Senate votes to set driving age up to 16

The Associated Press

BOISE — Legislation increasing the minimum state driving age from 14 to 16 and mandating driver's education before anyone under 16 can obtain a license has cleared the Idaho Senate.

On a 31-11 vote Monday, the Senate sent the measure to the House for final action. If approved, the bill would end Idaho's status as one of only three states allowing relatively unrestricted driving privileges at age 14. The others are North Dakota and South Dakota.

"There are a lot of irresponsible people at age 14 and 15," said Sen. Jerry Hanson, R-Boise. "There is no question that people are being killed by young people behind the wheel of a car."

The bill sponsored by Sen. Rod Beck, R-Boise, would allow 14- and 15-year-olds to obtain licenses but only upon certification that driving privileges are necessary for agricultural work or to relieve a hardship. They would still be required to take approved driver's education courses. Currently 14- and 15-year-olds can be licensed for general driving during daylight hours.

Supporters of the bill, strongly backed by parents, school administrators and law enforcement officials, maintained that drivers under 16 make up only 1.6 percent of all drivers and drive only a tenth of the average motorist's mileage but are involved in over 3 percent of all injury accidents.

In addition, school officials predicted that if a driver's license was not allowed until 16, the rising high school dropout rate, now approaching 25 percent in Idaho, could be cut in half. They maintained that many teenagers who begin driving at 14 get cars by 16 and faced with the financial responsibilities of a car are often forced to quit school to keep the car up. Putting the process back two years would keep many of them in school, they contended.

Critics, however, argued that it was up to parents to decide whether their children were capable of driving at age 14, and they accused the Legislature of unnecessarily punishing an entire class of teenagers.

"Let's not penalize those who are responsible," Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Declo, said. "Let's penalize those who are irresponsible. Let's go after the

Dole, Bush both confident of success

The Associated Press

CONCORD, N.H. — Vice President George Bush forecast a win but Sen. Bob Dole also expressed optimism Monday as the GOP presidential field sprinted for the finish line in a tight New Hampshire primary race.

Democrat Michael Dukakis said his expected win might be smaller than predicted.

"I sense a rising tide," said Bush. The vice president threw all the resources he could muster into his bid to arrest Dole's week-long surge, campaigning side by side and in a hurriedly taped television commercial with Barry Goldwater, patron saint of conservatives.

"It feels good, it did in Iowa last Monday," countered Dole, hoping to ride to victory on the strength of the momentum spawned by last week's caucus win.

One candidate after another posted hopeful predictions of a surprise when New Hampshire action ends their verdict in the nation's lead-off primary on Tuesday.

"I don't know where all those political pundits are today but they ran for cover four years ago and

Robertson stands by claim of Soviet missiles in Cuba

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Pat Robertson said Monday he wouldn't "back off" his assertion that there are Soviet missiles in Cuba, drawing an emphatic denial from the White House and skepticism from a main identified as his source.

Campaign rivals blasted the assertion, as "outrageous" and "rash."

Robertson told a GOP candidate's forum in Dover, N.H., that "the least we can do in this is get those nuclear weapons out of Cuba," a repetition of statements he had made Sunday during a debate.

But later in the day, the former they're likely to run for cover tomorrow," said former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont, back in the pack in the GOP race.

Rep. Jack Kemp, his GOP canditelevision evangelist said he had been asking a question, not making an assertion, when he made the controversial comment.

"I was asking in the debate is this true," he said. "I have no sources other than what I've said, so there was no categorical statement per se."

On Monday in California, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said SS-4 and SS-5 missile sites established in Cuba in 1962 "were confirmed as having been destroyed in that year. We also are confident that the missiles were removed from Cuba at that time."

"We have had extensive intelligence collection directed at Cuba they on the line, held out the hope of a second-place finish that would confound the pollsters. "I'm going to finish in a good competitive third or higher," he said.

Democrat Sen. Paul Simon, also facing tough times if he falters, said he was sure he'd defeat Rep. Richard Gephardt for second place. Referring to Dukakis' commanding lead in the polls, he said, "I think there is a possibility of a real surprise coming tomorrow."

Fellow Democrat Bruce Babbitt, far off the pace in the polls, said, "I'm anticipating a strong showing and a surprise but I can't put a number on it."

Democrat Dukakis' lead seemed secure to judge by the polls, but he and his aides worried that they would be held to an impossible standard when the New Hampshire results are analyzed. Thus, he noted that his rivals have been attacking him regularly, adding, "I assume that's going to take its toll."

Dukakis, governor in next-door Massachusetts, held a commanding lead among the Democrats with support of roughly 40 percent of the voters. Gephardt and Simon, who finished a close one-two in Iowa's caucuses last week, are in a duel for second place. Jesse Jackson, Babbitt, Gary Hart and Sen. Albert Gore Jr. are far behind in the polls.

Japanese find new superconductor

The Associated Press

BOSTON — A new superconductor that operates at higher temperatures and may be easier to adapt to practical applications has been discovered by a research team in Japan, scientists said Monday.

The superconductor is not merely a refinement of either of the two known high-temperature superconductors, but an entirely new compound that in some respects may exceed the performance of the others, said a panel of scientists at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The new material — a mixture of bismuth, strontium, calcium, copper and oxygen — raises the temperature at which superconductivity occurs to about 243 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, a jump of more than 50 degrees above levels attained with previous superconductors.

Scattered reports have appeared during the past year of superconductivity occurring at room temperature, but these observations have not been confirmed and are not widely accepted.

In contrast, the properties of the new material were confirmed within days after its discovery was disclosed on Jan. 22 in a newspaper in Japan, the researchers said.

"I personally am quite happy we have found a third one," said K. Alex Mueller of IBM in Zurich. He won a Nobel Prize last fall for his discovery in January 1986 of the first of the new high-temperature superconductors.

Mueller's superconductor was made of lanthanum, strontium, copper and oxygen. "Superconductors carry electricity with no resistance and therefore no wasteful dissipation

White House sticks to goal of better relations with USSR

By HENRY GOTTLEB

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration's policy of keeping military and espionage blow-ups with the Soviet Union from blowing a drive for better overall relations is back in operation following the collision of U.S. and Soviet warships in the Black Sea.

The United States complained about Soviet actions in last Friday's incident by summoning Soviet ambassador Yuri Dubinin to a 20-minute protest meeting with the State Department's third-ranking official. The department issued a public condemnation.

Yet Secretary of State George P. Shultz has no plan to dwell on the incident when he goes to Moscow next week to discuss arms control, regional issues like Afghanistan and the superpower summit envisioned for the spring, according to an aide who spoke on condition of anonymity.

How much damage will the Black Sea incident do to the broad range of U.S.-Soviet relations? "Not much," the aide said. Indeed, the State Department's on-the-record reaction to what Navy officers called the deliberate and dangerous Soviet bumping of American warships operating innocently in the Black Sea included comments that conveyed more exasperation than outrage.

"As Secretary of State Shultz said just a week ago, we are prepared to deal with the best and worst of Soviet behavior," said spokesman Rudolph Boone.

It is, after all, "a competitive relationship," Boone said.

The statement reflected the administration policy, since the rise of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in 1985, of keeping dialogue and bitter bilateral disputes from poisoning efforts to elicit from Moscow a better human rights record, arms control compromise and a withdrawal of troops from Afghanistan.

Over the past three years, whether the issue has been alleged Soviet spying, the jailing of U.S. journalist Nicholas Daniloff, or attacks on American military observers in East Germany, the Reagan administration has complained — taken retaliatory action in some cases — and then gone back to the bargaining table.

"The most serious bilateral blow-up in recent years — and the one that came closest to upsetting overall relations — was the Daniloff case. The U.S. News & World Report Moscow correspondent was arrested in August 1986 on espionage

Most candidates in New Hampshire struggling to stay alive

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Most of the presidential candidates in today's New Hampshire primary were struggling not just to win, but to avoid losing so badly that it could virtually eliminate them from the race.

Democrat Bruce Babbitt, who finished a dismal fifth in the caucus, managed a joke about the precarious existence of his campaign.

Bruce Babbitt frankly did not start out as a household name, and some would say he'll end this race as not a household name, the former Arizona governor said at one stop Sunday night.

But for most of his rivals and for those at the back of the GOP pack, the prospect that the nation's first primary could also be their last was no joking matter.

Nearly to a man they were vowing to press on no matter what, but facing the prospect that a resounding defeat in New Hampshire might force them to abandon their White House ambitions in the snow, just as Alexander Haig did on Friday.

George Bush, the acknowledged front-runner here until a third-place Iowa finish threw a wrench into the gears of his campaign machinery, has the money and resolve to continue even should he sustain a second loss to Bob Dole.

But a primary defeat here would evolve the memory of Walter Mondale's loss in the Democratic primary four years ago — an outcome that ensured a long, brutal struggle to the convention and a nomination that proved worthless.

Democrats Jesse Jackson and Al Gore Jr. campaigned knowing they had a ticket to Super Tuesday, the next major campaign, three weeks hence across the South. Republican Pat Robertson is sure to go on, too.

But there's no such assurance for Democrat Gary Hart, Paul Simon, Richard Gephardt and Babbitt, who need badly to beat somebody. Gephardt, a winner in Iowa, seemed to need a second place finish here to sustain a candidacy badly in debt — and Simon needed the same. Michael Dukakis, governor of neighboring Massachusetts, needed not only to win, but by a respectable margin.

Republicans Jack Kemp and Pat Du Pont needed to beat each other. Babbitt told a crowd at a Jewish temple in Manchester Sunday night, "New Hampshire this Tuesday has within its grasp the power of life and death over my candidacy."

"There are people who tell you my candidacy is over. They're the same people who tell you your vote doesn't matter," said Babbitt, who fielded questions for more than an hour and even then seemed reluctant to go.

"I'm willing to stay here till the sunrise, whether it comes at the usual time or Pat Robertson makes it a little earlier," he joked.

What kind of finish would it take to allow Babbitt to stay in the race? "We're looking for a reason to hang on," Babbitt spokesman Mike McCurry said over the weekend. "Babbitt's campaign has put up some of its computers for sale back home in Phoenix."

Protesting students win support, revise some of their demands

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Minority students occupying a University of Massachusetts building for a fourth day to protest campus racism won the support of some white students and faculty Monday and revised their demands.

The more than 100 students who took over New Africa House on Friday were to meet with UMass Chancellor Joseph Duffey on Monday to discuss their concerns, but the session was cancelled because Duffey left campus to visit a brother who was ill.

After becoming aware of the illness, the protesters sent Duffey a sympathetic card signed by more than 200 students. Duffey responded by sending the protesters a fruit basket and a card that read: "I send affection and respect." University spokesmen refused to disclose details of the illness.

Classes scheduled for New Africa House today will be moved to other buildings because the university does not plan to evict the students and because several faculty members refused to teach there during the protest, university spokesman James Langley said.

"We're doing this because we don't want to escalate tensions," Langley said. The takeover was sparked by the alleged beating last weekend of two black students by six whites after a dormitory party.

Frank Tripoli, a member of a group of graduate students organizing a movement to have white students and faculty wear black arm bands as a symbol of support for the protest, said he hopes more whites on campus would join the effort.

"It's a symbolic gesture, but the racism on campus has gone on for too long and is far too prevalent," Tripoli said. "It's time to begin putting an end to it."

Trial starts for engineer in train crash

TOWSON, Md. (AP) — Trial opens today for a former Conrail engineer accused of 16 counts of manslaughter by locomotive in Amtrak's worst fatal crash, a January 1987 accident that killed 16 people and injured more than 170.

Rick L. Gates was operating three linked Conrail locomotives that prosecutors say ran a stop signal in Chase, Md., on Jan. 4, 1987, and ended up in front of an Amtrak passenger train that was traveling about 120 mph.

Federal investigators say Gates, 33, failed to notice the stop signals, because of drug and possibly alcohol use. Gates has denied smoking marijuana while operating the train.

Testimony likely will focus on drug use, warning whistles and lights in the cab, and a series of approach signals to the switch where four tracks converge to two at the Gunpowder River railroad bridge crossing.

Jury selection is scheduled to begin Tuesday in Baltimore County Circuit Court for Gates' trial on 16 counts of manslaughter. Each count carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $1,000 fine.

A county grand jury's indictment accuses Gates, of Essex, Md., of "gross negligence" in the operation of the locomotives.

Gates' charges fall under the same law normally used against people accused of negligence in automobile accidents. Prosecutors have said this is the first time the manslaughter by locomotive statute has been used in Maryland.

Gates, who worked for Conrail for 14 years, has said signals indicated he should slow down and proceed through the switch.

School boards from many states look for help in teaching on AIDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — If there's anything local school boards usually don't like, it's orders from above. But many are finding they need strong state leadership to overcome community obstacles to teaching children about AIDS.

"This is a unique situation," said Katherine Fraser, co-director of the AIDS education project at the National Association of State Boards of Education.

"In a lot of instances, state requirements are resisted and are counterproductive," said Fraser. "But this is a case where many local boards are facing opposition in their communities and they're looking to the state for a requirement. They want to go back to the community and say, 'Look, this is something we're required to do. Let's figure it out now.'"

Eighteen states require that schoolchildren be taught about the incurable disease, the school boards group found in a survey last December. Among those without specific AIDS education requirements are some states with high concentrations of AIDS cases, including California, New Jersey and Florida.

Fraser predicted a flurry of activity in many states in the next few months, not all of it constructive.

"There are states where legislators are putting bill after bill in front of the legislature, and some of them are not well considered," she said. "The people putting them forward are not really familiar with the facts. There's a great deal of confusion about what ought to be done."

One state, Alabama, has a mandatory statewide AIDS curriculum. But most educators and health professionals, including the national Centers for Disease Control, say the key to a successful program is broad community involvement.

"There's nothing wrong with saying there are the topics you have to cover. But getting into curriculum, that should be local," said Fraser. "If parents and the community don't support what the schools are teaching, the program won't work."

Pershing crews hit their targets

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — U.S. soldiers based in West Germany successfully launched six Pershing 2 battlefield missiles Monday during a training exercise.

Army spokesman Dave Harris said all the two-stage missiles hit their targets during a three-hour training period for soldiers of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Field Artillery.

Harris said about 80 members of the unit flew here from Europe for the launching.

There are 108 Pershing 2s in West Germany. All would be removed if the Senate ratifies the intermediate range nuclear force treaty signed in December by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Air Force F-15 jets pick up pilot

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Two Air Force F-15 Eagle jet fighters from King Salmon intercepted a Soviet short-range transport plane 68 miles southwest of Cape Romanof, the Air Force said Monday.

Master Sgt. Jack Hokanson of the Alaskan Air Command said the F-15s intercepted the Soviet jet Oct. 2 at about 3:35 p.m. Sunday off Alaska's southwest coast and escorted the aircraft for about an hour.

So far this year, the command's jets have intercepted six Soviet planes in four separate incidents, Hokanson said.

President relaxes at mountain ranch

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan relaxed at his mountain ranch Monday, enjoying a second straight day of sunny, clear weather.

The president, who arrived here Saturday evening, had breakfast with his wife, Nancy, and then the two of them went horseback riding.

He planned to spend the day doing ranch chores and reviewing paperwork, according to a White House statement.

Reagan will return to Washington on Wednesday, the day before his administration submits its new budget to Congress.

Advantage in competition

Close your eyes for just a moment and behold a tree. OK you can open them now... The Times-News solution to the MVMRC/ MSTI controversy seems to be a kind of political compromise wherein you all get a MMVSR/TMIC. Sounds to me like the kind of word you might see in Ervand's...

a couple of blocks apart. They are competitors but they have a kind of "Catholic" mentality which says, "We can cooperate." We are both part of the wisdom in an age where too many of us would rather go get maled... I wouldn't wonder that if another hardware store opened its doors next to St. Vincent's, that all three would not go down-to-Dee-Dee's and share a cup of coffee...

Man can create MMVSR/TMIC's but only God can make a tree. He starts with a few nuts, which soon sprout into a seedling or two. Only later, after many wind storms and fallen branches, it becomes a tree... I wonder if doctors aren't better suited to that anyway, bearing in mind their continued releases into evacuated mushroom farms?

The stock market isn't jumping around for nothing. They tell me a bird never flies so high it doesn't have to come down to roost... I'm sorry to hear that all these people who are against abortion are ready to open their hearts and homes to the underprivileged, abused and homeless children on this earth...

I find it disheartening that MVMRC is not willing to admit that there is one field of treatment in which they do not hold expertise... I am a divorced mother with three small children. If, at any time, I would require continuing treatment, the trips to Boise could pose a problem, but I would not hesitate if that were the only way to receive treatment at MSTI...

Look at the human aspect I have been carefully following the recent developments surrounding the "so-called" battle over location and management of a Twin Falls cancer treatment center... What's what

PURRING OF CATS
Q. How come a cat can purr continually without stopping between breaths?
A. Two vocal cords. One purrs on the inhale, the other purrs on the exhale.

Emotions that show up on one side of your face aren't exactly the same emotions that show up on the other side. Or so says one authority. Test this. Find a mirror and get emotional. The left side is said to be cream nationwide is Sunday. That's serving it, not selling it.

FOOD
As for food, what kids say they like best is just talk. I suspect 1. Spaghetti. 2. Cookies. 3. Fruit. 4. Candy. 5. Steak. That's what they tell the pollsters they prefer. But that's not what they buy with their own money. At least, not spaghetti, fruit and steak. Fruit stands, steak houses and spaghetti restaurants, would go out of business if they had to rely on the teen traffic. But shops that sell burgers, french fries and colas might make it.
That word "Time" is not so easy to define, said I. "Why not?" replies a swift client. "Time is Nature's biggest day of the week for ice cream nationwide is Sunday. That's serving it, not selling it."

WRIGHT FLIGHT
Q. Before the Wright brothers flew their plane at Kitty Hawk, motorized gliders were flown in a nearby New England town and probably a couple of other places. So what made the Wright flight different?
A. The Wrights were the first to control their plane on all three axes - yaw, pitch and roll. Or so say the experts.
If you want your dog to stay in the room with you at The Ritz in Paris, you'll have to pony up the equivalent of another $82 a night.

Harrison predicts a Beatle reunion may never take place

LONDON (AP) — Relations among the three surviving Beatles have improved but Paul McCartney is "too moody" to allow any joint performances to take place, George Harrison said Monday.

"Our relationship is quite good but there's no reunion of any Beatles," he told reporters after returning from Los Angeles. "We have been having dinner together. We are friends now, the first time we have been this close for a long time. But it doesn't mean to say that we are going to make another group or anything."

Harrison has had hits recently in Britain and the United States. McCartney also has had a successful solo career. Ringo Starr's last album in 1985 was considered too on-hum for issue.

On his feelings towards McCartney, Harrison said: "I am more friendly with other musicians. This is a bit too moody for me. Any way there will never be a Beatles concert because there's only three of them left."

Sports, TV stars share for crippled girl

CHICAGO (AP) — Sports stars like Mike Ditka donated items for auction and the cast of a musical comedy waited tables at a fund-raising benefit for a 9-year-old girl who lost her lower legs after being locked in a freezing room.

The staff of a new pizza restaurant donated a set of Sunday's receipts to a fund to help pay medical expenses for Darwin Carlisle. She was found Jan. 17 trapped in an attic room of an abandoned house in Gary, Ind.

"We got an autographed basketball from Michael Jordan of the Chicago Bulls, a hockey stick from Troy Murray of the Chicago Blackhawks and an autographed T-shirt from wrestler Hulk Hogan," she said. "A number of the Chicago Bears gave autographed pictures — (coach) Mike Ditka, Jim McMahon, Mike Singletary and Walter Payton. We also got pictures from the Chicago Cubs and sets of tickets from the Chicago White Sox."

Local television personalities took turns waiting tables and were joined by the cast of a long-running revue, "Pump Boys and Dinettes."

Cher gives support for Bono's bid for mayor

PALM-SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Restaurateur-entertainer Sonny Bono faces stiff competition from seven other hopefuls in this resort town's upcoming mayor election, but he has the backing of his ex-wife, singer-actress Cher.

When Bono, who turns 53 Tuesday, announced his candidacy more than a year ago, some opponents called it a ploy to boost business at his Italian restaurant. When he filed candidacy papers earlier this month for the April 12 election, some said he lacked the experience to guide a city with an annual budget of $47 million.

But Cher, who rocketed to fame as half of the rock group Sonny and Cher in the mid-1960s and then co-hosted a hit television show with Bono in the 1970s, says he's got plenty of experience.

"When we were together, we must have generated $10 million dollars," said the star of the current hit film "Moonstruck." "I don't know very many idiots who can boast that."

The two split up 14 years ago but have remained friendly, recently appearing on the TV show "Late Night" with David Letterman, where they sang their signature song, "I've Got You, Babe."

Princess Caroline opens hospital wing

LONDON (AP) — Princess Caroline of Monaco opened a $6.1 million, state-of-the-art hospital wing bearing her name Monday at a hospital named for her mother.

The three-story extension to the 116-bed Princess Grace private hospital in west London contains some of the most up-to-date equipment in London.

"It's the first time anything's been named after me," Caroline said after unveiling a commemorative plaque.

Caroline became the hospital's patron after her mother, the former American actress Grace Kelly, died in a car crash in 1982.

Daniels requests air time for new songs

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Charlie Daniels is encouraging radio disc jockeys to give all artists a chance when deciding which records to play on the air.

"There's a lot of new music coming up that's very good," Daniels told participants in the 19th Country Radio Seminar over the weekend.

"Please listen to as many of them as you can. A record is not a cold piece of plastic. It's very much a piece of somebody's life," he said.

Daniels, a fiddler and guitarist, is best known for the hits "The Devil Went Down to Georgia" and "Long Hair Country Boy."

Queen Elizabeth cites Order of Merit holders

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II has appointed Nobel Prize winner Dr. Max Perutz and distinguished art historian Sir Ernst Gombrich to membership in the Order of Merit, Buckingham Palace announced Monday.

The honor is a personal gift of the queen and is limited to 24 holders, who can use the initials OM after their names.

Other members at present include violinist Sir Yehudi Menuhin, choreographer Sir Frederick Ashton and composer Sir Michael Tippett.

Perutz, 73, a molecular biologist who deciphered the structure of hemoglobin, was co-winner of the Nobel Prize in chemistry in 1962 for his pioneering research into biotechnology.

Gombrich, 78, is the author of "The Story Of Art," which has sold more than two million copies. He was Slade Professor of Fine Art at Oxford from 1950-53 and director of the Warburg Institute and professor of the History of the Classical Tradition at the University of London from 1959-76.

Doctors limited Biden's visitors to family members only, Ms. Wilson said. Biden and his wife, Jill, have three children.

Hospital spokesman Ben Smith said Sunday that the former senator had some leakage, but not a major rupture. An aneurysm, left untreated, could burst, shutting off the flow of blood to the brain.

Biden was admitted to the hospital early Friday after being transferred from St. Francis Hospital in Wilmington, Del., where he lives. He underwent eight hours of surgery, which did not involve removal of any brain tissue.

Pulitzer publishes bestseller, cleans her image

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Roxanne Pulitzer, whose version of life in exclusive Palm Beach hit The New York Times bestseller list this week, says she feels no bitterness towards her ex-husband five years after their tawdry, well-publicized divorce.

"This is my Valentine's day present," Ms. Pulitzer said of reaching No. 10 Sunday on the National nonfiction bestseller list with "The Pulitzer: The Scandal That Rocked Palm Beach — The Real Story."

The book, which on its first page calls Palm Beach a "Buffet Society Babylon," is full of gossip about the rich and famous, from Alfred Bloomingdale to Barbara Streisand.

There are also descriptions of her cocaine use and sexual fantasies and realities. She says that the first time she slept with publishing heir Herbert "Peter" Pulitzer, she fantasized about making love to O.J. Simpson, the former star running back for the Buffalo Bills football team.

Ms. Pulitzer, 36, is surprisingly favorable to Pulitzer.

"I married him because he was the sexiest, smartest, funniest, strongest, most intriguing and interesting man I had ever known," she says in the book. Yet when her first marriage, to an upstate New Yorker with a home in Palm Beach, broke up.

Jet turbine shatters, sets fire in brush

MIAMI (AP) — A turbine blade from an Eastern Airlines jet shattered on "takeoff" Monday and sparked a brush fire at the airport, but the plane returned safely and no one was injured, authorities said.

Flight 8 from Miami to New York was taking off from Miami International Airport about 7 a.m. when the incident occurred, said Jack Barker, regional spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration.

"Right after takeoff the pilot had a problem with the No. 2 engine and shut it off," Barker said. The engine blade came out, and landed on airport property, and some of them landed in a parking lot.

The jet, a twin-engine European-built widebody A-300 Airbus, continued safely on one engine, and the pilot returned to the airport 10 minutes later without incident, said Barker.

Meanwhile the hot pieces of the engine had ignited a small fire in a wooded area outside the airport, but no buildings were threatened and no one was injured.

The fragments ignited rubbish and tires in the lot, and four fire engines were still fighting the blaze four hours later, said Metro-Dade Fire Department dispatcher Joanne Davis.

Barker said the cause of the turbine failure is under investigation, and said there have been only rare problems with "A-300" engines previously.

"It could be something sucked into the tube or it could be a turbine failure," he said.

ROXANNE PULITZER

Hits bestseller list

In an interview, she said she and Pulitzer, 56, no longer have any personal conversations. She says she once loved him and does not bear him any bitterness.

"Sadder but wiser, I've learned that the rules are different in Palm Beach, just as the rich are different. Both are more ruthless. My story is about that difference and my failure to appreciate it, whether out of foolishness, love, passion or all three," she says in the book.

At the 1982 divorce trial, Pulitzer and other witnesses testified about her cocaine use, affairs, occult experimentation and in general, "gross moral misconduct" in the words of Circuit Judge Carl Harper.

Harper awarded custody of their twin sons to her husband, Ms. Pulitzer, who has visitation rights, got to keep her Porsche, jewelry and some other items, and received $2,000 a month alimony for two years.

Stunned by the ruling and outraged by the portrayal of her as a sex-crazed, cocaine-addicted disciple of witchcraft, Ms. Pulitzer refused all interviews and book offers.

Her money-gone, she posed nude in "Playboy" in 1985, received more calls from publishers and changed her mind.

CAUCUS TURKEYS

According to Webster and his dictionary, a caucus is a meeting of a party or a group to decide on policies and candidates. Recently, it has become evident that turkeys can also hold meetings to choose turkey leaders or make plans to govern turkey voters. The difference between turkey voters and turkey leaders is that the leaders think they're sooo smart and they think the turkey voters are sooo dumb. For example, turkey leaders still think the voters are dumb enough to believe the federal deficit can be eliminated by raising taxes. For turkeys and turkey products you can really sink your teeth into... in hunger or frustration, shop Swensen's and save this week.

Nursing bill withdrawn by Darrington

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

BOISE — Nurses successfully lobbied legislators Friday, forcing Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Deer, to withdraw his nursing bill from the Senate floor.

Darrington said support was eroding for the measure, and he pulled the bill back to committee. "I knew this would be hard," he said Monday. "I said I wanted to get their attention and get the issue out on the table, and I did."

Darrington, chairman of the Senate Health and Education Committee, wanted to regulate the Idaho Nursing Board to give licensure exams to nurses with one and two-year degrees.

He objected to national efforts to require nursing students to have two or four-year college degrees. He said such efforts would cause hardships on community college programs and on nursing students.

But nurses testified at a committee hearing last week medical technology is rapidly changing, and nurses need to upgrade their education to keep pace.

Nurses also testified that the Board of Nursing had the professional expertise to oversee the nursing profession.

On Friday, members of the Idaho Nursing Association also lobbied senators, saying the measure was unnecessary.

Darrington said Monday the key issue was whether the Legislature should have oversight of administrative rule making.

At least one senator agreed with Darrington. Democratic Sen. Marti Calabretta, a social worker from Oshawa, said an issue as important as the entry-level nursing issue should have legislative oversight.

"I'm not personally against two-level licensing," she said Monday. "I think the Board of Nursing understands the questions we have about their next move. I think they're more aware they need a good base of support."

College of Southern Idaho President Jerry Meyerhoeffer, who supported Darrington's measure, had little reaction Monday.

Meyerhoeffer said earlier he feared changes would negatively affect students and the cost of health care, although he said changes would not eliminate CBI's nursing program.

ACLU conducts probe of 2 Idaho jails

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The American Civil Liberties Union is investigating two jails in Idaho and will probably file a lawsuit against one, according to an ACLU official who said the state has an unbearably high number of complaints over jail conditions.

"We're tired of receiving complaints concerning gross violations of the law with respect to jail conditions," said Stephen Pevar, Mountain States Regional counsel for the ACLU. "I am actively seeking a case to file against a jail."

Pevar said he's investigating two jails in Idaho, one in northern Idaho and one in eastern Idaho.

He wouldn't specify which jail he is investigating.

In Twin Falls, a lawsuit against the county's jail led to an agreement by the county to reduce its inmate population, make improvements in the existing jail on the third floor of its courthouse and ask county voters to approve a bond issue for a new jail. The bond issue passed last year.

Even though the lawsuits probably won't be filed in the Magic Valley, court cases often set the standards other counties must follow for their jails.

"I think that you always look at the most recent case law," said Judy Felton, Twin Falls County Commission chairman. "Another thing people need to remember is that any prisoner can complain and sometimes there's not really much basis to the complaint."

Pevar said the complaints he's receiving aren't centered in any specific region of the state.

When asked how the number of jail complaints in Idaho stacks up to the rest of the Mountain States region of the ACLU, Pevar said it was "one of the tops."

The ACLU's mountain states region ranges from North Dakota south to New Mexico and as far west as Nevada and Idaho.

statewide jail conditions.

The association specifically cited ACLU's lawsuits in its support for the legislation.

"I've heard complaints similar to those that prompted our actions in Wyoming coming from Idaho," Pevar said. "But right now we have a plan to target it, but we'll definitely take at least one jail case."

Pevar said examples of the gross violations include censorship of attorneys-client mail; severe overcrowding; bad ventilation, lighting and heating; lack of medical care and inadequate diet; no exercise facilities; lack of access to the courts, meaning no law libraries; and inadequate fire protection.

Canal companies oppose power plan

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls and North Side Canal companies have mailed petitions to stockholders protesting a federal report critical of a power project planned by the two companies, said Jack Eakin of Twin Falls canal.

Eakin said he didn't know how many signatures stockholders had penned but all the Twin Falls directors are soliciting signatures.

The petition says that a Federal Energy Regulatory Commission staff recommendation on where to locate the project would make it unfeasible. FERC would have to license the project.

Eakin expects to get the petitions back March 1 and the canal companies will decide where they will send their protest. It could be to the state's congressional delegation, he said.

The canal companies want to use the revenue from the proposed Milner Dam power project to help finance $10 million in repairs at Milner Dam.

If the dam reconstruction cannot be financed from power revenues, then it would mean an increase in annual water cost of $4 per share per year for 10 years, according to an explanation sent to shareholders.

FERC wants to have the power project located in the dam instead of approximately 1.8 miles downstream, as the canal companies want.

The FERC staff says the downstream location would hurt whitewater boating below the dam while the canal companies say the upstream location would mean less hydraulic head to spin its power turbines.

The canal companies say there are only 200 visitor days per year of whitewater use between Milner Dam and 1.8 miles downstream.

Rob Pettygrove of Hansen, a spokesman for local whitewater boaters, could not be reached for comment.

Plane search delayed by strong gusty winds

The Associated Press

COOKE CITY, Mont. — Poor weather grounded search efforts today for a single-engine plane missing north of here for more than a week, and the Montana Aeronautics Division has decided to cut back on future efforts.

"We're going to have to scale this back now until conditions are better," Fred Hasekamp of the division said Monday. "We feel that we have covered the search area as best as can be done."

He added that officials believe if the plane could have been spotted, it would have been found by now.

Heavy snows in the Granite Peak area just north of the Montana-Wyoming divide have covered the plane and thwarted early search efforts. Strong winds prevented planes from searching today, he said.

Billwitzer County Sheriff Greg Noose said Sunday that the complete lack of signs or signals has convinced him that if the plane went down in the area, there were no survivors.

He said the organized ground search by two teams from the Sawtooth Mountain Basin of Billings won't continue, although a private team began on Sunday what it said would be a week-long climb on 12,799-foot-high Granite Peak and is carrying radio equipment in case members spot anything. "We don't have really any where else to search," Noose said. "I'm certain no one is alive in that area. We've had teams in there for three days, and I feel it would be futile to continue under the conditions they've faced."

The missing Cessna 172 last was seen on radar near Granite Peak after taking off from Billings the afternoon of Feb. 7 from Twin Falls, Idaho.

Idaho authorities have identified the three men on board as Bill Crafton, 36, Ron Jones, 34, and Randy Mittelstaedt, 33, all of Buhl, Idaho. Mittelstaedt was listed as the pilot.

Members of one of the Billings search teams came out of the night on Sunday, while members of the second team encountered heavy snow cover and high winds and had to take shelter, Noose said.

He said members of that second team may have to spend the night on the trail, although he said they are well-prepared and in no danger.

The base camp for the search efforts was a house on Mystic Lake, about 11 miles from Granite Peak.

Farmers instructed over fertilizer uses

By MARTA CLEAVELAND
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Many farmers are unwittingly reducing their profits on their hay crop by spending money applying unnecessary fertilizers. In fact some mineral additives are actually cutting alfalfa yields rather than increasing them or simply having no effect at all, said Raymond Gavlik, a soil specialist with the University of Idaho.

"Some people add nitrogen to the soil even though alfalfa fixes nitrogen. I question that practice," he said to a group of hay growers at a recent forage school sponsored by the University of Idaho Agriculture Extension Service.

"Some people add nitrogen to the soil already, the plant no longer has to fix it itself. The plant responds to the nitrogen increase by producing fewer nodules and reducing the size of the nodules it does produce. Inoculating the seed is the best thing to do, he said.

"Don't add nitrogen. It's not necessary," Gavlik said. Soil testing is one of the most important things a hay grower can do

Alfalfa affects milk quality

By MARTA CLEAVELAND
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — The single greatest factor affecting milk production levels in southern Idaho is the maturity stage of the alfalfa hay, said Dean Falk of the University of Idaho.

Alfalfa is a major source of ruffage in virtually every dairy ration in southern Idaho. The quality of the alfalfa affects milk production levels—and feed costs. And alfalfa quality is largely determined by its stage of maturity at harvest, Falk said at a recent forage seminar in Shoshone.

Feed is the single largest expense in milk production, and alfalfa makes up 48 percent of the feed cost.

to ensure the success of his crop because "soil is your best resource," he said.

A representative soil sample should be taken and analyzed. The two major minerals needed for alfalfa production are phosphorus and nitrogen. Potassium and sulphur are also important and so are a number of trace minerals.

"Phosphorus is essential. It's available to be affected by the soil P level. Little of it is available at any given time.

Potassium, which is also important, is found in most primary minerals and is abundant in most rock found in Idaho, Gavlik said.

"We usually have a sufficient potassium level for forage production in southern Idaho," he said. The heaviest users of the mineral are alfalfa and potatoes.

If the soil has more than 150 parts per million of potassium, the farmer usually has to add none anymore. And most soils in Idaho have at least 150 ppm, Gavlik said.

Sulphur is also important, but the water coming out of the Snake River has high levels of it, so none need be added to the soil.

No deficiencies in micronutrients have been observed in southern Idaho, he said.

"It's simply not a problem." Farmers who have added micronutrients have seen no response for their efforts and expense.

Help may be on way to levy-less counties

BOISE (AP) — Help may be on the way for six Idaho counties caught with no property tax to pay for highway work when a tax freeze was imposed 10 years ago.

The six counties had no road levy in 1978, when Idaho voters approved a property tax limit. Sen. Rep. James Stoicheff, D-Grandpoint, said that since then, the counties have not been able to impose property taxes for road work.

The six counties are Bonner, Shoshone, Valley, Boise, Adams and Custer. Stoicheff said the change also would involve eight highway districts, seven in Idaho County and one in Shoshone County.

The House Revenue and Taxation Committee on Monday voted to send the bill to the House floor for amendment to cut the amount of tax authority in half.

The counties in 1978 were using income from forest accounts on other funds to pay for road work, Stoicheff said, and as a result, have not been able to levy taxes because of the freeze.

"We caught them (in the tax freeze) and I think we ought to let them loose," said Rep. Don Loveland, R-Boise.

As part of the 1978 tax action, the Legislature has kept a 5 percent limit on property tax increases. Rep. Robert Fry, R-Horsehoe Bend, said that has crippled local government.

Rep. Stan Hawkins, R-Ucon, was the only committee member voting against the bill. He contended the counties involved could use reserves or other funds if necessary.

If the bill is amended as intended, Stoicheff said it would allow a tax of 71 cents per $1,000 of taxable property value.

Andrus presses GOP legislators harder

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus has stepped up his pressure on the Republican majority of the Idaho Legislature, saying the GOP is trying to let election-year politics get in the way of proper funding of education.

"Don't shoot at me and hit a bunch of little kids," Andrus told a Democratic Party gathering here Monday afternoon.

"Some folks in the Legislature seem to have as their main concern whether a Democrat governor wins or loses," Andrus said, with some Republicans against a key tax proposal simply because a Democratic governor sponsored it. "Frankly, I don't care who takes the credit," he said.

Andrus said legislative candidates in 1988 were caught on promises to improve education. Last year, he did that, he said, but this year seem to have forgotten their campaign promises.

He said he expects to get shot at from time to time, which is part of politics.

"The problem is that when they shoot at a political person, they end up hitting our school kids, or our children who need a little extra help to get off to a good start, or they hit our school teachers or state employees," he said.

"That's not right, that's not fair, that's not what government is all about," he said.

As he has done in recent weeks, Andrus called for repeal of Idaho's investment tax credit. That would make another $16 million in state tax revenue available for the next budget.

"It comes down to my belief that the $16 million is much better spent on children in a classroom, and on higher education, than on enhancing the bottom line of a couple of dozen of the biggest, wealthiest corporations," the governor said.

"I keep saying that education is critical to economic development and the business community is willing to do its share," he said. "Yet, the majority leadership says it can't be done."

House shoots down hunter orange requirement but may reconsider

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho House has rejected a bill requiring deer and elk hunters to wear hunter orange while in the field, a measure which sponsors said could cut the number of people accidentally killed by hunters for years.

After an hour's debate Monday, the House voted 48-40 against the bill. But Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, later won a 56-27 vote to reconsider, and she said she planned "dramatic and substantial changes in an effort to save the legislation."

She said she would attempt to amend the bill to make violations infractions, not criminal misdemeanors. It was that provision that was mentioned by several legislators who urged defeat of the bill.

"If you want to vote to save some lives, support this bill," said sponsor Rep. Golden Linford, R-Rexburg.

Opponents argued that good hunters will wear protective colors anyway, and it is wrong to impose a mandatory dress code on everyone.

Others said they disliked the bill because violations would be a misdemeanor. That carries a maximum fine of $300 and up to six months in jail.

"It's a worthy goal to reduce needless slaughter," said Rep. Robert Fry, R-Horsehoe Bend. "But this bill is ill-advised and might run against the goals of its sponsor."

Fry said most recent Idaho hunting fatalities have occurred when the shooter was within 50 yards of the victim. "If they can't distinguish between a man and an animal at 50 yards, the person has no business hunting," he said.

"Most accidents are caused by carelessness, by people who do not carefully handle firearms," Fry said.

Rep. Francois Field, R-Grand View, read a letter from Nancy Carlisle, who has worked for an Idaho hunter orange law since her son, Lewiston police officer Richard Carlisle, was fatally wounded by another hunter.

"If it saves one life, it's worth it," said Rep. Ray Stene, R-Boise.

In response to a question from

Rep. Carl Braun, D-Orofino, Linford said tests indicate deer and elk cannot distinguish colors.

"We should be working the other way," said Rep. Claud Judd, D-Orofino. "It should be a murder charge. Now, hunting deaths are called an accident and that's it."

He said the prospect of a murder charge "might make hunters a little more certain what they're shooting at."

"Research overwhelmingly supports what we are doing here today is a rational and logical way to go," said Rep. L. Ed Brown, R-Pocatello.

Committee passes budget decision to Board of Education

BOISE (AP) — After two hours of discussion, the state Board of Education's Finance Committee decided to let the full board decide what to do with a controversial plan to adjust the base budgets of Boise State University and Lewis-Clark State College.

It passed on without recommendation Monday the plan to add about $1.03 million to Boise State's funding base and $264,000 to Lewis-Clark's, but to make no changes in the budgets of the University of Idaho and Idaho State University.

A proposal submitted by the board's staff last month would have reduced the U of I's funding base by more than $1.3 million and Idaho State's by almost $24,000. It also would have increased Boise State's base by about $1.06 million and Lewis-Clark's by about $275,000.

The revised proposal was developed following meetings between the board's staff and the schools' financial vice presidents last Thursday, when additional items that might have led to past budget inequities were discussed.

The full board was expected to act on the new plan Tuesday afternoon. The effort to resolve "base deficiencies" in the schools' budgets aims at leveling the playing field before a new base-plus allocation formula is implemented later this year.

That system would allocate funding to each institution — above the pre-set base and money needed to maintain current operations — based on budget requests submitted before the Legislature makes its higher-education appropriation. The base adjustments recommended in the staff proposal would be covered from any discretionary funding in the higher-education appropriation over the next two to three years. Finance Committee Chairman George Alvarez said.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans said some inequities in establishing a base for future allocations were inevitable, however the committee should do its best for now and make any further changes that seem necessary later during each year's budget request process.

"We have been struggling for years to take an inadequate appropriation and give each institution an adequate budget," Evans said. "No matter how we try, it just doesn't work."

But BSU President John Keiser and Lewis-Clark President Lee Vickers urged the committee to endorse the revised staff equity adjustment recommendation, saying the issue has been hanging over their heads for years and it is time it was resolved.

"We kind of look at it like chewing gum," Keiser said. "The flavor's gone. We're ready to swallow it or spit it out."

Citing per-student support for Boise State $2,500 lower than U of I, $2,100 below ISU and $900 below Lewis-Clark, he said the proposed adjustment "recognizes an inequity that we know exists by any cut of items with the plan."

But even though their schools would be spared outright reductions in funding base, U of I President Richard Gibb and ISU President

Richard Bowen found some problems with the plan. Specifically, Gibb objected to a provision that no more equity adjustments would be made, as well as what he said amounted to a redefinition of what qualifies as research for funding purposes. Ed Cisek, the board's chief financial analyst, disputed Gibb's contention that the current 54 percent of higher-education research funding the Moscow school now receives would be reduced under the plan.

Riot police, Arabs clash in Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (AP) — Police fought Palestinians in the holy city Monday and hospital officials said an Arab was wounded by gunfire. It was the first bloodshed reported in Jerusalem since riots in the occupied lands began Dec. 8.

In the West Bank town of Kfar Salim, 40 miles north of Jerusalem, military investigators questioned four young Arabs who say Israeli soldiers using a bulldozer buried them alive after a protest Feb. 5.

"I am afraid I thought I was going to die," Abdel Latif Mahmoud Jaitah, 19, said soon after he was questioned in a white police van. "I dream about it all the time."

Maj. Gen. Amrain Mizna, military commander in the West Bank, said a sergeant-major from the military government and two or three other soldiers were involved and would be tried.

He told army radio: "Even in my worst dreams, I would never imagine such a thing even though I constantly warn commanders to expect the most awful things that could happen when soldiers find themselves all of a sudden commanding and deciding the lives of citizens."

In another case, the newspaper Hadashot said three soldiers of the elite Golani brigade were given jail terms of at least 21 days each for violating orders against excessive use of force. The army said it had no information on the matter.

According to U.N. figures, 54 Arabs have been killed by Israelis since protests began in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel captured from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war. Most of the dead were shot by soldiers, and hundreds have been wounded.

Israeli radio said 21 arrests were made Monday in Jerusalem, which Israel has annexed, bringing to 437 the number of Arabs detained in the city since trouble began in December. It said the latest arrests include four activists who had been leaders in organizing protests.

Jerusalem police spokesman Rafi Levy said arrests were made in the Shufat refugee camp and Silwan village, both inside the city limits.

He said police fired tear gas and rubber bullets to disperse stone-throwing protesters in Anata, near Shufat. Levy said there were no reports of shooting, but a commander in charge of the scene told photographers rubber bullets and live ammunition were used.

Officials at Muknassad hospital said a 23-year-old Arab from Shufat was brought in with a gunshot wound in the abdomen. The Arab ran Palestine Press Service said he was shot during a clash in Shufat.

Palestinian deportees' ferry bombed

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A ferry being readied to carry Palestinian deportees on a PLO-sponsored protest voyage to Israel was damaged by an explosion Monday that was believed set off by a limpet mine.

A man claiming to speak for the Jewish Defense League said the U.S.-based extremist group was responsible for blasting the 6,151-ton Sol Phyrne at Limassol, its home port on Cyprus' southern coast.

A senior PLO official interviewed in Nicosia said: "It was an underwater blast caused by a mine that was stuck, probably by frogmen, onto the vessel. It was attached to a time fuse."

Asked what the Palestine Liberation Organization planned to do now, the official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said: "We are waiting for a decision by the command. We have to see if there is an alternative ship for the voyage."

"The JDL is responsible for the bombing at Limassol," said an anonymous caller. "This is only a warning. Next time we will bomb it with all the people on it."

He telephoned his statement to The Associated Press in Nicosia.

He said "no comment" when asked if the JDL also was behind the Sunday car-bombing that killed three PLO officials in Limassol.

The three — Mohammed Sultan, Mohammed Boheis and Marwan Kaywili — were involved in negotiations to charter the vessel for the voyage. Cypriot security sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The JDL advocates use of violence in the Arab-Israeli conflict. It was founded in the early 1960s by New York-born Meir Kahane, now a member of Israel's Parliament and head of extremist anti-Arab Kach Party.

There was no way to verify the caller's identity.

In Athens, Bassam Abu Sharif, the PLO's chief spokesman who has been overseeing preparations for the much-delayed voyage, insisted the "Ship-of-Return" will sail.

"We are continuing our plans and we will sail, in spite of Israeli terrorists who are using bombs against ideas, noble ideas," he said.

Found al-Bittar, the PLO diplomatic representative in Athens, said "the damage to the 40-year-old ferryboat is not very severe." He said a hole 2 1/2 inches wide was ripped in the hull.

In Algiers, a senior aide to PLO chief Yasser Arafat said the organization will get another craft for the voyage. Salah Khalaf, better known as Abu Iyad, also said "Zionist terrorism" disabled the Sol Phyrne.

The PLO had tried to launch the voyage from Greece, but it was repeatedly delayed, reportedly under Israeli pressure.

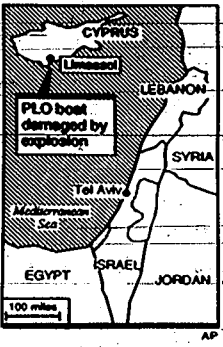

The 130 deportees plus hundreds of international supporters and journalists were taken in buses to Athens airport Monday, and were told they would be flown to Cyprus to board the boat.

After news of the blast reached Athens, most returned to their hotels.

Sol Phyrne's captain, Cleonthis Vlahopoulos, said his vessel would not be fit to sail for several months.

The planned voyage carries echoes of the 1947 trip of the Exodus, in which Jewish refugees from Nazi death camps were turned back by British forces as they tried to emigrate to Palestine.

The trip is designed to focus condemnation of Israel's policy of deporting Palestinians from the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, seized from Jordan and Egypt in 1967.

Soviets stage rally over Baltic affairs

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Soviet authorities staged an outdoor rally to protest alleged U.S. interference in Baltic affairs Monday, and officials cracked down on nationalists to prevent protests marking Lithuania's short-lived independence.

About 2,000 people gathered in a chill wind on Gediminas Square in central Vilnius for the official rally. Most kept their hands in their pockets and chatted with neighbors during the hour-long protest, and then quickly disappeared down the city's narrow streets.

Tuesday marks the 70th anniversary of Lithuania's declaration of independence on Feb. 16, 1918, only months after the Bolshevik revolution brought Communists to power in Russia.

Lithuania, along with the neighboring Baltic states of Estonia and Latvia, was absorbed by the Soviet Union in 1940 a year after the Ribbentrop-Molotov Pact between Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union consigned most of the country to the Soviet sphere of influence. About 80 percent of Lithuania's 3.

6 million people are of Lithuanian descent, the highest percentage of native population of any of the Baltic republics.

Authorities made it clear they wouldn't tolerate any show of nationalist sentiment Tuesday.

Lithuanian Foreign Minister Viadislav Mikulciuskas, asked by foreign journalists who traveled from Moscow on a trip sponsored by the Soviet Foreign Ministry if people could mark the independence day, said: "Personally, yes. But it is forbidden to organize anything."

His televised speech appeared certain to deepen divisions caused by the report of an international panel of historians last week. It questioned the president's moral integrity and said he was "in close proximity" to Nazi atrocities during World War II and did nothing to stop them.

On Monday, Waldheim claimed without giving specifics that "parts of the report do not correspond to the facts but are built on presumptions and hypotheses. For that

Waldheim rejects demands for his resignation

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — President Kurt Waldheim rejected the "slanders, hateful demonstrations and wholesale condemnations" of those who want him to resign, and urged the nation Monday to unite behind him.

His televised speech appeared certain to deepen divisions caused by the report of an international panel of historians last week. It questioned the president's moral integrity and said he was "in close proximity" to Nazi atrocities during World War II and did nothing to stop them.

On Monday, Waldheim claimed without giving specifics that "parts of the report do not correspond to the facts but are built on presumptions and hypotheses. For that reason, the conclusions drawn cannot be upheld."

Waldheim, 69, used highly emotional language in appeals both to World War II patriots and those too young to know "the horrors of his war."

He said he might have erred in not discussing his wartime past but said he never tried to conceal it. "I have a clear conscience," the former U.N. secretary-general told Austria's 7.5 million citizens.

In their 202-page report, the historians concluded that Waldheim tried to cover up his service as a German army lieutenant in the Balkans. The government appointed the panel at Waldheim's request in September, after the United States put him on a "watch list" of undesirable aliens.

Chancellor Franz Vranitzky said in a televised interview Sunday, which was praised even by conservative critics, that Waldheim "did not deal exactly with the truth" and must restore his credibility.

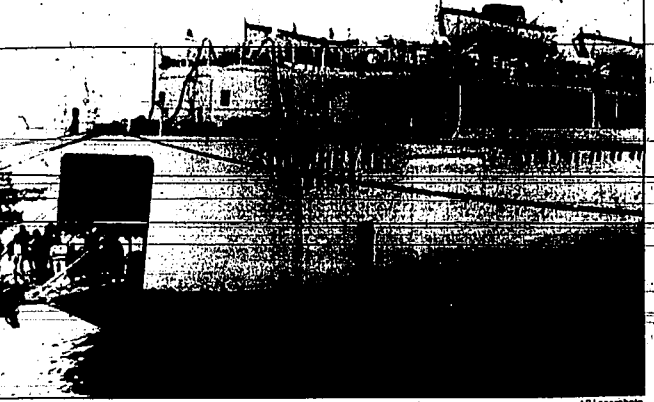

Vranitzky said he would consider resigning if the conflict, over Waldheim continued occupying time-the government should devote to other matters. The Socialist chancellor leads a coalition with the conservative People's Party, which supported Waldheim for election in 1986.

Socialist Party secretary Heinrich Keller said after the 14-minute speech Monday it was "a great disappointment" and means Waldheim "will continue to be an unbearable burden for our country."

A petition drive for Waldheim's resignation has obtained more than 2,000 signatures, including those of most leading intellectuals, according to an employee of the news magazine Profil. It printed the first 1,999 signatures on three pages Monday.

About 5,000 opponents of Waldheim demonstrated in downtown Vienna on Sunday, and about half marched to his office in the Hofburg palace, calling for his resignation.

The president has consistently denied wrongdoing since Austrian and U.S. media first disclosed his Balkans service in March 1986, during the presidential election campaign. As the controversy continued, he has refused all demands that he resign.

Iran, Iraq claim air strikes

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq said its air force attacked Iranian troops along the front Monday, while Iran claimed its warplanes blasted a petrochemical complex and military installations in southern Iraq.

Iraq also claimed its forces shot down an Iranian drone.

Reports by Iran and Iraq, which have been at war since September 1980, cannot be independently verified because they rarely allow access to combat zones.

The official Iraqi News Agency quoted a military communique as saying Iraqi jets flew 60 combat missions along the war front, "inflicting substantial losses in men, weaponry and equipment, then returned safely to base."

It said Iraqi helicopter gunships rocketed and strafed Iranian military posts in 39 sorties, destroying "many of the enemy's troop build-ups and positions." It gave no details.

The agency, monitored in Nicosia, reported that Iraqi anti-aircraft guns shot down two Iranian drones at different times Sunday night. One fell inside Iranian territory and another crashed in Iraq, according to the communique. It did not elaborate.

"Iran did not comment on the Iraqi claims. A communique issued in Tehran said the Iranian air force 'actively carried out reconnaissance flights over the Persian Gulf and the Sea of Oman Sunday to provide air cover for the navy and reconnoiter positions of foreign vessels in the waterway."

Soviets hope for better ties

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The deputy Soviet foreign minister expressed his nation's satisfaction with the "upward trend of bilateral relations" with Iran after discussions with Tehran officials, it was reported Monday.

The visit to Iran by Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir Petrovsky came one week after a trip by a Soviet envoy to Iran's enemy, Iraq.

Iranian Prime Minister Hussein Musavi said after meeting with Petrovsky on Sunday that high-ranking officials of both countries had decided to implement major joint economic projects, the official Iranian News Agency reported.

During his four-day visit, Petrovsky reiterated to Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati the Soviet Union's willingness to withdraw from Afghanistan starting May 15, IRNA reported.

Musavi praised the Soviet move, the agency said.

Iran, which shares borders with the Soviet Union and Afghanistan, has been supporting Afghan Muslim guerrillas who are fighting the Soviet army and the Communist government in Kabul.

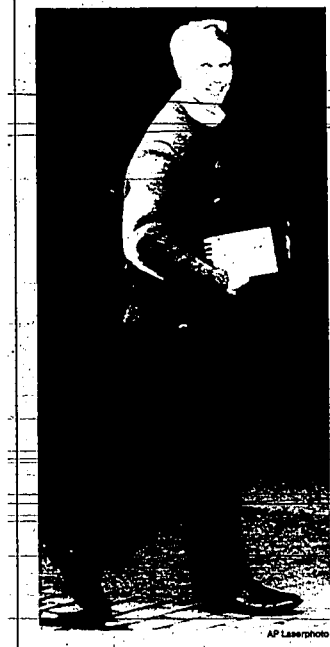

Gabnazar Palleyev, vice chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, pledged during his visit to Iraq that Moscow was ready to consider an arms embargo against Tehran for ignoring a U.N. resolution calling for a cease-fire in the Iran-Iraq war. Moscow is Iraq's major arms supplier in the 7-year-old war.

French-made aircraft. But in recent weeks, Iran has used its U.S.-made planes in several raids, suggesting Tehran may have bought spare parts on the black market.

Iran has 60-70 operational warplanes, according to Western military analysts.

Iraq has previously reported shooting down other Iranian drones.

Iran recently reported successful tests of domestically built drones, but it is not known whether it is producing its own pilotless aircraft yet. It also has reported its war factories are preparing to manufacture fighter planes.

Prince Edward breaks tradition

LONDON (AP) — Prince Edward may be fifth in line for the British throne, but he didn't risk being late Monday on his first day at work as a theater production assistant.

He arrived 10 minutes early at his new job, which appropriate is at the Palace Theater.

Edward, who abandoned a career in the Royal Marines last year, arrived with a confident grin on his face, a royal bodyguard at his side and, most importantly, a box of teabags tucked under his arm.

Production assistant is the most junior job, and the 23-year-old prince will be expected to perform the most humdrum of backstage errands, including making tea for his new co-workers at composer Andrew Lloyd Webber's Really Useful Theater Co.

Asked if he was looking forward to his first day on the job, Edward said only: "Of course I am."

Edward, the youngest son of Queen Elizabeth II, is the first member of Britain's royal family to choose the theater as a career, according to Buckingham Palace.

Most of the monarch's male relatives select a military career. Edward's father, Prince Philip, served in the Royal Navy in World War II and his other sons followed him: Prince Charles, heir to the British throne, has commanded a mine sweeper and Prince Andrew was a helicopter pilot in the 1982 Falkland Islands war.

Edward arrived in a limousine at the Palace Theater in the heart of London's West End, casually dressed in a blue sweater and tweed jacket. Police with sniffer dogs had earlier searched the theater.

The Palace, which houses the offices of Lloyd Webber's company, is currently showing "Les Miserables," the hit musical based on Victor Hugo's novel.

The Really Useful Theater Company is behind a string of hit musicals, including "Cats" and "The Phantom of the Opera."

Loyal employee says phone least expensive utility

DEAR ABBY: In reply to the letter from "Had Enough," it is certainly the privilege of consumers to criticize merchandise that they deem unsatisfactory for whatever reason, but I take very strong exception to the comment that I have to pay enough for telephone service...

I am employed by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. and I've had enough of people complaining about what Ma Bell charges for service. What would the writer pay for that little piece of magic that instantly connects you to a loved one whose voice you need to hear?

And, if you're hearing impaired, it gives you a special telephone communication. How much is a service worth that summons help to your door 24 hours of every day from police and fire departments and medical teams (and allows those emergency facilities to transmit data that could save your life through computers via network access to telephone lines)?

Next time you're worried about your invalid parent, your child who has moved away from home, your new grandchild across the country, or the friend you lost contact with years ago, please stop and consider who puts you in contact with these people in just moments, and what that little bit of magic is worth to you.

Your phone is the least expensive utility you have. Ask anyone who has traveled abroad. Thank you, Abby.

DEAR CAROL: Your message came through clear as a bell. But could someone tell me how much profit the telephone company makes on each call — local and long-distance?

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is thinking about getting married. She and Bobby have been living together for nearly seven years and have two children. He wants to be married in the church but neither one of them belongs to one, so his aunt is trying to get them married in the church she belongs to because it's close to the hall where they want to have their wedding reception.

My daughter would just as soon

have a quick ceremony by a judge, but Bobby wants a big church wedding with her in a white wedding gown and veil and him in a white tux.

He is paying for everything so why is doing it his way. They have everything they need in a house, so how do we go about telling people if they want to give them a gift to please make it money? Would that be in bad taste? I have heard it would be.

I thought maybe if the invitations were written up explaining their circumstances, it would be OK.

What do you think?

— KENTUCKY READERS

DEAR READERS: It would be in poor taste to ask for money. And it would be unthinkable to "explain their circumstances" in the wedding invitations.

Speed skaters' flop reflects hard feelings on American team

By ANGUS PHILLIPS
The Washington Post

CALGARY, Alberta — Dissension festered in the U.S. speed skating team Monday after disappointment and tragedy marred the first day of competition.

Speed skaters were expected to be among the top U.S. medal winners here in the XV Winter Olympics. But Sunday favorites Dan Jansen and Nick Thometz, subdued by the death of Jansen's 27-year-old sister earlier in the day, both faltered in the 500 meters and were out of the medals.

Now comes indications that at least half the team has lost faith in Coach Mike Crowe and is seeking guidance elsewhere. "We're under a lot of stress," said team member Brian Wanek. "I couldn't have wound up any worse."

scars that won't heal. Four-time Olympian Nancy Swider-Peltz said at least 10 of the 20 team members have quarrel with the coach, and Crowe confirmed the number. "He brought it on himself," said Swider-Peltz. "He just can't accept confrontation. He was reluctant to decide" until the last minute who would race and who would wind up as non-competing members of the team, she said.

Already, three team members have appealed to the U.S. Olympic Committee for the right to start in the men's 1,000-meter race Thursday instead of Tom Cushman, whom Crowe selected last week.

Now Wanek says he'll appeal his ouster from the starting list for Saturday's 1,500, too.

It all makes for an ugly, litigious distraction—in the midst of the sport's quadrennial moment in the sun. But close observers said it's been building for months.

"Team management set themselves up for the kind of trouble they have," said Peter Schotting, a former U.S. coach who now trains men's distance hopeful Eric Flaim. "Everybody could have come out here a week before the Games and raced against the clock for a spot in the starting lineup, he said. "That's the American way, isn't it?"

Instead, Crowe left open the assignment of starting berths until the last few days, and based decisions on the coaching staff's subjective appraisals of performance and potential.

As a result, said one team member, skaters wound up battling week after week to win races on the world circuit and secure a starting spot based on performance, rather than training in a steady way to peak for the Games.

"The question now is whether that training program, coupled with building ill will within the team, will affect remaining medal chances.

Thometz and Jansen, the two top men, have stayed clear of the team controversies, but how they will perform Thursday in the 1,000 meters is hard to predict. Both are considered potential medalists in the event. But Jansen was crushed by his sister's death from leukemia Sunday and unnerved by his fall in the 500 meters.

'We're under a lot of stress. It couldn't have wound up any worse.'

— Skater Brian Wanek

Beltz, "and her performance probably will be the best."

"You just have to concentrate on your own skating," said Katie Class, who will race in the 500, 1,000 and 1,500 meters. "It's not the best situation, but you just focus on your own situation."

Crowe conceded that the confusion over team selection "definitely is affecting the performance of those involved" in disputes. "But the ones that aren't (involved) are staying away from it and not letting it bother them."

Crowe said the collapse of team spirit among his charges disturbs and surprises him. "We always had a strong team that helped each other," he said. "They wanted to be together."

But everyone wants to skate in the Olympics, he said. "In a way, it all starts from having too large a team and trying too hard to keep everyone happy."

U.S. hockey team blows 3-0 lead, loses 7-5

By JOHN NELSON
The Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta — The United States is trying to win one gold medal, and it might not. America's hockey team was trying to win any medal, and it might not. Pirmin Zurbriggen might win five gold medals, and he's not even trying.

Whatever hopes the U.S. hockey team had of winning a medal dimmed Monday night in a 7-5 loss to Czechoslovakia.

"I think it is possible, although I hope it doesn't occur, that we won't win a gold medal," U.S. Olympic Committee secretary-general Baron Pittenger said.

Coming off a big opening win against Austria, the United States took a 3-0 lead on three shots against the Czechs before losing on a short-handed goal with 5:29 to play. Czechoslovakia added an empty-net goal for the final score.

"It's not a crushing defeat," U.S. Coach Dave Peterson said. "We'll be able to play next time."

A victory would have assured the United States a berth in the six-team medal round. A second straight loss would have made it nearly impossible for the Czechoslovaks to win a medal.

Now, they're both back to square one with 1-1 records.

While the United States' gold-medal hopes were bleak, Zurbriggen had the talent and the opportunity to win more Alpine gold medals than anyone in history. He won the first Alpine medal of the Games.

BONNY WARNER
Born to luge?

U.S.'s Warner's slip-sliding toward medal

Editor's note: The women's singles luge competition begins this morning at 10 a.m. MST

By THOMAS BONK
Los Angeles Times

Sure, there's still pressure on the U.S. luge team in Calgary, Alberta. Only this time, it's a different kind. Before, there was pressure not to get embarrassed. The U.S. was born to luge, all right, and not to win anything either. Americans were on the wrong track. They were going downhill, but not nearly fast enough.

Now, the U.S. is facing an altogether different kind of pressure. Brace yourself. What sport do you think could be the Americans' best chance for a medal?

Today's focus

Luge.

Yes, luge, that sport dominated by Europeans in which you lie on your back on a sled and slide down an icy track at about 65 mph. American lugers are actually given a chance to win a medal, or medals.

Look at the numbers. In 1976 at Innsbruck, Austria, the best U.S. finish was 21st. At Lake Placid, N.Y., in 1980, it was 12th. In 1984 at Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, it was 14th. That leaves a lot of ice to cover in sliding up (down?) into the top three, which is where the medals are.

Wolfgang Schaefer, the U.S. coach, is coaching patience. But at the same time he's optimistic about his team's chances.

"I think this team has made a great improvement over the last couple of years," he said. "I know we have the strongest team we've ever had. But you know, the Olympics is different than other races. We have to do the right things at the right time at the right place. I think we can fix our goals high. But, I don't think it's a very good idea when we say we have a chance for a medal."

"We have a chance for a medal, for sure, but the first thing we have to do is bring so many people as possible into the top 10," he said.

Can the U.S. win a medal? Possibly so, and if it happens, chances are it will be in the women's singles, where the Americans are putting two sliders on their sleds with big hopes of breaking East Germany's lock on the world's top three places.

The best sliders in the world are all East Germans. And among the women, no one is better than Cerstin Schmidt, who is backed by teammates Steffi Martin-Walter and Ute Oberhoffner. But for the first time, the U.S. may giving the East Germans a run. It's a two-way attack.

Bonny Warner, 25, who lives in the San Francisco Bay area, has more international top five finishes than any other U.S. slider and she has America's only gold medal in luge, which she won at the World Cup Race at Lake Placid last February.

See WARNER on Page D4

Today's Olympic TV

Theory meets practice as the U.S. men's luge team competes for a medal in the men's luge competition. The United States team is by far the best of the U.S. luge team. The U.S. luge team is by far the best of the U.S. luge team. The U.S. luge team is by far the best of the U.S. luge team.

Editor's note: The pairs' long program, the final event of the competition, is scheduled for tonight at 6 p.m. MST.

By BARRY WILNER
The Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta — "We're gonna go out and kill them." That's the battle plan for Gillian Wachemen and Todd Waggoner heading into tonight's pairs long program in Olympic figure skating.

Waggoner might have set the tone for the competition with that statement.

The American couple finished a surprisingly strong fourth in the short program, worth 26.5 percent of the total score, on Sunday. They trailed two-time world champions Ekaterina Gordeeva and Sergei Grinkov, and 1984 Olympic gold medalists Elena Valova and Oleg Vadilov of the Soviet Union, who were 1-2 in third place. Were Jill Watson and Peter Oppegard, the American champions in 1985, '87 and '88.

"You dream of being in this position," Waggoner added. "American pairs have always had a chip on our shoulders because we've never been considered extremely strong. I think we gained a little respect."

But the job is far from over. While Gordeeva and Grinkov appear invulnerable — they seem to be in class by themselves — Waggoner admitted — either U.S. duo could challenge for a silver medal. A bronze is even more likely.

"To be where we are is quite a movement," Waggoner said. "We went seventh in the world and with one couple retiring, we were rated sixth."

Watson and Oppegard nearly got second place in the short. They were second with four of the nine judges. They also received an astounding 8.2 from the East German judge — their other marks ranged from 5.5 to 6.5 out of a perfect 8.0.

"We were so close to being second and that makes us hungry," said Watson, who was sixth in pairs, teaming with Burt Lannon, in 1989. "We feel we can do it if we skate our best."

The strong American showing could not overshadow the high regard in which the Soviets are held. Gordeeva and Grinkov, whose throws are higher and lifts more buoyant than any other couple, figure to have little trouble winning the gold.

Top 20: Hoyas stave off Villanova

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Charles Smith scored 17 of his 22 points in the second half Monday night to lead No. 18 Georgetown to its third straight Big East victory, 86-84 over Villanova.

Smith, who was called for three personal fouls in the first 11 minutes, scored 13 points in a 16-10 run that enabled Georgetown to take a 43-37 lead with 8:22 remaining.

After the Wildcats cut the margin to 45-43, Smith's driving layup ignited a 9-4 surge that gave the Hoyas a 54-47 advantage with 40 seconds left.

Villanova, which lost to a Top Twenty team for the third straight time, scored five straight points to cut the gap to 54-52 but Smith sealed the victory with two free throws with seven seconds to play.

Barry Bokkedan hit a short jumper for the Wildcats in time expired to account for the final score.

Bradley 85
Drake 83
PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Hershey Hawkins tipped in Luke Jackson's missed free throw with two seconds remaining for the last of his 38 points Monday night, giving 17th-ranked Bradley an 85-83 Missouri Valley Conference victory over Drake.

Jackson had tied the game two seconds earlier when he made the front end of a one-and-one. His second toss bounced off the rim and Hawkins circled around Drake's Bart Frederick to grab the rebound and put the ball in.

Hawkins, who entered the game with a scoring average of 34.3 points, made 17 of 28 shots as Bradley upped its record to 17-14 overall and 7-2 in the MVC.

Drake, 14-10 and 5-6; led the entire first half and was in front 48-45 at the intermission.

Bradley took its first lead at 63-62 on Donald Powell's dunk four minutes into the second half. The Braves led 75-72 with 5:33 left before the Bulldogs made a move.

Drake scored six of the next eight points for a 79-77 lead with 3:41 left. The Bulldogs led 83-82 with 27 seconds remaining but Drake's Johnny Woodson lost the ball out of bounds to give Bradley possession.

Purdue 73.

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Troy Lewis scored 20 points and second-ranked Purdue pulled away in the first 10 minutes of the second half to beat No. 19 Iowa 73-66 Monday night and maintain sole possession of first place in the Big Ten Conference.

Lewis hit five 3-point baskets, his 39th straight game with at least one 3-pointer, as Purdue upped its record to 10-1 in the Big Ten and 21-2 overall. Iowa, which struggled with its shooting throughout the game, is 7-4 and 17-8.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Charles Shaokleford shook off a first-half ankle injury and scored 16 of his 20 points in the second half, leading No. 14 North Carolina State to a 99-77 victory over Maryland-Baltimore County Monday night.

Temple remains No. 1 in poll; BYU moves up notch to 7th

By JIM O'CONNELL
The Associated Press

College basketball

Temple held onto the No. 1 position in the Associated Press college basketball poll today, while Loyola Mountain, the nation's highest-scoring team, made its first-ever appearance in the rankings at No. 20.

The Owls, 20-1, received 28 first-place votes and 1,141 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters and the next three teams — Purdue, Arizona and Oklahoma — remained the same from last week, a rarity in this season of parity in college basketball.

Temple won both tie games last week, beating then-No. 20 Villanova in the first Philadelphia matchup and Georgetown in an Atlantic 10 Conference game Sunday.

The loss to Temple, coupled with a loss to then-No. 5 Pittsburgh, knocked Villanova from the poll, Kansas State, which lost twice, and Indiana, which split two games, also fell from the poll.

In addition to Loyola, 20-3 and averaging 108.4 points per game, Missouri, which was ranked for five weeks from the start of the season, came in at 15th and Georgetown returned to the poll at No. 18 after a one-week absence.

Purdue, 20-2, received 12 first-place votes and 1,118 points, 32 more than Arizona, 23-2, which got 10 first-place votes.

Oklahoma, the nation's No. 2 scoring team, also received 10 first-place votes and finished with 1,059 points.

North Carolina, 18-3, improved one spot to fifth with 879 points, 19 more than Atlantic Coast Conference foe Duke, which was tied for eighth last week.

Brigham Young, the team Duke was tied with, was seventh with 826 points, followed by Pittsburgh, which fell three places after splitting games with ranked teams last week. The Panthers, 17-5, lost to then-No. 11 Syracuse and beat Villanova and received 777 points.

Kentucky moved up one place from last week with 746, while Michigan rounded out the Top Ten with 674 points.

Nevada-Las Vegas, which had been ranked seventh, fell to 11th after losing to Missouri on Saturday.

The remainder of the Second Ten was Syracuse, Iowa, North Carolina State, Missouri, Vanderbilt, Bradley, Georgetown, Wyoming and Loyola.

Last week's Second Ten was Syracuse, Michigan, Iowa, Kansas State, Bradley, North Carolina, Missouri and Villanova.

Missouri, which was eighth in the preseason poll, also beat Big Eight rivals Kansas State and Nebraska in addition to the victory over Nevada-Las Vegas.

Georgetown, which fell from the poll for the only time this season last week, quickly returned with Big East victories over Seton Hall and Syracuse.

Loyola, coached by former NBA coach Paul Westhead, improved its scoring average with victories over Santa Clara, 108-89, and San Francisco, 118-109. The Lions reached the 20-victory mark for the first time since the 1960-61 season.

Kansas State also lost to Oklahoma last week as the Wildcats fell from the top of the Big Eight.

Indiana, which had returned to the poll last week after a three-week absence, beat Northwestern to average an earlier loss to the Wildcats but the Hoosiers were soundly beaten by Michigan, 92-72.

Warner

Although there is much expected of Warner, it's possible that teammate Cammy Myler is going to have at least as much pressure on her, maybe not now, but soon enough. At 19, Myler is probably the future of women's luge in the U.S.

Myler is going to be able to compete with the Europeans, maybe because she trained the way they do.

She started when she was 11, right after the Lako Placid Olympics, where her parents worked as volunteers at the luge track. That same year, Myler won the National Junior Olympics.
