Corporations given chance to aid education

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

BOISE — Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul, on Friday offered to let corporations put their money where their mouths are to support education.

The conservative Republican proposed two bills raising the tax rate on corporations with profits over $250,000. One bill would tax corporations at 10 percent and the second would set a 10.5 percent rate.

"When we have a number of chief executives of corporations traveling around the state and recommending tax increases to pay for education, and a number of chambers of commerce, then bluntly, I think it's time they perform," he said.

Neibaur was incensed that business leaders, including the heads of Neibaur seeks shift from property taxes

The Associated Press

BOISE — Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul, says he would like to shift nearly $90 million in revenue away from local property taxes.

But in an appearance before the House Revenue and Taxation Committee, he had no recommendations on how the state would replace $47 million in lost revenue.

The committee voted printing and introduction of the proposal, although there indications it would considerable opposition when it comes up for final discussion.

Neibaur said his bill was designed to shift the burden of funding $89.3 million in public school funding from property taxes to the state general fund.

He would end $23.79 million cities and counties get in revenue-sharing funds, and eliminate $18.42 million in payments to local government designed to replace the inventory tax. The state would pay an extra $47.6 million, now covered by county school property taxes, out of the general tax account.

Boise-Cascade, Mountain Bell, Micron Technology and Albertson's, have publicly supported Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus' push for more money for education.

Neibaur estimated the 10 percent tax would raise $5 million this year and $6.5 million next year.

He said the 10.5 percent rate would raise $6.2 million this year, and $8 million next.

Neibaur's proposals received a favorable reception from the House Revenue and Taxation Committee, which earlier opposed repealing the investment tax credit on corporations.

"I don't think either of these are our going home bills, but I commend the sponsor," said Rep. Robert Fry, R-Hotshor Bend. "I think they're in the realm of possibility."

Rep. Reed Hansen, R-Idaho Falls, called the bill "an appropriate measure."

"You've got some executives of some corporations saying we need funding for education, but no one wants to pay for it. Here's an opportunity," Hansen said.

Rep. Gary Robbins, R-District, said that Neibaur was definitely sending a message to corporations. But Robbins said it would be easier to repeal the ITC, and it would raise more money.

Pro-Iranian unit takes credit for seizing American officer

TYRE, Lebanon — A pro-Iranian group Friday claimed responsibility for kidnapping a U.S. Marine colonel serving with U.N. peacekeeping forces and released identity cards bearing his photograph.

It alleged that Lt. Col. William R. Higgins was a spy for the "Satanic CIA," U.S. and U.N. officials denied the charges.

In a rescue attempt, Shiite Muslim militiamen spent a second day searching citrus groves and cave-lined valleys for Higgins, who disappeared Wednesday.

The searchers, who belong to the Amal militia headed by Justice Minister Nabih Berri, also seized six officers of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah in pre-dawn house raids in Tyre and accused them of involvement in the plot.

Higgins, 43, of Danville, Ky., was head of a 76-man United Nations observer force in south Lebanon. About 15 of the observers assigned to the force are Americans.

Truce Supervisory Organization work alongside the 5,800-strong United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, deployed in 1978 at the Lebanon-Israel border.

Gunner abducted the colonel south of Tyre as he drove to UNIFIL headquarters in the border town of Naqoura. U.N. officials initially said that Higgins was violating U.N. rules for travel by Americans.

But a U.N. spokesman in New York said Friday that Higgins did not violate travel restrictions. "As all his predecessors, he traveled freely in the area without escort," said Mario Zamorano, a spokesman for the U.N. secretary-general.

In Washington, President Reagan said the United States will not withdraw Americans from the U.N. observer group in Lebanon despite the abduction. Earlier in the day, Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci said U.S. officials were studying a withdrawal plan.

The responsibility claim came in a typewritten Arabic statement from the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth. It called Higgins "one of the biggest spies planting daily terror in our land."

It alleged that Higgins used his observer role as a cover for espionage work.

U.S. officials have denied that Higgins has links with the CIA, and U.N. Undersecretary-General Mararak Goulding echoed that denial Friday in a news conference at Naqoura.

"We do not recruit spies. Everyone here works for the United Nations," he said.

Dan Howard, the Pentagon's chief spokesman, acknowledged in Washington Friday that Higgins for two years was junior military assistant to then-Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger. Howard dismissed suggestions, however, that Higgins' capture posed any major security risk to the United States.

The Oppressed of the Earth said it would release Higgins following a complete Israeli withdrawal from its security zone in south Lebanon.

Drought looms on horizon

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho Water Supply Committee has confirmed what has become common knowledge throughout the state: Idaho has another drought on the horizon.

Food shortages, snowmelt, streamflow, reservoir levels and water supplies are all well below normal this year, and the forecast is not encouraging.

"We still have a fighting chance," said Wayne Head, administrator of resources, analysis at the Idaho Department of Water Resources and a member of the committee. "If we get a normal water supply from here on out, we'll be in better shape than last year."

Based on the committee's February report, Idaho's water outlook remains discouraging.

President defends his fiscal policies

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan defended his tax and budget policies Friday in an election-year economic report to Congress, saying his administration had averted economic despair into hope.

Reagan's seventh annual economic report brushed off accusations by Democratic presidential candidates that a $2.4 trillion national debt and record trade imbalances during the Reagan years had hobbled the country and eventually would reduce Americans' standard of living.

Beryl Sprinkel, the president's chief economic adviser, said the new economic report was aimed at debunking "myths" that the country had become a second-rate economic power.

He said that in reality the United States had out-performed the rest of the world, producing 2 1/2 times the number of jobs as the other top six industrialized countries combined since the end of the 1981-82 recession.

The president, in an eight-page introduction to this year's report, said the country is in a lot better shape than when he took office seven years ago.

In a theme sure to be sounded by the outgoing Republican presidential nominee, the report asserted: "The past five years of sustained and vigorous growth in production, income and employment did not occur by accident. They were shaped by government policies explicitly directed toward fostering the inherent dynamism of the private sector."

The report sought to downplay any problems associated with the doubling of the national debt under Reagan and the string of foreign trade deficits that has transformed the United States from the largest creditor country to the largest debtor nation.

The country's debt to the rest of the world stands at around $400 billion, the amount of foreign holdings in the United States that exceed American investments in other

Stiff penalties could confront DUI offenders

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho House of Representatives has approved a new state law adding to the penalties for drunken driving.

In fact, the legislation sponsored by Rep. Sam Clark, R-Pocatello, is so tough that opponents argued it would have a reverse effect because judges would hesitate to impose it.

The vote was 64-27 as the measure was passed to the Senate. If that chamber also goes along, drunken drivers in Idaho could face:

- Mandatory loss of driving privileges for six months upon the first conviction; Judges now can suspend licenses for that long, but it isn't mandatory.

- Mandatory suspension for 18 months on the second conviction, triple the current penalty.

- For the third or subsequent conviction, a drunken driver would lose his or her license for five years; after release from prison or jail.

- Judges no longer would be able to grant restricted licenses to allow an offender to drive to and from work. Once a license is suspended, the violator would not be able to drive until the license is restored.

Clark pointed to the "astronomical" social costs of drunken drivers and said he wanted to add to the penalties to stop it.

"Moderate drinkers are not the problem. Repeated offenders are the problem," he said.

Clark said tough license-suspension laws have had a strong impact in other states, with repeat violations reduced by up to 76 percent.

"This is the most effective means of reducing repeat drunken driving," he said.

Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, was among those arguing against the bill. "It has a highly laudable objective, but it may accomplish exactly the opposite of what was intended," she said. "You are taking away the discretion of courts to distinguish between different kinds of offenders."

She said relatively new DUI laws are helping with the problem and have brought a dramatic drop in alcohol-related traffic deaths.

"What we have now are pretty strict penalties for most of it," said Rep. Reed Hansen, R-Idaho Falls.

Democratic, GOP debates ignite Friday fireworks aplenty

By The Associated Press

Vice President George Bush suggested Friday that "GOP presidential" rival Bob Dole was "angry and bitter" over his loss in New Hampshire but Dole countered "we'll see who's dispirited" after Tuesday's Midwest contests.

Democratic Chairman Paul Kirk told his squabbling presidential candidates to cool it.

The Democratic candidates saw Sen. Albert Gore Jr. debated in St. Paul, Minn., ahead of the South Dakota primary and Minnesota caucuses, while the Republicans debated over a debate that dwindled to just two candidates.

Rep. Richard Gephardt and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis drew fire from their Democratic presidential rivals in the free-wheeling debate that indicated their status following wins in Iowa and New Hampshire.

At the Republican debate in Dallas, reduced to a one-on-one event by the refusal of Dole and Pat Robertson to participate, both Bush and Rep. Jack Kemp said they regretted the boycott and said it would hurt their opponents.

Bush and Kemp clashed bitterly over nuclear defense strategy, as Bush asserted the New York congressman won't understand war until "you've seen your fellow man drop dead."

In Oklahoma City earlier, Bush suggested that Dole was brooding over New Hampshire.

"You learn that the rodeo is full of hard encounters with the ground and you learn to pick yourself up and dust yourself off and get back on the horse again," Bush said.

"You don't get angry and bitter when you get defeated. You pick yourself back up and get back on the horse and go on and win the next election."

But in Lexington, Ky., Dole shrugged off Bush's remarks.

"We're ready to go. We're ready for the next round in South Dakota and Minnesota and we'll see who wins those two. We'll see who's disappointed Wednesday morning next week," he said.

With only a few days to go, Bush said the campaign was "pulling out" of South Dakota.

"We're going to concentrate our resources on the South. And Dole got an enormous bump from Iowa," said the aide, who did not want to be identified.

Gore skipped the Democratic debate, saying he would "run to California, where he took a question about which of his rivals were Democratic deadwood."

"Mike Dukakis," Jesse Jackson and Dick Gephardt all three reported to begin with the strongest show of support we can muster from committed Democrats in South Dakota and Minnesota who seek a fundamental change in America's direction."

After watching Republican bickering from afar, Kirk wrote a "Dear Candidate" letter that said, "I simply want to urge all our candidates to resist any kind of negative personal attacks that smack of desperation and do nothing to enhance the opportunity for a Democratic victory in November." The letter was written Thursday — just hours before the Democratic candidates fought out their Dallas debate.

Short of a bullet between the eyes, you are not going to solve the problem of drunken drivers."

He suggested paying as much attention to the treatment of alcoholics as to retribution.

Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls, noted the House just days before made it a felony with up to 15 years in prison to knowingly infect someone with AIDS. He said that "drunk drivers kill people and should face strict penalties."

"We need to make sure our priorities are straight," he said.

Rep. Chris Hooper, R-Boise, predicted there would be fewer DUI convictions because judges would tend to allow more plea-bargaining down to inattentive driving or reckless driving.

"If you want to keep a good drunken-driving law on the books, vote no on this one," he said.

Clark said the penalties weren't too tough. "How long are we going to treat that killer behind the wheel as something not very significant?" he asked.

He said 18 states won't even allow plea-bargaining to reduce DUI charges, and Idaho should consider a similar law.

Speaker, in a briefing for reporters, said that the net payments to foreigners needed to service the country's foreign debt represented just 0.1 percent of the $4.6 trillion U.S. economy.

Church investigating evangelist Swaggart

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — TV evangelist Jimmy Swaggart is under investigation by his church over matters that could cost him his credentials as the Assemblies of God said Friday.

CBS News and ABC News reported later today that the probe involved allegations of sexual misconduct. There was no immediate confirmation from the Assemblies of God, which last year stripped PTL evangelist Jim Bakker of his credentials.

The 13-member Executive Presbytery of the Assemblies of God met in conference with Swaggart at the church's international headquarters for nearly 10 hours Thursday.

On Friday afternoon, church spokesman Julien Turnage said the meeting was held to discuss matters that could affect his credentials with the church.

Mrs. Turnage said that details would be unavailable until that probe is complete.

She said that the Louisiana District Council of the Assemblies of God is looking into the matter and that Swaggart is cooperating with the investigation into what she called a "critical situation."

Swaggart, president of a TV ministry worth an estimated $140 million a year, is based in Baton Rouge, La., and broadcasts to 143 countries.

Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry said Neibaur's move was targeted at a very narrow band of people.

"I think Mack is sending a signal, but we're taking this very seriously," Cobby said. "It's not going to raise who let's call it a 'tax' on the amount a few have to pay by a lot."

Neibaur had no estimate of the number of corporations it would affect, but Mike Ferguson, chief economist with the Division of Finance, estimated that about 1,000 corporations in Idaho could be affected.

At least two corporations reacted with caution to the news of Neibaur's warning shot.

George Parkinson, chairman of Micro Technology, Inc., who has called on Idaho to upgrade both public education and higher education in the state, said he favored a lottery to pay for upgrading.

"What is this statement to define what's going to do with roads and education, and if it requires more revenue, we'd agree to what's reasonable," Parkinson said. "I would suggest they approve a lottery."

Roger Seiber, Mountain Bell's chief lobbyist, said his company is willing to support education, although Seiber said he could not comment on Neibaur's proposal until he'd had a chance to study it.

"I don't know if I've pledged its willingness to pay its fair share, and we support a reasonable revenue raising measure," Seiber said.

ation was .79 percent of normal in Boise, 79 percent in McCall, 82 percent in Idaho City and 57 percent in Ketchum. The 30-day forecast calls for, at best, near normal precipitation in February. Through the end of the month, the deficit was -1.68-inches, 67-percent-of-normal.

Snowpack: The Feb. 1 statewide snowpack report showed conditions at 60 percent to 80 percent of normal. Precipitation much above average over the next two months is needed to bring conditions to near normal.

Streamflow: Conditions were well-below-normal—all-sites-in-Idaho. The 30-day forecast calls for a low of 92 percent and 65 percent in the Clearwater and Salmon River Basin to a high of 70 percent to 75 percent in the South Snake River Basin.

The Payette, Payette and Boise River Basins are forecast at 68 percent to 74 percent of normal. The Big Lost, Little Wood, Big Lost and Little Lost River Basins are forecast at 65 percent to 69 percent of normal.

Reservoirs: Storage in irrigation reservoirs is below-normal. Reservoirs have been kept to a minimum to maximize storage.

The Cascade, Deadwood, Mackay and Little Wood reservoirs should be well below normal. The Magic Reservoir is unlikely to fill.

Water supply: Indicators are well below normal for the entire state. All water users are requested to plan for shortages and conserve water whenever possible.

For the Snake River, from Milner to Weiser, supplies should be adequate.

Senate rejects sturgeon

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Senate has overwhelmingly rejected legislation that would designate the white sturgeon as the state fish, opposite calling the huge century-old fish bottom feeders that would do nothing to enhance Idaho's image.

"A sturgeon is a trash fish and I don't think we need a trash fish as a state fish," said Sen. Jerry Hanson, R-Boise, as his colleagues voted 31-0 on Friday against the proposal.

Sponsor Herb Carlson, an Eagle Republican, called the sturgeon as unique as Idaho, underscoring the fish's tenaciousness.

Joining Carlson in supporting the sturgeon were Democrats: Gill Bray of Boise; John Feevey of Carey and Claire Wetherell of Mountain Home and Republicans John Hansen of Idaho Falls and Lynn Tomlinaga of Rupert. Democrats Marti Calabretta of Osburn and Marguerite McLaughlin of Orofino and Republicans Ann Ryndahl of Idaho Falls, Michael Crapo of Idaho Falls and Terry Sterdenst of Cataldo were absent.

Tax credit raises concerns

BOISE (AP) — A Boise-based organization Friday afternoon launched an initiative drive to repeal Idaho's investment tax credit, if the Legislature fails to do it this session.

"If the Legislature repeals the credit this session, this initiative will not proceed," said Rep. Ken Robison, D-Boise.

He said people are frustrated because it appears the Republican majority of the Legislature is going to approve an inadequate budget for education this session.

"If the GOP goes ahead with the budget that has been discussed in recent weeks, Robison said, 'I think we would be moving backwards rather than forward with the program the governor has outlined for economic development.'

It would require 35,338 signatures on petitions for a successful initiative drive. Then on the next general election ballot in November, voters would be asked whether they favor outright repeal of the investment tax law, effective on Jan. 1, 1989.

It isn't the first initiative effort for Robison. In 1982, he and others launched an initiative to provide tax breaks for homeowners.

Harassment bill to Senate

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Senate will be the next stop for a proposed new law requiring law enforcement agencies to report incidents of racial or religious harassment.

The measure cleared the House 87-25 Friday afternoon, despite arguments from a few legislators that it was unnecessary.

"The victims of malicious harassment will become a statistic. That's all this will accomplish," said Rep. Herm Steger, R-Boise.

Idaho in 1982 passed a law making it a crime to harass someone because of the victim's race, religious beliefs or ethnic origin.

Holm: Claims no knowledge

BOISE (AP) — State Pardons and Parole Commissioner Del Ray Holm continues to maintain he had no knowledge that a business partner of his hired one of the state prison inmates Holm recommended for parole several years ago.

"I wasn't involved," Holm told the Senate Judiciary Committee, Friday during the hearing on whether he should be confirmed for another term on the commission.

Holm was grilled for nearly 30 minutes, mainly on the incident involving Charlie Vetch, who was convicted in connection with a murder for hire scheme.

Vetch was paroled and then immediately went to work for David Steed and Associates, an Idaho Falls implement company that Holm owned a third interest in. Another third was owned by Holm's brother.

First '89 spending bill continues paring

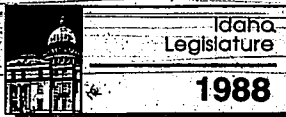

BOISE (AP) — The first bill authorizing spending in the 1989 budget year was introduced in the Senate Friday as budget writers continued paring away at the new spending blueprint for the year that begins in July.

The initial bill of what will become a package detailing use of more than $1 billion in state and federal funds allocates $2.6 million for operations of the state Insurance Fund for another year. It will come to a vote in the Senate next week.

But Idaho agency like a number of others, does not dip into the jealously guarded general tax treasury, and it was those revenues that the budget panel was guarding when it voted to trim support for commodity marketing in the Agriculture Department, overseer of Idaho's number-one industry.

"We're trying to save what we can where we can to give more money to education," said Sen. Darrel McRoberts, a moderate Republican from Twin Falls.

On a 14-9 vote, the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee agreed to slash from the new

"Basically, what they decided to do is close the agriculture marketing program and put someone in the Taiwan office," said disappointed state Agriculture Director Dick Rush.

"This action is a mistake. ... It's not a fair trade."

Rush conceded that opening a trade office in Asia would be a major boost to Idaho export sales, but not if it comes at the expense of the domestic program.

"You can't stop the support here domestically with all the small companies who ask, 'How can I get in the international market?'" Rush said.

"You've got to help those companies first. When they're ready to sell their products, that's when you need the Taiwan office."

But McRoberts pointed out that overall the Agriculture Department will receive a double-digit increase in basic operating revenues from general tax funds. That is substantially more than lawmakers will be able to give public and higher education under the Republican strategy to hold the line on spending to avoid an election-year tax hike.

Bill to abolish Tax Commission sent to Senate

BOISE (AP) — Legislation that would effectively abolish the four-member state Tax Commission and replace it with an appointed state revenue director has been cleared for action by the full Senate.

The Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee on Friday voted 10-1 to send the bill to the floor, but also ordered that at least some technical changes be made before the measure comes to a final vote.

"The committee action came despite several members voicing reservations about losing access to the agency once members of each political party are no longer in charge."

"With the political appointments we have in this state, it's very difficult to get past some of these administrators," said Sen. Rachel Gilbert, R-Boise. She contended that with members of both parties on the commission lawmakers always had access to tax information, no matter who was in the governor's office.

Sen. Lynn Tomlinaga, R-Rupert, also warned that a bureaucrat would not be as responsive to the public as a panel of lay commissioners, even if they are full-time officials.

Sen. Phil Batt, R-Wilder, acknowledged those concerns as legitimate, but maintained that the state could make the tax system more efficient and save a little money in the process if the operations of the department were returned to the way they were over two decades ago.

"There are some states involved," Batt conceded. "But I've felt that we in this Legislature tend to list things going along without trying to put some efficiencies in them. This Legislature ought to take a risk sometimes."

Batt admitted, however, that savings from the change would probably run at only $100,000 or so, although he maintained that the overall situation should help fuel the improving relations between the state and its counties.

Under the bill, which would take effect in mid-1989, the full-time Tax Commission would cease to exist and revert to a part-time panel responsible solely for property tax matters. The other tax issues, including income and sales tax, would become the responsibility of an appointed, one-year incumbent governor, subject to Senate confirmation.

Talks help unravel Idaho, Washington tax 'border war'

BOISE (AP) — "We just haven't been communicating," House Speaker Tom Boyd said Friday after he and other leaders of the Idaho Legislature made a one-day trip to Olympia, Wash., to meet with their Washington legislative counterparts.

After the round of meetings with Washington officials, including Gov. Booth Gardner, Boyd said most of the friction between the two states could be resolved through cooperation.

"I think we have headed off some retaliatory legislation," Boyd said.

Idaho's "border war" with Washington and other states was touched off by Idaho Tax Commission efforts to levy Idaho income taxes on truckers and others who live in other states but spend at least part of their working day in Idaho.

Boyd said he also stressed to Washington officials that both states could benefit from cooperation in such areas as farm research.

"The federal funds are drying up rapidly," he said.

Washington officials plan to visit the Idaho Legislature next year as part of the cooperative effort, said Rep. Dean Haugenon, R-Coeur d'Alene, who has been working on the program for months.

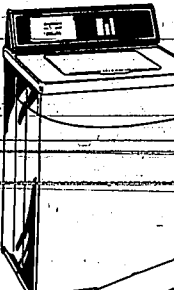

Id. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter called the trip "extremely positive."

Otter is head of the international marketing arm of the J.R. Simplot Co. He said he stressed the possibilities of "dramatically enhancing" foreign trade, particularly with the Pacific Rim.

Democratic, GOP debates ignite Friday fireworks aplenty

By The Associated Press

Vice President George Bush suggested Friday that the Democratic presidential pick Bob Dole was "angry and bitter" over his loss in New Hampshire but Dole countered "we'll see who's dispirited" after Tuesday's Midwest contests. Democratic National Chairman Paul Kirk led his squabbling presidential candidates to cool it. The Democratic candidates saw Sen. Albert Gore Jr. debated in St. Paul, Minn., ahead of the South Dakota primary and Minnesota caucuses, while the Republicans debated over a candidate that divided to just two debates. Rep. Richard Gephardt and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis drew fire from their Democratic presidential rivals in the free-wheeling debate that indicated their fate following wins in Iowa and New Hampshire. At the Republican debate in Dallas, reduced to a one-on-one event by the refusal of Dole and Pat Robertson to participate, both Bush and Rep. Jack Frenshooper they regretted the boycott and said it would hurt their opponents. Bush and Kemp clashed bitterly over nuclear defense strategy, as Bush asserted the New York congressman won't understand war until "you've seen your fellow man drop dead." In Oklahoma City earlier, Bush suggested that Dole was brooding over New Hampshire. "You learn that the rodeo is full of hard encounters with the ground and you learn to pick yourself up and dust yourself off and get back on the horse again," Bush said. "So you don't get angry and bitter when you get defeated. You pick yourself back up and get back on the horse and go on and win the next election." But in Lexington, Ky., Dole shrugged off Bush. "We're ready to go. We're ready for the next round in South Dakota and Minnesota and we'll see who wins those two. We'll see who's dispirited Wednesday morning next week." With only a few days to go, a Bush aide said the campaign was "pulling out" of South Dakota. "We're going to concentrate our resources on the South. And Dole got an enormous bump from Iowa," said the aide, who did not want to be identified. Gore skipped the Democratic debate, make a money run to California, where he took a question about which of his rivals were Democratic deadwood. "Mike Dukakis, Jesse Jackson and Dick Gephardt - all three represent a kind of approach that has been associated with losing four out of the last five elections," he said. And rival Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois reversed his earlier statement that he could not continue his campaign unless he won either South Dakota or Minnesota next week. "I'm in this race until Atlanta," Simon said first in Sioux Falls, S.D., then in Minneapolis. "And we're going to begin with the strongest support of support we can muster from committed Democrats in South Dakota and Minnesota who seek a fundamental change in America's direction." After watching Republican bickering from afar, Kirk wrote a "Dear Candidate" letter that said, "I simply want to urge all our candidates to resist any... kind of negative personal attacks that smacks of desperation and do nothing to enhance the opportunity for a Democratic victory in November." The letter was written Thursday - just hours before the Democratic candidates fought out their Dallas debate.

Church investigating evangelist Swaggart

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) - TV evangelist Jim Swaggart is under investigation by his church over matters that could cost him his membership in the Assemblies of God said Friday. CBS News and ABC News reported later Friday that the probe involved allegations of sexual misconduct. There was no immediate confirmation from the Assemblies of God, which last year stripped PTL evangelist Jim Bakker of his credentials. The 13-member executive presbytery of the Assemblies of God met in session with Swaggart at the church's international headquarters for nearly 10 hours Thursday. On Friday afternoon, church spokesman Juleen Turriage said the meeting was held "to discuss matters that could affect his credentials with the church." Mrs. Turriage said that details would be unavailable until that probe is complete. She said that the Louisiana District Council of the Assemblies of God is looking into the matter and that Swaggart is cooperating with the investigation into what she called a "critical situation." Swaggart, president of a TV ministry with an estimated $140 million a year, is based in Baton Rouge, La., and broadcasts to 143 countries.

Penalties

"Short of a bullet between the eyes, you are not going to solve the problem of drunken drivers." He suggested paying as much attention to the treatment of alcoholics as to retribution. Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls, noted the House just days before made it a felony with up to 15 years in prison to knowingly infect someone with AIDS. He said "drunk drivers kill people - and should face strict penalties." "We need to make sure our priorities are straight," he said.

Rep. Chris Hooper, R-Boise, predicted there would be fewer DUI convictions because judges would tend to allow more plea-bargaining down to inattentive driving or reckless driving. "If you want to keep a good drunken-driving law on the books, vote on this one," he said. Clark said the penalties weren't too tough. "How long are we going to treat a killer behind the wheel as something not very significant?" he asked. He said 18 states now even allow plea-bargaining to reduce DUI charges, and Idaho should consider a similar law.

Ident Association of Commerce and Industry at Neibaur's board was targeted at a very narrow band of people. "I think Mpek is sending a signal, but we're taking it very seriously, Casey said. "It's not going to raise the price of insurance. It's not going to amount a few have to pay by a lot." Neibaur had no estimate of the number of corporations it would affect, but Mike Ferguson, chief economist with the Division of Insurance, said about 1,000 corporations in Idaho could be affected. At least two corporations reacted with caution to the news of Neibaur's warning shot.

Report

Sprinkel, in a briefing for reporters, said that the net payments to foreigners need to serve the country's foreign debt represented just 0.1 percent of the $4.6 trillion U.S. economy. "Disaster does not loom in our future. This current level of (international) indebtedness is not worrisome," he said. "The argument that we can't grow and make economic progress because we are debt-ridden is wrong." Sprinkel said that the recent string of three consecutive declines in the Index of Leading Indicators was signaling slower growth in the first half of 1988 but not a recession this year. He also discounted recent big declines in housing construction in December and January, a key economic sector that is often the first to turn down at the start of a new recession. Sprinkel blamed the housing declines on a too-restrictive monetary policy begun with the Federal Reserve in the months before the recent collapse of stock prices that occurred last Oct. 19. Sprinkel said by late spring construction should start rising again in response to recent declines in mortgage rates, which have now dipped back to single-digit levels, falling to 9.84 percent last week. A draft version of the president's economic report was critical of the Federal Reserve for tightening credit conditions in December; after initially pumping money into the economy immediately following the stock market crash.

However, the final version of the report said that more recent actions of the Fed this year indicate the central bank is again promoting lower interest rates as a way of stimulating economic growth. "The report said that more recent actions of the Fed this year indicate the central bank is again promoting lower interest rates as a way of stimulating economic growth." Sprinkel predicted that an improving trade deficit would provide about half of the country's overall economic growth this year, while trade deficits and predicted further gains on both fronts. Sprinkel predicted that an improving trade deficit would provide about half of the country's overall economic growth this year, while trade deficits and predicted further gains on both fronts.

Senate rejects sturgeon

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Senate has overwhelmingly rejected legislation that would designate the white sturgeon as the state fish, opponents calling the huge century-old fish bottom feeders that would do nothing to enhance Idaho's image.

"A sturgeon is a trash fish and I don't think we need a trash fish as a state fish," said Sen. Jerry Hanson, R-Boise, as his colleagues voted 31-6 on Friday against the proposal.

Sponsor Herb Carlson, an Eagle Republican, called the sturgeon as unique as Idaho, underscoring the fish's tenaciousness.

Joining Carlson in supporting the sturgeon were Democrats Gail Brey of Boise, John Peavey of Carey and Claire Wetherell of Mountain Home and Republicans John Hansen of Idaho Falls and Lynn Deming of Burley. Democrats Mart Calabrese of Oxburn and Marguerite McLaughlin of Orofino and Republicans Ann Rydvalch of Idaho Falls, Michael Crapo of Idaho Falls and Terry Sversten of Cataldo were absent.

3 killed in car-train crash

KUNA (AP) — Three people were killed Friday afternoon at a railroad crossing here in a car-train crash, Idaho State Police said.

Investigating officers said three people in a car were killed about 4 p.m. when a Union Pacific Railroad train struck the vehicle at a crossing.

Identities of the victims were not immediately available.

Tax credit raises concerns

BOISE (AP) — A Boise-based organization Friday afternoon launched an initiative drive to repeal Idaho's investment tax credit, if the Legislature fails to do it this session.

"If the Legislature repeals the credit this session, this initiative will not proceed," said Rep. Ken Robison, D-Boise.

He said people are frustrated because it appears the Republican majority of the Legislature is going to approve an inadequate budget for education this session.

If the GOP goes ahead with the budget that has been discussed in recent weeks, Robison said, "I think we would be moving backwards rather than forward with the program the governor has outlined for economic development."

It would require 36,339 signatures on petitions for a successful initiative drive. Then on the next general election ballot in November, voters would be asked whether they favor outright repeal of the investment tax law, effective on Jan. 1, 1989.

It isn't the first initiative effort for Robison. In 1982, he and others launched an initiative to provide tax breaks for homeowners.

Harassment bill to Senate

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Senate will be the next stop for a proposed new law requiring law enforcement agencies to report incidents of racial or religious harassment.

The measure cleared the House 67-22 Friday afternoon, despite arguments from a few legislators that it was unnecessary.

"The victims of malicious harassment will become a statistic. That's all this will accomplish," said Rep. Herm Steger, R-Boise.

Idaho in 1982 passed a law making it a crime to harass someone because of the victim's race, religious beliefs or ethnic origin.

Holm: Claims no knowledge

BOISE (AP) — State Pardons and Parole Commissioner Del Ray Holm continues to maintain he had no knowledge that a business partner of his hired one of the state's prison inmates Holm recommended for parole several years ago.

"I wasn't involved," Holm told the Senate Judiciary Committee Friday during the hearing on whether he should be confirmed for another term on the commission.

Holm was grilled for nearly 30 minutes, mainly on the incident involving Charlie Vetch, who was convicted in connection with a murder for hire scheme.

Vetch was paroled and then immediately went to work for David Sord and Associates, an Idaho Falls implement company that Holm owned a third interest in. Another third was owned by Holm's brother.

First '89 spending bill continues paring

BOISE (AP) — The first bill authorizing spending in the 1989 budget year was introduced in the Senate Friday as budget writers continued paring away at the new spending blueprint for the year that begins in July.

The initial bill of what will become a package detailing use of more than $1 billion in state and federal funds allocates $2.5 million for operations of the state insurance fund for another year. It will come to a vote in the Senate next week.

But that agency, like a number of others, does not dip into the jealously guarded general tax treasury, and it was those revenues that the budget panel was guarding when it voted to trim support for commodity marketing in the Agriculture Department, overseer of Idaho's number-one industry.

"We're trying to save what we can where we can to give more money to education," said Sen. Darrel McRoberts, a moderate Republican from Twin Falls.

On a 14-9 vote, the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee agreed to slash from the new budget blueprint $50,000 that had been earmarked for agricultural marketing in the current spending plan.

That action, coupled with the panel's earlier decision on spending for the Commerce Department, effectively reduced the money slated at expanding export of Idaho farm goods from $165,000 this year to $115,000 in the new year that begins in July.

But in addition, the panel directed some of the 1989 marketing money to be used to open a state trade office in Taiwan, further limiting the use of those funds for marketing activities in the state.

On the commission lawmakers always had access to tax information no matter who was in the governor's office.

Sen. Lynn Tominga, R-Rupert, also warned that a bureaucrat would not be as responsive to the public as a panel of lay commissioners, even if they are full-time officials.

Sen. Phil Butt, R-Willard, acknowledged those concerns as legitimate, but maintained that the state could make the tax system more efficient and save a little money in the process if the operations of the department were returned to the way they were over two decades ago.

"There are some risks involved," Butt conceded. "But I've felt that we in this Legislature tend to let things Basically, what they decided to do is close the agriculture marketing program and put someone in the Taiwan office," said disappointed state Agriculture Director Dick Rush. "This action is a mistake... it's not a fair trade."

Rush conceded that opening a trade office in Asia would be a major boost to Idaho export sales, but not if it comes at the expense of the domestic program.

"You can't stop the support here domestically with all the small companies you ask, 'How can I get in the international market?'" Rush said. "You've got to help those companies first when they're ready to sell their products, that's when you need the Taiwan office."

But McRoberts pointed out that overall the Agriculture Department will receive a double-digit increase in basic operating revenues from general tax funds. That is substantially more than lawmakers will be able to give public and higher education under the Republican strategy to hold the line on spending to avoid an election-year tax hike.

Bill to abolish Tax Commission sent to Senate

BOISE (AP) — Legislation that would effectively abolish the four-member state Tax Commission and replace it with an appointed state revenue director has been cleared for action by the full Senate.

The Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee on Friday voted 10-1 to send the bill to the floor, but also ordered that at least some technical changes be made before the measure comes to a final vote.

The committee action came despite several members voicing reservations about losing access to the agency once members of each political party are no longer in charge.

"With the political appointments we have in this state, it's very difficult to get past some of these administrators," said Sen. Rachel Gilbert, R-Boise, who contended that with members of both parties going along without trying to put some efficiencies in them. This Legislature ought to take a risk sometimes."

Batt admitted, however, that savings from the change would probably run at only $100,000 or so, although he maintained that the overall situation should help fuel the improving relations between the state and its counties.

Under the bill, which would take effect in mid-1989, the full-time Tax Commission would cease to exist and revert to a part-time panel responsible solely for property tax matters. The other tax issues, including income and sales tax, would become the responsibility of an appointee of the incumbent governor, subject to Senate confirmation.

Talks help unravel Idaho, Washington tax 'border war'

BOISE (AP) — "We just haven't been communicating," House Speaker Tom Boyd said Friday after he and other leaders of the Idaho Legislature made a one-day trip to Olympia, Wash., to meet with their Washington legislative counterparts.

After the round of meetings with Washington officials, including Gov. Booth Gardner, Boyd said most of the friction between the two states could be resolved through cooperation.

"I think we have headed off some retaliatory legislation," Boyd said.

Idaho's "border war" with Washington and other states was touched off by Idaho Tax Commission efforts to levy Idaho income taxes on truckers and others who live in other states but spend at least part of their working day in Idaho.

Boyd said he also stressed to Washington officials that both states could benefit from cooperation in such areas as farm cooperation.

"The federal funds are drying up rapidly," he said.

Washington officials plan to visit the Idaho Legislature next year as part of the cooperative effort, said Rep. Dean Haugenson, R-Coeur d'Alene, who has been working on the program for months.

Lt. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter called the trip "extremely positive."

Otter is head of the international marketing arm of the J.R. Simplot Co. He said he stressed the possibilities of "dramatically enhancing" foreign trade, particularly with the Pacific Rim.

Navy bumping photos released

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon on Friday released videotape and still photographs of last week's incident in which two Navy warships were deliberately bumped by Soviet vessels in the Black Sea.

The photographs document the Pentagon's assertion that the destroyer USS Caron and cruiser USS Yorktown were hit on purpose by the Soviet ships.

Indeed, the videotape shows the Yorktown was bumped not once as originally reported, but twice as it steamed on a straight course.

The Feb. 12 confrontation occurred off the Soviet Union's Crimea peninsula after the two Navy vessels were ordered to assert their international navigation rights by sailing within 12 miles of the Soviet coast.

Arms strategy to be planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl agreed Friday to devise a comprehensive Western arms control strategy to confront the Soviet Union with "realism, strength and alliance unity."

Kohl ended a two-day trip to Washington with a meeting and lunch at the White House in which he and Reagan congratulated each other on the recently signed intermediate-range nuclear Forces Treaty and hailed the NATO effort to sort out potentially conflicting arms control goals.

"We agreed that we must deal with the Soviet Union from a position of realism, strength and alliance unity," Reagan said in an East Room farewell to the chancellor.

A NATO summit meeting in Brussels March 2-3 "will provide an opportunity to continue discussions on these important matters within the alliance as a whole," Reagan said.

Since reaching agreement with the Soviets to eliminate land-based nuclear missiles with ranges between 500 and 3,125 miles, the United States has been involved in an intensive set of discussions with allies to set priorities for further talks with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and his aides.

Among the allies, West Germany has been most concerned about future military arrangements because of the position on NATO's front lines, and those concerns were reflected in Kohl's comments as he stood at Reagan's side.

Dallas police support shown

DALLAS (AP) — A crowd of 75 people waved signs and released blue balloons Friday in support of Dallas police, after officers killed two men who threatened them with weapons in separate incidents.

Minutely leaders and the City Council have berated the department for the past two years for being trigger-happy when confronting suspects, especially blacks and Hispanics, but others have rallied around police.

There have been police casualties, too, including two officers slain last month.

Early Friday, police shot and killed a white man who used a hunting knife to cut an officer who had chased the man's car during a robbery investigation.

High winds rake California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The second blast of fierce Santa Ana winds in a week raked southern California Friday, felling trees that killed a child, downing dozens of power lines and fanning fires that left about 50 people homeless.

Damage to campuses and danger from flying debris forced a school district to cancel classes for 20,000 students, as the Coast Guard searched the stormy ocean for a missing yachtsman.

The latest blast of high wind hit late Thursday and before dawn Friday and reached 70 mph at Monument Peak in San Diego County, where Interstate 8 was temporarily closed, and 50 mph at Ontario International Airport, the National Weather Service said.

Noriega charges examined

WASHINGTON (AP) — At Panama's request, a high State Department official sounded out the Justice Department about the possibility of dropping drug trafficking charges against Panamanian strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega, the State Department said Friday.

Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams made the inquiry before meeting privately Wednesday in Miami with Panamanian President Eric Arturo Delvalle, State Department spokesman Charles Rodman said.

Rodman suggested that Abrams anticipated that Delvalle would raise the possibility "at their meeting."

Noriega denied an account in The New York Times that said Abrams told Delvalle the indictment might be dropped if Noriega withdrew from politics and went into exile.

The Times cited U.S. officials and congressional staff members as saying Rodman said Abrams met with Justice Department officials merely to ask for a "legal opinion."

Raising of the possibility suggested Panamanian interest in a deal under which Noriega, head of Panama's Defense Forces, would fill his longstanding U.S. objective by withdrawing from politics.

"Abrams made no deal, offered no deal and was not in a position to offer a deal," Rodman said.

He said the indictment against Noriega was "obviously based on strong evidence, and we have every intention on carrying through with them."

Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland had no immediate comment. He said he would have to check with Assistant Attorney General William Weld, the Justice Department official with whom Abrams spoke.

Authorities puzzled by ax slayings

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — A teen-ager was charged Friday with the ax slaying of his parents, a brother and a sister as authorities and friends puzzled for a key to the sudden change in the studious, church-going youth.

David Brom, 16, who shaved the sides of his head and fashioned his hair into spiked punk style the day of the slayings, was arrested after an all-night manhunt.

"There's a lot of tears here," said Mike Leahy, principal at Lourdes High School, where Brom was a sophomore. "There is surprise, shock and disbelief... It may subside for a short while, but it will return."

Brom appeared calm during a 15-minute arraignment in which he was charged with four counts of first-degree murder and eight counts of second-degree murder.

The charges allege different degrees of premeditation or intent. He did not enter a plea.

According to the complaint, "One person indicated that on Feb. 17, David Brom said he was going to kill his parents that night, and another person indicated that she had a telephone conversation with David Brom on Feb. 18 during which he told her he had killed his parents."

"No one knew except the friends he told, and they didn't tell anyone," said Charles Von Wald, Olmsted County sheriff. A rumor about the killings finally reached teachers at Lourdes school, and they notified authorities.

Shultz may visit Syria

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz "most likely" will visit Syria when he goes to the Middle East next week and is leaving his options open for a return to the region after a NATO summit meeting in early March, U.S. officials said Friday.

As Shultz set out for Moscow on a trip in which he will seek Soviet backing for his peace-making venture, his Mideast journey was taking on dramatic new proportions.

Shultz's purpose in going to Damascus would be to disclose the U.S. drive for Arab-Israeli negotiations with President Hafez Assad, whose support for any long-term settlement in the Middle East is considered essential by specialists in the State Department's Near East Bureau.

Soviets hold treaty hearing

MOSCOW (AP) — The Red Army's chief of staff said Friday the superpower missile treaty will bring "tens of thousands" of his soldiers from their present duties, and a general said it would save the country more than $80 million.

Marshal Sergei F. Akhromeyev, the military chief of staff, and Maj. Gen. Vladimir I. Medvedev were among top officials called to speak before a special panel of the Supreme Soviet parliament considering ratification of the pact.

The treaty to ban superpower medium- and shorter-range nuclear missiles was signed by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and President Reagan on Dec. 8.

Divers find Dutch wreckage

FREMANTLE, Australia (AP) — Divers said Friday they found silver bullion on the wreck of a Dutch trading ship that sank off western Australia in 1712.

The wreck of the Zuyppoord lies at the bottom of a cliff about 400 miles north of Fremantle in only 10 feet of water, but the area is constantly buffeted by heavy seas.

Graham Henderson, curator of maritime archaeology at the Maritime Museum in Western Australia state, said the conditions make it possible to dive there only a few times a year.

He said the ship was headed for what is now Indonesia when it foundered on a reef.

He put no value on the silver coins, which along with spoon-shaped ballast blocks, clay pipes and glassware are to be displayed in the museum.

Manila reports rice shortage

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Philippines faces a rice shortage and must import 260,000 tons, because low rainfall last year resulted in an 8.7 percent decline in domestic production, a senior agriculture official said.

Conrado Gouan, undersecretary of agriculture, told a House subcommittee Thursday that merchants already were hoarding rice in anticipation of a market shortage.

Mediator suspends peace negotiations

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Peace talks between the leftist Nicaraguan government and Contra rebels broke down Friday and their mediator indirectly blamed the Sandinistas for not accepting a new cease-fire proposal.

Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, the head of the Roman Catholic Church in Nicaragua, abruptly suspended the talks in mid-afternoon, expressing disappointment that his proposal had not been accepted "in principle" by both sides.

Victor Hugo Tinoco, Nicaragua's deputy foreign minister, said the cardinal called off the talks before he could deliver a formal, written response that would have accepted the mediator's five-point plan.

The plan, offered by Obando y Bravo Thursday, called on the Contras to accept a cease-fire in exchange for four major concessions by the Sandinistas, including a total amnesty for all political prisoners and full freedom of the press.

Contra negotiators told a news conference Thursday night that they accepted the cardinal's proposal "in principle," while Tinoco called it "interesting and constructive," but said it needed clarification.

Paul Reichler, a Washington, D. C., attorney advising the Sandinistas, said earlier Friday that President Daniel Ortega had initially instructed his negotiators not to discuss Obando y Bravo's proposal at the bargaining table with the Contras.

Reichler said Ortega's instructions came by telephone Thursday night, shortly after Obando y Bravo offered his plan to break what he called an impasse in a discussion on defining the objectives of a cease-fire.

The attorney said Ortega suggested that Roger Fisher, a Harvard professor who heads the Institute for Conflict Resolution in Boston, draw up a new cease-fire plan, drawing on the proposals of the government and the Contras.

In a communique, Obando y

Bravo rejected that suggestion.

No new date was set for further negotiations, although both sides expressed their willingness to continue the talks.

The cardinal's communique said that "after all the meetings that they have had, the mediators believe that the acceptance, in principle, of its proposal would favor the rapid advance of the cease-fire negotiations."

The communique also said the government and the Contras should give "their negotiators" enough decision-making ability to resolve problems that present themselves in the negotiations.

Protests, clashes follow prayers

JERUSALEM (AP) — Arabs and Israeli soldiers fought with stones and tear gas after Friday Muslim prayers, a weekly ritual in the occupied lands since riots began Dec. 8, and hundreds of police reinforcements moved into Jerusalem.

No deaths or serious injuries were reported during clashes in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel has occupied since capturing them from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war.

Fifty-five Palestinians have been killed in the U.N. figures.

Neil Kinnock, leader of Britain's opposition Labor Party who is visiting Israel, said soldiers are using self-raised dum-dum bullets, which expand when they hit a target and cause greater damage.

Israeli officials have denied similar charges by Palestinian doctors.

Police spokesman Avi Zelba said reinforcements were being brought to Arab east Jerusalem from all over Israel and their specific activities would depend on developments.

He would not provide numbers, but Israeli radio said 1,500 new-officers were being moved into the holy city to supplement its normal force of about 1,000.

It said the first 600 were deployed Friday around Temple Mount, where protests have occurred outside the Al-Aqsa—Dome of the Rock mosque.

Police Commissioner David Krauss said one reason for strengthening the force was to prevent anti-Israeli demonstrations when Secretary of State George P. Shultz visits next week.

At Al-Aqsa mosque on Temple Mount, known in Arabic as Haram es-Sharif, the leader of noon prayers urged Palestinians to step up the struggle against Israeli authorities.

He called it a jihad, a holy war, and said the entire Islamic world should join it.

Gooding County, city to apply for new grant

By JANE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Gooding County and Gooding city will join forces to apply for a $750,000 Idaho Community Development Block Grant for improvements at the now empty, state-owned tuberculosis hospital.

Carolee Bore, representing the Region IV Industrial Development Association, told a public hearing in Gooding this week the funds would be used to "leverage funds from the state Legislature" to complete a proposed $3 million "prison" project at the site.

The city and county were asked by the Idaho Department of Commerce to make the application, local officials said. If successful, it will be the fourth time grant funds have been awarded to proposed projects at the tuberculosis hospital, although none of the previous grants have yet been used at the site.

Bill Block, consulting engineer on the grant application, said approximately $300,000 of the latest grant being sought would be used for infrastructure improvements at the south Gooding site. Work would include extending water and sewer lines, improving a sewer lift station, adding new road access and improving existing roads.

The remaining grant funds would be used to "rehabilitate the building and bring it up to code."

Under questioning by Gooding resident Bart Morrow, Block said exact plans for the building renovation are not presently available, but would be provided by the state Department of Corrections if the project is approved.

Morrow also asked how the project was being planned since it was possible the Legislature would adjourn before the March 18 type application approval date. "How can they (legislators) know if they need to make an appropriation if they adjourn before the grant is approved?" he asked.

Morrow told Morrow, who was only assisting with the grant application and was not involved in the legislative portion of the project.

Morrow also pointed out the "large" grant application represents at least 50 percent of the funds available in the public facilities funding section of the program for the entire state.

Gooding Mayor Gene Heller said, "We're sorry we can't give you more information at this time, but we didn't know about this grant proposal) until two weeks ago."

The county will be the lead entity in the project, with the city serving a supporting role because the facility is located within city limits, he said.

The city received a $420,000 Idaho block grant last year to improve the city's water system and install new water storage tanks.

This is the fourth grant application for projects at the TB-hospital site. A $350,000 federal Economic Development Administration grant was awarded in 1977 for improvements in anticipation of a state women's prison at the hospital.

The project was transferred to Orofino following intense local opposition, and the grant money was never used.

A similar situation occurred in 1984 when Gooding received a $750,000 grant to improve the infrastructure in anticipation of a privately funded regional prison at the site. But when developer Buckingham Securities Ltd. of Pennsylvania could not get financial backing for the project, plans were abandoned and again the grant had to be returned.

The third grant was provided by the Idaho Commission for Children and Youth last summer.

Morrow, and his parents Don and Mae Morrow who own property adjacent to the hospital, obtained the $10,000 grant for a feasibility study to examine developing a regional juvenile detention center in the building.

Bart Morrow said his family supports a beneficial use of the facility and wished the county well in securing the grant. He also asked that his family's proposal not be included in any way in the grant application.

Mae Morrow said after the hearings in treatment techniques made long-term hospitalization unnecessary.

The hospital, built in 1955, ceased operation as a tuberculosis sanitarium in 1970 when advancements in treatment techniques made long-term hospitalization unnecessary.

It has been used as the county courthouse, as home to the Walker Alcohol Treatment Center and as a state office building since closing as a hospital, but has been unused since 1981.

Minor injuries result from bus collision

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

BUTL — None of the 29 children aboard a Clover Lutheran School bus were seriously injured when their bus was struck by a car Friday morning, but five children received minor injuries requiring medical attention.

A child in the car that struck the bus also received minor injuries.

The accident occurred at 8:56 a.m. at the intersection of county roads 3700 North and 1500 East as the bus was on its way to the Filer school, Idaho State Police officials said.

Five children aboard the bus — Ernest Griggs, Daniel Hawkins, Stephanie Quessnell, Donley Bothof and Chris Voss — suffered minor injuries and were taken to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center where they were treated and released.

Gary Meyer, principal of Clover Lutheran School, said about 10 other children suffered "bumps and bruises, but nothing that required medical attention."

Barbara Wiebe, one of the car's three passengers, also received minor injuries. Hospital officials said Wiebe, 12, was treated at MYVMC and released.

The car's two other passengers, Heidi Wiebe, 7, and Becky Wiebe, 6, were not injured.

State police said the accident occurred when Peggy Wiebe, 47, was driving northbound on 1800 East and failed to stop at a stop sign. The car she was driving struck the right rear end of the school bus, which was carrying 29 children northbound on 1500 East.

Wiebe was cited for inattentive driving, state police said.

Meyer said a couple of the children in the back of the bus "had no idea they were hit. They thought they had gone into a ditch or something."

He added, "I guess the car hit the bus hard enough that they thought it was going to tip over — That was the sensation."

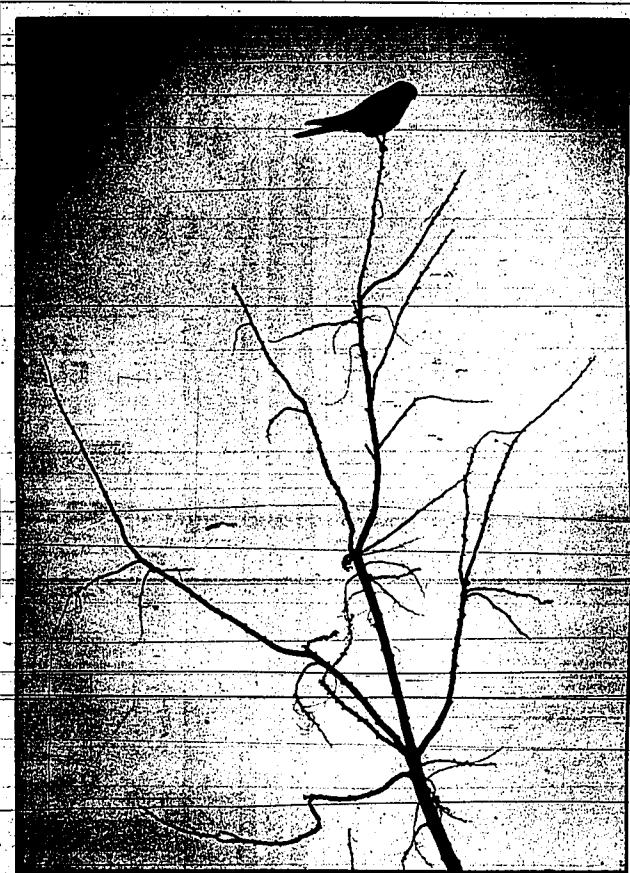

The principal said he had received approximately 25 calls by early Friday evening concerning the accident. School officials on Friday called the parents of all the children aboard the bus, he said.

Four of the children on the bus had been transported to the hospital by ambulance. Meyer said Quessnell, 12, suffered a broken or strained finger; Griggs, 12, suffered a shoulder injury, but no bones were broken; Hawkins, 12, suffered a bruised hip; and Bothof, 13, hit his head and knee.

Both, 12, was taken to the hospital by his father. Meyer said he had hit his head against another student on the bus.

According to state police, the school bus sustained approximately $2,500 worth of damage. The car that Wiebe was driving, a 1983 Oldsmobile, was totaled.

The intersection where the accident occurred is located roughly four miles south and one mile west of Butl.

Regulators approve hike in phone rates

The Associated Press

BOISE — State utility regulators have approved dramatic increases in the basic service charges for Albion and two other small Idaho telephone companies hit hard by the demise of a industry pool used to subsidize the high cost of rural phone service.

The new rates approved for Albion, Rockland and Cambridge telephone companies are as much as triple the old ones. But the Public Utilities Commission order still granted the utilities only about half the increases they were seeking.

To go further, the regulators said, could force many customers to halt their telephone service.

"The commission has an historic commitment to the goal of universal service and recognizes its tremendous economic and social importance," the order said. "Adoption of the local rates proposed ... would jeopardize our universal service goal."

In addition to the increases in basic service charges, the commission also authorized the three companies to raise pay phone calls from a dime to a quarter, begin charging 30 cents for directory assistance calls and boost the charge for service calls. Regulators ordered an end to any charges for so-called touch-tone phone service.

Under the order, residential service for southern customers of Albion will more than double from $6.20 a month to $17 and business bills will rise from $8.45 to $22.50.

The basic residential service rates for Rockland customers in southeastern Idaho will rise from $4.50 or $5 to $15 a month. Business service bills will more than triple from $7 to $22.50.

Cambridge, which serves customers in the Washington County area, will increase residential rates from $4.25 to between $10.50 and $12.50 while business rates will jump from $9.50 to between $21 and $26.

Rockland and Albion had asked for new rates nearly double those authorized by the PUC. While the commission's proposed rates were only slightly higher than the level approved and in one instance the commission actually approved a rate above this one requested.

A spokesman for the three independent companies had conceded that if rates like those requested had been approved service costs would be unaffordable to as many as a third of the companies' customers.

The problems created for the companies by the loss of the intrastate revenue pool prompted the commission to propose creation of a universal service fund to keep all phone costs within 25 percent of the statewide average.

The old subsidy pool was a casualty of the court-ordered break-up of the nationwide Bell Telephone system.

Attempts in the Legislature last year to create a universal service fund failed with the demise of a sweeping telephone deregulation bill.

New court reforms aid administration

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County judicial system is dispensing justice faster, and due to reforms in Idaho court administration.

"This has resulted from not only having us roll up our sleeves and go to work, but by re-allocating our resources," said Daniel Hurlbutt, district judge and trial court administrator for Idaho's 15th judicial district.

For example, Hurlbutt said civil cases are being resolved almost twice as fast now as in 1980, on the average.

In 1980, the civil cases would take an average of 640 days to resolve, Hurlbutt said, but now that time has been reduced to 240 days.

Cases are taking less time because the Idaho Supreme Court, which manages all Idaho courts under the state's unified court system, decided in 1982 to start reducing court delays.

"We now have time limits we follow to guide how fast a case should be resolved," Hurlbutt said. "Idaho now is truly a leader

Hagerman plans to extend sewer line

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — The city of Hagerman wants to extend a sewer pipeline 160 feet to the middle of the Snake River.

But, says Mayor Marie Owsley, because of government regulations and requirements, buying the pipe and installing it may be the least expensive and fastest part of the project.

The city completed a sewer pipeline to the river last summer, but needs to extend it to alleviate an odor problem at the city's edge.

At the Hagerman City Council meeting this week, Owsley said the city must first request an easement from the Idaho Department of Lands in Boise. This written request must include aerial photos and a legal description of the land to the center of the river, he said. There must be four drawings from four engineers showing the plan, profiles of the contour of the river bottom at 10-foot intervals and profiles of the proposed pipelines.

"They want four different ideas on how we're going to put the pipe in," said Owsley.

The State Land Board and also the Army Corps of Engineers must grant permits for use of the bottom of the river, he said, estimating it no smell. But when the treated sewage enters the river, it does not wash away. In its undiluted form, the sewage causes an oxygen shortage in the water and creates foul-smelling methane gas.

Asked the council to extend the pipeline to the center of the river.

Tuesday, Owsley said he blames the odor problem on the project's engineers, who designed the pipeline to end at the river's edge.

"I kind of told them it was their fault," he said.

The Hagerman sewer system was started in 1975 and has had continuous problems and construction work for 12 years.

The pipeline extension, said Owsley, is "just one more little hitch in laying our sewer to rest."

In other business:

• The council decided to renew a contract with the county sheriff's department for police patrol in Hagerman. But the contract was renewed only until the end of the fiscal year in October and it included provisions that the resident deputy would live within city limits and his patrol would include morning, noon and afternoon duty at the Hagerman school.

Although the council has asked for these revisions, Sheriff Robert Aja has not yet agreed to meet them.

Owsley also said the deputy should give regular reports at council meetings and, in general, have working communication with city officials.

• Gary Grissom, owner of the Quik Stop store in Hagerman, said he plans to buy land at the north end of the city to build an overnight RV camp and supply store.

Grissom asked the council if the land, formerly the Farmer's Exchange trailer sales lot, was eligible for city water and sewer services.

Council members said they have no objection to hook-ups for the campground.

Grissom said he will proceed with his plans to buy the land, plant green shrubs around the perimeter, and make 20 to 30 RV parking sites.

Grissom said Hagerman has a shortage of places for people to stay. Last summer, he said, people were "begging for a place to stay" but had to be turned away. Grissom says he also plans to provide guided tours in the Hagerman area.

• Owsley said Victor Browlee will work as a dog catcher in Hagerman this summer. Through the College of Southern Idaho Title V Program, Browlee will work at no cost to the city. His other duties will include street clean-up, weed spraying and park maintenance.

Bomb threat Court closes bank

TWIN FALLS — The Kimberly branch of the Idaho First National Bank was closed for business Friday after being targeted in a bomb threat issued at approximately 4:16 p.m., bank and police officials said.

Continued from Page B1 too poor to afford a private attorney. In the past, judges would give criminal defendants time between the filing of the case and the initiation of criminal procedure to talk to private attorneys and work out payment procedures, Wood said.

"That's how a lot of people work out arrangements with private attorneys," Wood said.

But now, a judge decides at a defendant's first appearance in court whether he is indigent, and if so, appoints the public defender's office to the case.

Pope blames East-West rivalry for Third World problems

POPE JOHN PAUL II
Lays blame for world ills

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Friday blamed the rivalry between East and West for social and economic ills in the Third World and delivered a sweeping indictment of totalitarianism, materialism and "all-consuming desire for profit."

In his seventh encyclical, the pope accused both the U.S. and Soviet-led blocs — of imposing "imperialism" and "structures of sin" on developing nations, reducing them to "cogs on a gigantic wheel."

He also said the rivalry between the East and West was main reason for the widening gap between rich and poor countries.

"An unacceptably exaggerated concern for security... deadens the impulse toward united cooperation by all," he said.

"This obsession, he said, works to the detriment especially of peac-ful peoples who are impeded from their rightful access to the goods meant for all."

The encyclical called for reform of the international financial system and said the church could do its part by "superfluous" goods to help the poor.

The 102-page document also called for democratic political change in nations with corrupt, dictatorial or authoritarian governments.

The pope said the church took a critical view of both liberal capitalism and Marxist collectivism, saying both systems are imperfect and in need of urgent "radical correction."

The encyclical, titled in Latin "Sollicitudo Rei Socialis," or the social concern of the church, included some of the strongest statements on social and economic issues made by John Paul during his 9½ years as pope.

An encyclical is a formal papal letter written by the pope for the entire church. While encyclicals are not infallible pronouncements, Catholics are expected to heed the message.

The pope said his letter was addressed to all followers of the world's great religions.

The letter painted a bleak picture of the process of development, since the publication of Pope Paul VI's encyclical "Development of Peoples" in 1967.

Twenty years later, hopes for development "appear very far from being realized," and for many poor people the situation has noticeably worsened, John Paul said.

A Vatican official familiar with the drafting of the encyclical said it reflected the pope's Polish background and addressed issues facing people living in the Soviet bloc that were not raised in Paul VI's document.

Breaking new ground, John Paul singled out East-West rivalry as the cause of many of the world's problems.

"The conflicts... between East and West (are) an important cause of the retardation or stagnation of the South," he wrote. "The developing countries, instead of becoming autonomous nations concerned with their own progress, become parts of a machine, cogs on a gigantic wheel."

The present division of the world, the document added, "is a direct obstacle to the real transformation of the conditions of underdevelopment in the developing and less advanced countries."

World peace is inconceivable unless the world's leaders come to recognize that interdependence in itself demands the abandonment of the politics of blocs; the sacrifice of all forms of economic, military or political imperialism; and the transformation of mutual distrust into collaboration.

In an apparent reference to conditions in his native Poland, the pope complained of the suppression of economic initiative, which leads people to emigrate, and the denial of political and economic sovereignty in some countries.

"On the contrary it could be obligatory to sell these goods in order to provide food, drink, clothing and shelter for those who lack these things," he said.

Catholic Roger Etchegaray said the statement was mainly symbolic, recalling the time John Paul gave away his pastoral ring during a trip to Brazil. Etchegaray, president of the Vatican's Justice and Peace Commission, spoke at a news conference.

Professor critical of Mormon book

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A book by a Brigham Young University professor, claiming archaeological confirmation of the "Book of Mormon" is poorly done and based on meticulous theories which are unprovable, says a Maryland-based scholar.

"An Ancient American Setting for the Book of Mormon," by BYU anthropologist John W. Sorenson, places the people of the "Book of Mormon" in what he calls Mesocamerica, geographically the country of Mexico.

"I would suggest that 'Book of Mormon' archeology is not a very productive enterprise. I would guess that 200 or 300 years from now people will look back and not see it going anywhere," said John Carlson, director of the Center for Archaeology and assistant professor at the University of Maryland.

The "Book of Mormon," along with "Bible of Mormon," four volumes of scriptures, was published in 1830 and purports to be a religious history of an ancient civilization in the Americas visited by Jesus Christ. Church founder Joseph Smith said he translated the work from golden plates given him by an angel named Moroni.

Sorenson and Carlson were panelists at a lecture Thursday night sponsored by the B.H. Roberts Society, which is not affiliated with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints but serves as a forum for discussion of Mormon issues.

"There has never been one shred of physical evidence to prove the 'Book of Mormon,' and neither has there been any archaeological evidence to support the Mormon claim that early Mormons migrated from the Far East," Carlson said.

"There are some examples of 'Rorach archeology' here. You all know what the Rorach Test is," said Carlson. "That means taking something out of cultural context and saying, 'What does this look like to me?'"

No physical evidence is necessary, contended Sorenson, to prove that the Book of Mormon is real, and that early Mormons inhabited the area which is now Mexico.

"What is the evidence?" he asked Carlson and the audience of about 400.

Sorenson detailed his method, which was to draw conclusions from the original research of others.

Parkinson wants road work near Micron plant to continue

BOISE (AP) — Micron Technology Inc. Chairman Joe Parkinson has demanded that the Idaho Transportation Board follow through with road improvements near his company's southeast of Boise that have been delayed for three years ago.

"We have been patient and nice guys, but it hasn't worked," Parkinson told the board Thursday. "If we were raising potatoes, we probably would get a decision."

Parkinson asked the state to build a connecting highway from Interstate 84 near the Micron plant to Idaho Highway 21 at Diversion Dam. He also asked for widening and resurfacing of Federal Way from Gowen Road to the plant.

After Parkinson's presentation, board members said they would delay the job of the road project by the next regular board meeting, March 10-11.

Parkinson warned the board that its decision would play a role in Micron's choice of Boise or Portland.

Or, as the site for a new computer fabrication plant, that would employ 1,000 workers.

"It's not going to be a native-son decision here or not," said Parkinson, a Blackfoot native. "We had never considered another site other than Boise until recently, but it has been an eye-opener to see the commitment other states will make."

In the course of settling on a site for the new plant, Parkinson also has called for an engineering school at Boise State University, improved funding for public schools, and speedy construction of a new elementary school in southeast Boise, where many Micron workers live.

On Thursday, Parkinson asked the Transportation Board, "When is the road going to be built? We want a commitment. We've been sorely disappointed."

Governor pledges to improve highways

BOISE (AP) — Idaho has put off an investment in keeping up its highway system for too long, Gov. Cecil Andrus says, and the bills have come due.

"We have postponed maintenance and repair, and delayed modernization," Andrus told the Idaho Highway Users Association meeting here Thursday night.

"And like all problems that go unattended for a period of time, there is a day of reckoning. That day has arrived," Andrus said.

He renewed his call for a 5-cent per gallon increase in state fuel taxes, saying the money is necessary to improve Idaho highways. However, the only fuel tax increase bill, pending in the House, calls for an increase of 3/4 cent per gallon.

Action on the bill has been stalled pending a battle over how the additional revenue would be spent.

Andrus said he wants no change in the present distribution formula, which sends roughly two-thirds of the money to the Department of Transportation and about one-third to cities, counties and highway districts.

Keith Green, state highway administrator, said the road was put on the state's six-year plan in 1979 by House Speaker Tom Boyd. The cost was estimated at $5 million.

But federal funds this state was counting on dried up, stalling the project, Green said.

Now the road would cost $12 million to build, he said, because of inflation and changes in design. Federal funds remain tight, Green said.

Two men hold the arms of a 41-year-old woman attempting to jump from bridge into traffic in Portland

Alert passing motorists stop apparent jumper

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A Beaverton man who kept a woman from jumping into traffic on a busy freeway says the brief encounter seemed to last forever.

"I kept thinking I didn't want to make a mistake here and have her kill herself and take somebody else with her," Steve Ogden said Thursday. "It was the most helpless feeling I've ever had."

Ogden and his business partner, Carl Janis, were driving to a business meeting Thursday afternoon when they spotted the woman crouching on a five-inch ledge on an overpass spanning Interstate 84.

Ogden jumped out of the car and ran back to the woman while Janis drove on to call police. The woman was clinging to the 10-foot-high metal railing designed to keep jumpers off the bridge.

"I didn't know the proper thing to say," Ogden, 39, said. He searched his memory for scenes from movies in which rescuers calm despondent people, "persuading their life is worth living."

Drawing a blank, he chose a direct approach.

"I said, 'Let's talk, let's talk about what your problem is. You don't want to kill yourself,'" Ogden, 39, said.

The 41-year-old woman looked him in the eye and told him her name. But she said her problems could not be solved. She had tried.

Worrying that any abrupt movement might startle her, causing her to fall, Ogden kept talking, telling her they could work her problems out.

"I wanted her to keep looking at me and keep talking to me," Ogden said. "It seemed like an eternity, but I talked to her maybe five minutes."

Steed offers apology to Boyd, Ricks

BOISE (AP) — David C. Steed of Idaho Falls has formally apologized to Idaho House Speaker Tom Boyd, R-Genese, and Senate Republican Majority Leader Mark G. Ricks of Rexburg.

Steed, who operates as the Trial by Jury Committee, earlier this year called for Boyd's resignation and had distributed copies of a farm-operating loan Ricks had co-signed with his sons.

Those tactics were part of Steed's campaign against what he calls bank domination of the court system in bankruptcy proceedings. He is pushing legislation that would give voters a chance to reject a sitting judge if that judge is not opposed in an election.

Steed met with Boyd and Ricks this week and agreed to issue the public apology.

Steed said his assessment of Boyd was "ill-founded" and that he took "full responsibility for the embarrassment this has caused Sen. Ricks."

Steed said he had misinterpreted a newspaper article quoting Boyd as saying the position of banks would be crucial to success of farm loan mediation bills.

Boyd said he was satisfied with the letter of apology.

But Ricks said the letter of apology steered into more self-promotion and continued to cast aspersions about his financial affairs.

Woman given probation for shooting mate

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — A Kootenai woman who admitted guilt to shooting her husband last summer has received a withheld judgment and five years probation.

Pauline C. Fleury, 69, pleaded guilty last month to battery with intent to commit murder. She said the shooting at the couple's Kootenai home came after she had been emotionally and physically abused by Jesse Fleury for several years.

Fleury recovered from a head wound suffered in the shooting and the couple has divorced.

Mrs. Fleury said her husband had frequently molested young girls and threatened violence to anyone who attempted to stop him. He has been charged with two counts of lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor and with a arraignment in 2nd District Court.

Bishop opposes sex ed plan

BOISE (AP) — The leader of the Roman Catholic Church in Idaho says he is against discussion of abortion and artificial contraception in a sex education program being developed in the Boise School District.

Abortion and artificial contraception are "immoral," Bishop Sylvester Treinen said, and should not be part of any class offering, even an elective.

"Unnatural contraception is taught, kids get the idea, I can do this and avoid all the damages," Treinen said Thursday. "Then they're trapped if something happens and might go out and get an abortion."

About 100 people sharing Treinen's views showed up at a Boise School Board meeting two weeks ago. The board took no action, but two committees will begin developing and reviewing the course's content in early March.

A 28-member citizens' committee recommended that sexual abstinence before marriage be the focus of an elective offered to high school juniors and seniors.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

"Americans detect all lies except lies spoken in public or private lies."

— Edgar Watson Howe.

A defender should avoid lying to his partner... unless, of course, he is more likely to deceive declarer than to mislead partner.

West leads fourth, down from his longest and strongest... and East wins the heart king. East returns the heart four, and South plays either the queen or the jack.

West ducks the second heart, things will probably work out better for the defense. But West should not follow with the deuce, confirming an original holding of five hearts.

Instead, West should follow with the six, a play consistent with the hold-up of his heart ace.

Consider South's problem now. If West has only four hearts, it's best to start the spades. Why risk a club finesse when it can result in the loss of a club, three hearts and a spade?

And when South leads spades, West wins his ace, cashes three more hearts and coyly says something about how careless he is when sorting his cards.

Send bridge questions to The Aces, P.O. Box 32163, Dallas, Texas 75232, with self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

Stay tuned tonight for Olympic-scale Battle of the Brians

By JENNIFER PARMELEE
The Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta — They have competed against each other for 10 years, from local ice rinks to international arenas, 6,000 brothers in a fraternity that deifies their talent, nerve and total devotion.

More Olympics — D3

The climax of their long but friendly rivalry comes at these Winter Games in what has been billed "The Battle of the Brians," as in former and current world champions Boltano and Orser.

The past month or so has been difficult because this big rivalry has been pushed on us and a lot of people are trying to make us enemies," said Orser, 26, a nine-time Canadian national champion. "But Brian and I are very, very good friends."

BRIAN BOITANO
Classic moves

Boltano leads the standings headed into tonight's climactic long program (5:15 p.m. MST; ABC will broadcast it on a tape-delay basis).

But it's by a tiny margin. He has 2.0 points to Orser's 2.2; Alexander Fadeev of the Soviet Union is third with 2.6.

"Never underestimate Fadeev," Orser said. "He's just as much a contender as Brian Boltano or myself." But while Fadeev is unshakable in the compulsory figures that count for 30 percent of the overall score, he is not a dazzling free skater like the two Brians and isn't a favorite for the gold.

Orser and Boltano, meanwhile, say they're skating the best in their lives. Appropriately enough, both are wearing dress-military uniforms for their long programs — something they dismiss as sheer coincidence.

In almost every other aspect of style, however, the two Brians vary greatly.

The 5-foot-6, 131-pound Orser has the lithe gymnast's body that allows him to move over the ice with flowing grace. His footwork and spins are more showy, while his long programs are generally flashier, with more artistic touches, than Boltano's.

The taller, more powerfully built American, who began his career as a roller skater, has the slight edge technically. His jumps are higher and a bit more difficult. And he's also worked hard to add humor and creative touches to routines that a past critic once dismissed as "mechanical."

At 24, with his quiet confidence and open-faced good looks, he is considered a worthy and equally dominant heir to the popular American titlist Scott Hamilton, the 1984 Olympic champion.

The Canadian arrives with the trappings of world champion, having climbed out of a "runner-up rut" in major international competitions by winning last year's World Championships in Cincinnati with six-zipling, short and long programs. Before that, he had been second in three successive world events and in the 1984 Olympics. "I've always felt I could win, but something would happen, something I messed up or someone else just skating my best when I wasn't quite my best," Orser said. "But winning the world made the difference."

He began consulting a sports psychologist after the 1986 World Championships, in which he hid in the locker room, with showers on, to block out the sound of other competitors, then fell on two of his patented triple axels when he took the ice.

"There was a mental block which prevented me from landing that jump when I had to," Orser recalled. "And I didn't want to risk that again."

Now that he has fought back what he calls "his fear of winning," Orser plans to build on the show-all-around and technique that were already there to give him the edge over Boltano. He has also enlisted a team of specialists — ranging from a Rolfer, a deep-tissue massage, to

Spartans capture first GSC cage title

By RON BENNETT
Special to The Times-News

IDAHO FALLS — Sometimes being top gun has its disadvantages. If you win, it's expected. If you don't, you have some unhappy fans.

But even the most presumptuous basketball fans couldn't have expected the kind of show that the Minico Spartans turned in Friday night. In defeating Bonnevill 100-68, Minico was simply stunning, giving officials in nearly every aspect of the game.

The victory, combined with Pocatello's 68-55 defeat of Idaho Falls in Pocatello Friday night, also gave the third-ranked Spartans the Gem State Conference basketball championship, the first in the school's history.

"I know that, at the beginning of the season we were the biggest show-in-town, and that's a lot of pressure on the table. But I think we've lived up to our billing," said Minico Coach Craig Dexter.

With the regular season at 10-4 overall and 14-4 in conference, Pocatello has the same league record, but lost twice to the Spartans during the regular season.

Minico, the top seed in Region III, will sit out the first round of the postseason tournament next Tuesday and host the winner of the Twin Falls-Burley game next Thursday.

"Officially, I guess we're co-champions of the GSC, but where we won both games during the season, I'd say we won the moral championship," said Dexter.

One thing is certain: Minico would get no argument from Bonnevill as to which team is the best in the conference. The Spartans annihilated the Bees, a team which defeated Minico earlier in the year in Rupert.

"Minico just played extremely well," said Bonnevill Coach Mike Jorgenson. "We're definitely struggling right now with our confidence, but Minico had a lot to gain tonight."

The Spartans left no doubt as to their intent from the very beginning. In the opening five minutes of play, Minico sank 10 of 12 shots from the floor, including a pair of three-pointers from 6-foot, 4-inch junior Dan Foulton to race to a 29-7 lead. The game effectively was over.

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho's women came up with their first victory over an nationally-ranked team Thursday night and nullified down a berth in the Region III tournament in Coach d'Alene next month along the way.

"As far as I'm concerned this is the biggest win in CSI women's basketball history," exulted second-year Coach Ben Stroud after the 76-68 decision over 15th-ranked Utah Valley.

The victory came when Audrey

Wood River's Mike Healy and Brad Jaques battle for rebound against Buhl's Casey Boyer.

Indians throw A-2 basketball into chaos

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

BUHL — Sometimes, timing is everything.

Buhl High boys' basketball coach Tom Chivers, a patient practitioner of patient offense, sent his team out in the second half of his crucial South-Central Idaho Conference game with Wood River Friday night picking-and-rolling and running-and-gunning. Sixteen minutes and 46 points later it had its first SCIC victory of the season, 76-71, over the second-ranked Wolverines.

"Maybe we should have waited for the (postseason District 4) tournament to try this offense," said Chivers. "But I kind of think that if you wait until tomorrow, sometimes tomorrow never comes."

Chivers noted the presence of Jerome High School Coach Ben Allen, whose Tigers will visit Buhl Tuesday in the regular-season finale for both teams.

"I'm sure he saw a lot tonight, and he'll have his team ready," Chivers said. "We don't have a chance of getting the top seed (in the district tournament), but this was an important game for us anyway. We needed this win to build our confidence."

What he also did was throw the three-team A-2 district into chaos. Wood River could have clinched the top seed in the district tournament with a victory Friday; now that will depend upon next Tuesday's Jerome-Buhl game. The loss dropped the Wolverines to 14-5 for the season, 9-2 in the SCIC and 2-2 in district. Jerome, 15-4, 4-3 and 2-1, respectively, can clinch the top seed and first-round bye for district by beating Buhl here Tuesday. But if the Indians defeat Jerome here Tuesday, Wood River will get the top seed and a first-round bye if the Wolverines beat Burley in Hiley tonight for the SCIC championship.

SCIC records are the first tiebreaker in District 4 A-2. Burley, an A-1 team that is a member of the conference, is 4-19 overall and 4-1 in the SCIC; its only league loss coming to Wood River. Hence if the Wolverines win tonight's 8 p.m. game with the Bobcats, they're the league champions.

Chivers described his approach Friday night as "penetrate-and-dish" basketball, and the Wolverines — playing head-up in their man-to-man defense — weren't prepared for it. The Indians spread the Wood River defense and attacked the gaps.

Point guard Casey Boyer, off-guard Joel Cannon and forward Eric Boon and Steve Lukkenius did damage, but it was senior forward Brad Armitage and center Scott Erickson who made it work.

The 5-foot, 10-inch Armitage and the 6-4 Erickson drew the assignment of clearing the much bigger Wood River front line. Armitage, Bradshaw, Brandon, Crego and Mike Healy and they succeeded magnificently. Armitage had a dozen of Buhl's 30 rebounds; most of them in the second half.

Wood River played the first half as if it would have little trouble with Buhl, which was hampered by foul trouble by Cannon, who scored just two points and no field goals in the first half. Thirty-four seconds shy of halftime, Buhl trailed by seven points, but backed-back three-point goals by Boyer cut the deficit to 39-31 at intermission.

Then in an astonishing 5 1/2 minutes in the third period, the Indians outscored the Wolverines 17-5 and forced six turnovers in the process from the clearly unsettled Wood River offense.

CSI women stun U-Valley; qualify for postseason

By LARRY HOVEY

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho's women came up with their first victory over an nationally-ranked team Thursday night and nullified down a berth in the Region III tournament in Coach d'Alene next month along the way.

"As far as I'm concerned this is the biggest win in CSI women's basketball history," exulted second-year Coach Ben Stroud after the 76-68 decision over 15th-ranked Utah Valley.

The victory came when Audrey

Uries and Rose Stuart calmly hit six straight free throws off the closing 40 seconds to stave off the rallying Wolverines.

"I think this win also adds some credibility to our program. We're going to regionals with a realistic chance of winning for the first time. We've beaten Salt Lake (Community College) and Utah Valley this year and although we haven't beaten North Idaho, we played to within four of them and that puts beating them into the realm of possibility," Stroud said.

The Eagles, shooting exceptionally well in a 10-minute period of the first half, pushed out to leads as big as 14 points in the first 20 minutes. But the poised Wolverines, getting 22 points from Elaine Frane, refused to wilt, and managed a couple of leads in the closing six minutes.

But the Eagles took the lead for keeps at the 2:48 mark when Hettie Dejong hit three of four free throw attempts. After a Utah Valley bucket, Monica Gustin and Lisa Phillips canned field goals to open up a 69-66 lead.

It was at that point that Urie hit four straight free throws and Stuart added a pair to blunt Utah Valley's bid to trade fouls for possible possessions.

"We haven't beaten Utah Valley in a long time and last year, in our first game against them, they beat us 101-51," said Stroud. "So when we called that last time out all I said to them was '101-58'."

"That's what finally got them going. Up to that point, I didn't think we were playing with much emotion. That was sweet," Stroud continued. "We handled their press pretty well for the first time, and that probably was the difference. That and hitting our free throws down the stretch."

And he couldn't help exclaiming "did you notice that the bulk of our points came from five freshmen?" The other thing I like is we shot four fouls shots at their place last night. They shoot 30 on our home floor."

The victory left CSI at 15-6 for the season, 9-2 in the regional conference, and 1-1 in the region. Wood River placed tie for the regional lead with an 11-3 record. The Wolverines are 20-3 overall.

POST FALLS — Burley held Moscow scoreless for 6 minutes and 32 seconds of third quarter, but the Bears' scoring drought was not enough to keep them from advancing to today's consolation championship game of the Idaho Class A-1 Girls' Basketball Tournament.

The Bears' 56-42 victory Friday ended Burley's season at 20-8 and its first appearance in the state A-1 tournament in two straight games.

Texaco stock jumps on Pickens' feeler

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street's reaction to a stock higher Friday following word that Eugene Pickens was seeking to buy at least 15 percent of the beleaguered oil giant, a stake similar to that held by another corporate raider.

Texaco, which has been organizing itself as it prepares to emerge from Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection, has been fighting efforts by Carl C. Icahn — its largest shareholder — to strip the company of its anti-takeover defenses.

Company officials have feared that Icahn or another raider would try to take the company over and sell its assets to boost the value of their stock.

Pickens' arrival on the scene only heightened speculation that such a takeover was in the works.

In nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, Texaco's stock closed Friday at $42.62 1/2 per share, up $1.87 1/2.

The company learned of Pickens' action in a letter Tuesday, Texaco spokesman KC Foley Manner said. The letter said Mesa Limited Partnership, an oil and gas concern controlled by Pickens, had told the Federal Trade Commission it wanted to buy more than $15 million worth of Texaco stock.

If neither the FTC nor the Justice Department objects, Pickens could acquire up to 15 percent of Texaco's outstanding shares, Mesa also asked the government for a speedy review of its request, which would cut 15 days off the required 60-day waiting time.

Texaco president James W. Kinard told reporters Friday that he had "no idea" what Pickens' intentions were and that the company could ward off any threatening moves by Pickens or Icahn.

"I think we have appropriate bylaws and charter provisions to make sure our shareholders' wealth is protected," he said.

Icahn controls at least 14.8 percent of Texaco's 245 million shares. He has said he would seek to install himself and four associates on the company's board of directors, and has been pressing the nation's third-largest oil company to remove anti-takeover provisions contained in its charter.

Pickens told The New York Times on Thursday that he would support Icahn in that effort. Andrew Craig, Icahn's lawyer, said.

a spokesman for Pickens, said Friday there would be no comment on Mesa's Texaco filing.

Pickens and Icahn are well known in the oil patch.

In 1984, Mesa picked up $213 million after a run Pickens made on Gulf Oil Co. led to its sale to Chevron Corp. Mesa then offered $9.3 billion for Phillips Petroleum Co., only to accept an $50 million profit for Icahn.

Phillips bought the shares back in 1985.

Soon afterward, Icahn led a group of investors with an $8.1 billion bid for Phillips that led to another stock buyback and a $50 million profit for Icahn.

Several analysts suggested that Icahn and Pickens could profit by making simultaneous attacks on Texaco, even if they do not cooperate directly.
