

Officials warn probation, parole case limit may be imposed

BOISE (AP) — The persistent rise in felony convictions is pushing the Idaho correctional system to the limit, and officials still need at least some supervision may have to be turned loose, officials warned Friday.

Governor Board Chairman Eckstein said legislative budget writers a cap similar to the one forced on the prison population by a court order may have to be imposed on probation and parole caseloads this summer unless money is provided for 10 additional officers.

"We need to add more people as supervisors in the field as there are more people to supervise," Anderson said.

"We really don't want to have to not supervise a person who needs to be supervised, but that seems to be the way we're headed," he said. "If some folks have to drop through the cracks, public safety is going to be impacted.

To comply with the court-ordered ceiling on prison-system population at 1,420 inmates, the state has launched plans for expansion of the prison at Orofino and construction of a new maximum-security prison at Boise.

But with completion of those facilities as well as 18 months or more away, corrections officials increasingly have turned to supervision on parole and probation. At the same time, scores of convicted felons have backed up in county jails awaiting space to serve their state sentences.

But in the past year, the probation and parole caseload of the state's 50 officers has jumped 18 percent to over 3,500 persons, and space in county jails is close to drying up.

Another 8 percent increase in the probation and parole caseload is forecast over the next year, and Murphy said that would push the volume well beyond the maximum 75 cases an individual parole officer can possibly handle.

"We're very seriously looking at handing only our most serious offenders" on parole and probation, Murphy said, "and we're looking at cutting the rest loose."

Somewhere we're going to have to start releasing early."

The department was authorized to hire six additional parole officers in the current budget, but Murphy said none of those slots has been filled because the money had to be diverted to cover higher operating costs for prison inmates.

In an attempt to shave money from the present budget, lawmakers voted to allocate only enough to cover a 2 percent inflationary increase in state department operating expenses rather than the 4 percent inflationary increase most analysts have predicted for the year.

Trucking deregulation draws blame for spills of materials

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's top law enforcement official has blasted Congress and the transportation industry, blaming trucking deregulation for hazardous material spills like the one that wiped out the Little Salmon River fishery upstream from Riggin.

"The problem we have today is due to truck deregulation," Law Enforcement Director Mac Richardson told legislative budget writers Friday.

"The companies are competing heavily," he said. "The drivers we see behind the wheel today would never have made it to first base five or six years ago. ... Their log books are irregular. I don't think some of them even know how to keep a log book."

Richardson underscored his point with statistics from the past year showing thousands of trucks driving in Idaho had licenses from more than one state — a play policy believe is used to remain on the road despite citations — and hundreds more not qualified to be behind the wheel.

These things seem to follow together," State Police Superintendent Rich Humphreys said, "a bad truck, a bad driver."

The accident on U.S. 95 near Riggin in December dumped thousands of gallons of pesticide into the river, killing all the fish for 18 miles. State officials, whose investigation showed road conditions were not at fault, have pledged to seek compensation from the trucker and the company.

Richardson said the spill has prompted his department to begin forming a new high-level response team for future accidents and to develop an education program "where we're going throughout the state talking to cities and counties about hazardous materials and how you can deal with them."

Although the state has taken some legislative steps to gain control over hazardous material shipments through the state, Richardson said the entire policy is being reviewed again.

No decision has been made on whether more legislation will be needed, and the one Richardson repeatedly said might be done to further control hazardous shipments open round-the-clock.

"This would minimize" problems with hazardous material shipments, he said. "The word would get out that we mean business. ... But I doubt if we'll ever eliminate it. There's just a lot of hazardous material out there, moving through all the states."

Package could create $40 million state economic development fund

BOISE (AP) — Idaho leaders say one of the state's biggest needs is development capital — something readily available in the nation's population centers and hard to get in a rural, sparsely populated state.

Legislative and government leaders got their first look Friday at a package of proposals that could meet that need. It could provide a $40 million economic development fund involving the Idaho Housing Agency, Department of Commerce and private banks.

The session was organized by House Majority Leader Jack Kennick, who has been working on the program for several months.

Keith Moore, managing director of Browne, Bortz and Coddington, Inc., a Denver financial consultant, told a gathering of legislators at the Statehouse that several other states have expanded the authority of housing agencies to meet capital needs.

As proposed Friday, the state would authorize the Idaho Housing Agency to issue bonds and administer the new borrowing account. The Department of Commerce could work with prospective new companies to provide stable, long-term financing at relatively low interest.

For example, Moore said the state of Arkansas is able to offer 10-year, 7.6 percent loans for equipment purchases. He said Idaho's rate might be a little higher, but in any event, the new fund could be a source of long-term financing at fixed rates.

The loans would be aimed at manufacturing, but officials involved said that would cover a wide range of activities, from food processing to almost anything that adds value to products. Not eligible would be retailers such as K mart.

Private banks would be involved in handling the loans.

"From our agency standpoint, we don't want to compete with anybody," said Lamont Jones,

Pocatello lawyer who is chairman of the Idaho Housing Agency board. "We need the services of the banks."

Jones said the IHA isn't soliciting more work, but will make its organization available to help raise the investment capital.

Legislative leaders said they liked the proposal, but would have to look at a lot of questions before committing themselves. Wayne Mittlender, executive director for the IHA, said he was working on legislation to set up the program.

After the presentation, Senate President Pro Tem James Riech, R-Boise, said, "It deserves to be looked at. It is similar to what the Idaho Housing Agency has done in the past."

"It's an opportunity that presents itself," said House Speaker Tom Boyd, R-Geneseo. "I'm sure that most of us will want to look further into it. It's a possibility, but we need to have a lot of questions answered."

One of those attending the session was Rep. Boyd Hill, R-Meridian. He has been outspoken in his opposition to the state getting into programs and services that could be offered by private industry.

Hill said occasionally there are circumstances when the state can work with private industry to get something done, and this appears to be one of them.

Moore also suggested a second way Idaho could use the borrowing authority of the IHA. He said many local units of government must borrow operating money because of cash-flow problems. Tax anticipation notes are issued, but the governmental agencies must pay interest.

By setting up a pool of money in the Idaho Housing Agency, he said, local government could draw against the pool instead of borrowing in the open market.

Board to consider BSU construction plans

BOISE (AP) — The state Board of Education will consider Boise State University's plans to build a college of technology, and review plans to change its funding formula for higher education, at a meeting here Monday and Tuesday.

BSU's proposal to build a 500,000-square-foot building to house electronics, drafting, manufacturing programs, pre-engineering, construction management and University of Idaho engineering programs has come under some criticism.

U of I Engineering Dean William Saul said he fears the BSU program may duplicate existing courses at the U of I and spread already tight state dollars even thinner.

Boise State officials contend sources of funding for the facility would come primarily from the Boise State Foundation and other private sources.

The board's finance committee will review the proposal, then make a recommendation to the full board. The finance committee will also review a proposal drafted by the financial vice presidents at the state's three universities and colleges to change the distribution formula for state funds.

The vice presidents are recommending a "base-plus" method, which would essentially guarantee the schools will get their current level of funding. The board would then set priorities for new funds based on its funding request to the Legislature.

The current formula largely depends on how many students enroll at the various schools. Idaho State University officials have often complained that enrollment-based formulas discriminate against a school like ISU that has high-cost programs such as those in the health field.

The finance committee will also consider a request for $168,350, so that U of I may provide additional engineering courses in Boise and Pocatello.

Although Foley's not interested, his friends wish he were

BOISE (AP) — While Rep. Tom Foley, D-Wash., vacationed in the Catskills, his friends back home talked about what a good presidential candidate the House majority leader would make.

Despite Foley's protests that he's not interested, the favorite-son talk continues, this time from Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus who insisted Foley's name should be kept alive for delegates to the Democratic National convention.

"He'd make an outstanding president," Andrus said. "My friend of Foley, told reporters Friday.

"But even if he decides not to jump into the middle of the race, he'd give us a vehicle to make the voices of our four states heard and overcome the habit of the Rocky Mountain states being treated as poor cousins," Andrus said.

Andrus referred to Idaho, Washington, Oregon and Montana.

While Washington Gov. Booth Gardner liked the idea, Oregon Gov. Neil Goldsmith was non-committal.

Observances held across nation for Martin Luther King

The Associated Press

Civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. was remembered on his birthday Friday with memorial services, the remaining of a street named in his honor, and protests against racism at home and in South Africa.

King was "a man who dedicated his life to the pursuit of a dream, a dream not just for himself but for you and all of us," said President Reagan in a message broadcast by transmission by satellite around the country.

King's widow, Coretta Scott King, was scheduled to present her annual "State of the Dream" address in Atlanta at the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change, of which she is president.

King was assassinated outside a Memphis, Tenn., motel on April 4, 1968. Friday would have been his 50th birthday; the national holiday observing King's birthday will be celebrated Monday.

But students in the Dallas suburb of Grand Prairie, Texas, will have to be in school. Their school board voted Thursday to hold classes Monday as a makeup day for a day missed because of an ice storm last week. "That is a blatant racist decision on the part of the school board," local NAACP president Lee Alcorn protested at the board meeting.

In memory of King, members of Operation PUSH, a civil rights group organized by the Rev. Jesse Jackson, protested South Africa's racial policy of apartheid outside that country's Chicago consulate.

High school students from Chicago and northwest Indiana met at Chicago's Malcolm X College to discuss the struggle for civil rights in the 1990s. In Evanston, Ill., students at Northwestern University planned a candlelight service in King's memory.

Reagan said King "reminded us that the destinies of all Americans were tied to one another, that the freedom of all Americans was inextricably bound together."

Education Secretary William J. Bennett, speaking in Atlanta, said King was "one of our greatest American citizens" and "the dream of equality and the dream of equal opportunity" must manifest itself in "equal intellectual opportunity in school."

In a speech prepared for delivery at the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change, Bennett said King "had answers for the questions posed by his education. His answers inspired action."

"I believe we will find our strongest allies where Martin Luther King found his: in faith and in ideas — in education," he added. "All of our children deserve our best education, and access to a school that provides it should not be an accident of where a student lives or of how much money his parents make," Bennett said.

In Atlantic City, N.J., Illinois Avenue, an address familiar to enthusiasts of the board game Monopoly, disappeared and was replaced by Dr. Martin Luther King Boulevard. The change was approved by City Council in May.

King's daughter, Bernice King, 23, spoke to more than 500 people at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles on Thursday to commemorate her father. The younger of King's two daughters, she was a preschooler when her father was killed.

"Unfortunately, everything has changed but nothing has changed," she said. "For those people who think we have arrived, you'd better look at who fills the jails of this country... at who died because they cannot afford (adequate) health care... at who are still in the front lines of the Persian Gulf."

"There are those who say the movement is dead. The dream is alive because it's living in the heart and mind of every freedom-loving American," she said.

Counsel claims funds, loans used for Mechem's gain

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gov. Evan Mecham deliberately concealed a $350,000 campaign loan and used public funds for personal gain, a special investigator told the Arizona House on Friday.

Special counsel William French said he had reached "the very clear and convincing conclusion that Governor Mecham set out to keep the existence of the loan from Mr. (Barry) Wolfson a secret."

French said there was evidence of perjury, filing false financial disclosure statements and a course of conduct to intentionally cover up those acts related to the loan from Wolfson, a Tempe developer.

The loan was to be kept secret in violation of the law, French said in the packed, hushed House chamber. French made no recommendation on whether the governor should be impeached.

The report should force the Republican governor to "do some very serious soul-searching," said House Speaker Joe Lane, a Republican. Mechem already is under indictment on whether a possible recall election.

Lawmakers could vote on impeachment within a week, Lane said, but most said they wanted time to examine French's report before making a decision.

The special counsel also said Mechem illegally used the governor's protocol fund for private gain by borrowing $80,000 from it for Mechem's Pontiac. Money from the dealership was used to make a payment on property Mechem co-owned in Tacoma, Wash., French said.

It is a class 4 felony to use public money for private purposes, French said. But Mechem's attorney, Murray Miller, has released a statement by another lawyer claiming the loan was legal.

"The governor committed no crime. The governor violated no law, and we intend to show that in the next few days," Miller said. There is a "clear and positive explanation" of the governor's actions, he said.

French also said Mechem pressured Department of Public Safety Director Ralph Miles to cooperate with the attorney general's investigation of the death threat allegedly made by state official Lee Watkins against a top Mechem aide, Donna Carlson.

Confusion big winner in Michigan GOP

DETROIT (AP) — Vice President George Bush declared victory Friday in the Michigan GOP county conventions but a bitter rivalry with the Pat Robertson-Jack Kemp coalition left the outcome in dispute.

"We have the courts on our side. We have the people on our side," said Bush, campaigning in New Hampshire. "I'd say it's a clear victory."

Robertson also declared himself a victor in Michigan, which will choose the nation's first presidential delegates later this month based on the results of the Thursday night county conventions. Leaders of both campaigns said they expected about 1,000 of the 1,805 delegates to the state convention on Jan. 29-30 to face credential challenges.

"By the time the (state) convention takes place, we will be the winners and I am claiming victory today, even though he (Bush) may claim something else," the former television evangelist said at a New Hampshire campaign stop.

Though Robertson claimed victory, he also criticized the process, which erupted in shouting matches, lockouts and walkouts.

"There was some of the most egregious manipulations of county caucuses last night that perhaps has happened in recent American politics, and I don't like people stealing elections and I don't like people breaking the law," he said. He did not cite specific incidents.

In the final count by the News Election Service with 98 percent of 154 meetings, Bush had 913 or 67 percent, of the 1,805 delegates who'll go on to the state convention. Robertson had 360, or 22 percent, while Kemp had 274, or 17 percent.

Kansas Sen. Bob Dole had 42 or 3 percent. Former Delaware Gov. Reta J. East had 10, or 1 percent, and former Secretary of State Alexander Haig got one delegate.

Robertson tried to minimize the NES figures, which included results from only the official conventions and not the so-called rump conventions held by Robertson-Kemp supporters who walked out of the other meetings.

According to Robertson's figures, he won 345 delegates, defeating Bush by roughly 2-to-1.

If Bush's numbers hold — giving him 40-to-60 of Michigan's 77 national convention delegates — he will have accomplished a political comeback in a state that has been months ago was shaping up as an embarrassment. With a series of court victories, the Bush campaign reversed Robertson and Kemp-engineered party rules that had sought to hold him to a third-place finish here.

Justices clear way for boy's return

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on Friday cleared the way for the return to Zimbabwe of Terrence Karamba, 9, who reportedly is terrified a possible reunion with his diplomat father will lead to further beatings.

But the chief State Department spokesman said the actual return "may be a long process."

The court, in a one-paragraph order, refused to block the U.S. government from sending Terrence home to the African nation. None of the justices recorded a dissent. They thus lifted the issue last week U.S. Justice Harry A. Blackmun that postponed the boy's departure to give the full court time to review his case.

The court's action apparently signals an end to a month-long legal and diplomatic confrontation.

However, State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman reaffirmed the department's decision to hold up Terrence's return to Zimbabwe until the child is medically ready to go home, and has received psychological counseling.

Lawyers for the department had told the court that a doctor's advice would be followed.

Asked how long it would take, Redman replied, "It may be a long process rather than a short one."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Igou

Albroy of Brooklyn said his office will not touch with the State Department to determine what the next step will be.

"We are clearly looking to see if there is any further action that could be taken, but it is likely there is not," said Lenora Gittis of the Legal Division, which brought the court action on the boy's behalf.

Terrence's father, Floyd Karamba, served for more than a year as a member of Zimbabwe's delegation to the United Nations before he was ordered to leave because of what State Department officials called "clear evidence of child abuse."

Oil spill control plan inadequate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency on Friday termed inadequate a required oil spill prevention and control plan prepared by Ashland Inc. before its million-gallon fuel spill.

Ashland's Spill-Prevention Control and Countermeasures plan, required under federal regulations, does not adequately address spill prevention and control specific to the facility, instead, it merely par-phrases the SPCC regulations," said a memorandum filed by EPA's regional Philadelphia office.

The document said the finding of the plan's "inadequacy" was based on a review of the plan and an on-site inspection of Ashland's Floeff Terminal near Pittsburgh.

The memorandum was issued to Senate staff members during an EPA briefing on Capitol Hill Friday morning. During the meeting, the staffers were told that an estimated 830,000 people will be affected by the spill, mostly due to depleted water supplies.

The collapse of an Ashland storage tank at the Floeff Terminal on Jan. 2 sent 1 million gallons of diesel fuel spilling into the Monongahela River. The spill made its way to the Ohio River, disrupting public water supplies in three states.

Ashland's spill prevention plan had been submitted to the EPA in 1974 and periodically updated before the accident, most recently in 1985.

"The problem is that the spill containment plan appears to be more of a general plan useful at any of Ashland's facilities," said Janet Vintka of EPA's Philadelphia office. "It does not contain enough specifics."

She said it was too early to say whether Ashland could be cited for violations and that "our real concern is getting the spill cleaned up and making sure the site gets into compliance."

The tank that cracked was not originally included in Ashland's plan because it was not installed until last August. Five days after the accident, Ashland filed an amendment to the plan identifying the new tank.

"On that specific instance, you are required to file within six months any amendment of your plan that would have any material impact on spill prevention," said Ashland spokesman Roger Schrum. "The tank was not put into use until August of 1987, so we have until February."

Navy near Haiti if violence erupts

WASHINGTON (AP) — A flotilla of U.S. Navy warships participating in an exercise steamed toward Puerto Rico on Friday, placing them within easy range of Haiti should elections there Sunday spur an evacuation of Americans.

The Navy, while acknowledging that ships engaged in FLEETEX 1-88 maneuvers had moved south toward Puerto Rico, refused to pinpoint the positions of the vessels.

However, Pentagon sources who demanded anonymity said the bulk of the force was sailing southward in the Atlantic off the southeast coast of Florida, while some amphibious vessels with Marines aboard had already arrived off Puerto Rico.

The island of Hispaniola, which Haiti shares with the Dominican Republic, lies directly west of Puerto Rico.

The FLEETEX 1-88 exercise, although scheduled more than a year ago, barely got off the ground as the scheduled balloting Sunday in Haiti, which has been wracked by political violence that brought an abrupt end to an election Nov. 28.

The United States cut off all but humanitarian aid to Haiti last November when the military ruler government canceled an election.

Judge drops Haffner case murder charges

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Fifth District Magistrate Judge Charles Brumbach dismissed first-degree murder charges against a Twin Falls man Friday, saying the prosecutor's office hadn't proved the man was capable of acting in a premeditated manner.

Brumbach issued the ruling following a preliminary hearing to determine if there was sufficient evidence to turn Roy W. Haffner, 47, over to district court for trial.

Haffner was charged with the first-degree murder of Jesus Hernandez Nov. 10 at Haffner's rented home at 449 5th Ave. W. First-degree murder requires a willful, premeditated, and deliberate state of mind.

"The state's own witnesses stated the defendant is utterly incapable of forming the state of mind necessary for first-degree murder," Brumbach said. "I see no way, when presented with this evidence by the state, to support a... case of first-degree murder."

Brumbach then granted Public Defender Michael J. Wood's motion to dismiss the charges, but ordered Haffner to remain in the custody of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's office and undergo further psychiatric exams.

Twin Falls County Chief Deputy Prosecutor Rockne Lammers called nine witnesses during the hearing Friday morning, including family members who talked to Haffner on Nov. 10 and police officers who investigated the scene of the crime.

William Haffner, Roy Haffner's uncle, said that during a phone conversation, Roy said there was a man in his house that wouldn't leave; and if that man didn't, he would kill him.

William Haffner's wife said Roy told her the same thing, and police dispatcher Loretta Mullins said Haffner called her and said the same thing.

However, the state's case began to break down when psychiatrist Dr. G. Adrian Dean testified. Dean examined Haffner after the arrest.

"Within the limitations of my examination, I have to say Mr. Haffner is incapable of premeditation," Dean said.

In addition, Dean said that although Haffner may have told people he was going to kill someone, Haffner's words don't necessarily correlate with his actions.

"He does not know what he is talking about," Dean said. "The phrase 'I'm going to kill you' does not mean much."

In support of his motion to dismiss, Wood argued the state must show the act was done willfully and deliberately. Wood said Dean, who was put on the stand by Lammers, didn't portray a man who was capable of that.

Lammers argued that Dean limited his decision on Haffner's state of mind to his own examination, and that the psychiatrist said he could change his mind if presented with other evidence.

Because prosecution witnesses testified that a man identifying himself as Haffner had called other people and said he was going to kill someone, that presence of mind indicated premeditation, Lammers argued.

Lammers also argued that if Brumbach didn't find sufficient reason to turn Haffner over to district court for trial on first-degree murder charges, the judge could at least find enough evidence to support a lesser charge.

Brumbach refused to reduce the charges. "I'm not taking the liberty to reduce the charges," Brumbach said. "That would be inappropriate at this time."

Wood had earlier asked for a psychiatric exam of Haffner. Brumbach granted that request.

At the beginning of the preliminary hearing, Wood asked Brumbach to delay the hearing and commit Haffner to a hospital until Haffner could assist in his own defense.

Brumbach turned the request down.

Because the charges were dismissed at a pre-trial hearing, the prosecutor's office can refile the charges or decide to reduce the charge to second-degree murder or a lesser offense.

Haffner was arrested after Hernandez was found with a knife with a nine-inch blade in his chest Nov. 10. Testimony indicated Haffner was in the home when police arrived, talking on the phone.

Dr. John Gray, a pathologist who examined Hernandez, said the knife went through Hernandez' heart, left lung and into his liver.

Fire consumes roof; chimney suspected

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

JEROME — An open-air matrix of charred support beams was all that remained of a Jerome house's roof Friday following a mid-day fire, which apparently originated from the piping of a wood-burning stove.

The house, a wood and brick structure located two miles south of Jerome, was reported on fire at 12:30 p.m. Friday, according to Darrell Smith, a county fire inspector with the Jerome Rural Fire Department.

The rural and city fire departments both responded, but they were unable to prevent the blaze from filling the house's ceiling.

Nobody was injured by the fire.

According to Smith, no estimate of the amount of damage has yet been determined.

"It's quite extensive, but nobody has come up with anything yet," he said. "They had a lot of antiques and things, and the whole roof is out of it."

Smith added that his department's preliminary findings indicate that "the wood-stove chimney over there started it."

Debbie Casto, one of three individuals in the two-bedroom house when the fire was discovered, said she first suspected something when an electric fan sitting by the front room's wood stove switched off.

"When I walked over toward it, I could hear the crackling and I could see the flames," she said.

Casto said she first spotted the flames at the junction where the stove's chimney runs through the house's ceiling. According to Tom Welch, who rents the house, the stove's chimney does not have a hood.

Speaking while shoveling blocks of scorched wood out the dwelling's front door, Welch said he had left the house 15 minutes before the fire started. He was quickly summoned back to the site, however, where he and others "just got the furniture out when the roof fell in."

Smith said the fire was probably the most destructive his department has handled in more than a year. He added that the fire's cause and other issues are still under investigation.

Prosecutor's action centered on office size

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Although Twin Falls County came close to getting its own fire office last summer, the county's decision by Idaho First to donate its old building left the county in still-cramped quarters in its Judicial Annex building and Baxter with $18,000 for a new staff attorney.

The county had announced last summer it was negotiating for the building, but the result of those negotiations didn't come to light until Baxter asked 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlburt to amend her budget last week. Instead of using the money for a fifth attorney, she decided to spread it out among her staff due to a lack of space in her office.

Baxter got the $18,000 from the city of Twin Falls to prosecute the city's fire office, which has been in the city hall contracted out to private law firms for two years.

When she signed the contract in August, the county was well on its way to getting the Idaho First building, three blocks away from the courthouse.

In fact, the county had sent a letter of intent to Moore Financial Group, a parent company, a formal step Moore Financial required to accept the donation.

That letter said the county would keep the building for at least five years and use it for the benefit of the county — and other local governments, said Twin Falls County Commission Chairman Judy Felton.

However, the bank employees who had been negotiating with the county hadn't talked to their board of directors yet.

Dianne Pierce, vice president of Moore Financial, said the complicated transaction just didn't "penetrate" and the company decided not to do it.

The reason it was not feasible, because of complexity of the tax-law and the fact we couldn't work to benefit shareholders of Moore Financial group," Pierce said.

"Everyone was really looking at a hole in the wall and pencil out."

The company backed out primarily because of complexities in new tax laws and because the company

Missing plane search area narrows

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

HALLEY — Acting upon a possible sighting reported by a Ketchum man, officials on Friday constricted the scope of their search for the plane last seen Tuesday to a 30-square-mile patch of land near Halley.

According to Blaine County Sheriff Walt Femling, a ground search crew of approximately 60 workers spent Friday combing the Crox Canyon area west of Halley. But for the fourth consecutive day, searchers were unable to locate the single-engine plane which has been missing since early this week.

The plane, a red and white Cessna 180 carrying two Halley area residents, left the Gooding Municipal Airport at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday. Its reported destination was Halley, located 40 miles northeast of Gooding.

After an acquaintance of the pilot reported Tuesday afternoon that the plane had not arrived, state and local officials began an extensive aerial and ground search of the area between the two towns. But responding to a tip received Thursday, they have now considerably reduced the target area of their search.

According to Femling, a Ketchum resident reported to authorities on Thursday afternoon that he had seen an airborne plane matching the missing aircraft's description while driving Tuesday morning on U.S. Highway 20. The man said he saw the plane at approximately 11:15 a.m. while driving home from Boise.

The description provided by the man included identification of the numbers located on the aircraft's tail, Femling said.

Femling said he has consequently established a "base area" for the search at the Moonstone site, situated a few miles north of Hot Springs Landing. The Idaho Bureau of Aeronautics has similarly transferred its search headquarters, moving Friday into an office at Halley's Friedman Memorial Airport.

State and local officials have refused to release the names of the two people aboard the plane, but they have unofficially been identified as Halley residents Katherine Skuce and Dr. Robert Miller. Femling said he was able to contact Friday some family members of the two people suspected to have been on the plane, but was unable to reach their parents.

Miller, a member of the Idaho Emergency Physicians Group, commutes in his Cessna to the St. Alphonsus and St. Luke's regional medical centers in Boise.

Jim Conder, the state bureau's safety and information officer, said nine aerial missions were launched Friday, including four that were completed by helicopters. Those efforts were hindered by high winds and low visibility, he said.

Public seems confused over hydro proposal

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

Public opinion polls conducted by the Idaho Department of Water Resources show that many Idaho residents are confused about the state's proposed hydroelectric development on the Snake River.

The polls, conducted in late 1987, found that a majority of respondents were unsure about the benefits and costs of the project. Many people expressed concerns about environmental impacts and the potential for increased flooding.

The Idaho Department of Water Resources is currently working to educate the public about the project and to address these concerns. The department is holding public hearings and providing information materials to help residents make informed decisions.

The proposed hydroelectric development is part of a larger water management plan for the Snake River basin. The plan includes the construction of several dams and the installation of hydroelectric turbines.

The department is also working to coordinate with other agencies and stakeholders to ensure that the project is developed in a way that is consistent with state and federal laws and regulations.

Top Idaho Republicans join Dole campaign

The Associated Press

BOISE — Three top Idaho Republican officials have joined the campaign of Sen. Robert Dole for the GOP presidential nomination, headed by Sen. Steve Symms.

"I think Sen. Dole is going to be our candidate," said Attorney General Jim Jones, who will serve as vice chairman of the campaign along with state Treasurer Lydia Justice Edwards.

"In my evaluation, he is picking up steam and the other candidate (Vice President George Bush) is not," Jones said at a news conference here Friday.

"We need someone who understands the West and can work with both sides," said Mrs. Edwards.

Campaign deputy chairman Roy Eiguren said Dole and his wife, former transportation secretary Elizabeth Dole, have been in Idaho several times in the last 18 months and plan to be in Idaho before the state's presidential primary in May.

Other top Idaho Republicans who joined the news conference and several of them will serve in the Dole campaign.

Eiguren also announced the appointment of several regional chairmen for Dole.

In Region 1, it will be Louise Shaddock, former executive director of the Idaho Forest Industries Association, and state Sen. Terry Sversten, R-ocatoido.

Region 2 chairman is Dwight Hoffman, professor emeritus of University of Idaho and on the executive committee of the state Republican Central Committee.

Region 3 chairman will be Dr. Bill Watkins of Nampa, who has been a leader of past Symms campaigns.

Region 4 chairman is Rep. Jack Kennick, R-Boise, House majority floor leader.

Justice warns judges to avoid law activism

BOISE (AP) — A justice of the Idaho Supreme Court says judges should stay away from judicial activism, and leave law and policymaking to those elected to those tasks.

"Great deference must be given to the decisions of the elected majority," said Justice Robert Bakes. He spoke Friday to a joint meeting of the Idaho Press Club and Idaho Newspaper Association.

Bakes spoke on First Amendment rights, and said they are the most important in the Bill of Rights. Without them, there could be no democracy in this country.

The founders of this country decided that the core value that they wanted to protect was democracy, a government system whereby the people could choose both the laws and the officials to administer them. Those not obeying the wishes of the majority were to be replaced through elections, he said.

Other rights under the Bill of Rights are important, but not as important as the freedom of speech and the right to know what the government is doing, he said.

"We would like to see an absolutely necessary to preserve the core value of democracy," he said.

Bakes said the press serves an absolutely vital function in the preservation of democracy, by telling people what government is doing.

read's administrative assistant, said the aerial search scoured the immediate area by the Hayley airport area of the appropriate people might use to get in and out of there.

The ground search included use of skis and snowmobiles, in addition to those searchers raking the area on foot.

Felling said the search crews were planning to meet Friday night to determine which areas had not yet been covered. He added that plans were also being made to reinterview certain witnesses.

...The result was a annual raise for her and her attorneys of between $3,400 and $4,000 each.

Dan Chadwick, a deputy attorney general for the Idaho Attorney General's office, said "arrangements where a county prosecutor assumes a city's misdemeanor cases is common."

Under Idaho law, a county prosecutor is only required to prosecute felonies in the county, and to act as legal advisor for the county on civil matters, he said.

And although Baxter assumed more work and isn't able to hire a fifth attorney, city officials say getting extra help wasn't a factor in their decision to award the contract to her.

"We didn't care whether she hired someone or did it with her own staff," said Mayor Doug Vollmer.

"We're not concerned, as long as the job gets done and they're doing it," said Tom Courtney, Twin Falls city manager. "If she feels that can be done with current staff then I don't feel there is any way we can decide her staffing level."

Collision kills woman

TWIN FALLS — A two-vehicle collision about a mile north of the airport Friday morning resulted in the death of a rental-car-company employee who had recently moved to Twin Falls.

Tracy Ann Harris, 20, was killed instantly by the collision, which occurred on Washington Street north of the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport. Jim Milder, Twin Falls County deputy coroner, said the accident occurred at roughly 10:50 a.m.

According to Twin Falls County Sheriff Jim Munn, Harris was driving north when her car went out of control and broad-sided a southbound pickup truck.

Harris was alone in her car, and the driver of the pickup truck, Jay Lazaros, 52, of Twin Falls, was not injured, Munn said.

According to Milder, Harris recently moved to Twin Falls from Boise, where most of her family still lives. She was an employee at Budget Rent-A-Car at the airport.

Milder said the accident is still under investigation by the Twin Falls Sheriff's Office.

couldn't come up with a deal to benefit the shareholders.

"We would still like to sell the building — we feel it would serve the community best by being on the tax rolls," Pierce said.

She said the company is hoping to sell the building to a private company.

Felton said the negotiations over the sale of the building were unexpected.

"We considered this an unexpected event, and we certainly feel that they were justified in deciding not to donate it," Felton said.

The negotiations by the county to get free, expanded office space came about two years after county voters decisively voted down a $6.2 million jail-bond proposal.

About 25 percent of the space in the proposal called for more room for the prosecutor's office, the public defender's office, the sheriff's office and the drivers' license bureau.

By the time Moore Financial got around to deciding against the donation, Baxter had signed her contract with the city and was faced with a dilemma.

She had the money, had the obligation to provide the service, but didn't have anywhere to put a fifth attorney.

So she got together with her staff, hashed out the problem, and decided simply to divide the money up in salaries and just work a little harder, Baxter said this week.

South Korea declares alert

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The government put the armed forces on alert Friday after a woman confessed she had bombed a Korean-Air jet on orders from a top North Korean leader.

North Korea denied involvement in the bombing and called South Korea's claims "a fabrication full of lies."

Defense Minister Chung Ho-ying ordered South Korea's 600,000-member armed forces to go on special alert to counter possible North Korean provocations along the border.

Chung, who met with his top military leaders, also raised the possibility of retaliatory measures against its communist neighbor.

"Our army is issuing a stern warning against North Korean military authorities and at the same time we, along with our people, denounce North Korea's barbarous act," he said.

Other government officials, who demanded anonymity, said Chung's statement was a warning to the north against further plots and it was unlikely the south would take any military action.

In New York, South Korea's U.N. ambassador, Keun Park, said the United Nations should impose sanctions against North Korea.

Culture-Information Minister Lee Woong-hee, who serves as the official government spokesman, also demanded that North Korea apologize for the bombing and punish those responsible.

In a lengthy dispatch from Pyongyang, the Korean Central News Agency condemned the "treacherous criminal acts of the puppets to shift the responsibility for the incident onto us."

The South's charges are "a fabrication full of lies, deception and contradiction," the agency said.

The woman, Kim Hyon Hui, told a nationally televised news conference that she and a male companion placed powerful bombs on a Korean Air plane that was destroyed Nov. 29 over the Andaman Sea near Burma.

"It is natural that I should be punished and killed a hundred times for my sin," the 24-year-old woman said in a barely audible voice.

Ms. Kim said she was ordered to destroy the plane by Kim Jong Il, son and heir of top North Korean leader Kim Il Sung, to scare other nations into staying away from the Olympic Games, to be held in Seoul in September.

Soldiers break into mosque

GAZA CITY, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — Israeli soldiers broke into the compound of a Gaza mosque Friday to force back protesters, and witnesses said police hurled tear gas at Arabs emerging from three other mosques.

Soldiers shot an Arab to death, bringing to 36 the number of Palestinians killed by Israeli troops since unrest began in the occupied territories Dec. 8, according to U.N. figures. The army said the Arab tried to stab a soldier.

Riot police rushed into the Dome of the Rock and nearby Al Aqsa mosques in Jerusalem among the holiest shrines of Islam, despite Moslem laws barring entry to people of other faiths.

Palestinian witnesses said police lunged tear gas at Arabs inside Al Aqsa and beat worshippers with truncheons as they left.

Associated Press photographer Anat Givon watched police invade the Dome of the Rock and saw five Palestinians carried out on stretchers, apparently overcome by tear gas.

All the violence occurred at the time of Friday noon prayers, which often have been a starting point for Palestinian protests.

Police spokesman Rafi Levy said officers entered Al Aqsa to search for a pistol stolen from a policeman, but did not use tear gas or beat worshippers.

He said Arab protesters with sticks and clubs seriously beat one policeman and eight Palestinians were arrested, including some who set fire to American and Israeli flags near the mosque.

Reporters were denied entry to silver-domed Al Aqsa and the gold-topped Dome of the Rock, which is built over the spot from which the prophet Mohammed is said to have risen to heaven on his horse.

At Al Amari, the largest mosque in Gaza, more than 300 young Arabs pelted soldiers with rocks and shouted "Allah Akbar" (God is Great). Troopers broke through locked gates into the compound and fired tear gas. After the army rushed to the compound, six soldiers emerged atop the mosque and an Israeli sniper was seen on the roof of an adjacent building. Shooting could be heard - rubber bullets and at least three rounds of live ammunition.

White clouds of tear gas billowed overhead and loudspeakers mounted on the mosque blared "Attack the soldiers! We are surrounded!"

Arabs with their faces hidden by checkered headscarves hurled chunks of concrete at the soldiers.

U.S. rejects Soviet proposal

GENEVA (AP) — The Soviet Union on Friday proposed a condition to an agreement to cut intercontinental nuclear forces in half, but the United States said it already had rejected the proposal to link the treaty to "Star Wars."

Soviet negotiators made a proposal on the second day of the latest round of the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks, known as START.

The U.S. and Soviet negotiators are working to conclude a treaty on reducing long-range nuclear forces by 50 percent in time for a summit expected to take place in Moscow this summer.

Terry Shroeder, spokesman for the U.S. side, said the Soviet proposal would put "crippling restraints" on the Strategic Defense Initiative, the U.S. space-based weapons system popularly known as "Star Wars."

He said the proposal put forth ideas the United States had previously rejected.

The Soviet negotiators made the proposals in the form of a draft protocol to a planned treaty.

Iran raids tankers; Iraq claims attacks

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iran raided two ships in the Persian Gulf on Friday and said its troops were on full alert and poised to attack the entire Iraqi border.

Iraq claimed its warplanes attacked two more tankers, but the report could not be confirmed.

The Iranian raids on the 13,524-ton Norwegian-flag Igloo Esopo and the Liberian tanker Atlantic Charisma were the fourth and fifth of the week in the so-called "tanker war," an outgrowth of the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq conflict, following a nine-day lull.

Iran's Parliament speaker, Hashemi Rafsanjani, said Iran's 500,000 troops massed along the southern border with Iraq were on full alert. He warned gulf Arab states to halt aid to Baghdad.

"Most of the provinces of Iraq, from Dohuk to Faw, now stand in a vertical line open to the attack of our forces," he said during his prayer sermon at Tehran University, broadcast by state-run Tehran Radio and monitored in Cyprus.

Dohuk is on the northern edge of Iraq and Faw is the Iranian-occupied southernmost tip of Iraqi territory.

The speaker warned gulf Arab leaders and supporters of Iraq to move toward justice before it is too late.

Illegal shipments suspected

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Police on Friday sealed off a nuclear processing plant where authorities investigated reports the operator broke an international treaty by shipping weapons-grade nuclear material to Libya and Pakistan.

Authorities said Interpol and the Swedish government, also were looking into reports the alleged shipments passed through Sweden.

Volker Hauff, deputy parliamentary leader of the opposition Social Democratic Party, said in Bonn Friday that a source he would not identify told him investigators searching the idled Nukem plant near Frankfurt "turned up evidence of a breach of the treaty."

Albert Farwick, the prosecutor leading the investigation, said that he had not found any evidence weapons-grade uranium was exported illegally.

Sakharov meets with Gorbachev

MOSCOW (AP) — Human rights activist Andrei D. Sakharov met Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev for the first time Friday and gave him a list of 200 Soviets he said were still imprisoned for their views.

Gorbachev received the 66-year-old dissident and Nobel Peace Prize laureate along with about two dozen other members of the board of a new organization called the International Fund for the Survival of Humanity.

Stocks gain on trade report

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market ran up a broad gain Friday, thanks to an early wave of buying touched off by word of a narrowed U.S. trade deficit.

But stocks did not exactly match the ebullient response that greeted the news in the credit and currency markets.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 39.96 to 2,966.07, finishing the week with a net gain of 44.78 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by nearly 5-to-1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 1,406 up, 287 down and 292 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 197.94 million shares, against 140.67 million in the previous session.

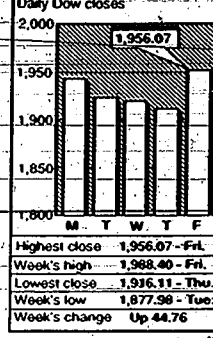

The Commerce Department reported that the nation's trade deficit shrank to $13.22 billion in November from a record $17.63 billion the month before. Exports broke a record set almost six years ago.

That touched off a rise in the dollar in foreign exchange markets around the world.

Interest rates fell in the credit markets as prices of long-term government bonds climbed about $25 for each $1,000 in face value.

gap between U.S. imports and exports wasn't as bad as it appeared a month ago.

Another plus for stocks and bonds was the Labor Department's report that the producer price index of finished goods dropped 0.3 percent in September, indicating that inflationary pressures remained subdued.

After jumping more than 50 points at the outset, the Dow was unable to make much further headway through the rest of the session, and pulled back a bit near the close.

Savings and loan stocks scored some standout gains on the drop in interest rates. Golden West Financial picked up 2 1/2 to 27 1/2 and Great Western Financial 1 1/4 to 14 1/4.

Columbia Gas System fell 4 1/2 to 28 1/2 in heavy trading on top of a 6-point drop Thursday. A Federal Energy Regulatory Commission ruling Wednesday apparently denied the company a chance to recover a large portion of costs incurred in renegotiating contracts with natural-gas suppliers.

On Friday the company said it was withdrawing from a partnership planning to build a pipeline in Ohio and Pennsylvania.

New York State Electric & Gas dropped 1/4 to 20 1/2. The company cut its quarterly dividend from 66 to 60 cents a share.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 widely traded stocks, the market increased $4.25 billion, or 0.25 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks added 2.19 to 141.16.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges, totalled $4.25 billion, or 0.25 percent, in value.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market gained 6.91 to 340.14. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 268.31, up 4.43.

First Security earnings up

BOISE (AP)—First Security Corp., the Salt Lake City-based parent company of First Security Bank of Idaho, has announced its highest annual earnings in five years.

James Phelps, president and chief executive of the Idaho bank, said First Security Corp. had a net income of $6 million for the fourth quarter and $27 for the year.

The 1987 total exceeded the $5.1 million earned in 1986, the $19 million in 1985, the $23.1 million in 1984 and the $21.2 million in 1983.

Phelps credited the bank's decision in 1986 to increase reserves for possible loan and real estate losses. It reduced earnings in 1986, but put the bank in a stronger position last year, he said.

Combined reserves at the end of the year stood at $76 million, Phelps said.

"In spite of the difficult economic environment in which we operated, we were still able to maintain total assets of $6.1 billion and total loans of $3.4 billion, approximately equal to levels of a year ago," he said.

Mountain Bell to block line

BOISE (AP)—Mountain Bell of Idaho says it will begin offering blocking access to ScopLine services at no charge for residential customers who request it.

The company said Thursday it also will remove certain programming from the ScopLine menu, and will stop billing for the discontinued programs.

"We're going this mainly to give parents more tools to protect their children from access to programming that is inappropriate for them," said C.E. "Gene" Hill, executive officer of Mountain Bell in Idaho.

A company spokesman said U.S. West was announcing the same policy in all 14 states in its service area.

The company said it would review ScopLine programs. "We no longer will bill for any service that we believe could harm our reputation," Hill said.

He said some ScopLine services are straightforward information programs such as sports scores, road conditions, weather forecasts, time-of-day, job and skill information.

Andrus praises processor

BOISE (AP)—Gov. Cecil Andrus has been urging Idaho companies to look at "value added" operations to apply to Idaho natural resources.

He had an example to praise on Thursday. He attended ribbon-cutting ceremonies for a major expansion at SST Foods, Inc. The Idaho company produces 4 million pounds per month of Idaho beef.

Company officials said SST supplies about 1.5 million pounds of fresh hamburger per month to 140 Wendy's fast food outlets and Albertson's stores in the region. It ships another 2.6 million pounds per month out of the region.

"This is a perfect example of how the value added concept can be applied to Idaho products," Andrus said. "SST is buying a local product, bonafide beef, adding value by processing it into fresh hamburger and frozen beef products, and then shipping it throughout the Pacific Northwest," he said.

The company plans to add 40 to 50 more workers in the next six to nine months. It currently has a work force of 35. Sales are projected at $60 million annually.

The company also has farm and ranch operations and a 2,000-head feedlot near Parma.

Fund raising rolling along

BOISE (AP)—Efforts to raise $1.5 million for an Idaho economic development company appear to be going better than an earlier effort.

Stock subscriptions in The Idaho Company have passed $1 million less than one month after the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission approved a revised stock registration statement.

"The company must raise $1.5 million before June 19 to launch operations," it said.

"We're extremely happy with the cross-section of responses to his new offering," said DiAnne Hough, vice president of marketing. She said purchases by individuals have ranged from $100 to $5,000.

"Many people are saying they couldn't subscribe before because of the stock market crash, but they can now," Ms. Hough said.

Chicago Board sets index futures price limits

CHICAGO (AP)—The Chicago Board of Trade has set permanent daily price limits on its stock-index futures.

It is the first futures market to do so in an attempt to curb trading volatility that some critics say worsened the October stock market crash.

Limits on index futures were a key element of a broader plan suggested by the presidential commission appointed to investigate the crash, and other exchanges with temporary limits say they plan to make them permanent.

The Board of Trade received approval Tuesday from the Commodity Futures Trading Commission to impose limits on the amount that its index futures may rise or fall in price during a single session.

A number of observers have contended that trading strategies involving index futures and huge blocks of stock, known as program trading, accelerated the stock market's collapse Oct. 19, which saw the Dow Jones Industrial average fall a record 608 points.

Index futures are financial instruments whose prices are based on "baskets" of different stocks.

Investors use the futures to hedge their holdings against market downturns or as part of complicated trading strategies in which they attempt to profit from discrepancies between the index futures and the actual price of the stocks they represent.

Because such strategies can involve the movement of millions of shares of stock in rapid, computerized trading, they have been blamed for exaggerating existing market price trends, such as the Oct. 19 plunge.

The Board of Trade's limits require trading in any of the exchange's Major Market Index futures contracts halt temporarily when the contract moves 40 points above or below its close of the previous session.

A 40-point move in the MMI, an index tracking the movement of 20 blue-chip stocks, is roughly equivalent to a 200-point move in the Dow Jones industrial average, analysts said.

The November MMI contract fell 108.6 points on Oct. 19. Last Friday, the near-month MMI contract dipped 32.2 points as the Dow industrials fell 140 points.

The Board of Trade also imposed a permanent daily limit of 25 points on its more highly-traded Institutional Index futures.

In the wake of the Oct. 19 crash, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange has imposed a temporary 30-point daily limit on its Standard & Poor's 500 contract, the world's most widely-traded index future.

The exchange plans to apply to the commodity commission later this month for permission to impose permanent limits, spokesman Andrew Yemina said.

A 30-point move in the S&P 500 index is roughly equivalent to a 240-point move in the Dow industrial average, analysts said.

Price limits have long been imposed on agricultural commodities and Treasury bond futures, but were not required on the much younger stock-index futures because of objections from free-market theorists. Bill Arruach, a spokesman for the Board of Trade,
