Japan may drop bars to U.S. farm exports

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Japanese Foreign Minister Sosuke Uno, preparing for the first meeting between Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita and President Reagan, Tuesday presented Secretary of State George P. Shultz with a package of proposals to improve U.S.-Japanese relations.

Among them was one that could open the door to American participation in large-scale public works projects in Japan.

Uno also pledged that Japan would bear the cost of all fringe benefits paid to some 22,000 Japanese workers at U.S. bases in Japan by fiscal 1990, paying an extra $200 million. And he indirectly signaled Japan's willingness to lift import quotas on at least 10 farm products, an issue on which the Reagan administration has placed a high priority.

The initiative drew a favorable reaction from U.S. officials. A senior administration official, who asked to remain anonymous, said the improved access to public works projects "will meet what we want perhaps in the opening of the Japanese market to American bids and American firms" but added, "That's what we have to clarify."

With Japan's likely concession on the agricultural import quotas, "We feel that that matter is pretty well taken care of," he said.

Takeshita, who arrived in Washington Tuesday, is expected to meet with Reagan today in a three-day visit that will be his first major test in diplomacy since taking office in November. The visit, which also includes a speech at the National Press Club Thursday and meetings with congressional leaders, is intended to ease tensions that have been aggravated by Japan's trade barriers and its substantial trade surplus with the United States.

Before leaving Japan, Takeshita said that he wanted to persuade Reagan that "Japan is a good partner of the United States" and said it was essential for him to "establish a close personal relationship" with the President.

"Our relations with the United States provide the very underpinning of Japan's foreign policy," he said.

In his stage-setting session with Shultz, Uno acknowledged for the first time that Japan had a de facto barrier to participation by American construction companies in its designated bidding system for public works contracts. Uno told Shultz, "I was willing to negotiate a special agreement to remove it."

"Japan maintains a principle of no discrimination between foreign and domestic companies in its designated bidding system for public works contracts," Uno told Shultz, "according to Keiji Watanabe, director of the Foreign Ministry's Economic Affairs Bureau. But because winning government designation as an eligible bidder on such projects is based upon a record of results to

Outline comes today New budget may top $700 million

The Associated Press

BOISE — Idaho lawmakers are beginning to consider a Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus' plan that would spend over $700 million in the new state budget, he will outline today.

But the big mystery in the Capitol on the eve of the budget message was how the chief executive planned to pay the bill.

"Where's his going to get the money — that's the 64-dollar question," Senate GOP Caucus Chairman Jerry Twigg of Blackfoot said Tuesday.

Andrus had kept his budget plan under tight security. Even members of his own party have been kept in the dark.

But based on his public statements and conservative lawmakers are bracing for another 7 percent increase in proposed state spending at a time when the economy is expected to boost to only 2 percent to 3 percent.

The difference could be $30 million or more.

After finally embracing the governor's ambitious $667.3 million spending plan last year and the $100 million tax package to underwrite it, leaders of the Republican majority have consistently said they would hold the line on both spending and taxes this year as they head into the 1988 political campaign.

And even some Democrats are wondering about the kind of election-year tax hike Andrus will have to propose to finance his public commitments.

"We're supportive of what he's doing, but we don't know what he's coming up with," Senate Democratic Floor Leader Bruce Sweeney, of Lewiston, said. "We'll support it down the line. But all of us are running for re-election next year."

DUI tests, school mergers — A3; B1

The debate has already taken on the tone of a classic political struggle, with the governor reportedly prepared to fend off opposition charges that he is a big spender just as he did a year ago.

The bulk of the budget increases Andrus was expected to seek will be needed to pay for the second installment of the four-year plan to move public and higher education teacher salaries to the national average and underwrite basic cost-of-living pay hikes for all state workers.

"We have planted seedlings in education and economic development, but they will not bear the fruit of good workers and productive jobs if we let those trees wither and die," Andrus told lawmakers in his State of the State address. "Our job is to nourish them."

City care standards murkier

By BART JANSEN
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Daycare standards, already confusing at the state level, are even murkier within Twin Falls city.

Rules are developing statewide under a daycare law passed during the 1987 Legislature. They feature fire and health department inspections, coordinated by the state Department of Health and Welfare, governing three types of daycare facilities.

But the same law that rescued Idaho from distinction as the only state without a daycare law may also weaken daycare standards in Twin Falls.

The city follows the Uniform Building Code, which is stricter than the new daycare law. So building inspectors have asked the City Council which standards to follow.

"We know it's a fairly controversial issue," said Jim Leichter, of J-U-B Engineers, at a Monday council work session. "We're really looking for your guidance." J-U-B holds the contract for city building inspections.

The City Council must now decide whether to stick with its tough standards or weaken its standards to agree with state law.

Word of the standard change, with increased publicity about daycare standards, applications began pouring in from people seeking to switch the use of their homes to simple residences to daycare facilities.

Inspectors then found that homes didn't meet UBC standards for such things as exits or handicapped access. A handful of applications await action and another 16 homes may have already switched to

Laser cleans blood of AIDS virus

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A medical research team in Texas, financed in part by the Pentagon's Star Wars anti-missile program, has concluded that lasers can be used to cleanse donated blood of the deadly AIDS virus and other infectious agents.

Dr. James L. "Les" Matthews said in an interview that his team had demonstrated that the combination of a non-toxic dye and laser light could destroy a number of viruses in blood — including the AIDS virus — without harming the blood itself.

The team was from the staff of the Baylor University Medical Center and Baylor Research Foundation in Dallas.

The procedure for now remains experimental and has been tested only on a small scale in the laboratory, Matthews said. But with follow-up work, he said, it appears the laser-dye procedure could be used to cleanse blood at a "flow rate" of about a pint every 16 minutes — sufficient to allow its use by blood banks.

That, in turn, could offer blood banks a virtual foolproof means of guaranteeing the safety of their donated supplies.

According to Matthews, the laser system has so far been tested on flowing blood containing the herpes simplex virus and on a flowing culture medium containing the AIDS virus. In those tests, measurements have been completed demonstrating the viral agents were completely destroyed, he said.

Blood containing the AIDS virus has also been put through the system, but no measurements have been made after that type of experiment.

Interest in occult leads to lad's death

The Associated Press

NEWARK, N.J. — In November, Thomas Sullivan Jr.'s Catholic school teacher assigned students to read the scriptures.

The studious 14-year-old boy in his paper on Hinduism but police say he became more interested in the subject that earned friends an A: antianism.

"Within weeks, the all-American neighborhood paperboy became defiant, hostile, teen buried in his diary books on the occult and listening to heavy metal rock music. His teachers noticed the transformation and warned his mother last Thursday."

Police say Sullivan was entranced by the occult as he stabbed his mother at least 12 times and tried to kill his father and 10-year-old brother by setting fire to their Jefferson Township house. Then he slit his throat and wrists with a Boy Scout knife, slumping dead on bloody snow in a neighbor's backyard.

Word of the murder-suicide and the hint of occult worship among other youngsters left the rural 45-square-mile township in northwestern New Jersey searching for answers to questions few ever imagined asking.

"I'm willing to bet there's got to be more involved," Mayor Fran Slatton said. "There's just something that's bothering me about this situation. It bothers me that a good kid like that can go in two weeks."

Investigators then found that homes didn't meet UBC standards for such things as exits or handicapped access. A handful of applications await action and another 16 homes may have already switched to

He said his son had told a friend of a vision in which Satan came to him wearing his face and urged him to kill his family and preach satanism.

"The rest, I think, is history," Sullivan said.

Airline crashes, deaths up sharply during 1987

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Major U.S. airlines in 1987 had the highest number of accidents in 13 years and the most deaths in five years while commuter carriers had their worst safety record of this decade, the National Transportation Safety Board reported Tuesday.

The board said the large airlines had 31 accidents last year, including four crashes involving fatalities, the commuter airlines, which fly smaller planes, had 36 accidents and 63 deaths in 1987, the largest number for that segment of the industry since 1979 when 66 people died.

The 31 accidents among the U.S. airlines flying large jet aircraft was the highest figure since 1974 when the airlines had 42 accidents. The 231 fatalities were topped during the past decade only by 1979 when 361 people died and 1982 when 233 were killed, according to the board.

Airline industry officials suggested, however, that the total accident and fatality figures are misleading.

"They say the ratio of accidents involving fatalities — 0.043 percent — is lower than in most years although significantly higher than the rate in 1986 when there was

100,000 departures — was lower than in 1987 — than in most years although significantly higher than the rate in 1986 when there was ment to confirm the AIDS virus was completely killed, he says said.

"But we are confident now the (laser) exposure system does kill the AIDS virus (in the culture) and also that the presence of blood doesn't interfere with the effective-ness of the system," he continued.
"However, we have additional tests to perform. We regard this as a model system that we propose to develop further. Our guess is that it will take at least three years, and maybe up to five years at the most to refine it."

The new procedure, under development since 1984, takes advantage of the fact that tumors and certain viral cells absorb or retain dyes to a greater extent than surrounding tissue or cells.

"The dye-laden tumors or cells are then 'irradiated' with laser light, a light-activated chemical process is set off that destroys the viral cells, the researcher said."

Matthews said he and seven colleagues initially began their work by experimenting with the dye-laser killing combination on the herpes simpler virus in a standing culture. Experiments then were begun using the laser on herpes in a culture medium until it flowed through a tube; then on flowing blood with the herpes virus, and then on flowing culture mediums with the AIDS virus.

The tests with the herpes virus, which serves as an excellent model, demonstrated the laser-dye combination can provide a 100-percent viral-kill without seeing any evidence of damage to the normal blood elements," Matthews said.

Besides the herpes and AIDS viruses, the technique also has been successfully tested on measles and another virus known as "CMV, or cytomegalovirus," Matthews said.

A scientific paper written by Matthews and his team explaining the work was published Tuesday in "Transfusion," the journal of the American Association of "Blood Banks."

Defense Department officials had disclosed the research three months ago in discussing beneficial "spin-off" programs, but Matthews declined interviews pending publication of the paper. He agreed to speak Monday.

AIDS - acquired immune deficiency syndrome - is a fatal disease that cripples the body's ability to protect itself against infection. No cure has been found. According to the Centers for Disease Control, 50 AIDS epidemics in the United States has just surpassed the 50,000-case mark.

The disease can be transmitted through tainted blood, donations and for that reason, the Red Cross and other blood-collection organizations now routinely screen all donated blood for the virus.

Recent medical research indicates, however, it is possible for a donor to show no sign of the disease for some months after he is first exposed.

"The possibility that transfusion-associated AIDS may result from a blood unit 'that tested negative makes it imperative that a safe and effective means of viral killing be developed," Matthews paper said.

The system reported here offers promise as an effective approach to this problem.

daycare before these discrepancies come to light.

"It's really a mixed bag," Leichter said of homes previously approved for daycare - some of which comply with UBC standards while others fail to comply.

The issue boils down to the same question debated last year in the Legislature: Where is the line drawn between raising standards to protect children and the possibly prohibitive costs of making those improvements?

Mayor Doug Vollmer noted that it cost $400,000 to install handicapped access at his office.

"If you start getting into that much cost of this, nobody will get into it," said Councilman Jim Vickers.

"In the situation," said Bill Block, also of U.B. "Some of these expenses are restrictive."

"At the same time, we have our obligation to the children that are going to use these facilities," Block added.

The Fire Marshal Bill Wallis considered UBC standards important enough to become his guidelines for fire inspections under the state law.

But the law's authors, Sens. Denton Darrington, R-Declo, and Mike Grapo, R-Idaho Falls, criticized those standards for going beyond the law's intent and Wallis-backed off the stricter UBC rules.

Still, Wallis wrote a disclaimer for fire inspection forms stating the inspections do not guarantee safety in many areas.

Five standards under the daycare law require smoke alarms, telephones, fire extinguishers and adequate exits. Also, a maximum 1-to-12 ratio of staff to children was established.

Another discrepancy between the state daycare law and the UBC stems from the number of children at the facility.

"Uniform Building Code kicks in at six and the state law kicks in at 13 children," Leichter said.

The state daycare law calls for fire and health inspections for homes with 13 or more children and sets fire standards that could be monitored by district health departments for facilities with between seven and 12 children.

District health departments decided not to take responsibility for ensuring fire standards, so apparently only facilities with 13 or more children will have to be inspected and licensed.

Homes with less than seven children are not required to be licensed at all.

But the UBC sets standards for homes with as few as six children.

"Even at 12 and above the requirements are not as stringent as ours would be at six under the Uniform Building Code," Leichter said.

Another facet of the issue is the consequence of the City Council exempting daycares from the UBC, while strictly enforcing that law on other businesses applying to change uses of their buildings.

Leichter said he was worried about discriminating against other businesses where we're enforcing to the letter of the law (UBC).

The council turned the matter over to City Attorney Fritz Wonderlich to study the city's options. A council decision to either soften city codes or stick with tougher UBC standards could come as early as Monday's regular council meeting.

Section 39-1108 of the daycare law allows cities and counties to approve local options with stricter standards, provided they keep criminal background checks and fire and health standards at least as stringent as the law.

only one fatality involving major U.S. air carriers.

"There were only six other years since the 1950s that the percentage of flights in 1987 had a lower (fatal accident rate)," said William F. Bolger, president of the Air Transport Association, which represents the major air carriers.

Bolger said the airlines carried more than 460 million passengers on nearly 7 million flights during 1987, and that 17 of the 31 accidents involved some sort of injury. The NTSB counts an accident whenever there is a significant injury or aircraft damage. Incidents involving heavy turbulence in which there is a significant injury also is classified as an accident.

During 1987, the major airline accident rate - covering fatal and non-fatal accidents - was 0.43 per 100,000 departing passengers, up from 0.31 the previous year, the safety board said. The accident rate for commuters was 1.43 per 100,000 departures, the highest since 1981.

The major airline accident figures listed include the crash of Pacific Southwest Airways jet Dec. 7 in which the cause is believed to have been a passenger firing a gun in the cockpit. The PSA crash, which claimed 43 lives, was included in the NTSB's total accident and death figures, however.

The other major accidents during the year were the crash of a Northwest Airlines jetliner Aug. 16 near Detroit killing 156 people; the crash of a Continental Airlines DC-9 Nov. 15 in Denver killing 28 people; and the crash of a Bufile Airways jet April 13 near Kansas City killing all four people aboard.

date, there is an impediment for foreign companies," Watanabe said in a press briefing.

"Watanabe acknowledged that largely as a result of the requirement, American companies have won virtually no bids on large public construction projects. Last year, Congress retaliated by approving a ban - which has not yet become law - on Japanese participation in federally-funded public works projects in the United States.

The U.S. also accepted a proposal by Uno to begin negotiations on new bidding policy specifications to allow foreign firms to obtain designation so they can participate," Watanabe said.

As least a multibillion-dollar projects, including construction of a bridge across Tokyo Bay, are planned in the near future.

Watanabe also disclosed that Uno promised Shultz a "clear-cut response" to U.S. demands that Japan limit its export of 12 agricultural imports when the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade holds a general assembly meeting in February. Last month Japan rejected a GAFTT ruling that 10 of the 12 quotas were illegal. Officials indicated that Uno's remark suggests a reversal in that position.

The items include evaporated milk and cream, processed cheese, processed beef and pork, fruit juices, fruit purees, pineapples, tomato ketchup, glucose and caramels, starches, ice cream powder, peanuts, and beans other than soybeans.

In a reversal of a policy upheld until former Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone stepped down two months ago, Uno also told Shultz that the Takeshita government will submit to Parliament a new agreement covering U.S.-Japan sharing of the labor costs of Japanese workers - at U.S. bases in Japan.

Nakasone's government had refused to alter the current agreement, which limits Japan's share of fringe benefit costs to half.

Under the proposal, Japan would more than double - to nearly $600 million - its payments for workers' benefits in fiscal 1990, Japanese officials explained.

Uno also told Shultz Japan would earmark $4 billion in new foreign aid loans to Latin America, a region of major interest to the United States where Japanese aid was sparse. Uno also said he himself planned to visit Latin America this year.

The total number of fatalities declined to a record low of 788 in general aviation.

Meanwhile, pilots of small private planes had one of their safest years in 1987. They had a fatal accident rate of 1.45 per 100,000 hours flown during the year, the lowest in 10 years. It was the fifth straight year of declining fatality rates for so-called general aviation aircraft.

Now, "I'm surprised I'm still here." Investigators said the boy indicated in a suicide note that the murder and suicide were planned and influenced by his interest in the occult. They also said the teenager argued with his mother before the attack.

Last week, Sullivan was caught passing classmate a note that had to be reversed and held up to the light to be read, police Chief George Stamer said.

The note's message seemed to be in Latin and had to do with the occult, he said. Now, Stamer is trying to determine if other area youngsters are involved.

"This is a whole new area for me. I spent most of last night trying to read up on what I could get my hands on," Stamer said. "I made a couple of calls to psychologists, who briefed me a little bit to help me get a better understanding of what was going on." At the school on Tuesday, several guidance counselors and priests from the Roman Catholic Diocese of Paterson were helping students cope.

The counselors' role at the moment is listening, letting the kids know "it's OK to ask questions, to grieve, to cry," said Jim Manning, a diocesan spokesman.

"Generally, the questions being asked are about good vs. evil. Specifically, what power can Satan have in a person's life?" he said.

Winter festivals conflict

ARCO (AP) — Conflicting schedules for snow sculpture contests this month appear to have put at least a temporary chill on attempts to improve relations between Arco and Idaho Falls.

Care center could lose federal funds

CALDWELL (AP) — A Caldwell nursing home will lose Medicare and Medicaid funding if problems found during a recent state inspection are not corrected by Jan. 22, authorities say.

Casade's problems began in September after a routine licensing survey found deficiencies in nursing care, said Jean Schoonover, chief of the Idaho Bureau of Facility Standards.

Felton leaves legacy of professionalism

Some public officials seek reelection because they're not employable in the real world of work, and they know it. They build expensive fiefdoms in public employment, adding staff and increasing taxpayer expenses, then justify their actions with pronouncements about how they have an "obligation" to finish what they've started.

But none of this applies to Twin Falls County Commissioner Judy Felton, who announced this week that she will step aside when her term expires at the end of 1988.

Felton has brought genuine class to county government, indeed, her successor will have a tough time matching Felton's accessibility, openness and responsiveness to her constituents.

And unless that person is a strong individual, he or she is also likely to fall into the siege mentality which infects some other offices in Twin Falls County government.

Her successor may also find it difficult to resist the many pressures which holding local political office entails.

Felton was particularly adept, for example, in upholding the people's right to make decisions on such issues as extended liquor hours and hospital restructuring.

In both cases, vocal special interests wanted the decisions to go the other way.

Ahead lie other tasks for her successor and the new commission. Two come to mind:

•County court and prosecution costs are exploding and future commissioners will have to deal with those costs in more severe terms.

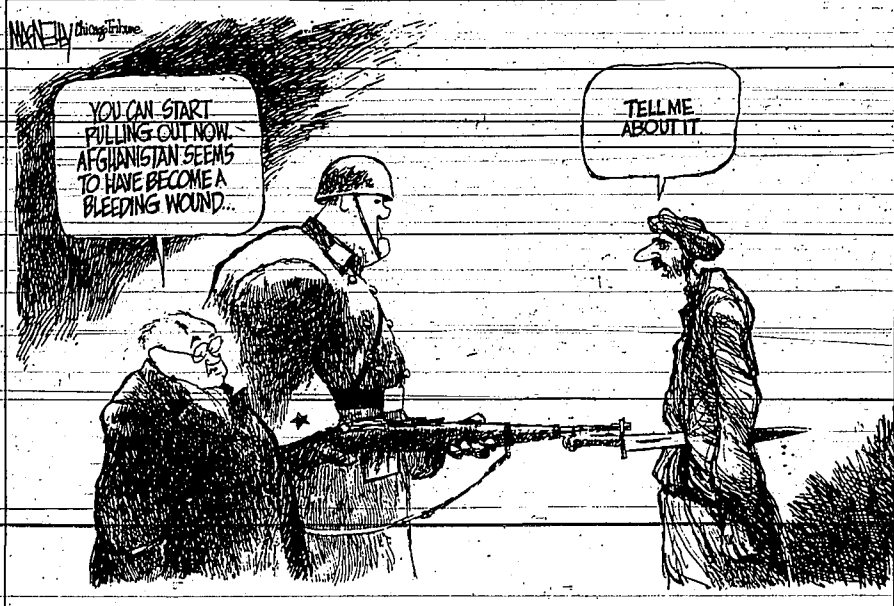

•The county clerk's office under Dick Pence remains an inefficient backwater which merits continued close monitoring by both the commissioners and citizens.

But Felton can look back on a number of successes. In her six years in office, the county, for example, has been successful in gaining more control of expanding indigent expenses; in designing in getting a vote for a new jail; and in remodeling the courthouse for energy efficiency.

Felton has left the door open as a candidate for another office, perhaps in the Idaho legislature, and we think she should give such options considerable thought.

As someone who has served her Twin Falls County constituents for six years, we think Felton would make an admirable candidate and an excellent public servant.

But whatever her decision, we extend her our thanks and appreciation and wish her the best. She has done an excellent job of representing us all.

47-year debt, conscience both cleared

Wayne Shivley

I really believe you will find this to be one of the strangest and unconventional letters to cross your desk in years. I have for the last 47 years, owed your company $4.75.

From the summer of 1939 through the spring of 1941, I was a paperboy in Wendell delivering the Evening News and the Morning Times. I moved away in the summer of 1941 and finished high school in Ft. Worth, Texas. But I'm getting ahead of myself.

I took the route over from a tall, lanky kid by the name of Ralph "Spider" Anderson. Spider played basketball, was end on our football team and was on the boxing team. He and his wife are now retired from Boeing Aircraft in Seattle, but he left his mark in our history books.

He's one of the unnamed creators of the vehicle used as a conveyance for our astronauts during their moon exploration. The vehicle still sits there waiting for others with the courage, audacity and boldness to turn the key and start the motor.

My wife, Nancy and myself visited Spider and his wife, Nadine, in Kent, Wash. last summer and later in July we met at a restaurant in park in Oregon. It was enjoyable being together again, talking over our escapades, girl friends and the problems we had getting that early morning paper around to our customers.

I think the worst part for all paperboys is and was the collecting. I'm not sure how you do it now, but it was our job to take that day's responsibility. Our Santa Cruz Sentinel bills us, relieving the paperboy of the problems.

My routes covered Wendell like the proverbial blanket. I had 60-odd morning papers and over 70 for the evening route. For carrying that many papers with you, I had a couple of riding a homemade bicycle at the same time. It was a real accomplishment just to go three weeks in a row without blowing a tire. We couldn't roll most of the papers because, like the Schouweillers and Dr. Similton, they wanted their papers placed behind the screen newspaper - No Windows Please.

I started my morning route at 5 a.m. and evening route at 5 p.m. Now just imagine covering Wendell in November, December, January and February. Getting up at 4:30 a.m. to find 2 feet of snow on the ground and your only transportation was your own two feet.

About one month I'd go down to Parr's Meat Market and get some sheep fat. Come home, boil it down and soak my boots in it for waterproofing. I couldn't afford the 35 cents for Hubbards store-bought boot oil.

Next, I'd tie my pants to my boots to keep the snow out, trying to keep my feet dry and then break new trails all over town.

Winters weren't all bad. We had a judge that I delivered to and I'd usually see him at about 6:30. I can't remember his name but God knows it. He'd watch for me and have me come in to the fireplace, dry off, warm up and then we'd share a couple cups of hot cocoa together. He lived across the street from the Gate's house.

I hope God loved him because I surely did.

I'm sure there must be paperboys in Wendell, Gooding, Jerome and Twin Falls; now going through some of the problems or challenges I went through. In some ways, time stands still.

I saw a profit of about 10 cents a customer, if they all paid. That's a month. As for paying, they all did it, and that came out of my money. Not that they didn't want to pay, they just couldn't.

It was still the Depression. Men were working in the fields for $1.00 a day, pitching hay, thinning and topping beets, picking spuds, weeding and harvesting onions. A hard day's work for a short dollar.

I know about it too because I not only had my routes but I worked in the fields when and wherever possible. We all did. It was expected of us.

I can honestly say that only once was I ever cheated on my collections. Some people couldn't pay and they usually told me. It wasn't good business but most of the time I'd carry them for a month or so and if possible, they'd pay me. Not always but most of the time.

Only one person intentionally and deliberately cheated me. He gave me a check on an account that he had closed that day. The next morning he moved out of the state. He was two months in the arrears so I had to make good on his account.

The strange thing is, I felt sorry for him. I believed then as I still do that he was a good man, respected in the community but due to circumstances beyond his control he made a decision that I'm sure bothered him more and for a longer time than it did me.

This was a great learning process. It gave me a hunger for business and the need, direction and challenge. Also, you learn financial responsibility, to handle money or not to handle it, depending on your outlook.

For the first time we paperboys had other people's money in our hands. The logic being that we would turn it all over to the company and at the same time learn about business and finances. That was the psychology we were expected and required to adhere to. It does not always work that way or I wouldn't be sending you this check for $4.75.

Now for the crux of this letter.

In July of 1941, I turned my routes over to Frank "Bevo" Beverage and finished my education in Ft. Worth, Texas. I've always prided myself on having excellent credit ratings, but I've never forgotten the $4.75. That was the balance owing on my books.

The Chinese have a tradition of starting every year by paying off all their outstanding debts. This debt is almost 47 years past due but always in the back of my mind has been that same little voice saying, "You owe it so pay it."

I usually have a snappy comeback for that voice that says, "After all these years and the amount involved, trivial has always worked but no longer. I'm getting rid of that voice, once and for all.

I've been very fortunate in life, having owned several businesses and having had a modest amount of success, but I look back on my days as a paperboy as my first real venture and achievement in business.

Someone once said, "The great calamity in life is not to have failed but to have failed to try." They were hard times, but oh my, they were good times too.

I really owe you much more than this small amount. Of course, if you're thinking interest and compound interest, it could equal the national debt. Now, we have a problem.

You gave a poor boy the opportunity of tasting the excitement and knowing the challenge of business and throwing my gauntlet on the ground.

You gave me the opportunity of testing my wings and I truly thank you for the experience.

Wayne Shivley, who grew up in Wendell, lives at 107 Harrison Ct., Santa Cruz, Calif., 95062. To bring him up to date on the Magic Valley, we're sending him a month's free subscription to The Times-News.

Letters/Sugarbeet growers are paid from the market place

Sugar program explained

In Sunday's editorial "Hagerman Fossil Bed Deserves Protection," you referred to the sugarbeet industry as being subsidized by our Federal Government. Sugarbeet farmers do not receive any government payments for the sugarbeets they raise. Their payment comes from the market place as it well should. I would like to explain to you how the sugar program is administered.

The sugar section of the 1985 Food Security Act is a loan program. As sugarbeets are refined into granular sugar by companies like Amalgamated Sugar Company, the sugar can be placed on loan with the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC). The CCC uses this money to pay farmers for their sugarbeets. As these loans mature, they are repaid with interest so there is no cost to the government nor the CCC.

Focus on positive events

While listening to Paul Harvey recently, I heard the comment, "The press has become the pit-bull of politics." In our area I've observed the beginning of "sick-em journalism" when it comes to our schools.

Wait for impact statement

Some of our elected representatives have recently supported setting the SIS at the INEL. Shouldn't they withhold judgment until the Environmental Impact Statement is released?

On Falwell and Sagan

The Rev. Jerry Falwell keeps harping that Carl Sagan is wrong. It really reminds me of a story in the Bible where many religious leaders wanted Jesus crucified, claiming he was deceiving the people.

With political power have already made up their minds.

Controversy marks some of 43 celebrations of King holiday

ATLANTA (AP) — Forty-three states now celebrate a holiday in memory of Martin Luther King Jr., but controversy still surrounds some of the observances nearly 20 years after the civil rights leader was slain.

"We've come a long way and picked-up some (states) in the last year or so that we thought would be more difficult," said Lloyd Davis, executive director of the King Federal Holiday Commission in Washington. "I think it's just a matter of time before we get the others."

The seven states that do not observe a holiday for King are Arizona, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, New Hampshire, South Dakota and Wyoming.

The biggest controversy over the holiday has come in Arizona. Democratic Gov. Bruce Babbitt issued an order in 1986, creating a King holiday, but his successor, Republican Gov. Evan Mecham, revoked the order when he took office in 1987.

Mecham insisted that his opposition to the holiday was based on a technical point, not race, saying Babbitt's order was illegal.

Later in 1987, Mecham came under fire for defending the use of the word "pickaninny" as referring to black children. Opponents charged that he had become a racist em- barrassment to the state and he now faces a recall movement. He also has been indicted on charges related to campaign contributions and faces possible impeachment in the Legislature.

Another debate over the holiday — this time over the date of the observance — erupted in November in New Mexico. The 1987 Legislature authorized the holiday for the third Monday in January, the date established by 36 other states and the federal government.

But New Mexico's Personnel Board voted in November to have state employees observe the 1986 King holiday on Dec. 24, saying it would be better to give workers a day off next to Christmas than to have them off on the day before the legislative convenes.

Governor designates King day

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus has designated next Monday as Martin Luther King Jr. Day in Idaho, calling the slain civil rights leader "an outstanding American whose life and leadership proved the race relations and civil liberties of this great land."

The 1987 Idaho Legislature established the King commemorative day, but decided against matching the federal designation of a legal holiday.

Civil rights activists demanded the resignation of board members who voted for the change; the board last month rescinded its vote and decided to celebrate with other states this year on Jan. 18.

Davis counts New Mexico as one of the commission's greatest victories.

Now he and King's widow Corretta Scott King, hope to broaden the meaning of the holiday.

"Many people do not see King in a broad perspective," Davis said in a telephone interview. "They see him only as a civil rights leader and not a theologian, philosopher and political scientist."

The more we see an increase in violence, whether it is apartheid in South Africa, violence in the Middle East or the Soviet in Gulf or the use of drugs by young people, there is a need for his message."

Mrs. King said at a recent news conference that the holiday "has caught on in a very beautiful and meaningful way. There's much greater involvement than we thought would happen."

She said she hopes more companies will begin honoring her late husband along with national, state and local governments. "One thing we have to work on is getting corporate involvement," she said.

Three states celebrate the holiday on Jan. 15, King's birthday: Alaska, Delaware and Maryland; Connecticut celebrates the first Monday on or after Jan. 15. New Jersey observes the first Monday after Jan. 15, and Michigan marks the Monday closest to Jan. 15.

In Louisiana, the King holiday is on a list of five "optional" holidays from which, each year, the governor chooses one to give state employees the day off. The King holiday must, by law, be celebrated at least every other year. Gov. Edwin Edwards has selected King's birthday as one of this year's state holidays.

Not all the 43 states celebrate the holiday exclusively in King's name. Mississippi and Arkansas celebrate one holiday on the third Monday in January that marks the King, Lee and Stonewall Jackson, one of Lee's generals, on the third Monday in January.

Virginia celebrates the birth of King, Lee and Stonewall Jackson, one of Lee's generals, on the third Monday in January.

Supreme Court rules on parental kidnapping

Federal courts lack custody powers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal courts are powerless to curb the growing phenomenon of "parental kidnapping" in child-custody disputes, the Supreme Court ruled Tuesday.

The 5-4 decision in a case from California and Louisiana said a 1980 law, the Federal Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act, does not authorize federal courts to resolve conflicting custody rulings by courts in different states.

In other decisions Tuesday, the court:

- Ruled that state judges, and presumably federal judges as well, may be held for monetary damages for their administrative decisions. The ruling reinstated a lawsuit against an Illinois judge by a former employee who says she was fired because of sexual discrimination.
- Made it easier in a New Jersey case for people to file federal lawsuits stemming from pending state criminal investigations.
- Threw out a South Carolina conviction, freeing him for now from the state's death row.
- The justices also heard arguments over the Central Intelligence Agency's firing of an agent who told his superiors he is gay.

The court's decision, expected by July, could spell out just how much discretion the CIA has in personnel matters. Government lawyers argued that such agency decisions are not subject to judicial review.

The attorneys general of four states — California, Hawaii, Nevada and Texas — had warned the high court that such a ruling could spark even more kidnapping.

The longer custody remains unresolved, the greater ... the parent's frustration increases, and self-help becomes an increasingly attractive alternative," the attorneys general said.

But writing for the court Tuesday, Justice Thurgood Marshall said Congress in 1980 meant only to encourage more cooperation between state courts — and not an unjunctive federal court intervention.

"Instructing the federal courts to play Solomon where two state courts have issued conflicting custody orders would entangle them in traditional state-law questions that they have little expertise in," Marshall said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has asked the Soviet Union to clarify a photograph of a missile that does not match the dimensions submitted to the United States as part of the treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear rockets.

A congressional source, who demanded anonymity, said Tuesday that the photo of the SS-23 missile, one of the weapons to be scrapped under the treaty if it is ratified by the Senate, is 87 meters, or about three feet, shorter than the data provided by the Soviets.

State Department spokesman Charles E. Robman said "we have no reason to doubt the accuracy of the photograph." However, he said, the length of the first stage appeared to be shorter than data turned over separately as part of the treaty.

Robman said the question was whether the difference was due to inclusion of the guidance system, the nozzle and the skirt in the memorandum.

He confirmed the U.S. Embassy in Moscow had sought clarification.

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., had questioned the authenticity of the photograph of the SS-23 and also a picture of the Soviet SS-20 missile in a letter last week to Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

Robman said Shultz replied to Kemp that "we have no reason to doubt the accuracy" of the photographs.

Public claim angers family

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — A state agency's claim that Jessica McClure's 56-hour ordeal in an abandoned well stemmed from inadequate supervision by her mother and aunt should not have been made public, angry family members said Tuesday.

Jessica was 18 months old last fall when she fell into the narrow shaft while being supervised by her mother, Reba "Cissy" McClure. Her right leg and foot were wedged next to her head and she later lost two toes.

Following a two-week investigation, the Department of Human Services blamed Mrs. McClure and her aunt, Jamie Moore, for the accident. The well, which was capped the night Jessica was rescued, is in Ms. Moore's back yard.

"The (DHS) has found there is reason to believe the child's injuries and the time spent in the well are the result of negligent supervision by child-care provider Reba McClure," Carolyn Langendorf, day-care licensing regional director in El Paso, wrote in a letter addressed to Ms. Moore.

DHS investigators also believe the well should have been capped before the Oct. 14 accident, Mr. Langendorf wrote in the letter dated Oct. 30. The letter was released publicly Monday.

TOKYO CLEANER

It's not extraordinary for a Tokyo hotel to charge $25 to dry-clean a man's suit.

Q. Who was the first white man ever to see the Great Salt Lake?

A. James Bridger, probably. He turned up there in 1824 on a trapping expedition.

Q. As for beautiful state names, what about Carolina?

A serious student of dreams reports his research suggests: When a woman dreams of fighting with somebody, that somebody is usually a stranger.

COLLARDIRTY

Several female ostriches lay eggs in the same nest. One "major hen" incubates them. All ostrich eggs are plain white, seemingly identical. If there are too many in the nest, the major hen kicks a few out, and they go bad. But she never kicks out her own. That has been scientifically proved. Question is, How can she tell which are her own? Nobody knows.

DREAMS

It was possible in the European courts of the Middle Ages to bring class-action lawsuits against insects: For eating crops. One 16th century lawyer wrote a lengthy treatise on the best ones should be followed.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 23): If you focus carefully, you can find a way to increase your income while cutting down on expenses. Take better care of your health.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Be more enthusiastic in going after your personal goals, and you'll have better results. Join forces only with people you know you can trust.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Investigate logically whatever puzzles you, and the truth will soon unfold. Have a candid talk with your mate about the future.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22): Make some time to have a necessary chat with your close friends. Listen to their ideas, and your head movement causes friction against your shirt collar, that makes static electricity in the fabric. It attracts soil out of the air. This is the peculiar rationale delivered by some experts when they say: "Your neck doesn't make your collar dirty. Your collar makes your neck dirty."

Q. What was the first pure metal discovered by people?

A. Gold, scholars think. Because it can be found in free state uncombined. And because it's bright.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Be vigilant in protecting your reputation, or you stand to lose a lot. Make sure you have the facts straight before asking any favors.

Married reporters compete on the job

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — For political reporters David Karvelas and Deborah Sline, being a happily married couple stops at the front door. Once at work, they become cut-throat rivals.

"When Debbie leaves the house in the morning, she's no longer my wife — she's my competition," Karvelas said.

"I feel exactly the same way," Sline said.

The two journalists are head-to-head competitors. Sline is head of the Vermont Press Bureau, writing and organizing political coverage for the Rutland Herald and the Times Argus of Barre. Karvelas is Statehouse chief for the Burlington Free Press.

"There is no pillow talk there. I can guarantee it," said Robert Sherman, former spokesman for Gov. Madeleine Kunin and now a Statehouse lobbyist.

"I don't think Dave ever gives Debbie a break or Debbie ever gives Dave a break," said Elizabeth Bankowski, Kunin's chief of staff.

"I don't envy them," said Louis Barney, a former reporter and now Kunin's spokesman. "There's nothing a reporter loves to do more than talk about a scoop, and they can't."

In fact, they do talk about scoops — but only after they've run in the newspaper and then to goad the other.

"What did I tell you today?" Karvelas said Sline at lunch.

recently, "I said 'You got your butt kicked today.'"

"Yeah, I guess we are taking turns at alternating 'scoops,' she said.

"What? That story you wrote on tax cuts yesterday?" Karvelas said. "That's not news."

"Sure it's news," she said, and the two continued to battle while their hamburgers got cold.

They are both 33 and have known each other for 14 years, meeting as sophomores at the University of Maine at Orono.

She has been in journalism for 11 years, covering state governments in Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine; he is a nine-year veteran and has covered legislatures in Vermont, Maine and New Jersey.

Sline was named bureau chief of the Vermont Press Bureau in September 1985.

When Karvelas was named head of the Free Press bureau two months later, the first thing the couple did was set rules. One was separate telephones with answering machines at home and a promise never to answer the other's pager. Another was not to talk with each other about that day's stories.

Sometimes, though, work spills over into their private life, when a late-breaking story forces them to write at home.

"When one of us works at home, you ignore it," Karvelas said. "You don't know what the other person is working on."

Oldest woman dies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Florence Knapp, a schoolteacher who marched for women's suffrage in 1915, retired in 1936 and lived in the same house for 110 years, died at the age of 114, two weeks after she officially became the world's oldest person.

"I think she could never understand why she was allowed to live so long," her niece, Ruth Oberholzer, said Tuesday. "One time she said that her feet like she might have been bad and this was God's way of punishing her."

But then, she recalled, Miss Knapp laughed and with a twinkle in her eye talked about how she was going to marry a younger man — her 76-year-old physician.

She graduated from college more than 90 years ago and was a staunch Democrat who exercised the right to vote until she was over 100, said Oberholzer.

Miss Knapp died Monday in a suburban nursing home. Her predecessor as the oldest authenticated person had been Anne Eliza Williams, of Swansea, Wales, who died Dec. 27 at 114 years and 208 days.

Her successor is Maren Terp, 111, of Norway, according to Guinness record keepers. Although some people claim to be older than 114, Guinness restricts recognition to those who can provide birth records and other documentation.

Guinness originally named Mrs. Terp as the world's oldest person after Mrs. Williams died, but Donald McFarlan, editor of the Guinness Book of Records, said Tuesday a mixup had occurred during the Christmas holiday.

The daughter of Charles S. and Elizabeth Johnson Knapp, Miss Knapp grew up in the stone farmhouse where she was born on Oct. 10, 1873, along with 10 brothers and sisters.

She lived in that same Montgomery Square house until four years ago, when she moved to the Deer Run nursing home in Montgomery County, after she broke a hip.

Miss Knapp's birthday is noted in her family's Bible, and her late aunt swore an affidavit in the 1930s to verify its accuracy for Social Security records.

Researchers attributed her 114 years and 84 days to "good genes." Two of her sisters lived into their 90s and an aunt and another sister lived to be 107.

"She lived so long we never know when to expect it," said Mrs. Oberholzer's husband Ross. "It was quite a shock to us, because she was getting weaker, but she wasn't sick — she just slipped away."

Miss Knapp became well-known in recent years as people learned of her longevity.

FCC begins attack on indecency

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission on Tuesday began its first-ever enforcement action against a television station for broadcasting an allegedly indecent program during prime-time viewing hours.

The FCC said the broadcast by KZKC-TV, Kansas City, of the movie "Private Lessons" may have violated the law because it contained explicit sex and was aired at a time when children may have been in the audience.

The action was the first the commission has taken to enforce tough new indecency standards it adopted last April, and the first time the agency has targeted the programming of a TV station.

"The law prohibits the broadcast of certain sexually explicit programming to children on radio and television," FCC Chairman Dennis Patrick said, promising "full enforcement of the law in accordance with the guidelines provided by the Supreme Court."

"Private Lessons" was broadcast by KZKC-TV, an independent UHF station, on May 26 beginning at 8 p.m., according to a complaint investigated by the FCC.

The movie is about the seduction of an adolescent male by a female maid and includes "audity in a sexual context," said FCC spokesman John Kamp.

The film, made in 1980, carried an "R" rating, however, most movie theaters no one under 17 was admitted without a parent or guardian, according to the Motion Picture Association of America Inc.

The version allegedly broadcast by the TV station, however, may not have been the same version as shown in theaters. Movies are often cut before they are aired on television.

Morton Kent, chairman of the board of Media Central Inc. in Chattanooga, Tenn., general partner of KZKC, said neither the station nor Media Central had received the FCC's letter detailing the complaint against the station.

"Company policy does not allow for showing indecent programming," he said, but he said it would be "inappropriate" to comment on the specific allegations until he had seen the letter.

He said he has never seen "Private Lessons."

The FCC's letter, addressed to station licensee Kansas City Television Ltd., did not specify any scenes or language that may be considered indecent, but Kamp said the commission decided to begin the action based on explicit depictions of sex that they thought may be patently offensive.

He added that the FCC "has not made a decision that it's indecent only that the complainant has made out a case that indicates all the necessary elements."

The FCC defines indecency using a 1978 Supreme Court decision that indecent material is "language or material that depicts or describes, in terms patently offensive as measured by contemporary community standards for the broadcast medium, sexual or excretory activities or organs."

The commission has said indecent material may be aired only when there is a reasonable risk that children are not in the audience. In a ruling last November, the FCC said it would consider that children were not likely to be in the audience after midnight.

The FCC gave the station 30 days to respond to the complaint.

Violation of the law governing broadcast of indecent material could bring a fine of up to $10,000 and up to two years in jail, the FCC said.

1987: Tough year for Dan Rather

WASHINGTON (AP) — In his first interview since he briefly walked off the "CBS Evening News" set last September, CBS anchor Dan Rather admits 1987 "wasn't my best year."

He spent weeks at the bottom of the ratings and was criticized and mocked for letting the network go black after a live tennis match ran into overtime.

But Rather told The Washington Post that 1987 was a comeback year for both him and the news division, according to a story in Tuesday's editions.

"We had a year, and I had a year, in which, yeah, we got knocked down a few times, more than one would like," said Rather. "But when you can get up and come back, that's a good year."

The "Evening News" has been back in first place in the ratings for the past 16 weeks. The news division underwent layoffs and budget cuts, but won back the morning news time period, kept "West 57th" on the air and is embarking on a new, prime-time documentary series, "48 Hours," next week.

Rather said he's still unhappy with his right on the tennis issue. He walked off the set in Miami after he was told the live match would run over into "Evening News" time.

"I thought then, and believe now, that there was a principle involved, the principle that we not only should not do anything that would trivialize a network news broadcast, but not even be seen doing anything that could be interpreted that way. That's the way I felt, the way I feel in an effort to make that a legend that day, I didn't do very well. For one thing, I didn't prevail," Rather said.

The network said Rather rushed back to the newsroom when the tennis match ended more quickly than anticipated, but that there was no network feed to local stations for at least six minutes.

"What's a great journalist, justified living legend," Rather said, "and naturally I'd like always to do things of which he approves. It turns out that no matter how hard I try to do things of which he approves, it just isn't possible."

"I like him. I hope he likes me."

Hospital board acts to recruit, keep nurses

By PAT MARGANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A $500,000 bond-aid was applied Monday to help heal a sore spot at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center — the nursing shortage.

The Board of Trustees voted unanimously to spend $327,956 to raise salaries and provide other incentives to retain and recruit nurses.

Aside from the chunk of money, the board also voted to fund the establishment of an infant-care center at the hospital for employees.

As a result of the board action, the starting pay for registered nurses with no experience will go from $9.06 an hour to $10.06 an hour, which is a $1 an hour across-the-board increase.

The starting pay for licensed-practical nurses with no experience will go from $6.45 an hour to $6.95 an hour.

Working night and evening shifts and "floating" to other areas of the hospital where needed will earn employees — not just nurses — more pay.

Where no extra cash was paid previously for those who floated, employees will now receive an extra $1 an hour, said Hospital Administrator John Bingham.

Employees who worked the night shift have been receiving an additional 75 cents an hour. Working that shift will now mean an additional $1.25 an hour tacked onto a paycheck.

A $500 "finders fee" will be paid to any employee who recruits a nurse to the hospital.

The board also voted to initiate a study to determine if a "gain share" plan could be started so that hospital employees can benefit from the profits of the hospital.

"It's the best we could do right now, I think it will go a long ways," Bingham told the board.

The package of incentives becomes effective Feb. 6.

The amount approved for the incentives was not included in the 1988 fiscal-year budget, said Bingham. As a result, the hospital may have to dip into reserves, which in the future could effect rates.

The board also voted, unanimously to open a day-care center in a room on the third floor of the hospital as a benefit to employees.

Cost of remodeling will amount to about $3,000 and the operating costs will be about $25,000 a year.

Human Resources Director Rosemary Barta said.

The center will care for up to 16 infants as old as 12 months at a charge of $1 an hour. Two part-time and one full-time employee will work at the center, which will be open from 6:45 a.m. to 7 p.m., weekdays only.

The center is scheduled to be in operation in March.

On the topic of finances, the hospital and other health-care facilities may be in for a bumpy ride from the effects of the Budget Reconciliation Act, signed by President Ronald Reagan on Dec. 22. The hospital could receive $130,000 less than what it anticipated.

Finance Director Ken Fry reported that a 2.3 percent reduction in Medicare reimbursements due to Gramm-Rudman budget cuts will remain in effect until March.

"We don't know what will happen after April," he said.

But the effect of the reduction that they are certain of means about $100,000 less than what was anticipated, Fry said.

Capital payments, which help with plant facilities and equipment, will be hit even harder, he said. The hospital could receive $30,000 less than anticipated, which is $120,000 less than last year's payment.

Decreased federal reimbursements was the top issue for 1988 cited by a national health-care magazine, Bingham added.

"Costs are going up faster than the government is paying," he said.

The No. 2 issue cited by the publication was the nursing shortage.

The hospital was busy in terms of admissions and the patient average length of stay during the first three months of the new fiscal year, which started in October. The number of patients and how long they remained at the hospital was more than what had been budgeted.

"But during January so far, the patient load has been 20 percent under budget," Fry said.

"In other business, the board accepted the annual audit of hospital finances for the last fiscal year.

The audit report, prepared by the firm of Deloitte, Haskin and Sells of Salt Lake City, showed an 8 percent increase in total patient revenue partly due to hospital rate increases. Total operating costs, meanwhile, increased 13 percent.

In other business, Bingham reported that Dr. Bill Fitzhugh was installed as the president of the medical staff. Dr. Ron Miciek is president-elect and Dr. Marc Astlin is secretary-treasurer.

MVRMC Foundation Director Larry Baxter reported that 11 nurses

Legislators take a look at consolidation

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

BOISE — Just like fingernails on a blackboard, the issue of school consolidation sets everyone's political teeth on edge.

Yet despite strong past opposition, school consolidation appears to be generating wide interest among legislators this year as they tackle ways to get the biggest bang out of the state education dollars.

Questions on consolidation proposals by Burley Rep. Ernest Hale, chairman of the House Education Committee, were raised by several members of the Senate Education Committee on Tuesday.

"I think we're going to get a lot of push to consolidate this year," said Sen. John Hansen, R-Idaho Falls. "And I think it's an issue we're going to have to be very careful with."

Hansen's interest was echoed by Republican Sen. Jerry Twigg of Blackfoot.

"We haven't done consolidation in this state in 25 years, and I don't want to jump in and do something all at once," Twigg said. "But I am interested in it, and I do want some information on it."

Specifically, the two were interested in mandatory countywide consolidation proposals being floated by Hale in the House.

Hale, however, said Tuesday he may not introduce his bill this year.

"The way the bill is written now, I wouldn't introduce it," he said. "It doesn't take into account sparsely populated school districts and some kids would have to travel 100 miles if this went through."

Schafer named head of Burley's chamber

By DONNA SCHORZMAN
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The appointment of William (Bill) Schafer Jr. to the post of executive director of the Burley Chamber of Commerce was announced at a Monday press conference in the Burley Council Chamber.

Schafer has had experience in working with the public. He was employed for several years by the Bureau of Reclamation in the Minidoka Power Plant and was the superintendent of the power plant for 11 years.

He also served for approximately three years as a claims officer for the bureau after the floods caused by the failure of the Teton Dam.

This position required Schafer to work closely with civic leaders and the Idaho congressional delegation, as well as with the public, to resolve crucial issues that arose from the flooding.

Schafer took an early retirement from the bureau and has been employed by Goode Motor in Rupert as a sales representative for the past nine years.

"I have lived in the Mini-Cassia area for 25 years," he said.

Council ready to assist speedway with paving job

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls City Council may be able to give a little help to friends at Magic Valley Speedway.

Following an executive session at Monday's work session, the council emerged ready to renegotiate the city lease with the speedway to help it pave the race track a mile west of the airport.

Councilmen also took a look at a new fire truck headed for Florida, Calif. Fire Commander Phil Clough said the truck illustrated expectations for a new truck for

Twin Falls.

After meeting in closed session with Speedway President Steve York and attorney Evan Robertson, Mayor Doug Volmer said the council would consider reducing the city's lease with the race track.

The one-third mile track is now dirt and York requested an earlier work session for city assistance in paving it. The speedway sits on city land, which operates lease for $3,000 a year.

York had said banks would not loan the speedway about $50,000 to pave the track

Canal company holds meeting

By MARTA CLEVELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Canal Co. was pronounced physically fit and financially sound at the annual stockholders' meeting Tuesday.

The 1988 prognosis from the lawyers, auditors, managers and water experts is that with more snow and more money, fewer weeds and less governmental red tape, all will be well.

Speakers at the meeting focused on problems past and future, or on costs old and new.

Jack Enkin, the company manager, told the more than 200 stockholders attending that he has several concerns for this upcoming year.

"We're quality water of them," The Public Trust Doctrine may soon affect irrigation return flows into the Snake River, he said.

"The clean water issue is not going to go away," he told the farmers.

"Any of you who haven't started a cleanup program of your own, do it right away because eventually we could be facing the cut off of water if we can't clean it properly," he said.

John Kosholt, who acts as legal counsel for the company, also expressed concern.

"There may be no end to this thing," he said. "Next they may be requiring water quality standards for return flows."

Fire destroys home

HILL CITY — Fire on Monday engulfed a home located about four miles west of Hill City, resulting in a "complete burnout," according to Cassia County Sheriff Harold Leach. The home, owned by Pat Bennett, burned to the ground at about 5:16 p.m. Leach said. The Fairfield Fire Department, located approximately 20 miles away, was summoned to the scene, but its firefighters were too late to salvage any of the property. Leach placed the preliminary estimate of damage at $40,000, but said it could prove to be substantially higher. In addition to the considerable damage to the home, the fire department, Leach said, had to fight the fire's damage and was hindered by severe winds and drifting snow. Bennett discovered the fire when returning to the home with his two oldest daughters, who were returning from school.

Albion man dies of gunshot

ALBION — An Albion man accidentally shot and killed himself Sunday while climbing through a barbed-wire fence, according to Cassia County Coroner Paul Young. Young said Tuesday that Reed Shaw, 69, shot himself accidentally Saturday at approximately 1:30 p.m. Sunday at the entrance of the Albion landfill, about two miles east of Albion.

"It appears he was climbing through a barbed-wire fence when his gun discharged and he received a wound through his chest," Young said. Shaw apparently slipped on the snow-covered ground, Young said. Shaw's body was found two hours later at approximately 1:30 p.m. Young said. Shaw was dead at the time his body was discovered.

Schafer did say that he sees major challenges of the job as membership, and noted that there will be a membership drive coming up soon, and the Burley Boat Regatta. He also said, "There are many things that could be done to raise funds to help the chamber out, and we are going to look at some of these." Schafer has been hired to replace Nick Czekalos, who resigned from the post in November. "Bill is jumping into some big shoes, but we on the chamber are confident that we have someone with the ability to do that in a fine way," said Paul Matthews, 1987 president of the chamber. Matthews also said that the executive committee, consisting of Matthews, 1988 President Teresa McKinster, Steve Westfall, Mark Moorman and 1986 president Lex Kunnau, was gratified by the number of applications — about 30 — received for the position. He said that "there were several excellent candidates, and we hope that those candidates not chosen will know that the decision to hire Mr. Schafer was undertaken with great care, and that all applications were carefully reviewed."

vexed Idaho educators and lawmakers for years. The logistics have never been easy, nor have the politics. Small communities have waged bitter battles to protect one of the last remaining centers of community life in rural Idaho: schools. But Hale said residents and the state can no longer afford to maintain schools that offer a narrow range of subjects for children. "We're not talking about saving money for the state. We're talking about having better education for kids," he said. "Reading, writing and arithmetic just aren't enough anymore." Hale wants to give small schools an economic reason to join forces. Currently, districts that consolidate date end up losing money through the state school funding formula. However, he said he still hasn't found the perfect bill to get at the problem. But Hale said he has received a lot of response on the issue. "A lot of people think it's a good idea," he said. "I've only gotten one letter saying it's a bad idea, and that was from Murtagh." Hale added that unless school districts, such as the eight in Twin Falls County, are forced to consolidate, "I don't think there's a chance in the world they'll do it voluntarily." In 1986, voters in Murtagh rejected a proposal to consolidate with the Hanson School District, although Hanson voters were in favor of the proposal.

who wants to claim a water right on the Snake River basin must file for it. There is a filing fee of $1 per acre. The canal company will file one document for all the stockholders and will pay the $102,000 fee, Eakin said. But a $1 per acre charge will be added to the next assessment to build the company's reserves back up. "The water supply at present time doesn't look that great," said Eakin. But whether water shares will be three-quarters or five-eighths of an inch will be decided by the board in the spring, he said. This year's irrigation water began collecting in October, starting with a base of 500,000 acre feet in the fill. That is about half of the normal level, said Earl Corless from the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation. "At present we are right about where we need to be," he said. But to reach 100 percent fill, either above-average snowfalls must occur or the Milner Dam shutdown must be delayed an extra month, Corless said. At American Falls where most of the canal company's water comes from, water levels are about where they were this time last year. "We anticipate being able to fill American Falls with no problem," Corless said. Corless gave the current water levels for the Snake River basin: Jackson Lake, 82 percent of normal; Island Park, 70 percent of normal; Teton Basin, 68 percent; and Willow Creek, 55 percent. Then he forecast the water fill for January until July 1988: Jackson Lake, 65 percent of normal; Island Park, 90 percent of normal; and Halse, "the one we pay most attention to," 78 percent. Looking back, 1987 was a short water year, but one of the best crop years. Corless said. "Last year was a very good water year, but it didn't start out to look that way," said Eakin. In April last year only 65 percent of the normal water supply was stored. The board voted to give out the minimum allotment of three-quarter-inch per share. By the end of June demand was up and river flow was down. Then in July it rained, and all was well. The board finished the year without having to cut minimum allotment, and without having to use any water from the reserve bank. "A new power plant being built on the Low Line Canal, several miles downstream from the one already being built by the Northwest Power Council. The regional power planning group has proposed that section of the Snake River to be part of a 12,000-mile Protected Areas Designation. Such a designation would prohibit power plants." Eakin noted that petitions supporting issuance of a license to build a power plant, and urged everyone to fill them with names. "Weed control is another area where we have problems," said Eakin. He showed slides of a European water plant that has already reached mythic proportions of evil growing well. Like weed, it is a very difficult to kill once it shows up, so everyone was urged to report to the canal company immediately if they spot any in their ditches. Spraying and cutting will be the preferred methods of control for other weeds again this year. However, the experiment last year of planting ground wheat in the ditch-ways to keep weeds down was fairly successful and will be used again, Eakin said. The rodent execution roster from last year was substantial. The trap per hired by the company got 72 voles, 10 toads, 10 coyotes, 400 muskrats and four beavers. Some 80 rodent holes were also found in the canals last year. They cause water to leak out of the canals. "The company was $12,256 under budget in 1987. This year is planned to spend $2,837,646, but only used $2,825,388. The 1988 budget is the same size as last year's. Financially the company is very strong, said Bill VanEngelen, who audited the books. "The stockholders re-elected Clarence Hollifield and Bob Schaefer to their positions on the board. Both men ran unopposed."

because the city owned the land. Collateral such as grandstands was considered of little value to people not operating a race track, he said. He suggested the city, in effect, loan the track the money by paving it and then posting its lease during the next 10 years. But former City Attorney "Shane" Bengochea said the state Constitution prohibited cities from extending credit for more than one year. Instead, the city could forgive all or part of its lease for several years. Track operators might then be able to secure their own loan by applying savings from repairing the dirt track to loan payments, Vollmer said. York had said repairing the dirt track cost nearly $36,000 during the first two years. "Vollmer said sacrificing part or all of the lease was worth the exchange for improving the track by paving it. He added that the land isn't worth much to rent to other people and that if paving attracts more spectators, as expected, the lease will be reinstated later. He said if the track failed, the city could still use the improvements for police or fire training. "We could justify making these improvements ourselves," Vollmer said. In other business, councilmen approved a demonstration of a new fire truck — a Grumman Aeriacat, that serves the dual purpose of both pumper and ladder truck. Clough said the truck closely resembled what the Twin Falls fire district needs. He said he was drafting specifications to let bids for a new truck in the near future. "What it does is stretch our ability to utilize our manpower," Clough said of combining both the pumper and ladder-on-one truck. Bill Childers, Grumman Emergency Products' regional sales manager, said the top railing on the hydraulic ladder rises 102 feet above the ground — approximately 10 stories — when fully extended. Four independent jacks allow the truck to park on a curb or other uneven ground and remain stable, Childers said. In addition, firefighters can pump 1,600 gallons of water per minute onto a fire from the perch atop the ladder or use the platform to rescue people from burning buildings, Childers said. Several councilmen braved gusting winds and driving snow to serve the view and stability of the platform. Childers said Grumman is the largest manufacturer of the trucks nationwide, selling 26 a year for the past two years. He said the cost of the truck runs about $450,000.

Missing plane causes search

GOODING — State and local agencies were searching Tuesday evening for a missing plane, reportedly to have taken off from Gooding's airport at 10:30 a.m., according to an official with the state's Bureau of Aeronautics. Larry Hippler, an aviation technician with the Idaho Bureau of Aeronautics, said Tuesday night that the private plane was reportedly destined for Hailey. It was reported missing to the state agency by a "concerned person" at 4 p.m. Hippler said that "during the last couple of hours of daylight, three planes out of Hailey were able to make preliminary searches for the aircraft, presumed to be carrying two people. One other plane was later sent out to make a night search for the missing plane, he said.

"Presuming we have good search weather in the morning, we'll be able to make a full search tomorrow," he said. Hippler said he could not release further information concerning the airplane. Area law-enforcement officials, including those in Shoshone and Twin Falls, had been contacted Tuesday evening to keep a look out for the plane.

WHITE Mortuary
"The Chapel by the Park"
The Contemplation of one's own death and its effect on one's family is a necessary part of life. It is both wholesome and wise to acknowledge the inevitable and consider that which may reasonably be anticipated. It is only in such a degree as we accept death as a part of life that we are fully able to live. Pre-arranging a funeral makes sense. It lets those that are left behind know what your desires are. There are several things you can do now. Our trained personnel can answer your questions.

Contractor dislikes prison agreement

BOISE (AP) — Contractor Jerry Hess of Nampa, whose term of service on the Permanent Building Fund Council is over, says he doesn't like terms of the state's agreement to build a new state prison.

"It's a real can of worms as far as I'm concerned," said Hess. "I don't think the method of financing that prison was in the best interest at all. It's going to be very expensive."

Gov. Cecil Andrus announced on Monday that he has replaced Hess and another board member on the council. It supervises the state's building construction and renovation projects.

The council's current big project is a new high-security state prison south of Boise, adjacent to the existing state prison. It's being constructed to ease overcrowding in the state prison system that has brought an order from a federal judge to relieve it.

The state has signed a contract with an arm of Morrison-Knudsen Co., Boise, to build the prison, plus a 100-bed addition to prison facilities at Orofino.

The contract is to be ratified by the council at its next meeting. Hess, who had been chairman, said he had real problems with it.

Hess, who spent 18 years on the council, said he notified Andrus when he the governor was elected that he wouldn't mind if Andrus replaced him on the board. Members served at the pleasure of the governor rather than a fixed term.

Andrus also announced on Monday that he is replacing veteran board member Thomas Boerigk with Jerry Wray, Boise. Leo Knudsen, Pocatello, replaces Hess.

Other board members are Robert Peyron, Pocatello; Sen. Don Mackin, D-Moscow and Rep. Kathleen Guinacy, R-Boise.

Hess said he hasn't seen the final version of the contract negotiated between M-K and the state, and won't sign it he has been replaced on the board.

"There would be some ratification problems with it if I had been on the board," he said. He said he didn't like the allowances for change orders.

And Hess said the process being used by the state to finance the project will prove very costly.

A spokesman for Morrison-Knudsen declined comment on Hess' remarks.

The prison work is to cost $29.2 million. A state agency will issue bonds, which will be repaid over a period of years.

Hess said the total cost upward of $40 million. He said the work could have been done for half that.

Board approves controversial mining

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Land Board has approved a controversial request for placer and dredge mining along the Salmon River in western Idaho, but not without some misgivings.

"It makes me very uneasy, but I don't know that we have the basis to deny it," said Jerry Evans, state schools superintendent.

The board on Tuesday voted unanimously to allow a small mining operation near the Salmon 14 miles north of Riggins along U.S. 95.

Daryl Turner of A & T Mining, Grangoville, asked permission to mine about 4 acres along the river. State agencies did not object to the lease, providing that the miner meet strict restrictions on the size of the land disturbance, prevention of water pollution, and restoration work if the company's expectations prove out, the state could collect $108,000 in royalties over the next few years.

The federal Bureau of Land Management objected to the project. The BLM wants to withdraw the entire 52-mile stretch of the Salmon from any mineral entry, including the area covered by Tuesday's permit.

The BLM said a recent survey showed overwhelming support to ban mineral development along that stretch of the Salmon, to protect fishing, recreation, scenic values and tourism.

The Department of Lands staff recommended approval, noting that the area historically has been mined. A & T also promised to open only a small stretch at a time, probably not to exceed 170 feet by 50 feet, officials said.

The department staff noted that the company has had no operating problems in the past.

Gov. Cecil Andrus wanted assurances that the state would be able to closely monitor the operation. Lands Director Stan Hamilton said he would work with other state agencies to arrange suitable supervision.

The bond will be $8,000, and some board members questioned whether that was enough, particularly in view of earlier action at the meeting.

The board voted to forfeit two reclamation bonds for mining operations which did not fully restore state land after shutting down operations.

The state will pursue a claim for $11,051 against Safeco Insurance Co. of America for a Valley County mining operation in the Payette National Forest. Officials said settling ponds need to be filled, the land needs to be recontoured, equipment must be removed and seeding and fertilizing is needed.

The board also will try to get $11,000 from Allied Insurance Co. of Indiana, as the performance bond for Massachusetts Corp., which operated a 20-acre Ada County gravel pit. Officials said junk needs to be removed and grading and seeding is needed.

Drug complaints rise

BOISE (AP) — Complaints alleging violations of state drug laws are on the rise, prompting the Board of Pharmacy's director to suggest officials begin reviewing possible programs to curb abuse by health professionals.

Director Reed Hansen told legislative budget writers on Tuesday that complaints during his agency's last budget year hit 275 with about 12 percent of them alleging abuse of drugs by professionals like nurses and pharmacists.

"It's up overall," Hansen said, "and I think the problem is increasing throughout the United States."

"Ninety-eight percent of those investigations resulted in some form of punishment from fines to suspension or revocation" of licenses, he said.

About 30 health professionals were disciplined through their own state boards because of complaints initially lodged with the Pharmacy Board, based on Hansen's statistics.

Beyond turning cases over to the proper licensing boards for action, however, Hansen said there is currently no program with an amount of the licensing boards aimed at preventing abuse before it occurs.

"This has to be considered by each agency," he said.

But Hansen said the apparent increase in complaints about abuse may only be a reflection of the fact "more people are aware of the Board of Pharmacy and what we do so we're getting more complaints out of the field. But it's hard to evaluate whether this has been going on in the past and just being brought to a head now."

Of the complaints involving nonprofessionals, Hansen said most centered on people forging prescriptions with many resolved short of criminal punishment.

"About 10 percent of the rest did receive either prison sentences, fines or probation by the courts," he said.

Wreck blocks Interstate 15

POCATELLO (AP) — A semi truck with three trailers has jackknifed on Interstate 15 near McCammon, blocking traffic in the northbound lane for two hours, the Idaho State Police reported.

A tractor-trailer driven by 35-year-old Freddy McClintock of Eugene, Ore., jackknifed on an ice-covered section of the highway at about 6 p.m. Monday, dispatcher Lisa Evans said. Wind gusts of up to 45 mph may have helped cause the accident, she said.

Carl Heiner, 53, Pocatello, was unable to stop his car and collided with the truck. Neither driver was injured, Ms. Evans said. The semi sustained about $5,000 in damage and the car $2,000.

The morning line

Good morning. It's Wednesday, Jan. 13, with one big college game and one big NBA game on the schedule for tonight.

In the NBA, there's a rematch of last year's NBA Eastern Conference final on tap in Boston, where the Celtics will host Detroit. Boston is leading the NBA's Atlantic Division with a 21-10 record; the Pistons are second in the NBA Central Division at 19-9. Detroit has the league's second-most productive offense, averaging 117 points a game, while the Celtics have managed 112 points a game despite chronic injuries to stalwart forward Kevin McHale.

In the college ranks, a Big Eight showdown is brewing tonight in Ames, Iowa, where 14th-ranked Iowa State (13-2) will host 16th-rated Kansas (11-3) in the Cyclones-league opener. Kansas is 1-0 in conference games.

Closer to home, the Twin Falls Bruins boys' basketball team will play its first home game in 31 days tonight against the surprise team of the 6th State Conference. Blackfoot, The Broncos, coached by former TFHS assistant Bill Cowell are 7-1 for the season. Twin Falls is 1-6, and battling a six-game losing streak. Game time: 8 p.m. (KLIX-FM).

Time's off, but issue's not dead for NCAA playoff

By DOUG TUCKER
The Associated Press
NASHVILLE, Tenn. — College fans failed to get a football playoff from the NCAA convention Tuesday, but needy players picked up $500.
Division I-A officials, as expected, overwhelmingly reaffirmed their opposition even to further discussion of a football championship. Many of those same men, however, quickly agree that a playoff is probably in the future.
"The time is not right, the place is not right and the circumstances are just not right," said Tom Butters, Duke athletic director. Butters prepared a playoff study for the College Football Association, which helped sink any chance the resolution ever had.

"A time is coming when everything will be right," Butters said, declining specifics. "The resolution is dead. The issue is not."
Division I schools spent much of Tuesday afternoon's session debating a tough proposal to give more federal entitlement money in athletes from poor backgrounds. Students who qualify are eligible for as much as $2,100 each year in Pell Grant money. But NCAA schools have voted at previous conventions to limit scholarship athletes to $900 in Pell Grant money each year. That was raised to $1,400 after Tuesday after Vanderbilt athletic director Roy Cramer held defeat a move to refer the proposal to next year.
"If they qualify for $1,400, let's get the financial aide officer to award that, so that that young man and young woman that I look in the face, I don't have to say, 'I'm sorry, we're going to refer. That means a lot to a person who has nothing in their pocket. I'll tell you. If they're entitled to it, they ought to receive it."

Supporters of the move also argued the extra money might keep players from taking illegal payments from agents.
"This will have an effect on the agent problem, a little bit," said Gene Corrigan, commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference. "This, along with education and the other things people are working on. Whether it will have a dramatic affect, I don't know. But none of us wanted to go back to our campuses and say to the kids, 'I'm sorry, but we weren't able to help you again this year. We have to do a study.'"
Earlier in the morning session, the major football schools compromised among each other on whether to move the one-year limit on football scholarships back to 30. A reduction to 25 was due to take effect during this current recruiting year. But the Big Eight Conference, abandoning its effort to restore the 30 limit permanently, pushed through an amendment delaying the cut to 25 until next year.

"I'm not exactly what we wanted, but this gives us another year under the status quo and I'm sure there'll be another measure at next year's convention," Big Eight Commissioner Carl James said.
By a vote of 98-13, with one abstention, Division I-A passed the resolution ordering the Postseason Football Subcommittee to "discontinue its consideration" of a one-game playoff.
"This means we will not discuss a I-A championship in the immediate future," said DeLoar Dodds.

Stargell sole vote into Hall of Fame

By ALAN ROBINSON
The Associated Press
PITTSBURGH — Willie Stargell, called "Pops" and "Captain Willie," has been elected to Baseball's Hall of Fame.
The Hall of Fame announced Tuesday that Stargell was the only player selected to this year's ballot by the Baseball Writers of America.
Stargell's 475 homers, including some of the longest ever struck, and his 1,540 runs batted in during 21 Pirates seasons earned him a special place in Pirates history.
So did his extraordinary leadership abilities and patriarchal clubhouse presence, which commanded instant respect from brand-new Pirates. This combination of player and personality qualified Stargell for the Hall of Fame, Atlanta Braves Manager Chuck Tanner said.

WILLIE STARGELL
First year of eligibility

"The Hall of Fame was made for players like Willie Stargell," said Tanner, who managed the Pirates to the 1979 World Series title. "He couldn't be a Hall of Fame without Willie Stargell."
Stargell was named on 352 of 427 ballots. In order to be elected, a player must be named on 75 percent of the ballots.
To Stargell, who once played baseball for 12 hours a day on the housing project sandlots of Alameda County, Calif., "The Hall of Fame is too much to comprehend."
"Just the words 'Hall of Fame' give me chills. It's almost impossible to think it could happen to you," he said recently.
Stargell, 46, was a raw-boned youngster, with plenty of athletic ability — he was an eight-letter winner in high school — but little polish at his first spring training camp in 1962. But many Pirates quickly realized he possessed that special something.
"I watched him swing in the batting cages against a pitching machine and I was so impressed I went to (General Manager) Joe L. Brown and asked him, 'Where did you get that kid?'" said former Pirates' shortstop Dick Groat. "He had the best-looking swing of any young Pirate I had ever seen."

Stargell became the Pirates' left fielder in 1963 and over the next two decades, led their lineup only because of injury. He was an adept and underrated fielder in the outfield and at first base, holds numerous Pirates' power records and hit 30 or more homers six times and drove in more than 100 runs five times.
His long balls often were prodigious works of strength. He is the only player to homer twice over the outfield bleachers in Dodger Stadium and had seven of the 18 homers hit over the right-field roof in Forbes Field's 61-year history.
During the 1960s, Stargell played not only in Forbes Field's homer-expanding box, but in the shadow of Hall of Fame outfielder Roberto Clement, although he made the NL All-Star team three times.
By 1971, he was one of the game's most feared power hitters and had 30 homers and 86 RBI at the All-Star break. He finished with a career-high 48 homers and 125 RBI for the world champion Pirates despite a chronic knee injury that altered his swing.

Minico knocks Centennial off state's A-1 perch

By The Associated Press
Rupert's Minico High School ended the short reign of Centennial of Meridian atop the state Class A-1 rankings, while Mackay replaced Mulligan as the No. 1 A-1 team in this week's Associated Press boys' basketball poll.
The 6-1 Spartans, who lost their No. 1 ranking to Centennial a week ago, received five of 12 first-place votes and 44 of 60 votes cast this week to replace the Patriots, 7-1 following a loss to Boise's Borah High School last weekend.
In A-4, the state's sportswriters and broadcasters gave 9-2 Mackay six of 12 first-place votes and 49 of possible 60 votes, lifting the third-ranked Miners over Mulligan, which at 9-2 got three first-place votes and 45 points this week.

Jerome and Fruitland remained the No. 1 teams in A-2 and A-3.

In A-1, Centennial got one first-place vote and 47 points, followed by Pocatello's Highland High School, which moved up from fourth to third with a 6-1 mark. Blackfoot, 7-1, made its first appearance of the season in the rankings in fourth place, tied by Borah, which falls 2-1 for the season. Bonneville and crostawn rival Idaho Falls, ranked third and fifth last week, dropped from the ratings this week.
In A-2, Jerome received 10 of 12 first-place votes and 58 of a possible 60 points, followed by 5-1 Latah of Rathdrum, which moved up from third to second this week. American Falls, 6-2 and last week's No. 2 team, slipped to third, followed by 7-2 Orofino, which advanced from fifth to fourth. Kuna, 8-1, moved into the rankings in the fifth position; while St. Anthony's South

Fremont High School dropped from the rankings.
In A-3, undefeated Fruitland got 11 of 19 first-place votes and 66 of a possible 60 points, followed by Lapwai, 8-0; McCall, Donnelly, 8-1, and Sugar-Salem, 6-2. Driggs, Albion, 6-2, moved up from 10th to the ratings in the No. 5 slot, replacing Grangeville.
In A-4, Mackay and Mulligan were followed this week by Genesee, 5-2, which fell from second to third, followed by Evans' Bismarck High School, 7-3. Notus, at 1-0, the only unbeaten A-4 boys' team in the state, moved into the ratings in the fifth position, replacing Kendrick.

Eagles slip a notch to seventh in ratings

By The Associated Press
Despite winning their 11th game in a row, the defending National Junior College Athletic Association champion College of Southern Idaho Eagles have slipped a notch in the latest NJCAA men's basketball poll.
CSI, 13-1, fell from sixth to seventh in the latest survey, but remain the highest-rated team in the rankings that is not undefeated.
San Jacinto College of Houston continued its season-long stay in the No. 1 position, while CSI's Region 19 rival Salt Lake Community

Public split over Jackpot pro

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer
JACKPOT — A public hearing Tuesday on the continued employment of Billy Downs as golf professional at Jackpot Golf Course developed into day-long marathon.
Downs, who has completed 13 years as pro-and-course superintendent at the Elko County-owned course, drew vigorous support from some townspeople, including three members of the Jackpot village advisory board. The management of Cactus Pete's, backed by some expert witnesses, sought Downs' dismissal on the grounds that the course was ill-managed physically and that tournament direction was poor.

They also argued that the course should become a public park in the overall development scheme of the town, the casinos and the area.
The overtone of the hearing, as expressed by Elko County Commissioner Mike Sweet in his opening remarks, was a "disruptive" note in the community between the townspeople and Cactus Pete's management.
Through the first four hours of the hearing, witnesses supporting Cactus Pete's case on the basis of an Oct. 19 letter from Cactus Pete's to Elko County that sought Downs' dismissal.

name-calling and shouting matches between townspeople and management and Downs. Other testimony concentrated on watering, mowing and directional signing of the course proper, plus clubhouse decor and rental cart operation.
Cactus Pete's expert witnesses Mike Sweet, formerly of Weiser and now residing in Salt Lake City, and Jim Summers, president of GOLFCA of California, maintained that Downs' supervision of the course led Cactus Pete's to withdraw all its sanctioned tournament support.
Sweet and Summers also testified that some of Downs' management practices had led to a shortfall in income at the course. Summers said

Chicago cages Bird, but Boston still wins

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago took away Larry Bird's inside shot and did not allow him to pass off to allies Robert Parish or Kevin McHale.

Pro basketball

So, the Boston star was forced to use an off-balance arching jump shot six times in the final quarter to lead the Celtics to a 104-97 triumph over the Bulls.

The Bulls' longest winning streak came to an end despite a 42-point performance from Michael Jordan.

Both Bird, who scored 38 points, and Jordan each had 16 points during a furious final quarter. Bird's 16 points were by Bird and a steal brought the Celtics their fifth win in six games.

The Bucks, Cummings drove for another basket and Sidney Moncrief completed the surge with another drive to make it 95-89 with 2:28 left.

Slipke's two free throws and a jumper gave Milwaukee a 101-94 lead before Charles Barkley, who had 23 points, hit a 3-pointer with 43 seconds to go. Barkley fouled out seven seconds later and Milwaukee's Craig Hodges hit two free throws.

Cleveland 119 New York 111

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Mark Price scored nine of his career-high 28 points in the final four minutes Tuesday night to help the Cleveland Cavaliers defeat the New York Knicks 119-111.

The victory was Lenny Wilkens' 600th in his NBA coaching career.

New York trimmed a Cleveland 20-point third-quarter lead to 107-104, the final points coming when the Knicks' Gerald Wilkins made a driving shot with 1:45 remaining.

After Price and New York's Johnny Newman traded 3-pointers with 1:23 remaining, Cavalier rookie Chris Dumler tipped in a missed shot with 37 seconds remaining to put the Cavaliers ahead by five. Cleveland then hit seven foul shots in the waning seconds to insure the victory.

The Bulls, who had grabbed an 80-78 advantage over Jordan jumper with 7:07 left, fell victim to Bird's hit two jumpers and a free throw to put the Celtics ahead for good.

Parish, who had 18 points and 16 rebounds contributed a layup and two free throws and then Bird put the game out of reach with 3:22 left on two straight baskets to give Boston a 93-88 edge.

Milwaukee 103 Philadelphia 106

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jack Sikma scored 23 points and Jerry Cummings had eight of 17 points in the fourth quarter Tuesday night as the Milwaukee Bucks held on to snap the Philadelphia 76ers' four-game winning streak with a 106-103 victory.

Cummings' foul-line jumper with 3:22 to go broke an 89-89 tie and started a six-point spree by

For Astorquia's Bruins, there's no place like home

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — Thirty-one days and two losses after they left the Twin Falls High school boys' basketball team returns to the Bruin gym tonight very, very glad to be home.

"It's seems like a year since we've played here," said TFHS coach John Astorquia on Tuesday morning up in Gem State Conference encounter with Blackfoot and Friday's meeting with Rigby. "We've got three in a row at home now, and if we're going to grow up and put it together as a team, this is the time we have to do it."

Twin Falls is mired in a six-game losing streak, due to a combination of a tough early-season schedule and problems putting together a consistent offense.

"We're going to play two teams (against whom we'll have to) move the ball inside," said Astorquia. "I feel good about this week so far. The practices have been good and I hope we're ready to turn the corner."

First on the agenda is the Bruins' first home game, a Cinderella team of the GSC this season under Astorquia's former assistant, Bill Cowell. Blackfoot is off to a 7-1 start — by far the best since the school joined the Gem State Conference in 1981.

"They're a good team, with a group of kids who've played together for a long time," said Astorquia. "They play good zone defense and they go to the boards. Cowell has them playing very well together."

The Bruins "are looking to do something" about Troy Crumley, a 6-foot, 2-inch senior center who was the league's No. 3 scorer last year with a 17-point, 12-rebound average and is ahead of that pace this season. The Twin Falls coach is also impressed with the play of guard Jeremy Anderson, a 6-10 senior; Rick Shipley, a 5-10 senior and Jack Johnson, a 6-2 senior, and with 6-3 senior forward George Trenkle, the cousin of Bruin point guard Steve Tenk.

Against the defending state champion Trojans — 3-6 so far this year — the crucial factor for Twin Falls is 6-6 Rigby senior forward Bill Billman, the only returning starter from last year's team and, at the moment, the GSC's No. 2 all-around rebounder and No. 3 scorer.

"Billman is the key," said the Bruin coach. "They have some younger players who are coming along, but Billman can do so many things to hurt you. I saw them play Skyline, which pretty much held him in check with a zone (defense) in the first half. But when they went to man in the second, he just killed them. Teams have trouble with him very well together."

Dietrich deals body blow to Panthers

By The Times-News

CAREY — The Dietrich Blue Devils placed four players in double figures including Kurt Wangstrom's 23 points effort as the Devils scored an easy 75-35 Northside Conference win over the Carey boys' double Tim Tingy's game-high 36 points.

The loss effectively knocked the Panthers out of the Northside Conference race with three league losses.

The Blue Devils straddled a six point first quarter lead into 44 by halftime, then widened to 20-10 by 22-point Northside Conference victory. The Devils' Kelly Jensen pumped in 19, with Craig Sorenson's 13 and Jennings' 12-point effort.

HANSEN — The Hansen Huskies, riding the scoring and rebounding of Devin Hancock but lacked the Raft River Trojans 37-34 in a Magic Valley Conference boys' game Tuesday night.

The Huskies, who saw a three-game win string ended last week, jumped ahead 12-4 behind a press in the early going but Raft River quickly trimmed that deficit to one and after that it was usually a two or three-point game.

Raft River pulled to within a point with 40 seconds left but Kimberly wasted the clock down to two seconds and got the final points on Hancock's 17th point of the night. His rebounding also kept Hansen in against the taller Trojans.

HAGERMAN — Hagerman's Brandon Foster woke up in the second half against the Bliss Bears, scoring 12 of his 14 points to lead the Pirates to a 39-26 homecoming victory with Tuesday night.

In what Hagerman coach Randy Clark characterized as a slow-paced, sometimes sluggish game, the Pirates outscored the Bears 14-6 in the final quarter to take charge of the contest. Clark credited the Bears' 1-3-1 zone defense for keeping the scoring down.

Only 23 points were scored by both teams in the first half.

Foster added 13 rebounds and four steals to his game high 14 points.

Justin and Jeff Miller, each scored nine points each to lead the Bears.

Downs

 this amounted to as much as $130,000. But he emphasized mostly that the course should become integrated into the total recreation resort picture of the community.

A.C. Anderson of Twin Falls, a member of the firm that bought the Cactus Pete's, called for Downs' demission, noting "it's too bad to have a golf course like this and not help the casino." Anderson said it was a chicken-or-the-egg question, asserting that the town's casinos were built "on the fact that the city of Jackpot's development should be part of the town's business-recreation package."

A deposition from Larry Bakter, a director of the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls, said the committee that set up the Sinclair Scramble, a major fund-raising tournament held at Jackpot, was "not pleased with the way that event was conducted."

But Al Huber, a former co-owner of Cactus Pete's and its general manager for several years, said he was "not pleased with the way that event was conducted."

Downs' job "because he is a friend of mine."

Huber said he and George Detweiler, with help from others in the Cactus Pete's hierarchy, had led the way in promoting construction of the first nine holes of the golf course as a recreation adjunct for visitors, but also for Cactus Pete's employees and other Jackpot residents. He said their aim, was to keep greens fees as low as possible, augmented by a room tax. No noted the same motivation led them to underwrite the total bonding for the second nine holes.

Dick Wainwright, a Jackpot businessman, echoed Huber's assessment that the real motive behind the casino's complaints about Downs was to assume control of the town.

Sandra Felman, a Jackpot widow and a member, said she felt Cactus Pete's had taken away from the community concept that had led to establishment of residences, townhouses, fire, police, and medical, protection and schools over the years. She charged the casino's reason for wanting to take over was to control things in Jackpot, including the golf course.

Trojans remain perfect in two-way competition

Food trends '88: Beef's back

California chefs bring beef into the spotlight

Who better to discuss food trends and California cuisine than Wolfgang Puck and his protégé Anne Breuer, who have been credited with reviving California's culinary heritage.

Puck, the celebrated chef of Spago's restaurant, and Breuer were recently honored, along with five other prominent chefs and their proteges, by the Beef Industry Council at the American Culinary Legacy Awards in New York. The awards saluted these chefs for their accomplishments in both preserving the traditions and pioneering new roads of American cuisine. Additionally, the awards recognized influences that are passed from chef to protégé. The following are recipes that they have passed on to home cooks.

WOLFGANG PUCK MANDARIN STEAK SALAD

4 servings
Preparation time: 36 minutes

Marinating time: 2 hours
Cooking time: 20 minutes
1/4 cup fresh lemon juice
1/4 cup orange juice
1/4 cup red wine vinegar
2 tablespoons mandarin or orange marmalade
1 teaspoon minced fresh ginger
1 clove garlic, minced
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground white pepper
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon extra virgin olive oil
1 pound beef flank steak
2 1/2 tablespoons peanut oil
1 tablespoon sherry wine vinegar
Pinch salt and pepper
1/2 pound shiitake mushrooms, sliced
1 medium shallot, minced

4 cups mixed salad greens: mache, arugula and curly endive

Prepare marinade in saucepan combine lemon juice, orange juice, red wine vinegar, marmalade, ginger, garlic, 1/4 teaspoon white pepper and 1/4 teaspoon salt. Simmer gently until reduced to 1/4 cup; cool. Whisk in olive oil. Reserve 2 tablespoons marinade for vinaigrette. Add flank steak to remaining marinade; turning to coat. Cover and marinate in refrigerator 2 hours.

Prepare vinaigrette: whisk together 2 tablespoons peanut oil, sherry wine vinegar, 2 teaspoons of marinade, pinch of salt and pepper. Set aside.

Remove steak from marinade; over hot coals, grill 5 minutes on each side. Remove and let rest for 5 minutes; carve thinly on diagonal.

In remaining oil sauté shiitake mushrooms and shallots

Cajun specialist looks to catering

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — On her way to earning a degree in veterinary medicine, Linda Myrland reassessed her choice of careers. "All of a sudden I said, 'This isn't what I want to do. Cooking is more what I enjoy doing, and I'm better at it.'"

Myrland says she looked over what the various schools had to offer, and decided to attend one that featured Cajun cooking. The culinary apprenticeship program of Louisiana turned out to be what she was looking for. It included on-the-job training in the New Orleans Hilton Hotel, along with training which she received from a professional chef at Delgado College.

But, she says a chef's education is never finished. "As a chef, you never can learn too much about cooking."

Although her work involves putting in long hours, she says it is very fulfilling. "After your product is put out, and people say it's nice, it's very gratifying. But, up until that time, you're working hard."

The 26-year-old Twin Falls native has worked as a chef in Cactus Pete's and the Blue Lakes Country Club. She is now preparing to leave for South Carolina to further her education on the job. Myrland says she wants to go into the preparing of hors d'oeuvres, cheese trays and different types of salads.

She says she hopes to work full time, and do some catering on the side, with an eye toward opening her own catering business later on. The following recipes are a sample of the Cajun or Creole dishes

When creating new dishes

Blend tradition with innovation

In the following segment, Wolfgang Puck, the celebrated chef at Spago in Los Angeles, and his protégé, Anne Breuer, answer questions about their cooking philosophy, working relationship and, more specifically, their thoughts on beef as they share their innovative recipes.

Q: Tell us a little about your cooking philosophy and what inspires you to create new dishes?

Puck: I am inspired by the environment of California — the easy, casual lifestyle and the availability of fresh ingredients. The quality and variety of products available is important to my style of cooking.

Breuer: It's important to use the best available ingredients, which change seasonally. Every ingredient inspires new ideas.

Q: In the changing world of food, what do you feel are the most important traditional culinary values to uphold?

Puck: How to blend tradition with innovation in the right way.

Breuer: To always use the freshest and best quality ingredients.

Q: How do you think you have influenced Anne?

Puck: Our working relationship has allowed her to experience my influence and still develop her own style.

Q: Tell us about the recipe you developed for the American Culinary Legacy Awards?

Puck: I think Mandarin Steak Salad represents California. Here we have lots of fresh produce, Oriental influences and lighter eating habits. This dish is almost a new way of eating beef — a new way of serving something very common like a beef flank steak.

Breuer: My dish, New York Strip Steaks with Crispy Vegetables, is made with prime New York strip steaks, grilled and served with mustard vinaigrette and crispy vegetable chips. I prefer to grill over mesquite because it enhances the flavor of the beef and doesn't overpower the flavor of the main ingredient.

Q: Do you feature your recipe on the menu at Spago?

Puck: This recipe was on the menu for some time and is now often served as a special. This is a lighter way of eating beef.

Breuer: Yes, many people who come to Spago ask for steak. Also, I think they like something crispy to nibble on and it makes it more of a fun dish.

Q: How has your presentation of beef changed over the years?

Puck: There was no beef on the menu when we first opened Spago. Now, people are pleased to see unique beef dishes on the menu.

Breuer: We mainly grill or roast beef cuts. We use different marinades and change the sauces and garnishes to make each dish unique.

Q: How do you think the way Americans eat beef has changed over the years and what do you predict for its future?

Puck: I think most of the changes have taken place in the metropolitan areas. Many trends start in the big cities, where people are health and fitness conscious. They eat more salads and enjoy beef in more creative ways as part of an overall balanced diet.

Breuer: You will always have a percentage of people who want to go out and have a good steak. I think when beef is served, thinly sliced over a variety of lettuces with a light vinaigrette it is very appealing. We try to create more dishes along those lines.

Here is what's in, what's out for 1988

ANNE BREUER
NEW YORK STRIP STEAKS WITH CRISPY VEGETABLES
 Serves 4
 Preparation time: 1 hour 15 minutes
 Cooking time: 20 minutes

4 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
 3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
 2 tablespoons sherry wine vinegar
 1 medium shallot, minced
 1/4 cup extra virgin olive oil
 2 (8-ounce) New York strip steaks
 1 medium baking potato
 1 medium red beet
 1 carrot
 1 parsnip
 1 medium yellow onion
 1 quart peanut oil

2 tablespoons flour
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
 4 sprigs parsley

Prepare vinaigrette: combine mustard, lemon juice, vinegar and shallots. Slowly whisk in oil. Set aside.

Over-hot coals grill steaks about 4 minutes on each side; season with salt and pepper. Remove and let rest about 10 minutes; slice thinly on diagonal.

Meanwhile, prepare Crispy Vegetables: thinly slice potato, beet, carrot, parsnip and onion. In a deep sauté pan heat the peanut oil to 360 degrees. Deep-fry potato, beet, carrot and parsnip slices until crisp. Drain. Separate onion slices into rings; toss in flour and deep-fry. Drain.

To assemble: spoon 1 1/2 tablespoons of vinaigrette on each of 4 dinner plates. Mound a variety of vegetables on vinaigrette; arrange steak slices around the vegetables. Season with salt and pepper. Garnish with parsley.

Nutrient data per serving: 511 calories; 28g protein; 31g fat; 29g carbohydrate; 3.8mg iron (21% U.S. RDA); 950mg sodium; 65mg cholesterol.

 prepared while working at the Hilton - a fine line between the two cuisines.

SHRIMP AND PASTA PROVENCE
 Serves four
 1 pound shrimp
 1 pound mushrooms, diced
 1 bunch green onions, chopped
 1/2 pound fettuccine, cooked
 1 teaspoon garlic salt
 dash of white wine
 4 ounces butter
 1/2 cup of lemon juice
 Melt the butter in a saute pan. Then add peeled shrimp. Let shrimp saute until pink. Add mushrooms and green onions. Continue to saute until the mushrooms are done. Add the wine and lemon juice and cook for 2 minutes. Just before serving, put in the pasta and heat up slightly. Serve with French bread and a tossed green salad.

"It's fantastic. The white wine really does it. It has just enough garlic to season the shrimp, so they're not bland tasting," she says.

Next is a form of bread, called...

HUSH PUPPIES
 1/2 cup cornmeal
 3 cups flour
 1/2 cup yeast
 2 cups sugar
 2 tablespoons baking powder
 1 cup chopped green onions
 1/4 cup parsley flakes
 1/4 cup margarine
 1 teaspoon cayenne pepper
 6 eggs
 1 cup milk
 1/4 cup oil

Mix this altogether in a large bowl until well blended. Then form into balls about 1-inch in diameter. Deep fry until they pop up from the bottom and are golden brown - about 5 minutes. Yield: about 2 dozen. These are good served with fried fish or chicken.

"They're really spicy. They have a granular taste to them, but they are spicy when you bite into them, because of the cayenne pepper."

A "very popular" dessert at the New Orleans Hilton is called:

BANANA FOSTER
 Serves 100
 4 tablespoons butter
 1 cup brown sugar
 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
 4 tablespoons banana liqueur
 4 unbruised bananas, cut in half lengthwise and then halved again so you have quarter sections
 1/2 cup dark rum
 4 scoops vanilla ice cream

Melt the butter in a saute pan and add sugar, cinnamon and banana liqueur. Stir to mix, to dissolve the sugar a little. Place bananas in the sauce, and saute until soft and lightly brown. Add the rum. (At this point, in the restaurant, this is ignited at tableside. At home, this step can be omitted because the rum will burn itself out anyway.) Toss the rum, it uses rum of about 151-proof, and a long handled pan. Stir bananas around in the pan, and the flame will go out when the rum has burned.) Lift the bananas out of the pan and place one cut-up banana in each dish with 1/2 cream.

"It is a little easier to cook one banana at a time. It's delicious. It's quite sweet. The banana liqueur in it just gives it a more banana taste. It tastes more like a spicy banana," she says.

In New Orleans there is a squash called merlition. In Twin Falls it is called choyote. It is available in Smith's gourmet vegetable section. The squash looks like a big green pear. Myrland says they have a water taste, "but the more you eat them, the more you begin to enjoy them."

MERLITON SALAD
 Serves 6-9
 4 merlitions (or chayotes)
 1 green pepper, diced
 1/2 onion, diced
 1 red pepper, diced
 vinegar and oil (1/4 vinegar to 3/4 oil, enough to cover salad)
 white pepper, to taste

Boil the merlition until it is soft. Then pack it in ice in order to cool it down quickly. Peel the skin off, cut it in half and take out the core. Slice it very thin and put it in a bowl. Add the green pepper, onion and red pepper. Prepare vinegar and oil dressing. Add white pepper, to taste. This is best when marinated for a day. It is a good accompaniment for fried chicken and potato salad or roast beef.

"It's totally unusual. Merlitions don't have a lot of flavor themselves, but they are just a unique, flavored plant. And... they have the vinegar and oil, they are a real mild salad and nice tasting," she says.

Last is Myrland's only Italian dish - also served at the New Orleans Hilton.

EGGPLANT SALAD
 Serves about 8
 2-3 eggplants
 1 small jar green olives
 1 can black olives, pitted
 2 red peppers, finely diced basil, to taste
 oregano, to taste
 1 garlic clove, cut up very fine
 olive oil and vinegar

Peel the eggplant and cube it. In a good-sized saute pan heat about 1/2 inch oil with the garlic, and let it saute for about 5 minutes on medium high heat. Add the basil and oregano, and let it saute another 5 minutes. Add the red peppers and saute 5 minutes. Add the black and green olives (pitted) and heat them until they're hot and on the tender-side, about 5-10 minutes. It changes color when sauteed. It goes from a whitish color to yellowish. Then pour that into another container to cool it down. Pour in one good sized dash of vinegar and mix. Serve hot or cold. Serve with lasagna and a green salad.

"It has a very Italian type taste. It's not real spicy, but it has a bite to it," she says.

HONEY NUT SWEET ROLLS
 Let a loaf of Wheat Dough thaw until completely warm and fluffy. Roll out to a thin 18" x 15" rectangle using oil on surfaces to avoid sticking. Brush with 2 T. melted butter or margarine, then spread with 1/4 c. honey (it will spread easily if warmed first). Sprinkle with 1/4 c. chopped nuts and 1/4 c. raisins. Roll up like a jelly roll and slice into 8 pieces for large rolls. Place rolls in a greased 9" x 13" pan and let raise until double in bulk. Bake at 350° for 20 minutes. These are sweet without frosting!

Touchdown taters won't stick you in the kitchen during the important plays

Feed your armchair athletes, and yourself, potato treats

Whether you're cheering on your favorite football team or gearing up for some other favorite sport, now is the season for armchair athletes. It's time to brush up on your team statistics and settle down in front of the television to indulge yourself in an afternoon or evening of on-the-field action. And what better excuse to invite friends and neighbors over to exchange sports trivia.

To feed a handful or houseful of hungry fans, try Touchdown Taters, tangy stuffed potatoes. You start with baked potatoes. Scoop out the pulp and mix with cooked bacon, cider vinegar, onions and poppy seeds. Reheat and serve with sour cream and applesauce. Team Touchdown Taters up with grilled bratwurst or German sausage and mugs of ice cold beer for a high scoring meal that won't keep you locked in the kitchen while the favored team is making the winning play.

TOUCHDOWN TATERS

4 medium potatoes (about 6 ounces each)
6 slices bacon
1/4 cup cider vinegar

1/4 cup milk
1/2 cup sliced green onions
1-teaspoon poppy seeds
Salt and pepper, to taste
chopped parsley
applesauce, optional
sour cream, optional

Wash potatoes and pierce skins. Bake in 400 degree oven until fork tender (about 45 minutes). Cool. Meanwhile, cut bacon into 1/4-inch pieces; cook in a broad skillet until crisp. Drain bacon on paper towels, reserving 1 tablespoon of bacon drippings in the skillet. Slice off top third of potatoes horizontally. With a melon baller, scoop out pulp reserving skins. Heat bacon drippings; add potato pulp and vinegar. Cook until potatoes absorb liquid. Remove from heat. Mash potatoes with milk; season with salt and pepper. Mix in bacon, onions and poppy seeds. Spoon mixture into potato skins. Bake in 400 degree oven 10 minutes; garnish with chopped parsley. Serve with applesauce and/or sour cream on the side. Makes 4 servings.

NOTE: Potatoes may be made ahead, refrigerated and heated covered loosely with foil in a 375 degree oven about 20 minutes until heated through.

Weed out those old herbs and spices, use what's left

The Washington Post

The New Year is a time for resolutions and renewals.

There's no better culinary resolution than to weed out old herbs and spices from your spice rack. Fortunately, some of those bottles haven't been touched since the beginning of time — that is, since you brought them home from the store.

In general, herbs and spices should be stored tightly sealed in a cool, dry, dark place. So take them down from above your stove — easy reach often makes for stale herbs.

As a rule, the color of dried herb or spice is a fairly good indication of its strength. So if your tarragon or basil is looking more like the color of mowed grass, it's time to invest in new ingredients. The same goes for spices such as paprika or red chili pepper: the redder the color, the sharper the flavor.

Herbs like cilantro and chervil, however, are never good dried to begin with; their flavor is too delicate, and when dried, they fade. They are best bought fresh.

Only peppers can really be stored for many years without loss of quality. The length of time that spices stay potent depends on their form. In general, whole peppercorns can be stored for five years or longer, whole spices for two years, and ground spices and blends six months to a year.

So instead of thinking big and ending — up — not — keeping — your — resolution, think small and quiet: weed out the old herbs and spices and try the recipe below with what remains.

Express-lime flat steak, black peppercorns, white peppercorns, shallots, cognac or brandy, whipping cream, green peppercorns, dijon-style mustard

STEAK WITH FOUR PEPPER CORNS

4 servings
2 sirloin or New York steaks, 1 1/2 inches thick, or
1 teaspoon whole black pepper-corns
1 teaspoon whole white pepper-corns
1 teaspoon Sichuan peppercorns
1/4 cup vegetable oil
1 tablespoon butter
3 tablespoons minced shallots
1-3 cup cognac or brandy
2 cups whipping cream
1/2 teaspoon green peppercorns (freeze-dried preferably)
1 tablespoon dijon-style mustard

Trim the steaks of all fat. Wrap the black, white, and Sichuan peppercorns in an old kitchen towel, place on a chopping board and pound with the bottom of a heavy skillet until crushed. Press the crushed pepper into both sides of the steaks.

Place a heavy skillet (an iron one is a good choice) over medium-high heat. Pour in the vegetable oil and when it just begins to smoke, add the steaks and cook 3 to 4 minutes on one side. Turn and brown the other side. When well browned, check for "doneness." If necessary, lower the heat and continue cooking.

When they are done to your liking, remove the steaks to a warm platter and cover with foil to keep them hot while you make the sauce. Wipe out the skillet with a paper towel and let it cool slightly. Add the butter and minced shallots and cook over medium heat for a few seconds. Add the cognac or brandy. Simmer until the liquid has nearly evaporated. Stir in the cream and green peppercorns (drained if canned), simmer for 5 minutes, until the cream has thickened to a sauce consistency. Whisk in the mustard and remove from the heat. Taste, and add salt if needed.

Large steaks should be sliced diagonally to serve. Pour some of the hot sauce over the steak's slices, spooning any loose peppercorns with it. Extra sauce can be served separately at the table.

Insist on quality when choosing kitchen cabinets

By Newsday

If you're shopping for kitchen cabinetry, be prepared to be bewildered. That which looks the same — and is substantially different in quality — can vary wildly in price. And in fact, that which is the same — same name, manufacturer, same everything — may cost twice as much as one outlier or another.

Take the by-now-generic "Eurolook" cabinet, with almond-colored flush mount doors and wood-grained panels. One has a 10-foot, and you won't see the difference between flimsy, deeply discounted, clearance models for as little as $40 a linear-foot, and high-quality custom work that could easily cost five times that. In between, in various prices, you'll find all sorts of trade-offs in durability and features. Some are bargains, some not.

You have to shop to be sure the product you're getting is commensurate with the price you're paying, says Richard Titus, executive director of the National Kitchen Cabinet Association.

Adds John Hassock, an executive of one of the New York area's largest wholesale distributors, "Ninety percent of the people probably buy cabinets based on looks. Unfortunately, some manufacturers have learned to make very pretty doors and very bad cabinets. His firm sells various brands of stock and custom cabinets to dealers, not to the public, and he is broadly familiar with marketing practices in the region.

According to Titus, some of the confusion arises because of the nature of the kitchen-cabinetry business. Whereas, in other areas, there are perhaps a dozen major manufacturers, with a comparative handful of models each, with each manufacturer represented by a discount houses that carry most of the competing brands. In this case, price comparisons are straightforward.

In cabinetry, by contrast, the industry is much more fragmented, he says. His group counts several hundred major cabinet builders, and tens of thousands of regional and local firms, some producing custom cabinets, some producing stock ones.

Thus, both Titus and Hassock say, you have to do your homework before buying cabinetry. There are two broad indicators of quality: performance specifications (i.e., how the cabinet stands up in use) and material specifications, which cover the construction method, the quality of material and hardware.

The American National Standards Institute passes judgment on performance. Beginning about 30 years ago, and working with the manufacturers' association, the organization developed a series of tests on real-world durability. For example, weights are placed on shelves and in drawers to see how much poundage can be supported. Other tests simulate the way a toddler might tear a door from the hinges by hanging from it, or by driving a tricycle into it. The institute pays particular attention to moisture resistance, since excess moisture slopped over a kitchen sink can cause wood to warp, plywood to separate, or particle board to disintegrate.

All in all, more than 50 test are performed, and if the model of cabinet passes, the line can then carry a blue label that reads "ANSI 161.1 NKMCA-Certified." Under the conditions we simulate, the normal household with normal maintenance, the cabinets will quite likely last indefinitely, at least 30 years.

Unfortunately, only about 25 percent of the cabinets built in the United States carry this label, even though many others equal or exceed the institute's specifications. And because the standards were developed originally for big projects — military and public housing, for example — and smaller outfits don't always feel that the time and cost involved in certification is worth it. Some of these firms offer good quality and price as well.

Basic Guidelines: For the majority of cabinets then, you have to be your own rating service. To weed out truly unacceptable models, focus on hinges and interior finish, Titus says, because these are areas the most frequently fail the institute's tests. Ideally, you should not see any rough exposed particle board edges — but at drawer bottoms and cabinet backs.

These rough edges can allow moisture into the wood, and cause quick failure of the cabinet. The interior surface will have a sealed interior surface — plastic or wood veneer. Hinges are a little trickier. If they seem loose, or misaligned in a showroom, you'll probably see the same problems in your home. So-called self-closing hinges that snap the doors shut and hold it there tend to be of better construction than standard hinges that are accompanied by magnetic catches on the side of the door opposite the hinge.

Drawer Glides: In the cheapest cabinets, drawer edges slide directly against little plastic strips on the front frame of the cabinet; an arrangement not conducive to durability. A better method is a single metal rail, beneath the drawer, that is attached to the cabinet. In some cases, these merely have a little plastic guide; better single-rail models have rollers, and better rollers have ball-bearings. The best cabinets tend to employ two guides, one on each side of the drawer, with ball-bearing rollers. The best of these are self-closing — if you pull the drawer out an inch or so and release it, it will snap back shut.

Materials: In wood-front cabinets, for the parts that aren't on public display — there's nothing wrong with particle board or other composites, but it shouldn't cost as much as solid wood, which is seen only on insides of the best cabinetry these days. There are various

Go gourmet, grow your own herbs

There is nothing like fresh herbs for gourmet food preparation. If you have a south-facing window or a greenhouse or sun room, you can grow your own fresh herbs in pots. Although you can sometimes find herb plants at a greenhouse or nursery this time of year, usually you have to start from seeds. Some nurseries and gift stores have herb kits which include seeds, soil and a growing container.

Almost any pot or container with drain holes can be used to grow herbs. Most indoor potting soils will work fine. My favorite soil for growing herbs is a seed starting soil made of half vermiculite and half peat moss. If you can't find an already prepared mix, you can usually find these two ingredients at most nurseries.

The best herbs to grow in pots are the smaller ones which grow less than a foot high. My favorites are thyme, oregano, chives, parsley and dwarf, fine-leaved basil. Seeds can be purchased from some of the larger seed racks, such as you find in nurseries and garden stores. Most vegetable seed catalogs also include herbs. The fine leaved basil is not as easy to find. The variety Green Bountiful is available on Burpee seed racks and catalogs. Basil Spicy Globe is available in the Park Seed catalog. After filling pots with soil, water so that they are moist all the way through. Scatter a dozen or more seeds over the surface and just barely cover them with additional soil mix. As a rule of thumb, seeds should be covered about twice their diameter. Sprinkle with water again and cover the tops of pots with plastic wrap or clear plastic and place a large rubber band around the top. This traps the moisture under the plastic. No additional watering is usually needed until after seeds sprout, unless the soil surface begins to dry out.

Place pots in a warm place. The back of a refrigerator or near a heat outlet are good warm locations. Pots can be placed in direct sunlight for an hour or so a day to help warm them. However, if left too long in direct sun, the soil can overheat and damage tiny seedlings as they sprout. The ideal soil temperature is about 75 degrees.

As soon as several seeds have sprouted, the plastic can be removed and pots placed in direct sunlight. They need at least four or five hours of direct sunlight a day, but more is better. Grow lights can partially compensate for lack of sunlight. Water frequently and lightly with room temperature water while the seedlings are small. After the plants are well rooted, the soil surface should be allowed to dry out between waterings.

They can be fertilized with any indoor plant food. I prefer the dilute liquids which are used every time you water.

If plants get too tall and leggy, they are probably not getting enough light. Try putting them outside for a few hours a day when temperatures warm above 50 degrees.

You can begin snipping leaves off of plants while quite small. Do not cut all the leaves off any one stem or plant.

 SNOW BUILD-UP *****

During the last few days of continued snowfall and snow build-up the City Street crews have had an increasing problem with snow being pushed out into streets and alleys from private property. City Code Section 8-29 (D) prohibits the obstruction of public ways except by special permit. Those who block or partially block streets, alleys, and sidewalks with snow removed from private property are violating the law. They are also increasing their personal liability exposure by creating hazardous driving conditions for the traveling public. Snowing off their own property is not a legal activity. Citations will be issued if continued violations occur.

Cabinets

processes for dressing up particle board — a plastic laminate interior is usually the least expensive, and perfectly serviceable since it repels moisture. Other processes laminate wood veneer to particle board. Again, a little more money but no more maintenance. We're comparing the result to more expensive solid wood.

Drawer and door fronts account for much of the cost of cabinetry, and hardwoods — oak and maple — are more expensive than pine or birch. Look carefully at the frame surrounding the door. The grain should match that of the door. A common cost-cutting ploy is to build this of less expensive wood, typically birch, while making door and drawer fronts of another more desirable hardwood. Flat wood doors are typically veneered, while raised-panel doors are usually solid wood.

Construction Details: If you remove a drawer, or look at the back and tops of the cabinets, you may pick up on construction details. A good rule of thumb: The quality of a cabinet is directly related to the difficulty of building it. If you've worked even a little with wood, you know that a miter is trickier than a square-cut joint, for a manufacturer, it's also more expensive to build, even if it is more solid.

European Cabinets: There are other cabinet styles unique to European-style cabinets. Unlike American-style cabinets, these do not have a frame on the front of the cabinet; the doors are hung directly from cabinet sides with special hinges. This is well suited to mass production, and gives a sleek, flush, abstract form.

Still, the cabinets are only as good as the particle board comprising them, and the hinges holding the doors in place.

Letters of thanks

MVRMC employees give good, courteous care

In reference to my phone call to you, I was admitted to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center on the sixth day of January, 1988 to have a disc removed from my spine. I was a little worried, I have never been hospitalized in my entire life. In addition, I had heard a few things about this hospital and the physicians, which made me a little reluctant.

I would like to say thank you to the entire staff of the MVRMC for making my stay as pleasant as possible, also for their courteousness and professionalism. They have most undoubtedly put aside my doubts and fears of having to stay in the hospital. I would also like to say thanks to Dr. Randall Slickers, Dr. Michael Phillips, Dr. Fredrick Surbaugh and Dr. H. Thud Schmitz, Anesthesiologist, Robert Meyers, Radiologist, Evan D. Thomas and Neal and Paula Wachholtz of physical therapy.

In my opinion they are all experts in their field. They all explained exactly what would take place before and during surgery and answered all of my questions. In the future I should never need their assistance. I would not hesitate to call upon them again. They are some of the finest doctors in this town.

Swan Falls coverage clarifies the issues

Your newspaper can be proud of the coverage it has given to the Swan Falls issue in recent months. I can tell you that I closely followed what was written on this issue in all of the Idaho dailies and the Times-News coverage was consistently superior to them all. I believe that Mark Fraiter did an excellent job of digging into the issue to find out what it was about and then accurately reporting it. I certainly appreciate his good work and I think it reflects very well on your paper.

Marijuana smoke clouds man's marriage, mind

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

Had I known this beforehand, I never would have married him. Unfortunately, I didn't find out until after I became pregnant, and now that we have a 3-month-old son, it's not easy to leave.

He's a good husband and father, but we argue about this constantly. More and more I notice that his behavior is constantly bleeding and he seems drifty and lethargic and has to be reminded several times to do something.

I asked him why the subject of pot never came up while we were dating, and he said he knew that I was afraid of the news. I'm not afraid of the news, but I can smell it on him quite often.

He says he doesn't "need" it, but I don't believe him because every time I step out — even for 20 minutes — I'll come back to the smell of pot.

Dow dips on computer trades

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices fell moderately on Tuesday, in a broad decline that analysts said stemmed more from computerized trading programs than from widespread selling by investors.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off more than 60 points at times, closed down 16.60 at 1,928.65.

Broader market indicators also declined, but finished off the lows. Decliners outnumbered gainers on the New York Stock Exchange by nearly 2 to 1, with 539 up, 1,001 down and 450 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 165.73 million shares, against 158.98 million in the previous session.

Stocks were down sharply most of the session, following early selling by computerized trading programs that set the tone for much of the day. However, analysts said the broad sell-off mainly reflected a lack of buying interest and relatively high trading volume, which accentuated the impact of the selling.

Volatile trading on Monday following Friday's market sell-off kept many participants on the market, but they were caught in another sudden downturn, analysts said.

Also curbing buying interest were worries about program trading linked to stock index futures — cited as a major factor in Friday's downturn — and uneasiness about the government trade report due out this Friday, analysts said.

The trade figures were expected to edge near-term trends for the dollar and interest rates, both of which have detoured the stock market's performance in recent weeks.

A larger-than-expected deficit could spark another sharp fall in the dollar, which could mean another big sell-off in the stock market.

Near the close, the market rebounded on program trading and on "earnings buying" by investors who deemed stocks undervalued following Friday's 40-point Dow drop and declines in many issues on Monday.

Oil-related issues finished mostly lower, as crude futures declined. Saudi Arabia, the world's biggest oil exporter, reportedly has been selling crude below the official price set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, lighting speculation of a price war.

Texas rose 1 1/4 to 39, Exxon rose 1/2 to 38 1/2, Arco fell 2 1/4 to 68 1/4, Amoco fell 1 1/4 to 63 1/4 and Chevron fell 3/4 to 40.

Technology issues, broadly higher on Monday, fell sharply on what analysts said were diminished industry earnings expectations.

Hong Kong 1988 Digital Equipment fell 7 1/4 to 124 1/4 in heavy trading; IBM fell 2 1/4 to 116 1/4; Compaq fell 2 to 63 1/4 and Unisys fell 1 1/4 to 31 1/4.

Promote Lighting led the NYSE's most active list, falling 1/4 to 49 1/4 on volume of 7.2 million shares.

Among active blue chips, General Electric fell 1/4 to 44, AT&T fell 1/4 to 28 1/4, Navistar was unchanged at 4 1/4 and Eastman Kodak fell 1/4 to 48 1/4.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 188.84 million shares.

The NYSE's composite index fell 1.07 to 137.74.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell 2.82 to 298.23, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 2.07 to 245.42.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 3.20 to 282.78. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 331.97, down 4.23.

The market value of 5,000 stocks as calculated by the Wilshire Associates equity index fell by $23.734 billion, or 0.97 percent, to $2.41 trillion.

Iomega officials predict return to profitability in 4th quarter

ROY, Utah (AP) — Iomega Corp. hopes to return to profitability with a projected pre-tax net fourth quarter income of $2 million to $3 million, officials of the computer data-storage products maker say.

After reporting a loss of more than $39 million for 1987's first nine months, the company expects to report a profit for the first time since the fourth quarter of 1986 when Iomega had a net income of $427,000.

Iomega Senior Vice President of Administration Paul Slack said that the company's "trend lines are now looking very good and we're optimistic about the future."

"Our sales numbers have been going up steadily. Though unfortunately, we'll still be posting about a $36 million loss for the year," he said Monday.

Slack said the company anticipates reporting revenues of about $29 million for the fourth quarter of 1987, up from the third quarter's $22 million figure.

The past year was marked by corporate reorganization and the revamping of operations that at one time trimmed the company's work force to 750 employees. "We're now back up to around 1,030 people," he said.

Slack said Iomega's management decided to report a net loss for the fourth-quarter pre-tax net income in response to recent increases in both the trading volume and price of its stock.

Iomega Corp.'s stock, which is listed on the NASDAQ system, closed Jan. 4 at $1.75 bid, $1.875 asked. On Jan. 7 it was up to $2.68 bid, $2.875 asked.

"There was a definite move in the price of the stock and we felt we needed to get the information out," Slack said.

Monday, Iomega stock closed at $2.875 bid, $3.125 asked on a volume of 169,700 shares.

Professional tax help still your best bet

The April 15 deadline for your federal income tax return is now just weeks away.

As an informed, astute taxpayer, you will want to be getting prepared to hit the Internal Revenue Service deadline and get your program behind you. If you have a tax question, you may decide to call the IRS toll-free telephone number.

The chances are that 21 percent of the time you will receive a completely wrong answer. In addition to outright wrong advice, 17 percent of the answers that revenue agents receive will be correct, but incomplete.

Only 62 percent of the time will a typical taxpayer asking for advice on filling out a form for a new and highly complex tax law get an answer that is both correct and complete.

Except for 1987, when the IRS was having major computer troubles, these are the poorest results ever reported by an investigation of IRS taxpayer services. The results are based on a nationwide phone survey conducted by the General Accounting Office (GAO) in early 1987. Despite some changes, there is no reason whatsoever to believe conditions have improved since then.

If taxpayers are required to keep up with rapid changes in the tax laws, the IRS has the responsibility to help. Peter Barash, staff director of the subcommittee on Commerce, Consumer and Monetary Affairs, told my research associate Bob Keating.

The range of incorrectly answered questions varied: Those requiring deep probing were answered incorrectly more often than those calling for more direct answers. "We found that the IRS agents were quick to give canned answers before they understood the individual's specific situation," says Jennie Stathis, an associate director of the GAO's government division.

Inquiries concerning who has to file a W-4 form were answered incorrectly 87 percent of the time. So were questions about whether students with unearned income could file form 1040 A. "These would seem the simplest of questions. Tax questions regarding pension income and child care credits received wrong advice more often than not."

So now, as you come up with questions, should you call the IRS?

An estimated 22 million calls are expected to flood the toll-free hotline in anticipation of the April 15 due date — but what steps have been taken to prevent you from being burned?

In a recent statement, IRS Commissioner Lawrence Gibbs pledged that for those calling in the next few months, "our taxpayer service units include some new actions.

Politically, this move makes sense. It's in the administration's best interest to make sure you receive correct information in light of the confusion surrounding changes brought about by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. If you can't get the proper answers, it seriously damages the chances of the IRS reform being successful.

"In the last couple of years, the funds for taxpayer services have been increasing along with the recognition that it's real important to make the new tax law work," says an IRS spokesperson. (Note: In the initial years of the Reagan Administration, funds allocated for taxpayer services were drastically cut.)

Some of the improvements this season include 4,500 IRS agents answering phones, an increase of 1,000 people in the year-end office; increased intensive assistance training; and more than 1,000 new phone lines.

In the past, one major problem was that the IRS typically trained workers, but only hired them for the January-April rush. "The tax code is far too complex for the average middle-income taxpayer to understand, so it's unrealistic to expect a part-time worker to be able to answer complex questions," Barash remarks. "To alleviate the problem, this year new hires will be kept on as permanent employees.

This year the IRS will also monitor the accuracy of the answers that operators give by spot checking similar to the GAO's investigation method. What's more, if you call and find that the assistance you received was not adequate, revenue agents will be on standby for more complicated questions. "We're discouraging operators from trying to take a shot at a tough question," adds the IRS spokesperson.

As we near April 15, phone lines get busy, making it more difficult to get through right away, so persistence is your best bet.

Final note: Be realistic. IRS employees who answer questions are not income tax preparers. Their training is limited and no matter how competent, these people are not accountants. If you need in-depth assistance, go to a professional.

ANSWER: Two diamonds. Show the preference to opener's first suit. It does not show extra values.

Copyright, 1984, United Feature Syndicate

Playing three-no-trump with today's cards every declarer in the world would lead a diamond toward dummy at trick two. Few would make the winning play.

South wins his heart king and leads a diamond to South's jack and East's ace. East returns a heart to knock South's last stopper, and it is no longer a question which diamond did South lead?

If South started with his lowest diamond, the game is gone unless South has the benefit of a revealing play. The diamond nine is led to dummy's queen and East's discard trump. Dummy's 9 of diamonds are good for only two tricks and the game falls too short. (West refuses to cover either the nine or the eight of diamonds.)

South should start the diamonds at trick two, but he should start with the nine instead of the queen. East captures dummy's jack 'as before' and returns a heart to South's ace. Next the diamond 'eight' is led to dummy's queen, and East's discard does no damage. South returns to his hand with a high club, and the marked diamond finesse to dummy's seven brings in five winners.
