House passes development bond measure

The Associated Press

BOISE — Sponsors called it an economic development tool that could provide the needed capital for companies to grow and provide new jobs.

Opponents called it an unproven idea that could get the state into serious financial trouble.

But in the end, sponsors prevailed, winning a 47-37 vote in the Idaho House on Monday for a bill allowing the Idaho Housing Agency to raise up to $40 million for economic development by issuing bonds.

"This will provide an opportunity to come up with the capital needed to build our economy," said sponsor Rep. Jack Kennebeck, R-Boise.

Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul, however, called the proposal "a way some sophisticated lawyer has

Conflict-of-interest legislation contains stiff penalties

BOISE — All elected officials caught using their public office for private gain could face prosecution under a proposed Senate bill to revamp conflict-of-interest laws introduced Monday.

"This kind of law conveys a genuine confidence in the elected officials that this game is being played fairly and above board," said Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, after the Senate's State found... to get... around our constitution. I don't think it is right.

The measure now goes to the Senate.

Affairs Committee voted to print the bill Monday. But the Idaho Conflict of Interest Act of 1988 apparently would not respond to concerns aired Idaho's Constitution prohibits deficit spending or borrowing against the state's credit. The Idaho Housing Agency was created to issue tax-exempt bonds to subsidize mortgages for low-income families to purchase homes. The legislation approved by the House expands that borrowing authority. By the sale of bonds, the

And the bill's teeth are a little too dull for the taste of Attorney General Jim Jones, whose office drafted the bill.

The act for the first time defines conflict of interest, the scope of those affected and sets out penalties for violations. It extends to all elected officials, from the state level down to officials for special districts, such as a cemetery district.

pledged as backing for the process, and that worried several legislators.

"What if," said Rep. Robert Geddes, R-Freston, there was a replay of the Great Depression of the 1930s.

"Then where would the money come from? What would happen to the rest of the state budget? It would be a dangerous, dangerous situation," Geddes said. "I am not ready to pledge taxpayers' money to pay off bonds."

"Idaho does need to be competitive in providing long-term financing," said Rep. Pam Bengson, R-Boise.

Rep. Don Loveland, R-Boise, said there are a lot of companies that can't get bank financing. "It will be a step forward. It will be as good as its managers. And we will have to watch them very closely."

Negotiators told to speed work on pact

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — The United States and Soviet Union told their negotiators Monday to draft anti-cheating and other key provisions of a new arms agreement within a month so the treaty can be signed this spring.

Defense Minister Dmitri T. Yazov said the Soviets will begin withdrawing shorter-range SS-12 missiles from East Germany and Czechoslovakia late this month as a "display of goodwill." The missiles must be eliminated under the intermediate-range arms pact signed in December.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz reported progress on human rights and emigration, and professed "not the slightest doubt" that Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev will make good on his pledge to pull Soviet military forces out of Afghanistan.

A joint statement said progress was made toward banning chemical weapons and verifying nuclear test limits set by unratified 1974 and 1976 treaties. A report by the official news agency Tass, however, quoted Gorbachev as telling Shultz the U.S. stand on a chemical weapons ban "hampers the working out of an international convention."

Addressing a news conference about arms negotiations, Shultz said it was "extremely important" to accelerate work in Geneva if President Reagan and Gorbachev are to sign the treaty at their fourth summit, planned for May or June in Moscow.

He spoke after two days of talks with Gorbachev and Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze. Shultz said anti-cheating measures especially were "an extremely important thing to get nailed down" in a pact on strategic, or long-range, nuclear weapons.

American officials said they hoped the new instructions would speed the negotiations.

Shultz said U.S. and Soviet negotiators were ordered to prepare three documents to deal with:

- Inspection of the projected 30-50 percent reduction in number of long-range bombers, missiles and nuclear-armed submarines.
- How the banned weapons can be eliminated or converted into other nuclear arms that would remain legal.
- Agreement, in a memorandum of understanding, to exchange information about strategic weapons as another way to prevent cheating.

Andrus joins in reactor cleanup efforts

States News Service

WASHINGTON — Gov. Cecil Andrus met here with his Washington and Oregon counterparts Monday to begin mapping out a strategy to lobby Congress for more money to clean up the N reactor at the Hanford Nuclear reservation in Washington.

Andrus said after the meeting that the two Govs, Booth Gardner of Washington and Neil Goldschmidt of Oregon agreed that "we have to intelligently approach Congress and say that this project has to be completed."

The Department of Energy announced last week that it would shut down the plant, used to produce plutonium for nuclear bombs, for budget reasons and because there is a plentiful supply of plutonium.

The plant, which resembles the Chernobyl plant in the Soviet Union that was the site of the worst nuclear accident in history, has been shut down since January 1987 for safety repairs.

DOE said last week the plant would not be reopened after the repairs are completed and would remain in "cold standby," ready to be restarted in case it is needed. As many as 6,000 workers face losing their jobs.

The three governors have complained that the government is not providing enough money to properly close down and clean up the facility.

The Energy Department spent about $171 million in fiscal 1987 and $212 million in fiscal 1988 on waste handling at Hanford, but only $20 million to $30 million of that each year on actual cleanup and disposal. DOE officials said about $225 million was budgeted for waste handling in fiscal 1989 starting Oct. 1.

In contrast, the governors note, the Energy Department has spent about $1 billion on waste disposal and cleanup near Aiken, S.C., where the government runs another nuclear weapons facility.

Andrus said that if enough money were provided, the clean-up could create hundreds of jobs for several years to replace some of those lost with the reactor's closing.

"We look at the defense waste cleanup as the biggest problem and also the best economic opportunity," said Dick Milne, Gardner's press secretary. "The other governors (Goldschmidt and Andrus) are more worried about the environmental impact on the Columbia River."

Meanwhile, Andrus, here to attend a National Governors' Association meeting, was scheduled to meet this afternoon with Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho. The two were expected to discuss the Idaho wilderness bill written by Andrus and Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho.

Andrus backed McClure's call for quick hearings into the bill to give the legislation, which would set

Navy secretary quits, blasts defense chief

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Navy Secretary James F. Webb abruptly resigned Monday, accusing Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci of abandoning the Reagan Administration's goal of a 600-ship Navy and of demonstrating a lack of leadership and vision.

"This bill needs to be led," Webb said in telling reporters of his decision. "It needs some vision. I'm saying that if I had a piece of advice to give to Secretary Carlucci, it would be to spend a lot more time with the top leaders in this building."

"He's been spending a lot of time with the State Department and a lot of time on the Hill. I think they're wasting assets that need to be used and to understand what he believes in."

Webb, a highly decorated Marine veteran of Vietnam combut and the author of the best-selling Vietnam war novel "Fields of Fire," left only 10 months in his Pentagon position.

"The old President Reagan in his resignation letter that the president could have realized his cherished goal of building a 600-ship fleet were it not for Carlucci."

An administration official who asked not to be identified said Carlucci wants to recommend that William L. Ball III, assistant to the president for legislative affairs, be nominated to replace Webb. The source said the White House probably would announce Ball's nomination on Tuesday, at the same time it announces formal acceptance of Webb's resignation.

Talking to reporters, Webb accused Carlucci of "defining himself as a quiet about internal budget fighting, saying the defense chief

WASHINGTON — The State Department said Monday it was "extremely unfortunate" that Nicaraguan government cease-fire negotiators did not respond quickly enough to a new truce proposal to prevent the talks from breaking down.

Spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley also welcomed what she said was the unconditional acceptance of the proposal by the U.S.-backed Contras rebels. The plan had been outlined by the chief mediator, Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, during talks last week in Guatemala City.

"The positive attitude of the Contras (further indication of the resistance's willingness to negotiate in good faith and of their desire to achieve a cease-fire," Mrs. Oakley said.

BOISE (AP) — A Democrat member of the joint budget committee on Monday threatened to stall Senate floor work if Republican leaders continued to allow scheduling to disrupt the committee's work.

Sen. Ron Bettspeacher of Grangeville complained on the floor that the Senate's scheduling of a memo for review for former members who had died in the past year resulted in one of the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee's Democratic members missing the final vote of the morning.

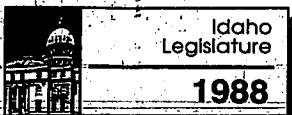

Had Pocatello Sen. C.E. Bilyeu been present to vote, a reined-in appropriation for fisheries operations of the Fish and Game Commission might have been defeated.

"I lost one in there this morning," Bettspeacher said to his colleagues. "If that happens again, we're going to read bills."

Both houses of the Legislature expedite proceedings by waiving the requirement that bills be read three different times in their entirety before they can be passed. But objections from individual members could force compliance with that requirement, dramatically slowing down actions in the chamber.

Bettspeacher's complaint only underscored the Democratic minority's apparent frustration with the Republican majority's attempt to hold the line on 1989 spending to avoid an election-year tax hike.

That strategy is targeted toward conserving general tax revenues to free up as much money as possible for state support of public and higher education. But it also has been carried over into budgets that do not rely on general tax receipts.

The Fish and Game Commission, which receives its money from dedicated hunting and fishing license revenues and the federal government, took its turn Monday, seeing its requests significantly curtailed.

The committee also voted to bar the commission from transferring any money from other programs, particularly those in fisheries and wildlife management, to its administrative budget.

Budget writers have complained over the past year about such transfers, which totaled over $1 million during the six years prior to last July. They contend those transfers shift money from critical programs to bureaucratic operations, but commission officials maintain many administrative operations enhance the operations of the programs in question.

Early in the day, the state Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse barely survived the budget-paring knife in the GOP drive to free up money for schools.

By a 12-11 vote, the committee approved just over $78,000 to keep the commission operating for another year. The one-vote margin headed off balloting on a proposal to terminate support for the agency.

"With all the advice we've got from other departments, private industry, ... I absolutely can't see a need for this commission," said Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Pauli, who proposed an end to funding. "It's just a waste of $75,000 of our money."

Supporters of the commission acknowledged that other state agencies were in a position to assume the commission's responsibility, but Sen. William Ringert, R-Boise, said none has so far come forward to do so. Without some other agency or organization stepping in, Ringert said, the program being offered by the commission should continue.

Republican leaders are trying to keep spending within an overall total of $679 million in general tax receipts, the amount that will be available without a major tax increase, and GOP members on the budget committee have been consistently trimming back in all non-education areas to build up money available for education — the Legislature's highest spending priority.

But even with those efforts, the panel appears headed toward a spending blueprint that will allow little more than a 2 percent to 3 percent increase in school spending. Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus has called that a step backward in Idaho's drive for educational quality — a step he says shortchanges the state's children.

Another fuel tax bill on its way to printer

BOISE (AP) — The House Transportation and Defense Committee has approved printing and introduction of another fuel tax increase bill, with its sponsor calling it a compromise aimed at ending a deadlock.

But support for the measure was far from unanimous Monday.

"We're going to wind up, just like last year with nothing," said Rep. Ralph Steele, R-Idaho Falls.

"I hope we don't wind up with a fiasco like last year," said Rep. John Sessions, R-Driggs.

The committee earlier in the session approved legislation boosting the Idaho fuel tax by 3 1/2 cents per gallon. That would make the Idaho fuel tax 18 cents per gallon as of April 1.

After deductions for other agencies, about two-thirds of the revenue goes to the Transportation Department and about one-third to cities, counties and highway districts.

State transportation officials say Idaho needs the extra money to qualify for federal grants for major highway projects.

Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Pauli, said he was convinced local government desperately needs new revenue for highway work, and plans an attempt to amend the original bill and give more of the extra money to local government.

That stalled the bill on the House calendar for two weeks. Session and committee members Monday the latest bill is aimed at ending the deadlock.

The latest version also increases the fuel tax by 3 1/2 cents per gallon as of April 1. For the next 27 months, the present distribution formula would be retained.

After that, on July 1, 1990, the distribution formula would change to channel more money to cities, counties and highway districts.

Voting against printing and introduction of the latest bill were Neibaur and Rep. Raymond Park, R-Blackfoot, and Rep. R.L. "Dick" Davis, R-Renburg.

The vote was 8-6 as the committee voted to seek permission from the House on Tuesday to withdraw the first bill. Neibaur said he would fight it on the House floor.

Alcohol commission barely eludes budget knife

BOISE (AP) — The state Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse barely survived the budget-paring knife Monday as budget writers kept clipping away at general tax spending in their drive to free as much money as possible for education.

By a 12-11 vote, the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee approved just over $78,000 to keep the commission operating for another year. The one-vote margin headed off balloting on a proposal to terminate support for the agency.

"With all the advice we've got from other departments, private industry, ... I absolutely can't see a need for this commission," said Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Pauli, who proposed an end to funding. "It's just a waste of $75,000 of our money."

Supporters of the commission acknowledged that other state agencies were in a position to assume the commission's responsibility, but Sen. William Ringert, R-Boise, said none has so far come forward to do so. Without some other agency or organization stepping in, Ringert said, the program being offered by the commission should continue.

The debate was only the latest as budget writers try to keep spending within an overall total of $679 million in general tax receipts, the amount that will be available without a major tax increase. The panel's Republican majority has been trimming back in all non-education areas, trying to give as much money as possible to education — the Legislature's highest priority.

But even with those efforts, the panel appears headed toward a spending blueprint that will allow little more than a 2 percent to 3 percent increase in school spending. Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus has called that a step backward in Idaho's drive for educational quality — a step he says shortchanges the state's children.

The state Racing Commission also came in for criticism from Sen. C.E. Bilyeu, D-Pocatello, who charged it had done little to help keep horse racing alive in Bannock County.

Bilyeu also took the opportunity to again criticize legislation authorizing dog racing in northern Idaho, reiterating claims by the horse industry that the competing sport will eventually kill horse racing in the state.

Legislation has been introduced to repeal dog racing, and because of that budget writers have put off any decision on giving the commission the money it would need to regulate the dog track now under construction in Post Falls.

Budget emergency planning idea flops

BOISE (AP) — Rep. Preston Brimhall, R-Idaho Falls, wants state agencies to plan for budget emergencies.

Those plans should include what the agency would do to cope with a budget reduction of 10 percent, 50 percent and 90 percent, he told the House State Affairs Committee on Monday.

But the committee refused to allow introduction of the Brimhall proposal, with only Rep. John Wood, R-Boise, voting against a motion to send it back to him.

Brimhall, a member of the Legislature's Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, said the federal government has spent more than $500 million for the state budget. Congress is trying to balance the federal budget, he said, which makes that source of revenue to the state extremely uncertain.

He said the nation could fall into a recession, depression or even "total collapse."

Rep. James Stoiceff, D-Sandpoint, contended it would create unnecessary paperwork for state agencies. "I don't really see that this would gain anything," he said.

If state agencies are faced with severe budget problems, he said, they simply will go before the committee which controls state spending, the Finance-Appropriations panel, and ask what to do.

"Having an emergency plan wouldn't make any difference when they get their 75 cents," said Stoiceff.

Rep. Dean Haugenson, R-Coeur d'Alene, noted that it wouldn't cost much for state agencies to prepare superficial budget crisis plans. If they really get into a meaningful plan, it could be expensive to prepare, he said.

Under questioning Brimhall said the 10 percent, 50 percent and 90 percent figures were arbitrary. Stoiceff said they would be meaningless if a budget deficit turned out to be an odd number, not exactly 10, 50 or 90 percent.

Symms assails Sandinistas

BOISE (AP) — The Nicaraguan Contra rebels should have received the Nobel Peace Prize, rather than Costa Rican President Oscar Arias, the author of the Central American peace plan, Sen. Steve Symms said.

The Idaho Republican made his comments in an interview in the Sunday Idaho Statesman.

Symms said the Soviets continue to pump aid to the Communist government of Nicaragua President Daniel Ortega.

"The reason, in my opinion, that peace has been given a chance in Nicaragua ... is because of the freedom fighters, the contras, putting pressure on the government," Symms said.

"And the contras probably are the ones, in my judgment, who should have got the Nobel Peace Prize because they were the ones that are fighting for freedom," he said.

Symms said President Reagan initially tried to work with the Sandinistas, but they shut down the newspapers and radio stations and alienated themselves from their neighbors.

"They don't allow people the opportunities to run their businesses and they just really cinched the country down."

Collision claims 2 lives

PECK (AP) — A Lewis-Clark State College student and a Craigmont High School senior have died in a head-on collision near Peck Junction on U.S. Highway 12.

Dean Mosman, 21, Nesperce, and Rita Hottinger, 17, of Craigmont, were driving in a small pickup Saturday evening when Mosman hit a slick section of road, said Sgt. Larry Tomlinson of the Idaho State Police.

The vehicle crossed the center line and collided head-on with another pickup driven by Gerald A. Lohman, 53, of Kendrick. Mosman's vehicle rolled off the road and caught fire. Passerby pulled Mosman and Ms. Hottinger from the truck.

Lohman and his wife, Peggy Lohman, 49, were transported to Clearwater Valley Hospital at Orofino. Both were reported in stable condition Sunday.

Gas tax nightmare looming

BOISE (AP) — New federal regulations on gas tax collections may be a record-keeping nightmare for Idaho's cities and counties.

"I keep hoping it'll go away," said Jan Bronson, Boise city controller.

State and local governments were caught in the net that Congress threw out to stop cheating on the 9.1-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax. Lawmakers found oil-industry intermediaries often bought tax-free gasoline at wholesale under a false claim that it would be taxed when resold.

Congress' solution, written into the massive 1986 income tax bill, requires the tax be paid at the time fuel is sold by refiners to wholesalers. Although that is expected to stop much of the cheating, it also takes from states, counties and cities their privilege of buying tax-free.

The change took effect Jan. 1, and the Internal Revenue Service has yet to issue regulations on how states and local governments should apply for rebates.

BLM clears way for Egin-Hamer road

RIGBY (AP) — The Bureau of Land Management has cleared the way for construction of the controversial Egin-Hamer farm-to-market Road.

Officials on Monday signed the final papers granting Jefferson and Fremont counties a right-of-way to build a nine-mile road through critical elk winter range southwest of St. Anthony.

The agency approved the counties' plan of operation, and the counties approved stipulations placed on road construction and operation.

"I think we have a workable plan that will benefit all of us," said Paul Walker of Rigby, a Jefferson County commissioner.

and agreed to build and maintain signs and barriers to keep traffic out. The closure will be enforced by the county sheriffs.

Fremont County Commission Chairman James Siddoway said the county would begin construction as soon as possible after the closure ends. "I wish we could do it now."

The money to build the road will come out of road and bridge funds, Siddoway said. No additional money was budgeted for building the road.

No disturbance will be allowed on the north side of the existing Egin-Hamer trail, which makes up the southern boundary of the Sand Mountain wilderness study area.

High court shuts door to evaluation appeals

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Supreme Court has overturned a lower court ruling that effectively opened up to administrative appeals the performance evaluations of state employees.

There was no need for the specific references in the law to the exact issues that can be appealed.

The unanimous decision issued on Monday found that state law precludes appeals to the Idaho Personnel Commission of grievances on issues other than those specifically enumerated in state law.

Huntley said the Appeals Court was right because "to do otherwise and to allow myriad appeals from performance evaluations without explicit statutory authority would allow the exception to swallow the rule."

At issue was the grievance filed by Health and Welfare employee, Nancy Sheets after she received a performance rating of "good," two years ago. When the rating was upheld through the departmental review procedure, Ms. Sheets appealed to the Personnel Commission.

In a second opinion, the high court ordered the Industrial Commission to resume jurisdiction over the injury case of Ron Reynolds against Browning Ferris Industries. The court held that the commission improperly relinquished jurisdiction when it knew Reynolds' impairment from the his on-the-job injury was worsening.

The commission dismissed her appeal based on state law limiting appeals of grievances to only a few specific issues. Ms. Sheets took the case to court, contending another state law opened the way for such appeals.

The court held that the commission has the right to retain jurisdiction over a workman's compensation case for the purpose of adjusting compensation until it can make a final determination of the permanent impairment.

The high court agreed her argument had some merit. But Justice Robert Huntley, who wrote the opinion, cited a recent Court of Appeals decision on a similar matter. That ruling said the language relied on by Ms. Sheets was intended to cover exceptions and to view it as more comprehensive would mean

Andrus asks Taiwan to roll back tariffs

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus and other agriculture leaders have joined in a letter asking the officials of the Republic of China on Taiwan to reconsider recent tariff increases on frozen potatoes and apples.

"The Taiwanese government earlier this month cut tariffs on a number of products in an effort to liberalize trade with the United States. But officials said the net result of the changes was to increase tariffs on two products important to Idaho, apples and frozen potatoes.

Tariff reductions that went into effect last June under a temporary executive action have been rescinded for frozen potato products and apples.

Effective Feb. 8, tariffs on frozen potato products went from 25 to 30 percent. The duty on imported apples went from 40 to 50 percent.

In a letter to Taiwan officials, Andrus said the tariff increases were "counterproductive to ongoing efforts to improve trade relations between our respective governments and particularly unfair for Idaho producers."

He also urged the Taiwanese leaders to reject a proposal recently offered by the Taiwanese Joint Committee to impose new import quotas on a variety of imported fruit, including apples.

Andrus said he also has contacted U.S. trade officials to register his concern. U.S. trade negotiators meet later this month with a delegation from Taiwan on the import quota issue.

X-RAYS IN THE SKY

Q. How much x-ray exposure do I get on a transcontinental airplane flight?

A. About as much as in a standard chest x-ray, according to the medics.

Curious, isn't it, that Virginia goes farther west than West Virginia?

Q. What place on this earth has both orange groves and penguins?

ANXIOUS

Q. When a guy is anxious, we say he's on "tenderhooks." Why?

A. It's "tenterhooks," English oldtimers centuries ago stretched newly woven wet fabric between two rows of hooks on drying racks called tenters. Came from that.

Only animals that stay awake all day and sleep all night are humans, I'm told.

An "underslave" was what the old Romans called a slave owned by a slave.

VIDEO HERMITS

Certain solitary souls of old collected books, and stacked them all over their households, and lived among them, worshipfully, venturing as little as possible into the outside world. Then along came phonograph records, and a few compulsive record collectors, likewise infatuated by worldly contact, did much the same as the bibliomaniacs. Today it's video tapes. Are there videophiles, hermits behind drawn blinds, lone viewers, alienated-out of the social traffic, who sit among their stacks of tapes, ever alone? I'll bet there are.

Sir, the whiskers on your chin grow twice as fast as the hair on your legs.

With ferrets, the males are "hobs," the females "jills."

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You would be well-advised to carefully study the details of any financial matters before reaching a decision. You will have to use more than ordinary self-control to keep yourself from acting rashly.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): If you have plans to make some improvements to your property, get several estimates. Pay at least part of an overdue debt.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Try to be more diplomatic today; the world doesn't revolve around your opinions. Be more affectionate to your friends this evening.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21):

You may be anxious to gain more assets, but you'll need more preparation before you act. Finish any tasks you have left undone.

MOON CHILDREN (June 23 to July 21): Much can be accomplished today if you enlist the aid of some loyal friends. Stay at home and enjoy your family tonight.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Putting pressure on a superior in order to achieve your goals would thwart your efforts. Don't react to an obstacle without thinking first.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Some information you need can be gathered from a close friend, but don't be forceful or rude. Don't get into any new recreations just now.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Be sure you don't inadvertently renege on a promise you have made. Your mate is trying to avoid an argument with you, so be cooperative.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): A public matter has been difficult to solve for some time, but with a little patience, you can easily achieve the desired results now.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Arrange a time schedule for your work, and your daily duties will seem much easier. Negligence could cause serious damage today.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Be more willing to go along with a plan your mate has, since it is better than what you have in mind. Don't take any risks today.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Avoid becoming involved in an argument with a family member, as this person is not impartial and will not yield on any points.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): The people you will be around today have vastly different opinions from your own, so be diplomatic and don't push your point of view.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY: He or she will be apt to be too hoasty about almost everything, particularly in dealing with others, so teach your progeny to consider the feelings of others and not to be self-assured that many mistakes could occur. Teach your progeny to be cooperative and loyal.

Collection's complete for Zane Grey fan

BULESS, Texas (AP) — A cancer patient who has been reading Zane Grey books since his childhood had a dream fulfilled when columnist Bob Greene delivered a rare book that completes an 89-book collection of the Western author.

"I've got something for you," said Greene, of the Chicago Tribune, when he handed a small green book to 73-year-old Mack Landers.

The book Greene delivered Sunday in this Fort Worth suburb, "Don, The Story of A Lion Dog," was published 60 years ago and only about 100 copies exist in this country. It was the last of 89 books Landers needed to complete his collection.

Landers was diagnosed with colon cancer in 1982 and has been told by doctors he has less than three months to live.

Greene wrote of Landers' search for the book in his nationally syndicated column, and said five or six people from across the nation called offering copies. One of them was Zane Grey's son, Loren, and his copy was the one that Greene delivered to Landers.

Stewart: Colorization 'disgraceful endeavor'

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — Several of veteran actor Jimmy Stewart's screen leading ladies, including Doris Day and Joan Fontaine, helped honor Stewart with a Lifetime Achievement award by the Monterey Film Festival.

Stewart's name on a marquee was "an iron-clad guarantee of quality," President Reagan said in a letter read at Sunday's black-tie tribute dinner.

Stewart, who turns 80 on May 20, was asked what he thought of computer colorization of his old black and white films.

"Colorization is one of the most disgraceful things that ever happened in any endeavor in this country," he said. "I hope the people who perpetrate this on others go flat broke someday soon."

The actors end up with orange faces. The cameramen took all this time, all this time to create depth and to cast the right shadows. With colorization, people just walk around, just walk around like painted Easter eggs."

'L.A. Law' Fisher goes to Disney Television

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Producer-writer Terry Louise Fisher, who recently reached a settlement of her dispute over "L.A. Law," has signed a three-year agreement to develop and produce programs for Walt Disney Television.

Fisher is one of the most creative and influential forces working in the industry today, said Randy Reisz, executive vice president of Fisher's former relationship with NBC's "Law & Order" and ABC's "Hooperman" in settlement of her lawsuit. She had sought more money and authority to be executive producer of "L.A. Law."

Fisher is co-creator of "L.A. Law" and "Hooperman" with Steven Bochco and previously had produced CBS' "Cagney & Lacey." The dispute arose during negotiations over her taking over "L.A. Law" after Bochco signed a multi-series deal with ABC.

Sandi Patti finalist in gospel music awards

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Sandi Patti was chosen Monday as a finalist for her seventh straight award as the Gospel Music Association's female vocalist of the year.

Patti also was one of five finalists for the top award, artist of the year, which she won in 1982, 1984, 1986 and 1987.

In addition, she is a finalist for song of the year for the record "In the Name of the Lord," which she co-wrote with Phil McHugh and Gloria Gaither.

Joining Miss Patti as finalists for top female vocalists were Cece Winans, Cynthia Clawson, Margaret Becker and Twila Paris.

Other finalists for artist of the year are First Call, Larnelle Harris, Steve Green and Wayne Watson.

Finalists for No. 1 male vocalist are Bebe Winans, Michael W. Smith, Mike English, Green, Harris and Watson.

Winners will be announced April 14.

Utah's Justice Peterson retires

SANTAQUIN, Utah (AP) — Justice of the Peace Jay O. Peterson has resigned, ending 22 years on the job.

Peterson's wife, Norma, made the announcement, citing family obligations and personal reasons for the resignation, which was effective Feb. 16.

The decision came in the wake of an unsettled controversy over whether the term of Peterson's last appointment ran for two or four years.

Nice guy or soap klepto?

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (AP) — Nothing sends Albert Paul Blaustein into a lather like being called old just because he has 1,400 bars of soap in his basement.

The 1,400 catalogued bars from every hotel the 66-year-old constitutional law scholar has visited in the past 47 years.

Still, "I'm not eccentric," Blaustein said with good humor in a recent interview. "I'd rather be remembered as a nice guy who did good things for the world."

Over the years, Blaustein has helped write the constitutions of a half-dozen countries, including Peru and South Vietnam; written an 18-volume international history of constitutional law; and developed a new supreme court for South Vietnam.

But when it comes to Blaustein's own history, he cites a non-legal type of bar.

"My soap collection is the story of my life. It's my autobiography," he said as he opened the 10 briefcases that contain hundreds of perfumed, pastel treasures.

He began collecting hotel soap bars at Chicago's Hotel Sherman on June 25, 1949. He was a 19-year-old newspaper reporter preparing to enter the Army.

A round, white bar dated Sept. 9, 1968, conjures memories of the night he discussed racial discrimination at the Biltmore Hotel in New York with Thurgood Marshall, now a U.S. Supreme Court justice.

A mint-green bar reminds him of the summer of 1967 when he and his wife, Phyllis, visited their now-grown children at camp.

"These are a couple of duplicates," he said, juggling elegant gold-and-white bars from Bangkok, Thailand. "I couldn't resist taking two."

The soap bars are all from hotels he has patronized in the 75 countries he has visited, from Ethiopia to Japan to the Philippines. Donations from outside sources are not accepted.

Albert Paul Blaustein, a professor of constitutional law, goes through some 1,400 bars of soap he's collected

Impending library closure triggers bibliophile sit-in LONDON (AP) — Fifty book lovers spent their third straight day holed up inside a London public library Monday to protest the library's planned closure. They passed the time reading and talking.

"Libraries are vital to civilized life," said protest organizer Roy Charterton, 62, a marketing consultant.

Supporters in the street below the St. Pancras Reference Library used a rope to hoist food supplies up to the protesters.

"We are sleeping on the floor and bringing food up through a window ... as we have been told if we leave we cannot get back in," Charterton said.

The sit-in began Saturday and is scheduled to continue until Tuesday, when Camden borough councilors are due to meet.

Murder suspect wins about $350

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A man jailed on a murder charge in Oklahoma didn't get rich in the Oregon Lottery's television game show.

Paulino Sanchez, who was hospitalized by a proxy selected by the lottery, won about $350. He could have won up to $60,000.

Lottery officials said Sanchez's proxy, Bob Graber, of Portland, wasn't selected as one of the five contestants. Instead, he was among the other 40 who made up the show's audience and split an amount equal to what was won by the five contestants.

The five won about $14,000.

Sanchez, 29, was arrested Feb. 5 in Malheur County on a fugitive warrant and was returned to Oklahoma. He faces a charge of first-degree murder in the June 1986 death of a bicyclist in Oklahoma City.

The lottery rub-off ticket Sanchez bought in Oregon entitled him to become one of the 45 who participate in the show.

Under lottery rules, anyone who can't appear on the show for any reason is entitled to have a proxy appointed.

Lottery officials said the money would be sent to Sanchez.

Oregon's top mother cites love

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Ruth Solomon Smith, the 1988 Oregon State Mother of the Year, says "love is the motivating force in our lives and the sustaining strength in our trials."
Mrs. Smith was honored with the title Saturday, her 81st birthday, by the Oregon Association of American Mothers at its annual banquet.
In her written statement of her philosophy, Mrs. Smith offered her views on motherhood.

"Honesty, work, reliability can be taught by parents' acts. A child develops self-esteem if he is treated as unique and priceless in the family. It takes patience, work and wisdom to guide a child," she wrote.
Mrs. Smith has one daughter, a stepdaughter and stepson. Her son, Richard, died last year.
Born in Salt Lake City after her grandparents had moved there as Mormon pioneers, she graduated with honors from the University of Utah in 1928. A Portland resident since 1947, she has been the director of homecraft for Portland Deseret Industries since the mid-1970s. In that position, she trains the handicapped and the home-bound to be self-sufficient.

Kimmai Hong, a mother of four who owns the Saigon Express restaurant in Portland, was named the eighth recipient of the Bertha Holt Award. The award goes to a mother for service to the community and her family.
"I am very happy, very proud," Mrs.

Hong said.
The organization named Janet Kimball Bird of Medford its 1988 Oregon Young Mother Representative. She and her husband, Roger, a general sales manager for KDRV-TV in Medford, are the parents of four daughters.
Mrs. Bird read to the audience an essay on what she found most fulfilling as a young mother. It said, in part, "By sharing the discoveries of my children, I receive a fresh perspective on the reasons I am here."

Jerome votes on levy today

JEROME - Jerome voters will go to the polls today to vote on a $696,600 supplemental levy that would be collected over the next two years... Some $468,600 of the money would be used to add low classrooms to Jefferson Elementary School to allow the district to again offer a kindergarten program...

"I stand on the Fifth," Christiansen said. "I don't understand what you are trying to do, make charges that not the ones I've pled to?" Attorney Dennis Voorhees also testified on Christiansen's behalf... He also had a long conversation with Christiansen in a local bar after his arrest... Stuart Robinson, an undercover officer for the Idaho Department of Law Enforcement, said he saw Christiansen exchange something with a "known dealer" during an investigation.

Twin Falls Police Detective Ron Axman said seven people he had contact with said they bought drugs from Christiansen. Axman also testified he searched Christiansen's mobile home four times before finding cocaine... "I can imagine a scenario where all the cowboys in Owyhee County are no longer there," he said... Morris said the Owyhee desert country is nationally known in conservation circles, and it will become better known as a national resource as time goes on.

Anti-club bill goes on shelf

BOISE (AP) — The Senate State Affairs Committee has rejected legislation proposed by Sen. Marti Calabretta aimed at forcing Boise's all-male Arid Club to begin opening its ranks to women or forgo its state liquor license. In a 7-4 vote Monday, the committee refused to introduce the Oxburn Democrat's bill to refuse liquor licenses to any establishment that discriminates based on sex, religion or marital status. "I don't want to say I see this as a retaliatory effort, but it does have some kind of indication it is going that way," said Sen. Mark Ricks, R-Kelburg, a member of the former Church who opposed the measure even though he traditionally votes against all legislation restricting the sale of liquor. Ms. Calabretta launched her attack on the club, composed of some 400 of Idaho's most influential leaders including Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus, after the membership rejected a change in its rules that would have allowed women to have lunch at the new headquarters in Boise. The senator called for a boycott and threatened legislative action to force the club to open up, calling it a "cancer on the base of the Boise River." But while Ms. Calabretta's three Democratic colleagues on the State Affairs Committee joined her in supporting introduction of the bill, even Democrat Gail Bray of Boise said she rarely wanted the bill introduced to keep the debate alive.

Senate GOP unity against appointments may be cracking

BOISE (AP) — The Senate Republican majority's unified opposition to Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus' appointments of Republicans who supported his 1986 campaign is apparently cracking as a vote nears on the final member of that controversial group. The GOP majority discussed the appointment of Betty Lou Donnelly to the Idaho Judicial Commission for nearly an hour behind closed doors on Monday, and Caucus Chairman Jerry Twigg of Blackfoot said there is no guarantee that she will be rejected as her two counterparts were. Mrs. Donnelly along with ousted

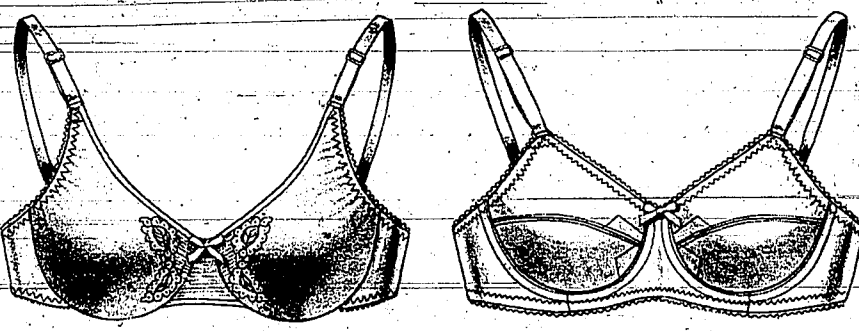

Tax Commissioner Larry Jackson and former Personnel Commissioner Nolan Young were vocal members of "Republicans for Andrus" during the tight 1986 campaign. Both Jackson and Young were denied confirmation, because of what the GOP saw as a political betrayal. Only two of the 26 Senate Republicans — Jerry Hanson of Boise and Phil Batt of Wilder — did not oppose them. The GOP argued that Andrus was improperly paying off his political debts with state appointments traditionally belonging to the Republican Party. But after the caucus that was dominated by talk of the Donnelly appointment, Twigg said, "There is no means any agreement." In appearing before the committee last week, Mrs. Donnelly described herself as a good Republican, and she attempted to differentiate the appointment she was given from those given Jackson and Young. The Judicial Commission, she said, makes no policy or administrative regulations but only recommends the panel of nominees from which the governor fills vacant judgeships. Democrats have maintained their chances for confirmation were improving as Republicans tired of the controversy and relatively adverse public attention they have received because of the partisan fights.

Noriega aide meets with Walsh staff

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former top aide to Panama's strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega met under heavy guard Monday at the U.S. courthouse with prosecutors investigating the Iran-Contra affair.

Jose J. Blandon presumably was questioned by the staff of independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh about Noriega's agreement to train Nicaraguan rebels at the request of Lt. Col. Oliver North, a former National Security Council official who is a target of Walsh's investigation.

Blandon, a former Panamanian intelligence official, was escorted by heavily armed U.S. marshals as he arrived at the courthouse for his 2 1/2-hour meeting with members of Walsh's staff.

A former top intelligence official in the Panamanian government, Blandon was a key informant for federal prosecutors in Florida who earlier this month obtained indictments charging Noriega with taking at least $1 million in bribes to protect a major Colombian drug ring.

He is now in the protective custody of U.S. marshals.

Blandon recently told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that Noriega agreed to provide training for Nicaraguan anti-Sandinista rebels after receiving a request from North in 1985.

North sought the training on Panamanian soil because Congress had banned direct U.S. military aid to the rebels, Blandon said.

Blandon, who was fired last month as Panama's consul general in New York, told congressional hearings earlier this month that North met with Noriega on a yacht in June 1985 near the Panamanian city of Balboa. The two met again four months later in Noriega's office, Blandon said.

During one of the meetings, Noriega offered to send Panamanian soldiers to Nicaragua on "terrorist sabotage" missions but North said he had no authority to accept such an offer, Blandon said. North said, however, he would relay Noriega's offer to his superiors at the National Security Council, Blandon testified.

Blandon said Noriega also met in December 1985 with Rear Adm-

John M. Poindexter, who had just been appointed national security adviser.

Poindexter, who is also a target of Walsh's investigation, resigned in his testimony to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Blandon said Noriega headed a "criminal empire" that sold drugs with the knowledge of U.S. officials.

Blandon also said one of Noriega's pilots flew a cargo of cocaine to a ranch in Costa Rica owned by an American supporter of the Contras.

North was fired the same day that Poindexter submitted his resignation to President Reagan.

At his testimony to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Blandon said Noriega headed a "criminal empire" that sold drugs with the knowledge of U.S. officials.

Blandon also said one of Noriega's pilots flew a cargo of cocaine to a ranch in Costa Rica owned by an American supporter of the Contras.

Hunger hearings set as dairy aid program dries up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy is set to raise the curtain on hearings into the problem of hunger plaguing the nation's homeless and families living in poverty.

"I know that the budget pressures will remain with us all this year and for the foreseeable future," the Vermont Democrat says. "But America's future depends on its children. The wealthiest, most powerful nation in the world must once again resolve to eliminate hunger in America."

The hearings come as the government prepares to suspend distribution of milk, cheese, rice and honey to low-income households under the Temporary Emergency Food Assistance Program, or TEFAP, because stocks are depleted.

Leahy says a report will be released this week dealing specifically with the rural poor and that he intends to follow up with hearings on the overall extent of hunger in America.

TEFAP is best known as the program under which poor people were able to go to community action centers and other designated places in their neighborhoods to receive free allotments of powdered milk and cheese.

It came into being in 1981 as the Reagan administration wrestled with enormous surpluses of agricultural commodities and the massive storage costs they entailed. Those huge surpluses have now been diminished considerably by price changes under the 1985 farm law that have discouraged excess production.

The Agriculture Department announced Feb. 12 that dwindling stocks will prevent TEFAP distributions of milk and cheese in May. Rice and honey stocks will be depleted by March distributions, USDA said. It said flour, cornmeal and butter distributions will continue as before.

"Cheese, nonfat dry milk, rice and honey distributions will be suspended when we have given it all away," said John W. Bode, assistant secretary of agriculture for food and consumer services. "When we get more, we will distribute it."

The department said that one in every seven Americans receives federal food assistance at some point each year at a taxpayer cost of more than $66 million a day. It said surplus foods amounting to 5 billion pounds worth more than $5 billion have been distributed under TEFAP since 1981.

According to figures compiled by the Senate Agriculture Committee, more than 15 million people have supplemented benefits they already receive from the food stamp program with TEFAP commodities.

But the panel says the 18 million people who were taking part in the food stamp program as of September represented no more than 50 percent of those living in poverty.

Leahy said he went to New York last week to survey for myself the extent of hunger in our nation's richest city.

Reagan: Go slow on welfare solutions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan cautioned the nation's governors Monday against pressing for costly federal solutions to the problems of welfare and child care.

His remarks to the National Governors' Association were labeled a disappointment by Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, a Democratic presidential hopeful, who said Reagan should be backing the go slow on the issue of child care here also.

Reagan instead said he still strongly supports a less costly Republican alternative that the House rejected two months ago.

He also cautioned the governors to expand federal support and subsidies for working parents.

"Maybe it's my conservative bent, but I can't help but feel uneasy sometimes," he told the governors gathered in the East Room of the White House.

Welfare programs have become "a crippling poverty trap... They keep the poor poor," Reagan said. "Now, much of the push for child care is designed to rectify the ills of earlier programs, and many of these efforts are timely and good. But in this area, more than any other, government should tread carefully."

Reagan said the alternative bill sponsored by House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., would also give states freedom to "develop your own ideas on child care."

Afterwards, Dukakis told reporters that he was very disappointed.

"Just one word from the president, I think, would get this bill passed and done before the election, and get it off the table as a partisan issue and get going," said Dukakis.

"He keeps telling us stories about California, and we're trying to explain to him that the vast majority of people on welfare these days are single mothers with young children, and it's a combination of real training for real jobs; combined with day care, that makes a difference," said Dukakis.

Howard Baker, Reagan's chief of staff, said Reagan would veto the House-passed welfare reform bill, but might approve a less expensive measure still being shaped by the Senate Finance Committee.

The governors are pushing Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan's bill, which would toughen enforcement of child support, help states pay for job training and make participation mandatory for most unemployed adults. It would also provide some transitional Medicaid and welfare benefits for families exiting the relief rolls for work.

Moynihan, a New York Democrat, has 66 co-sponsors for his bill, which would cost $2.3 billion over five years, compared to the $4.3 billion House bill, which would raise benefits and prohibit states from denying welfare to families with both parents in the home.

Baker said the Moynihan bill is not the hope that Moynihan and Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., might be able to fashion a compromise satisfactory to Reagan.

Heinz, like Moynihan, a member of the Senate Finance Committee, has not introduced an alternative bill.

Computer shipment queried

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration confirmed on Monday that it was investigating allegations that a U.S. computer system that could help determine optimal targets for nuclear missiles had been illegally shipped to the Soviet Union.

According to a report in Monday's editions of the Washington Times, a Los Angeles company, Esser Marketing Co., is under investigation for an alleged shipment last December 21 of a computer capable of simulating nuclear explosions to an engineering college in Zagreb, Yugoslavia.

However, the computer was diverted and wound up in the Soviet Union instead, shipped to Moscow via Belgrade, the Yugoslav capital, and East Berlin, the newspaper reported.

"We're concerned by this apparent diversion and are working with Yugoslav authorities to determine exactly what happened in the specific case," said State Department spokesman Phyllis Oakley. "We obviously view any violation of U.S. law with great concern."

She said the matter was "under investigation by the U.S. Customs Service and the Commerce Department."

U.S. law prohibits export of items with possible military application to Soviet bloc nations. Other high-technology goods may only be shipped to those nations with approval of the Paris-based Coordinating Committee for Multilateral Export Controls, or COCOM.

However, Yugoslavia, while a communist nation, is not officially aligned with the Soviet Union. High-technology shipments there do not require COCOM approval.

Donald Creed, a spokesman for the Commerce Department, said government investigators had uncovered "an elaborate scheme to divert a high-technology computer."

He said it was the first "diversion that we are aware of concerning Yugoslavia."

He declined to discuss details of the case on the grounds that the investigation was still under way.

Bush leads with $9 million; Dukakis counts $4 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush is by far the richest presidential candidate with more than $9 million in the bank going into the cash-draiving Super Tuesday primaries. Among Democratic hopefuls, money leader Michael Dukakis has a $4 million bankroll.

In an interesting twist, Bush, while raising the most money, has actually spent less against the overall primary season spending limit than any of the other Republican contenders, including the struggling campaign of Rep. Jack Kemp of New York.

The Bush forces have been carefully husbanding their resources to ensure they don't reach the $27 million limit too early in the nominating campaign, thereby shorting themselves for the contests that come after the Super Tuesday races on March 8.

The latest campaign figures are contained in reports filed over the weekend with the Federal Election Commission. The reports cover totals for the month of January.

As of Jan. 31, the vice president had spent $10.7 million against the $27 million cap, compared to Kemp's $12.8 million. Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., had spent $13.5 million.

Famous TV evangelist Pat Robertson had not yet filed his report by Monday, although it was due at the FEC on Saturday. His previous disclosure statement showed that as of early January he had already spent $12.4 million against the ceiling.

On the Democratic side, none of the candidates were approaching that level, with Dukakis spending the most against the ceiling, at $7.8 million.

Kemp continued to squeak by financially, taking out $750,000 worth of loans in January and ending the month with a debt of $1.3 million. Kemp hoped to pay that off with the help of nearly $600,000 in government matching funds he expects to receive by the end of this month, said campaign political director Charlie Black.

Kemp aides are relying on a heavy mail solicitation which has brought in a steady flow of money in recent weeks, including most of the $1 million Kemp raised in January, he said. Kemp is netting about $400,000 a week in fund-raising, Black said.

Black insisted the campaign is not in serious financial trouble, though he conceded, "Sure, it is to be another couple million to spend on Super Tuesday." He said he has budgeted about $1.5 million for the campaign, through Super Tuesday, and is spending between $250,000 and $300,000 on television for South Carolina's March 6 primary.

Black said that Kemp's spending against the overall limit is not a problem because he will buy TV time in only seven Super Tuesday states.

Among the Democrats, Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois and Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri both ended January in debt, and had to take out loans to keep their campaigns afloat in February's Iowa caucuses and New Hampshire primary.

Simon took out a $629,874 loan in January, and ended the month with a $691,069 debt and only $401,176 in the bank.

Gephardt did not report any January loans but, according to aides, did borrow money this month. He entered February with $820,260 in debts and $172,477 in cash on hand.

Democrats Michael Dukakis, the Massachusetts governor, and Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee, on the other hand, were in good shape. Dukakis with $4 million in the bank and $511,789 in bills to pay off, and Gore with $2 million on hand and $84,248 in obligations.

Gore ignored the Iowa race to concentrate on the Super Tuesday states, but he raised very little money during the time the other candidates were campaigning hard in Iowa and New Hampshire. He collected only $180,746 in contributions during January, in addition to the $1.8 million in matching funds he got, his report showed.

Dukakis raised $804,839 in contributions and got $3.5 million matching funds.

Dukakis has also far outspent Gore in the South, a region in which the Tennessee senator has pinned his presidential hopes.

Reagan calls news conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will hold his first White House news conference in four months on Wednesday night in the East Room of the White House, it was announced Monday.

It will be Reagan's 42nd news conference in seven years in office.

White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said the president will open the session at 8 p.m. EST with a prepared statement and then answer questions for 30 minutes.

Reagan's last news conference was on Oct. 22.

High court kills challenge to 'godless' Tennessee textbooks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court dealt a blow to religious fundamentalists Monday when it killed a challenge to the required use of "godless" textbooks in Tennessee public schools.

Ending one of the most widely publicized freedom-of-religion cases in recent years, the justices, without a recorded dissenting vote, rejected an appeal by seven families.

Today's action left intact a federal appeals court ruling that said it was unconstitutional to require fundamentalist Christian children to read the objected-to books.

Beverly LaHays, president of Concerned Women for America, a conservative group that aided the families' legal battle, said following Monday's ruling, "a dark cloud of religious oppression looms over America's schoolhouses today."

"Religious tolerance in our nation's classrooms has been dealt a devastating blow," Mrs. LaHays said.

Mike Farris, a lawyer for Concerned Women, called the boy's again Christian families in the school district involved to remove their children from public schools.

"I hope ... there is a mass exodus from the public school system tomorrow, or at least by next fall," Farris said.

But Tennessee Attorney General W.J. Michael Cody praised the court action, saying, "Any alternative disposition would have been the cause of chaos in the school system."

At full strength for the first time in eight months as Justice Anthony

M. Kennedy took his place at the bench, the court also:

- Agreed to decide whether local governments may impose affirmative-action programs requiring minority participation in public works projects.

The justices will study an invalidated Richmond, Va., program under which prime contractors on any city building contract were required to set aside at least 30 percent of the project's subcontracts for firms at least one-half owned by minorities.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled last September that the city's preferential treatment for minority businesses approved in 1983 is an unconstitutional form of reverse discrimination.

The appeals court had relied heavily on a 1988 Supreme Court ruling that struck down an affirmative action plan in Michigan designed to protect from lay-offs minority teachers with less seniority than whites.

The Supreme Court in that case said preferential treatment of minorities must be narrowly tailored to avoid hurting whites. The court restricted the power of employers to adopt affirmative action programs when there has not been proof of those employers practiced past discrimination.

- Set the stage for an important constitutional ruling by July by agreeing to judge the validity of a federal law creating independent counsels to investigate alleged wrongdoing by high-ranking executive branch officials.

The justices will review a ruling that the Watergate-era law impermissibly gives presidential powers to the federal courts.

- Rejected a related appeal by Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, his latest attempt to block a special prosecutor's investigation into his role in the Iran-Contra arms and money affair.
- Refused to let a Fort Worth, Texas, hospital withhold the names of its blood donors from a woman who says her baby daughter contracted AIDS after receiving transfusions.

The court let stand a ruling that the donors' privacy rights do not override the woman's need to find out their identities in her wrongful-death lawsuit against the hospital.

- Said it will hear arguments by coal-mining companies and the Reagan administration aimed at blocking the possible awards of billions of dollars in "black lung" benefits to thousands of miners.

Agreed to decide whether the National Collegiate Athletic Association should be barred from suspending Jerry Turkantian as basketball coach at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas for alleged recruiting violations.

Voted to decide when police need court warrants before searching from helicopters for marijuana growing in fenced-in yards.

The Tennessee textbook controversy began in 1983, when the Hawkins County Board of Education adopted a new reading list for students in grades one through eight.

American breaks world record in winning 500

By JOHN NELSON
The Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta — America's gold-medal count was two — one on grids and one on ice. Speed skater Bonnie Blair won America's second gold medal at the Winter Olympics Monday night in world-record time, as the West put a brake on the gold train East.

Blair added her victory in the 600 meters to Brian Battano's figure skating gold, beating Christine Rothenburger of East Germany by .02 seconds.

"I think I just got it on guts," Blair said. As she stood on the medal stand she sang the words to the national anthem, her eyes red from crying. And when it was over, she cried again.

"When I crossed the finish line, I think it was the happiest moment of my life," Blair said. "When they played the national anthem, I think it was the second."

Sigrid Wolf gave Austria its third gold medal, setting up a Rocky Mountain duel with Switzerland for Alpine supremacy. Sweden finally won a cross-country race, the 40-kilometer relay, and the only eastbound gold of the day went to the Soviets, who won the two-man bobsled.

Still, the Soviets lead the medal standings with 13 total, seven gold. East Germany, which took 2-3 in both the bobsled and speed skating 500, have 14 medals, six gold.

Of 26 gold medals awarded at the Games so far, the Soviets and East Germany have 13. The Soviets also have one of two triple medal winners, Vladimir Smirnov, who kicked the first leg of the silver-medal cross-country relay team.

Blair did to Rothenburger on Monday what East German Andre Hoffmann did to U.S. silver medalist Eric Flain two days earlier in the men's 1,600.

Rothenburger lowered her own world record by 27 seconds, skating in the second pair in the women's 500 meters to a finishing time of 59.12. Two pairs later, Blair of Champaign, Ill., trimmed another .02 off the mark, winning the gold in 59.10. Karin Kania of East Germany won the bronze, her sixth Olympic medal since 1968.

"Blair had lowered the 1,600-meter men's world mark, skating in the first pair on Saturday, before Hoffmann skated two pairs later to time that was .06 better.

"You try telling yourself it's just another race, but the jitters, the thrills, the crowds, the hype of the Olympics means it's a lot different," Blair said.

Blair said she was convinced by her practice times this week that she could beat Rothenburger.

"This past week, I had gone a lap that I knew would be good enough to beat her," Blair said. "That's what I kept telling myself, that I could go faster. When I opened up the gates, I almost knew where that had it."

Cold, biting winds up to 35 mph forced the second delay of the 90-meter ski jump. Matti Nykanen of Finland, who won at 70 meters, will have to wait until Tuesday to try to beat the Winter Games' first double jumping gold medalist. He's been waiting since last Wednesday.

Roh McCormack, chief of competition for the event, called the waiting "psychological torture," and incidentally tied the game in regulation and beat Castelford 58-57 in overtime for the District 4 Class A-4 Southside Subdistrict boys' basketball championship Monday.

Today's Olympic TV

ski jumping. With its hockey team out of the chase, America was banking on the skill and finesse of Blair to restore pride to an Olympic effort that has netted only four medals so far.

They had delayed to final two runs of the two-man bobsled competition from morning until afternoon. Soviet driver Ianis Kipouris had taken over the lead on the second run Saturday as deteriorating track conditions caused by warm weather and blowing sand slowed East German driver Wolfgang Hoppe.

Hoppe, who actually won both of Monday's heats, had a four-run aggregate that was only .71 seconds behind Kipouris, and the East German also driven by Bernhard Lehmann was third.

"The race was bad for everybody," Kipouris said. "There were too many postponements and too many problems with the track."

The U.S. sled driven by Matt Roy finished 16th, 5.88 seconds behind the leader. Brent Rushlaw, considered the best U.S. driver, pulled out after three runs with a hip injury. Rushlaw was 20th after three runs, Roy 18th.

Wolf's victory in the women's super-giant slalom, a new Olympic event, once again prevented Swiss ace Michela Figini from standing atop the medals podium and gave Austria a boost in its battle with Switzerland for Alpine supremacy. Figini, who finished ninth in the downhill, won the silver.

"The downhill wasn't too good for me, but today is a beautiful day, no wind, but sunshine," Figini said. "This is a great day to have a good smile and a good race."

"I tried to get a medal, and I did." Switzerland has won seven of the 18 Alpine medals offered, but only came gold. Figini's Austrian downhill, Austria has five Alpine medals. Switzerland and Austria are tied with seven total medals, three behind East Germany.

"The last races, the Austrians have been racing very well, and if you ask me, Rothenburger, we can win other races," Wolf said.

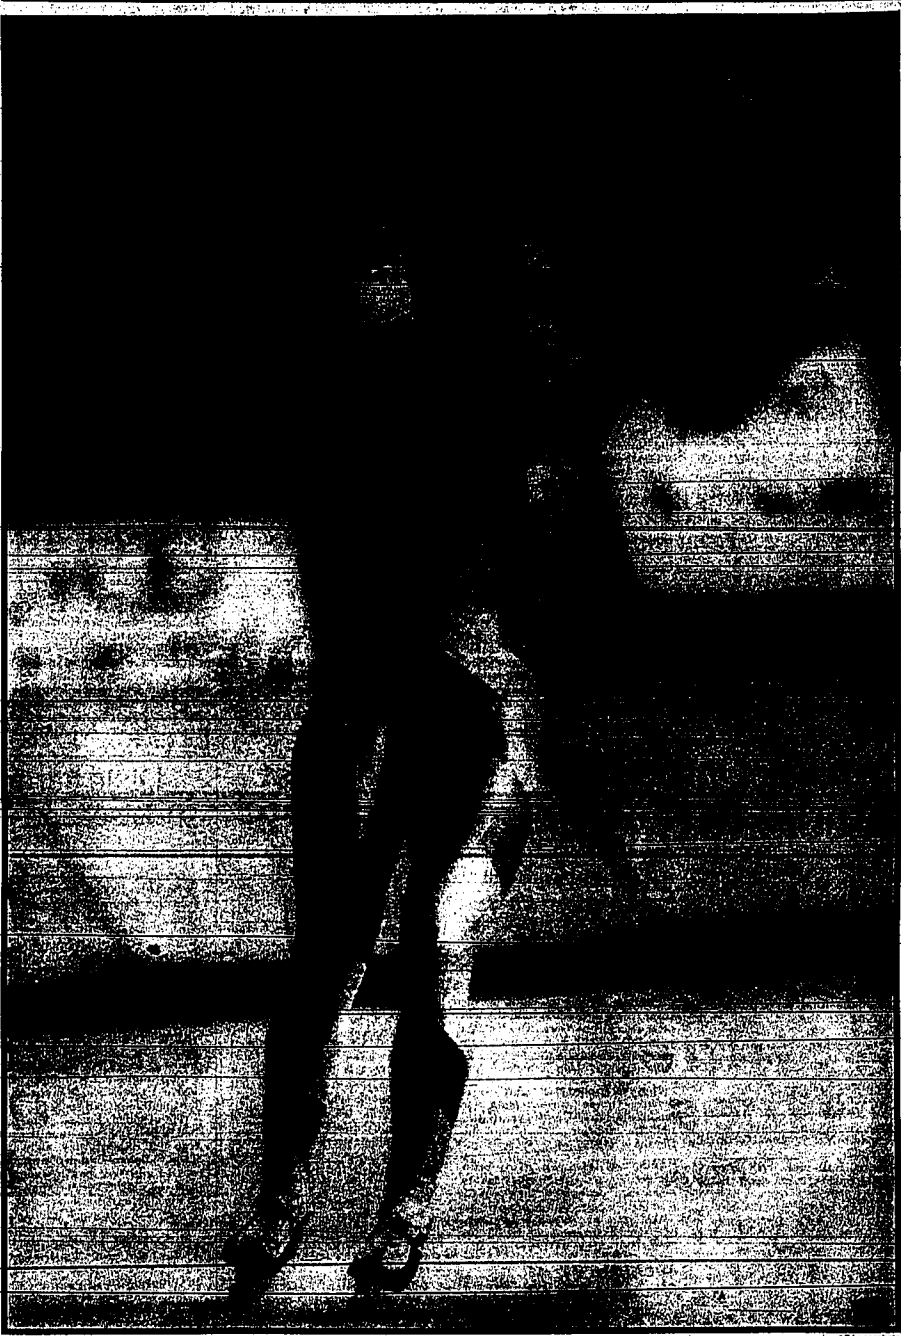

Karen Percy of Canada won her second medal, adding a super-G bronze to the bronze she won in the downhill.

"It would have been nice to get a different color, but bronze is still a medal, and I'm really happy," she said.

Edith Thys of Squaw Valley, Calif., gave America its first top 10 Alpine finish, placing ninth in the Smirnov had already had a silver at 30 kilometers and a bronze at 15, joined Marjo Matikainen of Finland as the Games' only two triple medalists after he got the Soviets off to an early lead in the relay.

The Swede, who has won 15 of the last 36 Olympic and world championship cross-country races dating to 1984, wound up winning by 12.7 seconds after Mikhail Deviatarov fell on the third leg and was passed by Gunnar Swann.

Shoshone wins Southside A-4 crown in overtime

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

JEROME — It almost seemed as if it were an impossibility. The Shoshone Indians, ranked No. 1 in the latest Associated Press basketball poll, trailed by six points at the end of the first quarter and by five with 1 minute and 23 seconds remaining. But the Indians rallied, tied the game in regulation and beat Castelford 58-57 in overtime for the District 4 Class A-4 Southside Subdistrict boys' basketball championship Monday.

The victory by Shoshone set up an all-Idaho County championship between Shoshone and Northside Subdistrict champion Richfield Wednesday at 8 p.m. at Jerome High School for the District 4 title. Castelford and runnerup Camas County will play in the 6:30 p.m. contest.

The winner of the district title field came out and played an overpowering full-court press before Craig Ward tipped in Barry Ward's missed jump shot with just 3 seconds left for a 63-62 victory.

"I'm just amazed," Miles said after the game. "This may be the most exciting finish to a game that I have ever had anything to do with."

The loser will advance to the state, for the District 4 title. Despite the fact that the two schools are less than 20 minutes apart, this will be their first boys' basketball encounter in years.

That game is scheduled for 8 p.m. in the Jerome High School gym. The winner will advance of the state A-4 tournament at the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls next week.

The loser will play the winner of the earlier game between Camas County and Southside Subdistrict runnerup Castelford for a spot in the state tournament, while the loser of that game will advance to a playoff with the third-place team from District 3 for a third chance at making the state tournament. That game will be played in Mountain Home Saturday afternoon.

Last year, Shoshone won the District 4 title by beating another Lincoln County school, Dietrich. At the time, Shoshone was ranked No. 1, Dietrich No. 2.

While the fourth quarter may have had plenty of excitement, for most of the game the Tigers looked listless, playing flat-footed on de-kets in the first half put Shoshone's back to the wall early in the contest.

With the Wolves — the preseason favorites who finished third in the Magic Valley Conference — leading by six points after the first quarter, it took less than two minutes for Castelford to build an eight-point advantage.

But it only took Shoshone four minutes to take the lead.

A pair of Jim Messick free throws, a basket by John Hall and a three-pointer by John Mendiola gave the Indians an 18-17 lead after a 9-0 spurt.

The morning line

Good morning. It's Tuesday, Feb. 23. The District 4 Class A-4 boys' basketball championship will be played at 8 p.m. at Jerome High School. The winner of the district title will advance to the state A-4 tournament at the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls next week. The loser will play the winner of the earlier game between Camas County and Southside Subdistrict runnerup Castelford for a spot in the state tournament, while the loser of that game will advance to a playoff with the third-place team from District 3 for a third chance at making the state tournament. That game will be played in Mountain Home Saturday afternoon.

Furious comeback gives Tigers Northside subdistrict title

By RICK SHACKLETT

GOODING — With just two minutes left on the clock and with his team trailing the Camas County Mustangs by 10 points in the District 4 Class A-4 Northside Subdistrict championship game here Monday night, Richfield boy's basketball coach Ricky Miles called a timeout to try and get his Tigers' minds back into the game.

Whatever he said must have been the right approach, because Richfield came out and played an overpowering full-court press before Craig Ward tipped in Barry Ward's missed jump shot with just 3 seconds left for a 63-62 victory.

"I'm just amazed," Miles said after the game. "This may be the most exciting finish to a game that I have ever had anything to do with."

The victory sent Richfield, ranked fourth in the latest Associated Press Class A-4 prep basketball poll, to a Wednesday night showdown with Lincoln County rival Shoshone, the No. 1-ranked team in the state, for the District 4 title. Despite the fact that the two schools are less than 20 minutes apart, this will be their first boys' basketball encounter in years.

That game is scheduled for 8 p.m. in the Jerome High School gym. The winner will advance of the state A-4 tournament at the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls next week.

The loser will play the winner of the earlier game between Camas County and Southside Subdistrict runnerup Castelford for a spot in the state tournament, while the loser of that game will advance to a playoff with the third-place team from District 3 for a third chance at making the state tournament. That game will be played in Mountain Home Saturday afternoon.

Last year, Shoshone won the District 4 title by beating another Lincoln County school, Dietrich. At the time, Shoshone was ranked No. 1, Dietrich No. 2.

While the fourth quarter may have had plenty of excitement, for most of the game the Tigers looked listless, playing flat-footed on de-kets in the first half put Shoshone's back to the wall early in the contest.

With the Wolves — the preseason favorites who finished third in the Magic Valley Conference — leading by six points after the first quarter, it took less than two minutes for Castelford to build an eight-point advantage.

But it only took Shoshone four minutes to take the lead.

T.F.-Burley, Highland-Poky open Region III tournament

By COLIN MULDOON

TWIN FALLS — Controlling the tempo on offense and controlling the boards on defense will be among the deciding factors in whether the Twin Falls High School boys' basketball team's postseason is any better than the regular season.

Boys' basketball

That's the word from Coach John Astorquia, whose fourth-seeded and 3-17 Bruins, entertaining hopes of a state playoff berth, head into the Region III Class A-1 boys' basketball tournament by hosting fifth-seeded and 4-16 Burley tonight in Bruin Gymnasium.

Tipoff time is slated for 7:30 p.m. Regular-season game passes and student passes will not be honored in the regional tournament, according to TFFHS Athletic Director Andy Barron. Ticket prices will be $3 for adults and $2 for students.

The region's second and third seeds, No. 1-ranked Pocatello (18-4) and Highland (11-9), will also get together tonight for a first-round game in the Indians gymnasium.

On Thursday, the winner of the Bobcat-Bruin matchup will travel to Rupert to face top-seeded and third-ranked Minico (18-4) while the loser will travel to Pocatello to meet the loser of the Highland-Pocatello contest. The loser of the latter contest will be eliminated from postseason play and the loser of the either Burley or Twin Falls and Minico will play a loser-out contest on Saturday.

The tournament will conclude next week.

Twin Falls, 2-6 in the region (both victories came against the Bobcats) has the size advantage over Burley, 0-8 in regional action. But the psychological advantage could provide the Bruins with confidence they need to win and advance to Rupert on Thursday night.

Twin Falls will be playing on its home court and the Bruins are coming off a 69-64 victory over Madison

Jackpot's cage squads finish regular seasons

By The Times-News

JACKPOT — With their leading scorer, Shawn Feltnan, sitting on the bench nursing an injury, Carlin took an early advantage and never looked back, beating the host Jaguars 79-47 ending Jackpot's boys' basketball season at 6-15.

The tandem of Chris Burroughs and Justin Hansen combined for 42 points. Feltnan, who averaged 18 points a contest, suffered an injury in a game against Wells and the Jaguars missed his scoring punch Saturday.

Carlin took a 20-6 first quarter lead and then held it up through the rest of the contest.

Carlin's regular season record is 11-10. The Jaguars finished 10-11. The regular season record for the Jaguars is 10-11. The regular season record for the Jaguars is 10-11.

Buhl, Jerome settle tourney lineup today

By The Times-News

BUHL — The who's-on-first, what's-on-second District 4 Class A-2 boys' basketball season will finally be sorted out tonight at Buhl High School when the top-ranked Jerome Tigers visit the Indians for both teams' regular-season finale.

In the past week, the question of who will get the all-important top seed and first-round bye in the upcoming District 4 postseason tournament has swung back and forth between Jerome and second-ranked Wood River. After the short-handed Tigers lost to Burley last Tuesday, all-wood-River would have had to do to beat Buhl here last Friday for the Wolverines to claim the top seed. But the Wolverines lost, 76-71. The following night they beat Burley in Halley, thus claiming the South-Central Idaho Conference championship — the first tiebreaker in any deadlock atop the District 4 A-2 regular-season standings.

There will be just such a deadlock if Buhl beats Jerome tonight, leaving the 15-4 Tigers tied with the 15-6 Wolverines with identical 2-2 district records. By virtue of a better league record, Wood River would sit in the College of Southern Idaho gym next Friday and watch Jerome and Buhl play the tournament opener.

Allen, whose only loss on route to last year's state championship was to Buhl in the Tigers' regular-season finale, is wary of the Indians, who spread Wood River's defense last Friday and rolled up 45 points in the second half.

"We have to prepare for a lot of things," said Allen, who, like Wood River Coach Dick Richel was surprised at Buhl's departure from its patient, perimeter-based offense.

The Tigers, hampered by the absence of center Clint Bailey with the flu and shooting guard Shawn Thompson with a slow-healing leg injury, will be at more or less full strength tonight. Both Bailey and Thompson will play, although Allen says Thompson's calf-muscle tear isn't completely healed.

that ended 17 straight Gem State Conference losses.

Burley, on the other hand, had hopes of rectifying an otherwise dismal season, but a 65-52 loss in Halley last Saturday to Wood River blew the Bobcats bid for a South-Central Idaho Conference championship.

Coupled with the latest setbacks for the Bobcats is the fact that Twin Falls has beaten them twice this year, 78-51 in Burley Dec. 2 and 88-64 Feb. 13 at Bruin gymnasium.

Minico Coach Craig Dexter certainly does not have the same concerns.

Regarding who he would rather see in the Spartans' gymnasium on Thursday evening, Dexter was indifferent.

"It doesn't matter to us," he said. "Regardless of who we play, we are going to have to come to our

BN officials seek flexibility through labor contract overhaul

SEATTLE (AP) — Burlington Northern Railroad Co. officials are seeking a major overhaul of work and pay rules to increase flexibility in a labor contract that could take more than a year to negotiate.

officials say they need contract concessions to compete with deregulated, non-union truckers. BN mostly hauls coal and wheat. Railroad officials say that to win back intercity freight traffic, they must reduce labor costs that now amount to half of all company expenses.

Trucking companies ... don't have 'high-rise' offices with high-priced executives," Christensen says. "I think a lot of the featherbedding is not down here. I think it's up in the high-rise buildings."

Christensen, who began his rail career in 1946 at age 18, knows some changes are inevitable. He says he hopes the negotiations will give workers a chance to share in any productivity gains.

"Railroad labor is basically overpaid and underworked," holding-company chairman Richard Bressler told Forbes magazine last fall. "Such things could only exist in a time of tight regulation, when companies could just pass the cost on to their customers."

conductor Stan Singleton of Lake Forest Park asserts that four-person crews are safer. "You take a cabooseless train carrying hazardous cargo: There's no one on the train to see if a car derails," Singleton says.

BN set up its Expediter service after unions gave the green light to short-haul trains with two-person crews and no caboose, but only for new business. Competing against truckers for intercity, intermodal traffic, Expediter service has grown to 36 trains in 21 states and spawned 175 new jobs.

BN also has leased rather than bought locomotives from General Motors and rented power by the hour from General Electric.

Tax amnesty may be untapped source of state revenue

NEW YORK — Twenty states in recent years have conducted tax amnesty programs...

John Cunniff

In New York State, about 161,000 people sought to pay up without penalty in 1985-86...

And that brings up the question: With the U.S. Congress having spent two decades wrestling with budget deficits...

Impressive as they might be, these figures tell only a fraction of the benefits that accrued to states.

The significance of that question depends with a shock on anyone familiar with the 1983 U.S. Treasury estimate...

It's violence as usual on Martyrs' Day

RAMALLAH, Occupied West Bank (AP) - Angry, defiant Palestinians marked "Martyrs' Day" in the occupied territories Monday with graveside speeches and stonethrowing demonstrations as they remembered the 61 Arabs killed in clashes since December.

Attorney General Yosef Harish meanwhile released a letter to Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin, criticizing Rabin's policy of allowing soldiers to beat prisoners.

You cannot use force as a means of punishment, abuse or humiliation," Harish said.

One Palestinian was shot and wounded Monday in this West Bank town 10 miles north of Jerusalem and another was shot during a demonstration at Jabalya refugee camp in the Gaza Strip, according to hospital sources. The army said it was "checking the reports."

About 1,500 additional police officers, brought in from throughout Israel, flooded Jerusalem in advance of the visit of U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz, set to begin Thursday.

The reinforcements will back up the host city's normal contingent of 1,000 officers.

Authorities fear Shultz's presence will lead to an upsurge in violence by Arabs pressing their case for an end to 20 years of Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza, seized during the 1967 Middle East war. The latest spate of unrest started Dec. 8 and has resulted in scores of deaths, hundreds of injuries and arrests.

In Kfar Naumi, a village of 2,000 inhabitants six miles west of here, about 1,500 Arabs marched through the streets chanting anti-Israeli and anti-American slogans.

In a fiery speech at the graveside of one of the two village residents who have died from army bullets, a speaker rejected the Shultz trip.

"From this grave we condemn the Shultz visit and the United States. These masses," he said gesturing to the crowd, "are led by the PLO. We will continue to achieve our goals and not satisfy American policy in the region."

Graffiti in Kfar Naumi read: "No for the visit of Shultz; yes, to the Palestinian government. Yes to the PLO."

Despite the rhetoric, Palestinian moderates are trying to persuade PLO leader Yasser Arafat to lift his ban against local Palestinians talking to Shultz. If Washington's peace plan is to succeed, Shultz needs to bring Palestinians into the talks.

In an interview Monday in Tunisia, Arafat said the Palestine Liberation Organization was ready to meet with the United States.

"We have declared that we are ready to meet with all of the permanent members of the Security Council, including the American administration," Arafat said, speaking on CBS-TV's "This Morning."

"Without a meeting with Palestinians, the Shultz initiative is bound to fail," said Sari Nusseibeh, a university professor and one of six Arabs originally slated to meet Shultz.

Conservative Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir has expressed strong reservations about the American initiative. While saying he is willing to listen and consider any ideas from Washington, he clearly does not like the American initiative which revolves around swapping land for peace. He also is worried about moving too quickly.

Permission sought to meet with Shultz

JERUSALEM (AP) - Palestinian moderates have sought permission from the PLO to meet with U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz when he arrives this week to launch a new American peace initiative, Arab leaders said Monday.

But Hanna Siniora, who reportedly solicited PLO chief Yasser Arafat's approval for a meeting, said the prospects were dim because the Palestine Liberation Organization doesn't want a Palestinian delegation to meet with Shultz in Israel.

"The PLO is willing to have a meeting with Shultz but outside Israel," Siniora, editor of the Palestinian daily Al-Fajr, said on his return Monday.

"There are already specific names of a PLO-designated delegation, composed of Pal-estianians from (outside the occupied territories) as well as from the West Bank and Gaza," Siniora said in an interview.

Siniora refused direct comment on reports he met with PLO leaders during a visit to Venice, Rome and Paris. He said such a meeting would be a punishable offense in Israel, where it is illegal to maintain contact with the PLO.

It is considered critical for Shultz to meet with a Palestinian delegation during his five-day visit to Israel in order to win credibility for the peace initiative the trip is intended to launch.

"Without a meeting with Palestinians, the Shultz initiative is bound to fail," said Sari Nusseibeh, a philosophy professor at the West Bank's Bir Zeit University.

Arab harassment flourishes amidst Israelis' distrust

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - Cafe owner Yosef Weizman said when Israeli police beat up his Arab waiter three days ago, he understood the depth of distrust between Jews and Arabs after months of clashes in the occupied territories.

Eli Ben-Simon, 38, had learned the lesson a few days earlier. Ben-Simon, who was beaten up in an industrial area near Tel Aviv because, he said, his Israeli attackers thought he was an Arab.

Growing numbers of Palestinians who work in and around this coastal city are million people are subject to harassment, primarily by Israelis made suspicious by the unprecedented fury and violence of Arabs opposing Israel's 20-year occupation in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Arab harassment is leading to a climate of fear among Palestinians and concern among many Israelis.

City officials estimate about 40,000 Arabs work in the Tel Aviv metropolitan area. There are also about 10,000 Arabs with Israeli citizenship who live in the area.

"This incident ... is, of course, linked to the unrest in the territories," Police Minister Chaim Barak said in a statement of the beating of Weizman's workers.

"I am afraid the situation in the territories is having a bad influence on the morals and values of the rest of Israeli society," he added.

One of the four beaten Arabs, 20-year-old Maysara Al-Jjela of Gaza, told The Jerusalem Post that police entered an apartment shared by nine Arab workers Friday and "did nothing anything at first. They just started to hit us with their hands and walkie-talkies, and also kick us."

"One policeman said 'You are smelly Arabs. You go home, throw stones at Jews and afterward return here to work.'" Al-Jjela told the daily Hadashot.

Weizman, owner of the Shelly Cafe in Dizengoff Center, said after his workers were beaten, he moved them out of their apartment into a hotel and promised to find them a new, safe place to live.

"Three of them ... said no thanks and quit," he told The Associated Press. "The police said they went into the apartment because they thought the Arabs were organizing something, but that is ridiculous. It's just Israeli suspicion of Arabs."

"I guess the police had a right to go into that apartment. But the way they handled it was very bad. I need those workers."

One Israeli, Delit Laub, witnessed the beatings when she walked past the Arab's first-floor apartment and glanced in the window.

"It was really violent. But I was afraid to get involved.... I thought of calling the police ... but they were the police," she told Hadashot.

"The problem of beating Arabs has to be taken care of by the police because it is a criminal issue," city spokesman Shabtai Sheval told the AP.

He refused to say how many incidents involving Arabs were reported in Tel Aviv over the last month.

Police said they were investigating and legal action would be taken if the allegations were found to be correct, police spokesman Shlomit Herzberg told the AP.

Police also were investigating the incident involving Ben-Simon, who was beaten senseless and left on a street.

He was driving to work on Feb. 12 when two Israelis flagged him down.

"I thought they needed help, but when I stopped, one of them shouted 'Here's an Arab maniac!'" Ben-Simon told the Post. "I said, 'Hey guys, what's going on? I'm not an Arab.'"

His protestations did no good. Ben-Simon saw the license plate number of the car as the two sped away, but he couldn't pick himself up.

An Arab worker helped Ben-Simon off the street and he was taken to a hospital, where his head was stitched.

Crew foils Taiwanese man's hijack attempt

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) - A 28-year-old Taiwanese man tried to hijack a China Airlines domestic flight with 114 people on board to Beijing Monday, but was overpowered by crewmembers, the airline reported.

The hijacker, identified as Chien Chu-yuan, told reporters at Taipei airport he attempted the hijacking because he wanted to pioneer direct transportation links between Taiwan and China.

No injuries were reported among the 108 other passengers and seven crew members aboard the Boeing 737 jetliner, which was en route from Taipei to Kaohsiung, a southern port city 240 miles away.

The passengers included one American and an unknown number of other foreigners.

Chien, an employee at a knife-grinding shop, said he wanted to see the "reunification of China" and planned the hijacking for more than a month. He made the remark after being escorted back to Taipei by police from Kaohsiung. Taiwan's government, recently relaxed a travel ban on visits to China but still maintains a no-contact policy with Beijing.

Airline officials said a crew member hit Chien on the head with a "hard object," and that gas and handcuffs were also used to subdue him, but would not elaborate.

Chien was carrying two fake grenades made of wood and a slip of paper from a fortune-teller predicting a year of bad luck, crew members told a news conference in Taipei.

Stewardess Lee Lin-said she was passing out drinks to passengers about 20 minutes after takeoff when the hijacker handed her a slip of paper demanding the plane be diverted to Beijing.

"He threatened on the slip of paper that he would kill all of us with his two grenades if we didn't fly to Beijing," she said.

Tape gives captors' demands

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The kidnapers of a U.S. Marine officer released a videotape Monday in which they made demands, including withdrawal by Israel from its border "security zone" in south Lebanon.

Lt. Col. William R. Higgins, who appeared to be reading from a videotape Monday by his captors, said President Reagan "has to take responsibility for the crimes he has committed against the oppressed people in the region."

Higgins was abducted last Wednesday on a highway south of Tyre, the ancient port 50 miles south of Beirut.

A group calling itself the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth, which claimed responsibility for the abduction, released the 70-second tape.

The kidnapping increased friction between two Shiite Muslim forces vying for domination in south Lebanon: the moderate Amal militia, which is trying to rescue Higgins, and Hezbollah, or Party of God, which is loyal to Iran and is believed to be an umbrella for groups holding most of the 25 foreigners missing in Lebanon.

Amal militiamen and troops of the U.N. peacekeeping force in south Lebanon, using dogs, searched the caves and groves of the Tyre area for the sixth day Monday without result.

Higgins is commander of the 76-man Observer Group-Lebanon attached to the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon, or UNIFIL, the south Lebanon peacekeeping force.

Hezbollah claimed the 43-year-old Marine from Danville, Ky., was removed from the area despite a demand by Amal and U.N. security officials.

Floods displace hillside dwellers

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A deadly mix of rock and mud threatened hillside homes during a fourth day of violent rains Monday which have killed at least 75 people in the Rio area.

The new danger slowed efforts to reach a buried roomful of children and prompted the mayor to order hundreds of residents to "get out while there's still time."

Mud-caked survivors flashed thumbs-up signs as they were carried away on stretchers, while rescuers moved gingerly about the unstable hillside in the city.

Scores have died there since the heavy rains began triggering sporadic floods and mudslides on Friday.

Presented an extreme risk of new avalanches, particularly in the crowded shantytown slums that line the hills.

Mayor Roberto Saturnino Braga went on television to order hundreds of slum dwellers to evacuate their high-risk homes.

"Get out while there's still time. You may lose your possessions, and we regret that, but we're talking about your lives," Braga said.

In the working-class north Rio district of Abolicao, rescue workers used aluminum ladders and spikes to break up concrete slabs of a three-story apartment building that collapsed under a mudslide Sunday night, killing at least nine residents.

Survivors covered with yellow-brown mud flashing thumbs-up signs as they were borne away on stretchers.

Civil defense spokeswoman Sonia Hadid said workers expected to find as many as 11 bodies under the rubble.

"There was a children's party going on in one of the apartments when it collapsed, so we don't know how many were in there," Hadid said by telephone.

In the Santa Teresa district near downtown Rio, 80 firemen searched for bodies under the debris of a hillside clinic for the elderly that was hit by a mud avalanche late Friday.

A three-story pavilion of the clinic collapsed and at least 11 patients died.

Militant Sikhs turn on own

KATHUNANGAL, India (AP) — The turban of Darshan Singh, a 12-year-old Sikh, was half burned from the heat of the molten when he hid to escape death.

But the killers — Sikhs themselves — yanked him out, and he died in a burst of gunfire. The boy, his elder brother and their father all died in the courtyard of the village of Fattu Bheela, home of 2,000 Sikhs.

It was one more case of Sikhs killing Sikhs. Never before in the radicals' six-year campaign for an independent homeland have the killers turned their guns so relentlessly on people of their own minority faith.

Of the 288 deaths blamed on Sikh militants this year in the Sikh-dominated northern state of Punjab, at least 189 victims were Sikhs. On Friday and Saturday, 31 people died in attacks, at least 20 of them Sikhs.

"The militants want the message to go deep — that they will not only kill those who oppose them, but even those who refuse to support them," said the Amritsar district police superintendent, Mohammed Izhar Alam.

Harbhajan Kaur, Darshan's mother, told of the attack last week in the village 18 miles north of Amritsar, the Sikh holy city and heart of the radical campaign.

She said she was wounded but because of fear, no neighbor came to help.

"I was lying in my courtyard the whole night, bleeding," she said from her hospital bed.

The Sikh campaign began with attacks on Hindus, India's religious majority but a minority in Punjab. Last year, most of the 1,000 victims of Sikh radicals were Hindus.

The radicals allege economic and cultural domination by Hindus and want an independent homeland for their 15 million people. But theories vary considerably — and Sikh groups are now aiming at Sikhs.

"Most of the men killed are either former terrorists or harborers and their families who, no matter how guilty they are, the militants," said S.E. Wink, deputy director general of the paramilitary Central Reserve Police Force.

The killers themselves claim all Sikh victims are police informers or enemies of the 500-year-old faith, founded on an alternative to the beliefs of warring Moslems and Hindus.

"We shed the blood of only enemies, not of innocents or passive people," said Giani Jagir Singh, spokesman for the Panthic Committee, an umbrella group that controls the Sikh movement.

"Write it down," he commanded during an interview in a bare, windowless room in the Sikhs' Golden Temple. "I have led half a dozen attacks myself and in every case, we killed only police informers."

Why are Sikh women and children also killed? "Have you heard of an old Punjabi saying when you grind wheat to get flour, some mills also get crushed?" said Singh, 45, a large man with flowing beard.
