State higher education aid to rise only 4.3%

The Associated Press

BOISE - Budget writers completed their deliberations on the legislature's highest spending priority Friday, approving modest 4.3 percent increases in state aid for higher education.

The proposed support levels of $105.9 million for the four colleges and $6.1 million for the two junior colleges follow the trend set by the Republican majority on the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee when it allocated $356 million a day earlier to public schools.

Idaho Legislature 1988

The action concluded work on the education budget, leaving the Transportation Department and State Police budgets as the remaining work for the committee. Officials hoped to complete those spending plans Monday.

The education allotments run well below the recommendations from Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus and the state Board of Education as did the public school allocation, and education officials said they were also short of the amounts needed to maintain education operations at their current levels for another year.

But even with increases held down by a desire to rein in election-year tax spending, lawmakers are $7 million and possibly as much as $10 million short of the general tax revenue needed to keep their spending blueprint in the black.

Senate President Pro Tem James Risch, R-Boise, said various options for generating the needed revenue were being reviewed. The only possibility he ruled out was a general tax increase. He said a decision on a revenue option would be made next week.

"It's been made painfully evident what the impact of the revenue shortage is," Board of Education Executive Director Richard Sperring said. "The result is when they go to colleges and universities, what you see is the tremendous revenue constraint, and we were a victim of it."

Based on the committee recommendation, Sperring said, "There would appear to be nothing to treat inequities or new programs or accreditation needs. ... I don't see the money there."

Some budget committee members have reacted sharply to the criticism the Republican majority has received for failing to meet the spending recommendations of the governor, who sought $369 million for public schools and $110 million for the colleges.

Sen. Veal Crystal, R-Lewisville, pointed out that since 1984 state support has risen over 46 percent for colleges.

Admits he misled Congress

McFarlane pleads guilty

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Former presidential aide Robert C. McFarlane pleaded guilty Friday to misdemeanor charges that he misled Congress by assuring lawmakers the Reagan administration was not helping arm Nicaraguan rebels during a ban on U.S. military aid.

President Reagan's former national security adviser pleaded guilty to four counts of withholding information from Congress when questioned about news reports that members of his staff, particularly Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, were helping to raise money and ship arms to the Contra rebels.

McFarlane, who agreed to cooperate fully with independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh's investigation, could be sentenced to up to four years imprisonment and fined as much as $400,000 for the guilty plea he entered before U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr.

Robinson released McFarlane on his own recognizance and did not schedule a sentencing date. McFarlane was subdued and spoke in a soft voice when responding to questions posed by the judge.

"You understand that imprisonment could be consecutive?" Robinson said, referring to the option of making the four one-year terms concurrent or consecutive.

"I understand that," McFarlane said without showing any emotion. The judge later asked, "Do you know any reason I should not accept the plea?"

"No," McFarlane said. McFarlane played a major role in the Iran-Contra affair, even after he resigned as national security adviser in December 1985. The following May, he led a secret mission to Tehran to open contact with so-called moderate Iranians who were thought to hold influence with kidnapers of American hostages. He brought with him a cake and a Bible signed by President Reagan.

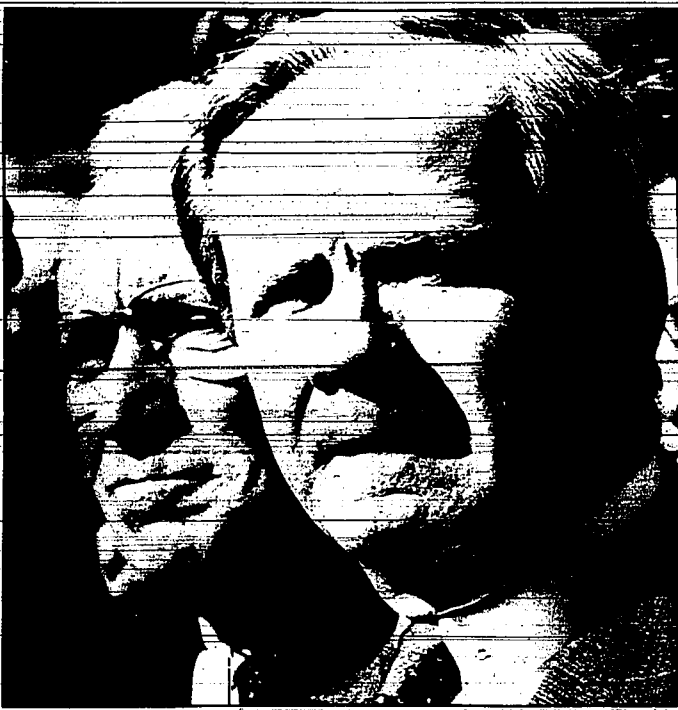

McFarlane attempted suicide in February 1987 by taking an overdose of a tranquilizer the day before he was scheduled to testify before a presidential commission investigating the affair.

President Reagan, leaving the White House Friday afternoon for a helicopter trip to Camp David, Md., refused to comment on McFarlane's plea.

"It's in the court," he shouted to reporters.

North, who is expected to be indicted for his role in the Iran-Contra affair, was asked by CBS News about McFarlane. "I wouldn't comment."

School support to shift

The Associated Press

BOISE - Rep. Raymond Parks, R-Blackfoot, was a little wrung out, but happy, Friday afternoon.

After working on the idea for five years, he finally convinced the House to approve his legislation shifting the basis for local school support in Idaho from property tax to income tax.

"It is fair, it is equitable, it is just," Parks told House members. "It puts the dollars where the people are."

If the Senate also approves, and the governor signs the measure into law, it would represent a major change in Idaho tax law. It would transfer about $89 million worth of property taxes paid at the local level to support schools to taxation on the basis of income.

After a debate of about two hours, in which House members asked many questions on how it would work, the legislation passed 46-36 and went to the Senate. Parks said it was uncertain what would happen in that chamber.

But he was pleased Friday, because in the last five years, he wasn't able to get the idea out of the Revenue and Taxation Committee, let alone through the House.

But three Democrats joined 43 Republicans in supporting the bill as a means of curbing what many termed the state's least popular tax, the property tax.

Many legislators argued they did not understand how the bill would work. Parks said that probably worked against him, and as more people understood how the bill worked, they helped him pass it.

Parks had the bill amended to delay the change for a year, which may have been a major factor in getting it approved. Several legislators argued that although there might be "bugs in it," they said those problems can be worked out in the next year.

Instead of property taxes, the bill allows school district officials to levy up to 2.4 percent against a taxpayer's taxable income for school maintenance and operation. Another 2.4 percent could be levied for school plant facilities.

Parks said based on current spending, no school district would have to levy the maximum amount.

Wilderness bill draws fire from all sides in Boise

By MARK PRATTER Times-News writer

BOISE - Few liked it, everyone had an opinion and no one seemed to understand each other. That is how it went at day-long hearings Friday on the Idaho Forest Management Act, the so-called Idaho wilderness bill.

Among those testifying was Janet O'Crowley of the Committee for Idaho's High Desert, who described the bill as "an ill-aimed gun pointing at one thing and aiming at another."

She told the hearing conducted by the U.S. Senate Subcommittee on Public Lands, National Parks and Forests that Idaho would be better off if two bills were written, one on wilderness and the other on forest management.

O'Crowley and Ernie Day of the Wilderness Society were among the older generation of Idahoans testifying about the destruction of the land in their lifetimes and the need to preserve Idaho's precious spots for future generations.

"It remains for the old to talk about the geography of hope," said O'Crowley of Picaob.

O'Crowley said the bill crafted by Republican Sen. James McClure and Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus is not a wilderness bill but a road bill. She touched a point that became a theme of the hearings at Boise City Hall.

Many said the bill was so specific about the fate of 1.4 million roadless acres in Idaho's national forests that it really does the work that is the U.S. Forest Service's job.

In opposing the bill, O'Crowley said that out of 9 million acres of roadless land, the bill would legislate that 4 million acres have roads.

Many speakers criticized the bill for not naming the Smoky Mountains, northwest of Ketchum, for wilderness status and leaving out too much of the White Clouds from wilderness classification.

The Idaho Conservation League opposed the bill for similar reasons.

But the Magic Valley Trail Machine Association said the 1.4 million acres of wilderness proposed is excessive.

If the White Clouds are not made wilderness, nothing bad will happen to them, said Stan Mai of the association. The White Clouds north of Ketchum are already protected, he said.

An undercurrent in some of the testimony of those opposed to the bill was deep concern for how "locking up" more federal land would affect Idaho's mining economy.

Wilderness is designated by Congress. In wilderness man's interference with the environment is banned.

Logging is not allowed, motorized access is restricted and development curtailed.

The Idaho Cattle Association opposed the bill and will oppose any bill that creates additional wilderness, said Eric Davis of Brunenu, ICA president.

He said the livestock industry is already threatened by the existing 3.8 million acres of wilderness in Idaho.

WASHINGTON - President Reagan imposed new sanctions Friday against Panama, trying to weaken military strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega's grip on power and end "the illegitimate Noriega regime."

In a written statement, Reagan said, "I believe that General Noriega would best serve his country by complying with the instruction of President (Eric Arturo) Delvalle to relinquish his post."

Delvalle, the civilian figurehead president regarded as the legitimate constitutional authority by the United States, has been in hiding since Feb. 26 when he tried unsuccessfully to fire Noriega as commander of the Panama Defense Forces. Noriega is under indictment in the United States on drug-smuggling and racketeering charges.

Reagan ordered that U.S. government payments due Panama be put in escrow until constitutional rule is restored in Panama. A $6.5 million payment is due next Tuesday for operations relating to the Panama Canal.

He also suspended trade preferences Panama receives under a special system for Third World countries and the Caribbean Basin Initiative. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said $96 million worth of goods would be affected annually.

In addition, Reagan ordered stepped up scrutiny of Panama by U.S. Immigration and Customs Service officials "to apprehend drug traffickers and money launderers."

Measures already taken with U.S. support have caused a severe cash shortage, prompting the government to suspend many banking operations, crippling Panama's economy.

Panamanian Ambassador Juan B. Sosa told a news conference he was pleased with Reagan's announcement. He said that by bringing sanctions will not be enough to bring down Noriega but that this goal will be achieved when combined with the actions of the Panamanian people.

Panama slashes public services

The Associated Press

PANAMA CITY, Panama - Panama's military-backed government ordered cuts in public services Friday as new U.S. sanctions compounded a financial crisis.

Police firing tear gas broke up an opposition rally. The beleaguered government of strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega reportedly also was considering delaying or reducing paychecks due early next week to nearly 150,000 public employees. A spokesman said no decision was made on those steps.

Several businessmen said they were warned their stores could be expropriated if they refused to cash public employees' paychecks.

A planned demonstration by government opponents in the central banking district was broken up Friday afternoon by riot police firing tear gas grenades and spraying the stinging, acid liquid from portable canisters.

Large numbers of police prevented any sustained gathering of demonstrators. Small groups gathered and then ran, setting a few fires. An Associated Press photographer at the scene reported more journalists on hand than police, except for anti-demonstrators.

At one site there were about 60 journalists and fewer than 20 protesters, who loudly chanted "Justice!" and taunted the police.

Three journalists were injured when police sprayed gas in their faces at close range. They were Lucia Anziate, a reporter with La Republica of Rome; David Walters, a photographer with the Miami Herald; and Manolo Iscala, a cameraman for Spanish television.

Dole attempts to rescue his candidacy

By The Associated Press

Republican Bob Dole tried to rescue a presidential candidacy that was hanging by its fingernails on Friday and the Democratic presidential race left behind Gary Hart, who acknowledged "the people have decided against his candidacy."

"People have decided"

Democratic Jesse Jackson continued to roll with a narrow victory over Michael Dukakis in Alaska's precinct caucuses. He looked for further encouragement in Saturday's caucuses in South Carolina, his native state, and in Tuesday's primary in Illinois; his adopted state.

Dole bought a half hour of live television time on a Chicago station for Saturday night and said "I dare George Bush to have a debate."

hand. But he was reeling from his 17-state collapse on Super Tuesday, when Bush won 16 of those states and took a giant step toward the nomination.

"What we need is to slow down this Super Tuesday momentum," Dole said. "I will reassess after Illinois," he added. "I am going to be very realistic about this."

The only other Republican left in the race, following Jack Kemp's withdrawal a day earlier, was Pat Robertson. He campaigned in Florida, Ill., and vowed, "I'm in it until New Orleans," where the Republicans hold their convention.

I got a fair hearing and the people have decided and now I should not go forward," he declared.

Hart's staff contained only a trace of the defiance that marked his initial departure last May. Once the prohibitive front-runner for the party's nomination, Hart dropped out the first time amid disclosures of his relationship with Miami model Donna Rice.

Dukakis said he hopes to get a share of Illinois delegates and demonstrated "I can appeal to people all over the country."

Heart inflammation listed as cause of Gibb death

LONDON (AP) — Andy Gibb, the British-born pop singer and former teen idol, died of heart inflammation and there was no evidence that drugs or alcohol were involved, doctors said Friday.

Constable Michael Harvey of the Oxford coroner's office said no inquest would be held because Gibb died of natural causes.

Gibb died Thursday at John Radcliffe Hospital, Oxford, after complaining of stomach pains. He was about to resume singing and start recording for Island Records after years of personal and drug problems.

Brothers Robin, Barry and Maurice of the Bee Gees singing group said the body "will be flown back to his home in Los Angeles as soon as possible and a memorial service will be held there."

A hospital statement Friday said "Mr. Gibb died from inflammation of the heart of the sort commonly caused by a virus. There is no evidence that his death was related to drink or drugs."

Rob Partridge, publicist for Island Records Ltd., said Gibb became ill last weekend and was admitted to the hospital "essentially for observation."

McClure andrus bill, but IGA said the language mimics wording in the Wilderness Act of 1964 and that has failed miserably to protect grazing.

Others in the natural resource industry rallied for multiple use of federal lands.

Some opposed to the bill said making more wilderness would only increase pressure from various uses on existing federal lands that are not part of the wilderness system.

Others among the 126 people signed up to testify said wilderness would bring more jobs for the tourist industry.

But Walsh said he agreed to the misdemeanor plea because of the former national security adviser's willingness to cooperate with Walsh's investigation and his "undisguised" expressions of remorse after the false testimony.

Walsh called the investigation "a very important" development in his 14-month investigation. In the coming weeks, the investigation is expected to yield a round of indictments against North and others, including Rear Adm. John M. Poindexter, who was McFarlane's successor as national security adviser.

McFarlane told reporters, "I did indeed withhold information from the Congress. I believe strongly that, throughout, my actions were motivated by what I believed to be in the foreign policy interest of the United States."

After the Iran-Contra affair unraveled in late 1986, McFarlane said "I believed—profundly—that it was my personal obligation to testify voluntarily and fully to those bodies formally established to investigate this matter."

higher paying jobs that would come from Idaho developing its natural resources.

The testimony went from eloquent pleas to a raised-pitch concern to droning monotonous about acreage figures.

There were props including a dead wolverine displayed as a plea for more wilderness and a horseshoe, hiking boot and trail bike tire shown to give McClure andrus an idea about the relative damage of each to trails.

McClure sat impassively through the hearing but brightened when speakers praised him and Andrus for their hard work in trying to resolve the thorny wilderness question, but then his smile faded when the attacks started.

Andrus was more animated, sometimes turning to listen to a particular speaker such as Jack Lemrick of the Northwest Timber Workers Resource Council.

Lemrick spoke slowly in low tones about the plight of his industry. He said timber supply curtailments in the last 10 years led to shutdowns of mills in McGilly, Boise and Emmett.

Lemrick married with two children, also lamented reducing shifts at mills at Council and Horseshoe Bend.

McClure's staff has set an October deadline for getting the bill through Congress, but the talk in the halls outside the hearing room was whether a bill could get through without a strong base of public support.

Testimony at a hearing in Idaho Falls on Thursday was similar to what occurred in Boise.

Harringer said the bill made him disappointed, disillusioned and angry.

"It sounds like a big country fair to me. I sincerely believe it's a moral obligation to improve more of our precious assets," he said.

The bill allows grazing, vehicular use, water development, predator control, aircraft and helicopter access, all of which he said are uses not compatible with wilderness, he said.

Sheri L. Chapman, executive director of the Idaho Water Users Association, said his irrigator group supported wording in the bill on federal reserved water rights. The irrigators say they are disturbed by what they see as a trend of increased federal control over state water decisions.

Federal rights are water rights on federal land set aside for the use of the federal government.

Chapman said after he testified that his group hasn't taken a position about whether additional wilderness acres should be added.

Among the few who testified in favor of the bill was Bill Tonkin, a 60-year-old Boise accountant, who said he is living proof that wilderness users don't have to be young, mechoreweally.

He said while he believes in the comprehensive use of natural resources, he favors erring on the side of conserving them for the future.

The legislation developed by McClure and Andrus is not perfect but it represents "a far better" alternative to the extreme views of either the exploiters or the ultraconservationists, or to doing nothing, Tonkin said.

Death bullet matches rifle

RIGBY (AP) — State firearms expert Wally Baker testified Friday that he was "absolutely positive" that one of the two bullets that killed Ashton convenience store owner Teresa Rice came from the same .42-caliber Remington rifle purchased by Barrington Eugene Seary last July 7.

Deputy Attorney General Peter Ehlbrand and Fremont County Prosecutor Jack Hoopes wrapped up their case Friday in 21-year-old Rextury man's trial on charges of first-degree murder, robbery and using a firearm in Mrs. Rice's slaying at Jack's Highway Shopping Center last July 15.

The trial, in its fourth day Friday, was moved from Fremont to Jefferson County to avoid extensive publicity on the case in the St. Anthony and Ashton area.

Baker testified before 7th District Judge H. Reynold George that after examining one of the bullets that struck the 32-year-old Mrs. Rice, he was convinced it was from the gun purchased by Seary at a Rextury Kmart "and no other."

"The bullet had unique markings that could have been caused by rough edges on the end of the gun where it had been sawed off," Baker said.

BSU students object to fee

BOISE (AP) — Some Boise State University students are objecting to a plan to have each student pay a $10 computer service fee.

Raymond Rogers, Senate President Pro Tem of the Associated Student Body of Boise State, said during a hearing Thursday the proposed hike is unjustified.

"I feel there is little validity to this," Rogers said. "Before students are approached, they want the need to be established," he said. "Perhaps there is a need, but not an established one. If fees are going to be imposed on students, they need to be justified."

Ken Hollenbaugh, BSU associate executive vice president, said the fee would allow the updating of computer software and give students greater access to computer labs through extended hours.

Citizens call SIS hearing

LEWISTON (AP) — The U.S. Department of Energy ruled that northern Idaho didn't have an interest in the Special Isotope Separation Project, but at least 30 people gathered to speak up anyway.

The do-it-yourself hearing Thursday was thrown together by citizens' groups and public officials from the region after DOE decided not to conduct a hearing in northern Idaho on the final draft of the Environmental Impact Statement for the project.

DOE officials said northern Idaho was outside the area of impact, and therefore is not at risk because of the project. So hearings were scheduled for later this month only at Boise, Twin Falls and Idaho Falls. In the face of that decision, activists in the Patuxent region decided to conduct their own hearing and enter that testimony into the DOE's official hearing record.

A panel of 10 local and regional civic and elected leaders heard the testimony, which was recorded, and will be transcribed and submitted to DOE.

2 bomb suspects enter plea

BOISE (AP) — Two of the five people indicted by a federal grand jury last month in the 1986 bombings of a priest's house and three other buildings in Coeur d'Alene have pleaded innocent to racketeering, conspiracy, counterfeiting and firearms charges.

Deborah Dorr, 36, entered her plea Friday in Boise before U.S. Magistrate Mikel Williams. Olive Harvey, 29, pleaded innocent before U.S. Magistrate Stephen Ayres in Coeur d'Alene.

Both women remained free, but under travel and other restrictions.

They were named along with Mrs. Dorr's husband David, Mrs. Hawley's husband Edward and Robert Pires in the 16-count indictment alleging they engaged in a series of criminal activities in northern Idaho — including murder and attempted bank robbery — to restore the militant white-separatist group called The Order.

Micron's move hangs on road

BOISE (AP) — A $50,000 construction project could get under way as early as this summer to expand the Federal-Way-Gowen intersection near Micron Technology Inc., the Idaho Transportation Board decided.

The board made the decision Thursday following Micron Chairman Joe Parkinson's demand in February that the road be improved as originally planned.

He warned the transportation board that its decision would play a role in Micron's choice of Boise or Portland as the site for a new 1,000-employee plant.

Plans call for widening the intersection by one lane and installing another turn signal to ease traffic problems near Micron, a rapidly expanding semiconductor company.

But the board said Micron will have to pay a share of building a connecting highway from Interstate 84, near the plant, to Idaho 21 at the Diversion Dam if it is to be built in the next year and half.

Colleges feel budget pinch

MOSCOW (AP) — University of Idaho President Richard Gibb says he hopes the Legislature will pump more money into a "tight" higher education budget recommendation of $105.2 million approved by the Legislature's Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee.

"That would be a very difficult budget," Gibb said Friday. "I'm hopeful it would be given careful reconsideration by the two houses. Perhaps it's unrealistic, but I'd still want to work for the board's budget request ($114 million) and if that's not possible, then the governor's budget request ($110 million)."

Gibb said if the budget recommendation is eventually improved, "it won't be the kind of thing (such as) a few years ago when we had to declare a state of financial exigency. I don't see that happening."

The declaration of a financial crisis by the Board of Education in 1981 resulted in the layoff of faculty members, some of whom filed successful lawsuits questioning the validity of the process.

Trial reveals grisly find

BOISE (AP) — A Nampa man says that he found human body parts near Brownlee Reservoir when he and his family were on a fishing trip during the July 4th weekend.

"As I got closer to the reservoir, I saw a strange object," said Carl Kitchen, who testified Thursday in 4th District Court during the eighth day of the murder trial of Daniel Rodgers, 37, Boise.

Rodgers is charged with first-degree murder in the slaying of Preston Muir, 21, Boise, who died of a gunshot wound to the head and then was chopped into 13 parts and scattered along the Snake River.

Grant pleases Soda Springs

SODA SPRINGS (AP) — The U.S. Department of Commerce has approved a $875,000 Economic Development Administration grant to upgrade an industrial park in Soda Springs.

The Soda Springs City Council, with help from the Southeast Idaho Council of Governments and Sen. James McClure's office, originally applied for an $805,000 EDA grant.

Money from the original request was earmarked for construction of a new access road to the park, extending a larger water line and building two railroad spurs and a 1 million-gallon water storage tank.

Senate approves water plan for state

BOISE (AP) — An effort to reassert Idaho's authority over its rivers and streams has won overwhelming approval from the Idaho Senate.

The Senate voted 34-7 Friday to send the Comprehensive State Water Plan legislation to the House for final action.

"Without this bill, we will have lost an opportunity to keep control and manage the water resources of this state," said Senate Resources and Environment Chairman Laird Noh, R-Kimberly.

"We're dealing here with a basic clash between hydro development and the state's control of its water," Noh said.

The bill is the 11th draft of the complex plan to reassert Idaho into the decision-making process following the campaign by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to wrest control of all water uses upstream from any hydro development licenses it grants.

It sets up a framework for the state to make management decisions about the use of its rivers and provides interim protection for "the battleground rivers where the conflict over uses is the sharpest."

Those rivers, protected for two years before being reviewed, include the Priest River, The South Fork of the Boise River, the Henry's Fork of the Snake River, a reach of the main Snake upstream from King Hill and portions of the Nezer, Fork, South Fork and main Payette rivers.

The need for state legislation was heightened late last year when the Northwest Power Planning Council staff proposed a regional water management plan that would prohibit any development on some 12,000 miles of Idaho rivers and streams.

"This is not a perfect step," said Sen. Karl Brooks, D-Boise, one of the architects of what he described as "a delicate compromise."

"Nevertheless, it's an important step," he said.

Noh said there were provisions to accommodate the concerns of small hydropower developers who could be caught by a decision to provide interim protection to a river. But he conceded that the bill would probably increase the costs for those who decided to get involved in what he called "a high-risk game."

But he also said that short of congressional action stripping the federal commission of any authority over state waters, the bill was the best way to regain some control for the state.

House passes legislative budget hike

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Legislature has completed action increasing its budget by $300,000 per year, despite debate from some opponents that the lawmakers should limit the increase to set an example for state agencies.

The appropriation was approved by the House on Friday by 53-18, after clearing the Senate earlier. It now goes to the governor.

The Legislature receives an automatic appropriation of $2.3 million per year, Rep. Michael Simpson, R-Blackfoot, said that without extra money, the Legislature will run short of having enough operating expense funding in the next budget.

Part of the increase, he said, was because of a court order boosting the size of the Legislature from 105 to 128 members.

Seven Democrats and 11 Republicans voted against the appropriation.

Rep. Tim Tucker, D-Portland, argued that the Legislature this session has been giving state agencies no more than 3 percent increases in budgets.

Since 1984, Tucker said, legislative spending has gone up 40 percent, and the change proposed Friday represents a 13.44 percent increase.

"We have been very careful this year not to overspend what we have. I think that is a prudent course of action. We should make sure that the Legislature doesn't outspend the state agencies," Tucker said.

Rep. Mack Nelbaur, R-Paul, defended the appropriation. He said he felt the Legislature could spend a little less for travel to conventions of professional organizations, but generally, "We're doing a pretty good job."

Rep. Deanna Vickers, D-Lewiston, said the Legislature should put off its own funding increase until other matters are decided. By voting for extra money for the Legislature, before deciding whether to pay for more prenatal care for babies, or making it easier for elderly people to get health care.

"We give the appearance at least of feathering our own nests," she said.

Simpson said the Legislature spends less than 1 percent of the state budget. "We think that is a pretty good deal for the people of Idaho," he said.

Senate confirms Holm, Ware to state offices

BOISE (AP) — Roberts farmer and businessman Del Ray Holm has narrowly won confirmation of his reappointment to the state Commission on Pardons and Pardon.

On a 23-16 vote Friday, the Senate endorsed Holm's nomination to a second four-year term on the commission, the majority overcame an undercurrent of dissatisfaction with past incidents involving Holm.

"He brings experience as a seasoned veteran of this board, one which is made up of much inexperience," Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Declo, said.

"It's true the gentleman in question has been in controversy in the past with members of this Senate," Darrington acknowledged. "But we need his experience on this board at this time."

On another relatively high-profile appointment, however, there was no opposition to the confirmation of Intermountain Gas Vice President James Ware of Boise to the state personnel commission.

Ware's appointment attracted more attention than normal because he was picked to succeed Idaho Falls accountant Nolan Young.

Holm's nomination by Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus had been held up in the Senate Judiciary Committee for over two weeks at the request of both Democrats and Republicans on the panel, but once it came to a vote earlier this week there was no discussion and no opposition.

Budget session plan falls in Senate, 23-18

BOISE (AP) — Legislation aimed at reducing the amount of time state lawmakers spend in session has been rejected by the Idaho Senate.

On a 23-18 vote Friday, the Senate defeated the bill to effectively limit election-year legislative sessions to budget matters.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Roger Fairchild said the bill would reverse what he sees as a dangerous move toward a year-round Legislature.

"I feel we're long and quickly moving toward a professional and full-time Legislature," Fairchild said, citing the length of the year's sessions and the bills that pour through the Statehouse each winter.

"As it goes longer and longer each year, we're going to get less and less people willing to be here," the Fruitland Republican warned. "We're going to have more and more professional political types than a citizens' Legislature."

Fairchild called his proposal a small step toward limiting legislative sessions. But Democratic Caucus Chairman John Peavy of Carey objected to the provision allowing only the governor to add non-budget items to the work of the election-year session.

He and others called that an intrusion into legislative prerogative that severely restricts lawmakers' abilities to represent their constituents.

But critics from both political parties picked apart the provisions of the bill, contending that too many things had to be worked out yet before they could support it.

Many lawmakers believe that proposition cannot pass.

Blizzard strands travelers on plains, threatens stock

By The Associated Press

A blizzard plastered the northern Plains with deep snow driven by wind up to 60 mph Friday, endangering newborn calves and stranding travelers along hundreds of miles of blocked highways in Colorado, Nebraska, Wyoming and the Dakotas.

"We feel it is in the best interest of the public to not go out on the highway," said Capt. Russ Ternes of the North Dakota Highway Patrol. "We don't want anyone getting stranded. It's just a very dangerous situation."

"We're mostly had people sliding off the road. We're not even pulling them out. We're just getting people out of the vehicles," Nebraska State Patrol dispatcher Alex Haberkorn said in Scottsbluff.

Several hundred pupils in Colorado spent the night in their schools. Some travelers tried to sleep on the floors of a courthouse. North Dakota Capitol workers were sent home Friday about an hour after they arrived.

The storm was moving slowly eastward and hard-hit Nebraska was not expected to get relief until late Friday or early Saturday. It was expected to track across Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Up to 40 inches of snow fell in two days in the mountains of Utah at the Alta ski resort, with 37 at Snowbird. Up to 2 feet fell around the edges of western South Dakota's Black Hills. Visibility in many areas was down to zero.

Wind gusting to 60 mph was reported Friday morning at Fort Morgan, Colo., and in western South Dakota. Western Nebraska had gusts to 50 mph.

Snow coats yearling cattle in Greeley, Colo., pasture

The weather threatened thousands of newborn calves, and ranchers in the Nebraska Sandhills region worked around the clock to get animals to shelter.

"The men are just exhausted. We worked all night long," said Marianna Beel. "We had 300 calves born yesterday. We're dragging them in, separating them from their mothers."

In the Nebraska Panhandle, all roads in and out of Keweenaw County closed and Civil Defense Director Dan Jensen estimated 600 travelers spent the night in the town of 3,800 residents.

Hotels and motels were filled, and residents opened their homes, he said. But many spent the night at the Kimball County Courthouse, and about 200 truckers slept in their trucks.

Interstate 80 was closed for more than 300 miles in Wyoming and Nebraska because of snowdrifts and low visibility. Many other roads also were closed in eastern Wyoming, including almost 140 miles of Interstate 25, and in western Nebraska.

U.S. closure of PLO office draws protests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department moved Friday to close the PLO's observer mission at the United Nations, but the move drew immediate protest from U.N. Secretary-General Javier Pérez de Cuellar and the Arab League.

The U.N. chief, the U.N. chief. The letter also says the United States won't try to close the mission until the litigation is resolved.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III has decided the U.S. government must adhere to an anti-terrorism law passed by Congress last December which orders the mission closed by March 21, said Justice Department sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The Justice Department will go to court seeking to close the Palestine Liberation Organization mission around March 21, said a letter from U.S. Ambassador Herbert Okun to the U.N. chief.

Perez de Cuellar replied with a strong protest to Okun, according to U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani. The secretary-general's legal staff is "studying options," but Giuliani refused to describe them or say if the United Nations would join the litigation on behalf of the PLO.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, asked about the issue at a briefing Friday, called the law "one of the dumbest things that the Congress has done lately."

Marines toughen fitness standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Marine Corps, already renowned for its rigorous physical conditioning, is about to make things tougher for those who have already made it through basic training.

A new training policy order, signed last week and now being prepared for distribution to the field, will require all commands to refocus their physical conditioning program so that it goes beyond just staying in shape to pass the standard physical fitness test.

Among other things, all Marines are going to be expected to start lifting weights or to engage in some equivalent type of "progressive resistance training" such as "isometric exercises or partner resistance exercises."

The new directive was signed by Brig. Gen. F.E. Sisley, the corps' deputy chief of staff for training, but was really prompted by Gen. Alfred M. Gray Jr., the man who took over as the corps' commandant last July.

Gray, a stocky, tobacco-chewing general who rose through the ranks by staying away from the Pentagon, complained shortly after arriving in Washington he was sick and tired of seeing his Marines jogging for exercise "in cute little sneaks."

Marine headquarters "looks like a morgue" every afternoon because everyone is out jogging to "look nice," Gray added.

"I think if we would run a little more each day, we'd be the best-looking outfit ever to get run off a hill."

The directive makes it clear the corps is not changing its standard physical fitness test, which all Marines must pass at least once every six months. That test requires Marines to meet standards for a 3-mile run and performing sit-ups and pullups.

Rather, the directive says commanders must ensure their Marines face "a minimum program of three hours per week" of exercises that can be divided between anaerobic conditioning, progressive resistance training and aerobic conditioning.

Anaerobic conditioning would include calisthenics and other exercises "to increase speed, flexibility and agility," while aerobic includes running and any exercise that "enhances cardiovascular endurance."

Weight-lifting will fulfill the requirement for progressive resistance training and is needed because of the "correlation of muscular strength and endurance to success in combat operations," the directive states.

Moreover, when a Marine is finished with his regular physical conditioning, his commander should make sure he gets some "occupational conditioning," the directive continues.

A Marine who is schooled as an infantryman, for example, should face some "progressive load-bearing marches, dry net training, swimming, obstacle courses, confidence courses, etc.," the directive says.

And once the Marine is done with his occupational training, his commander should include some "competitive conditioning activities" to foster competitive attitudes.

McFarlane admits guilt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert C. McFarlane, left, congressional Iran-Contra investigators in little doubt last spring that he had deliberately misled Congress about efforts inside the Reagan administration to sidestep a ban on aid to Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

ROBERT MCFARLANE Pleads guilty to deception

Some committee members said at the time they felt the former national security adviser's under oath testimony must have been true because it was so self-damaging. McFarlane put the seal on the judgment Friday when he pleaded guilty to four misdemeanor charges accusing him of withholding from Congress the fact that the administration had helped the Contra movement stay alive, in part through soliciting secret multi-million dollar contributions from third countries.

By pleading guilty, McFarlane in effect admitted he made false statements in letters sent in 1985 to the House Intelligence and Foreign Affairs committees and in testimony in December 1986 before the Foreign Affairs panel. In that testimony, McFarlane made this statement: "I did not solicit any country at any time to make contributions to the Contras. I have seen reports that various countries have."

and yesterday and today, you had a hand in obtaining contributions totaling approximately $32 million from country two?"

McFarlane: "Yes." Niels: "But you did not tell that to the Foreign Affairs Committee at that time?"

McFarlane: "No, I was trying to use some tortured language, inappropriately I think. ... It wasn't a full account. ... This isn't a full account as I have given."

Later, he said that testimony and his statements in the 1985 letters were "clearly too categorical on my part."

In other portions of his Iran-Contra testimony, McFarlane said he had helped alter documents, failed to shut down an out-of-control covert operation and did nothing when Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North told him he planned to hold a "shredding party."

McFarlane said repeatedly that if anyone was at fault in all of this, it was he.

Summing up, Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House committee, rejected McFarlane's attempt to take all of the blame. "As the national security adviser you are the spokesman for the president of the United States," Hamilton told the witness.

Gallaudet protesters rally

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 2,500 Gallaudet University students and supporters claimed victory in a Capitol Hill rally Friday after Elizabeth Ann Zinser resigned as president of their school for the deaf but they vowed to continue their protests until their other demands are met.

Zinser, who is not deaf and does not know sign language, was named to the post last Sunday but announced her resignation early Friday morning after protesters virtually halted all classes this week. Zinser said she had stepped down in response to this extraordinary social movement of deaf people.

Students and activists marched across the Capitol lawn Friday bearing signs and banners and chanting "Deaf President Now," "No Hearing President" and "Deaf Power."

helped the cause of deaf people nationwide.

"Deaf people want to control their destiny," he said. "We will win, I promise you."

Truman Stelle, a Gallaudet faculty member, said, "It is long past time that Gallaudet had a deaf president, as testimony that deaf people are capable of leading themselves."

Stelle said the ouster of board chairman Jane Bassett Spilman was important because "she clearly sees herself as owner of the Gallaudet plantation, answerable to no one."

Tests reveal some cocaine in crash pilot

WASHINGTON (AP) — The pilot of the Continental Express commuter plane that crashed near Durango, Colo. in January, killing nine people, had traces of cocaine in his urine and evidence of the drug's by-products in his blood, the National Transportation Safety Board said Friday.

It appeared to be the first such accident involving U.S. commercial airlines in which evidence of drug use by the pilots had been found, aviation authorities said.

The board did not characterize the finding as a cause of the accident or indicate whether the pilot might have been impaired. Investigators have not determined whether the pilot or copilot was flying the airplane at the time of the accident.

Nine people, including both crew members, perished in the Jan. 19 crash. The eight survivors were rescued after one of them, Peter Schauer, trudged 1½ miles over a snowy mountainside to a house.

Dr. Merrit M. Birky, an NTSB chemist, said the cocaine found in the pilot's body "is a small amount," but he declined to comment further.

Dr. Sorell L. Schwartz, a pharmacology professor at Georgetown University, said that based on the amounts of the traces found, the pilot was not under the influence of cocaine at the time of the accident.

Schwartz also said it was unlikely that a habitual user of the drug would feel any lingering effects from the amounts of cocaine detected in the pilot's body. "There can be impairments," he said. "There can be impaired mental function, but that's not usual." The potential impairments could include a sense of well-being, he said.

Sweden refuses entrance to Michael Jackson's pet chimp

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Authorities say it's just too bad. Michael Jackson cannot bring his pet chimpanzee Bubbles along when he performs here this summer.

The Aftonbladet newspaper reported Friday that the National Board of Agriculture has said chimpanzees are not to Bubbles, a 3-year-old former laboratory chimp used for cancer research. Sweden's stringent regulations impose quarantines of up to six months on most animals entering the country.

Swaggart cancellation sends officials scurrying

CINCINNATI (AP) — If they can't have the Rev. Jimmy Swaggart, Riverfront Coliseum officials say Bruce Springsteen will do. But their offer may be too late.

After Swaggart's last-minute cancellation, coliseum officials are trying to book the singer March 24-26.

Springsteen's agents previously had asked about those dates, but he was turned away because of the Swaggart booking made a year earlier.

Now, however, Springsteen is booked March 26 in Lexington, Ky., and chances of getting him to make a Cincinnati stop are limited, said Rich

"We have approached them about playing us the 25th and Lexington the 26th. We are guardedly optimistic," Neumann said Tuesday.

Swaggart's agents canceled his engagement two weeks ago, after disclosure of his alleged misconduct and admission of an unspecified sin. The television preacher faces disciplinary action by the national Assembly of God for allegedly meeting with a reputed prostitute in suburban New Orleans.

American woman says Soviet only wanted visa

YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — Sandra Gubin, an American woman who championed the cause of Soviets seeking to join their spouses in the United States, has been divorced from her Soviet husband.

District Judge Kenneth Bronson agreed with her contention that Aleksei Lodisev married her solely to enter the United States.

"The defendant's entire testimony is shot through with evasiveness and contradictions," said Bronson.

Gubin and Lodisev were married in the Soviet Union in 1981, while Gubin was studying in Kiev. She returned to the United States and spent several years trying to get an exit visa for Lodisev.

She became a spokeswoman for the Divided Spouse Coalition, a group of Americans whose spouses have been denied exit visas.

In January 1986, Lodisev arrived in New York. Eleven months later, Gubin filed for divorce, saying he married her only to come to the United States.

Gubin was awarded $113,087 for lost wages, expenses for writing to political figures and medical expenses. "There is scant likelihood of collection on the judgment," because of debts pending against Lodisev, Bronson said in his ruling Tuesday.

Former astronaut looks for Egyptian chariots

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Former astronaut James Irwin, who made six unsuccessful trips to Turkey in search of Noah's Ark, has begun searching for the Egyptian chariots swallowed by the Red Sea when the Israelites fled Egypt.

According to the Book of Exodus in the Old Testament, God parted the Red Sea for the fleeing Israelites, then drowned the pursuing Egyptians.

Irwin, his wife, Mary, and three other Coloradans accompanied an international team that spent about $250,000 and most of February retracing the Israelites' steps. They spent a week diving unsuccessfully for evidence of the Biblical episode.

"The purpose of the whole expedition was to retrace the Exodus route from the region of Cairo to the real Mount Sinai, Irwin said Thursday. Irwin said no date has been set for another expedition.

Ex-Spouse of the Year award goes to Taylor

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor, a five-time divorcee, has been named Ex-Spouse of the Year for bouncing back from years of "sulking and feeling sorry for herself."

Last year's winner of the Ex-Spouse of the Year was talk show host Johnny Carson, who has been divorced three times.

The Rev. Roger Coleman, who has launched a nationwide campaign to observe April 1 as the second annual Ex-Spouse Day, said Friday that Ms. Taylor "is a symbol of broken relationships ... and made such a comeback."

Coleman, a Disciples of Christ minister with the Community Christian Church in Kansas City, has been divorced once. He said he has mailed packets of information to 7,500 single organizations across the country.

Coleman said that although there is an element of humor in Ex-Spouse Day, he's also seeking more responsible behavior between spouses "so the children can be taken better care of."

Coleman said he chose Ms. Taylor because, "For many years she seemed to be sulking and feeling sorry for herself, but now she is making contributions to society," such as fund-raising for AIDS research.

Court rules privacy extends to restrooms

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Women who enter a public restroom have a legal right to expect the same privacy they have in their homes or offices, the state Superior Court ruled.

The court rejected claims by a man convicted on felony trespass charges after he entered the ladies' room of the Society Hill Club. His attorney contended that Anthony White should have been found guilty only of "defiant trespass," a misdemeanor, because the club was open to public access and, therefore, so were all restrooms.

"We deem the ladies' room to be a separately secured or occupied portion of the structure housing the Society Hill Club," the said Wednesday in upholding the felony trespass finding of a lower court.

The trial court stated that the criminal trespass statute gives legal protection to the expectation of privacy that the occupants of the smaller units (within a structure or building) would realistically assume. The court concluded that the legislature intended to afford occupants of a restroom the same protection afforded occupants of an office.

In other words, "All women in the restroom may exclude all men, even those legitimately in the club," the court added.

Britons seek payment about 400 years late

LONDON (AP) — The expense account was filed about 400 years late and the government dispensed tea instead of money as a group of people dressed as Elizabethans tried to recover the costs incurred by Sir Francis Drake.

Five Devonians from Drake's hometown, Tavistock, recited his rhyme claim Thursday for 914 pounds, 17 shillings and 4 pence from the British Treasury to cover payments to officers and crew aboard the Revenge.

The five say Drake never got the money because Lord Burchley, who conducted the war against Spain, thought he was being overcharged. The expense papers were found in a museum in Plymouth, Devon.

At his office in Whitehall, the seat of government, Treasury chief secretary John Major listened to the plea for repayment.

"And this, good Sirs, a tidy sum, was never paid to me."
"So we have come to you this day to settle up my debt," roared John Sterne, a shopkeeper dressed as Drake.

"Come up to my office for a cup of tea," responded Major, the No. 2 man in charge of the nation's finances.

"After 400 years' inflation, this must be worth about 100,000 pounds ($184,000) now," he said. "But I think it's out of time — legally unenforceable."

After tea, Sterne, wearing doublet and hose, a tall hat and carrying a sword, said, "It seems that all we're going to get."

Asked if his sword was real, Sterne, said: "Oh, yes, you can see it is — it's my mother's."

Asked if he needed a permit to wear the sword, Sterne said: "No, I wrapped it up until I got here."

The Tavistock Five said they were happy to dress for the occasion.

Pat Mildren was dressed as Queen Elizabeth I, Emma Nicholson as Drake's second wife, and Pat Murray and Lisa Lee as courtiers.

Mrs. Mildren wore a crown, a floor-length green dress over a hoop and lots of beads.

"I feel very good in this, but quite hot," she said. "Excuse me, my hoop is slipping."

The five said they will wear their costumes for most of this year to celebrate the 400th anniversary of England's defeat of the Spanish Armada.

"I'll do anything for my constituency, and Drake was my constituent," said Mrs. Nicholson, legislator for Tavistock in the House of Commons.

Shopowner Mary Thompson said Mrs. Nicholson's costume took two weeks and nearly $370 to make.

The outfit, mostly from a brocade curtain, had one overskirt, three underskirts, a roll to keep everything up above a hoop, a stomacher with embroidered sleeves, lots of padding and a lace ruff and cap.

"It's enormously comfortable. I'm laced in, stayed up and covered in whalebone and I'm warm and wonderful," Mrs. Nicholson said.

Arab officers in the West Bank resign

BRUJIMMAR, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Half the Arab policemen in the West Bank resigned by PLO order Friday and Israeli soldiers closed the main Gaza mosque on the Muslim sabbath for the first time, worshippers could remember.

The Al Amari mosque in Gaza City has been a rallying point for protesters since riots began Dec. 8 in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, with prayer leaders sometimes calling over its loudspeakers for resistance to the army.

Israeli troops shot and wounded nine Palestinians during street battles after Friday prayers at other mosques in the occupied territories.

The army demolished the homes of four Arabs accused of attacking soldiers. Israeli or Palestinian officers accused of collaborating with them.

Two alleged collaborators have been killed by fellow Arabs, one of them a policeman. Israeli bullets or beatings have killed at least 87 Palestinians in more than three months of violence, and hundreds have been wounded.

Army units turned journalists away from Hebron and Nablus, but the press restriction was not as widespread as on March 4, when nearly all the West Bank was put off-limits.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir made his first public criticism of new U.S. peace proposals Secretary of State George P. Shultz brought to the region, declaring "The only way I agree with in the U.S. plan is the name Shultz." About half the 500 Arab police officers in the West Bank resigned in response to a call from the PLO Liberation Organization and underground United National Command of the Uprising, sources reported. The order was given in a leaflet circulated Thursday.

Mustafa Adani, 44, said he resigned after 25 years on the force along with "almost all the police in the Bethlehem station, about 50 to 55. The only ones who didn't quit were those who didn't know about the orders."

A senior military official said the resignations would have "a negative impact on other Palestinians who work with Israel in the territories. It is not very encouraging."

Leaflet No. 10 also demanded the resignations of West Bank residents who serve in Jordan's parliament, apparently to reinforce the PLO role as the sole representative of Palestinians.

Israel captured the West Bank from Jordan, and the Gaza Strip from Egypt, in the 1967 Middle East war. Soldiers wounded eight Palestinians, two of them seriously, during riots Friday at a mosque in Beit Ummar, 10 miles south of Jerusalem, according to officials at Beit Jallah and Mukkased hospitals.

Iran, Iraq observe truce

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran and Iraq stopped nearly two weeks of attacks on each other's cities Friday, but the Iraqis said they got in the last volley with 11 missiles fired before their afternoon truce deadline.

Hundreds of civilians have been killed or wounded since the exchange began Feb. 29.

Eight rockets were aimed at Tehran on Friday and three at the Iranian holy city of Qom, the official Iraqi News Agency reported. It said the last missile left its launcher at 3:44 p.m.; just 16 minutes before time Iraq said it would stop shooting.

An Iraqi military spokesman said Iranian leaders would "be sparing the blood of their people" if they also observed a cease-fire, but if they did not, "By God, we will make them taste bitter defeat, and we will deal them unprecedented, violent blows."

Soviet media love hijacking

MOSCOW (AP) — The usually tame Soviet media provided sensational coverage Friday of the hijacking of an Aeroflot jetliner by a family of jazz musicians, digging up details about the private lives of the air pirates.

"Interrupted Flight," read the headline of Sovetskaya Rossiya. "Combat Aboard a Plane," screamed the labor newspaper Trud.

The Simpsons throw off their masks, revealed Pravda, the official voice of the Communist Party, referring to the name of the jazz ensemble.

Nine people died in the attack including five of the 11 hijackers.

The reports included dirt on the musical family from Siberia and described in detail how they were duped into thinking they had landed in Finland.

Even under Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's campaign for glasnost, or openness, the reports offered a rare account of an act of terrorism in the Soviet Union.

The hijackers were all members of the Ovechkin family, a Siberian jazz ensemble from Irkutsk that went by the name "Seven Simeons."

Armed with a bomb and shotguns, they boarded the Leningrad-bound Tupolev-154 in Irkutsk, and after a refueling stop in Kurgan demanded that they be taken to London, the newspapers said.

Austrians mourn dead; demonstrate

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Austria on Friday marked the 50th anniversary of its annexation by Nazi Germany with solemn memorials to the dead and demonstrations against President Kurt Waldheim, whose war-time past relegated him to silent spectator at official ceremonies.

Conservative and Socialist politicians emphasized that some Austrians were perpetrators in the Nazi era, challenging the long-held view that Austria was simply a victim of Adolf Hitler when he sent his troops into the Alpine nation on March 11, 1938.

A minute of silence drew little response on Vienna streets, and few Viennese turned out in the early morning to watch political leaders lay wreaths at monuments to Nazi victims and fallen soldiers.

Shops, businesses and schools were open.

About 300 protesters gathered outside the presidential offices and called for Waldheim's resignation, and dozens vowed to stage a three-day anti-Waldheim vigil.

At a memorial ceremony in the Hofburg palace, Foreign Minister Alois Mock praised Waldheim as having given Austria "prestige in the world" as United Nations secretary general, a post Waldheim held from 1972 to 1982.

CSI increase now at 4.3%

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

BOISE — Additional state funding for the College of Southern Idaho matched the rate for the rest of higher education Friday, which drew acceptance from CSI President Gerald Meyerhoeffer.

"In a year when I know increases are pretty hard to come by, I think we have to be pleased," Meyerhoeffer said. "We've tried for the past couple of years to advance the philosophy that community colleges and higher education be treated equally, and I think they were."

The Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee passed a 4.3 percent increase for CSI on the third, wavering vote Friday. CSI would get $2.96 million in state funding under the bill that still faces the full Legislature.

But supporters of two bigger increases, including Sen. Darrel McRoberts, R-Twin Falls, thought the stinger proposal meant Republicans turned their backs on community colleges and Meyerhoeffer's plea for the state to provide 50 percent of CSI's funding.

Currently, state funding accounts for less than 40 percent of CSI's budget. Local property taxes from Twin Falls and Jerome counties contribute about an equal portion, while tuition and fees fill in the rest.

"They (JFAC Republicans) are not willing to go along with one of their own members, Sen. McRoberts, to make sure they (community colleges) get the funding they deserve," said Democratic Rep. Tim Tucker.

The Forthill representative, who noted there is no community college in his area, carried the 6.5-percent increase of Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus.

"Asked whether he agreed with Tucker, McRoberts said, "Yes. But they see it as the communities wanting to start their own colleges and pay for them and that's what they're saying."

McRoberts proposed a 5.6-percent increase for CSI and North Idaho College.

Both Tucker's and McRoberts' proposals were defeated before JFAC narrowly accepted the 4.3 percent increase offered by Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul. That figure matched the increase JFAC granted earlier that morning for Idaho's four public colleges.

JFAC finally supported Neibaur's figure in a 13-to-11 vote, after three lawmakers changed their votes and one changed back.

Neibaur later explained his opposition to the higher figures, which may have been more popular, in light of the state's tight budget.

"It isn't any easier to go in there and make these decisions than it is to say, 'you've got a little extra money in your pocket and we want it,'" Neibaur said.

He added that the University of Idaho also receives less than 40 percent of its funding from the state.

BOISE — Rep. Bruce Newcomb, R-Burley, offered emotional testimony Friday on the need for police to not release the names of crime victims.

He recalled for a House Judiciary and Rules subcommittee how his daughter, while a student at the University of Idaho, was attacked while walking along a street.

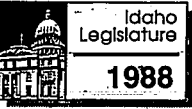

A man who drove up in a car got out and dragged her off the road and started beating on her, Newcomb said. His daughter escaped when another car arrived, and shined its lights on the assailant, and she reported the incident to police, Newcomb said.

"I became aware of it," said Newcomb, his voice choked with emotion, "and it was very difficult to think that anyone would do that to my daughter."

"I think it was extremely absurd that the paper would take it upon themselves to print something like that," he added.

A bill pending before the House Judiciary and Rules Committee would prohibit the police from releasing the names, addresses or phone numbers of victims and witnesses on all felonies.

Attorney General Jim Jones proposed the bill to stop criminals from harassing or intimidating victims and witnesses. "Everybody's seen the Godfather," Jones said.

"Without citing any factual grounds for his statement, Deputy Attorney General Pat Kole echoed, "Do we have to wait until a victim is hunted down and killed before this Legislature acts?"

But the bill stalled in committee after news representatives state-wide opposed the measure.

Subcommittee Chairman Janet Hay, R-Nampa, convened Friday's hearing to examine either changing the pending bill or offering a new one. She sought to act quickly, before the legislative session ends.

"Could we just get together in the hall Monday?" Hay asked the three-often-subcommittee-members, suggesting they meet with Kole to discuss alternatives.

Ultimately, a subcommittee meeting was scheduled for noon Monday and a full committee hearing is expected Tuesday or Thursday.

One subcommittee member, Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, rejected facets of the attorney general's position. She was joined by lawyers testifying for the news media who also opposed the bill.

Kole defines categories to include felonies involving violence. See VICTIMS on Page B2

Minico senior to star in commercial

Wendy Plocher won screen test; will appear in McDonald's television ad

BURLEY — The screen tests are over. A star is born. And her name is Wendy Plocher. Next Tuesday she goes to Los Angeles to shoot her first television commercial.

"It's getting me nervous," she said during an exclusive interview with The Times-News. "Nothing like this has ever happened to me before."

Forged wearing a tight sweater to the soda fountain to be discovered. These are modern times, and this 17-year-old Minico High School senior from Paul got found at the McDonald's in Burley.

She works there. And she and her co-workers won a national McDonald's contest by selling more gift certificates per 1,000 customers than any other store in the country. The prize was a commercial debut for one of the employees.

About 25 Burley workers auditioned in front of cameras and producers.

"Everyone was rooting for everyone," said John Rossean, the Burley manager.

After her screen test, Plocher said, "I thought I had a pretty good chance."

She thought right. She was deemed most photogenic, so Wednesday will find her in the feature role of a new commercial promoting salads for spring on the mock McDonald's set. The taping session is scheduled to last for eight hours from noon until 8 p.m.

"I think I'm going to get all mixed up after a while," Plocher said.

She and her entire family will be the weekend guests of McDonald's in Los Angeles.

"My mom's more excited than I am," she said. "Could this be her ticket to stardom? Will she seek a career in television?"

"I don't know. Everyone says it's hard to get commercials, but I figure after five got one under my belt, it will be a lot easier."

If Hollywood doesn't pan out, Plocher plans to go Navy next year. She wants to do something that she can build a future on, and the Navy helps pay for college, so she's going.

The commercial that will make Paul and Burley proud is expected to begin airing April 1.

Waste site could affect Three Island State Park

By LAURA BELLEGANTE
Times-News correspondent

GLENN'S FERRY — In a sometimes warm discussion, several visitors to the Glenns Ferry City Council's last meeting voiced strong reservations about the council's recent permission for Magic West potato processing to expand its wastewater disposal site on the southwest corner of the city.

To be certain of sufficient area to meet new requirements of the Clean Water Act, Magic West requested the lease of about 52 acres of city land. The land, between the Snake River and the Glenns Ferry municipal airport, is also west of the Three Island State Park.

State Parks and Recreation representative Larry Stevens, with local park manager Roy Evans, said, "... we are concerned with the smell from the north and west, and as the winds in the valley are from that direction, we feel that it would really be detrimental to the park. We would like to work with the city and Magic West to find another place for the land that they need."

Local residents have complained in the past of the fetid, rotten smell that drifts over the city at times. Don Anderson, a Glenns Ferry resident who lives just east of the disposal area, spoke of the persistent stink. Mayor Doyle Messerley said he thought the odor occurred mostly when the sprinklers were first started in the mornings, from liquid left in the pipes. Anderson disagreed, saying that it can smell bad at any time. Evans added that it seemed worse when the sprinklers were running.

"I know there is a smell at the state park," Messerley admitted, "but I'm concerned that if we get EPA (the federal Environmental Protection Agency) involved, they will set standards that will require cuts in production at the plant, and that will cost jobs." At present the processing plant employs 144 people over three shifts.

"Furthermore," Messerley said, "when meetings were held about the plant moving in, there was no discussion about this problem and no objections." See WASTE on Page B2

After revision, Burley tree-proposal takes root

By DONNA SCHORZMAN
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The Burley City Council has approved a plan to plant trees on downtown blocks that will leave parking intact.

The Burley Merchants Retail Development Committee's original plan for the downtown beautification included planters for several trees as well as provision for the planting of small evergreen shrubs. However, the council and the downtown merchants were concerned about the loss of four parking spaces on each block, and committee member Harry Stevens revised the plan to include three different options for the council's consideration.

The first option Stevens presented was to accept the original plan with the loss of four parking spaces per block because planters would just go into the street. The second plan would cut the loss of the parking spaces to two spaces per block.

The third alternative would be to go ahead with the plan, but eliminate the planters for the trees entirely so that no parking would be sacrificed. Instead sidewalk would be cut away and 24 or 36 inch pipe would be in-betted in the ground to create a low, bottomless container for the trees.

Councilman Derlin Taylor said, "It appears this project has gone as far as it can without the council's approval."

The council decided to approve the third alternative of the beautification plan, but put a ceiling of $50,000 on the amount of money to be spent.

The council also noted that the city would accept the responsibility to water the plants and for upkeep. It was also noted that funds from the Northside Project, a grant for housing improvements, should be adequate to cover the expense.

Dean Satterfield, athletic director at Burley High School, also addressed the council. Satterfield asked that the city make any repairs necessary on the lights at Salmon Park baseball field so that the lights could be used during the evening games at the upcoming Easter Tournament.

Satterfield said, "We have co-hosted the tournament with Minico for the last 10 years. A lot of people come to town." He added that Salmon Park See BURLEY on Page B2

Northwest could get a brief reprieve on the use of dinoseb

By MICK ROOD
States News Service

WASHINGTON — In a struggle between farming economies and health safeguards, proponents of using a highly toxic herbicide on some crops in Idaho, Washington and Oregon will apparently win one more battle before losing the war.

Just as the Environmental Protection Agency appears poised to keep the herbicide dinoseb off the market, state-agriculture departments in the three states are seeking special permission to use it on peas, chickpeas and lentil crops this growing season.

In an attempt to resolve the matter, EPA Administrator Lee Thomas is expected to make a final judgment late March or early April.

dinoseb's manufacturers that would ban the substance but incorporate the northwestern states' one-shot exemptions.

Those exemptions would allow use of dinoseb this year on peas, chickpeas and lentil crops, plus allowing its use on blackberries and other berries this year and next year.

The EPA slapped an emergency suspension on use of the substance in October 1986 after "extensive toxicological data confirmed dinoseb is a potential carcinogen, can cause cataracts, may cause sterility in men and could deform a fetus in a pregnant woman. The chief danger is to agricultural workers handling dinoseb, since the chemical breaks down quickly after application."

An EPA fact sheet at the time linked dinoseb to several deaths. EPA officials said it is only the third time the agency has suspended a chemical with the intent of banning its use.

Under procedures of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act (FIFRA), Administrator Law Judge June F. Greene last week approved the settlement between the EPA and Dinoseb's manufacturers, the Cedar Chemical Co. and the Drexel Chemical Co.

Until a suspension is made a ban under FIFRA, those who want to use a suspended herbicide could seek an exemption if "new information" can be shown. Such new information usually consists of showing severe economic loss and proposing new safeguards controlling exposure to the substance, EPA spokesmen said.

The state departments of agriculture in Idaho, Washington, and Oregon successfully secured such an exemption for dinoseb only during the March-to-July growing season last year. The states applied again last January for this year.

The business of the EPA letting growers use a chemical it wants banned has drawn fire.

"It's a very dangerous chemical," said Rick Hind of the Public Interest Research Group, which has been a harsh critic of FIFRA regulation of toxic substances.

"After all, this is FIFRA, the please-everybody statute," Hind said derisively.

"It's frightening. It's numbing," said Diana Baxter of the National Coalition Against the Misuse of Pesticides. "Maybe the EPA should go through a course in assertiveness training. The EPA needs to defend itself and not back down."

Whatever its merits, federal decision-making has dragged the issue into the growing season this year, complicating matters for growers who are prevented from moving dinoseb into the three states if and until EPA chief Thomas approves the settlement by March 31.

Further complicating the matter have been inconclusive federal district and circuit court decisions on the EPA's suspension policies, but EPA attorney Michael McDavit said late last week that court action would be rendered moot if Thomas signs off on the settlement.

That may be, but the American Frozen Food Institute, which was extremely critical of the settlement when it was proposed in February, may challenge it in court. If Thomas approves See PEST on Page B2

Religious bodies join in cable network

NEW YORK (AP) — America's mainline faiths, mostly missing from television's sweeping purview in recent years, are launching a new, unprecedented ecumenical network on the nation's cable TV systems.

Plans for the network were confirmed in interviews this week. A partial start-up is expected in midsummer, expanding to 18 to 20 hours daily in the fall.

"A fresh, new view is coming across the country's television screens," said the Rev. Daniel Paul Matthews, a Manhattan Episcopal bishop and board chairman of Vision Interfaith Satellite Network (VISON).

VISON will shun soliciting money, as typifies individual TV religious preachers. But it has financial backing of the industry and projects sustaining commercial sponsorship.

It's an idea whose time has come in market need and consumer need, said David Ochoa of Nashville, Tenn., a United Methodist and president and chief executive officer of the enterprise.

"For years, the mainline denominations have been on the sidelines, but they've finally got out of their duffs and are doing something."

Religious television in recent times has been dominated by individuals, including their aversion to soliciting money and the deregulation of broadcast.

"We've been getting personal piety exclusively slanted toward a narrow perspective," Matthews said. "This is a valid piece of the pie, but it gave a distorted image of American religious life."

Matthews, with extensive TV experience in Knoxville, Tenn., and Atlanta, before becoming rector of Manhattan Trinity Church, said the new network would reflect historic faiths that have been the "backbone of America."

Actively involved are most major Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations, plus some evangelical and Jewish bodies. Officials said Roman Catholics are expected to join through decisions of bishops late this month.

Officials emphasized that added participation of evangelical groups was sought, including Southern Baptists, who already operate their own cable network.

Falwell says scandals for the best

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell on Thursday likened the TV evangelism scandals with the Watergate affair and said "the cause of Christ is better off" because of them.

An admission of sin last month by TV preacher Jimmy Swaggart and allegations last year of sexual and financial misconduct by Jim Bakker have led to a new code of moral and financial ethics for religious broadcasters, Falwell said.

Jerry Falwell took optimistic view at conference

A luncheon sponsored by the National Religious Broadcasters, an affiliate of the NAE.

Falwell said that the Swaggart controversy had had little effect on his ministry and that he did not believe it had eroded the general impact of the Bakker revelations on the religious broadcast industry.

Falwell accepted an invitation to speak before the NAE in 1983 but withdrew after criticism from fellow fundamentalists.

Falwell's "Old Time Gospel Hour" is broadcast around the world on some 350 television stations.

In a presidential preference poll conducted late Wednesday, some 100 NAE board members endorsed Bush.

But it was no surprise to those trying to gauge the support for Robertson within the evangelical movement over the past two years.

They just don't consider Robertson to be the most qualified for the job, Cizik said.

The NAE, conducting a series of workshops and seminars for some 300 delegates, includes denominations as diverse as Reformed and Pentecostal.

Wholesale prices off sharply

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices fell 0.2 percent in February, pushed downward by drops in both food and energy costs, the government said Friday.

Food prices fell 1.1 percent; energy prices, 0.8 percent. The cost of lettuce, which had skyrocketed through the late fall and early winter, fell a remarkable 70.0 percent.

If the overall February drop held for 12 straight months, prices for that year would be down 2.2 percent.

For the first two months of 1988, prices rose at an annual rate of 1.1 percent, half the modest 2.8 percent rate for all of last year. Prices had risen a brisk 0.4 percent in January but had declined 0.4 percent in December.

The report again showed there was little justification for worries of a recession.

The report showed that there was little justification for worries of a recession.

Gasoline prices fell 0.5 percent after an 8.4 percent rise in January. Home heating oil costs were off 4.2 percent after a 6.2 percent drop. Natural gas prices, up 0.8 percent in January, fell 1.4 percent.

As for food, vegetable prices, which had increased 16.2 percent in January, dropped 26.3 percent, a decline largely driven by the drop in lettuce prices.

Fruits, down 3.0 percent in January, fell an additional 3.5 percent. Beef and veal prices were up 0.3 percent after a 3.4 percent rise in January. Pork costs, up 13.2 percent in the previous month, rose just 0.2 percent.

Coffee prices fell 0.8 percent for the second consecutive month. Alcoholic beverages costs were up 0.8 percent after rising 0.1 percent in the preceding month.

The index of wholesale prices minus food and energy was up 0.3 percent in January, after a 0.5 percent increase in January.

In releasing its Producer Price Index for goods one step short of the retail level, the Labor Department gave these additional details on February activity:

• Prices for new automobiles fell 0.2 percent after a 0.2 percent gain in January.

• Capital equipment costs were up 0.2 percent for the third month in a row.

• Children's clothing prices fell 2.2 percent. Men's clothing costs fell 0.1 percent. Men's apparel prices gained 0.5 percent.

• Tobacco prices gained 0.9 percent after a 1.2 percent drop in January.

The producer price index has shown more restraint in recent months than the companion consumer price index. This is partly because the consumer index charts two areas of considerable recent inflation — services and imported goods — that are not tracked in the wholesale price calculation.

The Consumer Price Index rose 4.4 percent in 1987 and was up 0.3 percent in January. The CPI figures for February will be released later in the month.

January's increase brought the overall wholesale price index to 105.3. This means that a selection of wholesale goods costing $100 during a 1987 base period would have cost $105.90 last month. The index itself is not adjusted for seasonal variations as are other figures in the report.

The Labor Department recently switched from a 1967 base period for both its producer and consumer price index figures.

Using the 1987 base, the February index would have been 297.3.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales, boosted by strength in autos, rose 0.6 percent in February, following a January decline.

The Commerce Department said Friday retail sales rose a seasonally adjusted $714 million to $127.9 billion last month.

While the February increase was generally in line with expectations, the government revised the January report to show a small decline of 0.2 percent, instead of an originally reported increase of 0.5 percent.

With the January decline, analysts said the retail sales report generally reflected that the October stock market crash has had little effect on consumer buying plans.

Ever since the record 508-point drop in stocks which occurred on Oct. 19, economists have been closely watching to see whether the consumer sector would weaken.

Since consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of overall economic activity, any significant faltering in this area could topple the country into a recession.

Continued strong gains in employment growth have apparently calmed initial jitters over the stock market. Many economists have recently revised up their growth forecasts for

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"I would rather worry without need than live without it." — Beaumarchais.

"I counted 10 sure winners," complained a dejected South. "How was I to know that one of them would be ruffed away?"

East won his diamond ace and returned the queen through South's king. In a hurry to end the rubber, South covered and West ruffed. West exited with a spade, but nothing mattered anymore. South still had two more diamonds to concede, and the game fell on West.

The diamond ruff by West, while not a certainty, was a possibility worthy of consideration. And since the diamond king was South's 10th trick, he should not have gambled that it wouldn't be ruffed.

When East returns the diamond queen at trick two, South should duck. When East continues with the jack, he should duck again. West gets to ruff with his eight, but that is the last trick for the defense. South wins the next trick, draws trumps and cashes the 10 tricks that he started with.

YUMA, Ariz. — The rule of thumb in junior college postseason basketball is the farther you go, the more quickness you need.

That probably is an oversimplification, but quickness more than anything else was the reason the defending National Junior College Athletic Association men's champion College of Southern Idaho fell to Arizona Western 84-79 here Friday in a bi-regional playoff.

The Eagles will not be in Hutchinson, Kan., for the first time four years when the national juco tournament opens begins Tuesday.

The defeat, which left fourth-ranked CSI with a 21-4 record, maintained the Eagles' dubious distinction of never having won a bi-regional playoff on a foreign court. And this loss prevented Coach Fred Trenkle from tying former coach Jerry Hale's record of going to Hutchinson four straight years.

Ironically, both of those records ended on this court, Hale losing two of three in 1975 and resigning a week later.

Most of the problems that have plagued CSI this season seemed to come into play in this game. Arizona Western at times had three quick guards which the Eagles couldn't defend or keep from penetrating.

That quickness also gave the Eagles fits on the other end. Arizona Western, particularly in the first half dominated the weak-side rebounding and made a lot of points on putbacks and free throws.

Foul shots were another problem, although CSI ended up hitting 13 of 21. When it was coming to crunch time at 67-63 and the Eagles trailing in the second half, CSI made only three of 10 charity attempts.

Obviously, Arizona Western coach Jim Amick had figured quickness to be his secret weapon in this one.

"Probably our guards were the difference," said Amick, whose 25-4 and 19th-ranked Matadora will open national tournament play Tuesday. "They are quick enough that they are hard to defend in the backcourt and they all have the ability to penetrate and dish off. B.J. Carter (a 5-foot, 7-inch sophomore) isn't very big, but nobody can stop him. And I think quickness had a big part in our ability to rebound. Sometimes that is a bigger factor in offensive rebounding than size."

"The other thing I thought we did well all night was holding them basically to one shot per possession," he added.

Because of that difference in quickness, CSI never got anything clicking offensively or defensively before a howling, overflow crowd of 800 Matador fans. Sophomore guard Mauro Gomez, winding up his career at CSI, hit four three-pointers in the first half to help the Eagles post a 36-37 halftime lead, but the Eagles trailed most of the time. Early in the second half, Bryan Tucker and Ceio DeSilveira opened up a 44-39 CSI lead and had the ball back once after that.

But the hoped-for early second-half breakaway, often a CSI trademark, wasn't there Saturday night.

Garter hit a three-point goal and then, after two CSI free throw misses, got a three-point play on a crumple and charity. An Eagle turnover set up a three-point goal Ken Crawford and Arizona Western was back on top and CSI seldom led again.

"I thought we were going to win it well into the second half," said CSI Coach Fred Trenkle. "Early in the first half we went out to that five-or-six-point lead, but then made a couple of errors and let them back in. We tried to surprise them with the zone, but they made a good adjustment to it, held the ball for awhile and hit the big three-pointer."

The Eagles fell behind 67-60 with 6

POCATELLO — Minico's Dan Poulton put his 39-point performance in perspective Friday.

"We weren't happy with the way we played yesterday in a 53-43 loss to Skyline in the tournament's opening round and we wanted to prove we're a better team than that," said the 6-foot, 4-inch junior.

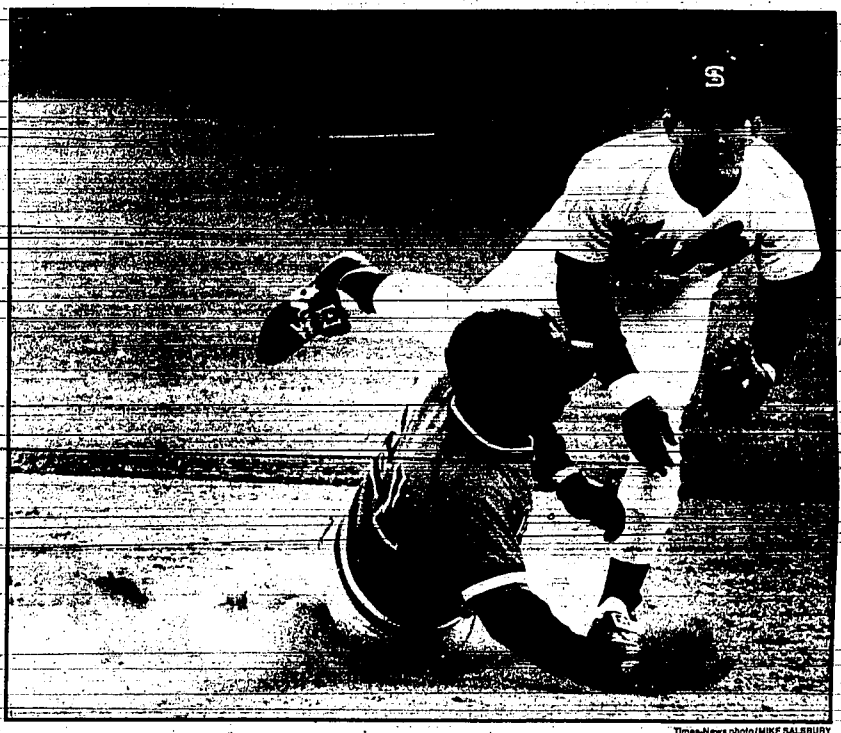

It was a point emphatically made. Poulton, 6-foot-2 1/2 from the field in Thursday's loss to the Grizzlies, scored 19 points in the fourth quarter and six more in overtime to send the Spartans into today's tournament consolation championship against third-ranked Borah, a 73-59 victor over Caldwell in Friday's other loser-out contest.

That consolation final is scheduled for 1:35 p.m. in the Holt Arena.

In the tournament championship game, it will be an all-Idaho Falls final. Skyline edged Nampa 54-52 in overtime one semifinal Friday, while fourth-ranked Idaho Falls knocked off No. 2 Pocatello, 55-53, in the other.

Pitchers stake Eagles to opening sweep

By BRAD BRELAND

TWIN FALLS — It was a game played in cold weather, and appropriately the bats went cold.

But the College of Southern Idaho's baseball team warmed up enough to take a non-conference twinnbill from Treasure Valley Community College Friday afternoon in the Eagles' home opener.

CSI held off a Chukar rally and won 6-5 in the opener and took the nightcap 3-2, despite getting just three hits in that contest.

"We can't get loose to play," said CSI Coach Jim Walker referring to the cold weather at the games. "I feel fortunate to come out with the win."

If pitching is supposed to be a problem for the Eagles, they may have found the answer with freshman right-hander Tom Cheek and Kelly Chatterton coming out of the bullpen.

The two stoppers kept CSI on top and held off rallies posted by Treasure Valley.

Chatterton threw the final 2 1/2 innings and stopped the Chukars from going ahead in the fifth inning by forcing Jim Straw to ground into a double play.

Cheek came into the game in the top of the seventh inning with two Treasure Valley runners on base and no outs with CSI holding onto a 6-4 lead.

Things didn't look to bright for Cheek when the bases became loaded on a CSI error.

After Cheek struck out Straw, he hit the next batter and Treasure Valley cut the Golden Eagle lead to a run.

Brad Molitor then took the first pitch deep into centerfield. CSI Billy Satterfield caught the ball and made a perfect throw to catcher Jesse Torres who tagged out Dan Britton, who tagged up on the catch.

"They're our short people and they did their jobs today," said Walker.

Walker also mentioned a couple of "dead spots" in the lineup as CSI went 9-for-50 at the plate for the twinnbill.

In the second contest, the first seven batters combined went 1-for-19.

"We didn't do anything spectacular and neither did they," said Walker.

On the other hand, the Chukars had nothing to brag about, going 10-for-59 at the plate.

— One CSI player that took a liking to the cold weather was outfielder Troy Hymas.

He went 4-for-6 and knocked in a run in the second contest.

Treasure Valley took a 2-0 lead in the opener on back-to-back singles by Gary Van Tol and Britton. Straw grounded into a fielders choice that scored Britton.

The Eagles came back in the bottom of the first inning when Errol Shirer led off with a single and advanced to second base on a wild pitch.

Shirer advanced to third on a Todd Webb groundout and scored on a single by Chris Hanks.

CSI tied the game in the bottom of the second inning when Hymas singled and advanced to third when Jeff Warren was hit by a pitch and Torres reached base on an error. A

It was the fourth victory of the season for the Broncos over the fourth-seeded Bengals.

"Boise State was incredible," said Idaho State Coach Jim Boutin, whose team knocked the Broncos out of last year's league tournament en route to the Big Sky championship. "They kicked us physically. We could not get into our offense. Tonight's loss was probably the toughest loss that I have to absorb as a coach. They (Boise State) are to be commended. Boise State is a deserving team."

The Broncos drew first- and second-round byes — and BSU Coach Bobby Dye said that the long layoff may have contributed to Boise State's intensity against the Bengals.

"I wouldn't want to belabor that point," said Dye. "But I think that the fact that we were able to stay at home — it all comes down to concentration and being mentally ready to play."

Senior forward Arnell Jones led the assault with 20 points.

The contest was never in doubt, as the league regular-season champions Broncos jumped to a 9-0 edge just three minutes into the game.

Mauch leaves Angels' helm, cites reasons of health

CHANDLER, Ariz. (AP) — Angels Manager Gene Mauch, saying he hasn't been feeling well in recent months, left the club Friday to return to California for a medical examination.

"Mauch, who cited "health reasons" for taking a leave of absence, is scheduled to undergo an examination Monday in Palm Springs, Calif. The Angels hold the latter part of their spring training in Palm Springs and he owns a home in nearby Rancho Mirage.

"Cookie Rojas, an advance scout for the Angels, will serve as interim manager of the Angels and skippered the club Friday afternoon in an exhibition game against Milwaukee at the Brewers' spring park here.

Mauch, 62, met with Angels General Manager Mike Port early Friday morning, later informed his coaching staff he was taking a leave of absence, then spoke to the players during a brief team meeting.

Afterward, Mauch told reporters: "Since last August, I haven't really felt the way I think I should. I'm going to find out if this is how you're supposed to feel when you're going to get after it."

Wolverines rout Maniacs at state

By RICK SHACKLETT
Times-News writer

POCAHELLO — In what many considered to be possibly its sternest test of the year, the second-ranked Wood-River boys' basketball team easily advanced to the semifinals of the Idaho Class A-2 tournament Thursday with a 75-55 rout over third-ranked Orofino.

Using their strength inside and senior guard Brad Jaques' leadership, the Wolverines managed to shut down the vaunted Maniacs' three-point threat of Jeff Wilson and Lance Vaughn to build up a 17-point lead early in the fourth period.

Wood River hung on for the win after Jaques fouled out with just over three minutes remaining in the contest with 31 points.

"I have to admit that I was more than a little worried when Brad left the game," said Wood River Coach

Boys' basketball

Dick Rickel. "But Mike Wheeler took up the slack on the foul line for us."

Down the stretch, Wheeler hit an impressive 6-for-6 from the free throw line as Orofino was forced into a fouling mode to try and get the ball back to attempt their three-point magic which had worked to the Maniacs all year long.

"I watched one of their games in which every three-point they put up went in," Rickel said of the Maniacs. "I wasn't feeling that great when the first three they shot went in."

Wood River did look a bit shell-shocked as Orofino quickly jumped out to a 6-0 lead as Vaughn hit two straight from beyond the three-point line to open up the game, but senior forward Rick Bradshaw got inside for an easy basket and Jaques and Wheeler each hit their own three pointers as the Wolverines took a 19-15 lead after one period and extended that the 37-29 at the half.

"I know this may sound like I'm blowing smoke," Rickel smiled, "but I really don't think we played all that well. I was disappointed that they were able to get so many offensive rebounds in the second half and that we got in a run and gun game with them now and then. That's their style of play, not ours."

Fortunately for the Wolverines, they had Jaques available to keep the tempo of the game in control.

Power lines are for the birds, not kites.

Smart kite fliers don't fly their kites near power lines. They know it can be dangerous for both themselves and their kites.

They also know that if a kite does get caught in a power line, you shouldn't climb up to get it. You can fall and seriously hurt yourself or you can be killed through electrocution.

Instead, smart kite fliers call Idaho Power. We'll be glad to come out and rescue your kite ourselves. We have the equipment and know how to do it without getting hurt.
