U.S. strengthens security forces in Panama

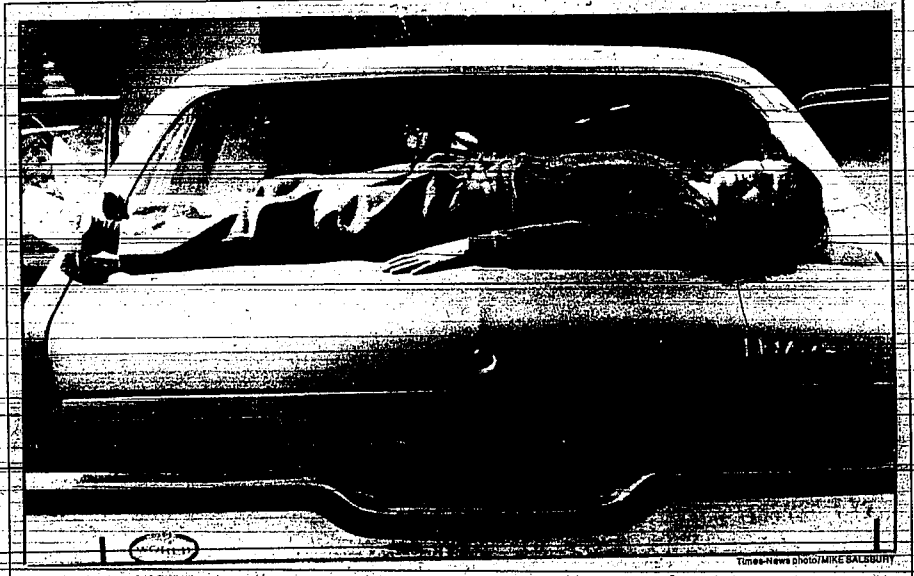

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — The United States is sending about 1,300 additional military personnel to Panama to improve security for American bases as well as U.S. civilians living there, the Pentagon said Friday.
"The move was being taken 'in view of the growing unrest and tension' in Panama, and should not be read as an indication of 'some kind of military action on the part of the United States," the Pentagon said.

However, CBS News reported Friday night that the Reagan administration was "considering a plan to overthrow Panamanian strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega, although the network said no decision has been made and the Pentagon opposes such a proposal.
"There are already more than 10,000 U.S. troops in Panama.

While many of the troops to be dispatched are military police and other security specialists, Army helicopter units also are being deployed to the troubled Central American country, the Pentagon said.
"The move comes just one week after the Defense Department completed a buildup that had already doubled the number of security personnel guarding military bases in Panama. It also comes four days after Panamanian troops marched on a Panama City hotel, confiscating the tapes of four U.S. television networks and briefly detaining several American journalists.
CBS News reported Friday night that the Reagan administration was considering a proposal advanced by the State Department earlier this week, "to overthrow Noriega, by getting a new political crisis" which would require the dispatching of two infantry brigades, or 8,000 combat troops, into Panama.
No decision has been made, the network said, noting that such a plan is opposed by Secretary of Defense Frank Carlucci and Adm. William Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.
Pentagon officials who demanded anonymity told The Associated Press late Friday that the decision to send the additional troops came after a lengthy — and vociferous — debate within the administration.
The sources refused to say whether the State Department wanted extra troops in Panama to mount a military operation directly against Noriega, or rather thought there was more of a threat to Americans in the country.
State Department spokesman Rudy Boone said there was no comment on

Report offers Meese boost

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Independent counsel James McKay said Friday he has found insufficient evidence to date to warrant indicting Attorney General Edwin Meese III in connection with a $1 billion Iraq pipeline plan or a possible conflict of interest involving his telephone company stock.
Meese said he was "gratified by the action and the statement" of the independent counsel and that he would not step aside.
"It is certainly my intent to carry on my duties as long as the president wants me to," the embattled attorney general told a news conference.
McKay said his report was an interim one and that his investigation was continuing.
"The grand jury's investigation is not yet complete as to" the pipeline probe, the telephone stocks and "other matters, and will continue at least through the end of April," McKay's statement said. A source close to McKay's investigation would not provide details of these matters, but said they were all felony cases.
The grand jury is expected this month to hear testimony from Meese, his wife, Ursula, and U.S. Circuit Judge Douglas H. Ginsburg, former head of the Justice Department's anti-trust division that handled the breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. while Meese held tele-

Tests for tots to say who enters 1st grade

The Associated Press
ATLANTA — Georgia's 93,000 kindergarten pupils begin taking mandatory tests next week that will partially determine whether they will enter first grade in the fall.
Some parents and educators oppose the tests.
Last week, the National Association for the Education of Young Children and the National Association of Early Childhood Specialists in State Departments of Education issued policy statements opposed to such mass

Andrus blasts final budget package

BOISE (AP) — The 1988 Idaho Legislature borrowed from the future and almost guaranteed that the next session will start with a deficit, Gov. Cecil Andrus said Friday.
"They are starting to look more like Congress than at any time in history," Andrus said, in assessing a legislative session that adjourned the night before.
It wound up in the 81st day, the seventh-longest session in history but the fifth time in the last six years that a session went at least 80 days.
The Legislature wound up with a general fund budget of $686 million, up $25 million from the year before but $17 million less than the governor recommended.
"Even at that level," Andrus said the Republican-dominated Legislature did not balance the budget, as required by the Idaho Constitution. Instead, he said, they concocted a "smoke and mirrors" budget that could be $9 million or even more in the red.
"The people are the losers," those who must hope Idaho's educational facilities help prepare an extra $15,000 which the governor said was needed to hire a secretary.

"That was a $15,000 poke in the eye," Andrus said. He noted that his budget, and other budgets, was limited to a 2-percent increase, but the Legislature voted a 13 percent increase in its operating expense "so they can take trips to Coeur d'Alene, Hawaii or whatever."
House Minority Leader Rep. James Stoicheff, D-Sandpoint, also claimed the budget was not balanced, and the next Legislature will have to scramble to find enough money to pay the bills. "All we did was stall off the inevitable," he said.
Republican leaders said the budget was balanced as closely as possible. Sen. James Risch, R-Boise, Senate president pro tem, said the budget was within one-half percent of being balanced.
With the Legislature having to predict revenue 18 months in advance, no economist in the world would claim the budget was not balanced, he said.

Set 'em ahead, folks

Spring Ahead
It's daylight-saving time again. Remember to set your clock ahead one hour at 2:00 a.m. this Sunday, April 3rd.
The official moment comes at 2 a.m., when clocks should be reset to 3 a.m. Most people, however, will simply do the job before hitting Saturday night.
Standard time will return on Oct. 30.
It is the second year that daylight-saving time will begin on the first Sunday in April. Before Congress changed the law, the time switch occurred on the last Sunday of April.

Nicaraguan cease-fire goes into effect

The Associated Press
MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Sandinista soldiers and Contra rebels had been observing a 60-day cease-fire designed to give both sides time to arrange a permanent peace in their 6 1/2-year-old war.
A spokesman for the Defense Ministry said there were no reports of violations of the truce, which began after midnight Thursday.
The cease-fire provision was contained in a peace agreement signed March 23 in the border outpost of Sapoa, but details remained to be worked out.
Soldiers for both the leftist government and the U.S.-backed rebels had been observing a temporary truce since March 21 while negotiators hammered out the peace agreement.
An Associated Press reporter in northern Nicaragua reported no signs of battle Friday.
"We want a truce," said a rebel leader known as Comandante Ernesto, one of a group of Contra leaders huddled in front of a wooden shack in the village of La Vigia. "This cease-fire is the first step toward peace."

Nearby, Sandinista troops mounded down winding dirt roads.
The heaviest fighting of the war has been around La Vigia, 120 miles northeast of Managua, and other parts of the mountainous north.
In Washington, President Reagan signed a $48 million non-lethal aid package for the Contras, but it probably will be at least two weeks before the rebels begin receiving supplies under the new legislation.
"There certainly is an urgent need among the rebels for medical supplies, food, clothing, the basic commodities of life," said White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater. "This bill is very welcome in that regard."
U.S. aid to the Contras ran out on Feb. 29. There was no immediate comment from the Sandinista government on the bill. Most offices were closed for Good Friday observances in the predominantly Roman Catholic country.

Many Nicaraguans marked the long Easter weekend by taking vacations at beaches on the Pacific coast. Banks, government offices, stores and most restaurants were closed until Monday.
Managua's three newspapers "stopped" publishing for the weekend.
Ortega charged Thursday that the United States will try to undermine the Nicaraguan peace process because negotiations "debilitate the politics" of the Reagan administration.
"The (Reagan) administration maintains in its thinking the decision to destroy ... the Nicaraguan revolution and not to normalize relations with Nicaragua," Ortega said.
On Tuesday, Ortega urged the United States to hold talks to normalize relations with his government.
The peace agreement calls for Contra rebels to gather in cease-fire zones during the first 15 days of April but left the conditions to be arranged in later talks.

Coup leader Honasan escapes

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The leader of the August coup attempt that almost toppled the government of President Corasono escaped from his prison ship, the military announced Saturday.

A statement said Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan fled at about 2:30 a.m. aboard two rubber boats along with 13 other people, including some of his guards. Chief of Staff Gen. Renato de Villa ordered a massive search for the 39-year-old Honasan and alerted subordinate commands nationwide to be on the lookout for him.

Honasan had been detained on a navy ship in Manila Bay since his arrest last December in a Manila suburb. Col. Oscar Florendo, chief military spokesman, confirmed the escape. He said a reserve lieutenant who was frustrated over his inability to obtain a regular commission had aided in the getaway.

Iran claims chemical attack

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran said Friday a new Iraqi chemical bomb attack on Kurdish villages killed 75 people and wounded more than 100. It also said it accepted a U.N. call for a halt in the deadly "war of the cities."

The Iranians claim 5,000 civilians were killed and the same number wounded in gas attacks 2 weeks ago.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, reported that Iran earlier fired seven missiles into Kirkuk, Iraq's northern oil capital and Basra, a southern port city. Iraq said many civilians were killed or wounded in Kirkuk.

No Iraqi missile firings were reported. Iraq said Thursday it would suspend attacks on Iranian cities for three days, beginning at midnight, while Prime Minister Turgut Ozal of Turkey is visiting Baghdad.

Reagan OKs Contra aid plan

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan signed a $48 million aid package for Nicaraguan Contras and war victims Friday before driving here for a 10-day California Easter vacation.

Reagan signed the legislation in his White House residence, foregoing the ceremonial fanfare that attends some bill signings.

Only $17.7 million of the $48 million will go to the Nicaraguan rebels, and the aid package contains no provision for weapons and ammunition. The bill could be the last of its kind that Reagan signs, given the truce agreement the Contras signed March 23 in Somoa, Nicaragua, with the ruling Sandinista regime.

The aid package, which also contains $17.7 million for financial rehabilitation and treatment of children injured on both sides of the 7-year-old conflict, was passed overwhelmingly by both the House and Senate earlier this week.

Louisiana council toes line

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The Assemblies of God state council that wanted Jimmy Swaggart barred from preaching for three months said Friday it will go along with the one-year suspension demanded by the church's national leaders.

A spokesman for the fire-and-brimstone TV evangelist said Swaggart will return to the pulpit May 22 despite the ruling.

If he returns, he risks dismissal from the denomination, officials have said.

The church's General Presbytery, meeting at its national headquarters Tuesday in Springfield, Mo., had banned Swaggart from the pulpit for at least a year for "moral failure" that reportedly included hiring a prostitute to pose nude for him.

Panama City police replace troops

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Panama City police replaced Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega's heavily armed soldiers on the streets Friday for the first time since last month's attempted coup against the Panamanian strongman.

The U.S. Defense Department announced it will send 1,300 additional military personnel to Panama, bringing the number of American troops there to nearly 12,000.

Panamanians took time out from political activity on Good Friday to prepare for the Easter weekend. But for many that meant only another day of hunger and shortages as a 12-day-old general strike and bank closures made even basic necessities scarce.

Opposition leaders said they would accept "some conditions," Monsignor Marcos Antonio McGrath, the Catholic archbishop of Panama City, as a mediator in talks to resolve the political crisis.

The conditions included guarantees that Noriega, head of the nation's 15,000-member Defense Forces and the power behind the civilian government, would indicate a willingness to resign and to leave the country.

Police foot patrols replaced soldiers who have filled the capital since a coup attempt failed March 16. The change was an indication of how the city has quieted for the holiday weekend, after weeks of protest.

The Pentagon said the 1,300 extra military personnel would improve security for American bases and U.S. residents in Panama.

Many of those to be dispatched beginning next week are military police, but army helicopter units will be included, the Pentagon said.

The CBS report "We have nothing on that," he said.

The Pentagon denied any plans to send more troops into Panama. It described the upcoming troop movement as part of a continuing effort "to enhance our security posture there."

"The instability of the current situation in Panama; the heavy-handed tactics of Noriega in dealing with the situation, and the potential for increased threats to U.S. citizens and interests in Panama—make this deployment essential at this time to ensure the continued safety of U.S. personnel and facilities."

"This action is consistent with the Panama Canal Treaty and is a reasonable and prudent effort to further safeguard the canal and U.S. lives, property and interests in the area," the Pentagon's statement said.

The Pentagon said the building would be gradual, with the first contingent of troops leaving the United States next Tuesday.

The units being sent to Panama include an Army battalion of military police, a reinforced company of Marines; three Air Force Air Base Ground Defense Units; two additional guard dog squads and an Army aviation task force, the Pentagon said.

The aviation unit will include seven AH-1 Cobra helicopter gunships along with 15 UH-60 Blackhawk transports and four OH-58 Kiowa observation copters, the Pentagon said.

The aircraft are to provide rapid transportation and highly mobile protection for the security forces if neces-

The U.S. Southern Command, which is based in Panama, had about 600 security personnel among its 10,000 troops before Washington intensified its campaign for Noriega's removal.

Over a 10-day period that ended March 24, the Pentagon dispatched another 670 security personnel to Panama for the stated purpose of protecting military facilities.

Col. Ronald Sconyers, spokesman for the Southern Command, said the latest troop increase was prompted by "a longstanding look at what has been going on down here."

He said it was not made in anticipation of an imminent departure of Noriega and any instability that might follow.

Today's weather

It's egg-zactly right for Easter

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding: Sunny and warmer today. Variable winds near 10 mph. Highs from 65 to 70. Fair tonight and Sunday. Lows in the mid 30s. Highs from 70 to 75.

Camas, Prairie and Wood River Valley: Fair today and Sunday. Variable winds near 10 mph today. East to south winds from 10 to 20 mph on Sunday. Highs from 60 to 65 today and the mid to upper 60s Sunday. Lows tonight from 26 to 30.

Northern Utah and Nevada: Utah — Mostly sunny and warmer days and fair at night through the Easter weekend. Lows from mid 20s to near 30. Highs from 60 to 65 today and from 60s to low 70s Sunday.

Nevada — Sunny and mild today. Fair tonight. Mostly sunny with increasing clouds and winds over the northwest Sunday afternoon. Over-night lows from upper teens to low 30s. Highs from mid 60s to upper 70s.

Summary: The National Weather Service in Boise says high pressure brought bringing sunny warm weather to Idaho Friday. In Southern Idaho, the warming trend will continue through Sunday.

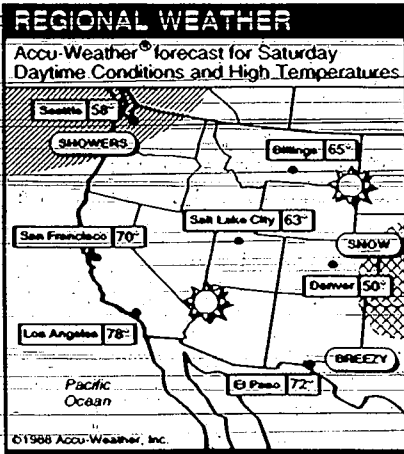

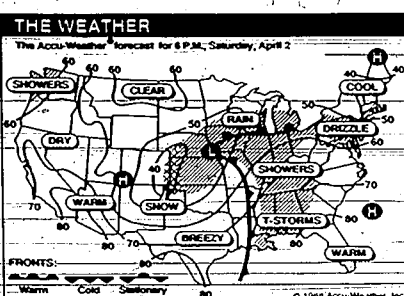

However, a Pacific frontal system was expected to bring rain to northern Idaho today and Sunday.

Afternoon temperatures were in the 50s to the upper 60s. At 3 p.m., temperatures ranged from 58 at Mountain Home to 47 at McCall.

Afternoon skies were sunny statewide. Winds were generally light. The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 70 degrees at Hagerman and Mountain Home. Dixie reported the coldest at 7 degrees.

The extended forecast for southern Idaho, Monday through Wednesday, scattered showers Monday. Widely scattered showers Tuesday. Fair Wednesday. Cool with highs in the mid 40s to mid 50s Sunday and Tuesday, warming to the mid 50s and mid 60s Wednesday. Lows ranging from the 20s to the low 30s.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 90 degrees at Kinzville, Texas, and the lowest was zero degrees at Yellowstone Park, Wyo.

Tests

those who are outraged over standardized tests of 5-year-olds to measure their ability to recognize sounds, letters and basic math concepts are making mountains out of molehills.

"I think it's more important to focus on the entire process, because there's much more to it than testing," said Sharon Meinhardt, coordinator of the Georgia Department of Education's early childhood education program.

"Ms. Meinhardt said if a child does not achieve the required score, education officials will use both the test and the recommendation of the child's teacher in deciding whether the child is ready for first grade.

"There are a lot of scared parents out there — I've talked to them," Ms. Meinhardt said. "When I have had a chance to talk to a lot of the parents and tell them we are going to look at more than the test, there's not a parent who left the conversation without saying 'I feel better.'"

The testing policy, approved by the state Board of Education in February, is mandated by the Quality Basic Education Act to identify children in need of special help, and students who are held back will be placed in an alternative kindergarten program.

"But some educators say assurances from state officials will not make them feel better about testing such young children."

"Our state legislators feel that this test will reduce our relatively high first-grade failure rate by weeding out those children who are not yet ready to attend first grade," said Marilyn B. Goodman, assistant professor of elementary education at the University of Georgia. "Instead, the test wastes precious learning time and places unnecessary stress on our children."

"We are very supportive of testing and assessing young children, but we are against one 90-minute assessment in a child's kindergarten year to predict readiness," said Judy Jefferson, Gwinnett County's coordinator of primary programs and an official of the Metro Council for Early Childhood.

Atlanta child psychologist Ann Hilliard said the tests have "a disproportionate impact on those children who need school the most, the minority children."

Stan Berkнопf, director of the education department's assessment program, said parental distress over testing kindergarteners will not prompt the state to change the law.

"Their anxiety for the most part is probably misplaced," Berkнопf said. "We expect over 90 percent of the students to do very well."

Ms. Meinhardt said education officials recommend that parents treat the test as they would "any other school activity and not pressure their children."

"There should be no great production made of it," she said. "Teachers are feeling a considerable amount of pressure, either from their own minds or from other people in their school system. There is no way some of that pressure is not being transferred to the children."

"The Department of Education's assessment department estimates that about 90 of the state's 186 school systems will begin testing next week, and the rest will start the following week."

Coming this Sunday

WHAT MAKES A GOOD PRESIDENT?

Who were the country's best Presidents? And the worst? Take it from someone who had the job. According to Harry S. Truman, Woodrow Wilson was perhaps "the greatest of the greats." He lists his other choices in the forthcoming "More Plain Speaking," a book he started shortly after leaving the White House but left unfinished. Truman's daughter, Margaret, and Scott Meredith have edited the volume, in which he also discusses what it takes to be a good President and the potential function of the American government. Read this week's PARADE for an exclusive excerpt from Truman's candid remarks.

JEWS AND CHRISTIANS SHARE A HOME

Jews and Christians worshipping under the same roof? It sounds unlikely but in Ann Arbor, Mich., a Reform Jewish congregation rented space from St. Clare of Assisi church, and the two congregations decided to stay together. While they continue to worship separately, the rabbis and the priest have come to share some things: They hold Passover services together, have pulpit exchanges and pray together for world peace. And, through their friendship and unity, they are sending a message out to the rest of the world. Read about their remarkable organization in this week's PARADE.

KIDS WHO LOVE TO READ

They're rare these days. According to a California study, 70 percent of sixth-graders polled said they don't often read for pleasure. TV is their entertainment; reading is required in school. What can parents do to inspire their kids to read—and enjoy it? Charles Schulz, Maurice Sendak, Judy Blume and Jim Trelease have some suggestions. Read their solutions in this week's PARADE.

SIS hearings finished but controversy over project goes on

BOCATELLO (AP) — After 53 hours of testimony from 508 witnesses in three cities, the public hearings on the Special Isotope Separation project — a $900 million plutonium processing plant — are over.

But the controversy goes on.

Both the U.S. Department of Energy, which wants to build the SIS at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, and opponents of the project applauded the results of the hearings that concluded Thursday night in Twin Falls.

"I think we have a good feeling about the fact the democratic process seemed to work," said Clay Nichols, DOE's SIS project manager.

Liz Paul, the head of the anti-SIS group Snake River Alliance, called the six-day schedule of hearings excellent, because of the number of people altogether who testified, and because of the overwhelming opposition that was voiced.

Energy officials initially scheduled three hearings on the draft environmental impact statement for the SIS, but expanded that schedule to six on the eve of the first hearing in Idaho Falls.

Ms. Paul estimated that testimony ran about 4-1 against the project, which would use laser technology to refine fuel grade plutonium for use in nuclear weapons.

Opponents argued that the plutonium processed by the SIS would not be needed to meet the nation's weapons-production needs, and that the potential environmental impact of the plant far outweighed any economic benefit.

While conceding there was little need for the SIS in the short term, supporters of the project said the additional weapons-grade plutonium would be needed later on to maintain U.S. defenses. They also extolled the benefits of the hundreds of construction and permanent jobs the SIS would bring to eastern Idaho.

Nichols had no estimate of how the testimony went, but he conceded there were more against the project than for it. He said there was a slight majority in favor of the project among those who testified in Idaho Falls — the hearing site closest to the INEL — while those testifying against denounced the hearings in Boise and Twin Falls.

"I think there certainly were more against than for; there were no big surprises there," Nichols said.

Ms. Paul said the large turnout against the SIS is already having an impact on Idaho's congressional delegation.

"They have taken note of the deep and widespread opposition to the plant; and they will be adjusting their positions," she said.

In addition, DOE will likely be making "significant changes" in the final environmental impact statement as a result of the criticism of the draft EIS during the hearings, she said.

"In fact, I think they may even revise the draft EIS," she said.

If the final document does not meet legal requirements — and opponents of the project claim the draft EIS does not — "we'll definitely be considering going to court" to stop the project, Ms. Paul said.

But Nichols said DOE anticipated most of the criticisms of the draft EIS.

"We know we were going to have a large group coming at us on the basis they don't like the SIS here, or anywhere else, because of their perceived impact on policy issues," said Nichols.

DOE will spend the next several weeks evaluating every comment and answering every question raised at the hearings, Nichols said. 811 exhibits were entered in the hearing record.

Health, Welfare positions shuffled

Budget director Peterson leaves post

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus has announced a shuffling of personnel in the Health and Welfare Department following the decision of veteran Budget Director Martin Peterson to return to private enterprise.

Health and Welfare officials emphasized that all the job changes announced by the governor were promotions or natural extensions of responsibility.

In a statement issued Friday, Andrus said Peterson would leave the $55,000-a-year job as director of the Division of Financial Management to become president of the Idaho Centennial Foundation.

Replacing Peterson will be Health and Welfare Deputy Director Charles Moss, the former city manager in Pocatello.

Peterson, 44, was the head of the budget office during the second term of former Gov. John Evans after eight years as director of the Association of Idaho Cities. He said he agreed to stay on as the Andrus budget chief for the first year of the new administration before moving on.

Peterson will remain vice chairman of the state Centennial Commission while taking over operation of the private foundation for the 1990 celebration of the 100th anniversary of statehood. He will assume day-to-day supervision of the commission's operations.

Moss, 57, has been the deputy to Health and Welfare Director Rich Donovan for the past year after the city of Pocatello dropped its city manager form of government. He has a master's degree in public administration.

Donovan's other deputy, David Humphrey, will assume Moss's responsibilities in the Health and Welfare Department, and Welfare Division Director Allen Korhonen will be promoted to deputy director in charge of welfare, community rehabilitation and family and children's services as well as the department's regional offices and the two state hospitals.

Taking over the Welfare Division will be Linda Caballero, 39, a veteran department employee who has been managing the problem-plagued welfare computer system.

Magistrate drops alcohol consumption charge

MOSCOW (AP) — A Latah County magistrate has dismissed a charge of illegal alcohol consumption against a woman caught with a pint of whiskey at a University of Idaho football game, but did not question the validity of the Kibbie-Dome boozie ban.

Magistrate William Hamlett said Thursday that security guards at the dome did not follow proper procedures when they seized the whiskey from 25-year-old Margo Price of Spokane, Wash., last Oct. 24. The officers also failed to explain to Ms. Price her rights, Hamlett said in a 10-page ruling.

"It is said that great men and women only fight great battles," he wrote. "There is simply no great battle in this litigation."

The Kibbie Dome anti-alcohol policy is under scrutiny after two arrests at the Oct. 24 game between the Vandals and Eastern Washington University.

One case was dismissed earlier when Hamlett refused to recognize the alcohol policy, ruling that city prosecutors had failed to produce the state Board of Education authorization for the restriction.

University officials later found the necessary evidence to prove the posted regulations had been established by the board.

Security officers testified they saw

Ms. Price seated with two or three male companions at the game. She picked up a purse, held it between her legs, bent down and then passed cups to the men.

According to court records, security officers asked Ms. Price to bring her purse and coat and came with them for questioning in the Kibbie Dome first-aid room, which she did willingly.

Asked where the bottle was, Ms. Price opened her purse and handed over the pint of whiskey, which Hamlett said was the first time the officers had seen it.

PUC orders Sprint to report calls

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission has directed U.S. Sprint Communications Co. to comply with an order to report the percentages of interstate and intrastate calls it handles in Idaho.

The PUC ordered all long-distance telephone resellers operating in Idaho last December to begin reporting the nature of the calls they handle.

But the commission said this week that Sprint has taken the position that it is not required to report because it does not buy access for in-state long-distance calls and because the degree of state regulation of resellers has yet to be determined.

"Sprint has misinterpreted the purpose of the required independent audit of the PUC," said the commission. "This audit requirement has nothing whatever to do with the manner in which the commission may determine to regulate resellers."

The reporting requirement stems from a North American Telecommunications Commission ruling that TeleAmerica was unfairly paying lower interstate charges for access to Mountain Bell's network while Northwest Telco paid higher intrastate access charges — to complete in-state long-distance calls.

long-distance resellers report both within Idaho and to other states.

Sprint itself suggested that resellers be required to provide an annual audit report done by an independent outside auditor, the commission said. "The commission adopted that recommendation of Sprint and found it the most efficient and fair way to provide assurance that the usage reported on interstate and intrastate calls," the PUC did grant Sprint's request for an extension until the end of April for the filing of its first audit report, which was due March 1.

Shaft blaze at Sunshine dying Friday

KELLOGG (AP) — An underground fire in the Sunshine Mining Co.'s Kellogg silver mine appeared to be dying Friday, company officials said.

"The temperatures are cooling down. We're still monitoring it for carbon monoxide and carbon dioxide. The gases continue to surface at reduced rates," said Jack Cowley, personnel director for Sunshine's Kellogg operation.

Asked whether the fire was out, Cowley said, "That's our best speculation, but we can't prove it."

The mine, which reaches depths of as much as 5,600 feet, was the site of a fire on May 2, 1972, that killed 91 miners.

The mine was closed for a second day today, and managers were to decide this weekend whether workers would be allowed back Monday.

No injuries were reported in the fire that forced the evacuation of 367 workers Wednesday night. One of those evacuated had remained underground for about two hours, as a precaution, until he could be escorted to the surface by an emergency rescue team.

The fire ignited at the 3,100-foot level and contained in a work area about 200 feet high and 40 feet wide, Don Hullinger, human resource manager for Sunshine's precious metals group, said Thursday.

Central Mine Rescue teams worked in rotating shifts to monitor the fire. On Thursday, they pumped water and worked to seal off the fire's oxygen supply, Hullinger said.

The cause was not immediately known, but Hullinger said it may have been started by sparks from dynamite blasting by day-shift miners Wednesday.

Demo candidates call for Meese resignation

The Associated Press
 Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis adopted a new populist stand Friday in a drive to win the college-campus in Wisconsin's primary while the Democratic presidential candidates in a chorus called on Attorney General Edwin Meese III to resign.

The four Democrats kept up hectic schedules despite the Passover and Easter observances last weekend, mindful of the 81 delegates at stake Tuesday in Wisconsin.

Dukakis and Jesse Jackson each held farm rallies. Jackson attracted more than 2,500 farmers and their families to his event on Bud and Foye Lee's farm near Adams, Wis., north of Wisconsin.

Meese told the farmers they "deserve fair prices for their products and workers deserve fair wages and the rich must pay fair taxes." He said people could afford to pay a little more for milk, bread and ice cream to make sure farmers get their due.

Sons Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee and Paul Simon of Illinois joined Dukakis and Jackson in demanding that Meese resign.

As a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, today are asking Ed Meese to resign," Simon said at a breakfast speech in Superior.

"It's time in this nation to restore respect for government, to establish rule of law," Gore said in the same town.

Dukakis named Meese's Justice Department for allowing the "morger man" he said has cost a half million jobs.

"We've got an attorney general who couldn't tell the difference between antitrust and antifeeze, an antitrust division that hasn't been here 10 years," Dukakis told a labor audience in Racine.

"The Japanese must be laughing at us all the way to the bank."

The furor over Meese's troubles erupted again Friday when independent counsel James C. McKay announced there was no evidence "developed to date" to warrant a criminal indictment against the attorney general in connection with an Iraq-Jordan pipeline plan or his investment in telephone company stock. McKay said the probe was continuing.

Dukakis' speech and a new television ad that started airing Friday demonstrated the governor's shift to a more emotional approach drawing on the economic-populism theme developed by Rep. Richard Gephardt, who dropped out of the race Monday.

The human cost of seven years of Republican indifference is staggering, Dukakis says in the ad as laid-off workers, homeless people, unemployment lines and "factory closed" signs roll by the screen.

"Who in this administration could look right into the eyes of the laid-off factory worker or the homeless family and say they've kept the promise of America? I say they've broken that promise."

Gephardt said on syndicated television program "One on One" that he didn't mind the heavy borrowing from his campaign. "Everybody has stolen it," he said. "I willed it everybody when I pulled out and I hope they will use it. It is the issue of this campaign.

Gore, who has been outspoken in criticism of Jackson this week, said again that Jackson's cue doesn't entitle him to kid-glove treatment.

"An end to bigotry does not mean some candidates are game for criticism and some are immune," Gore said.

In Washington, House Democratic Leader Tom Foley said Jackson will be subjected to increased scrutiny now that he is a front-runner. "I think he would welcome that," Foley said. "The question that remains for the Jackson campaign is whether he is electable in the fall."

Foley said decisions by himself and others to withhold an endorsement at this point should not be interpreted as a stop-Jackson signal.

"There is a little bit of a sense that if you are neutral you are getting in the way of Jesse Jackson," he said. "That's unfair."

Colorado, with caucuses on Monday night, was drawing some political attention this weekend, including on the dormant

Republican side.

Par Robertson, who has all but conceded the nomination to George Bush, scheduled three days of activities in Colorado including talks at four Easter Sunday services. He has said he is determined to go to the GOP convention in August with a block of delegates to influence the platform and Bush's choice of a running mate.

Jackson and Dukakis also planned some activities this weekend in Colorado. But the Democrats were focused mainly on Wisconsin and the two industrial-state primaries that follow later this month: New York and Pennsylvania.

Gore spokesman Mark Armour said the campaign has had fundraising surge that will allow Gore to conduct a $1 million campaign in New York's April 19 primary without taking out any new loans.

Army to drug test civilian workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taking advantage of an appeals court ruling earlier this week, the Army on Friday ordered a resumption of random drug testing of civilian employees in certain critical jobs.

"The directive went out today," said Paige Eversole, an Army spokeswoman at the Pentagon. "It orders resumption of the program effective immediately."

The move had been expected since Tuesday, when a federal appeals court struck down a preliminary injunction that had stopped the drug-testing program a month ago.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said it was staying the injunction granted to employee unions while it considered the legal merits of the case.

The employee unions filed suit to stop a program under which any civilian worker in so-called "critical" jobs can be tested at random for evidence of drug use. About 9,400 Army civilians are currently subject to the testing because they work in such fields as security, aviation and law enforcement.

Men and women on active military duty have long been subject to random drug testing. The extension of that testing to civilian workers, however, began only last year.

On March 1, U.S. District Judge Thomas F. Hogan ruled against the Army and issued a preliminary injunction to stop the random testing of civilians, concluding that the practice amounted to an "excessively intrusive" search prohibited by the Constitution.

Hogan said that random checks of employees in sensitive positions could not be justified by safety concerns because the urine test used by the Army did not indicate whether an employee was using drugs on the job.

The suit challenging the Army was brought by public employee unions representing civilian Army employees at Fort Stewart, Fla.; Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.; and the Sharp Army Depot in Lathrop, Calif.

The unions have vowed to pursue their challenge. No date has been set as yet for the appeals court to hear arguments in the case.

GAO calls for testing of nuke plant pipes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force on Friday rewrote its contracts covering development of the new Minuteman III nuclear missile, canceling almost $1 billion worth of work planned by six contractors.

The service, in a brief statement, stressed it could not speak for the six contractors involved. But it stated the cutbacks could affect the jobs of as many as 2,300 private-sector employees.

The Air Force action became inevitable several months ago when Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci decided the Pentagon could not afford to develop and deploy the single-warhead Minuteman within the budget levels set by the White House and Congress.

The Air Force had recommended

Carlucci kill the program outright, but the defense secretary decided to request $200 million in fiscal 1989 to keep the program alive pending a final decision by the next president.

The House Armed Services Committee, a major proponent of the new weapon, has already voted to increase that figure to $500 million in fiscal 1989. Even if that figure is approved, however, the Air Force said it would not have enough money to sustain the program on its original schedule, leaving no choice but to rewrite the "seven major development contracts" held by the six firms.

In order for the program to adhere to its original schedule, the Air Force would have needed about $2.2 billion this year and another $2.2 billion in fiscal 1989. Congress provided $700 million for the Midgetman this fiscal year.

The biggest loser as a result of Friday's action was the Rockwell International Corp. Its Autonetics Division had a $342.2 million prime development contract for the missile's guidance and control system that was slashed by $374 million to $110.2 million.

The other losers include:

- Boeing Aerospace Co., under contract to develop the missile's mobile launcher, cut $278 million to a new total of $313.6 million.
- Martin Marietta Corp. It had two contracts, one to provide support and assembly services and the other to develop the warhead's post-burst vehicle and shroud. The first contract was cut $47 million to a new total of $76.9 million, while the second was cut $100 million to a new total of $244.5 million.
- Aerjet Nevada Rocket Operations, developer of the Stage 2 booster for the missile, cut $77 million to a new total of $10.7 million.
- Herules Inc., developer of the Stage 3 booster, cut $72 million to a new total of $97.7 million.
- Morton Thiokol, developer of the Stage 1 booster, cut $51 million to a new total of $74.9 million.

When all the reductions are added, they total $999 million, the

Heroic dog draws praise

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A dog that had been adopted by a convalescent hospital the day it was to have been destroyed was honored for helping a seizure victim by barking at staff doctors.

Tori, a 5-year-old Sheltie, on Thursday was awarded a silver medal in a ceremony attended by actor Earl Holliman, a member of Actors and Others for Animals, at the Astoria Convalescent Home in Sylmar.

Nancy Sue Merritt, 50, had been unhappy about the adoption and threatened to move when the dog arrived in January. Her opinion changed Feb. 7.

Ms. Merritt suffered a seizure, fall and hit her head when no other people were around.

But Tori barked so loud "you would have thought there was a pack of dogs," said Lita Joy Parker.

Idaho unemployment drops

By The Associated Press and The Times-News

BOISE — Idaho's unemployment rate slipped another notch in March as modest expansion in the labor force kept the number of Idahoans with jobs at its highest level of the 1980s, the Department of Employment reported.

In Twin Falls, the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate edged upward, however. Lon McDonald with Job Service said the increase, from 4.5 percent in February to 4.9 percent in March, was due to Tupperware layoffs.

But the unemployment figures improved from a year ago in the Twin Falls area, dropping from 5.8 percent in March 1987.

The total Twin Falls labor force was 34,807 with 1,705 unemployed, for a seasonally adjusted rate of 4.9 percent. There were 1,270 more people working this March than a year ago, McDonald said.

Statewide, the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate fell a tenth from February to 5.4 percent last month, matching the tenth-of-a-point decline the national rate recorded in dropping to 6.6 percent.

Employment increased over last month in the construction, wholesale and retail trade and service sectors, department spokesman Bob Cooper said.

Mild weather in most of the state allowed seasonal workers to get an early start on outdoor activity, Cooper said. In the past year, employment gains have been spread across most sectors of the economy with the largest increases in mining and electronics.

Some 411,000 Idahoans were working in March, the third straight month total employment in the state has run over 410,000. March employment was the highest the state has ever seen outside the peak of its economic boom from the fall of 1978 through 1979. Record employment was 416,300 in June, 1979.

Although the department figures do not reflect the wage quality of jobs available or the impact of part-time work on the statistics, the continued strength in the state's employment picture fueled contentions that Idaho's economic expansion is being underrated by Gov. Cecil Andrus and his budget analysts.

Nationally, however, Labor Department experts said the drop in unemployment to its lowest rate in nearly nine years was a reflection of a slowing economic expansion and contraction of the workforce.

But Idaho's March jobless rate was nearly a full percentage point below the rate of March 1987, marking the 15th straight month the current rate has run below year-earlier levels. March 1987, however, was the last month the statewide seasonally adjusted unemployment rate was over 6 percent. It dropped to 6 percent in April 1987 and since then has been below that level, slipping under 5 percent twice last fall.

Regionally, job gains offset layoffs although the Pocatello, Magic Valley and Idaho Falls areas showed slight increases in unemployment over February.

Although they were more than offset by gains in employment, there were some layoffs

Twin Falls prepares to mail brochures

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The name of Twin Falls will soon grace the lips of industrial and commercial business executives nationwide as they contemplate the ideal location for their next move or expansion.

That, at least, is the fantasy of the City of Twin Falls and the Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce as they prepare to send out 9,000 new colored brochures promoting Twin Falls and South Central Idaho as the location with the most.

The brochure primarily focuses on letting businesses know Idaho is receptive to new business, said Vince Alberdi, director of economic development for the city.

The brochure identifies us mainly as a place to locate a headquarters on the West Coast. The 4-page promotional piece emphasizes the city's central location to the large surrounding populations in all four directions.

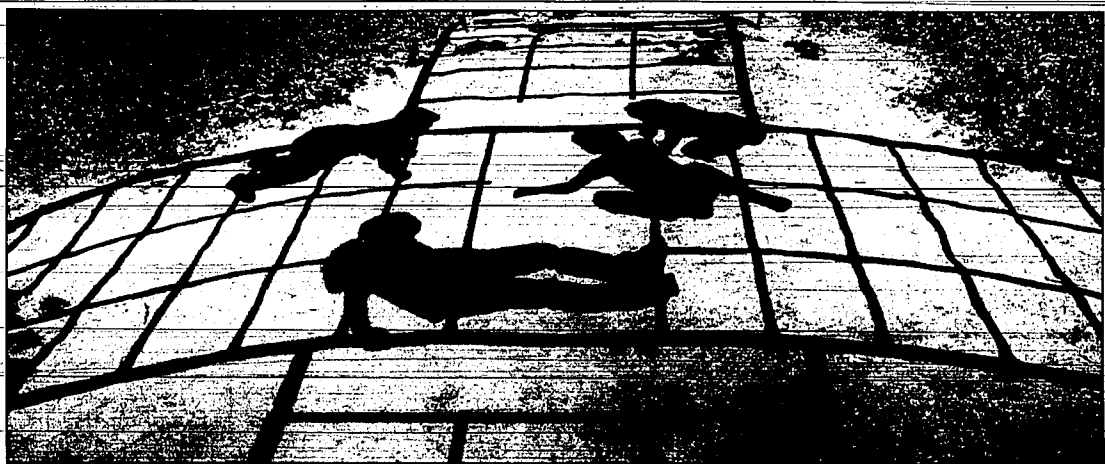

The chamber paid for the design and printing costs. The city expects to pay about $5,000 for the mailing list, the mailing cost, the envelopes and the return cards.

The list of businesses being tapped was derived from recom-

Attorney abandons lawsuit

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The attorney for an indigent who sued over a slow rent-assistance hearing has dropped the lawsuit, saying new information in the case makes it unnecessary to continue.

Michael F. McCarthy, an attorney for Idaho Legal Aid Services, told the commissioners that information revealed in a March hearing before the commissioners and through later investigation led him to believe the indigent, Clara Tuller, would not be evicted from her apartment at 351 2nd Ave. West.

Because eviction wasn't imminent, the county couldn't be held liable for the $150 in rent payments Tuller requested.

"I still think, morally, that she should get paid," McCarthy said.

McCarthy said he was unaware of some of the information brought when Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Buxter quizzed Tuller on cross examination before the commissioners.

Based on that information, including the fact that a roommate of Tuller's was beginning to work on farms and that the ownership of her apartment was in limbo, McCarthy said he decided his original premise that Tuller was about to be evicted and had no money to pay rent was incorrect.

McCarthy kicked a district court suit into gear March 3, after an initial denial of Tuller's request.

He asked the county for a speedy hearing on the $150 request for Tuller. The county had already scheduled the hearing for May despite evidence of a written eviction notice which was given to Tuller.

In his district court suit, McCarthy asked the court to require the county to have an appeals hearing immediately and award Tuller $150.

Investigation into Kolouch death continues

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Some answers have trickled in for Salt Lake City investigators studying the fire in which Twin Falls accountant Peggy Kolouch was killed, but no final determination on the blaze's cause has been made.

"The investigation is still continuing," said Jeff Long, an investigator with the Salt Lake City Fire Department. He said they hope to make a determination within the next two weeks.

Kolouch, 43, was killed March 14 in a fire that destroyed much of her mother's home in Salt Lake City.

Dr. E.S. Sweeney, the Utah state medical examiner, said the certified cause of Kolouch's death was smoke inhalation. But Sweeney, who performed the autopsy, said no determination on the manner or cause of death — the way in which the fire started — has been reached.

"I'm still waiting for Investigator Long to give me a little more definitive report," Sweeney said. "The autopsy report is not issued until all the facts are known as well as we can know them."

Long said the fire sparked considerable speculation, forcing investigators to walk down a long trail blazed by rumor and innuendo. "I've never talked to so many psychiatrists and attorneys in my life," Long said.

The rapid spread of the blaze prompted investigators to speculate the house may have been intentionally set ablaze, possibly by the victim, Kolouch's mother, 82-year-old Helen Kolouch, also told neighbors and investigators that her daughter resisted attempts to be led from the home's blazing living room.

Kolouch, who had been in private practice as an accountant in Twin Falls the last eight years, had recently been under psychiatric care, investigators said.

Long said toxicology tests showed no traces of alcohol or other drugs in Kolouch's system when she died. The investigator said there was speculation the victim took sleeping pills prior to the fire, but no traces of such drugs were found in her system.

Long said investigators also failed to find any flammable substances, for example gasoline, on the robe Kolouch was wearing at the time of the fire.

Firefighters were unable to find Kolouch for more than 20 minutes after arriving at the March 14 fire shortly before noon. She was pronounced dead at LDS Hospital shortly after she was pulled from the smoke-filled home.

Investigators confronted conflicting evidence as to whether Kolouch intentionally set the fire.

Fire Battalion Chief LaMont Epperson said there were indications the victim tried to flee the burning home.

"It looked like maybe she changed her mind and tried to get out," Epperson said.

Bellevue elections

Mayor Ivie won't run again

By ANNE MARIE JEHLLE
Times-News correspondent

BELLEVUE — Bellevue Mayor Mike Ivie has withdrawn his bid for reelection, citing health reasons.

That leaves the mayoral race between two challengers, but both have histories in local politics. Robert Thomas served as Blaine County assessor for six years ending in 1987, and Wayne Douthit was a City Planning and Zoning commissioner for five years, three of which he served as chairman.

Douthit, 43, has lived in Bellevue for 15 years, during which he has developed his own business, Blaine Automotive, and has raised his family of eight.

"I would like to get the city running in a business-like manner," said Douthit, emphasizing the importance of organization and public awareness.

"I want to generate public interest, because public input is the most important thing," he said. Douthit criticized the current council for initiating action before receiving the public's support. He said, "The public needs to know what's coming up so they can respond to it."

Douthit said that his experience as chairman of the Planning and Zoning Commission prepared him to "keep information flowing in an orderly, constructive manner," and he feels that his leadership would also help the council run well.

"My job as mayor would be to draw out the opinion of the majority of the people," Douthit says. "Of course, after living in Bellevue for so long, I have my personal opinions too," but I'm able to represent the decisions made by the majority with faith and confidence.

Douthit says he would like to help Bellevue grow in an orderly, constructive manner.

Robert Thomas says that his recent retirement from one and a half terms as Blaine County assessor has left him with ample time to serve as mayor.

Thomas, 61, has lived in Bellevue for 17 years, during which he served on the City Planning and Zoning Commission and as the fire chief for Bellevue's Volunteer Fire Department.

Thomas calls himself a "community-minded man" and emphasizes the need for community input.

"I want to hear the voice of the community, and not just hear about the decisions that the mayor and the City Council are making," he said.

Thomas describes the mayor's role, saying, "He's there to conduct meetings and see to it that the council makes wise decisions."

Addressing current plans to develop a city sewage treatment system, Thomas said, "There hasn't been enough public input on that. It should be brought to a vote of the public before decisions are made on it."

It's possible the city may need a new sewer in the future, but the current council is moving along without listening to the people.

If elected, Thomas intends to plan for Bellevue's growth. Still, his main push before election day is to get people voting. "Everyone I talk to, I say to be sure to vote."

3 aldermen to be chosen

By ANNE MARIE JEHLLE
Times-News correspondent

BELLEVUE — On Monday, registered Bellevue voters will have a chance to vote for three new aldermen.

Ballots can be cast from noon till 6 p.m. at City Hall. Because Bellevue is a charter city, it does not follow the election schedule that incorporated cities in the state do.

Seven candidates, including three incumbents, are running for the three vacancies for two-year terms as Bellevue aldermen. Candidates run at large rather than for specific seats.

Ray Reese has served two partial terms as alderman and now wishes to carry a full term. In 1986 Reese was appointed to fill a vacancy, and in 1987 he was elected for a one-year term.

Referring to his business, Mr. Steam Cleaning and Restoration, Reese says, "I have my business here and Bellevue's community supports me, so I figure I can give back to the community by donating my time on the City Council."

Reese says that his address issues as they come up, and with the sewer, park and airport issues this year, there was no time to take on any "personal crusades."

On plans to build the city's first sewage treatment center, Reese said, "The council continues to address the feasibility study phase of Bellevue's central sewer project, and I would like to see it carried through if we can fund it."

Reese supports the push for a new ball park, saying, "Yes, we need more recreation, but we'll have to do so without trampling on property owners' rights. Since Muldoon didn't pan out, we'll have to look for another site." Neighbors in the Muldoon area objected to having a ball park there.

Reese is satisfied with the restructuring of the Friedman Memorial Airport Commission. He said, "It's important that we still have a voice on the commission, though Bellevue has not been in an uproar over the way the airport has been run so far."

Cliff Noxon is running again, because his first two-year term is ending and he feels he has some projects to finish.

At 62, Noxon has lived in Bellevue for 11 years. He works as a mining mechanic and feels that on another term on the council would enable him to "finish some projects I've started."

Noxon feels that the sewer project is imperative to Bellevue's growth. He said, "Our septic tanks are on the bottom line, and we're going to need a sewer system sooner or later. The longer we wait the more money that will have to come from Bellevue's pockets."

Noxon is satisfied with Bellevue's voting power on the airport commission. He said, "Bellevue should have a say because more air traffic flies over Bellevue than any other city in the Wood-River Valley."

Noxon runs with hopes of maintaining "a good, quality council."

Alderman Glen Stelmus offers the insights of 40 years of living in Bellevue. Stelmus served on the council for three terms at different times, starting in the '60s. Last October he was appointed to serve the reported in the food processing sector, particularly in south central Idaho," Cooper said.

Nearly 200 workers were off the job at Advanced Input Devices, contributing to an increased unemployment rate in northern Idaho," he said. "Spring break-up kept most loggers out of the woods, and the companies laid off some workers, which increased the number of unemployed in the Magic Valley."

Still, more than 15,000 Idahoans were at work last month than a year ago, and the state's total workforce posted a small gain over the month-to-lit 434,600, only 2,300 below the record job force of September 1979.

Department of Labor statistics have projected the state would pick up another 5,500 jobs in 1988 while the average unemployment rate for the year would run at 5.5 percent. It dropped below 6 percent last year for the first time in the 1980s.

Regionally, the unemployment rates for March, February and March 1987 were:

remains of Teresa Bergin's term.

"I know the city and I know what the city needs," said Stelma, age 62, who works for Glendale Construction.

"I want to help present projects to the voters—both them-to vote on bond issues. After all, I'm a resident, and I'll have to pay, too," he said.

Stelma is for creating a central sewer for Bellevue, but says, "We should work to have it at a reasonable rate."

On the airport commission, Stelma says, "Since residents of Bellevue see more traffic overhead than Hailey, I'm glad Bellevue still has a say in the matter."

Stelma has lived in Bellevue for four years and has watched a lot of new things happening. He says he'd like to "keep the enthusiasm going in Bellevue."

Abbey, 44, co-owner of Wood River Furniture Co. in Hailey, is concerned with Bellevue's financial future. "If we don't do a good job, we're going to end up with financial problems," Abbey says.

He would be a reasonable price," he said.

Dennis Wright was born and raised in Bellevue, and after studying business in Utah, serving the Peace Corps in India and serving seven years on the City Council of Alma, Colo., he feels he's ready to take on Bellevue.

"I'm unhappy with the present City Council holding their round table in the Silver Dollar instead of City Hall," he said. "I'd like to see official business done in an open, public forum."

Abbey suggested that the search for a location for the ball park and the sewer treatment facility could be held together. "We're looking for 15 acres plus, perhaps a parcel in the flood plain, where it might be a reasonable price," he said.

Wright said, "I'd like to see official business done in an open, public forum."

Though Wright says, "There's a sewer in the future of Bellevue—that's a given," he insists, "Bellevue should have given their engineers financial guidelines, because, I believe, there are limits to what Bellevue City can afford."

Peak says, "Bellevue is getting over a good case of apathy. With 70 voters last election, only 80 people voted. That doesn't represent a broad-based population."

"Supporting the central sewer project, Peak says, "There's money available now, so we should take advantage of that, and protect our property values by putting in a sewer now."

"The sewer project would go over well if we could make it an affordable, household expense," he said.

Peak is for growth as "a broadens Bellevue's tax base." "If we could get enough money coming in to support and maintain the community, we'd be in good shape," he said.

Peak 32, works in a meat cutter at Atkinsons, and he says, "After 15 years in the neighborhood—butcher in the small town atmosphere."

"Gary Peak has lived in Bellevue for 15 years and is a family-succumb to a pressure from local residents," who kept asking him to run for alderman.

Accident on Interstate 84 kills 1

BURLEY—A Utah teenager was killed Friday morning and a 3-year-old girl critically injured when a car they were passengers in flipped after leaving the highway roughly 25 miles southeast of here, officials said.

The car's driver, 22-year-old Lori Smith of Sandy, Utah, was taken to Cassia Memorial Hospital where she is listed in good condition.

The 3-year-old girl's girl's neck, which she heard unnap.

Robert A. Affleck, 34, a 14-year-old resident of Salt Lake City, says he announced death in the scene of the accident, Idaho State Police said.

The accident occurred shortly after 10:15 a.m. on U.S. Interstate 84, police said. The driver told police the accident happened after she turned around in her seat to Affleck, sitting in the front seat, and the driver were both wearing seatbelts, police said. The 3-year-old was in the back seat in a child-restraint seat.

Schools inspect for asbestos

GLENN'S FERRY—The Glenns Ferry old junior high and main school building have been given an asbestos inspection by Snake River Associates, according to Superintendent Bob Fanning.

The firm will provide an estimate to the district for developing a management plan to be in compliance with the Asbestos Hazard Emergency Response Act.

The low gasoline bid submitted by Glenns Ferry Oil was accepted. However, bids were reopened for diesel fuel.

Mailing

Based on Fantus Co. estimates, the city can expect about 5 percent of the 9,000 businesses to send back a reply card for more information. About 5 percent of those respondents should turn into serious prospects, Fantus estimated. That means 22.5 businesses should take a serious interest in locating some aspect of their business in the Magic Valley.

The brochures should be out by Saturday, because the city, like many others, is trying to beat the new postal rate increase that takes effect then.

Included with the area-promotional color brochure advertising the availability of the Upperware plant in Jerome. That one-page brochure has been paid for by Goldwell Banker Western Realty which is the listing agency for it.

James Kostnik, owner of Western Realty, is also attempting to interest buyers for the Upperware plant in Hong Kong and Singapore during a trip there next week. He will distribute the Twin Falls promotional piece as well.

Sedition defendant says rhetoric not literal

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP)—Sedition defendant David Lane told a federal court jury Friday that he is imprisoned not for the government's prosecution of himself, in light of previous sentences to 190 days in prison for other crimes.

"I am serving nine years (that) I can possibly live, why am I being tried again?" Lane said. "Is it to make an object lesson of the government?"

Lane is among nine people charged with seditious conspiracy in the 13-defendant trial drawing to the end of its seventh week. Five people, including one of those charged with sedition, are also charged with conspiring to kill the governor and a federal judge, while two are being tried on charges of transporting stolen money.

The maximum penalty for seditious conspiracy is 20 years in prison and a $20,000 fine for conspiracy to murder federal officials, and for transporting stolen money across state lines, 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

"Is it a crime to be a white man?" Lane said. "Yes, it is a crime to be a white man. For the government's information, I am a white man. I was born a white man in a white nation. I have lived as a white man in a white nation. I will continue to live as a white man in the Negro and homosexual jungle that your government calls a prison."

He said the government had made much of the rhetoric of the racial right, but that rhetoric of race contained ideas not meant to be taken literally. That was true, he said, of statements in which members of white supremacist organizations said things like "we have raised our swords against the government and more than nine of the government's witnesses lied."

Crash victim is identified

BURLEY—The Wyoming woman who was killed Thursday in a one-car accident east of here was identified by officials Friday as Jane Dupew, a 49-year-old resident of Jackson, Wyo.

Officials would not release the victim's name Thursday because her relatives had not been notified.

Dupew was killed Thursday afternoon when a car driven by her husband, 61-year-old Oliver Dupew, rolled several times after sliding down an embankment.

The husband received no minor injuries and was treated and released.

Wendell schools plan meetings

WENDELL—In an effort to have better communication with parents and teachers, Wendell Superintendent George Crawford has proposed a series of public meetings at 8 p.m. this month in the elementary school multi-purpose room.

The first meeting will be held Monday to discuss communications and textbooks, he said.

Other topics scheduled are curriculum and district goals on April 11, board/administrative roles and responsibilities on April 20, and budget and finances on April 25.

Patrons will be welcome to have discussions with administrators and ask questions of these and other topics.

Crawford proposed the series of meetings at the March School Board session and trustees agreed to have the meetings as long as there is sufficient public attendance.

BUHL—A graveside memorial service for Esther Louise Kifer, who died March 6, will be held today at 11 a.m. in West End Cemetery in Buhl.

Tuller

Twin Falls County Commission Chairman Ed Johnson said the county held Tuller's hearing in March instead when they originally scheduled it in May because one indigent hearing was cancelled. The commission then as promised scheduled Tuller into the slot.

However, even though they held the hearing quickly, the commission delayed their decision until after a court hearing on the case, where Baxter said she intended to prove Tuller was confined about her eviction notice and never owned her apartment.

Ex-Vatican diplomat accused in heroin bust

NEW YORK (AP) - After arrests for art smuggling and ticket scalping, the Rev. Lorenzo Zorzi claimed he was only trying to help his friends. These days the ex-Vatican diplomat has new friends, federal officials say - and they operate an international drug ring. Zorzi, 46, was identified Thursday as one of 39 people in the New York area involved in swapping cocaine for heroin with the Sicilian Mafia in what U.S. authorities described as the biggest international drug bust ever. For the Italian-born fugitive priest, it was just another twist in what was apparently a strange double life. "Among other criminal activities, Zorzi carries money derived from illegal sources back and forth between the U.S. and Italy," the heroin complaint against the priest charged. The priest also is heard in several videotaped conversations allegedly talking about the ring.

Mormon Church opens 158th general conference Saturday

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — As the Mormon Church prepares to open its 158th Annual General Conference on Saturday, a record missionary force is reaping more converts than ever, expanding the faith's foothold in once-forbidden black Africa.

If the usual practice is followed, leaders will announce during the two-day conference that convert baptisms reached an all-time high of about 250,000 during 1987, said spokesman Jerry Cahill.

Cahill said he did not have the exact figure, which usually is announced during the Saturday afternoon session.

Thousands of faithful Mormons from around the world are expected to pack the Tabernacle on Temple Square for the two-day conference, which features addresses by the governing First Presidency and other prominent leaders of the 6.5 million member Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Cahill said church President Ezra Taft Benson, 88, is in good health and is scheduled to deliver the conference's opening and closing sermons. He also will speak Saturday night to members of the all-male priesthood.

Sermons also will be delivered by Benson's two counselors in the First Presidency, Gordon B. Hinckley and Thomas S. Monson.

The church's growth can be attributed, at least in part, to a full-time missionary force of 34,200 men and women; the largest number ever to serve at a single time, Cahill said.

He said the number of missionaries has doubled within 14 years, and with the added manpower, the church is expanding its reach. Earlier this month, it was announced the church would open nine new missions later this year, including Liberia and the Mascarene Islands, about 600 miles east of Madagascar.

That increases to seven the number of missions the church operates in Africa and neighboring islands. Other African missions are based in Johannesburg, South Africa; Capetown, South Africa; Harare, Zimbabwe; Accra, Ghana; and Kinshasa, Zaire. The Zimbabwe and Zaire missions were opened within the past 12 months.

The expansion in Africa comes nearly 10 years after the late church President Spencer W. Kimball announced on June 8, 1978, that he had received a revelation from God directing him to lift a ban that had prohibited blacks of African descent from joining the priesthood.

Before then, missionaries were not permitted to seek converts among blacks, and there was no proselytizing in Africa outside the white populations in South Africa and Zimbabwe.

Since the ban was lifted, the church has gained 5,500 members in Nigeria and 3,000 in Ghana, according to the church's 1987 almanac. Membership, predominantly white, was listed at 13,100 in South Africa. The church also has about 1,400 members in Zimbabwe, where missionary work recently resumed after a lull that followed a political transition to majority rule.

"There's been good, steady growth in those countries. In (Liberia) there seems to be good interest," Cahill said. "We want to move as quickly as possible, but we tend to move judiciously. We want to be sure we can sustain the commitment."

While the church's prolific growth will be noted, it will not be a general theme for the conference, Cahill said.

He said advanced texts submitted by the scheduled speakers did not follow a central focus. Several speakers would discuss Easter, and the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

Others, he said, planned to speak on such topics as the importance of temples, where Mormons perform such ceremonies as marriage and baptisms for dead ancestors, and the need for faith.

"There's a good smattering of Easter themes since this Sunday is Easter. Really, there's nothing very startling ... teaching people the gospel, counseling people to remain faithful, some emphasis on work in the temple," Cahill said.

In addition to the more than 6,000 who will attend the conference in the Tabernacle, thousands more in the United States, Puerto Rico and Canada will watch live transmissions through the church's satellite system, which is linked to nearly 2,000 meeting houses.

For the Tabernacle audience, the proceedings will be translated from English into 27 languages, including Cambodian, Cantonese, Mandarin, Czech, Navajo, Samoan, Finnish and Greek.

Peace, pro-life rallies mark religious holiday

By The Associated Press

More than 100 demonstrators were arrested outside a Philadelphia clinic in a Good Friday anti-abortion protest, while dozens of peace activists were arrested in a Manhattan research institute and at a Texas weapons plant.

"We are calling on Christians to demonstrate the courage and a willingness to sacrifice by not allowing children to be killed before birth in our community on the day which Christians commemorate Christ's Passion and Death," said Patricia O'Brien, a spokeswoman for the Philadelphia demonstrators.

In New York, more than 2,000 anti-arms race marchers walked for peace at an annual Good Friday rally that ended with actor Martin Sheen, the Rev. Daniel Berrigan and dozens of others arrested for civil disobedience.

The Sixth Good Friday Peace March began at the United Nations and ended at the Riverside Research Institute, where the protest organizers, Pax Christi Metro-New York, said research is conducted on President Reagan's proposed "Star Wars" anti-missile program.

Pax Christi, spokesman Jim O'Grady estimated that 90 to 100 protesters were arrested after walking inside the institute and blocking the door in a non-violent protest. Police Officer Jim Coleman confirmed the arrests, but did not have exact figures.

Philadelphia police charged 116 people with disorderly conduct and blocking the street in front of a clinic that performs abortions, said Cpl. Robert Ward. The two offenses carry fines of $25 to $100 each, he said.

After police carried the demonstrators away, the clinic opened. Abortion opponents said they would continue a prayer vigil outside, but would not block the entrance.

Three peace activists in the Texas Panhandle near Amarillo stood in blowing snow and momentarily blocked traffic to the Panhandle weapons plant before being arrested, Carson County Sheriff Connie Reed said.

They were charged with obstructing a state highway, and were jailed under $2,000 bond each, said Reed.
