is on the injured list.

New York 115 L.A. Clippers 96

NEW YORK (AP) — Kenny Walker scored a season-high 26 points for the Nets in a straight-point game and Gerald Wilkins added 20 Friday night as the New York Knicks handed the Los Angeles Clippers their fifth straight NBA loss, 115-96.

Wilkins and Walker, who had 26 points in a victory over Portland on Wednesday night, each scored six points when the Knicks pulled away by outscoring the Clippers 23-9 in the last six minutes of the game.

Mike Woodson led the Clippers with a season-high 36 points, and Michael Cage had 16 points and 16 rebounds.

Leading 81-76 entering the final quarter, the Knicks opened a 99-80 lead with 7:53 remaining, but the Clippers cut the deficit to 82-76 two minutes later.

Walker, who entered the game averaging 10.7 points, then hit a jumper to ignite the decisive streak, and Mark Jackson followed with three free throws that gave the Knicks a 97-87 lead with 4:39 remaining.

Largent gets another chance to reject Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers launched one of the greatest individual careers in National Football League history in 1976. "They waived wide receiver Steve Largent."

"When I was released by the Oilers," it was the first time in 20-something years that I'd played football that anybody had said to me I wasn't good enough to play for their team," Largent said.

Largent received a call from the Seahawks several days later and started with the Oilers, winning by earning All-Rookie honors his first season.

Houston will get another look at what they missed Sunday when Largent and the Seahawks play the Oilers in the American Football Conference Wild Card playoff game in the stadium.

Kickoff is at 2 p.m. CST. In 12 seasons with the Seahawks, Largent has become the all-time NFL leading receiver with 752 catches.

He also holds NFL records with 10 seasons of 1,000 or more catches, eight consecutive 1,000-yard seasons and 352 consecutive games with a reception.

Largent passed San Diego's Charlie Joiner as the all-time receiver in a 41-20 loss to Kansas City last week. He has 12,041 career yards and 105 yards to surpass Joiner as the all-time career yardage leader. Largent caught 68 catches for 912 yards this season.

But the Oilers have won nine straight. The Vikings have lost three of their last four.

The Oilers get a reprieve by being referred to the Vikings have "backed into" the playoffs.

"That's a lot of malarkey. They're 8-7, and they earned the right to be here," he said.

They lost to Chicago, Green Bay and Dallas in the last three pretty good football games.

The Saints have intercepted 30 passes this season, leading the league in that category. The Vikings have thrown 23 interceptions, a total exceeded by only four teams. "But the big concern was the pass caught by Vikings, rather than opponents. And the ones caught by Archie Carter were of particular concern."

"Other than Jerry Rice, he's the best we have played," said Saints free safety Brett Maxie. "He's such a great receiver after the catch. He can really run with it. He's got a great sense of touch. We have to make the first tackle. We're going to try to keep him from making the catch, naturally. We may get some double coverage on him, shift our zone. His way and we know how that feels. It's really an unbelievable feeling to win and it sure is a relief.

Miami lost 14-10 to Penn State in last year's Fiesta Bowl with quarterback Vinny Testaverde, who threw five interceptions. The year before, the Hurricanes lost 36-7 to Tennessee in the Sugar Bowl when Testaverde threw three interceptions.

The Fiesta Bowl was for the national title, a win in the Sugar Bowl could have given Miami a shot at the championship.

Miami was intercepted just once—Walsh's defunct bootleg on the penultimate play of the game. He averaged nearly 600 yards per game during the regular season, including 425 on the ground. The Sooners were held to 255 total yards on this night.

Linebacker Mike Carter scored the 12th play in NCAA history to pass the 300-point mark with a 58-yard field goal, the first of two, soaring well over the crossbar at 6:08 of the third period for a 10-7 lead.

Walsh, whose 30-yard pass to fullback Melvin Bratton opened, the scoring—just 3:28 into the game—added a 29-yard touchdown pass to flanker Michael Irvin at 12:32 of the third quarter, sealing Miami's third victory over Oklahoma in as many years.

Cox kicked a 48-yard field goal with 3:41 left in the game to make it 20-7. Oklahoma's second touchdown came on a trick play known as the "fumbleback" with a 29-yard run by All-American guard Mark Hutson with 2:05 remaining after center Bob Latham left the ball on the ground.

Rodney Peete, USC's quarterback and the early leader in the 1988 Heisman Trophy hype category, looked to do a better job of one of those interceptions they give to linemen. He completed 11 of 22 pass attempts for 89 yards, but he also had two interceptions. And both were so easily thrown that the Michigan State defense had little choice but to catch the ball.

Lorenzo White, who rushed for 89 yards in 24 carries and scored both Spartan touchdowns. White dashed around and through the USC defense, which acquitted itself quite well, however.

USC's tailback, Scott Lockwood, a freshman starting because of the injury and knee surgery to Steven Webster, had no carries in the first half and didn't carry the ball until 12:40 of the second quarter.

The second interception the first was by John Miller) was particularly galling for USC. The Trojan had taken over the ball in excellent field position at the Michigan State 37. They forced that by holding the Spartans deep in their own territory after a couple of penalties.

Peete, with plenty of time to gain the initiative, first handed the ball to Leroy Kirk for 2 yards, then to Eric Holtzer down the right sideline and under-threw him by about 5 yards, the ball falling into the hands of linebacker Kurt Larson of Michigan State.

The second that USC, the team that once made an art form out of tailback sweeps and power blocking, spent much of the rest of the half throwing from the shotgun.

In fact, the only tailback of note in the first half was MSU's penalty. Then, on the next play, Peete hit John Jackson down to the Spartan 34. Moments later, Jackson got a one-on-one situation with MSU's Harlon Barnett, and Peete put the ball over the defense and into Jackson's arms for a 33-yard scoring play. And USC kept charging. On its next possession, it worked its way down to the MSU 18 and lined up for a field goal. But USC's Smith Miller instead for a fake, which failed when the holder, backup quarterback Kevin McLean, was forced to scramble and threw a desperation pass that was intercepted by Joe Berger.

Trujillo held again, and Rodney Tanner ran a punt back 39 yards to the Spartan 33. Three passes, including a close call to Ahlforth in the end zone on third down failed. And so did QB's 43-yard 49-yard field goal attempt.

So with 1:38 left in the third period, Michigan State held its 14-10 lead, even though USC was controlling most of the second-half offensive action. As the third period ended, Michigan State's Steve White around left and for a first down at its 45-yard line that marked the first MSU first down since midway through the second period.

McPherson, who was sacked five times in an intense Auburn rush, was still the Orange's leading rusher with 140 yards.

"We've come so far we feel like we deserve something great," McPherson said.

The left Auburn, the Southeastern Conference champion, with a 9-1-2 record.

The Orangemen had gained a 13-13 tie with 8:53 remaining on Vesling's 61-yard field goal. That capped a 91-yard drive immediately after Auburn had broken a 0-0 deadlock on Lyle's 41-yard field goal with 13:27 left in the contest.

Both kickers had earlier field goals—40-yarder by Lyle in the final minute of the second quarter that gave Auburn a 10-7 halftime lead, and a 27-yarder just over five minutes into the third period by Vesling.

Tigers opened the scoring on the first play of the game when Jeff Babin's 17-yard pass to Law-John Tillman in the first quarter, a score set up by wide receiver Duke Donaldson's 58-yard pass to Tillman that carried to the Syracuse 11.

The Orange got that score back on the first play of the second quarter on McPherson's 12-yard pass to Deval Glover.

Vesling missed a 46-yard field goal try in the second quarter, coming up a little short.

The game had been billed as one matching Auburn's tough defense against the all-around talents of the Heisman Trophy runner-up who matched Syracuse's option attack throughout the season.

The big defensive players were expected to be All-American linebacker Cliff Crain and outside linebacker Audrey Bruce. Bruce, a major pressure came from tackle Ron Stallworth, who had three of the sacks for 33 yards in losses.

Auburn's offense had trouble moving throughout most of the game. The Tiger's sought the Orange-off guard on their second possession when Burger lateral to Donaldson, who fired to Tillman on the Syracuse 22, with the receiver logging it to the 10 to set up the game's first score.

The touchdown came after a procedure penalty and 2-yard loss, with Tillman stepping behind two defenders to make the gain.

McPherson had runs of 19, 16 and 12 yards before coming out for a 12-yard scoring pass to Glover to give the Orange even. That 68-yard drive had been set up by David Holmes' 20-yard interception return of a Burger pass.

The Tigers got their halftime lead on a 22-yard drive in which Burger completed five of six passes for 45 yards.

Robert Drummond rambled for 32 yards on six carries in the third quarter, 54 yards drive to the 27-yard field goal for the Orange, setting the stage for the fourth-quarter field goal shootout between Lyle and Vesling.

school ever has. Bowden said, "so we've accomplished a little something."

It couldn't have been accomplished without the help of Nebraska, that probably cost the game. Steve Taylor, driven from his 42, completed a screen pass to split end Morgan Gregory that carried 88 yards to the 2.

But the officials ruled that Gregory stepped back off the line of scrimmage, leaving the tight end as an ineligible receiver. Tight end Tom Bandera, who had gone into a pass route on the play, was penalized. The play was called back and the Cornhuskers were pushed back another 10 yards. They couldn't recover.

Bandera had lined up where he was supposed to, on the wide side of the field. But Richard Bell, the Nebraska wideback, said it's a formation foul. The referee used Morgan shouldn't have stepped back.

"It was the correct call to make," Bell said. "As soon as the official explained what happened, you could understand the penalty."

Bowden said he was standing on the sideline thinking, "They've Oklahoma, the nation's highest scoring team with a 48.6-point average, scored on halfback Anthony Stafford's one-yard run with nine seconds left in the first half following Miami's only turnover of a school season.

Stafford's 100-yard interception this season by Ricky Dixon, Oklahoma's All-American free safety.

Cox's first field goal and Walsh's second touchdown pass came on the third play.

Miami had two possessions of the third period.

Meanwhile, the Hurricanes' defense held Oklahoma without a first down on five of its seven second-half possessions. The Sooners only invaded Miami territory twice in the second half.

Early in the third quarter, Miami moved from its own 34 to the Oklahoma 39. Cox then drilled his 58-yard tie-breaking field goal, which broke the Orange Bowl record of 50 yards by Oklahoma's Michael Koelinger, scored Florida State in 1981. It was one yard shy of the school record.

Miami's drive included passes of 15 yards from Walsh to split end Brian Bledsoe and a 13-yarder to Bratton, who tied an Orange Bowl record by catching the pass for 102 yards before suffering a leg injury early in the final period.

The Hurricanes, who officially were the "visiting" team in their own stadium, wrapped it up in their own possession with a 12-play, 64-yard drive.

Walsh passed 21 yards to Bratton at the Oklahoma 35 and 12 yards to Bledsoe at the 39. He kept the drive alive on fourth-and-5 with a six-yard pass to Bratton.

The Hurricanes still at the 23. Walsh led off a pass to Irvin and Miami's career leader in receptions, yardage, and touchdown catches caught it as he crossed the goal line behind Dixon.

Alabama's offense came alive briefly and the Sooners marched from their 26 to the Miami 40. On third-and-10, All-American tight line and beat cornerback Derrick White with a lunging catch as he crossed the goal line. It was his 33rd career touchdown and Cox's conversion made it 7-0.

Miami kept Oklahoma's vaunted wishbone from under wraps until Walsh's errant pass to Brian Overthrew split end Brett Perriman.

Lewis throwing 24 yards to Tony Thompson for the score. Irish back Braxton Banks led the ball at the Notre Dame 21 after getting a screen pass on the first play of Notre Dame's next series, and A&M moved to another touchdown, freshman Larry Houston running 2 yards. A two-point conversion gave A&M an 18-10 halftime lead.

The Irish got a big break when A&M fullback Matt Gurley, diving on third-and-goal at the Notre Dame 1, Gurley fumbled into the end zone, where Grandy Walls recovered for Notre Dame, 10 minutes into the third quarter. But Notre Dame tailback Mark Green, hit hard by A&M linebacker Adam Bob, fumbled the ball back to the Aggies on the Irish's first play following Gary's fumble, and A&M went 23 yards, the touchdown coming on Richardson's 1-yard run to make it 26-10.

With the Irish offense doing nothing—74 yards rushing for the day—the 16-point lead looked sufficient for the Aggies. But they were able to pad it on Scott Slaton's 25-yard field goal with 8:32 left in the game, and that when a season of double coverage and questions about Notre Dame hype seemed to push Brown over the edge.

Brown felled the ensuing kickoff and returned it 14 yards to the Notre Dame 37, where a warning of Aggies, led by Barthor, made the kick. But then Brown tore out of the pile, sprang after Barthor's mangled kick, warred a tight hook tackle. A melee developed with A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill yelling, "Throw him out!" officials. But "all Brown received" was a 10-yard penalty for a personal foul.

"Yeah, I took his towel," said Barthor, a senior from Houston, who was a high school running back. "Guys from other teams are stealing our towels all the time." He held up one of the towels that members of the Aggies' 12th Man team seem to wave every second. "We have a bit of pride in our towels."

So does Brown. "Evidently, they'd planned something on the sideline," he said. "After they tackled me, one guy held me down and the other took my towel. My only intention was to get the towel back."

Brown as well as the whole Notre Dame offense and won, 35-10.

For the Aggies, the game could be a springboard toward a national title. In 1988, they finished what was supposed to be a rebuilding year to 10-2, and their future was on display. Freshman quarterback Buckley Richardson rushed for 96 yards in 13 carries and two touchdowns and was voted "most outstanding offensive player." He'll be a good passer, but the Aggies have another quarterback for that anyway—redshirt freshman Lance Pavlek, who completed 47 of 77 passes for 774 yards.

Notre Dame's offense, on the other hand, the season ended with three straight losses after an 8-1 start, and the last two—24-0 at Miami and 23-14 at Oklahoma—were the senior flanker from Dallas who gave up not far from the Cotton Bowl. It was a weird ending.

Nat that Brown was had. Hardy He accounted for 238 yards—105 receiving on six catches, one for a touchdown, 129 on six kickoff returns and 4 on a punt return. But he didn't get close to catching a pass in the second half when the Aggies used double coverage on him, and his final college run—80 to speak—will be remembered as a mad dash to jump on somebody named Warren Barthor before he could get to the 10. "I'm in good luck today," that, for what it's worth, Brown got back.

Rental prices vary in state

MARTA CLEAVELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Many people will drive to bigger cities to get better shopping deals. Far fewer are willing to go the other direction — live in smaller towns, and in the country, to get a better deal on rent.

A new comparing housing rental costs statewide this year reveals the obvious — bigger cities and popular places can command higher rents, while smaller, more rural counties cost less.

Blaine County residents pay the highest rents in the state in all three of the categories — the studio, apartment complexes average $308 a month, single-family houses $480, and mobile homes $288. The county's vacancy rate for apartments is one of the state's lowest at 3 percent.

Blaine County's popular resort towns of Ketchum and Sun Valley may explain the reason.

Gooding County, on the other end, ranked lowest in the state for apartment and single-family house rents. Averaging $161 for an apartment and $170 for a house, Gooding County also has the highest apartment vacancy rate in the state at 28 percent.

Jerome County is second lowest in the state for housing rents, with an average of $186 a month.

Ada County has the second highest apartment rents averaging $292 a month. It also has Boise, the state capital.

Latah County has the second highest average rents for single-family houses at $456 a month, and it's county seat happens to be Moscow, where the University of Idaho is located.

The study is periodically conducted by the Idaho Housing Agency. The agency compiles information from various state and federal census sources, as well as conducting a telephone survey to determine average rents and vacancies. Small counties with fewer than 3,000 people were not included in the phone survey portion of the study because the amount of rental units is too small to give a statistically accurate picture, said Roberta Myers, a data analyst at IHA.

Camas and Lincoln Counties were not part of the phone survey. Cassia County was included only in the portion covering apartments. Idaho has a total rental housing stock of 108,635 units, consisting of 62,539 apartments, 48,624 single-family dwellings, and 7,632 mobile homes.

Elmore County has the highest percentage of renters at 45 percent of its population. Latah County is second with 41 percent.

Franklin and Oneida Counties share the lowest percentage of renters with 17 percent.

The statewide average is 28 percent.

Apartment rates in Idaho have risen from a statewide average of $219 a month in 1980 to $267 a month in 1987, an average increase of 23 percent a year. But depending on location, the carpet may be greener on the other side of the county line.

Shoshone County closely follows Gooding County for the lowest average apartment rent at $163 a month.

The state average mobile home rental was $209 in 1987, down from $231 in 1985.

But there are cheaper places than Magic Valley to rent one.

Valley County is the lowest for this type of housing at $145 a month, and Franklin County is second at $183.

The priciest mobile homes rent in Blaine County for $288 per month, and in Bingham County for $241.

A comparison of average apartment rents in Idaho's major cities found Mountain Home the lowest overall, and Boise the highest. Twin Falls was in the middle.

The state average monthly rent for apartments is $267 for a studio, $291 for one bedroom, $270 for two bedrooms, and $313 for three bedrooms.

A studio apartment in Moscow rents for $85 less than one in Boise. Moscow's average is the lowest at $114 a month and Boise's is the highest at $199.

The highest average rent for one bedroom is in Coeur d'Alene for $267 a month — $133 more than the average in Mountain Home.

Three bedroom apartments range from $205 in Mountain Home to $394 in Pocatello, a difference of $189 a month.

From 1980 to 1985, the average statewide vacancy rate for rental units dropped from 11.4 percent to 9.5 percent. But since 1985, the average vacancy rate has increased to 10.2 percent in 1987.

About a 5 percent vacancy rate is needed to give people a choice and to maintain "quality," Myers said.

The lowest vacancy rates in the state for apartments are in Bingham County at 1 percent, followed by Kootenai County with 2 percent, and Blaine County with 3 percent. The state average is 10.2 percent.

Accreditation program releases results

TWIN FALLS — One Idaho school dunked accreditation, while 15 others are on the borderline, according to a report card prepared a Northwest association.

But the names of the schools that received poor marks, as well as those that received passing grades from the Commission on Schools for the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges, won't be released by the State Board of Education until mid-January, said David Steadman with the state Department of Education. The Northwest association designations are recommendations to the state board, which is the final approving agency of accreditation, he said.

Kimberly School District Superintendent Richard Bauscher, a member of an association review committee, did provide general information about the group's 1987 report released earlier this month.

According to Bauscher, 1,173 schools in Alaska, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Utah and Washington applied for accreditation through the association.

To win accreditation, the schools are evaluated on several areas, ranging from staffing to physical buildings to instructional materials.

Of the total number of schools that applied, 161 were located in Idaho. A majority of the Idaho schools — 120 of them — were approved, meaning they equaled or exceeded association standards for accreditation.

In the Northwest, 905 other schools were approved. Among the Idaho schools evaluated, 32 were placed in the advised classification by the association, meaning the schools didn't meet standards or took no effort to correct "minor deviations" spotted during an earlier evaluation.

In the other states, 92 schools also received similar designations.

In Idaho, 15 schools were placed on the warned list because they "substantially deviated from one or

Department orders payments

Workers get back wages

By The Times-News and the Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — The U.S. Department of Labor says its enforcement efforts resulted in payments of $460,918 in back wages for 1,443 Idaho workers during the past year.

Among recipients in Magic Valley, 60 workers in Jerome County got $26,912 in back wages, 61 workers in Twin Falls County got $15,863 and 38 workers in Blaine County got $10,104. It also accounts the recoveries resulted from only a handful of compliance actions.

The Labor Department reported no recoveries for Cassia, Gooding or Minidoka counties, and Camas and Lincoln counties were not listed at all.

Jim Vain, regional administrator at Seattle, said the back wages were part of $4.8 million recovered for employees in the region, which also includes Washington, Oregon and Alaska.

The Labor Department said it filed 2,124 enforcement actions involving alleged violations of the Fair Labor Standards Act, Service Contract Act, Davis-Bacon and related acts and the Contract Work Hours and Safety Standards Act.

FLSA establishes the federal minimum wage of $3.35 per hour for covered, non-exempt employees; requires time-and-a-half pay for work in excess of 40 hours a week; and sets recordkeeping and child labor standards.

Davis-Bacon and Service Contract acts provide for wages and benefits for employees of covered government contractors and subcontractors. Contract Work Hours and Safety Standards Act requires overtime for federally contracted employees working more than 40 hours a week.

Enforcement of the back wages cost $44,466 in civil money was recovered from penalties against employers and farm labor contractors from violations in 163 investigations through the northwest under the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act.

K49AZ makes final move

By MARTA CLEAVELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Kris Harvey's phone rang at 3 a.m. Tuesday. It was a friend on the line telling her K49AZ, the television station she manages, had finally sold down the cable television dial from channel 18 to channel 2.

Harvey was elated. After months of wrangling and uncertainty, K49AZ has moved into one of the prime cable positions it had been seeking from King Cablevision.

"We feel like we've got a new lease on life," said Harvey. "We have a year to prove we are one of the 12 most popular stations on cable."

The station wanted a lower number on the dial because many television's cannot get the higher number without special adapters. Larger audience potential at the lower number stations commands higher advertising rates and therefore potentially more profits.

Right now, Harvey said, K49 is the "number one" low-powered TV station in the country.

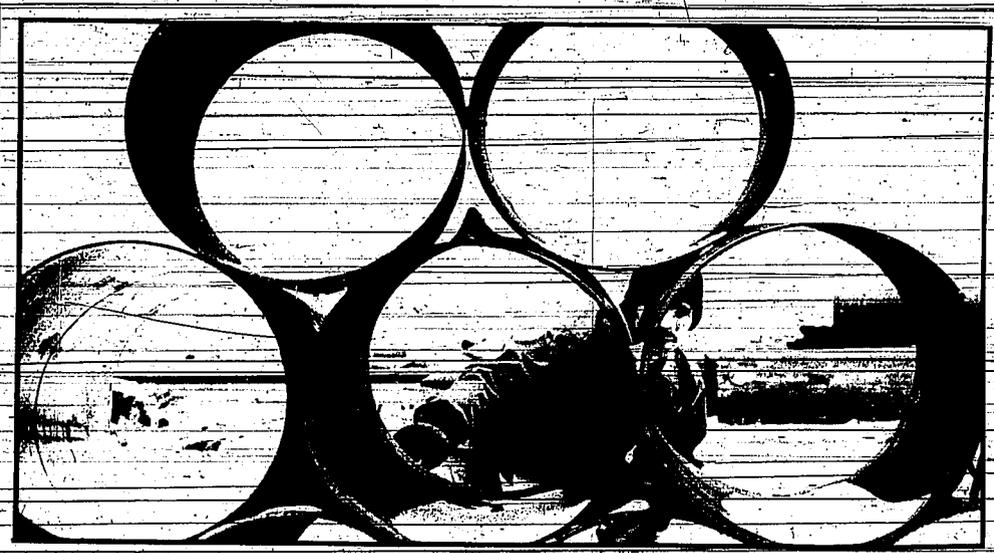

Meaning it has the largest share of viewers in its market.

"Being on Channel 2 will double our ratings," she added. Ratings are what she had to prove to get the channel 2 spot. After a year she will have to demonstrate to King Cablevision that K49 is one of the 12 most watched stations on cable, or be bumped back up the dial.

To make room for K49, King Cablevision had to shift some other stations. It has moved the Naahville Network from channel 2 to channel 3, and changed USA from channel 3 to channel 19.

Harvey said she has already sold more advertising spots.

Stanley overcomes odds, constructs center

The Associated Press

STANLEY — As he looked out over the seated crowd that included ranchers, miners, forest rangers, school teachers and babies sucking on bottles, Mayor Bud James asked the question that Stanley residents surely had asked themselves countless times before.

Could a town with only 99 official residents, and residents to match, unite to achieve an almost impossible goal?

After six years of determined effort, Stanley got it. James the answer it had been struggling for. "The answer tonight," he said, "is to build, and build."

When the applause ended, James struck a match and ignited a copy of the $65,000 mortgage for Stanley's rustic, 6-year-old community center. Stanley paid off the 10-year mortgage on the building in September of last year.

That, said Custer County Commissioner Cliff Hanson, was a first among entities that have obtained loans through the Custer Development Corporation.

The final payment was a long-awaited event in this alpine hamlet known for its stunning view of the Sawtooth Valley, summertime mobs and subzero winter temperatures.

annual community Thanksgiving meal, the potluck feast became a celebration of their victory over adverse odds. It crowned an effort that spanned 18 years, when people weary of meeting in various buildings started planning for a community center serving the entire valley.

To pay for the center, Stanley residents in 1979 passed a five-year, 5 percent option tax on motel rooms and liquor by the drink.

But when city residents voted not to renew the tax, it looked as though Stanley might have to default. That James said, was "a desperate time."

A group dubbed the "Mad Hatters" held a party that raised about $6,000. That was enough to make mortgage payments until voters renewed the option tax in 1985. A philanthropist group of valley women, the "Mountain Mommas," also held fund-raisers for the project.

Although the building's shell was built by a contractor, most of the interior work was donated labor and materials.

With that behind them, the disparate crowd gathered to celebrate Thanksgiving and the valley's achievement. They toasted their community with champagne. The hot homemade apple sauce and rogan Josh. There were five cakes, one decorated specifically to commemorate the demise of Stanley's mortgage. It sat next to a small box into which people dropped suggestions for what Stanley should do with the $895 monthly payment that had been going to the mortgage "company" well into 1985. Here, as far as community said Lynn Burton, a Stanley resident for eight years. "There's a lot of pride in this facility."

Paty Kelley, who was standing nearby, pointed out three categories of valley residents. The first, to which she belongs, consists of those who have lived here for one to five years. The second consists of those who have lived in the valley for one to 10 years. "Then there's another group that beyond that."

Many residents, she said, or she loaded her plate, hadn't really planned on living in this remote town. Instead, they had stumbled into Stanley, and saw their roots sink quick and deep.

"You might accidentally fall into the place," she said, "but you stay because the people are nice."

There has been a resurgence of community spirit here, 20-year resident Joe Leonard said.

"The town is in transition, he said. And so are its people, who are trying to understand themselves, to find their niche in society.

"And that society," he said as his neighbors celebrated their Thanksgiving and the answer to James' earlier question, "happens to be the community."

Collider list did not consider savings

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The 21 scientists and engineers who reviewed applications for the superconducting super collider said cost differences were a major factor in selecting a short list of final finalists for the $4.4-billion facility.

But a report issued this week said several regional resources were of particular importance in trimming the field of 35 applicants to 25 finalists for the U.S. Department of Energy's proposed atom smasher research project.

Cost calculations did play a role in the final evaluations more than that role was more precise than that role has been in the past, the National Academy of Sciences and National Academy of Engineering committee said in its study, "Siting the Super Collider."

The study listed sites in Arizona, Colorado, Illinois, Michigan, New York, North Carolina, Tennessee and Texas as SSC finalists. Twenty-seven applications — including a bid to construct the SSC at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory — were rejected by the academy.

From the beginning of Idaho's SSC campaign, state officials said the project would be built more cheaply on the federally-owned INEL site.

"I don't think any state can come out to Idaho when it comes to cost and schedule," said Rick Tremblay, SSC coordinator for the Idaho Department of Commerce.

Gov. Cecil Andrus said choosing Idaho could save the Department of Energy $500 million during construction and $300 million during the first 10 years of SSC operation.

But the academy's report, obtained Thursday by The Idaho Falls Post-Register, said individual atom cost estimates fall within a "remarkably narrow range."

The cost of the most expensive sites was only a 10-percent above the average for the group; and that of the most economical site was only a few percent below the average, the report said.

The report lists no dollar estimates for the eight finalists, although five short list sites are predicted to cost slightly below the average of all applicants. Michigan's costs are calculated as average, Arizona's as "slightly" above average, and Illinois' costs may be slightly above average or low average, depending on use of existing equipment of the adjacent Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory.

Idaho officials said the SSC's 65-mile accelerator ring could be built at the INEL through less expensive cut-and-fill excavation.

The academy report listed similar open-cut excavation, or shallow tunneling, as "pluses" in SSC construction.

However, only the Arizona site provided partial cut-and-fill construction for the collider ring, with Tennessee and Illinois' proposals calling for possible tunneling at depths of 400 feet or more.

In its 62-page report, the committee addressed only the eight SSC finalists, and made no direct comments about Idaho's bid.

It offers general comments about the sites which failed to make the short list.

Some of those sites showed unfavorable geological conditions. Others, including some with strong geological characteristics, fell short on regional resource criteria.

Several lacked existing communities near the sites; others were not particularly accessible because of their distance from a major, well-served airport, the report said.

Other sites were quite distant from universities and medical centers; others did not offer opportunities for professional employment of SSC staff.

Proximity to regional resources, including universities and research centers, was a securing theme in the committee report.

Regional resources essential for construction and operation of the SSC are present at or near the site. The area is close to two major interstate highways, and offers reasonable access to the Detroit International Airport, the committee said of Michigan's bid.

In an interview Wednesday, Tremblay said he expected the SSC to draw infrastructure, such as university research, to its site.

However, the committee instead emphasized existing resources, saying that Idaho's bid was one of the SSC's needed workforce of 3,000.

Public opinion on the SSC, which in Idaho's case was overwhelmingly favorable, was not considered by the academics.

The committee said it could not report descriptions, letters or news reports describing public opposition to the SSC, and did not consider that opposition when comparing its short list. However, the committee urged the DOE to consider public support as it reviews the eight SSC finalists.

Curriculum changes credited for test score improvements

SPOKANE (AP) — Results of standardized tests taken by fourth, eighth, and 10th graders are the best in three years, and a Spokane School District official credits changes in curriculum.

Results of the tests given in October reversed two years of declining scores, said Ned Hammond, the district's director of planning evaluation and research.

"What's significant about these results is the improvement in all of the sub-tests in the grand total," Hammond said Thursday. "It is a definite reflection of the curriculum revisions we made last year."

Last spring, the district developed a program that would prepare students for the multiple-choice test. Many fourth graders had never taken a multiple-choice test, but some changes were made to make district programs more compatible with the state test, Hammond said.

Test scores dropped sharply in 1985 after the state switched to the NABT test from the California Achievement Test.

Fire claims elderly man

TWIN FALLS — The burned body of an elderly man was discovered in his home by police about 4 p.m. Friday.

A neighbor asked police to check on the man because he hadn't seen him for several days. Police forced their way into the house at 132 Jackson St. and found the badly disfigured body near the front door.

Police are assuming the man died in an accidental fire started from his stove in the living room.

Only a few days ago, Hammond said, the death occurred several days ago and possibly as long ago as Christmas.

The fire went undetected because it burned out when it ran out of oxygen in the living room. Childless, the man lived alone. Police are not suspected, but the actual cause of death is under investigation.

The victim's name is being withheld pending notification of relatives.

Husband seeks compensation
BOISE (AP) — The husband and son of an exotic dancer who was shot to death in 1985 outside a rural Ada County tavern are appealing the state's denial of their claim for workman's compensation over her death.

The Idaho Industrial Commission ruled that Patricia Robin Lynn Hanson actually was an independent contractor and not an employee of the Hide Out Saloon, so did not qualify for workman's compensation coverage through the state insurance fund.

The Idaho Supreme Court will hear oral arguments Jan. 23 on Harold A. Hanson and Jesse T. Hanson's appeal of the ruling on their claim against C.B. Inc., which owns the Hide Out Saloon.

Mrs. Hanson, 27, of New Plymouth, was working as a dancer there on Aug. 8, 1985, when she and a customer were killed in a hail of pistol and shotgun fire outside the western Ada County bar.

Mrs. Hanson managed to drive away in her car after being shot, but later was found dead in a nearby field.

Harold and Jesse Hanson and son Jesse, who was 2 years old at the time of the shootings, were living at the home of Mrs. Hanson's mother in New Plymouth at the time. The family was trying to save enough money to move to Las Vegas, Nev., where Mrs. Hanson hoped to become a showgirl dancer.

County won't pay for damages

BLACKFOOT (AP) — The Bingham County Commission has rejected for a third time a claim from Gem State Paper and Supply Co. stemming from a September accident the company contends was the result of the county's failure to replace a vandalized road sign.

The board said it will go to court if necessary to avoid paying the $3,247 claim. Commissioners fear payment will mean they acknowledge liability, setting a potentially expensive precedent for the county.

Commissioner Dale Arave said the claim resulted from a traffic accident that occurred when a Gem State truck collided with a potato truck because a stop sign at the intersection of two county roads had been vandalized.

"It wasn't reported to the county that the sign was gone, so we don't believe the county was negligent," Arave said. "If we pay the claim we're admitting liability, and it could become very expensive for the county in the long run."

Ex-temple president dies

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Robert W. Barker, president of the Washington D.C. Temple of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, died Thursday of a heart attack, the church said in a news release.

Barker, 68, suffered the heart attack while playing tennis in Salt Lake City on Wednesday. Funeral services are scheduled Wednesday in Washington.

Barker had been temple president since October 1985. His wife, Arly Vera Barker, was temple matron.

Barker was a senior partner in the Washington law firm of Wilkinson, Barker, Knauer and Quinn and also was senior vice president, general counsel and a director of Bonneville Industries.

The Ogden, Utah, native was born July 9, 1919. He was graduated from the University of Utah and the Georgetown University Law Center.

Barker's church service including calling as bishop of two congregations, regional representative and counselor in the Washington D.C. Temple. Since 1970, he has been a temple president. Barker was a volunteer worker at the temple.

3 local officers receive promotions

TWIN FALLS — Last month's reorganization of the Idaho State Police has translated into three local promotions and the creation of six new positions, officials said, according to State Police officials.

On Thursday the agency's reorganization was ordered by Gov. Cecil Andrus in an effort to relieve district sergeants from the bulk of their administrative duties.

The main purpose was to put the sergeants back in the field so they could supervise field activities," he said.

The mechanism used for achieving that end is the formation of new positions, carrying the title of deputy district commander, in each of the state's six districts. Neal said deputy district commanders will be assigned responsibility for assisting the district commander in the administration of district operations.

Neal, who has been promoted to the position of deputy district commander for the Magic Valley area, said that previously each district had only sergeants and a district commander. The reorganization basically changed that by "moving all the ranks up one notch, which opened up new positions," he said.

The top local promotion will be issued to Bob Wright, who will be promoted from lieutenant to district commander of District No. 1 that district covers the Magic Valley area.

Wright, who grew up in the Emmet area, has served on the force for 29 years. He patrolled in Coeur d'Alene and was promoted to sergeant and moved to the Twin Falls area.

Neal, a 15-year veteran with the State Police, previously served as a patrol officer in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho Falls and Boise. He has been assigned to the Magic Valley area since 1980, and in 1980 he was promoted to sergeant in the Twin Falls District.

The third local promotion went to Capt. Lamont Johnston, who is scheduled for promotion to sergeant. Johnston, a 15-year veteran, has patrolled his entire career in the Burley, Rupert and Twin Falls areas.

Low arrests on year's end
TWIN FALLS — 1987 went off like a lamb and 1988 came in like a lion, according to the Magic Valley. The traditional New Year's folklore remained under control.

As one law enforcement officer put it, people behaved themselves this year.

"Lawlessness fell; there were only a few traffic accidents, none involving death or serious injury. There were no other serious incidents either."

There were a few arrests for driving under the influence, but the reported only two DUIs. The Twin Falls County sheriff's office also had only two. Cassia County sheriff had two; Gooding County sheriff had four; and Blaine County had six.

The Idaho State Police in Twin Falls reported a total of eight DUIs.

where they are and more importantly, tells the public how the state is doing as to other schools in the state and region," Steadman said.

Beginning this fall, accreditation will also take on a bigger role. Idaho institutions of higher learning will be required to have a formal accreditation process. Steadman said. Unaccredited schools will also be barred from competing in athletic events with accredited schools.

Lack of accreditation at the high school level can be "fairly serious," he said.

Baucher said membership in the Northwest association allows schools to compare themselves with schools in other states.

Administrators also use the accreditation to help them improve their own operations, he said.

"It gives me ideas for future expenditures," Baucher said. "For example, the association pointed out that one of the schools in the Kimberly district looked as a quality number of counselors. As a result, an additional counseling counselor was budgeted for the next school year.

When the State Board of Education acts on the Northwest association recommendations, it will re-evaluate the names of the schools and why they have been warned or dropped from accreditation. The board's decision will follow the recommendations, Steadman said.

Baucher suspects that Idaho schools suffer during evaluations because of funding.

"Idaho gets by with a minimum amount of money," he said. "But at the same time, the state's schools are getting by on less costs."

According to the association procedure, the principal of each member school submits a report to the state committee chairman by the end of the year. The state committee reviews and evaluates the report and then recommends a classification to the commission on schools.

Little girls pull at nation's heartstrings

NEW YORK (AP) — A parade of little girls toddled into the public eye in 1987. The nation cheered its smallest survivors, mourned its thickest victims and argued over the baby with two first names and too many parents.

Jessica McClure, Cecelia Cichan and Tabitha Foster might have died, but didn't. Elizabeth, Lisa Steinberg shouldn't have died, but did. And Baby M became famous before her first birthday.

Legal scholars, child psychologists and people on the street debated the fate of the chubby baby girl thrust into the spotlight by an accident of birth.

The legal tug-of-war over Baby M landed in a New Jersey court after Mrs. Beth Whitehead, who gave birth to the girl under a $10,000 surrogate-parenting arrangement with William and Elizabeth Stern, decided to fight the contract.

When the Sterns won custody, March 31, Baby M was 369 days old. Mrs. Whitehead, who called her Sara, appealed the decision to the state Supreme Court. The Sterns, who called her Melissa, took her

"This battle is probably not over," said Dr. Robert Tomas, director of the Arizona Fertility Institute in Phoenix. "Baby M is in for trouble, but the odds are good for Baby N and P and Q, and hopefully, those babies won't have such problems."

Throughout the 28-hour rescue of 19-month-old Jessica McClure from an abandoned well, people across the nation bombarded Midland, Texas, with money, Teddy bears and balloons. A Gallup poll later showed that people were far more interested in Jessica than they were in the 1988 presidential race.

After she finally was retrieved Oct. 16, some 40,000 people turned out for a celebration parade festooned with pink ribbons.

Wintery devoted to show to her and President Reagan honored three federal mine safety agency workers who helped.

"I think we all said prayers for a happy ending," he said.

Cecelia Cichan's story was less about happy endings and more about a miracle in the midst of tragedy.

The 4-year-old was found strapped to her seat in the burning wreckage of Northwest Flight 255 at Detroit Metropolitan Airport. The Aug. 16 crash, which killed 168 people, including Cecelia's parents and brother, was the second worst in the nation's history.

Cecelia was the sole survivor. Strangers who already knew what Cecelia had not yet heard went thousands of dollars and carloads of toys to the hospital where she was recovering from serious burns.

She didn't cry when told that she'd never again see her parents or 6-year-old brother, she just asked what "never again" meant.

Death meant life for 3-year-old Tabitha Foster.

On Nov. 1, doctors at Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh performed the nation's third liver organ transplant, using donor organs from 2-month-old Heather Orick of Pennsylvania Gap, Va., a victim of a car accident.

The two previous recipients of the experimental surgery — the transplanting of a liver, pancreas, and parts of the small intestine, colon and stomach — died within four days. Four days after her operation, Tabitha was playing with her rag doll and singing "Itsy-Bitsy Spider" with a nurse.

Two weeks later, she was asking for pizza.

"Who knows?" her mother said. "Maybe she'll go down in history."

People know about Cecelia and Tabitha because they survived. They heard about Lisa Steinberg because she did not.

Virtually unknown in her brief life, Lisa drew thousands to her graveside after her death Nov. 2 in New York. Strangers left bunches of flowers outside the Greenwich Village apartment building where the 6-year-old had lived with her adoptive parents, who were charged with her murder.

For many, she became a symbol of all the battered children who live and die in anonymity.

"There is a particular pain in the death of Lisa," said the Rev. Kevin O'Brien at her funeral service, "because somehow, innocence and suffering should not go together."

Delays, complaints, crashes: a turbulent year for airlines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's airlines, with a little nudging from the federal government, apologized to the traveling public for service often less than satisfactory over the past year and promised to mend its ways.

Nearly a decade after Congress ordered the government to lift its tight controls over the airline industry, the effects of deregulation were felt as never before.

It was the year that a number of airlines found that gigantic mergers can bring as much turbulence and danger as any transportation. They grew so fast, we made mistakes, admitted Continental Airlines in an advertisement late in the year.

Continental Airlines and Northwest Airlines found themselves almost a year after months at the top of the complaint list in much of 1987 — a predicament spokesmen from both carriers attributed to problems related to recent mergers.

It also was the year that Congress prepared for lively approval in the coming months of a comprehensive consumer protection bill for air travelers. The Transportation Department, reacting to mounting complaints about delays, also ordered airlines to provide monthly on-time statistics and for the first time include on-time information on specific flights in the computerized reservation systems used by travel agents.

The major airlines agreed to juggle thousands of flights to help ease delays and make schedules more realistic to actual performance. By year's end the number of complaints to the Transportation Department was declining.

In 1987, the word "megacARRIER" drifted into general use as a synonym for mergers over a two-year period consolidated the industry into seven airlines that controlled 86 percent of the market. While the industry in general is expected to report operating profits of about $2.5 billion, two companies — Texas Air Corp., which owns Eastern and Continental, and Pan American World Airways — are likely to show substantial losses, according to industry analysts.

Meanwhile, some aviation safety advocates began wondering whether the dramatic economic changes that swept the industry might affect safety.

Two airline crashes in which pilot performance may have played a major part caught the headlines: the Federal Aviation Administration accepted surveillance of Eastern Airlines because of bitter labor disputes; and the number of near-collision reports soared with a 50 percent increase at the end of nine months.

As the year drew toward a close, 227 people had been killed in three crashes involving major U.S. airlines in 1987. It was the highest number of fatalities in five years, according to the National Transportation Safety Board. An additional 37 people were killed in accidents on scheduled commuter flights.

THE AIR LINE NORTHWEST AIRLINES jetliner crashed seconds after lifting off from the Detroit airport, killing 166 people. Three months later a Continental Airlines DC-9 crashed while taking off Nov. 16 from the Denver airport, killing 28 of the 82 people aboard.

Pilot mistakes have been cited as likely culprits in both accidents as investigators determined that the crew failed to extend the plane's flaps in the Detroit accident and that the pilots may not have adequately deiced their plane in the Denver crash.

On Dec. 7 a Pacific Southwest Airlines jet crashed, killing all 43 people aboard, after one of the passengers smuggled a gun on board and opened fire during the flight, possibly shooting the pilot. The crash prompted new concerns about security at major airports as congressional investigators also revealed security shortcomings with passenger and airline employee screening programs.

While a Gallup poll showed that 64 percent of the people queried felt that air travel was less safe in 1987 than before deregulation, a record number of people nevertheless flew during the year. According to the Air Transport Association, the airlines carried about 460 million passengers, nearly 40 million more than last year.

It is anticipated that 1988 will be another record, said William Holger, the ATA's president in a year-end review.

Perhaps nowhere was the debate about airline service and safety louder in 1987 than on Capitol Hill. "A free market does not give airlines the right to run roughshod over their passengers," declared Rep. Norman Mineta, chairman of the House Aviation Subcommittee. During debate on a consumer bill to help air travelers, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum declared: "Air passengers need all the help they can get these days. Long delays, cancellations, missed connections, and last-minute rule the day. More than ever before, there was talk of bringing government regulation, at least partially, back to the airline industry."

1987 the toughest year in Reagan presidency

WASHINGTON (AP) — From the lows of the Iran-Contra affair to the highs of the superpower summit, President Reagan is turning the year on the toughest year of his presidency and preparing to count the final months in the White House.

Reagan's seventh year in power is filled with defeats and disappointments, as well as the loss of watching his wife, Nancy, undergo surgery for removal of her uterus, left breast, and then to the death of her mother.

The president had his own medical problems. In January, he underwent surgery for an enlarged prostate and also had four benign tumors removed from his colon. In July, doctors removed a patch of cancer from his nose.

Nevertheless, Reagan seemed unchanged, irrefragably upbeat and optimistic. White House chief of staff Howard Baker said the president was "essentially as happy and buoyed by a new arms treaty with the Soviet Union and his wife's recovery."

However, Mrs. Reagan said, "It's been a great year. It's been the best I think you can get."

With his lame-duck status and an incoming presidential election campaign, Reagan's achievements in 1987 probably will be limited. "In terms of his capacity to do anything I think it's pretty much checked out," said James David Barber, a presidential scholar and political scientist at Duke University.

He said the past year "has clearly been a delusion and a debacle" with revelations that the president was not a decisive leader and was detached from key areas of policy-making.

With Congress firmly in the hands of Democrats, Reagan's political and prestige were severely undercut by the Iran-Contra affair. A majority of Americans thought the president was lying about the episode, according to polls, and Congress no longer seemed afraid of him.

The Reagan-Uganda seemed to have vanished, unlike earlier years, when he took his case to the people in 1987 and asked them to lobby Congress, the telephones were silent.

On two major issues where he waged a two-front, costly-high-way bill and a water cleanup measure, Congress overturned him.

His call for an "Economic Bill of Rights" with a constitutional amendment for a balanced budget fell on deaf ears and was finally abandoned.

Not once but twice Reagan failed to get as nominees on the Supreme Court: first Robert Bork after a politically charged fight — and then Douglas Ginsburg after an embarrassing revelation he had smoked marijuana.

His third nominee for the seat, Anthony Kennedy, appears likely to win confirmation.

Michael Deaver, a longtime aide whom Reagan is said to regard as a son, was convicted of lying to a congressional subcommittee and a federal grand jury.

Attorney General Edwin Meese, another longtime associate, was under investigation by two grand juries, one probing the Iran-Contra affair and another investigating the scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp. And Lyn Nofziger, also a longtime friend, faces trial on charges of violating federal ethics laws.

None of his California cronies remains at the White House, and its whole staff has been revamped in the past year because of the Iran-Contra affair.

Though no one held him personally responsible, the stock market went into a sickening nosedive and collapsed 608 points on his watch Oct. 19 — a day that will be remembered as "Black Monday." It was a particular blow for 87 president who liked to describe his economic program as "Reaganomics" and forced him to drop his once-rigid opposition to tax increases.

However, Reagan and his top aides remained upbeat about the overall health of the economy, and the president boasted that the business recovery from the 1981-82 recession had been the longest in post-war history — 60 months.

The Iran-Contra affair that dogged him all year came to a head Nov. 18 when the House and Senate investigators' committees issued their report on the matter. Unlike the study by the Tower Board that preceded it, the congressional report said Reagan set a tone of leadership that led aides to believe they could skirt the law.

The report said this atmosphere spawned a "cabal of zealots" in the White House who displayed a "disdain for the law."

Reagan did not offer a substantive reply to the report. But Baker, the president's chief of staff, said, "I can't tell you that he really, really did not like it, and really, really feels personally put upon by many of the implications and many of the assertions in the report."

The one big plus of the year was the summit, a three-day extravaganza of meetings with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev that riveted world attention.

The summit produced the signing of one treaty to eliminate intermediate-range nuclear missiles, and held out the hope of achieving another agreement — to cut long-range strategic weapons by about 50 percent.

Reagan is supposed to visit Moscow for another superpower summit before June, and a treaty — or the outline of one — might be ready for signing then.

Despite NASA criticism, Thiokol claims test was a success

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — Morton, the first American manned space flight, space company still considered the Decem- Thiokol, stung by NASA's announcement since a faulty booster leaked super-hot ber test-firing at its Wasatch Operations plant 25 miles west of Brigham City "in- checked Dec. 23 test-firing of the redesigned seven-member crew. The Challenger and its de- ded highly successful."

NASA's announcement was the second blow in what turned out to be a black Tues- day for Morton Thiokol. Investigators were still sifting through debris from the fire- Friday, trying to determine why 100,000 of- long rocket's nozzle boot ring had failed — just a few hours after a flash fire killed four employees and fatally burned another work- ing on the first stage of an MX missile. NASA said the company would have to be redesigned, delaying the scheduled June 1 launch of the Discovery — what was to be Rocky Raab said the Chicago-based aero-

NASA's announcement was the second blow in what turned out to be a black Tues- day for Morton Thiokol. Investigators were still sifting through debris from the fire- Friday, trying to determine why 100,000 of- long rocket's nozzle boot ring had failed — just a few hours after a flash fire killed four employees and fatally burned another work- ing on the first stage of an MX missile. NASA said the company would have to be redesigned, delaying the scheduled June 1 launch of the Discovery — what was to be Rocky Raab said the Chicago-based aeromissing material later was discovered in- side the motor. The outer boot ring, made of carbon-phenolic composite with a ceram- hardens, anchors one end of the nozzle's foot. The ring, about 2 inches thick and 7 inches wide, is a part of the shuttle motor nozzle, which directs and increases the ve- locity of the exhaust gases to produce thrust and also serves an insulating function. But, Raab emphasizes, it is not a seal.

Raab said no comment or decisions re- garding the redesign will be made until a thorough study of the cause of the ring breakage is completed by NASA and Morton Thiokol engineers over the next two to three weeks.

There will be some kind of delay to the test schedule and a similar launch delay. But it's too early to say whether it's a matter of weeks or months," he said.

He said further examination has shown that there seems to be no heat damage to the ring or any other part. He also stressed that there is no connection with the ring fail- ure and the redesigned case-to-nozzle joint, which apparently performed flawlessly dur- ing the two-minute test.

Salt Lake sets record for volume lost in year

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The National Weather Service says that the Great Salt Lake lost more vol- ume in 1987 than during any previ- ous year, having lost more than 3.7 million acre feet in the past 12 months. Bill Alder, chief meteorologist of the U.S. Geological Survey, said the 80-mile long, 30-mile wide lake is at its lowest level since February 1986. Alder said that a record volume drop for this year. The previous record was 3.14 million acre-feet in 1989.

moth pumps are siphoning excess water into Utah's western desert. The pumping project was begun in the wake of several years of ris- ing levels on the lake, blamed for more than $100 million in damage to shoreline industries and property. U.S. Geological Survey hydrolog- ists found that the lake had dipped to its low for the year on Dec. 20, hit- ting 4209.35 feet above sea level. On Wednesday, the lake was up to 4209.4, although that might reflect only a short-term fluctuation be- cause of recent storms. "The lake will normally continue to go up until the spring or early summer," said Lee Cuse, USGS dis- trict chief.

Payment promised to Purvis

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — "The man who oversaw construction of the U.S. Pavilion for the 1982 Seat- tle World's Fair received a Christ- mas present from President Reagan this week. Unfortunately, it was about 25 years late."

The lake level had dropped 30 in- ches from the March 30, 1987, high of 4211.85. 1987's decline has ex- posed about 100 square miles of land that had been inundated. "Normally the lake begins its an- nual rise on Nov. 1," Alder said. "It is not unusual for the lake to start its annual rise this late in the year. Thirty-one times since 1903 the lake started its rise on later than Jan. 16."

"You may be confident that if Congress approves S. (Senate Bill) 109, a measure that would allow you to receive the money which you have been due for so many years, I will promptly sign it," wrote Reagan in the letter dated Dec. 24. "I'm very happy to receive it," Purvis said Wednesday. "The bill should be a relief to him since some time in January, I thought it was a really nice letter."

The Senate bill, and a duplicate making its way through the House, would grant Purvis a portion of the interest owed him on the govern- ment's overdue payment of $390,000. He received that money in 1981 after nearly 20 years of hear- ings and court decisions. But by then, the entire amount had been spent by Purvis on debt to a bond- ing company and lawyers.

The interest payment authorized by the bill amounts to almost dou- ble the principal overdue debt Purvis was owed by the government.

When he built many public buildings in the Pacific Northwest, including Boise's United Methodist Cathedral of the Rockies, won the $3 million contract to build the U.S. Pavilion in 1961, but that was the last thing he won for several years.

Nearly 80 change orders delayed construction and increased the cost of the pre-cast, pre-stressed con- crete panel building, which now is known as the Pacific Science Center.

It was finished in time for the April 1962 fair opening, but Purvis had $600,000 of his own money in the building by then and was deeply in debt. When the subcontractors who worked on the pavilion project said to get their money, he was forced to take out a $1.5 million loan from a bonding company to pay them.

As long as that loan was unpaid, Purvis Construction Co. could not be bonded for new contracts. When Purvis sued the bonding company for its failure to pay off bills, Purvis turned to new ways to make a living while he continued to press the government for payment to cover the overrun charges. About 15 years ago he began selling cloth- ing to retailers in Montana, Washington, Oregon and Idaho.

Today, he's on the road three or four days a week to support himself and his family.

He also is monitoring the pending congressional bills. They are in re- sponse to a $2.5 million suit Purvis filed in 1980 against the government, requesting the interest on the $390,000 finally paid him in 1981.

U.S. Geological Survey hydrolog- ists found that the lake had dipped to its low for the year on Dec. 20, hit- ting 4209.35 feet above sea level. On Wednesday, the lake was up to 4209.4, although that might reflect only a short-term fluctuation be- cause of recent storms. "The lake will normally continue to go up until the spring or early summer," said Lee Cuse, USGS dis- trict chief.

Utah's first babies arrive to controversy

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Call it a tie? Two babies were born within a breath of each other just a tick after midnight New Year's Eve, making selection of the state's first baby of 1988 controversial. "Because of the so-called 'leap second' in which scientists adjusted official time by one second, there was some question over which infant was first."

LDS Hospital nurses argued that Andrew Robson Blatter deserves the honor. But University of Utah Health Sciences staff insist it actually should be Nicholle Marie Krause, the eventual winner of an annual contest sponsored by the Newspaper Agency Corp. and a LDS of prizes.

For a while, LDS Hospital contended that because Nicholle was born at 12:00:01 a.m. MST, she was ac- tually born in 1988, not 1987.

But Dr. Paul Johnston, called to the U of U at 5:30 a.m. to deliver another baby, solved the dilemma. He said he delivered Nicholle at 12:00:01 a.m., even though the official delivery record said 12:00:01. "This is as honest a delivery as could conceivably be had," he said. "It was all the way natural."

pulling the baby's feet out exactly two seconds after midnight. Vicki Rosser, a U of U nurse who assisted in the delivery, said even if the baby had been born at 12:00:01, Nicholle would have still been the year's first.

"I checked with the hospital engineers and they said they had adjusted the clocks to comply for the extra second," she said. "I don't know if they really did, but that's what they said."

LDS Hospital nurses seem to have their doubts, but they too celebrated the fact that both New Year's babies were healthy and their parents happy. "I am so excited. I love her. She is so pretty," noted tired but elated birth Cindy Krause said about Nicholle, who weighed in at 6 pounds 11 1/2 ounces.

The former Smith's Food King employee said her hopes and dreams for her little girl are simple. "I just hope she grows up to be a good person and that she goes somewhere with her life."

Bill and Carolyn Blatter, whose son was born at LDS Hospital at 12:00:12 a.m., said they were just happy their baby, 7 pounds 12 ounces, is healthy.

Spud stocks near record

BOISE (AP) — The amount of potatoes being held by Idaho growers, dealers and processors as full come to a close hit the third highest level ever, the government reported.

Potato stocks in the state on Dec. 1 totaled 7.28 billion pounds, up 200 million pounds from a year ago and less than 600 million pounds below the record storage level set on Dec. 1, 1978.

Nationally, potato stocks in the 15 major-producing states were up 7 percent from a year ago but below the stockpiles in 1985, following that year's massive harvest.

Although the December reporting period — traditionally shows the largest stockpile of the year — the high number of potatoes in storage at the end of 1987 was also a reflection of another huge harvest in Idaho this year.

Producers took just under 1.9 billion pounds of potatoes out of the fields last fall, marking the third largest harvest on record in Idaho. But the huge output has sent mar- ket prices tumbling and many growers have been waiting for an upturn before selling their crop.

Disappearance of potatoes in Idaho so far this year totaled just over 2.7 billion pounds.

Firefighter jumps in cold canal, rescues woman from car

PHOENIX, AZ. (AP) — A Metro Fire Department's "diving" firefighter making a routine New Year's Eve car occupancy check and returned to his van. He ended up jumping into water. He already present and had the car in rescue. A woman whose car had not springs, so he jumped in up- plunged into a canal, authorities stream and drifted down.

"When I got to the car, I opened the door, stuck my arms in, and I found no one."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

ROBBY WOLFF

"What is more mortifying than to feel that you have missed the plum (or want of courage to shake the tree)?"

Logan Pearsall Smith

PUR yourself in today's West chair and follow the action against South's no-trump game. What do you do after you score your second black queen?

Dummy's heart jack wins, and a low club goes to South's king. West's queen. West continues with a heart to dummy's king, and another finesse loses when a spade is led to South's 10 and West's queen. Do you play to a third heart or do you lead away from your diamond king?

If you lead a "safe" heart, South wins and scores an overtrick after knocking out East's ace of spades. When John Bromberg of Dallas held the West cards, he shifted to the diamond ace after he had won the queen of spades.

South established three defensive diamonds winners before the spade ace was gone. The game now failed by two tricks.

Was it risky for West to lead away from the diamond king into an opening no-trump bid? No. West's shift to take time to visualize South's entire hand. The play in clubs marks South with the ace and jack, he is also known to have the heart ace. The spade finesse places a spade honor with South, bringing South's known total to 12-13 AGT. Ergo, since he cannot hold more than the diamond ace, the diamond shift is a well-reasoned play.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

What is more mortifying than to feel that you have missed the plum for want of courage to shake the tree?

Put yourself in today's West chair and follow the action against South's no-trump game. What do you do after you score your second black queen...

Dummy's heart jack wins and a low club goes to South's jack. West's queen. West continues with a heart to dummy's king, and another finesse loses when a spade is led to South's 10 and West's queen. Do you plug away with a third heart or do you lead away from your diamond...

When John Bromberg of Dallas held the West cards, he shifted to the diamond double after he had won the trick. This was a brilliant shift because three defensive diamonds were before the spade ace was gone. The game was played by two tricks.

Was it risky for West to lead away from the diamond king into an opening no-trump bid? Not if West takes time to visualize South's entire hand. The play in clubs marks South with the ace and jack; he is also known to have the heart ace. The spade finesse places a spade honor with South, bringing South's known total to 12-13 HCP.

When you have a diamond double, the diamond ace, the diamond shift is a well-reasoned play.

Answers: Two hearts. Try out the six-card heart suit; it may be the best trump suit.

This is my favorite week of the year. I get all by Christmas things, family is together, and best of all, we always sell more cars this week than any other week in the whole year. We pull out all the stops; the factories always have a big push with rebates, incentives, low interest, whatever it takes. This year is going to be the best! Look at these examples:
