Reagan presses for Contra aid, arms treaty

President proposes bonds, larger grants for needy students

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan called Monday for increased federal bonds for colleges and larger grants for needy students.

In his State of the Union address to Congress, the president boasted that his education rhetoric and policies, including support of merit pay for teachers, a tougher curriculum and access to teaching licenses by non-teacher majors, have helped double America's schools.

On education, Reagan promised to seek more money for magnet schools, which many districts use to promote the arts, science and other specialties.

The $4-billion program that provides financial aid to needy students is the largest federal commitment to education in the nation.

Reagan said in a written message that he will ask Congress to approve creation of College Savings Bonds with special incentives for low- and middle-income families to save for the future education of their children. Interest on the bonds will be free from federal income tax.

Reagan also asked Congress to increase the monthly stipend for low-income college students from $200 to $300.

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, declared America is "strong, prosperous, at peace," asked Congress in his final State of the Union address Monday night to keep money flowing to Nicaragua rebels and to ratify the newly signed arms treaty with the Soviet Union.

Reagan, in a nationally broadcast speech before a joint session of the House and Senate, emphasized he has a full agenda for the next 12 months.

"My thinking on the next year is quite simple: let's make this the best of eight. And that means: it's all out, right to the finish line. I don't buy the idea that this is the last year of anything," said Reagan, who turns the White House over to a successor next January.

Democrats and Republicans alike cheered and applauded when Reagan, urging reform of the congressional budget process, hefted three huge spending bills, each weighing upwards of 16 pounds, and thumped them down, one by one, on a nearby desk. He said most lawmakers didn't even know what was in the bills.

Without specifying a figure, Reagan urged Congress, in a vote next month, to renew aid to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua. "Let us be for the people of Nicaragua what we have been for our forefathers and the cause of American independence," the president said.

A senior administration official, briefing reporters at the White House on condition of anonymity, said the aid request would be "under $50 million, with about 10 percent of the figure earmarked for lethal military aid and the rest for non-lethal aid."

President Reagan hefts 14-pound budget resolution

Idahoans react along party lines

States News Service

WASHINGTON — Three members of Idaho's Congressional delegation split along party lines in their reactions to President Reagan's final State of the Union address Monday night.

The president's speech was a tour de force, Republican Sen. James A. McClure, Idaho's senior senator and a staunch Reagan supporter, said through his press secretary. "He clearly aimed to dispel any notion he is a lame duck, and I don't think that he is, as the pursuit of his agenda indicated."

"I think the strongest point the president made was on the mess that is the budget process in Congress, when he showed the American public three massive pieces of legislation that encompassed an entire year's work," McClure said.

McClure was referring to the point in the speech when Reagan displayed three thick volumes, weighing 43 pounds in all, which were the budget and deficit reduction bills Congress passed in its final hours last month.

The president denounced the budget process that has led to the passage of catch-all spending bills, called continuing resolutions, rather than actual appropriations bills, in recent years. Reagan pledged to veto any continuing resolution Congress passes this year.

Rep. Larry Craig, a Republican who represents Idaho's First District, said he had heard all of Reagan's previous State of the Union addresses and found the "to be as strong as he's given."

Like McClure, Craig said he found Reagan's comments on the budget process the most important in the wide-ranging speech. "I think he outlined not only the responsibility of Congress, but the ultimate charge. That is: the budget process."

Democrats joined Republicans in a standing tribute to the first lady, who was sitting in a VIP section of the House chamber.

"Surprised you didn't?" Reagan said as the applause died down.

In a separate legislative message transmitted to Congress, he requested $1.5 billion — roughly a 60 percent increase — to fight the deadly AIDS virus.

The legislative message also called for a reduction of capital gains taxes, but did not cite any figures.

Hagerman horse trots a lap closer to becoming Gem fossil

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Hagerman horse backers shot down a move to include the Great Horn bison as the officially designated state fossil Monday.

The three million-year-old Hagerman horse now appears poised to ride onto the pages of books, maps and tourist brochures as Idaho's one and only state fossil.

"I thought it went great," said Rep. Ralph Peters, R-Jerome, who is leading the charge on the Hagerman horse. "I expect this to sail through."

A host of witnesses trotted before the House Commerce, Industry and Labor committee to testify that the world-renowned Hagerman horse is both old and important.

After listening for an hour to experts, citizens and other lawmakers — such as Sen. John Pavoy, D-Carey, and Sen. Claire Withell, D-Mountain Home, the committee voted unanimously to send the bill to the House floor with a recommendation to pass.

But one witness, William Akersten, curator of vertebrate paleontology at the Idaho State Museum, wanted to include the bison along with the Hagerman horse as the official state fossil.

"I don't want to fight," said Akersten, who also testified on behalf of the Hagerman horse. "If there's only going to be one, then I think it should be the Hagerman horse."

But if they were going to do it, lawmakers needed to get it right.

Akersten pointed out that the bill's language, designating the "equus simplicidens," could put the state in the position of having egg on its face.

The equus simplicidens was originally discovered in Texas, he said. "If you designate the Hagerman horse as the equus simplicidens, there could be some confusion."

Akersten suggested using "pleistopushonensis," which can only apply to the Hagerman horse, to eliminate any bone of contention.

While Akersten plugged the Hagerman horse as "an excellent choice for state fossil," he encouraged lawmakers to consider the Great Horn bison, with horns measuring eight feet from tip to tip — worthy of consideration. "It was discovered in the American Falls lake beds and dates back to before the dinosaurs."

Reversing course from last year, Reagan called for increased spending for education and the war against drugs.

He claimed for his administration "an untold success story" — an increase in the number of young people who are willing to turn away from drugs. He praised his wife Nancy for that development. "She has helped so many of our young people to say 'no' to drugs. Nancy's credit belongs to you, and I want to express to you your husband's pride and your country's thanks."

Helms claims USSR already cheating

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz assured conservative critics Monday the United States will respond vigorously if the Soviet Union violates the new arms reduction treaty in Europe, but Sen. Jesse Helms declared the Soviet Union already is exploiting an "engraved invitation to cheat."

As Shultz led off the administration's campaign for Senate ratification of the document marked "TOP SECRET" in bright red, contended he had obtained classified information proving the Soviets already have violated the pact which calls for the elimination of medium and shorter-range nuclear missiles.

Helms, an outspoken conservative, told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee he had received confirmation of the document's authenticity — its contents still undisclosed — from CIA Director William Webster.

Shultz declined to discuss or even look at the document on grounds he was surrounded by photographers and television cameramen.

But Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., complaining that Helms had not read aloud from a key section of a letter from Webster, quoted the CIA chief as saying that while the document represented excerpts from a draft of a CIA national intelligence estimate, it did not tell the whole story.

Reading the full Webster letter, Sarbanes noted the CIA director had said the judgments reached in the document "by themselves do not constitute a sufficient basis on which to draw conclusions" as to whether Soviet compliance with the treaty can be adequately and effectively verified.

The Foreign Relations panel will examine the matter further during a closed session on Friday.

Helms is leading a band of Senate conservatives expected to oppose the pact. Ratification requires a two-thirds Senate vote, 67 votes if all 100 senators are present and voting.

The treaty was signed last month by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, climaxing negotiations that began even before the Reagan administration came to office in 1981.

The treaty provides that within three years of ratification, both countries would finish eliminating all their nuclear missiles with ranges of 315 to 3,125 miles. These weapons account for about 4 percent of their nuclear arsenals.

As Shultz told the Foreign Relations Committee, Webster's treaty work of "level-headed" negotiations and represents an improvement in the security of the West, two other senior officials, Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci and Adm. William J. Crowe Jr., chairman of the military Joint Chiefs of Staff, went before the Senate Armed Services Committee to add their endorsement.

Shultz said that while the pact, the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces or INF treaty, is only a modest first step, it does enhance international stability and may open a new chapter in arms control — the beginning of reductions.

Clan receives food

The Associated Press

MARION, Utah — A long-time friend of a polygamist clan held up 10 days for sending a church bombing visited that compound Monday, delivering milk and baby food as a show of good faith by police.

The development came hours after three members of the clan, called "clans" and "branches" after making an armed foray outside their compound to grab and shoot out loudspeakers, used by police to disrupt their sleep.

"We allowed a long-time friend of the family ... to take milk and a box of baby cereal in an effort to show the individuals inside we are sincere," said Doug Bodrero, deputy state director of public safety.

Among the nine children believed in the compound are four who are age 3 or younger, including a 10-month-old infant.

Bodrero declined to identify the man, who was told by police he could stay at the compound as long as he feels comfortable, but not past dark.

As two adults and two children flew paper airplanes in the compound, the family friend drove a blue van up to the compound gate at 4:30 p.m., got out and walked up the driveway carrying what looked like a blue-and-white cooler.

The man set down the cooler at the top of the driveway, climbed a fence and was escorted by an armed man into the clan's main log house.

Mecham faces recall

The Associated Press

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Gov. Evan Mecham will have to face a recall election or resign after the secretary of state announced Monday that his opponents had collected more than enough signatures to force such a vote.

Mecham, who also faces legislative impeachment hearings and criminal charges in connection with a campaign loan, repeated his assertion that he will not resign, a spokesman said.

R. Mofford, the Democratic secretary of state who would replace the republican governor if he resigns or is removed from office, said 1,032 signatures were verified. The Mecham Recall Committee needed 216,746 valid signatures to force a vote.

Meanwhile, an Arizona House select committee resumed hearings Monday on whether Mecham should be impeached. Mecham is expected to be the last witness before the panel, either late this week or early next week.

The governor also faces a March 9 criminal trial on six felony counts connected with the alleged concealment of the $350,000 campaign loan he received from a developer.

President proposes bonds, larger grants for needy students

WASHINGTON — President Reagan called Monday for Congress to pass a new law authorizing bonds for needy students and larger grants for educationally disadvantaged students.

Reagan, in his final State of the Union address Monday night, urged Congress to pass the legislation by the end of the year.

The president also called for a new law to authorize the issuance of $1 billion in bonds to help pay for the education of needy students.

Reagan also urged Congress to pass a law that would increase the federal share of the cost of education for disadvantaged students from 50 percent to 75 percent.

Senate Republicans build case against Aslett nomination

BOISE (AP) — Senate Republicans are building their case against another nominee of Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus after his first bills last week with the rejection of Republican Larry J. Craig to the state Tax Commission.

The governor's nomination of Kevin Aslett, a Twin Falls contractor to the Transportation Board, was among the issues discussed Monday during a closed-door caucus of the Senate's GOP majority, and Caucus Chairman Jerry Twigg of Blackfoot predicted the same fate for Aslett that Jackson suffered.

Jackson was rejected by Senate Republicans, who were highly critical of his support for Andrus in the 1986 campaign, the governor won by a fraction over Republican David Leroy.

"From the sentiment that was expressed, the result will probably be much the same" on the Aslett confirmation, Twigg said. Two other Andrus appointees, Republican Nolan Young of Idaho Falls to the Personal Commission and Boise Republican Betty Lou Donnelly to the Judicial Council, have also been targeted for rejection by Senate Republicans because they backed Andrus two years ago as well.

Sen. CIA Smysler, the Parma Republican who chairs the Transportation Committee, that will consider Aslett's appointment, said he met with Andrus about the nomination earlier in the day, outlining objections to the proposed successor for Fairfield Republican Lloyd Barron.

Andrus spokesman Marc Johnson said the formal nomination was still in the governor's office because Barron's term does not expire until Sunday, but Smysler said Andrus gave no indication he will back down on the nomination.

Smysler said he would make public a letter containing the objections on Tuesday. Other Republican senators said at least some of the case against Aslett revolves around his past financial support for the political campaigns of Democrats like Andrus, former Governor John Evans and one-time presidential candidate Edward Kennedy, the senator from Massachusetts, while no evidence has been uncovered of contributions to Republicans.

"We have been checking Marvin Aslett's credentials and haven't found any evidence that he's a real Republican," Twigg said. "From all the information I've got, he looks more like a Democrat than a Republican."

Aslett has reportedly labeled himself a political independent, but that tactic created severe problems for several nominees last year, leading to their withdrawals prior to floor votes.

something; fix it, and don't send me something that's still broken."

"That was the fundamental charge: get the budget process fixed. The American people, most important the American taxpayer, deserves better."

Craig said that some of the Constitutional amendments President Reagan called for will have little more success this year than in years past. He did not specify which ones.

But Craig said that if Congress does not repair the budget process, a balanced budget amendment sponsored by Craig and other congressmen would eventually be successful.

Rep. Richard Stallings of Idaho's Second District, the only Democrat in the delegation, described the speech as "classic Reagan. It was es-entially the same speech he's given the last six or seven years."

Stallings, too, cited the president's harsh criticism of the budget process, but said the president should shoulder some of the blame.

"It would help if we had an administration who worked with the Congress rather than against it," Stallings said, noting that Reagan has failed to present a balanced budget to Congress since he took office.

"He presented budgets even though Republicans wouldn't support," Stallings said.

Stallings said he was "encouraged" by Reagan's call for better education and "surprised" that the president said so little about the INF treaty which now faces Senate ratification. Stallings said the INF treaty, which would ban an entire class of U.S. and Soviet nuclear missiles in Europe, may turn out to be the president's "greatest accomplishment."

Striking — a bipartisan theme, Reagan told the lawmakers, "Yes, we have to give that up. But let us far outweigh whatever divides us."

Leaders of the Democratic-run Congress served notice that the legislative branch, not Reagan, would control the national agenda this year.

The president's "technicolor view of America and our people sought to make us feel good with images of 'morning in America,'" said Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va. in the official Democratic response.

office, Reagan said the government has cut spending, "tax rates and inflation, while employment has climbed to record heights."

"In international relations, too, there is only one description for what, together we have achieved: a complete turnaround, a revolution. Seven years ago, America was weak and freedom everywhere was under siege."

Crediting his administration with reversing that course, he said, "We've replaced 'Blame America' with 'Look up to America.'"

Reagan declared, "Tonight, then, we are strong, prosperous, at peace. And we are free. This is the state of our union."

"And if we will work together this year, I believe we can give a future president and a future Congress the chance to make that prosperity, that peace, that freedom, not just the state of our union, but the state of our world."

Reagan said he will submit his new aid request for the Contras on Wednesday. He said the struggle there "has extra meaning because that nation is so near our own borders."

The president noted recent disclosures that the leftist Sandinista government in Managua is planning to establish a 600,000-man army. "Yet even as these plans are made, the Sandinista regime knows the tide is turning and the cause of Nicaraguan freedom is riding at its crest," he said.

Reagan said it was the Contras, who have forced the Sandinistas to adopt some democratic reforms, negotiate with church authorities and release some political prisoners.

Bush, Rather tangle during newscast

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In an extraordinary television and political drama, Vice President Bush engaged in an emotional, shouting match with "CBS Evening News" anchorman Dan Rather Monday night over the vice president's role in the Iran-Contras affair.

In the unprecedented nine-minute exchange, broadcast live on the evening news, Bush offered a new explanation of his knowledge of the arms-for-hostages dealings with Iran that is at odds with a memo written in 1986 by his chief of staff.

The confrontation may turn out to be politically explosive, coming just 13 days before the Iowa presidential caucus and at a time when public opinion surveys show many Americans believe the vice president has not answered all the questions about his role in the Iran-Contras scandal.

After a six-minute taped report narrated by Rather on questions about the role of the vice president and his subordinates in the affair, Bush, who had watched the report on a monitor, attacked the network anchor, accusing him of having "impugned ... my integrity" in the report and of misrepresenting the type of story being done in order to obtain the live interview.

comment late Monday.

In his 43-minute address, the president repeated many of the themes that have become familiar to the American people since he took office Jan. 20, 1981.

Sen. Steven Symph, a Republican, was unavailable for comment late Monday.

Stallings said he was "encouraged" by Reagan's call for better education and "surprised" that the president said so little about the INF treaty which now faces Senate ratification. Stallings said the INF treaty, which would ban an entire class of U.S. and Soviet nuclear missiles in Europe, may turn out to be the president's "greatest accomplishment."

But, he said, "The 'feel-good' slogan we've gone that with time. We've learned that bravado is not leadership — that ideology is no substitute for common sense."

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, praised Reagan for his arms treaty with the Soviets and called on him to work with Congress toward peace in Central America. But he chided the president for fighting Congress on priorities including trade and domestic spending programs.

Reagan chastised Congress for its "technocratic budget process of passing budget bills after midnight," he said, "and if you do, we will sign it."

"Let's change all this," Reagan said. "Instead of a presidential budget that gets discarded and a congressional budget resolution that is not enforced, why not a simple partnership, a joint agreement that sets out the spending priorities within the available revenues."

The address sets the stage for the president's final 12 months in power after a year of heavy blows, from the embarrassing revelations of the Iran-Contras affair to two failed attempts to put a hardline conservative on the Supreme Court.

It was the seventh and last time that Reagan went before a joint session of Congress to report on the State of the Union. Although he has the option of giving a farewell State of the Union next January, aides said it will be a written message, not a speech.

Summing up his seven years in Reagan's "feel-good" slogan we've gone that with time. We've learned that bravado is not leadership — that ideology is no substitute for common sense."

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, praised Reagan for his arms treaty with the Soviets and called on him to work with Congress toward peace in Central America. But he chided the president for fighting Congress on priorities including trade and domestic spending programs.

Reagan chastised Congress for its "technocratic budget process of passing budget bills after midnight," he said, "and if you do, we will sign it."

"Let's change all this," Reagan said. "Instead of a presidential budget that gets discarded and a congressional budget resolution that is not enforced, why not a simple partnership, a joint agreement that sets out the spending priorities within the available revenues."

The address sets the stage for the president's final 12 months in power after a year of heavy blows, from the embarrassing revelations of the Iran-Contras affair to two failed attempts to put a hardline conservative on the Supreme Court.

It was the seventh and last time that Reagan went before a joint session of Congress to report on the State of the Union. Although he has the option of giving a farewell State of the Union next January, aides said it will be a written message, not a speech.

The Hagerman contingent was not impressed. The bison may be a great set of bones, but it's too young and too common, they said.

"This state being a Western state, I think it will be good to honor the horse," said Mel Cook, whose father, Elmer Cook, first discovered the Hagerman fossil beds in the 1920s. "I disagree we should put the bison with it."

Cook said old bison were laying around everywhere, from Alaska to Canada.

"I don't want to knock the bison, but the Hagerman horse is unique worldwide," he said.

Wearing jeans, a red flannel shirt and a bandana-tied-around-his-neck, Cook said he had no impact on the horse was in settling the West.

"Pioneers came on horses," he said. Horses helped dig canals, build roads, build railroads, he said. "I would honor the horse."

Cook also emphasized the importance of the Hagerman fossil beds to the world of science.

"I don't think people realize what a find that was," said Cook, whose mother cooked for paleontologists as they uncovered 130 complete horse skeletons on just a half-acre site. "They are two to three acres left with a lot larger deposits than what they've already found."

Cook said scientists have estimated 1,000 complete skeletons still remain.

Cook said he is confident that the state's ability to declare the zebra-like horse the state fossil would add weight to the current measure in Congress turning the Hagerman fossil beds into a national monument.

"I think adding the bison would take away the impact," he said. In Congress, said Bur Holmes, chairman of the Hagerman Fossil National Monument Committee.

Hagerman Mayor Merle Owles and others also pushed the tourism aspect of designating the old horse.

"The Hagerman horse is Idaho's oldest citizen," he said. "Let's give it the praise and recognition it deserves."

Four named to alcohol panel

BOISE (AP) — Arvon J. Arave, state prison warden, was among those named on Monday by Gov. Cecil Andrus to the Governor's Commission on Alcohol-Drug Abuse advisory board.

Other new members are Thomas Billingsley, Department of Corrections; Ed Nadeau, Department of Education and Ray Winterrowd, Department of Health and Welfare.

Members reappointed were Gloria Cartan, Idaho Falls; Rita Hogg, Hailey; Frank Premo, Coeur d'Alene police chief; Carl Snow, Twin Falls, public school superintendent; and, from Boise, George Alvarez of the Board of Education, former state legislator; Vernon K. Brassey, Boise State University professor; Maria Eschen, Keith Matthews, administrator, alcohol beverage control, Department of Law Enforcement; Joan Nelson and Bill Roden.

William Rigby, Idaho Falls, was reappointed to the State Building Authority.

Harold P. Hill, Shelley, was named to the advisory Board of Aeronautics and Public Transportation.

Tax freeze relief requested

BOISE (AP) — Six Idaho counties got caught by an Idaho tax freeze 10 years ago and some of them desperately need help, says Rep. James Stoicech, D-Sandpoint.

He asked the House Revenue and Taxation Committee on Monday to introduce legislation allowing the six counties to levy property tax for road improvements and repair.

The counties of Bonner, Shoshone, Adams, Valley, Boise and Cassiar were using other sources of revenue for highway work, Stoicech said, including revenue-sharing money or income from timber.

When voters adopted the 1 percent tax initiative in 1978, he said, the Legislature limited local taxing agencies to the amount of tax they were charging in 1978. The six counties got caught in the middle, because they were not levying property taxes for roads, Stoicech said.

In Bonner, his county, Stoicech said there are about 660 miles of county roads. School buses alone travel more than 3,200 miles per day on those roads, he said.

Inactive tax permits mullied

BOISE (AP) — The state tax agency says of the 36,000 sales tax permits it has issued, about 7,800 are inactive, with no business activity in the last year.

Speaker Fred Spangler told the House Revenue and Taxation Committee on Monday it wants to be able to suspend the inactive accounts, to avoid much paperwork both by the agency and taxpayers.

The committee voted to print and introduce the legislation. In response to an earlier committee recommendation, Spangler said the bill has been revised so the department doesn't have to charge a $10 fee for reinstatement of permits suspended for inactivity.

Appointments cleared for OK

BOISE (AP) — A series of appointments by Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus, including his selection for the Board of Corrections, have cleared legislative committees and been recommended for confirmation by the state Senate.

The action comes after last week's rejection by the Senate of Republican Larry Jackson of the state Tax Commission because Jackson supported Andrus during the 1986 campaign.

Without dissent on Monday, the Senate Judiciary Committee endorsed the confirmation of Twin Falls radio personality L. James Kowalik to the state Board of Corrections. He replaces Charles Hall of Boise.

The State Affairs Committee endorsed the appointments of Governor James and Mark Aronson of Lewiston to the Veterans Affairs Commission, and Phillip Sansotta of Boise to the Commission on Human Rights. The committee also backed the reappointment to the Human Rights Commission of Marianne Endo of Pocatello and Kootenai County Undersheriff Larry Broadbent of Hayden Lake.

Defense in Rhoades' trial rests case

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — After a morning delay allowed jurors a bus tour of locations cited in earlier testimony, the defense took only about 30 minutes Monday to wrap up its case in the first-degree murder trial of Paul Ezra Rhoades.

The defense rested at about 2 p.m. Monday after calling only five witnesses. Seventh District Judge Larry Boyle set closing arguments for Tuesday morning on charges against Rhoades in the slaying of Idaho Falls teacher Susan Michelbacher.

The proceedings were delayed about two hours Monday morning when officials waited for Rhoades' suit to be returned from a dry cleaner.

But while court was in recess, Boyle said later, the jurors selected from Ada County were bused to the Albertson grocery store where Mrs. Michelbacher disappeared on March 19. They also viewed the two banks where Mrs. Michelbacher cashed checks that morning, and the site where a barbed wire fence was broken, allegedly by her van.

Rhoades, 31, of Idaho Falls, is charged with first-degree murder, first-degree kidnapping, robbery, rape and committing an infamous crime against nature, along with several firearms violations in Mrs. Michelbacher's death. He also is scheduled to go on trial

Feb. 29 in Blackfoot on first-degree murder and other charges in the shooting death of convenience store clerk Stacy Baldwin a year ago, and later faces a second murder trial in Idaho Falls for the shooting death of convenience store clerk Nolan Haddon.

When court reconvened after the bus tour, defense attorney Stephen Hart asked Boyle to bar the prosecution from asking about rumors or allegations witnesses may have heard about Rhoades, including references to his being charged with the Baldwin and Haddon slayings.

Boyle said he had been careful to keep references to those murder charges out of the Michelbacher trial to avoid any error that might cause the verdict to be reversed on appeal.

He told Hart that bringing up the issue of Rhoades' character at all "opens the door for inquiry" into the other slayings.

"Frankly, I don't know why you want to open the door, Mr. Hart," he said.

The judge decided he would not allow testimony about the Haddon or Baldwin slayings. But, he said, "If you open the door so far, Mr. Hart, I may have no choice but to let the state inquire."

Boyle asked attorneys for both sides to "tread lightly so as not to create error or other problems."

Industry poll is released

WASHINGTON (AP) — A survey conducted by Sen. Steve Symms and Rep. Larry Craig indicates that Idaho business favors a balanced-budget amendment to the U.S. Constitution, a multiple-use approach for federal land not already designated as wilderness and helping existing industry to grow.

The survey, mailed to a random sampling of Idaho businesses late last year drew 285 responses. The 10 Idaho Republicans said. The survey report did not say how many were mailed out.

According to the survey, 83 percent favored a balanced-budget amendment and 16 percent opposed it. Some 70 percent favored the limitation veto by the president and 26 percent were against.

The multiple-use management of federal lands earned 76 percent, while 21 percent looked to a focus on wilderness. And 57 percent were for a study of the Sawtooth and White Clouds mountains with a national veto by the president. The option, Craig has suggested creating a national park in the area. Against the idea were 36 percent.

Cooperation pays off for ISU

BOISE (AP) — Federal and state leaders agreed Monday that cooperation was a key factor in landing a big research project for Idaho State University.

"It's amazing what can be done when there is no question who gets the credit," said Gov. Cecil Andrus.

He presided at a news conference at the Statehouse over a big research contract between the College of Pharmacy at ISU and the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

ISU researchers will have a lead role in the Boron Neutron Capture Therapy project at INEL. Using a surplus nuclear reactor at INEL, it will develop new technology to treat brain tumors.

"This project shows that the investment we have made in our pharmacy school at ISU is paying off," Andrus said. "This is proof of the perfect marriage that can exist between our educational institutions and the scientific community at INEL."

The school received $130,000 from the Legislature last year. Using that funding, ISU expects to receive $1.5 million in research grants over the next three years.

ISU researchers will have a lead role in the Boron Neutron Capture Therapy project at INEL. Using a surplus nuclear reactor at INEL, it will develop new technology to treat brain tumors.

"We are developing a fine pharmacy college," said Bowen. "It is this which gives us the opportunity to work with INEL."

Don Ode, manager of the Idaho operations office of the Department of Energy, said ISU's role will be an important one in developing the new cancer treatment program.

"The National Cancer Institute will be in Pocatello to review the project next month. Ode said, "and then the program is off and running."

Sen. James McClure, who took part in the news conference by speaker phone, said state funding for ISU was an important part in landing the project.

He called the new research project "an expression of the spin-off benefits" Idaho gets from INEL. Sen. Steve Symms told the group by speaker phone the next big hurdle is to get a good evaluation from the National Cancer Institute "and then this thing will take off. They have the capability at the site to do a lot of other things," Symms said.

"This is a great day for Idaho and particularly ISU," said Rep. Richard Stallings.

Andrus said INEL, the big federal nuclear research center in eastern Idaho, "the strongest magnet for economic development we have in this state."

Arthur Nelson, dean of the College of Pharmacy, said the landing of such research assignments doesn't happen overnight. He said ISU needed the resources to improve its pharmacy program and to attract top-notch researchers to Pocatello.

The governor said the research project will put the ISU faculty and School of Pharmacy in contact with medical experts worldwide. "This truly will be a world-class project located in Idaho, with an Idaho educational institute providing major support," Andrus said.

Panel questions sentencing

BOISE (AP) — The chairman and some members of the Senate Judiciary Committee have raised questions about compliance of state district court judges with new criminal sentencing laws and are demanding a report on judicial sentencing since the laws took effect.

Chairman Roger Fairchild, R-Fruitland, directed Parole Commission Director Olivia Cravens on Monday to provide the information on compliance with the year-old sentencing laws intended to bolster the state's campaign to get tougher on violent crime.

Cravens had advised the committee that her cursory review of criminal cases over the past four months showed judges failed to impose minimum prison terms in as many as half.

"The code is clear," Fairchild said. "You shall set a minimum sentence and there is no parole before that minimum time has been served."

Cravens said she did not review the files close enough to determine a pattern for either the kinds of cases or their locations, but she said she would provide the committee with a complete rundown of sentences imposed under the new law by each judge in the state.

Someone missing even in strong single-parent families

BOSTON — I have a young friend who will tell you, if you ask, that she grew up in an "intact single-parent family."

It is a phrase she invented some years ago when she got tired of hearing her family described in pathological terms. She and her mother were not broken. Her home did not operate on crutches. She was not "a child of divorce," but a child of two parents who no longer lived together.

My young friend was making a point. All single-parent families do not come in one flavor: weak. There are as many varieties as among two-parent families. Here, I tasted strong. I thought of her last week when the Census Bureau released its figures. Nearly a quarter of all American children now live with one parent. More than half will spend some time in a single-parent household before they are 18.

Two-thirds of these households are created by divorce or separation. Most of them, 89 percent, consist of mother and children.

Ellen Goodman

What was once a deviant pattern has become ordinary.

In deference to my friend, we might subdivide this category into its meaningful parts. After all, the real-life experience of a child of a parent who has disappeared. The life experience of a child who slides down the economic chute is different from that of one who remains financially secure.

A toddler's experience with divorce is, in turn, different from that of a teen-ager. A child whose parents remain bitter has a different life than those whose parents are personally happy and civil to each other.

You cannot walk the city streets and pick out the telltale signs of someone who grew up with one parent. There is no pathology of single-parentness. Yet I know there is something shared by the children counted by the Census Bureau. An experience of loss. A feeling of impermanence. An altered sense of security. And maybe even the hope that it won't happen to their own.

Offspring of the strongest single-parent households, those kids who made it, those who can explain by 14 or 15 precisely why their parents couldn't live together, who can negotiate their way between two households, perhaps even two new families, share these feelings. Push a bit into their cool surface and you can touch a warm spot of sadness.

The word "family," narrowed down to its nucleus, evokes primal feelings. The college-age students who watch afternoon reruns of "Ozzie and Harriet" don't just tune in for its camp humor. There is also a hunger for entry into those dated vignettes. To be mom and dad and us kids for a half-hour.

Even the competent, independent teenagers who become partners and confidants to their divorced parents carry with them another model of the perfect family. What family would they like to live in if they couldn't live in their own? I expect they share the majority's choice: "Family Ties." Do they want Michael Fox as a brother? The other fantasy — two parents clearly in love, two parents they can talk to — is more compelling.

Once a single parent myself, I often wonder how the 50 percent of children who spend time in one-parent families will fashion their own. One childhood experience sends different internal messages to the future.

Some may shy from marriage. Others may leap needfully, prematurely, into the business of creating a family. Some may take themselves as proof that children survive divorce. Others may find the opposite evidence. Probably the children of single-parent families will try to correct their elders' mistakes. We all do that. One generation vows they won't do what their parents did: stay locked together in a dead marriage. The next generation vows they won't do what their parents did: split.

But what comes through all the change, all the statistics, what remains as clear as the grain of the wood under a dozen coatings of stain, is a constant ideal of mom and dad and us kids. It may be as elusive as the images on a television screen, but it's just as powerful.

Life in the Census Bureau's single-parent households is indeed as diverse as life in two-parent households. But today 50 percent of our children, even those in an "intact" single family, will grow up knowing what it's like to feel that something — someone — is missing.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

Letters/ Misprinted weather forecasts raises question of credibility

Readers not in a time warp

Can you explain this? Are we in a time warp, or not? Couldn't you at least manage to land on the right month? Hard to put trust in the credibility of the entire newspaper when I see this.

NANCY RICKETTS
Twin Falls

Editor's Note: Ricketts' letter refers to our Friday, Jan. 22, issue in which we inadvertently used the weather reporter of Christmas Day. No, Nancy, you're not in a time warp. Our computer system stores articles of all kinds for months. We inadvertently picked up the wrong weather story. But since the weather on Christmas was so nice, wouldn't it be nice to have it back?

Insurance crisis a scam

In response to Donna Scott's little editorial on Tort Claims Act in the Friday, Jan. 22 newspaper, I would like to respond with some comments of my own.

First of all insurance companies and you seem to be trying to give the impression that they are going broke, when in reality this is far from being the truth. In Idaho the ITLA contends that property-casualty insurers took in more than $3.2 billion between 1984 and 1985, while only paying out $1.9 billion in losses. Now do I ask you if they are going broke? Should you have watched the 60 minute program on TV a couple of weeks ago, you could have seen it has been proven (pretty much so) that this insurance crisis is a scam. With all insurance companies buying up farmland all across America and insurance premiums rising so high that low income people can't even afford medical insurance. You want us to believe that these big insurance companies are going broke? Gee how dumb do you think we the American people are. Of course I realize you being the typical Republican and your love for the almighty dollar, you are probably willing to sell your soul to the big insurance companies, but I don't think you have the right to sell the rest of us down the tubes. Enough said!

BOB MURPHY
Buhl

Religion brings no peace

If religion has proven anything at all, it has proven that it does not bring peace to our world. More than likely, too many people have the two spirits mixed up and are worshipping the deceiving one.

President Reagan talks a lot about human rights and claims we have the best democracy. If that is true, why do we have so many homeless people and why are there so many suicides and gun killings in our country, also why do we have so many people in our prisons?

Is it possible that all the bad people live in our country, far away from the good people who are in prison in many other countries, are the good people.

Wouldn't it be better for more people to try and help improve their own form of government instead of telling other countries how to run theirs, for surely there's room for improvement in all types of government. WILLIAM HAFNER

Twin Falls

A giant step backward

After I blotted the grease off my copy of Sen. James McClure's "Year End Report" (Slippery Jim had just removed his hands from the 6.4 million dollar mark on the federal pork barrel where they had been ensconced all the way up to his shoulder) I read the entire summary.

I just couldn't believe he had omitted this salient pork barrel item from his list of accomplishments for 1987. After all, hadn't "Newswave" (Jan. 18) given it prominent attention, along with a picture of his smiling countenance, in their article "Is the Pork Barrel a Must?"

My big problem is I can't tell if his smiling because he was able to "bring home the bacon" for the benefit of his special-interest campaign contributors and constituents or if he's laughing at the rest of his constituents who know the taxpayers.

Speaking of taxpayers, how many of us will be able to afford a visit to a Bavarian-style ski resort located in Kellogg, Idaho? Isn't this just another example of "perks" for the rich and peanut shucks for the poor? (We used to say "peanuts" for the poor — but have you checked the price of a bag of peanuts lately?)

Oh, I know there are those who will say, "Just look at what this will contribute to Idaho's economy." But I wonder how much will be left to pay "right-to-work" wages to numerous Idahoans clamoring for a few jobs after the big developers and contractors get their ton of "bacon."

It was heartening to read in Newswave's article, however, that pork barrel now accounts for "no more than $10 billion, not really big bucks in a $1 trillion budget..." And on the other hand, some progress has been made. It was only last month that the Department of Health and Human Services announced federal aid cuts of $35 million for the homeless — no doubt with the good Senator's blessings.

I don't know how the rest of the Idaho electorate feels about this, but I'm toying with the idea of recommending "Slippery Jim" to Senator William Proxmire (D-Wis.) for his "Golden Fleece" award — not only for being able to "slip" one over on the taxpayers, but for his mastery of the art of doing one thing while saying another. In his Year End Report he said, "... Our biggest failure — our growing national debt. Congress and the Administration have once again lacked the political courage to make real, meaningful reductions in government spending. The so-called deficit reduction "compromise," in my view, was a giant step backward to the policies of tax and spend..."

Support the peace accords

February 3rd may be the most important vote ever on contra aid and our only realistic chance to stop contra aid this year. A renewal of contra aid now would almost certainly destroy the Central American peace process. The accord very definitely commits each Central American country to request outside governments who supply assistance to insurgents to cease such aid, and explicitly calls for an end to all "military, logistical, financial and propaganda aid." So-called "humanitarian aid" is also prohibited under the accords. Under the Geneva Conventions and established international law, aid to a combatant force is not considered humanitarian, regardless of the nature of the aid being provided.

We must urge our government to give the peace accords a chance and give up trying to find reasons to sabotage the peace process. All the people I know who have visited Nicaragua return with the same plea from the Nicaraguans: "Please no more aid to the Contras." We can write to our congressmen and urge them to vote no on February 3rd. That is what I intend to do.

Sensible management best

Mr. Michael McCoy: I enjoyed your letter in response to my plea to stop the wilderness bill. I must respond to some of your statements. You said my motorcycle makes noise pollution. A motorcycle's sound in the forest is gone almost immediately and forever, and actually lasts less time than the sound of an airplane flying overhead. Speaking of pollution, how about the bodily waste which most people do not dispose of? They definitely last longer than the noise of a motorcycle. You also said motorcycles damage the trails. I would be the first to agree with you that this has happened. I have also seen several cases of trail damage by hikers and horses. This points out the need for careful management, not less areas open for use as the wilderness bill would do.

Several times in your letter you mention preserving the land, leaving it as nature intended, saving it for the future.

I have heard this many times before and the same thought always comes to mind. Would these people be so insistent on more wilderness if they could not use the land. What would happen if the government suddently decided to set aside four million acres in Idaho to total non-use, put a lock on the gate and said keep out. I have a funny feeling that many of people who believe as Mike McCoy does would suddenly feel very upset about losing their private park. Mike, think about what I have said. Think what it would mean to you to never see several million acres of public land again. You say the motorized recreationist is being selfish for wanting less wilderness. I say, it is people like you who want the land open only to people who think as you do who are the selfish ones.

Mike, your main concern seems to be preserving the land, that is also one of my main concerns. Locking the land in wilderness designation preserves the land from the people. Sensible management and use preserves the land for the people. As a wise man once said: "It seems the government wants to save the land for our grandchildren so that they can't use it either."

Nation caught in a denial

A painful truth became very apparent to me Saturday, January 22, after attending the "March for Life" in Boise. Dr. Robert Markovitch related to those attending the rally his experience of attempting to collect data for research regarding the effects of abortion on women who choose this method to terminate their pregnancy. He shared how he became embroiled in conflict with his supervisor in medical school as he attempted to obtain data in order to draw logical conclusions regarding many of our medical professionals, have chosen to deny the factual evidence that abortion is the taking of a tiny human life. You'd have a difficult time looking at the results of the abortion procedure without concluding that a tiny human life has been snuffed out. Yet on every side of those who are about this truth to anyone who will listen, there are thousands who turn a deaf ear to this argument, focusing instead on placing primary consideration on the well being of the mother who has decided she can't carry the baby to full term for one reason or another. Not that the mother of the child shouldn't be given consideration, she should be. But, to turn away, ignoring the fact that another human life is involved in this critical decision process is like burying our heads in the sand. Many are doing just that... from some of the best minds in our land, to the frightened high school girl who finds out that she is pregnant, the denial process is certainly evident to anyone willing to look at all the facts objectively.

Of course, money is involved in the decision-making process. With approximately 14 million abortions taking place every year, someone is making money as a result of this practice. Just so the process of denial makes diagnosis and treatment of the alcoholic very difficult, so denial of the truth concerning the humanity of an unborn baby makes the treatment of the national tragedy of abortion very difficult to deal with.

Cancer center beneficial

I've worked in the medical profession for several years. Until recently, I had no real comprehension of what so many people had gone through when faced with cancer. My dear father died of pancreatic cancer after a hard-fought battle. The only hope he had was chemotherapy and the closest place was MSTI for treatment.

The first trip was filled with fear and anxiety. From then on it was a nightmare. Each trip got harder and harder. He finally said no more. I can't believe anyone would make a statement about carpooling and a day of shopping and lunch.

My dad couldn't even sit upright in the seat of a car, let alone eat when he threw up for 120 miles. He suffered complications from the cancer and had to be hospitalized here between treatments.

If there is one thing this town could benefit from it is indeed a cancer treatment center. MVRMC is more than capable of starting one, staffing one and keeping a cancer treatment center going for many years to come.

Water shortages may force cooperation or war in Mideast

WASHINGTON — Before the end of the century, possibly as early as 1995, Israel and its Arab neighbors will face such severe shortages of water that they will either have to cooperate in solving the problem or go to war over the dwindling supplies, according to a private research project.

The Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, reporting the results of a 15-month investigation, said that almost all of the usable water in the Middle East's major river systems — the Nile, Jordan and Tigris-Euphrates — is already being used. Expected population growth and industrial development in the next dozen years will result in dramatic shortages, it said.

"The prognosis for Egypt, Jordan, Israel, the West Bank, the Gaza Strip, Syria and Iraq is especially alarming," the report said. "If present consumption patterns continue, emerging water shortages, combined with a deterioration of water quality, will lead to more desperate competition and conflict." Joyce Starr, the project director and chief of the center's Near East Studies program, said that the developing crisis is aggravated by political tensions of the region. Although water has been a precious commodity in the semi-arid region for thousands of years, the extent of the coming problem has been covered up by the regional governments, none of which wants to admit its own weakness to its neighbors, Starr said.

Because all the river systems cross international boundaries, many projects intended to improve the water situation in one country would aggravate the problems in another. For instance, the report said, Syria plans to build a series of dams on the Yarmouk River, a tributary of the Jordan, which could divert up to 40 percent of the stream's flow, producing instant shortages in Jordan and Israel. Wars have been fought over less significant provocations.

The report said that the problems can be solved only by the use of advanced technology and by creative diplomacy, Masave spending on dam and aqueduct projects is not a strong enough measure because the rivers of the region are already used to their capacities, it said.

The report urged the U.S. government to establish a special U.S.-Middle East water program that would bring together experts from the region and U.S. scientists to develop a technological response to the crisis, with possible approaches including desalination of ocean water, improved conservation and more efficient agricultural uses.

Starr said that the "convoys" experts from the Arab nations, Israel and the United States working in the same laboratories in this country.

"If you asked the Arabs to go to Israel and work with the Israelis, I am sure they would say no," Starr said. "But if you ask them to come to the United States and work with American experts, they are eager."

Starr admitted that the plan faces formidable political obstacles. Although there has been some quiet cooperation between Israel and Jordan water allocation for at least 30 years, most Arab states are reluctant to be publicly identified with programs that also include Israel. On the other hand, Israel might balk at a program, such as the one envisioned in the West Bank and Gaza as separate national entities.

"If they don't want to see each other, they don't have to," Starr said. "But if we wait for a peace process between Israel and Jordan or Israel and the Palestinians, it will be too late."

Starr said the project could be financed for about $10 million.

"You can get a very long way with very little money, but if you are about that money, you may be lost," Starr said.

Although Starr said the water project "would not be another guide for the peace process," it seems clear that if Israel and its Arab neighbors were to succeed in combating their common water problems, it would have an impact on overall relations between the countries of the region.

Starr said that she and her colleagues would devote 1988 to a lobbying effort to win congressional approval for the plan.

The report said that Turkey is the only country in the region which can anticipate ample supplies of water in the next century. By the year 2000, it said, Israel's water needs will exceed the supply by 20 percent. Jordan will face a 20 percent deficit.

The situation is even more critical on the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Gaza — one of the world's most congested areas — already has a severe water shortage.

"If things continue as they are today, Gaza's only hope is that Israel will share its water with Gaza," Starr said. "I don't think that is very likely."

Egypt, which is almost totally dependent on the water of the Nile, will have to increase its present water supply by about 15 percent, the report said. But it may have difficulty even maintaining its present supply because of drought in the headwaters of the Nile. In the last seven years, the lake behind the Aswan high dam has dropped by 50 feet.

"We are virtually certain that by the year 2000, Egypt will be in a critical condition," Starr said. "It has no policies presently in place to prevent that."

Sun Belt to add House seats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Population shifts will continue adding House seats to Sun Belt states such as California and Texas while districts now represented by blacks and Democrats suffer declines in private studies.

California could pick up as many as six House seats, with Texas adding four and Florida three, Election Data Services said, while New York could lose three seats and two apiece could be lost by Illinois, Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Kimball Brace, president of the political consultant group, said the shifts were based on 1980 population estimates prepared by Temple University. They update estimates released just two weeks ago, which showed slightly less dramatic changes based on 1987 population estimates.

Stressing that changes in the next few years could revise things markedly, Brace said these are the likely shifts in House seats after the 1990 census.

Gaining seats: California, 6; Texas, 4; Florida, 3; Arizona, 1; Georgia, 1; Virginia, 1.

Losing seats: New York, 3; Illinois, 2; Michigan, 2; Ohio, 2; Pennsylvania, 2; Iowa, 1; Kansas, 1; Massachusetts, 1; West Virginia, 1; Wisconsin, 1.

In addition, he said a shift of only 2,089 people could cause Minnesota to lose a seat to North Carolina.

Navy bringing Iowa home

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci has authorized a small reduction in the number of U.S. warships deployed in the Persian Gulf, including the withdrawal of the battleship Iowa, Pentagon officials said Monday.

The officials, who insisted on anonymity, said the drawdown would begin around Feb. 18. The number of ships assigned to the Middle East force will change only slightly — dropping by three or four — but the mix of ships will be realigned, the sources said.

The Navy will allow the Iowa to steam for home without replacing it with another battleship, and will do the same thing with the amphibious helicopter carrier Okinawa, the sources said.

The Okinawa's departure from the Persian Gulf will mark the withdrawal of Navy mine-sweeping helicopters from the region and a complete reliance on mine-sweeping ships, officials said.

NASA plans 3rd rocket test

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA engineers decided Monday to conduct a third test of the space shuttle's troublesome solid rocket booster before attempting the first post-Challenger mission in late summer.

David L. Winterhalter, director of systems engineering and analysis for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said intentional flaws will be induced in two tests of the 149-foot-long rockets at the Morton Thiokol Inc. plant in Utah.

One of those tests will induce a leak between segments of a rocket joint. This will enable hot gas to pass through a "capture" feature, added to the rocket joint after the failure that doomed the Challenger and its seven-member crew in January 1986.

Tougher ATV rules sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — A task force of state attorneys general called Monday for tougher prohibitions on all-terrain vehicles, saying an agreement between the federal government and manufacturers fails to adequately protect young riders.

Meanwhile, consumer and health groups filed a challenge to the recent consent decree in U.S. District Court, urging Judge Stanley Sporkin to delay any decision on approving the final agreement until a hearing is held.

Last month, the Justice Department, Consumer Product Safety Commission and the industry agreed on a requirement that manufacturers stop selling the three-wheeled vehicles. But the consent decree puts no prohibitions on four-wheeled ones and included no buy-back provision for vehicles already sold.

"We feel the settlement is seriously deficient in several areas and does not adequately address the problems presented by ATVs," said Tennessee Attorney General Michael Cody, chairman of the National Association of Attorneys General task force on the vehicles.

Determine scope of book ban, court directs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a closely watched free-expression case, raised the possibility Monday that states may ban booksellers from displaying some sexually explicit material where children might see it.

The justices did not decide the constitutionality of a Virginia law restricting display of works deemed "harmful to juveniles." Instead, voting 8-0, they ordered the Virginia Supreme Court to determine how sweeping the state ban is intended to be.

Justice William J. Brennan, writing for the court, said the law may be constitutional if applied narrowly to have minimal impact on adults.

In other action, the court: • Ruled, 5-3, in a case from Chicago that courts sometimes may bar defense witnesses from testifying at criminal trials to punish procedural violations by defendant lawyers.

• Postponed indefinitely the scheduled Feb. 3 execution of Florida death row inmate Willie Jasper Darden, whose case has attracted international attention.

• Refused to hear an appeal by 16 white men who said they were denied jobs as Chicago firefighters because of reverse racial discrimination.

• Refused to reinstate former Postmaster General Paul N. Carlin, who said he was fired in 1986 for trying to foil a kickback scheme by a member of the board of governors that oversees the Postal Service.

law, pending further study of its constitutionality.

But the development was a partial victory for state officials, who appealed federal court rulings that threw out the law. The statute makes it a crime to display sexually explicit material where anyone under 18 "may examine and peruse" it.

The Supreme Court in 1986 allowed states to regulate the sale of non-obscene materials deemed harmful to children.

Hundreds rally, back officers

DALLAS (AP) — Hundreds of people gathered Monday to support the Dallas Police Department on Monday as authorities said they would try to prosecute bystanders who yelled "Shoot him, shoot him" before a vagrant killed a police officer.

"It's good to see this support in the community for a change. Most of the time we only see the negative side," said officer Thomas Cicio, observing the crowd of about 400 who marched from the John F. Kennedy Memorial to City Hall and back.

She said signs reading "God Bless Our Men and Women in Blue" and "Police Are People, Too."

The shooting of the white officer by the black vagrant Saturday has heightened a growing tension between the mostly white department and the city's minority community, whose leaders have criticized the department for several police shootings of blacks.

Meanwhile, police Capt. John Holt said officers were trying to identify the two to 10 onlookers who, according to witnesses, yelled "Shoot him, shoot him," encouraging the vagrant to shoot officer John Chase after he took Chase's revolver. If any are identified, murder charges could be brought against them, Holt said.

Holt said police have statements from 46 people in the area when the shooting occurred, but that they don't have names of those who goaded the suspect.

Leaders of the Dallas Police Association said Monday that police officers will not be welcome at memorial services today for Chase, 25, who recently switched to the day shift to spend more time with his wife of three months.

Eight of the city council's 11 members gathered Monday morning in the downtown parking lot where Chase was killed to show their support for the embattled police department, the target of a congressional hearing in May requested by the critics.

What's what

Go gaily and wait knows celery is a sort of carrot.

Report is three out of five airline passengers now wait an hour or a half for their planes after they've checked in.

How you describe celery is not how a lot of people describe celery. What you may call a stalk, some people call a rib. What you may call a bunch, some people call a stalk. Technically, one plant is a "bunch" made up of "leafstalks," but nobody says leafstalks. And almost nobody

It's between midnight and 8 a.m. mostly that your body secretes a substance to fight cold viruses. Doesn't turn out much of it between noon and 6 p.m. This lends researchers at the University of California School of Medicine to believe that afternoons are when you're most likely to catch colds.

A. The 1948 Cadillac.

SHARKS

Q. You said sharks don't attack people in striped bathing suits. Why not?

A. That's not exactly what I said, but it is. A marine biologist discovered sharks shy away from striped objects. Theory is they confuse whatever's striped with what they most fear - the terribly venomous banded sea snake. Presumably, wet suits with such sea snakes painted on them would sharkproof divers.

Motherhood isn't crimping Olympic medalist's running

WILTON MANORS, Fla. (AP) — Olympic gold medalist and two-time Boston Marathon winner Joan Benoit Samuelson says motherhood isn't crimping her running.

And she proved it in a 10K race here Sunday, finishing first in the women's division in 34:12 and eleventh overall in a field of 569 finishers. Her 3-month-old daughter, Abigail, slept on the sidelines during the race.

"Actually, my energy levels were very high during pregnancy and they've been high since," said the 30-year-old, who made history with her 1984 win in the first women's Olympic marathon.

"I'm just tanning some of the sleep I ordinarily get — like staying up to midnight last night and getting up again for a 3 a.m. feeding," she said after the race, her first since a pre-delivery run Oct. 12.

Benoit, of Freeport, Maine, said she is training for the May 1 summer Olympic trials in Pittsburgh.

King Hussein to visit

shunned Waldheim

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — King Hussein will make an official visit to Vienna next month, the Jordanian government announced Monday, and plans to become one of the few heads of state to visit embattled Austrian President Kurt Waldheim.

The official Jordan news agency announced that Hussein and Queen Noor would make the trip before the middle of February.

Jordan is one of only three countries Waldheim has visited since taking office in June 1986 amid controversy over his alleged involvement in Nazi atrocities during World War II.

Hussein's visit is scheduled at roughly the same time that an independent panel of historians plans to release its findings on Waldheim's war record.

Jewish organizations have accused him of involvement in the deportation of Jews and partisans to concentration camps, and of covering up his actions.

Waldheim has repeatedly denied any wrongdoing. But the U.S. government has banned him from the United States.

Separate sense of job, self, Sauter advises

NEW YORK (AP) — Van Gordon Sauter, who was fired as president of CBS News, says that surviving such a big career fall depends on assuming in advance that it's going to happen.

"I had always presumed that at some point something would go wrong," Sauter said in an article in the February issue of Working Woman magazine.

"Never allow your sense of self to become too associated with your sense of job. If your job vanishes, your self doesn't," he said.

Sauter said he regretted the loss of "tons of money, a car and a driver, the ability to travel anywhere in the world without accountability to anyone."

But at the same time it was nice not to "have aspiring, craven people trying to run up my back and tapdance on my head."

Sauter is writing for the Los Angels Times and collaborating on television projects, the magazine said. He said he was looking for something to do "that has a certain degree of challenge to it."

Sauter lost his job at CBS in the summer of 1986 when Laurence Tisch took over the corporation. Sauter left with his $250,000-plus annual salary guaranteed through September 1990.

Old Rooney mansion is up for sale again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mickey Rooney's old estate in Encino — which features bathroom tiles trimmed in 18-carat gold and a wishing well — is on the block.

The Mediterranean-style mansion has six bedrooms, five baths, two dining rooms, a pub and a motorcourt that holds 20 cars.

The diminutive 67-year-old actor hasn't lived in the home for some years, and its present owners, a Beverly Hills psychiatrist and his ex-ballet dancer wife, are asking $1,395,000 for it, said Adele Cooper, one of two real estate agents handling the sale.

"There's a room we call The Zodiac" because it's hand painted with signs and figures of the Zodiac," said Ms. Cooper of the 6,200 square-foot home.

The two-story mansion was built in 1931.

Vereen handles loss one step at a time

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer-actor Ben Vereen said he's taking it one day at a time since his daughter's death in a highway accident last month.

"At the end of the day I say, 'I made it through another day,'" the Tony Award-winning star said in a recent interview.

His 16-year-old daughter, Naja, was killed and his wife injured when a truck dumped its load on their car while they were driving on the New Jersey Turnpike on Dec. 8.

Friends rallied around the 41-year-old Vereen, including television producer Stephen J. Cannell. Vereen played the charming hustler E.L. "Tonspeed" Turner on Cannell's former ABC series "Tonspeed and Brownshoe."

"He lost his son in an accident four years ago," Vereen said. "The first thing Stephen said was: 'You can't give up.' That's the first thing you want to do."

Documentary a 6-year task for director

PARK CITY, Utah (AP) — "Borut: The Last Home Movie," winner of the best documentary film at the United States Film Festival, took its 28-year-old director six years to complete.

The film chronicles three months in the life of the Bustros family, whose home is in one of the most heavily bombed neighborhoods of Beirut.

Jennifer Fox, the film's director, took a camera crew to the area and lived with the Bustros family, shooting more than 30 hours of film in the home-and-around-the-war-torn city.

Her shooting was completed in 1982; it took Fox until 1987 to finish editing the film, she said.

The film had its American debut at the festival sponsored by actor Robert Redford's Sundance Institute and captured the top documentary award for cinematography along with best picture honors.

Fox said she got the idea for the film after meeting Gaby Bustros while attending film school at New York University.

"One day she called me up and said her home in Beirut had received 17 shells according to a front page article in the Washington Post," Fox said.

Gaby Bustros returned to her home in Beirut. When Bustros returned to New York City six months later, she told Fox the story of her family's tribulations, living in the Christian side of Beirut.

"I decided I wanted to make a film of her family ... and six weeks later I was in Beirut," Fox said.

Fox and her crew, which included cinematographer Alex Nepomniachy, spent six weeks shooting in the Bustros home and six weeks shooting locations in Beirut.

The film crew had to pass through checkpoints scattered throughout the city, torn by strife between Christians and Moslems.

"You have to go through 10 or 12 checkpoints just to get anywhere — and with any luck you have the right permits and nobody is acting too crazy and you get through," she said.

However, Fox said sometimes her car was searched and she would have to "pay off people."

She said the filmmakers were under the constant threat of having their film stock confiscated.

"We were pretty protective and we took all the precautions getting from the house to the airport, so we didn't lose anything," she said.

The film cost about $500,000 to complete, which Fox admits is expensive for a documentary.

"They never make money and the best you can hope for is that they pay back their costs," she said.

August baby for Fergie

LONDON (AP) — The Duchess of York was flying high Monday when Buckingham Palace confirmed work of speculation and announced she was expecting her first child in August.

As the news about the former Sarah Ferguson was released, she was taking a 1½-hour helicopter flying lesson above a Royal Air Force base in rural Oxfordshire.

In her flight path was her father's Dummer Down farm and on the front lawn was a sheet with the message "Congress Main" in big red letters, using the form of address required for the wife of a prince.

The fun-loving 28-year-old wife of Prince Andrew, the Duke of York, is "in excellent health," the palace said.

The baby, whether a boy or a girl, will be fifth in line to the throne and will have the title Prince or Princess of York; fifth in line is Andrew's 27-year-old brother Prince Charles, 39, and Charles' two sons with Diana, Prince William, 5, and Prince Harry, 3.

"It's wonderful news, very exciting and we are all thrilled" and her stepmother, Susan Ferguson, who had been tipped that the duchess was expected to fly by. "She will be a wonderful mum."

Egyptian peace proposal divides Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's coalition government was split Monday over an Egyptian peace proposal that calls for a withdrawal of Palestinian riots and a moratorium on Jewish settlement in the occupied territories.

Meanwhile, reporters and soldiers use sledgehammers and saws to open shops in Gaza City and the West Bank to try to end a lingering strike of Arab merchants.

Four Palestinian activists from Gaza facing deportation dropped their appeals to Israel's Supreme Court on Monday.

"They feel they will not obtain justice from an Israeli court," said Fayed Abu Rahme, a Gaza lawyer. "They said international public opinion has already decided that deportation is illegal and we'd hate to see it legalized in court."

Four Palestinians from the West Bank were expelled to Lebanon on Jan. 13. A fifth West Bank Palestinian dropped his appeal earlier this month.

American Jewish leaders condemned the beating of rioters.

"The current policy of force and beatings as it has been implemented on the ground is regarded by us as inhumane and simply unacceptable," Theodore Mann, president of the American Jewish Congress, told reporters after meeting with Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin in Tel Aviv.

Rabin said last week soldiers had been told to beat protesters rather than firing at them with live ammunition.

Palestinian riots began Dec. 8 in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel captured from Jordan, and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war. Israeli gunfire killed 38 Arabs before the new policy was announced.

Avi Pazner, spokesman for Yitzhak Shamir, said the prime minister would reject the proposal by President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt.

Mubarak, who left Cairo on Monday for a trip to Europe and the United States, urged that Palestinians halt the violence for six months and Israel stop building new Jewish settlements in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. He said that would create a climate conducive to an international conference on peace in the Middle East.

The Egyptian-Israeli treaty of March 1979 is the only peace agreement made with Israel by an Arab nation.

Shamir, who leads the right-wing Likud bloc, repeated his objections to such a conference. "It will be a stage for anti-Israeli propaganda and not a framework for serious negotiations," he told reporters. "It will be an attempt to dictate, to impose solutions."

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, leader of the centrist Labor Party, praised Mubarak for asking Arabs to stop rioting and trying to renew political efforts for peace.

Deaths reported in Siberian crash

MOSCOW (AP) — An Aeroflot passenger plane crashed near the airport in the Siberian city of Nizhnevartovsk, and some of those on board were killed, Tass said today.

The Soviet news agency said the three-engine Yakovlev-40 crashed Sunday after taking off on a flight southwest to the oil center of Tyumen with an interim stop in the Ural mountain city of Bugulma.

The agency gave no details of the crash. Tass did not say how many people were aboard the plane and only said that the crash caused "loss of life."

Tass said a commission was investigating the crash.

Nizhnevartovsk, a city of 212,000, is located on the Ob River about 1,350 miles northwest of Moscow.

Prosecutor abducted in drug war

-BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Gunmen ambushed and kidnapped the country's chief prosecutor on Monday, killing him and two bodyguards and apparently wounding him.

Colombia's cocaine barons have vowed to crush efforts to bring traffickers to justice.

About four hours after the abduction of Prosecutor General Celso Roldan, police searching the hills around Medellin for him stumbled on and freed a Bogota mayoral candidate who traffickers had kidnapped a week ago.

Hoyle, 46, was seized about 7:20 a.m. while en route to Medellin airport for a flight to the capital about 200 miles to the southeast. At least a half dozen men in three jeeps and a car ran his Mercedes Benz into a curb and sprayed it with sub-machine gun fire, witnesses said.

The government blamed the abduction on the Medellin Cartel, which U.S. officials say controls 80 percent of the cocaine entering the United States.

On Sunday, traffickers announced "total war" on officials who try to extradite them to the United States to face criminal charges.

In the past four years, cartel members have waged a bloody war against efforts to prosecute them. Murder victims have included journalists, a justice minister, and 21 judges handling drug cases.

Hoyle, who investigates wrongdoing in the government and judiciary, had just spent a week in Medellin investigating last month's release from prison of reputed cocaine baron Jorge Luis Ochoa Vasquez.

The United States has been trying to extradite Ochoa, who it says is second-in-command of the Medellin Cartel.

A policeman who was able to see the "frightful fusillade" said Hoyle appeared to have been hit in the throat by bullets.

N. Korea protests sanctions

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea on Monday banned contacts with U.S. diplomats and halted talks on Americans missing in the Korean War, retaliating for sanctions the United States imposed for the destruction of a South Korean jetliner.

The United States "should be held responsible" for the crash of the Korean Air jet, the communist government's Foreign Ministry said in a statement carried by the official Korean Central News Agency and monitored in Tokyo.

North Korea has been linked to the November crash that killed all 116 people aboard and which prompted the United States to limit contact with American diplomats in the international arena, and not permit the entry of (people) of American nationality into our country," said the statement read by an unnamed Foreign Ministry spokesman.

North Korea "will not have any negotiation with the United States over the issue of remains of the dead Americans, (effective) Feb. 1, 1988," the statement added.

It also warned Japanese authorities "to renounce their hostile policy" toward North Korea. Japan was expected to announce sanctions against North Korea on Tuesday in connection with the airplane bombing.

Fatal subway blaze traced to dropped match

LONDON (AP) — A dropped match was the probable cause of the November subway fire that killed 31 people, an inquiry's chief lawyer said Monday. The blaze at King's Cross station was the London Underground's worst ever.

The lit match may have fallen on a wooden escalator and ignited a one-inch layer of grease and fluff below and beside the escalator treads, and flames likely then spread to point on the ceiling, said barrister Roger Henderson, counsel to the investigation.

Henderson told a special meeting of the inquiry there was a "remarkable degree of consensus" among experts on the fire's origin. He said there was no evidence of arson and he did not expect to be able to point blame at anyone.

The Nov. 18 blaze at the busiest station in the 254-mile system was the second deadliest calamity in the Underground, which carries 2.5 million passengers a day. Forty-three people died in a 1975 train crash.

The fire at King's Cross led to smoking ban on trains as platforms being extended to a total ban on smoking at the system's 273 stations.

Up to 700 eyewitnesses and technical experts are being called to give evidence to the inquiry, which is not expected to release its findings until early summer.

Appeal

A key part of Charboneau's appeal is contained in 117 pages outlining what Fuller's co-counsel, James Meservy, call incompetent representation in the past, a common argument in an appeal.

All the issues raised by Fuller in his Supreme Court appeal have been argued in both District Court, which has ruled against Charboneau.

Although the two lawyers claim errors were made by all of Charboneau's other attorneys, most of the errors center around one lawyer's use of a clairvoyant.

Fuller says Golden Bennett, who was hired by Charboneau's mother shortly before Charboneau's jury trial, developed at least some of his defense strategy for his private investigator talked to a California psychic.

Bennett has vigorously denied allegations about his representation of Charboneau.

Danna Adamson, prosecutor for Jerome County during the case, said Bennett used his niece to lead a seance in California. Adamson based his claim on a conversation with Bennett.

Bennett called the seance theory "a nice, unadorned hogwash" in a letter to the Times-News.

"My niece, Linda Black, did write a letter to me about a purported clairvoyant experience involving the case," Bennett wrote. Bennett said that letter was stolen from the files and he didn't develop a defense strategy based on it. Adamson said in his conversation, Bennett said his niece had been in Jerome County, which reportedly told the niece that Arbaugh's daughter fired the final, fatal shot at her mother.

Bennett left the case less than a month before trial and Randy Stoker, Jerome County public defender, was appointed.

"Becker refused to delay the trial, and Stoker was forced to rely on Bennett's own protrial discovery and Jim Coakley ... Bennett's private investigator."

At one time, even Bennett referred to Coakley as a "flake," according to Fuller's brief. It was Coakley, Bennett said, who stole the seance letter from his files.

"However, when Stoker reviewed the work that had been done, he found that little had been done to prepare an adequate defense," Fuller argues in his brief. "A lot of work had been done, 'chasing ghosts.' In terms of case preparation, the file was a mess."

"I think I can say with candor that it was sort of a 'prepare as you were in the middle of the trial' type of defense," Stoker said at a post-trial hearing.

Fuller also says these errors were made during the course of the trial.

Bennett put Charboneau on the stand during a pretrial hearing and repeatedly waived his Fifth Amendment rights against self-incrimination without good reason.

Bennett sent a letter to the Idaho Attorney General's office about Charboneau's feelings on the case and theories of defense.

Bennett let an investigator from the attorney general's office interview Charboneau without Bennett present. The attorney general's office provided a special prosecutor to Jerome County for the trial.

Bennett failed to use a psychologist or a ballistic expert to investigate the case, in addition to the use of a clairvoyant. Because of that, he failed to investigate the case properly, failed to obtain funds to properly conduct an investigation and turned the investigation over to the attorney general's office.

"BECKER was inadequately prepared to go to trial and didn't ask for a continuance."

The first-degree murder case was consolidated with kidnapping and grand theft charges for trial.

There are a number of factors in the record which cause one to believe that Mr. Bennett's judgment was at best sub-par and, at worst, totally lacking," Fuller argues.

Fuller later just claiming Bennett made mistakes in the case.

In Becker's decision to sentence Charboneau to death, he said Charboneau had two minutes after firing a first volley of shots to decide whether to save Arbaugh's life.

Because he decided to resume firing, Becker said Charboneau should be sentenced to death.

But Fuller is saying that determination is in error.

"Now, where does this two-minute rule come from?" Fuller said in an interview. "I've read the transcript, and I don't find two minutes anywhere."

In addition, Fuller says an expert testified that it was impossible to determine which shot killed Arbaugh.

"In other words, he doesn't know which one killed her," Fuller said.

What the two-minute argument is combined with the stormy relationship between Charboneau and Arbaugh, Fuller argues the murder was a crime of passion, not a deliberate, willful act of first-degree murder.

The relationship seemed to thrive on physical violence and constant threats," Fuller argues. "If ever there were a crime involving heat of passion, this certainly was that crime."

"I'm just saying he (Becker) was mistaken," Fuller said.

But Bennett isn't just arguing that Charboneau wasn't adequately represented. A key part of Idaho sentencing law — the section that gives a judge the power to decide if aggravating factors exist to justify a death sentence — is invalid, Fuller says.

"Aggravating factors" are required under Idaho law to justify punishment for a more serious crime. Fuller argues those factors are facts that should be decided by a jury, not legal questions to be decided by a judge.

The argument over the Idaho statute laying down the law apparently has been decided before, with Donaldson siding with judges deciding aggravating factors.

However, Fuller says he went back to square one late in his research when Donaldson died.

"We wouldn't have even wasted time without a new court," Fuller said.

Aggravating factors are used by judges to determine if the murder was outrageously evil, atrocious or cruel, manifesting exceptional depravity and whether the defendant exhibited utter disregard for human life.

Fuller estimates the 267-page brief he filed will cost about $65,000. Jerome County is responsible for the bill because Fuller was appointed counsel for Charboneau, who is indigent.

The approved levy would be smaller than the plant facilities levy the district is currently operating under.

Patrons must be a registered county voter to cast a ballot. These voters if they are registered may check with a hall official at the courthouse until 8 p.m. tonight.

The polls will be open from noon to 8 p.m.

One arrested after car chase

TWIN FALLS — A Florida woman was arrested in Twin Falls Monday following an automobile chase with police which ended when she drove through a wire fence, according to police reports.

Tammy Sue O'Dell, 21, pleaded not guilty to five separate charges at her arraignment Monday afternoon, according to Commander Bill Stonemetz of the Twin Falls Department of Public Safety. In connection with the alleged chase, O'Dell was driving while suspended.

Based upon two local bench warrants, O'Dell was additionally charged with petty theft, resisting arrest and disorderly conduct. Bail was set at $2,500, Stonemetz said.

O'Dell, who is from Jacksonville, Fla., was arrested at approximately 5:45 a.m. at 1766 Sidney St. according to police reports. The 1984 Mazda RX-7 that O'Dell was driving had been reported stolen minutes earlier by Michael E. Jones, who resides at 740 Maurice St.

Reports said that O'Dell was apprehended after driving through the car through a wire fence while attempting to flee from a police officer.

the county and then come to court asking for the judgments to be set aside.

"It would be alarming to send such a message to elected county officials," he said.

Johnson said he would recommend to his client that he enter negotiations with the county. "Mr. Hull is willing to compromise, but we will not walk away from what is properly due him. My client has been damaged by this situation," he said.

Johnson also said it was his understanding the hospital had collected the fees due to Hull from patients and insurance companies, but used the money for hospital operations rather than paying Hull.

Becker told Johnson, if a settlement is not reached after Feb. 8, a jury trial could be held.

Becker also said he am a taxpayer in Gooding County and a friend of the commissioners. If you ask for me to step down (as presiding district judge), I will."

Johnson indicated he would ask for Becker to be disqualified from the case should it go to trial, and said he would prefer not to have a Gooding County jury hear the case.

Myers did not appear in court Monday, and was not available for comment after the hearing. He has said he would like to see the case opened so that the county could be spared the extra $45,000 in punitive damages.

Students learn life's lessons when they are free to choose

DEAR ABBY: I am the president of the Associated Students of the University of California at Berkeley.

Your column regarding behavior in college dorms was forwarded to me by a campus administrator. I can speak only for the students here, but I think your readers' letters were somewhat hysterical on several counts.

First, even if college authorities wanted to provide a morally sanitized atmosphere for their students, they could not. Students, like other Americans, are entitled to constitutional privacy rights, which prevent university officials from peering over their shoulders at all hours of the night and day.

Most university dorms, including Berkeley's, forbid use of drugs or alcohol in public areas — but universities cannot and should not control what students do in the privacy of their rooms. If your readers have a problem with the Constitution, they should write to their congressmen.

Second, the existence of co-ed bathrooms hardly converts dormitories into "brothels." We particularly object to our presidents and dea for our country; I hope we can also trust them to use adjoining bathroom stalls without being overcome by their hormones.

In fact, living in the close quarters of a residence hall is not particularly conducive to romance. The existence of roommates usually presents more of an inconvenience to sexual adventurism than an incentive. Furthermore, based on my observation of both co-ed and sexually segregated dorms at Berkeley, co-ed dorms actually foster sincere respect and dialogue between young men and women.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

It is when men and women are forcibly separated on all but social occasions that they view each other as nothing but sexual objects.

It is the business of colleges and universities to educate students. It is also their business to provide an atmosphere where students wishing to refrain from sexual behavior, drinking or drug use can do so without harassment or embarrassment.

But universities are not mandated to be moral policemen. Therefore, some college students do drink and have sex, just as they did when your readers went to college.

Behavior hasn't changed all that much; students today are simply more honest about it.

— MATTHEW DENN
DEAR PRESIDENT DENN: Thank you. I agree, and I'm sure you speak for many.

DEAR ABBY: Maybe you can help me on this. A wife inherits money from a wealthy relative. Is it hers to spend as she wishes? Or does her husband have a say in the matter? We live in a community property state.

— WINDFALL
DEAR WINDFALL: In a community property state, only money EARNED must be shared between husband and wife. Money INHERITED belongs to the person to whom it was left.

DEAR ABBY: While I was in college in 1972 in Orlando, Fla. (Florida Technical University), my roommate was in a financial bind and he sold me his grandfather's Civil War sabre.

My roommate's name was Charlie Whentley. I would like to return the sabre because it's a heirloom and really should be owned by someone in Charlie's family, but I've lost track of Charlie and can't locate him.

I would be ever so grateful, Abby, if you would print this. Maybe Charlie or one of his friends or relatives will see it and write to you. I hope so.

Check out federal health records before you choose a cruise ship

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Almost half the cruise ships that sail to the United States fail to meet government health standards, and since December 1985, at least 100 ships have been stricken by outbreaks of diarrhea, according to the national Centers for Disease Control.

Only 32 of the 58 cruise ships that regularly dock at U.S. ports were found to meet health inspections as of Jan. 8, said the CDC, which has no power to block ships from sailing.

Out of 99 inspections and reinspections since last March, 51 of the ships failed to meet health standards set by the CDC, Center for Environmental Health.

The CDC suspects poor health standards on ship or shore caused the three recent outbreaks of diarrhea on a cruise ship arriving in East Coast Florida, one in America, on a round-the-world cruiser and on a Caribbean cruise returning to Florida.

"Almost all of the 58 ships dock in Florida," critics said. Houk's report is not a good one for a health administrator's plan to turn the job of inspecting cruise ships over to private contractors.

Cruise industry leaders who reported the figures at a CDC meeting in New York City on Wednesday said failure to meet all the government's strict and technical health standards doesn't necessarily mean a cruise ship is unsafe. The Fort Lauderdale News-Sun-Sentinel reported that the CDC inspectors and the leaders said the rate of reported illnesses has dropped to less than one per every million passenger days.

But health consultants argued the government has no business abandoning "its own" inspections amid deteriorating health standards on some ships.

Melvin Kramer, president of Environmental Health Associates and a consultant for cruise lines, told CDC officials, "When you're talking about the health and wellbeing of millions of passengers, I think the CDC, the government's representative, should be doing all of the work," not just some of the work. "We are ill-served to do this both in terms of dollars and in terms of public health."

Houk denied the "privatization" plan already under way would reduce health standards. He said the CDC will review the work of the private inspectors.

Houk said after the meeting, however, that the plan has disadvantages.

"I admit it's going to be more costly," Houk said. "In the best of all-worlds, it would be most prudent for us to hire more CDC inspectors and do the job ourselves."

He said budget constraints have limited the number of inspectors, currently three based in Miami. Even if more inspectors were hired, Houk said, they should be tracking bigger health problems such as AIDS and toxic-waste injuries.

Kramer and other critics say the cost of adding staff is minimal but the administration wants to carry out a policy of reducing federal employees while turning government functions over to the private sector.

The inspection costs, now about $300,000 a year aside from salaries, are paid through cruise-line fees and may be passed along to their passengers.

Houk wouldn't estimate how much the contractor plan would cost. The bidding process already has begun, and the CDC hopes to have a contractor by next year.

Evans: Lack of state support for schools will force tax hike

BOISE (AP) — State Schools Superintendent Jerry Evans warned lawmakers today that failure to increase state support for public education by at least 3.5 percent will result in another round of local property tax hikes.

Outlining the overall request for public education in the spending year that begins July 1, Evans told legislative budget writers that unless the state pumps another $15 million into its public school system, the gains made from last year's unprecedented budget hike will be eroded or property taxes will rise to cover the shortfall.

"I can't predict dollar for dollar," Evans said. "But there's a direct relationship. You can just count on it."

Evans and the Education Coalition, made up of teacher, parent and administrator groups, has requested the current state public school allocation of $943 million be increased to $977.6 million in the new budget year.

Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus scaled back that request to $962.3 million, and Evans said anything less than $968 million will mean current school operations cannot be maintained without compensating increases—in local property tax support.

"The appropriation of adequate funds cannot insure a high quality of service," Evans told the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee. "However, the lack of an adequate appropriation can guarantee that high levels of quality cannot be achieved."

Roberta Fields, president of the state Board of Education, made a similar pitch to the panel for the board's $112.1 million budget request for higher education. Andrus scaled that request back to $110 million, up about 8 percent from the current allocation of $101.7 million.

"We know we are asking the people of Idaho for more money," Mrs. Fields said, "and we know we cannot neglect the problems in our economy. But we believe the investment will pay dividends."

The increased budgets being sought for both public and higher education are primarily for extra salary boosts for teachers to continue closing the gap between Idaho paychecks and the national average.

Education falls short of necessity

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — American education needs to resolve its teenage dropout problem to keep up with the demand for an expanding and more literate work force, a prominent lobbyist says.

In the past year alone, 2.5 million new jobs were created in the United States, a trend that is bringing pressure for education reform, said Frank Newman, president of a national organization that lobbies for education issues on behalf of state governments.

Job growth, combined with a growing number of teen-age dropouts, is creating a shortage of qualified workers, said Newman, president of the Education Commission of the States, a non-profit group with offices in Washington, D.C. and Denver.

Newman addressed about 300 job training professionals and business leaders Sunday at the start of the fourth Northwest Private Industry Councils Annual Conference.

Private industry councils are the business-led organizations that oversee local job training efforts funded by the federal government.

Education's challenge is to train people to read, understand what they read and be capable of performing complex tasks for jobs requiring a "higher level of literacy," he said.

To stem the dropping rate, Newman suggested stressing early childhood education; encouraging parental involvement in the schooling process; and promoting mentors or adult tutors who spend time with at-risk children. He said such adults can build children's self-confidence and make them feel important, Newman said.

American schools should be restructured to increase the amount of active, rather than passive, learning, he said. "Don't just have kids sit and listen, get them involved," he said.

Heyward turning pro

PITTSBURGH (AP) — All-American running back Craig Heyward said Monday he will skip his last year at the University of Pittsburgh to play in the NFL next season.

"My reasons for doing that (are) being father and coming from a family of eight — you know, a low-income family — so I think the decision that I'm going to make is the decision for me," Heyward told WPCV-TV.

The 6-foot, 280-pound Heyward, a redshirt junior, can't be selected in the regular NFL draft in April because he has college eligibility remaining and has not graduated, but could petition for a supplemental draft should he sign with an agent and forfeit his remaining eligibility.

Beniquez takes cut

TORONTO (AP) — Juan Beniquez, one of the seven players made a free agent Friday by arbitrator Thomas Roberts, re-signed with the Toronto Blue Jays Monday, agreeing to a one-year, $400,000 non-guaranteed contract.

Beniquez, a 16-year veteran, batted .261 last season with eight homers and 47 runs batted in 265 at-bats. He earned $430,000.

Prior to Roberts' ruling, Beniquez had filed for salary arbitration, asking for $450,000.

NFL lost $104 million

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The NFL stole more than $104 million in potential income — and the walkout, coupled with two costly lawsuits, left only seven of the league's 28 teams as moneymakers, it was reported Monday.

In addition, the Los Angeles Times said, the players' losses, all from unpaid salaries, was $84 million.

The four teams which profited the most — Indianapolis, Miami, Minnesota and the Los Angeles Rams — all changed stadiums in recent times.

According to the Times, Indianapolis realized a profit of $5,464,352; Miami made $6,131,080; Minnesota had a profit of $3,151,270, and the Rams made $1,265,105.

Cougars move up to No. 7 in AP poll

By JIM O'CONNELL
The Associated Press

Arizona remained the No. 1 college basketball team in the The Associated Press rankings Monday, and the Wildcats missed being a unanimous selection by just four points.

Arizona, 18-1, received 69 first-place votes and 1,256 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters and were voted second on the other four ballots. This is the third straight No. 1 ranking for Arizona, which beat Southern California and UCLA last week, and the fifth week overall in the top spot.

Purdue, 17-1, received 16 consecutive games, jumped from fifth to second with three first-place votes and 1,174 points. The Boilermakers beat Michigan State and Louisville last week to extend the nation's longest winning streak. The Boilermakers had been the No. 2 team in the preseason poll.

Three teams fell from the Top Twenty and they were replaced by No. 14 Florida, which was absent from the poll for two weeks after being as high as seventh, and newcomers No. 19 Villanova and No. 20 Southern Mississippi, which was ranked for the first time since becoming a Division I school in 1985.

North Carolina, 14-2, fell one spot to third with 1,018 points.

The AP Top 25 ranked college basketball poll, with first place votes in parentheses and points based on a 25-point scale, is shown through Jan. 24 and last week's ranking.

BYU quietly just keeps on winning

By JOHN FEINSTEIN
The Washington Post

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — There may not be a more famous ramp in sports than the one that leads to the playing floor here in the arena known as "The Pit." It is so steeply sloped that one has to be careful not to fall head over heels when walking down it.

When a visiting team arrives at the bottom of The Ramp, it walks into a sea of red and a cauldron of noise. Last month, top-ranked Arizona walked down The Ramp unbeaten and walked back up it 12-1.

Saturday afternoon as he led his Brigham Young teammates down The Ramp to face the University of New Mexico, Michael Smith heard a voice a few feet away from him. "Welcome to the Pit, Michael," the man said.

"Thank you," Smith answered, with a wide grin. "It's very nice to be here."

Two hours later, Smith and BYU walked back up The Ramp, leaving behind a lot of quiet people in red and a scoreboard that told the story: BYU 89, New Mexico 82. The Cougars now have left 14 straight opponents gasping in their wake and, all of a sudden, people are noticing.

"Actually, the luck of attention doesn't bother us very much," said Smith. "I just look back at our 1984 football team. It kept winning and winning and nobody noticed and it was some more and nobody noticed. Then when it was all over, they were No. 1."

Smith smiled. "Now, if Temple (the only other unbeaten team) were to lose on Sunday and everyone put their heads together and decided to make us No. 1, then all of a sudden we'd get a lot of attention. But you know what, I'm not sure we're ready for that. It might be better for us just to go on being unnoticed."

That isn't very likely, although Temple did fall from the ranks of unbeaten with Sunday's loss to Nevada-Las Vegas. The Cougars

Sophomore propels Hornets in Southside A-4 cliffhanger

By The Times-News

MURTAUGH — Sophomore Cheyenne Lowe came off the bench to score five points in the last three minutes here Monday night to help top-seeded Oakley to a 59-58 victory over Castleford in the second round of the District 4 Class A-4 Southside Subdistrict girls' basketball tournament.

The Wolves, who came into this tournament seeded fourth, led at half-time and battled the Hornets to a standstill until Lowe, a five-foot, 8-inch forward, scored a three-point shot from the free throw line in the waning minutes.

The loss overshadowed a 23-point effort by Castleford senior Vice Reynolds. Oakley's Stefanie Hale and Jennifer Hardy had 18 points apiece.

In other games Monday, Hagerman defeated Raft River 47-43 in the other winner's bracket contest, while Hansen sent Murtagh to the sidelines 37-29 in a loser-out game.

In beating Raft River for the third time this season, Hagerman got 21 points from senior Jackie Yarborough, 11 of them in the second half. The Trojans were plagued with foul trouble, losing Heather Higley to fouls in the third quarter and Amy Hanson and Amy Knudsen in the fourth.

Utah 119, Cleveland 96
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah reserve Ricky Green scored the NBA's 5-millionth point Monday night at the end of the third period and the Jazz went on to defeat the Cleveland Cavaliers 119-96.

Green's achievement came on a 3-point shot that put him in the lead in the third quarter, giving the Jazz an 92-67 lead. His basket was the 5,000, 001st point since the NBA began play in 1946.

Before the fourth period began, there was a ceremony in which Green autographed the ball, which will go to the Basketball Hall of Fame in Springfield, Mass.

players weren't running, they were walking. And, as the BYU players went by they heard this "Go, get ready to roll, hey 'Tide get ready to roll."

It was a rap-chant, the players tightly bunched, clapping their hands as they went. "It was," said Taylor, "exactly the kind of thing you needed." It may only be a symbol, but since adapting the chant to their needs — "Cougs, get ready to roll, hey Cougs get ready to roll" — BYU has not lost.

A rap-chant might seem an unlikely way to go for Brigham Young. After all, BYU is a virtually all-white, Mormon-run school. There is one black on this team, senior Jeff Chatman. Ironically, Chatman is from Alabama.

"I thought it was great to take the chant from Alabama," Chatman said. "That was the place I was dying to play when I was in high school. I would have given one of my arms to play for Alabama. But I played for a small school (Munford County) and no one noticed me."

BYU noticed him when assistant coach Roger Reid, in Birmingham in March 1984 for the NCAA tournament, saw him play one day after Chatman had watched the Cougars win their opening-round game against Alabama in Birmingham.

Chatman was amazed but receptive when BYU approached him. Did he worry about going to an almost all-white Mormon school?

"Not at all," he said. "I wanted to play ball and this was a big-time school offering me a chance. Since I've been here, the guys have never teased me about being 'the only black on the team. They're too nice about it with a backdoor-chattering slam dunk on No. 31 Pittsburgh routed, Providence 98-56 Monday night in the Big East Conference.

Chatman became a Mormon on Dec. 6. He has been busy on the court. He has scored 100 points, leading scorer behind Smith, averaging 21.3 points per game to Smith's 22.2.

Although Smith is almost 6-10; he is most effective roaming the perimeter.

Washington holds off Sixers in OT, 118-117

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Moses Malone scored 26 points and Bernard King added 22 as Washington defeated the Philadelphia 76ers 118-117 in overtime Tuesday night, running the Bullets' home winning streak to seven since Wes Unseld took over as coach.

After Gerald Henderson hit a 3-pointer for a 114-113 Philadelphia lead, Malone grabbed a rebound and scored on a dunk with 23 seconds to play in the extra period.

After Henderson hit a 3-pointer for a 114-113 Philadelphia lead, Malone grabbed a rebound and scored on a dunk with 23 seconds to play in the extra period.

The victory was the Bullets' second over the 76ers in as many nights and third in a week over Philadelphia.

Washington has now won eight of 10 games under Unseld, who took over for Kevin Loughery earlier this month.

Utah 119, Cleveland 96

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah reserve Ricky Green scored the NBA's 5-millionth point Monday night at the end of the third period and the Jazz went on to defeat the Cleveland Cavaliers 119-96.

Green's achievement came on a 3-point shot that put him in the lead in the third quarter, giving the Jazz an 92-67 lead. His basket was the 5,000, 001st point since the NBA began play in 1946.

Before the fourth period began, there was a ceremony in which Green autographed the ball, which will go to the Basketball Hall of Fame in Springfield, Mass.

Blue Devils barely hold off Stetson

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Kevin Strickland scored 22 points and Bobbie Brinkley led a decisive second-half surge as fifth-ranked Duke held off Stetson 81-78 Monday night to win for the seventh time in its last eight games.

College basketball

The Blue Devils, playing their third night in five days, improved to 13-2 before an Ocean Center crowd of 6,517. Stetson, 8-7, lost its fourth straight game and fell to Duke by three points for the second straight year.

Strickland scored 17 points in the first half when Duke led by as many as 10. But Stetson cut the deficit to 45-40 behind the outside shooting of Terry Johnson and inside play of Jimmy Kuhl.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

'Poets lose half the praise they should have got, Could it be known what they discreetly bid...'

The odds that South's line of play will succeed are a little better than five to one. They are decent odds in any sport, but not when a 100 percent chance is overlooked.

East won his heart ace and returned the nine to South's king. South cashed the king and ace of trumps and led a diamond to dummy's jack for a losing finesse.

South defended the play by leading probabilities. It's 50 percent on the diamond finesse, 50 percent on the club finesse, and 36 percent on a 3-3 diamond break.

A true statement as far as it went, but South missed a sure bet. After winning his heart king, South should lead a trump to dummy's king and ruff dummy's heart heart.

ANSWER: Pass. Do not try to improve what is likely to be your best contract. One more bid might bring on the penalty doubles.

Send bridge questions to The Aces, P.O. Box 200, Twin Falls, Idaho 83436. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes preferred.

Mortgage rates expected to hold steady for first half of '88

The Washington Post... WASHINGTON — Mortgage interest rates are expected to remain around 10 1/2 percent through the first half of 1988, but new housing starts are expected to drop this year to their lowest levels in five years...

country was in a recession... Analysts said the reasons for this year's slowdown are due in part to the fact that most people who wanted to buy houses have already bought them and higher housing costs in most parts of the nation have "bumped" some first-time buyers out of the market...

in Dallas... But in the latter part of the year the 30-year, fixed interest rates may be roughly a point higher than they are right now... Roger Birk, president of Fannie Mae, who buys and sells mortgages on the secondary market, said he expects rates to climb by the end of the year to about where they were before the (stock market) crash...

continue to be very weak because many cities are having a hard problem filling the space already built... Starts for multifamily housing are expected to drop below 400,000 this year for the first time since 1982 when 320,000 units were begun...

But many lenders can expect a further slowdown in the number of loans they make this year... Tautach predicted that loan originations would drop to $850 billion this year from $425 billion last year and $460 billion in 1986...

cause the percentage-point spread between the two will narrow... But many lenders can expect a further slowdown in the number of loans they make this year...

Extremist clan out of its time

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The small fringe of polygamists who turn to violence has eschewed modern-day Mormonism in the belief the church of a century ago was correct in its advocacy of plural marriage, a Mormon historian says.

Richard Van Wagoner, author of "Mormon Polygamy: A History," says violent polygamists "view themselves as 19th century Mormons opposing government interference in their lives. Basically, they're in the wrong century. They should have been born 100 years ago."

The mainline Mormon Church abandoned polygamy in 1890, but breakaway sects continue to practice plural marriage today. While most of these so-called "fundamentalist Mormons" live in peace, some occasionally turn to violence, spurred by their religious zeal.

Such an example is the armed standoff between police and the Singer clan, which barricaded itself in the rural compound of slain polygamist John Singer following the Jan. 16 bombing of a nearby Mormon Church. Singer was gunned down by police nine years ago during an arrest attempt. He had defied authorities by refusing to send his children to public schools.

Last week, authorities filed charges against Singer's widow, Vickie Singer, and her 13-year-old son, Adam Swapp, in the bombing of the Kanha Stacks Center. Law enforcement officers also say the clan has made violent threats against 13 members of the community and two groups.

As of today, the clan still held out at its compound, surrounded by an army of 100 police officers.

Violent polygamists "have similar personalities. They tend to be charismatic, defiant people," he said. "They view themselves as emanators of all authority. They're attracted to fundamentalism because it's patriarchal, authoritative. Then when they come, they bring their peculiar personalities with them."

Violent sect members trace their philosophy to the 19th century, when the Mormons armed themselves against a U.S. Army expedition sent to Utah to replace Brigham Young as territorial governor.
