Reagan makes final bid, offer on Contra aid

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, warning "there will be no second chances," made a last-ditch effort Tuesday night to salvage his $36.2 million Contra aid package by promising to release "money for arms and ammunition only if Congress agrees."

In an Oval Office speech shunned by three major television networks but carried by the Cable News Network, Reagan argued that Wednesday's vote in the House amounted to nothing less than an up-or-down vote on America's national security.

"Our support is too late," Reagan said, arguing that falling to support the Contras against the leftist Nicaragua government would give communism a permanent grip in Central America.

"I tell you—truthfully—tonight, there will be no second chances tomorrow," Reagan said.

Stallings rejects president's personal appeal for vote

State News Service

WASHINGTON — Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, rejected President Reagan's personal appeal Tuesday to support his $36.2 million package of military and humanitarian aid for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

But Stallings said after the White House meeting that he would consider supporting humanitarian aid for the Contras while they negotiate with the Nicaraguan Sandinista government.

"I felt I had an obligation to listen, but there was nothing new," Stallings said of the meeting. "I told the president I'm leaning against it (aid)."

During the meeting, Stallings said he asked Reagan whether it is United States policy to seek the overthrow of the Sandinista government.

It was unclear whether Reagan's last-minute maneuver would sway those undecided about today's crucial vote, in which Democrats claim to have a 10-vote advantage. Prior to the evening speech, Democratic "Absolutely not," Stallings quoted the president as saying. Instead, Reagan told Stallings, the United States wants to pressure the Sandinistas to negotiate with the Contras, a process that has already begun.

"We agreed we have to keep the pressure on," Stallings said. "We can send aid to the Contras and pressure the Sandinistas not to leave the bargaining table, but why take that chance when the peace process is beginning to work?"

Initially, Reagan proposed that the plan's $3.6 million for weapons would be held back until at least March 31. It would be released only if he found that no cease-fire had been achieved and the Sandinistas were not abiding by their promises for democratic reform.

In his address, he changed the terms in an attempt to win over wavering lawmakers. He promised that both houses of Congress would have a chance to vote within 10 days after he declared that Nicaragua had not lived up to the pledges it made to "free Central American neighbors. If Congress disagreed with him, no weaponry would go to the Contras, Reagan said.

In the Democratic response, Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., said it was time for the United States "to support the Central-American peace process, to put the Sandinistas to the test, and to take risks for peace."

Hamilton, who gained national attention last year for his role in the Iran-Contra affair, said he would support the Contra aid package.

School hostages set free

The Associated Press

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — A gunman saying he wanted to help the homeless held dozens of children and teachers hostage Tuesday before being taken into custody by police who freed him into going outside and then wrestled him to the ground and freed the remaining hostages, officials said.

"It's over," said Assistant Chief of Police Billy Wilkins. He said the children were "all right."

"Twenty-six children and one teacher were freed unharmed when the sniper ended after nearly 12 hours; the other hostages had been released earlier in the day.

"Please don't hurt me!" said the gunman, identified by police as James L. Harvey, 43, of San Antonio, Texas, as law officers grabbed him after he stepped out of the school building.

"The done everything you asked," he said. Police told him he would not be hurt as they put him in a city police car.

Harvey had invaded the school shortly after classes began Tuesday and said he was trying to draw attention to the nation's homeless and hungry. Before the first group of hostages was released, they included about 80 children, four teachers and an aide, officials said.

Tuscaloosa Mayor Al DuPont said the gunman was shown a videotape made by Gov. Guy Hunt, then as agreed upon turned over his weapons and began to lead the child hostages outside, thinking he was going to hold a news conference. When he walked out the door, police slammed it shut behind him and wrestled him down.

He had been armed with two pistols and a rifle, authorities said.

Harvey was handcuffed, and the children walked out in a single file. Their parents burst into cheers in a nearby gym when told their kids were safe.

The children, all in lower elementary grades and their parents hugged each other and cried as they were reunited in the school's gym. The children kept repeating "We're all right, we're all right" as parents and grandparents said "Thank the Lord, thank the Lord."

Survey shows support for tax hike for education

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

BOISE — A survey distributed by the Idaho Education Association late Tuesday may stir a few Republican lawmakers awake this morning.

Legislators have been saying for weeks that the electorate is in no mood to pay for any tax increases this year to fund education. But they will find in their mailboxes this morning a survey conducted by two of Idaho's ranking conservative Republicans, Sen. Steve Symms and Congressman Larry Craig, that appears to dispute that belief.

Questionnaires mailed to several hundred participants in an economic summit last year show 62 percent favor a tax increase to fund education.

Respondents were asked who should raise and distribute the money, and 45 percent said the state, while 43 percent said local.

The question on education funding was one of 11 questions on the survey. Other questions dealt with economic development, trade legislation, the IBEW union budget amendment and wilderness.

Only one other question dealt with education.

Asked to rank issues that need the most attention in Idaho, 45 percent said there was a need to promote, preserve and expand existing business and industry. Education ranked second, with 28 percent responding it was a priority.

Interestingly, 67 percent said they did not want their taxes raised to fund economic development.

Chuck Lentz, IEA executive director, said Tuesday that the Symms-Craig survey corroborates another survey commissioned by the IEA and refutes a survey distributed last week by the National Federal of Independent Business.

"We're trying to convince lawmakers that the public truly does expect legislators to continue what they started last year," Lentz said. "We think there is ample support for a reasonable tax increase."

Lentz admitted the public has been less vocal this year in its support for education.

"When people realize a 2-4 percent increase in the education budget will do nothing, I think the public will speak its mind," Lentz said. "If this comes back on property owners and an increase in property taxes, I think it will be a significant issue in the upcoming election."

Lentz said his staff found out by accident and asked for permission to distribute it.

A Symms staff aide in Boise said Tuesday the survey was conducted recently and represented "a good-size sampling" of the group of more than 200 hundred people who attended last year's economic summit, sponsored by Symms and Craig.

But Kevin Spencer said he did not know how many people responded to the questionnaire.

Banker advises quick move to reform market

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Nicholas F. Brady, the investment banker who directed a study of last October's stock market collapse for President Reagan, warned Congress Tuesday that the market could collapse again unless swift action is taken to reform some of its rules and practices.

Brady told members of the Senate Banking Committee that Congress should press the securities industry to adopt immediate reforms and needs to be ready to overhaul stock market regulation through legislation.

"We must act to prevent a recurrence of the events of October," said

Brady, who runs Dillon Read & Co. "We are looking down the barrel, and the gun is still loaded."

Shortly after Brady testified, the Securities and Exchange Commission released a 246-page study of the October market collapse. Its primary conclusion was that steps need to be taken to diminish volatility — violent swings in prices.

Brady reiterated his view that the Federal Reserve Board's authority over the nation's financial markets should be expanded on key issues, including trading halts and minimum financial requirements, or margins, for investors.

But Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan, who testified

Barley promotion panel squeaks by

The Associated Press

BOISE — Idaho barley growers have narrowly endorsed creation of a state Barley Commission to promote their commodity, but opposition to the agency and its mandatory grower fee remains stiff in the major producing region of eastern Idaho.

State Agriculture Department officials called the results of the grower balloting released on Tuesday "just about a wash," but they pointed out that two-to-one support in other parts of the state might be enough to keep legislators prospects for creation of the commission alive.

State Agriculture Director Dick Rush released the poll to the House and Senate committees governing agriculture.

Just over 1,700 growers responsible for producing 45 percent of Idaho's 61 million buhal barley crop responded to the survey. It was financed by the Idaho Grain Producers Association and coordinated by the Agriculture Department in cooperation with the Agriculture Statistics Service.

Statewide, Rush said, 63 percent of the farmers growing 49 percent of the crop supported creation of the four-member commission that would levy a 40-cent-a-ton assessment, on all commercially sold barley. The money would be used to finance research, market promotion and education.

Another 8 percent, accounting for 7 percent of statewide production, said they could support the commission with some changes, including "reducing" the assessment and making the assessment voluntary.

The debate over a voluntary versus mandatory assessment was the major reason for proposal for a state Barley Commission was killed in the Senate a year ago. Eastern Idaho growers, particularly those from Caribou County, actively lobbied against the bill.

On a regional basis, the survey showed 68 percent of the growers in northern, southern and southeastern Idaho, accounting for 60 percent to 71 percent of the barley crop in their regions, backed the commission either completely or with some changes.

But in eastern Idaho, where 65 percent of the state's barley is grown, only 54 percent of the region's barley voted against the commission in any form.

Among the objections were too many deductions and taxes from their income already general opposition to government involvement in farming, and claims that the Wheat Marketing Act, on which the barley plan is based, has not significantly helped producers of that commodity.

FBI: Probe 'not properly directed'

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director William Sessions said Tuesday the bureau's investigation of a group operating in the Reagan administration's Central America administration was "not properly directed" in all instances.

The FBI director, in his first in-depth discussion of the probe, was asked about a November 1983 memo from the New Orleans FBI field office that said in part that "it is imperative ... to formulate some plan of attack against" the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador, CISPEP.

Sessions said the New Orleans memo wasn't known to top FBI officials who were directing the probe from Washington, although it was directed to the FBI director, but that if it had been, "I would hope that it would have been directed differently."

"I would say it was not out of control, but as to that particular facet it was not properly directed," he said.

At a news conference, Sessions said the FBI began the investigation in 1983 after getting information from the group's leaders assisting "terrorists in Central America." But the Justice Department closed the investigation two years later, concluding that the organization was involved only in political activities, he said.

Responding to a question on whether FBI agents in some instances went too far in the probe, Sessions replied:

"I think you would have to say that in some instances had the matter been reviewed at that time and sensed at that time that there might have been direction that would have differed."

Sessions, who took over as FBI director last May 2, said the investigation began on March 30, 1983, as a terrorism investigation of the leadership of CISPEP. It was based on information from informants who said that key unidentified members of CISPEP were covertly furnishing funds and material to a foreign terrorist group, the Frente Farabundo Marti Para La Liberacion Nacional.

The FMLN had taken credit for the assassination of a U.S. military attaché in San Salvador, Navy Lt. Cmdr. Albert Scudari.

The Justice Department ended the probe on June 18, 1985, after determining that CISPEP was involved in political activities and not international terrorism.

David Lerner, spokesman for the New York-based Center for Constitutional Rights, said in an interview Tuesday that the FBI investigation actually began in 1981, continued for more than a year, stopped briefly, then resumed in 1983. The center, a civil liberties group, has obtained FBI through the Freedom of Information Act more than 1,200 pages from FBI files on the probe.

"Hugh Byrne, political director for CISPEP, denied that anyone in the group was furnishing money and material to the FMLN."

"That is completely without foundation and is, in fact, untrue," Byrne said. "The fact is that after five years of investigation the FBI came up with nothing and charged no one with anything indicates that all allegations were without foundation. We believe it was just an excuse for harassment of opponents of the Reagan administration's policies in Central America."

Sessions, at his news conference, said that FBI headquarters explicitly instructed our field agents that the investigation must not interfere with the exercise of First Amendment rights of these CISPEP members who politically opposed U.S. policy in Central America."

The FBI director denied that the FBI had expanded its CISPEP investigation to include other organizations.

'Poltergeist' actress dies following illness

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Heather O'Rourke, the angelic-looking child actress who warned "They're here!" and "They're baaack!" in the "Poltergeist" movies died after an apparent bout with the flu, her manager said Tuesday. She was 12.

Heather died Monday while being rushed to Children's Hospital in San Diego, her manager, Mike Meyer, said.

"I'm not sure on the cause of death. I was told it was related to sickness she suffered during 'Poltergeist III,'" Meyer said. "Sunday they thought she had the flu."

about an hour," Meyer said.

She is the second actress from the "Poltergeist" movies to die unexpectedly: Dominique Dunne, who played a teen-age daughter in the original, was strangled in October 1982.

Miss Dunne, then 22, had tried to break off her relationship with her boyfriend, Los Angeles chef John Sweeney. He was convicted of voluntary manslaughter and sentenced in November 1983 to the maximum 6 1/2 years in prison by a judge who chided the jury for not returning a murder verdict.

In the original "Poltergeist," Heather was the one who uttered the key line when the evil spirits arrived, declaring in a taunting childlike tone, "They're here!" In the sequel, she continued, "They're baaack!"

She finished filming "Poltergeist III" in late June, starring as Carol Ann for the third time, Meyer said. The film is scheduled for release in June.

Only the original "Poltergeist" was a Spielberg production.

High infant mortality called a social problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — The high rate of infant mortality in the United States is a social problem that could be solved by providing financial and educational services to pregnant women, a member of the World Health Organization said Tuesday.

"Infant mortality is not a health problem, it is a social problem," Dr. Maren Wagner, the organization's director of maternal and child health, told a meeting of the National Commission to Prevent Infant Health Mortality.

"We do not need more pediatricians, obstetricians, clinics ... we need more social education for families," said Wagner, who is trained in pediatrics, neonatology and epidemiology.

"The basic level of financial and social support must be provided to families," he said.

The commission, established by Congress last July, is holding four hearings around the country on a national strategy to prevent infant mortality. The panel met Monday at the United Nations to hear what other countries have done to reduce infant mortality.

The U.S. rate of infant deaths of 10.6 per 1,000 live births is higher than 17 other industrialized nations, according to UNICEF. The United States ranks 18th out of 96 industrialized nations.

A report, released last week by the Children's Defense Fund, showed "little recent improvement in overall infant mortality rates and an actual worsening in some categories."

The rate of infant deaths went from 10.8 per 1,000 births in 1984 to 10.6 per 1,000 in 1985, a smaller drop than in any of the previous three years. The figure was 11.9 in 1981, 11.5 in 1982 and 11.2 in 1983.

The report, based on figures compiled by the federal National Center for Health Statistics, also found that the low birthweight rate — babies born under 5.5 pounds — increased for the first time in over two decades, from 6.7 percent to 6.8 percent.

Health representatives from Costa Rica, Britain, Japan, France, Sweden, Belgium and Spain, who attended the U.N. hearing, on Tuesday described for the commission programs that have reduced the rate of infant mortality.

In Japan, every mother receives the "Maternal and Child Handbook," which details the medical record from conception to age 6. In Sweden, more than 99 percent of all pregnant women begin visits to obstetric clinics within the first trimester of their pregnancy.

Japan ranks first among industrialized nations with the lowest infant mortality rate.

Members of the Health Visitors Association visit every woman during her pregnancy and within 10 days of the birth of her child.

A member of the commission, Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen, told the meeting that the Reagan administration is working toward reducing the infant death rate to 9 per 1,000 during the coming year.

"It's nothing less than our future," Bowen said.

Shultz plans initiatives

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Tuesday he is making diplomatic moves designed to provide "a greater sense of political control" to the 1.6 million Palestinian Arabs who live on the Israeli-held West Bank and Gaza.

But he said King Hussein of Jordan had not eased his opposition to autonomy negotiations under the 1978 Camp David peace agreement. The king "feels he was not included in the Camp David process," Shultz told the House Foreign Affairs Committee. "He rejects it."

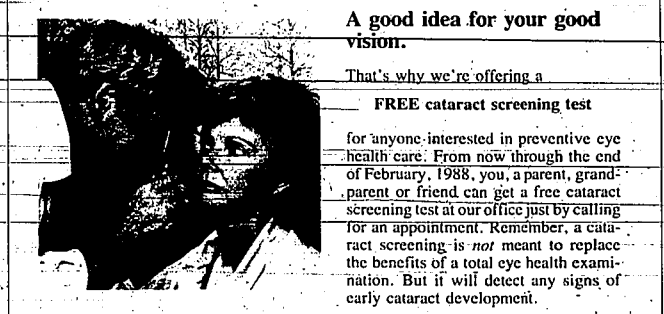

The 1978 agreement was worked out with Israel and Egypt by former President Carter and produced a peace treaty between the two countries in 1979.

Shultz said that when Hussein is now asked to enter negotiations, his response is "think of something else."

He said the United States had taken up various approaches with the leaders of Israel, Egypt and Jordan, and that he may direct Assistant Secretary of State Richard W. Murphy to take "a quick swing around" the region to develop them further.

Largest lottery will begin soon

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The nation's largest and richest multi-state lottery game kicks off Wednesday with ticket sales in six states and the District of Columbia.

Lotto America will broadcast its first drawing at 10:59 p.m. EST on Feb. 13. The one-minute coast-to-coast game will be beamed via satellite throughout Iowa, Oregon, Missouri, Kansas, West Virginia, Rhode Island and the nation's capital.

"It's almost as large as the Canadian interprovincial game. That one is coast to coast although it's got a smaller population base than you might think, about 22 million people," said Edward Stankle, Lotto America vice president and director of the Iowa Lottery.

The member states of Lotto America have a combined population of about 16.5 million. That's much larger than the 2.9 million people who play the 3-year-old multi-state lotto game in the New England states of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

Letters/Service to handicapped, telephone deregulation prompt reader comments

Crucial issue relates to handling differences

The recent letters addressing the issue of responsibility for provision of services to handicapped persons contains similar assumptions: 1. Basic commitment to the dignity and rights of all individuals, specifically those with auditory and visual handicaps. 2. Responsibility on the part of both the consumer and service provider to ensure availability of services. These beliefs are inherent in the letters written to date. As is frequently the case, however, it is the means to the end which is fraught with theoretical conflict and practical problems: It seems to me that if both parties accepted full initial responsibility for fulfilling its own role, that the question of being held as a natural consequence. It is to be expected that differences in approach and delivery modes exist. But we are linked together, unified in our efforts by our basic assumptions — perhaps we all need to recognize that we're involved in an ongoing process. In that spirit, needs areas could be honestly addressed, and criticism perceived as constructive input. The crucial issue relates to our willingness to accept differences as an indication of healthy diversity, or whether we allow those differences to fragment and weaken our efforts to realize our goals.

Deregulated or not, phone firm a monopoly

Beware of Mountain Bell's propaganda! The January issue of Idaho Senior Citizen News has a story on telephone deregulation. This prominent, front-page item is presented as though it is reported. It is not. It is a distorted, altered, and biased — an unethical Mountain Bell plant.

The article carries no by-line or reader's credit. At the end the reader is referred to Mountain Bell's office of information. A better name would have been "office of misinformation." Among the statements made, two are particularly successful. The article says "the new environment of divestiture and deregulation has not increased prices." This is so blatantly false that anyone having a phone should be offended by it. Partial deregulation at the federal level through imposition of access charges and regulatory changes has caused major increases in local phone rates. The article talks about competition and says the company wants "streamlined" regulation, "not to raise prices but to simply be competitive." This is a canard. Mountain Bell knows there is no real competition in Idaho. Nor is there any prospect that there will be any time soon. Everyone knows this by now. Regulated or unregulated, Mountain Bell will remain a monopoly. No potential competitor can afford to duplicate the extensive system of lines connecting customers to central offices plus the buildings and equipment needed for telephone service. O, the rain makes all things beautiful; the flowers and grasses too. If the rain makes all things beautiful, Ma Bell, why don't it rain on you? Oppose telephone deregulation!

Bureaucrats must keep feet out of the trough

We have a very sad and dangerous situation with this judgment of the water rights by a bureaucrat. Keith Higginson had a record of spending much and doing nothing but he went to Washington with Andrews. He is connected with big business on the Republican side, or connected with the IEA on the Democratic side; some members of the press and news media and both parties will hollar you're not a qualified candidate. Now this is pure hogwash and don't you be brainwashed into believing it. Now before we get any further let me state that both business and the IEA needs represented, both are an important part of the community, but they are not the only ones in community that needs representation. All the rest of the segments in the community needs are equal representation too. There are more of us in this area than there are in the two aforementioned. So I strongly urge any of you who feel that the segment of your community is not being represented as well as it should be (or in the state) for you to become involved in the system in the upcoming elections. Remember, a lot of times you don't have to win to win. You can make a difference. And if you don't feel like you can become a candidate at least then register to vote. The average citizen can make a big difference. DONALD McMURRIAN Twin Falls

One has only to be reminded of other countries that have used the same tactics we are using to control their people. Tactics that have systematically parceled different classes within their society. The method at use here in our country is no different than the methods used in countries we despise for the actions they endorse. In a nation professing to be Christian, why is our system of justice based on vengeance rather than restitution? On punishment rather than rehabilitation? The common law was swift and brutal. A thief was turned over to the person that was damaged, and served the person until restitution was made. Then he was returned to society, his debt having been paid. One transgressing the laws of our creator, was put to death. Under the Roman civil law, vengeance was demanded and the offender was cast into a dungeon, without any chance of rehabilitation, and sometimes subjected to the arena for the pleasure of the ruling class. These acts were abhorred by those professing some form of conscience or Christianity, yet today the same punishments are extracted by those preaching conscientious Christian doctrine. Today we are embracing acts we condemn. Crime pays and it pays well. The reader is asked to determine according to his individual observation, who pays? Who profits? ARLO R. KENT Twin Falls

All parts of community need representation Well it'll soon be primary time again and the need for candidates will soon arise again. Registrants if you're looking for a Democrat or Independent. If you feel there are changes in our government that needs changed, or if you feel there's laws that are unjust and should be changed. Or if you feel that we need stronger laws or maybe you feel like I do sometimes that perhaps our elected officials are not really running our government like they were elected to do but are being manipulated behind the scenes. But however you feel on the issues I would strongly urge some of you to enter the race and let your views be heard. Now I realize that here in this county that if you are not strongly connected with big business on the Republican side, or connected with the IEA on the Democratic side; some members of the press and news media and both parties will hollar you're not a qualified candidate. Now this is pure hogwash and don't you be brainwashed into believing it. When was the last time you noticed your pet? Was it fat and snoring in your favorite chair, romping with your child, curled up on its rest on the window sill, or just gazing at you with those trusting eyes? Or was the last time you noticed your pet, it had too many puppies or kittens, and you decided to free yourself of the "furry"? Was it a dark, chilly night when you seized the unwanted offspring by the napes of their soft furry necks and deposited them in your vehicle for a drive down a country road? Were you careful not to catch a glimpse of those little trusting eyes as the vehicle door cracked open in the silence and you stood on the roadside disposing of the young, which didn't take very long because you felt the cold and with every immature pup or mew, you risked detection of your irresponsible act? Did the guilt lessen when the rear-view mirror no longer displayed scampering silhouettes? Were your children still waiting up when you announced, erroneously, that "Bever" or "Fluffy" babies will most likely be killed, eaten, starved to death, or in rare instances, be returned to the city for your neighbor to call the "animal control authorities." Let's not forget the other option and explanation of the "green needs." You know the one. That's when the furry critters the kids have been carrying around, kissing and hugging for a week or two, are put to sleep because mommy and daddy don't get "Bever" or "Fluffy" sprayed or neutered. In the country, we do not raise acres of dog food, nor fields of cat food. We have enough vet bills from our livestock, especially when storm hunting dogs are dumped after the storm, which, in their desperate hunger, readily turn from pleasant to sleep, same as the "it's-cruel-to-chain-him-up-when-I'm-gone" dogs. So, I plead with those of you who have pets and should be taking a minute and run your palm down the smooth fur on your pet's back. Nice huh? See? God's creatures aren't plastic, so please don't throw them away. VICKY JAGELS Buhl Crime pays and it pays well. What is worse is that not only does the victim lose by injury or loss of property stolen, but the victim is victimized again through taxes levied to warehouse (in cemeteries for the living) the offender. What is equally unjust is the prosecution of crimes without victims, which is only the King's government) and his officers profit. Legislated crime. Crime absent a victim.

There will be no water or anything else created by the $24 million waste. We are letting a very dangerous thing develop when a bureaucracy can go out and rip off the people who do not want their representatives holding them in check. Idaho is not overly endowed with money, especially agriculture. This $24 million is one big rip-off without value to anyone but Higginson's little empire. Perhaps the big spending group people said, "they are my sheep but you can shear them this time Higginson." It is time to impeach any elected official that allows one more bureaucrat to get his feet in the trough. WAYNE BRETZ Gooding

Let Idaho's senators know stand on gun bill Help! As a member of the National Rifle Association; I'm asking all hunters, gun collectors, and firearm enthusiasts to write our senators and congressmen in Washington urging their support of the Second Amendment to our Constitution, our right to keep and bear arms. In December, Senators Howard McClure and Ted Kennedy introduced a bill in the Senate, S.465, which called for the banning and outlawing of over five million firearms. This bill was defeated by only three votes, but both Metzenbaum and Kennedy were not bringing bill S.465 back for vote in February. Both our Senators James McClure and Steve Symms voted to defeat this bill, but write them and let them know you support their decision. Don't let our senators fall for the gun control propaganda. NRA members are not a bunch of "gun nuts." Rather, our position is to defend our right to defend ourselves. The Second Amendment guarantees us this right, regardless of what people like Ted Kennedy would like us to believe. We are one of the few countries that allow the common citizen to own firearms. If we are to lose this right, we will never regain it. Join the NRA today. A lot of little voices go a long way. And for those who are unsure about guns, consider this NRA statement: "Don't own a firearm if you chose not to. But never let anyone deny or delay your constitutional freedom to make that choice." J.D. GIBBS Twin Falls

Treaty is place to start toward a better world I would like to reply to the letter of Jan. 27 by Mr. Orville Knighton of Twin Falls on INF treaty. I think any nation in any nuclear capability is a step in the right direction. I am sure adequate steps will be taken to ensure verification of destruction by both sides. It has the support of two of our former secretaries of state, Mr. Vance and Mr. Rogers. I don't think people of that experience would support it if they thought it was a bad treaty. I do think it will make the world a little safer. Perhaps my grandchildren can live in a "nuke free" world some day. I certainly hope so. We have to start trusting one another sooner or later. Perhaps this small agreement will lead to larger ones. I would urge everyone to give it a chance. It's one of the few things the president has done during his term of office that I agree with. To a subject not so world shaking. What is your policy for the sports pages? Do you have a policy? Do you allocate just so many column inches every day for sports? I am, and have been for quite some time, very disappointed in your coverage of the NBA. When you do run stories or scores, you seldom run a box score. Today (28th) you ran no scores at all. You give extensive coverage to tracking "locals" who have left CSI for four-year schools. I can see tracking the real locals, but I hardly think Joey Johnson et al. qualify. S.L. BRACKENBURY Hatley

God's creatures not made out of plastic

When was the last time you noticed your pet? Was it fat and snoring in your favorite chair, romping with your child, curled up on its rest on the window sill, or just gazing at you with those trusting eyes? Or was the last time you noticed your pet, it had too many puppies or kittens, and you decided to free yourself of the "furry"? Was it a dark, chilly night when you seized the unwanted offspring by the napes of their soft furry necks and deposited them in your vehicle for a drive down a country road? Were you careful not to catch a glimpse of those little trusting eyes as the vehicle door cracked open in the silence and you stood on the roadside disposing of the young, which didn't take very long because you felt the cold and with every immature pup or mew, you risked detection of your irresponsible act? Did the guilt lessen when the rear-view mirror no longer displayed scampering silhouettes? Were your children still waiting up when you announced, erroneously, that "Bever" or "Fluffy" babies will most likely be killed, eaten, starved to death, or in rare instances, be returned to the city for your neighbor to call the "animal control authorities." Let's not forget the other option and explanation of the "green needs." You know the one. That's when the furry critters the kids have been carrying around, kissing and hugging for a week or two, are put to sleep because mommy and daddy don't get "Bever" or "Fluffy" sprayed or neutered. In the country, we do not raise acres of dog food, nor fields of cat food. We have enough vet bills from our livestock, especially when storm hunting dogs are dumped after the storm, which, in their desperate hunger, readily turn from pleasant to sleep, same as the "it's-cruel-to-chain-him-up-when-I'm-gone" dogs. So, I plead with those of you who have pets and should be taking a minute and run your palm down the smooth fur on your pet's back. Nice huh? See? God's creatures aren't plastic, so please don't throw them away. VICKY JAGELS Buhl

Nicaragua conflict reaches stalemate

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista armed forces, supported by Cuban troops, have become a formidable force, military observers say. But so have the Contra rebels.

The war is stalemated, a foreign military observer said in a recent interview. "But I respect the Sandinistas as a well-equipped force, becoming better trained and learning from its mistakes in the field."

The military specialist, like others consulted, spoke on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the subject.

Sandinista troop strength is put at about 76,000 active duty in the reserves or militia, according to the government. The Defense Ministry says there are up to 6,000 Contras, who are backed by the United States. The rebels claim a strength of about three times that figure.

The Sandinistas grew from nothing, a band in the mountains, said a Western diplomat, referring to the guerrilla war the Sandinista National Liberation Front mounted to end the Somoza dynasty in 1979.

"It's incredible that within eight years they developed such an army," he said.

The U.S. government has provided the rebels with about $160 million in economic and military aid. Congress voted Wednesday on President Reagan's $36.2 million request for new Contra funding.

Defense Ministry spokesmen Maj. Rosa Passos refused an interview request, saying, "Now, before the voice, we have adopted a position of silence."

The fighting in the six-year war goes on in the rugged northern mountains or in the isolated central plains and jungle.

The Sandinistas came to power in 1979, after the Contra rebels had killed 54,000 people in 1986, a year up from 4,000 in 1985.

In the latest reported attack, Contras rebels attacked a resettlement camp in the rural northeast Tuesday, killing eight civilians, the Defense Ministry said.

Infantry troops trained by Cubans, East Germans and North Koreans operate in anti-insurgency battalions. They move out swiftly, lightly, armed, searching for the rebels. The soldiers are backed by Soviet-made artillery and rockets.

Until last year the Sandinistas held a decisive battlefield edge, gained mainly by the rapid and efficient use of Soviet-supplied helicopter, gunships. The helicopters were used for troop transport, ground support and evacuation of wounded.

Since late 1984, the Sandinistas received about 60 helicopters equipped with rocket pods and machine guns.

The Contras, pressured by Honduras, left their base camps in that country last year and slipped into Nicaragua, a U.S.-sharp flight increases. The military balance shifted to turn sharply when the rebels received American-made Red-Eye missiles, which are heat-seeking, shoulder-held, anti-aircraft weapons.

The Contras claimed to have downed a 26 helicopter last year. Foreign military observers put the number at 12. The Sandinistas admitted to six.

The effective Contra use of the missiles has all but halted Sandinista use of the helicopters, striking a blow to the mobility of government forces.

Several of the Red-Eyes have ended up in Sandinista hands.

Lennon's killer heard a voice

LONDON (AP) — A British documentary producer Tuesday accused "The Catcher in the Rye" author J.D. Salinger of being Lennon's killer. Mark Chapman, the man who shot Lennon, is believed to have heard a voice in his head saying "Do it! Do it! Do it!" before he pulled a gun from his pocket and killed Beatle John Lennon.

Chapman, in an almost language-taped confession to New York City police, said he killed Lennon because the beloved singer-songwriter had forsaken his ideals and become "a complete phony."

He also said he was playing out the role of Holden Caulfield, hero of "The Catcher in the Rye," J.D. Salinger's classic novel about troubled adolescence.

In the novel, the "Catcher" in "The Catcher in the Rye" of this generation," he told investigators in the taped account soon after he pumped five bullets into Lennon outside his Manhattan apartment on Dec. 8, 1980.

Yorkshire Television, which made the film for its "First Tuesday" documentary series, said the tapes have never been heard in public. They did not emerge in court because Chapman out short the August 1981 murder trial by pleading guilty. Now 31, Chapman is serving a life sentence at Attica state penitentiary.

In his only statement as his trial

Chapman read a passage from "Catcher in the Rye" in which Caulfield visualized thousands of children in a field of eye oblivious to danger.

The film was made for Britain's main commercial network, Independent Television, and will be shown on public TV in the United States on Feb. 9.

Chapman described to police how moved to New York and spent the weekend before the assassination retracing the wanderings of the fictional Caulfield. He said he waited for the 40-year-old Lennon outside the Dakota apartment building, a 38-caliber pistol with hollow-tipped bullets in his pocket.

"He looked past me and then I heard my head saying 'Do it! Do it! Do it!' over and over again," Chapman said in the tape.

"I pulled the gun out of my pocket in my left hand. I don't remember aiming ... I just pulled the trigger steadily five times," he said.

"It was like a movie. I got a gun. I got hollow-pointed bullets. I thought he would just drop right in front of me and that was it. I thought he was just going to fall down like in the movies, fall down," Chapman said.

Settlers threaten vigilantism

OFRA, Occupied West Bank (AP) — A Palestinian was wounded Tuesday in new clashes with the Israeli army. Arab reports said Jewish settlers vowed to carry out vigilante justice if the army failed to protect them.

The Palestine Press Service and officials at Ithhad Hospital said soldiers shot a 21-year-old Palestinian, Said Yassin, in the pelvis after protests in the West Bank city of Tulkarem.

The Arab-run agency also said 20 Palestinians were beaten by soldiers during a demonstration in the nearby village of Hubla.

The army said it imposed curfews on Hubla and Tulkarem refugee camp but could not confirm the reports of injuries immediately.

The latest clashes came after nearly eight weeks of violence in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. According to United Nations figures, 47 Palestinians have been killed by Israeli gunfire.

In Washington, Secretary of State George P. Shultz told Congress he had undertaken a new Middle East diplomatic initiative designed to provide "a greater sense of political control" to the 1.5 million Palestinians who live in the occupied territories.

Shultz said various approaches had been discussed with leaders of Israel, Egypt and Jordan, and that he might direct Assistant Secretary of State Richard W. Murphy to take "a quick swing around" the region to develop them further.

Shultz declined to provide any details of the contacts with Israel, Jordan and Egypt, but he stressed the discussions had moved to the substantive stage from disagreement over procedures, such as whether to hold an international peace conference.

The Israeli army closed four universities for a month and 800 secondary and "graduate schools" indefinitely to quell the West Bank protests. It also imposed or extended curfews on 10 towns and refugee camps in the West Bank and Gaza.

West Bank commander Maj. Gen. Anram Mitzna warned Jewish settlers at a meeting this week to stay out of confrontations with Arab rioters.

"We are the army, and we have to provide security to the Arab and Jewish residents," Mitzna said on Israeli radio. "There are cases in which people are trying to take action on their own. We will deal with them."

But settlers have said they cannot guarantee restraint if Arabs continue to attack them.

The right-wing Gush Emunim settlement movement has formed a team to coordinate responses to the disturbances, one of its leaders, Benny Katzover, told Israeli radio. He did not elaborate.

Settlers have been involved in several clashes with Palestinian protesters since Sunday, when settlements threw a firebomb at the curfew of one settler, burning him badly.

On Monday night, settlers violated a curfew and smashed the windows of two Palestinian cars, an army officer said.

Walesa urges restraint following price increases

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa on Tuesday urged Poles not to react emotionally to steep price increases imposed by the government, saying the unionist leader would continue to use force to deal with unrest.

"I am very happy that Poles, having been hit swiftly and hard (by the price increases) but not respond spontaneously, but are doing some calculating and rethinking," said Walesa, who spoke to reporters after a 2 1/2-hour luncheon meeting with visiting U.S. Deputy Secretary of State John C. Whitehead.

"Our organization has not issued a call for struggle at this moment because we know what the other side has deployed the army and the ZOMO (riot police) and are only waiting for such things," said the leader of the outlawed trade union.

But he said Solidarity will issue a call "if the need arises, for we are determined to defend the interests of working people, and the time and place of such an action will be of our choosing only."

Whitehead said Walesa, who spoke after his meeting with Solidarity leaders, in Krakow, riot police dispersed an anti-price increase demonstration by as many as 1,000 people, who tried to stage a church vigil at night at a nearby square. Masses at a local church, said Zygmunt Lenyk, an oppositionist activist.

The demonstrators carried several banners, one reading, "Price increases mean poverty of the nation," he said.

But he had in opposition and editorial board of the paper, itself expressing doubts about the authenticity of the text, still published it.

"The newspaper said in a disclaimer it printed with the version of Yeltsin's speech that it could not guarantee the authenticity of the material."

Yeltsin, an alternate member of the ruling Politburo and a leading proponent of Gorbachev's more open policies, was fired as Moscow party chief in November.

Members of the party's policymaking Central Committee said at a meeting in mid-October that Yeltsin had criticized the party's leadership style and the pace of reform.

But one version of his speech to the closed meeting of the Central Committee that Yeltsin circulated in Moscow said that Yeltsin had criticized Mrs. Gorbachev, who has been much more visible and active than wives of previous leaders.

A similar report was published in November by The Observer newspaper in London.

Speech involves Moscow

MANAMA, Bahrain (DPA) — An Iranian warplane Tuesday fired two missiles at the 39,000-ton Liberian tanker Petrolubk Pilot near the Strait of Hormuz, but both missiles missed, shipping sources reported.

The sources said the attack occurred off the Emirates of Ras Al-Khaimah while the tanker was on route to Hormuz with a shipment of Kuwaiti petroleum.

The attack was a departure of Iran, which has relied on speed boats and frigates to attack ships on the Arab side of the gulf in retaliation for Iraqi raids on tankers.

Intervention by U.S. and European warships near the Strait is believed to have severely curtailed Iran's naval operations recently.

In Moscow, meanwhile, the Soviet Union renewed its call for a United Nations naval force to replace U.S. and other Western fleets in the gulf and said it stood firmly behind the "refers to bring about an end to the Iran-Iraq war."

Nikolai Iyzhkov, chairman of the council of ministers, told Iraqi Tariz Aziz, that the gulf war "can and must be settled only by peaceful means."

Bus accident kills 10

BEIJING (AP) — A bus slammed into a freight train in northeastern China, killing 10 people, it was reported Tuesday.

The accident near Shuangyashan City in Heilongjiang province was the fourth involving Chinese trains in the past month and came after China's top leaders' national railway safety report.

The overseas edition of the People's Daily newspaper said 49 people were hospitalized, 11 in serious condition.

There were no gates or signals at the rail crossing and that the bus driver apparently did not look carefully before driving onto the tracks, the newspaper said.

On Jan. 24, 808 people were killed when an express train derailed in a remote area of southwest China's Yunnan province.

State may begin legal battle with FERC

By MARK PRATTNER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Idaho may take the federal agency that licenses hydroelectric dams to court over a recent hydro project decision that threatens state control of water, says the state Department of Water Resources.

"The attorneys are looking real hard at it," said Norm Young, DWR administrator on Tuesday. The earliest the state will decide is next week, he said.

Keith Higginson, DWR director, and other state officials blasted the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission this week for taking control of future water appropriations upstream from licensed hydropower projects.

Higginson urged the congressional delegation to act immediately to prevent FERC from over-reaching into state matters.

Spokesmen for Sen. James McClure and Rep. Richard Stallings said Tuesday they are looking into the matter.

Rep. Larry Craig said he has spoken to Higginson about the situation and is awaiting further details. The Horseshoe Bend hydroelectric project that triggered state concern is in Craig's district.

"My argument is that federal agencies like FERC continually overstep their legislative mandate," the First District Republican said.

FERC may have overstepped its authority in this case, he said.

"We saw the long arm of FERC intrude in the Swan Falls water rights issue," Craig said.

Swan Falls involves an agreement between the state and Idaho Power Co. over the present and future use of water in the Snake River.

Attorney General Jim Jones said he is not surprised at Higginson about the Horseshoe Bend decision. Jones said Horseshoe Bend is another example of a continuing problem with FERC overstepping its bounds. The question is whether the Horseshoe Bend issue a good enough case to take on FERC, Jones said.

A spokesman for FERC said Tuesday she was unfamiliar with the Horseshoe Bend situation and would have to research the matter before commenting.

The Horseshoe Bend hydroelectric project is on the Payette River near the city of Horseshoe Bend in Boise County.

The state wanted FERC to put a condition on the project license that, in effect, would preserve the right to divert water upstream from the project for upstream development in the public interest under state law.

FERC denied this request on July 30, 1986 and then again on Jan. 25, 1988, according to the state. If the state decides to go to federal court, it would be appealing FERC's decision. The state has exhausted its appeals.

A 1985 state Supreme Court case called

Shokal vs Dunn upheld the state's contention that water could be diverted in the public interest for such beneficial uses as preserving fishery.

"FERC is saying they're the ones to determine what projects are to be licensed and what values are to be considered," said Jones.

During the Swan Falls dispute, Jones was the most sensitive among top state officials to FERC taking away state control on water issues. Jones insisted on changing a bill directing FERC to approve Swan Falls. The idea was to give greater protection to state interests, he said.

FERC became involved in Swan Falls because IPC sells power out of state and FERC licenses its dams.

Jones said FERC didn't rule in the state's favor on the Horseshoe Bend case because the state didn't present enough evidence.

"Had the state done this. It would have been a difficult job of balancing" for FERC, he said.

Under the Electric Consumers Protection Act of 1986, FERC has to consider whether a proposed power project is consistent with a state plan for improving, developing, or conserving waterways affected by the project.

The state has no comprehensive river plan but there have been proposals in the Legislature to develop one. Besides Horseshoe Bend, legislators are concerned about Tacoma City Light's plan to build a hydro project in Idaho with the power to be shipped to Washington.

It would be Jones' job to take on FERC in the Horseshoe Bend case. Jones said he wants to hear from Higginson and Gov. Cecil Andrus before he decides whether to appeal the Horseshoe Bend decision to the federal courts.

"One of these days we are going to have to take FERC head-on," he said.

Branen: Magic Valley has solid future in agriculture

By MARTA CLEAVELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Success in agriculture will continue to be the future for the Magic Valley, predicted Dr. Larry Branen Tuesday.

"We are in a time of restructuring. Farming won't be the way it was in the past, or the way some of you would want to see it in the future," he said.

But despite major factors beyond local, state, or even national control, the Valley already possesses many of the necessities for surviving and even thriving in agriculture.

It is diversified. There is close interaction between the cities and the rural areas. And there is a strong educational commitment to agriculture, said the dean of the University of Idaho College of Agriculture at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon on the northern Idaho's Agricultural Future.

There are four major circumstances affecting the future of agriculture, he said. The increasing diversity of crops and agricultural products. The existence of a world economy that the United States no longer controls. The increasing impact of government policy on agriculture and the decreasing ability of farmers to influence it. And the rapid march of technology.

Magic Valley farmers produce $600 million in farm cash receipts, more than one-quarter of the total in Idaho, Branen said.

But things have been bad here, and they still are.

"I have no idea how many farmers have already lost their farms, and we are not yet recovered," he said.

Commodity prices will be fairly stable over the next year, he predicted. But cash receipts for some of the major crops such as wheat will go down. Cattle, dairy and seed prices will remain stable.

Land values will also remain stable here for the next year, he said. In some areas of Idaho the prices are going up because people are looking for alternative investments to stocks. But for the most part, people are not going to make any more, until after the November election or until the common wisdom of the stock market crash is determined.

The economy is now a worldwide one, and the United States no longer controls it, Branen said.

Decisions coming out of the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Trade Commission and Congress all have a larger effect on agriculture than in the past, and now agriculture has a smaller voice.

Older and more people are generations away from the farm, and they are the ones making the decisions. See FARMING on Page B2.

Affiliation subject of talks between MSTI, hospital

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Mountain States Tumor Institute officials said Tuesday they're hopeful talks will continue with the Regional Cancer Center about a Twin Falls cancer treatment center.

"Hopefully they (MSTI administrators) will be in position to continue to discuss the matter with MVRMC. MSTI spokeswoman Rita Ryan said. We're mostly just going to keep discussions going on that point."

MVRMC Administrator John Bingham met with MSTI officials Friday to talk about affiliation with the Boise-based cancer center.

At a Monday hospital board meeting, he said he is "optimistic" the effort will result in some sort of agreement.

Bingham said the county hospital is pursuing affiliation with MSTI, which planned to open a cancer center in Twin Falls until MVRMC announced its own plans in December. MVRMC's December announcement that it planned to build its own treatment center has drawn fire from some county residents.

Affiliation with MSTI "basically just means linking up communication between MVRMC and MSTI," Bingham said.

He said "communications and dialogue" could take the form of consulting with MSTI to use its expertise in the cancer field.

In addition, MVRMC could refer patients to MSTI, Bingham said.

Carolee Walker, member of Advocates for MSTI, said her group is still optimistic the Boise cancer center will build a facility in Twin Falls.

"My reaction is that he (Bingham) has been candid and forthright over your mind and that's new, even when the talks, indeed, I'm glad the young fellow is optimistic."

MSTI planned to announce Christmas Eve they were going to build a cancer center in Twin Falls. Their decision came after talks between MVRMC, the Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital and MSTI broke down after two years of discussion.

But MVRMC beat MSTI to the punch. The clinic and MSTI decided not to build its own satellite.

Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital Administrator Marley Jackman said he's not sure how his hospital fits into the scene now. He said he didn't know of the meeting between MVRMC and MSTI last Friday.

"We're not sure what our role is at this time," Jackman said. "I assume we'll be having a conversation in the future."

He said the privately-owned hospital is concerned with patient care in the future and with getting the best talent expertise in the Magic Valley.

The clinic had been invited to participate in past negotiations but declined.

Buhl schools have new AIDS policy

By The Times-News

BUHL - The Buhl School Board has adopted an AIDS policy that calls for case-by-case review of students and employees infected with the virus, but also gives much more specific guidelines than most schools in the state.

The guidelines state that no student will be denied an education solely because he is infected with Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome. Similarly, no district employee can be fired, suspended, transferred or have a contract not renewed just because he is infected with AIDS.

However, an evaluation team may decide that there is sufficient reason for students to be educated at home or for employees to be fired.

In the case of a student, parents are required to inform the school district if the student has a full-blown AIDS infection, has AIDS-Related Complex and has developed symptoms of diseases related to AIDS, or tests positive for the AIDS virus but shows no signs of illness.

An evaluation team, composed of at least a parent, the student's teacher and the principal, will then decide where the child can best be educated.

In each case, risks and benefits to both the infected student and to others in the setting shall be weighed," the policy says. "Decisions regarding the type of educational setting for the infected student shall be based upon the behavior, neurological development and physical condition of the child, and the expected type of interaction with others in that setting," it says.

Any student who lacks "control of his/her body secretions and displays behavior such as biting, spitting or vomiting, and has uncurable sores or lesions, shall be educated in settings that minimize exposure of others to his/her body fluids," the new policy says.

Evaluations of infected students will continue at least annually, and the student may be required to remain away from school, studying under school supervision, until it is completed. The evaluation must be completed within seven days.

Staff members must report to their building principal, the superintendent or the school board chairman if they test positive for AIDS.

The school superintendent or board chairman, the case manager or superintendent will then determine if the employee can perform his or her job. If the decision is that the employee can, then no action will be taken, but the employee will continue to be reviewed periodically.

The decision on whether the employee can perform his job will be based on the "nature, duration and severity of the risk," according to the policy.

If the superintendent decides there is question whether the infected employee can perform his job, then an evaluation team will take the matter up. This evaluation team will be composed of the superintendent, the infected employee, a public health official, the employee's doctor, a doctor representing the school district and a person selected by the superintendent who is knowledgeable of the requirements of the employee's job.

If the evaluation team decides the infected employee cannot perform his job, then it must consider whether reasonable accommodations may be made to allow him to continue working.

However, the policy defines accommodations as reasonable if they do not impose "undue financial or administrative burdens on the school system" and do not require "a fundamental alteration in the nature of the job."

Should an evaluation team decide that an infected employee can continue to work or a student can continue to attend classes, a news conference will be called. Names will not be released to the press and the district will take reasonable steps to maintain confidentiality, but no guarantees will be made, nor is there any

Sun Valley plans three new chairlifts

By BARBARA NEWBERT
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY - Sun Valley Co. has announced it will exercise its option to build a third high-speed quad chairlift on Bald Mountain.

The new Christmas lift will be constructed this summer to carry skiers from the Roundhouse on the River Run side of the mountain to the top.

This lift will be constructed in addition to two new lifts authorized this past December for the Warm Springs side of Bald Mountain.

The three new lifts - to be known as Look-Out Express, Grey Hawk and Christmas - will be the first detachable high-speed quad lifts in the Northern Rockies. All are scheduled for completion by Sun Valley's 63rd winter season opening. Thanks-giving Day 1988. Anticipated cost is $6 million.

These high-speed lifts will carry skiers at a rate of 1,000 feet per minute, more than twice the speed of a conventional chairlift. This will transport skiers from the bottom of Warm Springs to the top of Baldy in less than 10 minutes.

The Christmas lift will have a slope length of 4,100 feet with a vertical rise of 1,324 feet. It will have a capacity to carry 2,400 skiers per hour.

The Look-Out Express will begin at the base of Warm Springs, with a slope length of 9,087 feet and a vertical rise of 3,094, and will handle 1,500 skiers per hour.

Grey Hawk will start at the base of Warm Springs and will travel to the top of Upper Grey Hawk run. It will have a slope length of 4,350 feet with a 1,570-foot vertical rise and a 2,400-ski-per-hour capacity.

Appealed conviction upheld

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Court of Appeals has upheld the conviction and prison sentence ordered for an Ada County man on charges that he wounded a police officer during a disturbance at his home... The court heard an argument from Alan John McDougall that his mental condition at the time prevented him from forming the necessary intent to commit a crime.

Pocatello business blasted

POCATELLO (AP) — A plastic explosive device blew out three windows and shattered the front door of a Pocatello taxidermy shop early Tuesday, authorities said. From the blast, which occurred about 2:16 a.m. in a building owned by John Andros. The taxidermy shop is run by Norman Foss.

Deregulation finds support

BOISE (AP) — Attempting to show that not all the state's elderly fear telephone deregulation, a group of retired phone company employees has come out in support of a deregulation bill before the Idaho Legislature. Dennis Williams of Boise, a spokesman for Seniors for Improved Telephone Regulation, told a Statehouse news conference Monday that he and other retired phone company workers take exception to advertising sponsored by other seniors groups opposing the legislation.

NASA funds chip research

MOSCOW (AP) — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration will provide $300,000 over the next three years to the University of Idaho's Microelectronics Research Center to continue design work on a new high-speed computer chip for space stations. Gary Maki, UI engineering professor and head of the research team that has worked with the space agency on past projects, said a team of three NASA scientists from California's Goddard Space Flight Center met with UI officials Monday in Moscow. The federal agency has agreed to fund continued research on the Configurable High Rate Processor, or CHRP, computer chip. The Idaho Legislature provided $300,000 in research funding last year.

Senate chips out state bush measure

BOISE (AP) — A 10-year-old's dream of designating the Silver Tip Sagebrush as Idaho's official state bush has died in the state Senate. On a 24-16 vote Tuesday, the Senate defeated the bill that critics said failed to consider the desires, ambitions and loves of all 1 million Idahoans.

"The selection of a state bush should not be made until we branch out to all our constituents," Sen. Lou Reed, D-Coeur d'Alene, told her colleagues. "I urge you, sage senators, not to be bush league or bushwhacked." In an otherwise quiet legislative session the bill had been the focal point of some debate since it was brought to the State Affairs Committee last week by Angela Rowland, a fifth-grade student at Sunnyridge Elementary School in Nampa. "I have high respect for that lady who came in here," said Sen. Mark Ricker, R-Bozurg. "It took a lot of courage." But senators from both political parties claimed the designation of a state bush should involve a species more common than the relatively rare Silver Tip Sage that grows mainly in dried beds of high desert lakes, especially in southwestern Idaho.

Health care bills win panel approval

BOISE (AP) — Three bills approved for introduction Tuesday by the House Health and Welfare Committee would give the elderly help with the costs of long-term health care. But they all carry a price tag. Sponsor Rep. Brent Brockmeier, R-Boise, says the Legislature may have to decide if it can afford any or all of the proposals — or if it can afford not to act. The bills introduced Tuesday: • Offer a tax incentive to a spouse giving care at home to a spouse who would otherwise require care in a nursing home or shelter care. • Offer a tax break on interest earned on deposits made into individual medical accounts designed to cover the cost of long-term health care. • A state income tax deduction for the costs of insurance for long-term health care. Brockmeier estimated cost of the income tax deduction is $500,000 and the deduction for deposits into an individual medical account would cost about $700,000 in state tax revenue. Brockmeier said there are believed to be about 6,100 people over age 65 who require care but are not residing in shelter or nursing-home facilities. The Tax Commission estimates that about half would be claimed for tax breaks at a cost of $300,000 per year. He said the potential saving to the state is $3,600 per year in state assistance for each person the tax credit keeps out of a nursing home. Brockmeier said the cost estimates may be overstated by 100 percent, but he wanted to advise committee members that the proposals would be costly. All of the proposals came from an interim study committee chaired by Brockmeier and Sen. Ann Rydahl, R-Idaho Falls.

House approves adding treasurer to land board

BOISE (AP) — With no opposing debate, the Idaho House has given strong approval to a proposed constitutional amendment allowing the state treasurer to be added to the Land Board. The vote was 64-18, six more than the two-thirds majority needed. The measure now goes to the Senate and if it passes there, will go before voters in the next general election. The Land Board manages 2.6 million acres of public school and government land and other state property. It is comprised of five elected state officials, including all the full-time offices except that of state treasurer. Sponsor Rep. L. Ed Brown, R-Pocatello, who was the only legislator to speak on the bill, said in Idaho's early years the treasurer was a part-time position with little to do except make bank deposits. The treasurer then had $130,000 to put in the bank. Idaho's treasurer now invests a daily average of $150 million in state funds and $125 million in a pool of money from cities, counties and other local governmental units. The state treasurer is Lydia Justice Edwards, a Republican and former state legislator. Gov. Cecil Andrus objected to the proposal earlier, saying it would be awkward to manage a board with six members because of the potential for tie votes. But Brown said research of Land Board minutes shows 88 percent of the votes are unanimous. "There is a lot of discussion but when the vote is taken, it usually is unanimous," he said.

Malad murder suspect may have died in fire

ELKO, Nev. (AP) — A southeastern Idaho man wanted for the weekend slayings of his two brothers was believed burned to death in his car Tuesday during a police chase in downtown Elko, authorities said. Idaho officials, including an investigator from the state Department of Law Enforcement, were traveling to Elko to attempt to verify whether the slain man was Victor Wade, 68, of Malad, Idaho. Wade was wanted in connection with the fatal shooting of brothers Erven Wade, 52, of Sandy, Utah, and Vern Wade, 63, of Provo, Utah. They were found dead at the family's morning. An all-points bulletin was issued for Victor Wade, who was seen driving away from the ranch house in a white 1974 Chevrolet Vega. Elko Police Chief Gordon Fobes said Tuesday that officials were investigating whether the man who burned to death was involved in the robbery of a convenience store and the murder of a clerk in Carlin, Nev., Monday night. Carlin is about 20 miles west of Elko. Fobes said officers from his department got a call for assistance about 2 a.m. Tuesday from the Nevada Highway Patrol, which was pursuing a car matching the description of Wade's. At one point during the pursuit which began on the outskirts of Elko, the suspect stopped in a yard and yelled obscenities at officers. Police had drawn their guns and shielded themselves behind their units, but no shots were fired, Fobes said. "We continued to follow the car into the main downtown area of the city on Idaho Street at which time the car's interior suddenly became engulfed in flames," he said. "He proceeded another block out of control and then ran into a brick wall." The vehicle and the body were impounded pending an investigation by teams from Idaho and Nevada. Fobes said. In Carlin, authorities acknowledged they were investigating whether the dead man was involved in the killing of convenience store clerk Barbara L. Nichols, 45, in a robbery Monday night. A spokeswoman for the Carlin Police Department said the victim appeared to have been taken from the gas station in her own car, shot and then dropped off about one-quarter mile west of the station. "The victim was dead upon our arrival and her vehicle was located later in the Carlin area unoccupied," she said. "The Malad slayings appeared to be the result of an argument over the division of dividends from the Wades' family cattle ranch. Oneida County Prosecutor David Evans said Tuesday that an autopsy indicated both Wade brothers died of single gunshot wound to the head. Evans said the slugs were fired from a small-caliber weapon.

For that sinners' all-day snack, look to Three-Chesse Enchiladas, Chicken-Corn Chowder and Meatballs Rellenos.

Time for hot, hearty and hassle-free fare

Wintertime calls for hot and hearty meals. Whether days are spent at the office or enjoying the great outdoors, "comforting" soups and stews, casseroles and skillet meals are the season's hands-down favorite foods.

Time was when dinner simmered all-day on the back burner or in the oven developing the rich, full flavors cooler weather demands. Today, time-pressed cooks aim for shortcutting the way to simmer-all-day taste appeal with creative use of seasonings, fresh produce and high-quality convenience foods.

This winter, make up menus with a new collection of fuss-free recipes created with busy cooks in mind. Streamlined to provide great flavor in short order, they're ideal for busy-day meals.

Chicken-Cori Chowder and Cheese and Sausage Chowder are hearty meal-in-a-bowl soups that take just minutes of preparation before a short simmer. Add a crusty loaf of bread and a salad and the menu is complete.

Three-Cesse Enchiladas take the mystery as well as the hassle out of preparing Mexican food. With no chiles to roast, no fillings or sauces to cook and no tortillas to fry, they are assembled easily in a few short minutes.

When soul-warming Mexi-Cali Chicken Casserole or Chick 'n Corn Bread Supper sounds like just the ticket, streamline preparation by using leftover chicken or turkey. No leftovers handy? Look to frozen diced cooked chicken or fully-cooked chicken or turkey, available in the deli or meat department. Meatballs Rellenos, with their zesty flavor and creamy filling of melted cheese, can be prepared easily when time allows and reheated for serving up to two days later. Cooked in a spicy tomato-rice mixture, they're a one-dish-dinner-to-keep-in-mind for casual entertaining.

CHICKEN-CORN CHOWDER

- 2 1/2 cups chicken broth
  - 1/2 cup picante sauce
  - 3/4 teaspoon ground cumin
  - 1 can (12-ounce) vacuum-packed whole kernel corn
  - 1 small red or green pepper, diced
  - 1 cup dairy sour cream
  - 2 tablespoons flour
  - 2 cups diced cooked chicken
  - 1 cup (4-ounce) shredded monterey jack or cheddar cheese
- Combine broth, picante sauce and cumin in saucepan; bring to a boil. Reduce heat; simmer 10 minutes. Add corn and peppers; simmer 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. In small bowl, combine sour cream and flour, mixing well. Using a wire whisk, stir 1/4 cup of the hot soup mixture into the sour cream mixture; then stir new sour cream mixture back into saucepan. Add chicken; heat through but do not boil, stirring occasionally. Ladle soup into bowls; top with cheese. Serve with additional picante sauce. Makes 4 servings, about 6 cups chowder.

CHICK 'N CORN BREAD SUPPER

- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1 medium green pepper, chopped
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 1/2 cups chopped cooked chicken or turkey
- 1 can (15-ounce) pinto beans, drained
- 1 can (14 1/2- or 16-ounce) tomatoes, drained and coarsely chopped
- 1 can (8-ounce) whole kernel corn, drained
- 1/2 cup picante sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1/4 teaspoon oregano leaves, crushed
- 1 package (about 8 1/2-ounce) corn muffin mix
- 1/2 cup (2-ounce) shredded cheddar cheese

Saute onion, green pepper and garlic in oil in large skillet until tender. Add chicken, beans, tomatoes, corn, picante sauce, cumin and oregano. Simmer uncovered 10 minutes. Pour into 11x7-inch baking dish or shallow 2-quart casserole.

Prepare corn muffin mix according to package directions. Spoon evenly over turkey mixture; sprinkle with cheese. Bake in preheated 400 degree oven about 20 minutes or until golden brown. Let stand 10 minutes before serving. Makes 6 servings.

Preparing ahead

And using leftovers save working mom's day

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Diana Rolig is balancing two careers, working three days a week as a travel agent, and the rest of the time as a mother and homemaker.

"I really do enjoy the work," she says, "and I enjoy my kids. And this gives me a nice balance of time."

On the days she is working, she doesn't have time for lengthy meal preparation. At dinnertime, Rolig says her daughters, 4-year-old Allison and 6-year-old Whitney, are hungry and ready to eat "now."

She cooks a large meal on Sunday, and has leftovers to work with for Monday's dinner. Tuesday is a day "off" as she fixes something ahead for Wednesday. By cooking a little extra on her days off or by keeping dishes simple, she solves the problem of putting together her after-work meals.

Rolig says she thinks a lot of time can be wasted running back and forth to the store, so she tries to do all her grocery shopping just once a week. In this way, the time she does have to cook is not spent in trying to decide what to fix and buying the ingredients.

She says although she has favorite recipes, she tries to find something new to prepare at least once a week. "They don't always turn out, but if you're in a hurry, it makes cooking a little more exciting than just using the regular ones."

She says she likes to cook cornish game hens, because they are easy to prepare. The following recipe is one she frequently uses on the days she works.

CORNISH HEN AND RICE BAKE

(Four servings)

- 1 (6-ounce) package white and wild rice mix
  - 1 stalk celery, chopped
  - 1/2 cup (4-ounce can) drained mushroom stems and pieces
  - 2 cups water
  - 1/4 cup butter or margarine
  - 2 cornish game hens
  - 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
- Preheat oven to 375 degrees. In a 13x9-inch pan, combine the uncooked rice mix, seasonings, celery, mushrooms, and water. Dot the top with 1/4 cup butter or margarine. Using kitchen shears or a sharp knife, cut the cornish game hens in half lengthwise. Arrange the cut side down over the rice. Brush with melted butter or margarine. Cover with foil and bake 1 hour. Uncover and bake 30 minutes longer.

"It's a good, quick meal, in that all you have to add is a salad, or salad and a vegetable. I put it in

Grow your own

Herbs spice up food, beat off the blahs

"Indian Spring." It's that time of year again, when the weather gets mild enough to tease us and to make us forget that we really have a long way to go. I find myself looking through the piles of catalogs of the garden and flower variety. I may be the earliest dreamer in the neighborhood — even if I am a late bloomer.

One of the best cures for the summertime blues in the winter is to get some pots of herbs going and growing.

To make this easier next year, do one or two things: Either set aside seeds for winter planting or take cuttings or root divisions from some in your garden.

However, if you didn't do either of the above, pester your supermarket produce manager to order you some potted herbs. You'll probably get some thyme, tarragon, oregano, basil, and maybe some marjoram.

If you can't do this and must use the dried kind, you can jazz them up this way. First use half the amount called for in your recipe but add it to an equal amount of chopped fresh parsley. The moisture and green (chlorophyll) in the parsley will receive the flavor of the dried herb.

By the way, don't shake your can or jar of herbs into or over the cooking dish. The steam rising can get into the container and cause the herbs to stick to gether and get moldy. Herbs really do make a big difference in the taste of almost everything. I love a sprinkle of oregano on an omelette when I pile on the fresh veggies, especially chopped tomatoes and cheese.

You can also use oregano in pizza and spaghetti. It perks up vegetable juice cocktails and tomato soup. It's a good addition to most meats, but not often used with fish (except in a tomato sauce). Marjoram has a good fragrant spicy taste. A pinch added to sauted mushrooms or clam chowder or onion soup adds a fresh taste. This herb is also good in a cream sauce for fish.

I know I could go on and on, giving you hints, but until you try, you won't know what you're missing. I really recommend you try new herbs this way.

Pick a recipe for every Monday for a month that features a certain herb. Do another herb on Wednesdays that month and then another on Fridays. You don't want to overwhelm by doing one herb to death

Book: Power dieting for the executive

By The Los Angeles Times

What makes the approach to dieting taken by executives different from the way the average person goes about calorie-watching? Quite a bit, according to June Roth and Harvey M. Root, authors of "The Executive Success Diet" (McGraw-Hill Book Co., $16.95, hardcover, 205 pages).

While most people generally are concerned about getting an "adequate supply of vitamins and minerals while maintaining weight" at a desirable level, the nature of the executive's business day makes this task significantly more difficult. It is not that a business person has different needs or exerts energy any differently, but power breakfasts, lunch and dinner meetings, discussions over cocktails and a plethora of meals eaten on airplanes and at conventions are all obstacles that are added to dieting plans of an executive.

As a result, the way in which these business types tackle dieting is often different from the approach taken by the average person. In addition to typical recommendations to reduce fat, cholesterol and sodium intake while getting sufficient vitamins, minerals and calories, the authors give suggestions on how to manipulate meals at important events, how to have healthier flights, meals, how to avoid the problems associated with eating on the highway, how to deal with hotel breakfasts and how to handle stress.

The book begins with an eight-point plan designed to step up health control for the executive: Step One differentiates between simple and complex carbohydrates, detailing some of the advantages of the former and offering good to excellent sources of the latter; Step Two discusses fat consumption, explaining the sources, types and digestion of the substance; Step Three recommends eating an adequate protein, defining its bodily function, how much is recommended and where to find it; Step Four unfolds the exercises that will be necessary; Step Five focuses on calorie-counting; Step Six is devoted to nutritional supplements; Step Seven is designed to help with a personal-nutritional profile; Step Eight deals with stress; and Step Eight deals with stress-reduction techniques. In the next part of the book, executives learn the basics of a successful dieting plan—how to incorporate the preceding eight steps into a healthy diet for weight loss or maintenance—plus recipes and a list of foods that may be interchanged without increasing intake of fat or calories.

"I've been earning a time bake" and it's ready when I come home," she says. Rolig says another reason she likes game hens is because they cook in about an hour, and are nice for a dinner club or special dinner. Here is another way she prepares them.

CORNISH HENS NORMANDY
(Serves six)
3 frozen cornish hens
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon sage
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1 1/2 cloves of garlic, crushed
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/2 cup butter or margarine

Thaw the hens. Split in half down the middle. Combine salt, sage, nutmeg, garlic, and lemon juice. Rub this over the side of hens. Melt the butter in a shallow roasting pan in a 350 degree oven. Roast 15 minutes. Turn skin side up, and roast 15 minutes longer. Pour orange juice over the hens and roast another 15 minutes, or until the hens are golden brown and fork tender. Remove to a platter. Pour pan juices over all. Garnish with thick orange slices, sauteed in butter to which a dash of powdered cloves has been added.

"It has a fruity flavor, with the orange juice in it. It gives them a nice flavor, and it's real easy to do," she says. With the Cornish Game Hens Normandy, she might serve a green vegetable, a colorful salad and...

3 tablespoons soy sauce
1 cup blanched whole almonds
1 cup mushroom pieces, or button mushrooms

Stir every 30 minutes and add the remaining bouillon and consume as needed.

Try warming up to the toaster oven

By MINNIE BERNARDINO
The Los Angeles Times

Is the toaster oven getting more work than the conventional big oven? If it belongs to a family like mine, definitely.

Two teen-agers cannot live without this little appliance for their seven-year-old boy. It depends on it, for his English muffin, which he splashes with peanut butter and jelly. Almost every single morning, the toaster oven starts getting warmed up for my husband's usual breakfast of a baked French roll or bagel. On week-ends it may take more beating from all of us; there could be waffles, croissants, baked potatoes, open-faced sandwiches or possibly some leftover chicken, or pastries that a microwave would steam rather than crisp.

Our first toast oven was a GE unit, purchased about 15 years ago. Then we moved on to two others, both toaster oven-broilers. We are now on our fourth one, going on its third month. With a rebate, the price of the Proctor-Silex Toaster Oven-Broiler, model 0245, was unbeatable, and the unit's white sides were sleek and clean-looking.

Except for darkened crumb markings on the bottom tray and a little brown stain on the chrome top, the unit's chrome top when it was hot, the toaster oven has performed to our satisfaction. Our major objection with the Proctor-Silex is that it will not toast slices consecutively. A brief cooling time is needed to reset the thermostat or the spring lever that activates the toaster will not stay down. However, when the door is opened, the rack easily pulls out for access to cooked food, although the heating element does not shut off automatically.

In spite of all the conveniences offered by toaster ovens, they do not equal the quality and speed of toasting provided by traditional pop-up toasters. Now that the wide-mouth, long-slot models are becoming more available, some people have switched to these because the units will accommodate thicker breads.

However, for those who remain devotees of the toaster oven, here is an update on the latest models available in the marketplace. Most new models feature double-wall construction for cooler exteriors and continuous clean interiors to facilitate cleaning. There has not been much of an improvement with the crumb tray, however, and it remains a constant challenge to keep the tray spic and span.

Contemporary styling and color combine with multifunction appeal and efficiency in the Alfredo Bake 'n' Broil Oven with Toaster Feature from the Oster Electric Range. The Italian-made oven is stunning in red, a color that is boldly being introduced in many consumer appliances this year. Another option for the daring kitchen designer is the beautiful black unit accented with chrome trim, the Oster Toaster Ovens, plus the third to Euro-white with black facing, have tinted glass doors and continuous clean-porcelain enamel interiors.

Aside from styling, the DeLonghi oven distinguishes itself from other types with six extra-large slots. The oven will take a 9-pound chicken or a 10-4-inch cake or pie. Its ample internal height prevents thick breads from burning on top, and its full depth accommodates four large slices, automatically toasting them as preferred. To toast, the control knob is turned to a desired color gauge. The knob rewinds, shutting off the heating element when done. Some people might object to the noise that accompanies the rewinding process.

When it comes to a variety of selection and a good toasting performance record, Black & Decker provides it all. Its new generation of Toast-R-Ovens (priced from $52 to $109) are no longer available in the old chrome look, which has been replaced with white, light-wood or wood-grain finishes. The line includes one simple Toast-R-Oven toaster (model TR020) that toasts, defrosts and toasts brownies, and eight types of Toast-R-Oven broilers. Available is the Toast-R-Oven Heat Guard Mounting Hood for under-cabinet mounting.

The most popular in the Black & Decker group is the TRO50 toaster oven-broiler ($69.98). Styled in coffee cream with a wood-grain top, it features a rear-opening clean interior and swing-open crumb tray for easy clean up. It will hold four slices of bread, a six-cup muffin tin and six burger patties. Another good seller is the Ultra Oven Toast-R-Oven Broiler ($100), which accommodates six toast slices. Styled in black and wood-grain, this large oven offers a flip-top, keep-warm surface. All models have a signal light, and when toast is done the oven shuts off and a bell rings.

Electronic toasting circuitry is the modern solution to consistent toast color, cycle after cycle. Boosting this feature are the three Electronic Toaster-Oven-Broilers from Toastmaster. The two continuous-clean models ($72.50 each) include model 3305, in white enamel with light gray trim, and model 3306, with polished chrome-case and charcoal gray trim; Model 323 ($64.95) has an almond case with cocoa-brown trim. All units have tinted glass doors, an operation pilot light and a built-in rack signal light. Although the rack has a capacity to hold an 8-inch cake or pie and toast four bread slices, the height-fall-short for leaving top room for taller bread items. Watch for two forthcoming Toastmaster models that feature stainless-steel exteriors.

Moving away from the same blocky look in this appliance category is the modified version of Toasty Deluxe ($69.99) from Sanyo, first introduced about three years ago. Standing tall and narrow, this white enamel finish has a baked white enamel finish with gray trim. Another unusual design is its mirrored glass door, which is reflective but lets you see inside. The Toasty contains two rack levels controlled by a selector button that gives you the option of toasting on either rack, or simultaneously. Each shelf is provided with porcelain white cooking tray for burgers, hot dogs or other smaller food items. Although there is no thermostat control for toasting, toast and broiling functions are quite satisfactory.

What makes Panasonic's Toaster Oven Broiler ($89.95) for continuous-clean model, and $79.95 for standard model, is its distinctive 180-degree 60-minute Automatic Timer. A bell indicates end of cooking time as programmed in the timer, and the heating shuts off instantly.

Tantalize with an apple-cherry pie

Apple pie is as American as well, apple pie is so is cherry pie. For that matter, put them together, and you have the beginnings of a patriotic statement. At the very least, you'll have something wonderful.

NUTTY CHERRY APPLE PIE

1 unbaked 9-inch pie crust
1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1/4 cup flour
6 medium cooking apples, pared, cored and sliced (about 7 cups)
1 jar (10-ounces) maraschino cherries, drained and halved

CRUMB TOPPING

1/2 cup flour
1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1/2 cup butter or margarine, at room temperature

1/2 cup finely chopped hazelnuts

Prepare pie crust and set aside. In small bowl, blend together brown sugar and flour. In large bowl, combine apples and cherries; stir in sugar-flour mixture. Spoon into pie shell. Prepare Crumb Topping: Combine flour and brown sugar; cut in butter until crumbly. Add nuts. Sprinkle top apple-cherry mixture. To prevent overbrowning, cover pie with foil. Bake at 375 degrees for 30 minutes. Remove foil; bake for 20 to 30 minutes more or until topping and crust are golden and apples are tender. Serve warm with whipped topping or vanilla ice cream. Makes one 9-inch pie.

Cook up maple's sweet bounty in bread

By MARIE BIANCO
Newsday

Returning recently from cross-country skiing in Vermont, I couldn't leave the state without bringing home several cans of maple syrup. It would have been hard to avoid buying a supply. Restaurants, drug stores, souvenir shops — even an army and navy store — offered cans of local maple syrup for sale.

During 1987, Vermont produced 275,000 gallons of maple syrup; down from 525,000 gallons two years ago. The decrease is directly related to the temperature.

Maple trees produce the most sap when days are sunny and nights are below freezing. During the past two seasons, too much warm weather early in the spring curtailed sap production. It takes 30 1/2 gallons of maple sap (and a lot of boiling down) to make one gallon of maple syrup.

Finding I had some syrup left, I decided to try baking yeast bread, whose recipe appears here. This maple-syrup-flavored bread is studded with walnuts and gets an extra bite from added rolled oats.

Directions are given for shaping a traditional loaf or for a transformer braid. Both can be glazed with a maple-syrup icing and sprinkled with chopped walnuts. Enjoy this bread with hot cocoa or coffee.

MAPLE WALNUT BREAD

2 packages dry yeast
1/2 cup water (105 to 115 degrees)
1 tablespoon granulated sugar
1 1/2 cups boiling water
1 cup oatmeal (not quick-cook)
1/2 cup maple syrup
1/2 cup butter, melted
1 teaspoon salt
3 eggs, slightly beaten
5 to 6 cups all-purpose flour
1 cup chopped walnuts

For glaze:

1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar
1/2 cup maple syrup
1/2 cup chopped walnuts

In a small bowl, combine yeast, water and sugar. Using fingertips, mix to dissolve yeast; set mixture aside for 10 minutes.

In a large mixing bowl, combine boiling water and uncooked oatmeal. Stir well. Add maple syrup, melted butter and salt. Cool slightly. Stir in eggs, yeast mixture and 2 cups flour. Mix well. Add 3 cups flour and nuts. Turn out onto a lightly floured surface and knead 10 to 15 minutes, adding sixth cup of flour as needed.

Place dough in a large buttered bowl, cover tightly with plastic wrap and set in a warm spot to double in bulk, about 1 hour. Punch dough down and divide evenly. Divide one-half of the dough into 3 equal parts. Roll each part into a rope 14 inches long. Place ropes on a baking sheet and braid, beginning in the center and working toward the ends. Cover with buttered plastic wrap and let rise until doubled again.

The other half of the dough can be worked in the same manner or can be rolled out on a lightly floured surface into a 9x12-inch rectangle; then roll up tightly and place in a 9x12-inch loaf pan. Cover with buttered plastic wrap and let rise until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour. Punch dough down and divide evenly. Di-

To make glaze, combine confectioners' sugar with maple syrup. Ice tops of breads and sprinkle with walnuts. Makes 2 loaves.

Letters of thanks

Thank you for covering visiting opera artists
 A word of thanks to you and your paper for the excellent coverage you have given of the two young artists, Elizabeth Braden and Janet Christianson, during their week of performances-and workshops-here in Twin Falls.
 Your writer, Michelle Cole, is to be commended on the fine article in Friday's issue. Her style of reporting is very refreshing. Perhaps she would qualify to serve as a reliable music and drama critic, which is badly needed for reviewing the art performances here.

Fund would like to thank all of the area businesses for the contributions to the Wild Game Dinner on Jan. 19. We would like to extend a special thanks to Kerry Kawamoto, Tim, Steve and Leo Soran for their time in preparing the food and the use of their facilities.
 We appreciate everyone who contributed to the fund and attended the dinner, and we hope all of you enjoyed the evening. Because of your generosity and support, the first annual Wild Game Dinner was a great success. We'll see you at the ball park!

Bradley's team is working on adapting that cholesterol-removal technology to egg yolks.
 The technology uses liquefied carbon dioxide to pull out cholesterol, a technique called super-critical extraction and similar to one commercial process, developed in West Germany, used to extract caffeine from coffee, he explained.

Imagine, cholesterol-free egg yolks

NEW ORLEANS - Cholesterol-free egg yolks may be as common as decaffeinated coffee within the next few years if research under way at the University of Wisconsin pans out as anticipated.
 "We now can take 90 percent to 95 percent of the cholesterol out of a fresh yolk and mix it up," Robert L. Bradley, a UW professor of food science said in an interview before sharing his findings with members of the American Farm Bureau Fed-

Pre-nuptial agreement outlasts marriage

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letter from "Parents of the Bride," whose daughter had been manipulated into signing a prenuptial agreement on her wedding eve.

Some years ago, I married a very wealthy man who asked me to sign a prenuptial agreement. He said he "couldn't" marry me unless I signed it. The agreement not only protected his premarital assets, it prevented me from sharing in any income he earned during our marriage, stipulating what I would receive should we be divorced — and I guaranteed me only a pittance in his will.

I hated the agreement, but I loved the man, so I signed it. I signed the agreement, but I loved the man, so I signed it. I signed the agreement, but I loved the man, so I signed it.

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

When I finally caught him with another woman... (I later learned there had been many). I had the choice of putting up with his philandering, or I could leave empty-handed.

I chose to leave when I was still able to support myself — rather than having him dump me in my old age. I got exactly what the prenuptial agreement stated — except that due to inflation, my pittance of alimony barely pays for my birdseed.

My advice to any woman who is asked to sign a prenuptial agreement is to run as fast as she can from the stingy bum.

Women, everywhere, should refuse to sign them! A well-known divorce lawyer once said: "Prenuptial agreements serve only to deny a woman the rights she has under the law, to support accumulated during her marriage. I have never seen a marriage work that required a prenuptial agreement."

— SCREWED IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR SCREWED: Whatever happened to "equal rights"? Prenuptial agreements can benefit (and/or protect) women as well as men. But each party should retain his or her own attorney.

DEAR ABBY: Recently a friend and business associate talked me into buying a $200 health food weight-loss package that we were to divide equally, each paying $100. I really had no need for this package, but she talked me into it. I made the purchase and sent her half the contents. (She lives in another town.)

When I received no check from her for her half, I telephoned her to find out if she received the package. She said she had, but decided not to use any of the vitamins or anything else in the package.

A month went by and she did not return the package to me. What should I do? If I weren't associated with her in business, I might hand it differently, but I'm afraid to rock the boat. Now what?

— HOLDING THE BAG

DEAR HOLDING: Write this loss off as tuition in the school of experience. And for the future, do not allow yourself to be so easily "talked into" anything.

DEAR ABBY: I work in an office consisting mostly of women. Yesterday, the question arose of whether or not panties should be worn with pantsuits.

There are 10 women in the office; five said yes, five said no. Should we or shouldn't we?

SECRET TERRY

DEAR SECRET TERRY: Panties come with "built-in" pantlines, and are customarily laundered after each wearing, so panties with pantyhose are, in my opinion, redundant and non-essential. Ladies?

Forecast gauge points down

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said Tuesday its chief economic forecasting gauge fell for a third consecutive month in December, the traditional, but not infallible, signal of an impending recession.

While some economists said the three downturns were indeed foreshadowing an end to the record five-year peacetime expansion, other analysts disagreed, contending that 1988 will feature slower growth but no outright downturn.

The Commerce Department's Index of Leading Economic Indicators has taken on added significance since the record 508-point decline in stock prices which occurred on Oct. 19.

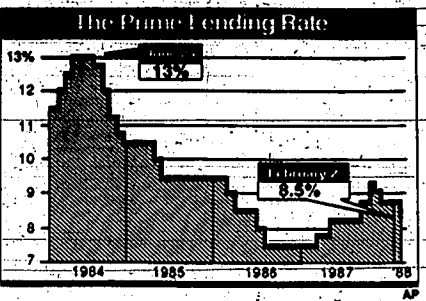

The 0.2 percent December decline in the index followed a sharp 1.2 percent November drop, which had been the biggest setback in more than six years, after a smaller 0.1 percent decline in October.

Since the leading index was created in 1948, it has fallen for three consecutive months a total of 12 times. In eight of those instances, a recession followed. The other four times economic growth slowed but there was no recession.

The last time the index declined three months in a row was from June through August in 1984. No recession followed, although the economy entered a two-year period in which growth slowed as a soaring trade deficit robbed American manufacturers of sales.

Some economists insisted that the leading index was signaling an actual recession, which, they said, had been triggered by a loss of consumer confidence after the collapse of stock market prices.

"The question now is not whether we are in a recession, but how long and how deep it will be," said Irwin Katcher, chief economist of Manufac-ture's Hanover Trust.

Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm, said he also believed the recession; he began, noting a second economic report Tuesday which showed that sales of new homes fell in December for the second consecutive month. The housing industry is the first of the first sectors to show weakness in an economic downturn.

The Commerce Department report said that home sales fell 6.2 percent in December, the biggest setback in seven months, with the weakness concentrated in the Northeast.

The Reagan administration, however, downplayed the significance of the leading index. Beryl Sprinkel, the president's chief economic adviser, told reporters that the administration had no intention of changing its forecast of continued economic growth in 1988.

"We are very pleased with our 2.4 percent rate of growth in the gross national product—and we plan to stick with it," he said.

The 2.4 percent GNP forecast is the most pessimistic administration outlook since 1981, but it is still above the consensus forecast of many private analysts.

"Even economists not calling for an outright recession are saying the GNP could well decline for the first three months of a year as businesses work off a huge buildup of unsold goods.

A traditional recession is defined as at least two consecutive quarters of declining GNP.

Lyle Gramley, chief economist of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, noted that two of the three declines in the leading index were very small and could well be revised upward to show increases in coming months when new data is available.

"I think the economy will experience some slowdown in growth, but we will stop well short of a recession," he said.

Economists forecasting that the recovery from the 1981-82 recession will continue this year are basing much of their optimism on a belief that continued strong gains in U.S. export sales will offset an expected slowdown in consumer spending.

They are also counting on the Federal Reserve to pursue a loose monetary policy in a presidential election year, which will push interest rates lower.

Several major banks on Tuesday cut their prime lending rate a quarter percentage point to 8.5 percent, reflecting recent overall declines in interest rates. The cuts were the first in this key lending rate since early November and pushed the prime to its lowest level since July 1986.

The 0.2 percent December setback in the leading index resulted from weakness in five of the nine available business statistics.

The biggest negative factor was a drop in building permits, followed by a drop in raw materials prices, which occurred because of a smaller increase in lumber costs. In the leading index, rising inflation is treated as a positive sign of increased demand.

Other negative forces were an increase in initial claims for unemployment benefits, which have been rising sharply in recent weeks, a further decline in stock prices and a drop in the length of the manufacturing workweek.

Four indicators were positive forces. The biggest source of strength came from a rise in plant and equipment orders followed by a slowdown in automobile deliveries times, indicating increased demand, and increases in manufacturers' orders for consumer goods and in the money supply.

The various changes left the index at 190.7 percent of its 1967 base of 100.

Lower rates spur modest advance by stocks

NEW YORK (AP) — Fresh declines in interest rates, including a prime rate reduction by some of the nation's biggest banks, helped the stock market post a modest advance Tuesday despite evidence of new signs of economic weakness.

Some analysts said investors' concern that the economy could be headed into a recession that would erode corporate profits restrained what might otherwise have been a more enthusiastic response to the latest rate reductions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 individual stocks fell 13.69 on Monday, finished up 8.29 at 1,962.92.

But the market's best-known index had traded below Monday's close for most of the day, down from a mid-morning low before it pushed into positive territory in the last two hours of the session.

Advancing issues outpaced decliners by a margin of about 8-7 among issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange, with 868 up, 673 down and 469 unchanged. The NYSE composite index rose 0.28 to 143.61.

Big Board volume slowed to 164.92 million shares from 210.66 million shares on Monday.

Before the market opened, the government reported its chief economic forecasting gauge fell in December for the third straight month.

Some analysts say the three consecutive declines in the leading index may signal a recession or an impending slowdown in economic growth that could dim the outlook for corporate profits.

But others say a slowdown could pave the way for lower interest rates, making returns on stocks more competitive with those on bonds.

Traders got a taste of those lower rates as bond prices rallied through the day, sending yields on some long-term government bonds down as much as a tenth of a percentage point to 8.3 percent.

In addition, several major banks across the country lowered their prime-lending rates by 1/4 to 1/2 a percentage point since last September.

Federated Department Stores led the NYSE's most active list, falling 2 1/4 to 51 1/4. The Canadian firm Campeau Corp. has offered $47 a share for Federated.

International Business Machines fell 1/4 to 109 1/4. Several other technology stocks were lower, as Hewlett-Packard fell 1 3/4 to 64 1/4, Honeywell dropped 1/2 to 62 1/4, and Digital Equipment fell 2 to 120.

First Boston fell 1 1/4 to 24 1/4. The leaders of the investment banking department resigned to form their own firm, citing policy disputes over a companywide shakeup announced last month.

Manhattan Industries was the biggest percentage gainer on the NYSE, rising $6 to $17 1/4, a 52 percent price gain. It is the target of a $16-a-share takeover bid.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 192.64 million shares.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market rose $7.06 billion, or 0.28 percent, in value to $2.613 trillion.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrial stocks rose 7/8 to 291.85, and S&P's 600-stock composite index was up 5/8 at 255.87.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 0.41 to 270.14. The NYSEDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 547.19, up 0.59.
