Education budgets become law unsigned

The Associated Press

BOISE — Gov. Cecil Andrus says he doesn't want to dignify the Republicans' education budgets by adding his signatures to the bills.

Instead, he said Tuesday, he will let both measures, which he vetoed the first time around, become law without his signature.

That means public schools will get state support of $356 million, $6 less than Andrus recommended, and higher education will get a basic budget of $105.9 million, more than $4 million under the Andrus recommendation.

Andrus told a news conference here he thought about vetoing the bills again, and making the Legislature reconvene to consider replacement measures. The 1988 legislative session adjourned Thursday night in its 81st day.

When he vetoed the education budgets the first time, Andrus urged people to call the Statehouse to urge their legislators to work for a higher appropriation. But despite thousands of calls received in the next few days, the House and Senate approved identical bills the second time around.

"Because of the total inflexibility on the part of the (GOP) leadership to even consider the wishes of the people, I decided it was no use" to veto the bills again, the governor said.

He said he will not sign the measures, because adding his signature would imply he agrees with the budgets, and the tax increases necessary to finance them.

"I do not agree with the way they raised the revenue, and there still is a possibility you will see them (the Legislature) back on the third floor later this year," Andrus said.

He said he will wait to see how revenue comes in to the state treasury before deciding whether a special session will be needed to correct a budget some officials say is at least $10 million in the red.

Andrus also signed into law a bill on domestic violence; two measures imposing tougher penalties on child abusers; a measure making it harder on repeat drunken drivers and a new "lemon" law for the purchasers of motor vehicles.

It makes it clear that "if you are stuck with a lemon, you can return it."

Pedestrian fatally injured in accident

Driver faces charge of manslaughter

By KEN ARMSTRONG Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Clinton Watson, former city supervisor of Hazelton, was formally charged with involuntary manslaughter Tuesday after hitting and killing a pedestrian while allegedly driving intoxicated.

Watson fatally struck Elvin Cory, 48, on Second Avenue North Monday night with the pickup truck he was driving, police said.

That same night, Watson figured prominently in a special meeting of the Hazelton City Council. One of the subjects discussed was Watson's employment status with the city, but council members on Tuesday were reluctant to discuss details.

Watson, 49, was removed as city supervisor on Feb. 15, according to Jo Ann Wolf, Hazelton city clerk. He started the job in July 1985.

At what proved to be an emotional arraignment Tuesday afternoon, bail for Watson was set at $5,000. More than 10 of Watson's friends and family members were packed into one side of the small courtroom, and several broke into tears after the proceedings.

Watson, who was released from custody Tuesday afternoon after bail was posted, was also charged with a misdemeanor count of failing to provide proof of insurance.

In addition to setting bail, Twin Falls Magistrate Judge Charles Brumbach suspended Watson's driving privileges and prohibited him from consuming alcohol.

Cory, a developmentally disabled resident of Twin Falls, was hit by the left front end of the truck driven by Watson, said Pat Bermingham, commander with the Twin Falls Department of Public Safety. The accident occurred at 8:30 p.m. in the 500 block of Second Avenue North.

Jim Mildon, assistant coroner for Twin Falls County, said Cory died of Victim netted cans, friends on his daily rounds

By KEN ARMSTRONG Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Elvin Cory collected cans and friends.

While walking home Monday night after completing one of his collection rounds, Cory was hit by a pickup truck and killed.

His face, if not his name, was familiar to many Twin Falls residents.

"He was pretty well-known throughout the downtown area," said Mike McIntyre, a social worker who knew Cory for approximately 15 years.

"It was not real complicated, but he did get around a lot."

Cory, 48, was developmentally disabled. Dressed in overalls, he regularly walked around town, making his living in a variety of ways. He sold his own, crude leather work. He sold bags which he patched together from scraps collected in garbage cans and on the streets. He sold hot pads made from yarn.

But, more than anything, Cory collected cans.

"He never really bothered anybody," said Leach-old Rolland McKendrick, who lives down the street from Cory's house. "He just went around collecting cans."

McIntyre, who works with the Adult & Child Development Center in Twin Falls, said that Cory, despite a speech impediment, made numerous friends during his daily rounds. "He was just a social person," McIntyre said.

Neighbors said Cory normally carried a couple of bags with him while searching through garbage cans. Monday night, when he was struck and killed, Cory was carrying a couple of knapsacks and a duffle bag, said Pat Bermingham, commander with the Twin Falls Department of Public Safety.

Cory was hit at approximately 8:30 p.m. in the 500 block of Second Avenue North. He was apparently crossing the street to return to his home, located on the same street, when he was killed.

"I've never seen him look when he crossed the street," said Jim Mildon, assistant coroner for Twin Falls County.

McKendrick and his mother, Brenda, were close to the accident when it occurred. They were working on their car and had their backs turned to the street, but they turned upon hearing the sound of screeching tires and witnessed the collision's immediate aftermath.

Dukakis wins in Wisconsin

The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Michael Dukakis won the Wisconsin primary Tuesday night, quelling Jesse Jackson's momentum in the Democratic presidential race and reaching for control in their struggle for the party's 1988 nomination.

"A great victory for us," Dukakis said. "I hope it's a sign of things to come." He was already in New York where the next primary is set for April 19.

The Massachusetts governor also celebrated a narrow victory in Colorado caucuses marked by a slow and controversial count and added to his slender lead in the competition for delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

The Wisconsin primary overshadowed Colorado's caucuses in terms of delegates as well as importance in the competition for momentum in the weeks to come.

Returns from 73 percent of Colorado's 2,784 precincts showed Dukakis with 3,974 delegates, or 45.4 percent, to Jackson's 3,453 delegates or 39.5 percent. Uncommitted delegates totaled 1,069 or 12.2 percent, and Gore received 236 delegates, or 2.7 percent.

Calculations based on the incomplete returns indicated Dukakis would win 21 national convention delegates from Colorado if he maintained his lead. Jackson would win 17 delegates and another seven would be uncommitted.

Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. ran a distant third in Wisconsin — despite a costly effort in search of an elusive breakthrough outside his native South — and pronounced himself "extremely pleased."

Illinois Sen. Paul Simon was a poor fourth and seemed likely to suspend active campaigning later in the week.

Jackson, campaigning in Arizona, said "I feel good. After 40 contests, I've come in No. 1 or No. 2 in 30 of them. I'm proud of that." He said that after two months of primaries and caucuses, "I'm leading by 300,000 votes" in the overall tabulation.

Jackson campaigned hard here as a follow-up on his Michigan caucus victory late last month. He was on the cover of Time and Newsweek and drew large and enthusiastic crowds in a state where whites make up more than 95 percent of the electorate.

The polls indicated that Jackson won the black vote overwhelmingly, as he has all year. They indicated he captured between 20 and 25 percent of the white vote in Wisconsin, far more than the 7 percent he claimed in

Hijackers seize Kuwaiti jet, seek release of 17

The Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Arab hijackers Tuesday forced a Kuwait Airways jumbo jet to land in northeastern Iran, threatened to blow it up and demanded that Kuwait release 17 Iranian prisoners.

They later released 25 of the 112 people on board.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said without elaboration that the 24 women were released early Wednesday after negotiations with Iran's deputy prime minister, Ali Reza Moayeri. A man in poor health was freed Tuesday.

Among the other passengers were three members of Kuwait's royal family and a passenger with a U.S. passport on a flight from Bangkok to Kuwait. The gunmen warned the Kuwaiti royals would be "in imminent danger" if Kuwait refused to free the prisoners, IRNA reported.

But the U.S. State Department said it believed no Americans were aboard. In Washington, spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said the U.S. government urged Iran to see that the hijackers are caught and tried.

The hijackers, brandishing pistols and hand grenades, identified themselves only as "Arabs." But their demands echoed those of Iranian-backed Shiite Muslims holding American hostages in Lebanon.

The Kuwaiti government rejected the hijackers' demand to release 17 prisoners, calling it "blackmail" but said it would listen to other demands, the Kuwait News Agency reported.

After an emergency session, Kuwait's government said it will send a three-man delegation on Wednesday morning to help Iranian authorities secure the passengers' release.

Iran asked Kuwait to send a high-ranking delegation to Mushtah in northeastern Iran for direct talks with the hijackers.

The hijackers earlier demanded fuel for the aircraft and threatened to blow it up if the Iranians approached. IRNA initially said the Iranians refused the plane, but then said the gunmen were still requesting fuel.

Elders, Baby Boomers pull nation's median age past 32

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — America's population is older than ever, with maturing Baby Boomers and the growing number of elderly pulling the median age past 32 years for the first time, new Census Bureau figures showed Tuesday.

"The 'graying of America' is documented by its increasing age. The median age was 32.1 years on July 1, 1987," bureau statistician Luisa Miller reported.

Rising from 31.8 in 1986, it was the highest median age in U.S. history. Median is the point at which half of all Americans are older than that age and half younger.

Racially, the median age for whites hit 33 for the first time, up from 32.7 in 1986. Black median age was 27.2 in 1987, up from 26.9 and the first time that group had surpassed

McIntyre, who works with the several factors, including the growing number of elderly Americans, the maturing of the post-World War II Baby Boom and the small "Baby Bust" generation that followed.

The median age reached 30 for the first time in 1950, but the rapid growth of the Baby Boom that was then occurring pulled it down in the following years.

As that huge segment of the nation ages, though, it is moving the median in the other direction.

The Census Bureau reported that the 35-44 age group, the leading edge of the Baby Boom generation, has been the fastest-growing segment of the population, since 1980, up by more than one-third.

And as improved medical care extends lifespans, the next-oldest-growing groups are those 85 and over and those 75 to 84, the report said.

The Boomers boosted the 35-44 age group by 33.8 percent between 1980 and 1987, to some 34.4 million people, the bureau reported.

The 25-34 age group remains the most numerous with 43.5 million members, but that is up only 16.8 percent from 1980, the study noted.

And when Americans currently in that age group move on, there are few replacements. Indeed, between 1989 and 1997, the 18-24 group declined by 2.7 percent to 27.9 million, and those aged 14 to 17 fell 11 percent.

Nicaragua, U.S. may confer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top U.S. official will go to Central America on Wednesday to discuss the possibility of opening regional talks that would bring U.S.-Nicaraguan diplomatic contacts for the first time since 1985, administration sources say.

State Department deputy spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley confirmed Tuesday that U.S. special envoy Morris Busby will visit Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras and Costa Rica to discuss the changed situation in Nicaragua.

Other officials, speaking only on condition they will not be named, said Busby also will discuss the timing and appropriateness of a new diplomatic initiative for the region in which both the United States and Nicaragua's leftist government would take part.

The two countries had direct talks during the latter half of 1984, mostly in the Mexican resort city of Manzanillo. But the United States broke off the discussions in early 1985, contending that the Sandinistas were intransigent and saying that the Central American peace process then under-way was a more appropriate forum for dealing with regional issues. Since then, except for exchanges of pleasantries at social gatherings, officials from the two countries have not had serious contact. This is consistent with the Reagan administration's view that the Sandinista government's principal adversaries are the Contra rebels and not the United States.

The Sandinistas, meanwhile, have espoused the opposite view, contending that the U.S.-backed Contras are a U.S. creation and that there can be no solution to the Nicaraguan conflict without an accommodation between Washington and Managua.

Echoing a policy that dates back to 1985, Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto wrote last week that the United States "should open bilateral negotiations with Nicaragua to deal with security issues and to normalize relations between our two countries."

Last November, President Reagan indicated new flexibility in his attitude on negotiations with the Sandinistas. He said Secretary of State

George P. Shultz would be ready to meet with delegations from Nicaragua and other Central American countries once serious negotiations between the Sandinistas and the Contra rebels were under way.

That condition appears to have been satisfied by the temporary cease-fire agreement reached March 23 between the two sides.

The U.S. officials said they do not believe that arrangements for regional negotiations will be completed by the conclusion of Busby's visit.

One official said the administration wants to proceed slowly on this issue in order not to undercut the direct negotiations the Sandinistas and the Contras have planned for next week in Managua.

"We don't want to create a competing forum," the official said. In their Managua talks, the warring parties will attempt to work out a final settlement to the Nicaraguan conflict, now more than six years old.

A senior administration official in Washington said the vacationing president said conditions for regional talks have not been met.

Puerto Rican National Guardsmen participate in training exercise near Panama Canal

U.S. troops may still go to Panama

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan's national security adviser said Tuesday he would not rule out the possibility of sending more American troops to Panama as the United States considers new steps to force the ouster of military strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

"We have no immediate plans (to send more forces) but I don't think it eliminates that possibility," Lt. Gen. Colin L. Powell said.

At the same time, a senior administration official said the 15,000-member Panamanian Defense Forces which Noriega heads should remove him or ask him to step aside. "I think it would be a good thing for them to do," said the official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

As the military chief, Noriega is the power behind the Panamanian government. The United States has been seeking his removal since he was indicted earlier this year in Florida on drug trafficking charges.

Meanwhile, some 1,300 American troops began arriving at U.S. military installations in Panama to augment the 10,000 troops stationed at the U.S. Southern Command there. The Pentagon says the deployment is only to protect U.S. lives and interests in Panama.

"With the additional forces being brought in today, I think there is a reasonable degree of security of American installations and I see no increased, immediate threat to the American citizens living in Panama," Powell said.

Reagan, vacationing at his mountaintop ranch near Santa Barbara, was briefed on developments in Panama in a telephone conversation with Powell. Later, the national security adviser answered questions from reporters at an ocean-side hotel.

Contras get speedy aid delivery

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior official said Tuesday the Reagan administration is pushing ahead with plans for speedy delivery of humanitarian aid to Nicaragua's Contras, but the Sandinistas claim U.S. assistance to the rebels would be illegal.

Alan Woods, administrator of the Agency for International Development, said plans are being prepared for air drops of the food and other aid approved for the rebels last week by Congress.

The temporary cease-fire agreement signed by the leftist Sandinista government and the Contras allows for deliveries of humanitarian aid to the rebels.

Woods said Sandinista cooperation is required and said the issue is being discussed between government and rebel negotiators.

"We would strongly hope that the Nicaraguan government would be sensitive and prepare to allow humanitarian assistance — food, medical supplies, clothing and shelter — to move without interruption," Woods said.

But Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega on Monday called the U.S. aid package that was approved by Congress illegal, saying "we cannot accept any type of aid from the Contras because it would be legitimizing the interventionist policy of the United States."

Woods said preparations are being made for deliveries to rebels deployed outside Nicaragua — presumably in Honduras — within the next few days. Contras based inside Nicaragua will receive aid once they move to cease-fire enclaves agreed to in ongoing negotiations.

Dealer tells of drug pay-offs

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. law enforcement officials were paid to look the other way while huge amounts of marijuana were shipped to the United States from Colombia, a convicted marijuana dealer told Congress on Tuesday.

The marijuana was moved aboard planes as large as a DC-6, along with shrimp boats and — on one occasion in 1983 — a barge into a Louisiana port, Michael P. Vogel testified to a Senate subcommittee.

Law enforcement officials were paid off "when it had to be done," Vogel said. "Usually, they were given $50,000 or $60,000 to do nothing," he said. "They were paid to look the other way."

Vogel did not name any of the officials he said received payments. Vogel's testimony to the Senate Foreign Relations terrorism and narcotics subcommittee was part of the panel's ongoing investigation of drug smuggling from Latin America.

On one occasion in 1979 or 1980, Vogel said, he and several other members of his drug smuggling organization met in Panama with Omar Torrijos, then that nation's leader, and Manuel Noriega, to discuss using a small island off the Panamanian coast for transshipping drugs.

Torrijos was killed in a 1981 plane crash and eventually was succeeded by Noriega, who has been charged in Florida with involvement in the drug trade. Noriega has denied the charges and is resisting U.S. efforts to push him out of office.

The two Panamanians "were being extremely greedy," said Vogel, since they were seeking payoffs of up to $100,000 per plane load of drugs.

Vogel, 37, pleaded guilty in 1986 to charges arising from his 14-year career as a drug smuggler. He told the subcommittee he is now serving a 12½-year prison term. Vogel, a native of Detroit, said he became involved in the drug business while he was a student at the University of Miami. He brokered a sale for a friend and "I made a good amount of money and I and he both. I was off and running."

Vogel told the committee he only dealt in marijuana because "I have

MICHAEL VOGEL

Claims drug payments made moral payments with cocaine.

Vogel declined to say how much money he had personally made from his drug business, but said the organizations in which he was involved made hundreds of millions of dollars.

For example, the barge load of marijuana was worth $90 million, and his organization only paid $30 million for the drug, meaning a $60 million profit, Vogel said.

Jury questioning goes on for Zaccaro trial

RUTLAND, Vt. (AP) — Potential jurors questioned Tuesday in the cocaine trial of John Zaccaro Jr. said their judgment would not be influenced by the fact that the defendant's mother is former vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro.

One potential juror told attorneys she thought the press had "picked on" Ferraro's family while she was a candidate in 1984, and she thought the attacks had carried over to Zaccaro after his arrest.

The questioning was watched by six reporters one day after Judge Francis McCaffrey imposed and then lifted a gag order.

Most of the jurors questioned said they had read newspaper accounts of the case since Zaccaro was charged in 1986 with selling one-quarter gram of cocaine to an undercover police agent. Zaccaro, 24, was then a senior at Middlebury College.

Scrutiny of Jackson is long overdue

Until he took several states on a divided Super Tuesday, ran well in Illinois and won the Michigan Democratic caucuses, not too many people outside Jesse Jackson's own camp of followers took his very seriously as a presidential candidate.

But suddenly, Jackson's visibility is rising as nervous mainline Democrats wonder what a Jackson nomination would mean for the presidential campaign and what his election would mean for the country.

That scrutiny, in our view, is long overdue. Jackson has escaped it in the past partly because of challengers' reluctance to be labeled "racist" through the mere act of criticism.

But with success comes both more press attention, as well as more examination of an individual's past performance.

The scrutiny can be intense, but in the choice of presidential candidates, we think it is warranted. There seems to be plenty of nervousness on Jackson's part, as well there should be.

We think a close examination of his record will show that he is, at best, only marginally qualified to be President of the United States.

He has never held public office, not even as dog-catcher. His record as a manager is weak; his project PUSH, a Chicago anti-poverty program has been wracked by mismanagement. His personal life seems to be at least as interesting as Gary Hart's, if not as well known yet.

His exercise in personal diplomacy has resulted in some successes, as when he helped extricate a downed American flyer in the Middle East. But his contact with people like Castro and now Noreiga raises serious doubts about his understanding of American foreign interests and how they should be conducted.

On the domestic front, his economic program is a vague mix of give-aways, taxation plans and expanded welfare programs; if enacted, it would bankrupt the nation in a year.

Indeed, it is hard to imagine a major political party in the United States would actually nominate someone so wholly unqualified for the office. The selection of a president requires money, power negotiations, and scrutiny of qualifications. Whether Jackson can pull these together remains to be seen.

After hearings, look around

The SIS hearings are over. Charges and counter charges have been made and insults exchanged. Now we wait to see what the Department of Energy decides to do about their Special Isotope Separation project proposed for the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

While we wait, let's look at what happened and what we learned about ourselves during the hearings process. We learned how easily the people of Idaho can be divided over issues of common concern. It became "us" versus "them."

But aren't we all concerned about clean air and water, the economy, peace and the actions of our federal government? Aren't we all sick of the hypocrisy that has characterized decision making during the 1980s? If so, why can't we all see the dangers posed by the SIS project?

Maybe we've become blinded by greed. Throw out the carrot of more money and some of us will fall for almost anything. We were told two years ago that Idaho's new Right-to-Work law would create jobs and bolster the economy.

Has it? Did it keep Upperware in Jerome? Did it help the workers dislocated by the recent sales of supermarket chains? How many of us are earning more money? Who profited?

We're told now the SIS will create jobs and generate more tax revenues. But almost all work done at the INEL is tax-exempt. Many of the new jobs will be filled by people already employed there. And where's the money going to come from? You and me — the taxpayers.

Do we want to invest in the production of more nuclear weapons at a time when the Secretary of Energy himself admits we're "washed in plutonium" and our government is seeking nuclear arms reduction? Does this make sense?

Let's see the SIS scam for what it is — an illusion created with smoke and mirrors by a government that's become dissociated from the people. If we're so desperate for jobs, why not produce more gas and biological weapons? Or perhaps create the nation's largest abortion clinic here in Idaho. Wouldn't that also produce jobs?

Isn't it time for us all to work together, disregarding ideology and greed, emphasizing honesty and ingenuity, to create a better Idaho. Divided, we'll go nowhere.

And isn't it time for The Times-News editorial board to take a position on the SIS controversy that considers the recent public hearings? The paper's been strangely silent. Where's the leadership we look for in a community newspaper?

A chance to reevaluate a life

In reading your article IGA Rehire, I was appalled. Try talking to someone who has been out of work since 3-12-88. I'd felt the rumble and had been looking for work. After four weeks of 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 and going back the fourth time, I found the facts to be, A. "Come on back we can't put you on the schedule this week, but..." B. The bottom line from two very special, up front managers was "We are looking for young married girls, who want a few extras, lipstick, clothing, who we don't have to worry about giving them hours to support themselves."

I came downstairs on a Wednesday morning to senselessness, runaround. In complete despair, I called mental health after several "to no avail" phone calls, head pounding, I was stymied. (Our union had prepared us for this bottom drop out feeling. I, No alcohol, it's a depressant. I'll hit all resources and use them). Mental health sent me to Discovery CSI, which met my needs. They retrained my head and I am finding my potential. At the employment office I got personal service and am now working on part time jobs, hotel maids (3.35 hr. a good hot meal), Avon sales, baby-sitting and possibility of waitress. I now have loans coming in and a new career to look forward to. I am constantly looking for better hours and dollars.

My ole' boss at Safeway (never was a farmer jerks to me) didn't let me go because of my performance. I look back now and I can see how I grew resources and use them. They could count on me for advice from color-of-paint, to head committees and etc.

Many of our laws in Idaho are primitive, to say the least. Having put 32 years into unemployment, I can only draw from the past year, in which injuries shortened my checks to a meager amount.

To shorten this, I thank you for the opportunity to thank all of my many new and old friends, for their support and suggestions. Those who said "Well what are you going to do about it now?"

This is a splendid opportunity to reevaluate your life and go for it. It's rough but then so was it for our grandparents. When you're sprung, it's time to spring forward. Good luck.

Check prices before shopping

I am writing in regard to the article I read in Sunday's paper, 4-3-88, about the wages and part time help. IGA on Main and in the Lynwood Mall said they could not pay.

First let me ask them how is anybody going to live on part time jobs on the wages they pay. Second, I would like everyone to know on 3-23-88 my wife and I stopped in the IGA on Main Street for some Minute Maid orange juice. We looked at the price $1.59 a can. She said that was a little high, but we took two cents.

On 3-24-88 we went to Albertson's and bought six cans, same brand, same size for 99 cents each. That is 60 cents higher. So if they can't pay better wages, they could at least stay in-line with other stores.

The bottom line is: the public had better check prices before they shop.

City district voting preferable

Here we go again. Regarding your editorial in April 3rd edition, I wasn't really surprised that you would take the stand against district voting for city council elections. It is clear that the Times-News never wants change or progress to happen in our community.

You say that district voting would pit neighborhood against neighborhood. As is now, we have representatives of only one segment of our city. I see the only bickering that would occur would be between candidates.

Maybe it would be that "elitist" in the city of Twin Falls would finally be broken. Maybe more direct representation would take place. Maybe when a citizen has a problem he or she would have a representative to turn to instead of a reply, such as, it's not my committee.

You state that Twin Falls has not grown enough. Could it be that with district and fair representation that we would see an expanded tax base, some new business and industry?

In my opinion it's time for a change. When was the last time a council member was elected from the South Park area? Why are there no schools in the South Park area and why is there no polling place in the South Park area? Why is there no swimming pool in the South Park area?

Maybe if we had district voting we would see growth and development in all parts of our city and not just one small corner. Rejecting district voting is almost like rejecting the United States Constitution.

A question for the Nez Perce

In regards to the articles in your paper on March 31, 1988, concerning the steelhead problems in Idaho, I would like to ask a question: What are the methods that the Nez Perce Tribal Council uses to count the number of fish that it's own (conservation minded) tribal members take each season?

As you reported in the article "Biologists seek cause on poor steelhead run," it states that Nez Perce fishermen have taken 798 fish. I wonder if that figure includes the eight steelhead gaffed, the three fish left dead and the six fish left injured in the Dworshak National Hatchery.

Stallings has a good idea

Among the outstanding resources Idaho possesses: the islands and banks of a natural river, flowing free and unobstructed from Heise up to the Palisades Dam that is home to fish in the stream and wildlife along the shores, that's one underrated resource.

Another is a congressman who appreciates the river and has devised a sensible plan to keep it un-tampered with, as beautiful as it is today, while not costing taxpayers a bundle of acquisition money.

Rep. Richard Stallings' proposal to Grand Targhee Ski Resort owner, Mory Bergmyer, to purchase critical wildlife habitat along the Snake River and exchange it for national forest lands adjacent to his resort across the line in Wyoming, is innovative, sensitive to Idaho's needs and still respects the property rights.

As Bergmyer said: "This is a chance to preserve pristine wilderness and promote tourism for Idaho." Increased traffic along the Highway 26 Wyoming access couldn't fail to benefit Bonneville County. County Commission Chairman Clyde Burtenshaw supports the proposal as a long term benefit to the county and its recreation business. Bergmyer plans to accentuate the wilderness quality of his resort, and that's good for all eastern Idaho.

Once in a while a great notion appears in Washington, please, fishermen, sportsmen and lovers of the outdoors, express your support to Congressman Stallings for the proposal, and let the naysaying Senators who wish they had thought of it first, go down the road talking to themselves.

Magic Valley legislators earn note for work during session

BOISE — Good morning and welcome to the 1988 Idaho Statehouse Reporters Legislative Awards.

A standard feature of the Lewiston Morning Tribune, the roster of achievements is based upon nominations made by about a dozen Capitol correspondents.

Most, but not all, of the legislative press corps participate. In so doing, they set aside their own political views and gauge lawmakers on their abilities — or lack thereof.

So, on the 76th day of the 1988 Idaho Legislature, we bring you:

- The Best and the Brightest — Rep. Christopher R. Hooper, R-Boise.
- Tied for second are Reps. Mack W. Neibaur, R-Paul, and James F. Stoecheff, D-Sandpoint, and Sens. Phil Batt, R-Wilder, and Michael D. Crapo, R-Idaho Falls.
- The 1-Percenter (Mentally) — Sen. Claire Wetherell, D-Mountain Home.
- Tied for second place were Reps. Carl P. Braun, D-Orofino, and Waldo Martens, R-Jerome. Honorable mention to Reps. Claude Judd, D-Orofino, and Ron Sluter, R-Boise.
- The Most Effective — Senate President

Marty Trillhaase

Pro Tem James E. Risch, R-Boise.

Meese fills 2 of 3 vacancies in Justice Department

WASHINGTON (AP) - Attorney General Edwin Meese III on Tuesday announced replacements for the No. 2 and No. 3 positions in the Justice Department, but was unable to fill the post vacated by last week's protest resignation of Assistant Attorney General William Weld.

Meese said he would recommend John C. Shepherd, a past president of the American Bar Association, and Francis A. Keating II, a top Treasury Department law enforcement official, for the two top-level Justice Department posts.

Shepherd would replace Deputy Attorney General Arnold Burns. Burns resigned a week ago along with Weld, then head of the criminal division, out of concern that the nearly 11-month criminal investigation of Meese by independent counsel James C. McKay was hurting the Justice Department operations and its image, department sources said.

Shepherd, who was ABA president in 1984-85 and currently is a partner in a St. Louis law firm, "will be a highly distinguished and most welcome addition to the Justice Department family as my second in command," Meese told a news conference.

Keating, 44, currently the assistant treasury secretary for enforcement, will replace Associate Attorney General Stephen Trotter and "can hit the ground running" in the Justice Department's work in combatting illegal drugs, Meese said. Trotter is leaving Washington to become a federal appeals court judge.

Keating is a former U.S. attorney in Oklahoma and an FBI agent. Meese called Keating and Shepherd "two distinguished men" and said they will serve in an acting capacity until they are confirmed by the Senate.

Such nominations normally are announced by the president, but Meese announced them at the Justice Department.

The president asked me to go ahead and make these announcements today from here because the president is at the ranch in California, Meese said.

Asked whether he had had second thoughts about taking the job, Keating said: "Certainly the events of last week made me as a professional pause, but I have every confidence in the leadership of the department and the attorney general. I think with our new team here the operation of the department will continue."

Meese made the announcements after Philadelphia lawyer Arlin Adams and a Labor Department official declined to be nominated earlier in the day.

Adams said a heavy caseload at his Philadelphia law firm prevented him from taking the job which Shepherd agreed to take. Meanwhile, Meese was unable to find a replacement for Weld, department sources said.

Meese said he probably will announce a recommended replacement for Weld after the attorney general returns from a week-long trip to South America to discuss the war on drugs with officials in several countries there.

A Justice Department source said Salvatore R. Martoche, now an assistant secretary in the Labor Department, had rejected a request from Meese to take the job of assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division.

Martoche decided not to take the job "because of the taint factor" relating to the continuing criminal investigation of Meese, said the source, speaking on condition of an anonymity.

February weather affects performance

Airlines improve on-time record

WASHINGTON (AP) - U.S. airlines improved their on-time record in February, but one of every four flights continued to be late as weather conditions played a major role in how close a carrier was able to stay to schedule.

The Transportation Department said Tuesday that 74.7 percent of the flights reported by 14 major airlines in February arrived within 15 minutes of schedule, an increase from the 69.2 percent the previous month.

The airlines with the best record, however, also were those that concentrated flights in the Southwest and West, where weather conditions were generally good during the month.

According to the department, nine of every 10 Pacific Southwest Airlines arrived within 15 minutes of schedule, the government's margin for a flight to be considered on-time. America West and Southwest Airlines followed with arrival rates of better than 88 percent.

Northwest Airlines, which operates largely in the northern tier of states, had the worst on-time record among the 14 airlines, with 61.7 percent of its flights arriving within 15 minutes of schedule.

Northwest officials attributed the large number of delays to poor weather and said the airline's figures improved to 75.4 percent in March when weather improved. Those figures will be released officially by the government next month.

"We encountered unusually severe weather in much of our system during the first 21 days of February," said William Wren, vice president for corporate relations at Northwest.

Other airlines with a less than 70 percent on-time record were Continental Airlines, with 67.7 percent, and Trans World Airlines, with 69.4 percent. American Airlines had the best performance among the large carriers, with 80.8 percent of its flight arriving on time.

The report excludes delays caused by mechanical problems, but includes those attributed to poor weather.

The number of reports on mishandled bags filed with airlines declined during February, averaging 8.75 reports for every 1,000 passengers flown, compared with 11.39 percent in January.

Meanwhile, complaints to the Transportation International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

At a brief hearing, Eastern's president, Philip Bates, said the financially troubled carrier had abandoned its plans to sell the shuttle to a newly created subsidiary of its parent, Texas Air Corp.

Air Shuttle LP, the subsidiary that was to buy the Boston-to-New York-to-Washington shuttle, withdrew its application to complete Department's consumer affairs office about air travel increased slightly during March to 2,604 from 2,235 in February.

The department releases the on-time arrival statistics for February at the same time as the consumer complaint statistics, although the complaint information covers a different month.

Continental, Eastern Airlines and Northwest had the highest complaint rate in both March and during the first three months of 1988. There were 18 complaints for every 100,000 passengers at Continental during March, 16.14 complaints at Eastern and 12.37 complaints at Northwest, according to the department.

The Orlando, Fla., airport had the worst arrival record in February with only 62.7 percent of the flight arriving on time, followed by Detroit at 64 percent.

The best arrival record was recorded at Phoenix, Ariz., and Las Vegas, Nev. Both airports had on-time arrival rates of nearly 83 percent. Charlotte, N.C., recorded an 80.7 on-time percentage.

The $225 million sale that was filed with the Transportation Department. Bates said.

Pratt ruled that the proposed sale violated the terms of a 1987 injunction that required Eastern to maintain current working conditions. That injunction prohibited Eastern from transferring ground crews to another subsidiary.

The IAM claimed the proposed transactions were intended to undermine the union.

Hit teams may be prowling

WASHINGTON (AP) - Anti-apartheid activists in the United States say they have been warned by the FBI they might be targeted by South African government hit teams.

The warnings have taken on special importance in the face of last week's assassination in Paris of Dulcie September, a South African anti-apartheid activist. The Washington representative of the African National Congress, which is fighting to topple the white minority South African government, the activists say. The ANC blamed the South African government for Ms. September's shooting death but South Africa denied the allegation. Police sources in Paris said the killing appeared to be the work of a professional, and French President Francois Mitterrand said he would ask South African authorities about the attack.

UNDER A SILK SARI

Q. What does the traditional woman of India wear under her sari?
A. A sort of vest that doesn't cover the waist. And a long half-slip that ties with drawstrings. Remarkable costume, the sari. Takes 6,000 silks to make one.

Q. What kind of cars does the fictional secret agent James Bond drive?
A. An Aston Martin DB4 and a Lotus Esprit.

Q. In 1970, grocery stores sold 70 kinds of fruits and vegetables. Now they sell about 200. To what do the experts credit this huge increase in variety?
A. Immigration.

Q. In a heavy sea, how deep would a diver have to go to get to calm water?
A. About 60 feet.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You will have some restless longings to proffer, so listen carefully to this perturbation. Take it easy tonight, and get plenty of rest.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): It is very important that you stop procrastinating about some important obligation. A long-time friend can help with this.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): If you have been somewhat concerned about a health matter, this is a good time to get the necessary appointments with professionals.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Routine chores may seem somewhat boring today, but handle them quickly so you will have the time for more important matters.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Get busy answering letters and paying bills which have been piling up for some time. Meet with a friend you want as a business partner.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Focus your attention on financial and property matters today, and improve them considerably. Take it easy tonight, and get to bed early.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Try to add to your personal progress today, and use more efficient methods than in the past. If you go out tonight, stick with close friends.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Be certain to keep any promises you have made to your mate, or a big argument could ensue. Be more affectionate to this person.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Even if it is a bit difficult to handle, do a favor for a friend who is in a tight spot. You will be repaid in spades for your effort.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): A superior has been keeping an eye on your work; so be sure to put your best foot forward. Don't let anyone disrupt your schedule today.

If your Child is Born Today... He or she will always be interested in having a good time, but should be taught to combine business with pleasure so the energy will be used constructively. Make sure your progeny's education includes foreign languages, as much travel is possible later in life.

Forbes takes it all in good humor

BEDMINSTER, N.J. (AP) - Multimillionaire Malcolm Forbes is not pointing a finger at anyone, even though he might have a reason to be piqued at Outlaw Biker magazine for creative cropping of his photo.

The magazine, which features topless women, tattoo artists and bikers in black leather, carries a 10-page piece on the publisher of Forbes magazine, himself an avid biker.

A Forbes publicist said Monday his 68-year-old boss did not pose in the obscene manner depicted on the cover, but said the image was cropped from a photo that had shown him with actress Elizabeth Taylor showing off the skull-and-crossbones rings they exchanged in New Jersey in July.

Forbes' ring is on his middle finger.

The piece was largely complimentary, but publicist Donald Garson said Forbes "didn't expect that they would do what they did."

Is he shocked? "No."

Astronaut foresees colonies on Mars

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) - Former astronaut Harrison Schmitt predicts today's children will live to see humans establish a settlement on the planet Mars.

"In the process, we will probably begin to mine the moon," Schmitt said Monday night during a speech at the University of Montana.

Schmitt, 52, who visited the moon in December 1972 during the last U.S. manned lunar mission, said Mars will be settled because "it's in the human spirit."

More practically, the Soviets are already planning to do it," he said. "I can tell you if the Soviets or the U.S. will settle Mars, but human beings will settle it."

"These are well-traveled lobsters," Hill said. With his wife, Vickie, he accompanied the two lobsters on their flight Monday from Philadelphia to Portland.

"We shouldn't be catching lobsters this size. Maine is the only state that's doing anything to protect them, and that's why we're here," Hill said.

Maine law protects lobsters with body shells longer than five inches, covering crustaceans heavier than 4 to 5 pounds. It is the only state with a legal limit on the maximum size of lobsters.

Shirley, whose age has been estimated at 40 to 125 years old, and her smaller companion were rescued from a Philadelphia man who wanted to serve them for Easter dinner.

Col. Robert Fogg, chief of the Bureau of Marine Patrol of the state Department of Marine Resources, said the lobsters had apparently gotten snagged in the nets of a dragger and were landed in Rhode Island.

The lobsters had been trucked from Long Island, N.Y., to Hill's store, where retired carpenter Art Miller bought them for $287.

After animal rights activists took up the lobsters' cause, Hill persuaded Miller to take 45 pounds of smaller lobsters instead. Pity Not Cruelty Inc., an animal rights group, arranged to turn the creatures loose.

North Pole walker views environment

NEW YORK (AP) - Robert Swan, who walked to the South Pole two years ago, said he hopes to use his planned walk to the North Pole next year to highlight environmental concerns.

The planned 66-day trip, which Swan said will make him the first person to walk to both poles, will start March 1, 1989, nearly 80 years after Matthew Henson and Commander Robert Peary first reached the pole on April 6, 1909.

"I'm here because I really care," the 31-year-old British explorer said Monday at a press conference of the Explorers Club, where Peary was twice president.

Swan will hold an international contest for teenagers to write about their environmental concerns. Four winners will be sent to the group's base camp at Cape Columbia, Canada, to see the six-man team depart.

Hamlin distracts tabloid publicity

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) - Actor Harry Hamlin says he still distrusts publicity after he made a lot of tabloid headlines during the early part of his career.

When he went back to the store a few weeks later, Hamlin said a clerk assured him the person responsible for the story had been fired.

"I told him I didn't take it seriously and I left. Sure enough, two weeks later, there's the article: 'Furious Harry Hamlin storms into store, screaming at one salesperson after another, demanding to know who leaked story.'"

Mayor's brother also goes to jail

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - George Cisneros, a brother of Mayor Henry Cisneros, was among about 80 people arrested Monday in a citywide crackdown on residents with unpaid traffic tickets.

Cisneros did not appear to appreciate the local television camera crew that arrived at his home at the same time as police.

Bruce Maniscalco, a cameraman for KSAT television, said Cisneros turned on the water to a lawn sprinkler and remarked that he wanted to get the lens wet.

"I got my shirt and pants wet and he gave me a look like a kid who wanted to meet me after school," Maniscalco said.

The law knows no special treatment, Mayor Cisneros said, commenting on Monday's incident.

2 lobsters avoid becoming dinner

Back in sea after storybook journey

CAPE ELIZABETH, Maine (AP) - With the flick of a tail and the wave of a claw, two huge lobsters were freed Monday in the Atlantic Ocean safe from seafood lovers after a roundabout landlubbers tour of the Northeast.

"Shirley," a 25-pound male lobster, and "Bob," his 190-pound companion, went down into the sea off foggy Portland Head Light.

They had apparently already been hearing the call of the wild and snacked on seafood in the tank where they were being kept before their release.

They were real frisky," Marine Patrol Officer Donald K. Lockhart Jr. said. "They put a quibble in (large clam) in there and the big one just snipped it up like it was butter. They left a crab in there overnight and it was gone this morning."

The two behemoths almost became a very expensive Easter dinner in Pennsylvania before an unlikely combination of animal rights activists, seafood dealers and state officials came to the rescue.

A 30-minute boat ride from Portland marked a storybook ending to the rescue mission.

Dana Neuts, retail manager of Harbor Fish Market in Portland, and Kevin Hill, owner of Maine Line Seafood Co. in the Philadelphia suburb of Ardmore, had the honor of putting the monster crustaceans into the water.

Neuts grabbed Shirley's baseball mitt-sized claws and Hill took the tail, and the two gently lowered her over the side of the 35-foot Maine Marine Patrol boat. Bob went into the same protected cove moments later.

The two men who make their living from selling seafood agreed it seemed strange to be returning it to the sea, but in the case of

Dispute over attorney fees snags dismissal

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The pornography lawsuit everyone wanted dismissed is going to trial.

Fifth District Judge James J. May recently ordered the three parties in a lawsuit over the adult Front Page Book Store to send him available trial dates.

The Front Page, its opponents and its landlords have all asked May to dismiss the case, but arguments over attorney's fees prevented May from actual dismissal.

The Front Page was willing simply to dismiss the suit and accept its fees after it moved out of its Blue Lakes Boulevard location in late January.

Determined Citizens Against Pornography (DCAG) a not-for-profit group that filed the lawsuit, also wanted to dismiss the lawsuit and accept its attorney's fees.

However, Jay and Barbara Moyle of Filer, who rented the building to the Front Page, said they wanted DCAG to pay their attorney's fees.

DCAG refused and May said the trial must go on.

All parties appear to desire that the action be dismissed. May wrote in his opinion ordering the case to trial. But the judge ruled conditions attached to the dismissal by the various parties prevented him from granting the dismissal.

"Plaintiffs have indicated a desire to proceed to trial in the event their motion to dismiss with each party bearing his own costs is denied," May wrote.

May went on to say dismissing the pornography lawsuit would be improper unless certain conditions were imposed, such as making DCAG pay the Moyle's attorney's fees.

Brent Nielson, representing DCAG, said although his clients are willing to go to trial, he has some misgivings.

"I think it's too bad this case has to be tried now that there's no nuisance," the Twin Falls lawyer said. "However, we feel really confident on the obscenity issue."

DCAG say the materials sold by the Front Page, including magazines and videos, fail obscenity standards laid down by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Using a broadly written Idaho statute, they say the obscene materials justify closing the Moyle's property down for one year and forcing the Moyles to turn over all rent money to the state. They also want to confiscate all of the Front Page's inventory.

The statute allows private citizens to take action on behalf of the state of Idaho.

DCAG had already offered to let the Moyles out of the lawsuit in return for a $5,000 payment.

McCabe's ready for the showdown

Lawyer suggests Idaho First may have been involved in a land grab

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

WHITE ARROW RANCH — Sitting on the deck of an Idaho ranch house, Boston lawyer Edwin A. McCabe doesn't look or act like a slick city shyster about to punch an Idaho bank in the nose.

It's even hard getting McCabe to talk about himself.

McCabe, known for lender-liability litigation, including a case against more than 20 banks on behalf of the billionaire Hunt family of Texas, wanted to talk about his latest case involving the infant area of lender liability law.

Robert Erkins, who owns the White Arrow Ranch about 10 miles north of Bliss and at the foot of a scenic ravine, recently hired McCabe to fight a lawsuit filed against Erkins and several others by Idaho First National Bank.

"The only theory that applies easily to all the facts was this bank wanted this land with that free-flowing geothermal source," McCabe said. "It's called a land grab. This is not typical conduct for a bank."

McCabe, a big man with a graying beard and soft voice, said his lender-liability theory could be wrong, but he wants to find out why the bank acted the way it did while dealing with Erkins.

Idaho First Vice President of Public Information Dianne Pierce said the bank's policy is not to comment on pending litigation.

Idaho First wants $2.2 million for a loan it claims went bad.

According to Erkins' counterclaim, the bank should pay Erkins $20 million in damages to compensate Erkins' loss and $65 million in punitive damages.

McCabe says the Bliss Valley Foods lawsuit is an unusual situation, and he decided to take it partly because he trusts and respects Erkins and his family.

"I get to pick and choose," McCabe said.

He said he chooses cases by weighing certain elements of the case.

"First of all, I like representing good people, which the Erkins are," McCabe said. "Also, it's significant and has high visibility."

But McCabe doesn't stop there. Dedicated to lender liability, he said he chooses cases where he thinks he can make a difference.

"My contribution is to improve the situation so that banks won't do this kind of thing," he said.

McCabe and Erkins say the bank, notwithstanding its agreement to provide the necessary funding for the project — took whatever steps it could to frustrate, delay and altogether block progress on the project from the outset, insisted upon loan terms that gave the bank life-and-death control over every aspect of the business, and meddled in and mismanaged the project's operations.

"And, in the end, by refusing even to provide the funding it had promised, the bank deliberately doomed the project to failure."

He also said a surplus of money in the banking sector of the economy has spurred banks to act in ways that lead to lender-liability litigation. McCabe said he expects the Pacific Northwest to be the next hotbed of activity.

The lender-liability litigation has only been discussed in courts for the past five to seven years, McCabe said.

He said the scenario leading to lender liability is low and simple: A surplus of money led banks to market

Andrus names Aslett to racing commission

The Associated Press

BOISE — A Gov. Cecil Andrus appointee who in mid-February withdrew his nomination to the state Transportation Board has taken a seat on the Idaho Racing Commission.

Marvin Aslett, 62, a Twin Falls contractor, met with the commission within hours of his Monday morning appointment to fill the unexpired term of Russ Westerberg, who resigned Friday.

In February, Aslett, who said he was a political independent, withdrew his name for a traditionally Republican seat on the Transportation Board after GOP leaders made it clear he would be rejected because of his support for Andrus.

Aslett, said the Democratic governor first contacted him about the Racing Commission seat nearly two weeks ago, and he agreed to accept it late last week.

"I've been around horses most of my life. I have a ranch that has horses. I have kids in the racing business," Aslett said.

He also used to own race horses that he raced in California, he said, but he just keeps saddle horses now on his derome ranch.

Westerberg, a seven-year veteran of the commission, said he resigned to devote more time to his independent lobbyist business he started in January. The governor, he said, was aware of this intention.

"He wanted to wait until the Legislature was over and he had time to look for a successor," Westerberg said.

Michael Collins says he hopes to see steps made toward taking man further into space

Astronaut's advice was simple: Go to the moon

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Michael Collins, a crew member of the Apollo 11 mission which was the first to land on the moon, told children gathered at CSI Tuesday night that it would "be fantastic to go to Mars."

"I'm one of those odd nuts who believes it's best to have a choice between living here and living some where else," he said. "Not that I have anything against this planet."

Collins said he hopes to see steps made toward taking mankind even further into space, eventually for purposes of colonization.

The former astronaut, who in July of 1969 remained in lunar orbit while Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin became the first men to walk on the moon, was at the College of Southern Idaho as part of the Snake River Symposium. In a talk aimed primarily at the children who filled much of the auditorium in the Fine Arts Center, he interspersed his comments with film footage and questions from the audience.

While showing film of astronauts turning somersaults in a gravity-free capsule, he said weightlessness "is totally different from anything you've experienced here on earth."

But when asked if it was fun being an astronaut, Collins said, "It's like a lot of things, it's not 100 percent fun. It's 51 percent fun and 49 percent hard work."

The kids also wanted to know what his favorite food in space was — chicken soup, he said — and what ac-

Democrats set sights on Legislature

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two Democratic challengers from Buhl announced Tuesday they would run for separate Twin Falls County seats in the state Legislature.

Virginia Ash is running for the seat vacated by Rep. Russ Newcomb, R-Twin Falls, who decided not to seek a second term. Republican Lee Barnes, a Twin Falls dentist, is the only other candidate expressing interest in that race so far.

Separately, Democrat Alvie Johnson, a farmer and rancher, will challenge Republican Rep. Doug Jones, also of Buhl.

Ash is now retired, but taught for several years in Moore and Richfield. She was also a reporter for several area newspapers and for eight years has been a Democratic campaign coordinator for Buhl.

Ash last sought elective office in 1979, when she ran in the Buhl mayoral race. While losing with 41 percent of the vote, she noted the race drew record turn-out and may have helped pioneer the way for the first woman council member serving this year.

Educational issues are among her primary concerns, in addition to women's problems, farming, toxic waste disposal and land-use planning. She is a member of the Buhl Planning and Zoning Commission.

While state funding for public schools drew much attention during the 1988 Legislature, Ash said the problem will not be settled by money alone. She noted that while teachers must have a bachelor's degree, school board members holding power over the district face no such requirement.

"Thousands of children pass through this system each year and children suffer in a poorly managed system," Ash said. "They (board members) have control over probably the largest payroll in the district they serve, yet they do not have to have a degree in business management, liberal arts or personnel training."

"I think there should be a minimum requirement," said Ash, suggesting board members qualify with at least a high-school diploma with a C-average.

Johnson has farmed the Buhl area, raising row crops, stock cattle and running a small dairy, for more than 30 years. He has served as director of

Singer-Swapp trial on schedule

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The trial of four indicted members of the polygamist Singer-Swapp clan will begin as scheduled Wednesday, although several pre-trial issues remained unresolved, attorneys said.

Prosecutors and defense lawyers presented arguments behind closed doors Tuesday, sometimes shouting with opposing counsel. The trial was hurried to the sixth day of pre-trial hearings before U.S. District Judge Bruce S. Jenkins.

Jenkins did not rule on any motions Tuesday, including requests from four defendants for separate trials. U.S. Attorney Brent Ward said after Tuesday's proceedings that Jenkins likely would rule on the pending motions Wednesday at 10 a.m.

"There are still pending issues, but gather-the-trial-will-begin," Ward said. "All I can say is we'll be here at 9:30 and the trial will begin at 10."

Kathryn Collard, attorney for clan matriarch Vickie Singer, said a lot of time Tuesday was spent on "logistics," including issues involving jury selection. Attorneys said at least 200 people were called for the jury pool and jury selection could take several days.

"There's a lot of pre-trial flurries because there's just such a tremendous amount of evidence, documents and witnesses," Collard said. "He (Jenkins) is just sort of putting together pieces of the puzzle."

McCabe

"It's a lot of lending institutions are trying to retrench and get out of agri-business," McCabe said. "When they're to get out, almost inevitably they try to start cutting corners."

McCabe questions whether banks now able to act more freely than in loans like car dealers and when loans went bad, the banks acted like banks again.

The scenario has already played itself out in oil-rich parts of the country. "As soon as they have an excess of funds, they fall into the pattern of marketing loans vigorously," McCabe said. "It's like selling a car — you're willing to promise things you may not be able to do."

McCabe said banks can get into trouble doing that, he said.

Then, when things don't work out precisely as planned, they want to revert to just being a banker, McCabe said. "They say, 'well, you haven't paid, and we want your money.'"

Now, the Pacific-Northwest is poised and some of the same sentiments are bubbling away. One factor is a troubled agricultural economy, which like oil exploration, requires large amounts of credit to operate.

the past, should be regarded a public utility.

"In some sense, banks take on almost a public utility role," he said. "If they don't have a lawful monopoly, they certainly come close."

The lawsuit was complicated before McCabe came on the scene. Idaho First claimed Bliss Valley Foods, the company formed to grow gourmet oyster mushrooms at the site with the 150-degree water from Erkins' hot springs, defaulted on a loan.

But McCabe, Erkins and Idaho First aren't the only gladiators on the battlefield in this lawsuit.

Twin Falls attorney Thomas G. Walker Jr. set up a limited partnership to help finance the farm and build the greenhouse necessary for production.

According to court documents, Walker and William Babcock, a branch manager for Idaho First convinced eight doctors and their wives, a beer distributor, an accountant and a horse breeder to invest in the venture.

Fingers are being pointed every which way. Erkins says he only wants to clear his and his family's name.

McCabe says that although settling the case before trial is possible, he isn't banking on it.

"My sense is it'll have to be tried before a jury," he said. "In part, because of the things that have been said and printed about Bob Erkins — settle and you don't catch up with that."

2-vehicle collision injures two

TWIN FALLS — Two Twin Falls residents received minor injuries in a two-vehicle collision Sunday morning at the intersection of Shoshone Street and Second Avenue North, officials said.

Sherry Anderson, 30, and Clint Bingham were taken to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center where they were treated and released, hospital officials said.

The accident occurred shortly after 10:30 a.m. police reports show Anderson driving east on 2nd Avenue West, collided at mid-intersection with a truck driven by Kenneth Stagemeyer Jr., who was heading south on Shoshone Street.

Bingham was a passenger in Stagemeyer's vehicle. Stagemeyer, 26, was not injured.

demio subject he liked best — English.

"The former astronaut also tackled a question concerning unidentified flying objects, made by one of the audience's adult members. Collins said the answer depends upon how the slippery term 'UFO' is defined.

"If you asked me if I ever saw a UFO, I'd have to say yes," Collins said. "If you asked me if I ever saw a UFO that was piloted by another civilization, I'd have to say no."

Before outlining his vision of the American future in space, Collins traced the country's space program from Mercury to Gemini to Apollo to Skylab through the Space Shuttle.

Speaking in pictures of crashing rockets, Collins said that science has come a long way since the 1950s and 1960s.

"Rockets were strange new things," Collins said. "People didn't know how to make them work 100 percent, or 90 percent, or even 80 percent."

After he returned from space for the final time, Collins wrote "Carrying the Fire," a critically acclaimed book describing his travels in the great beyond. In January 1970, Collins left the space program to serve as an assistant secretary of state for public affairs.

Collins, the holding and former astronaut, who now works principally as an independent consultant, also worked for seven years as director of the National Air and Space Museum, part of the Smithsonian Institution.

In his closing remarks Tuesday, Collins gave some advice to all the potential young astronauts sitting in the audience.

"If you really want to appreciate the Snake River, go somewhere where they don't have rivers," Collins said. "Go to the moon."

Agriculture ranks among his primary interests in seeking office, in addition to education, insurance reform and water rights.

"With agriculture being the underdog at this time, mediation could help in some instances," Johnson said. "I would like to see a mediation bill passed."

A farm mediation bill failed this session for the second time in as many years. Jones supported that bill.

In general, Johnson said he would vote independently to benefit the most people.

"I'll be my own man," Johnson said. "I've always believed that if you're going to do anything, do it right. And that's what I plan to do."

Killer dogs shot

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Authorities say charges will be filed against the owners of two dogs which went on a rampage at Hogle Zoo, killing six deer before they died in a hail of shotgun and revolver shots Sunday.

Zoo Director LaMarr Farnsworth said he believes the dogs were the same ones that destroyed three of the zoo's deer last year.

Police officers arrived at the zoo about 4 a.m. Sunday and observed two dogs running wildly in the deer pen.

Two officers fired nine shotgun rounds and 10 revolver bullets at the two 50-pound dogs, believed to be a chow-husky mix, authorities said.

Salt Lake Police Sgt. Scott Folsom said the dogs were hit by most of the shots but would not fall at first.

McCumber hitting peak in time for Masters

By Thomas Bowwell
The Washington Post

Golf, for all its caprice and cruelty, does admit one form of mercy. You can keep improving longer, and more dramatically than in almost any other major sport. As a consequence, a player approaching 40 may, on a few rare occasions, also be reaching his prime. We've seen it happen to Raymond Floyd and Calvin Peete. Now, the fate of becoming great late may befall one of the sport's nicest and most infectious joyful people—Mark McCumber, the human quote machine.

In his 15th season as a pro and his 11th on the PGA Tour, McCumber is finally emerging from journeyman to harder of mind: distinction. At the moment, the cheerful 5-foot-8 bundle of muscle and mouth is this tour's leading money winner with more than $363,000 this season; he was also champion of last month's prestigious The Players Championship, played in his home town of Jacksonville.

By the way, McCumber is also going to win the Masters, which starts Thursday at some little town down in Georgia.

A decade ago, McCumber was the epitome of a potential golf failure. At 26, he had spent nearly 20 years at the game and had nothing to show for it. Once, in fact, from age 18 to 22, he got so frustrated that he stopped playing entirely. Finally, his older brother, Jim, ordered him out from behind a desk in the family landscape-architecture business, saying, "Stop wasting your time selling palm trees and get out on the tour. You're as good as those guys."

McCumber told himself, "At least I can say, 'I was there.'"

But not until he had flunked the tour-qualifying school six times. Not until after he won barely $14,000 in two years as a town-to-town rabbit playing qualifying tournaments. Back then, McCumber was the wildest of self-taught public-course players. He had a thundering hook that he could drill-and-roll as far as any player on earth, despite his smallish build. "You can't (good) me into swinging any harder than I do. I'm at 98 percent all the time," said McCumber, a Richard Dreyfuss lookalike. "If I swung any harder, I'd fall over."

Once, head to head, McCumber out-drove titan Jim Dent so badly that Dent conceded defeat. "That longer can flat hit the golf ball. He's longer than me with every club in the bag," said Dent after watching McCumber hit drives of 350 and 365 yards through cross winds in Florida. "I used to be the longest."

McCumber's breakthrough victory at the 1979 Doran Open, gave birth to Tom Weiskopf's worst and best-known moments of "hurtful" humor. Weiskopf said McCumber's win was the worst thing that could happen to hundreds of other young players because they would, mistakenly, think that if McCumber could make a living on tour, then absolutely anybody could.

Back then, McCumber said that on an intensity meter with a scale of 1 to 10, "I'd have been an 11. Now, I'm an eight." After that first victory, McCumber was hyperenthusiastic so badly at the awards ceremony that his wife told him, "Darling, just breathe through your nose. Compose yourself."

McCumber has endured to prove Weiskopf and many others wrong. By 1983, he had rebuilt his swing, developing a controllable fade, and was No. 8 on the money list, including two wins. By last season, when he won almost $400,000, McCumber had transformed himself into one of golf's most accurate players; he ranked higher in hitting fairways (81st) and greens (seventh) than in length (36th).

And when the little man got hot, he could beat almost anybody anytime.

At least for a few weeks. He finished fifth, first-and-third-in-consecutive starts. In one streak, he had 19 straight rounds of par or better, the best of the year on tour.

"Despite his success, McCumber has always written all over him, from the way he races to kiss his two daughters in victory to the way he admits how much the game can unnerve him. When the crowd grows quiet over a crucial shot, McCumber will say, 'Not that quiet, folks.' When he won by a shot in a wild finish at Doran in 1985, he said, 'What was the last hole like? It was like driving with your wife and kids in the car, falling asleep at the wheel and suddenly waking up finding yourself skidding sideways into a ditch. ... It's total panic, then incredible relief.'"

Twin Falls runs record to 8-2

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Bruins ran their record to 8-2 Tuesday by downing the young Bruers Bobcats 12-2 behind a nine-hit attack.

The Bruins broke the game open in the third inning with five runs and added three each in the fourth and fifth to bring the run-rule into effect.

John Bryant again sparked the Twin Falls offense with extra-base hitting, collecting a run-scoring triple in the third and a double in the fourth.

After scoring a single run in the second, Twin Falls started the onslaught when Barry Smith opened the third with a double and Boomer Walker singled him in. Bryant then unloaded his triple. A walk and an outfield error kept the runs crossing the plate and John Hayes wound it up with a double.

The highlights of the last two innings included a triplyby Joel Jund and the fact that Torrey Bollinger, making his first appearance in a varsity game, collected a pair of singles.

"It's very hard to assess the team and this win because Burley is so young and inexperienced this year," said Twin Falls Coach Bill Ingram. "I know we're ready for a conference game now. I would suspect the competition is going to get better and some of the flossy batting averages we have right now are going to start going down a little. We need to get into conference competition and find out just where we stand."

Burley scored its two runs in the top-of-the-fifth-inning when Mike Dudley and pinch-hitting Rudy Ramirez came up with singles. Twin Falls tossed in an error to help the Bobcats.

The Bobcats had four hits for the day — all singles.

Twin Falls will entertain the Bonneville Bees to open its Gem State Conference schedule at 11 a.m. Saturday at Jaycee Field in Harmon Park.

UCLA receives permission to talk with Coach Brown

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Kansas Athletic Director Bob Frederick said Tuesday he has given permission for UCLA to talk to Larry Brown about his vacant basketball coaching position.

Brown, completing his fifth season as head basketball coach at the University of Kansas, has recently been rumored to be heading back to UCLA, where he coached previously for two seasons.

Brown refused to talk about it Monday night after Kansas won the NCAA title in an 89-79 upset of Oklahoma.

Asked about efforts to keep Brown in Lawrence, Frederick said: "We haven't had a chance to talk yet."

Larry is going to be very busy the next couple of days. I would hope we would talk this weekend or early next week," Sports Information Director Marc

Delins of UCLA said late Tuesday. "UCLA has asked for and received permission to discuss the position of head basketball coach with Larry Brown."

A crowd of 30,000 people welcomed the Jayhawks back to the campus Tuesday afternoon and chanted Brown's name repeatedly when Chancellor Gene Budig asked if they wanted Brown to stay.

"I think he got the message," said Budig, who introduced his basketball coach as "that maker of miracles."

Brown had little to say about the matter after the rally. "I have got to talk to Bob (Frederick), I've got to talk to my family," Brown said at a news conference after the rally.

"I think it got ridiculous with all the speculation at the Final Four about which coach is going where," Brown said.

Horford goes hardship

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — University of Miami sophomore center Tito Horford said Tuesday he'll decline himself-eligible for this year's NBA draft.

"I just want to play in the NBA," said the 7-foot-11, 245-pound Horford. "I believe in myself a lot. I think I can be a good one."

The 22-year-old Dominican averaged 14.2 points and 9.0 rebounds last season for the Hurricanes. Coach Bill Foster said he was surprised by Horford's decision.

"There hadn't been any dialogue about it, and it was the furthest thing from my mind," Foster said. "On paper, 99 out of 100 guys that follow basketball at all would say it's not a good decision."

The inconsistent Horford played well in some of Miami's big games. He also was held to two points against Marquette and four against Missouri.

"He has a lot of potential," Foster said.

Horford said he's had no contact with agents or anyone connected with the NBA. He said finances weren't a major reason for the decision.

Horford said he might become an NBA regular right away.

"You don't know whether I'm going to sit on the bench," he said. "That's the way life is sometimes. There are a lot of surprises."

BSU seeks pay raise for coach

POCATELLO, Idaho (AP) — Bobby Dye, the Big Sky Conference basketball coach of the year for leading Boise State to the league title this year, will be up for a raise and a contract extension when the Board of Education meets here next week.

The board will consider a four-year contract and a raise from $50,136 to $54,136 for Dye, whose Broncos led the Big Sky in attendance and qualified for the NCAA national championship tournament.

Boise State also reserves the right to increase Dye's salary each year in the agreement, said board spokesman Bill Hargrove. State policy says a school may offer a contract up to five years to a coach or athletic director after that person has been employed at the school for at least a year. Long-term contracts are subject to board approval.

In addition to Dye's contract, BSU is also asking for approval for raises for Dye's assistant coaches. Rich Rider's salary will go from $36,282 to $39,000, while George Barrios' pay will increase from $26,032 to $27,832.

Idaho State University coaches also are up for raises, but their pay scale is far below that of the Broncos. Head Coach Jim Boutin's salary would increase from $43,492 to $46,238.

Winfield nixes Houston trade

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees attempted to trade outfielder Dave Winfield to the Houston Astros for outfielder Kevin Bass but Winfield rejected the deal. Winfield's agent said Tuesday.

Yankees general manager Lou Piniella called agent Jeff Klein Sunday and proposed the trade, which was sparked by critical statements about Yankees owner George Steinbrenner in Winfield's new book.

"Dave would feel going to Houston," Klein said. "I checked with Dave and on Monday I told Lou that he wouldn't do."

Since Winfield has been in the major leagues for 10 years, five of them with New York, he has a right to refuse any trade. Steinbrenner, however, has maintained there is a clause in Winfield's contract which waives his right of refusal.

Klein insisted that Winfield has the right to veto any trade. "Dave is a ten and five man and can't be traded anywhere without his consent."

The agent said Winfield intends to remain in New York but he refused to say that Winfield would rule out any deal.

"I would never say never," Klein said.

—Houston general manager Bill Wood said the possibility of a trade between the two teams could still be worked out.

The Astros and Yankees agreed to the deal and needed only Winfield's approval to complete the transaction.

"We talked about it," Winfield said after the Yankees beat the Minnesota Twins 8-0 in their season opener.

The Baltimore Orioles and Yankees reportedly also discussed a deal that would send Fred Lynn to New York for Winfield.

In the deal with Houston, the Yankees reportedly had agreed to pay a part of Winfield's 1988 salary, estimated at $1.85 million and also agreed to pay a hefty portion of a $1.9 million buyout clause that would have relieved the Astros of the final two years of Winfield's contract, which runs through 1990.

Nelson returns to coaching

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A reluctant Don Nelson, the club's general manager, will try to bring his winning touch to one of the worst teams in the NBA when he takes over as head coach of the Golden State Warriors at the end of the season.

Nelson, a two-time NBA coach of the year and a 10 percent owner of the Warriors, fired to the wishes of partners Jim Fitzgerald and Dan Finnane and announced Tuesday he will take over a team which has the second worst record in the NBA this season at 17-59.

"I'm excited about our prospects and my fire has been relit by the character and enthusiasm of our players," the 47-year-old Nelson said.

Nelson, who had a 540-344 record in 11 seasons as head coach of the Milwaukee Bucks after a 14-year playing career, left the Bucks at the end of the 1986-1987 season to become executive president of the Warriors when Fitzgerald and Finnane bought the team.

He was named general manager after Fitzgerald spent a second-round draft choice to buy out a clause in his Milwaukee contract which forbade him from becoming involved in basketball operations with another team for two years after leaving the Bucks.

The coaching job opened when George Karl, who took the team to a 42-40 record and a trip to the playoffs last season, resigned on March 23 with the team mired near the bottom of the Pacific Division.

Assistant Coach Ed Warriors, 1-5 since taking over the Warriors on an interim basis, will continue to coach the team until the end of the season. Nelson frequently has said he had little interest in returning as coach, but after Karl resigned, Nelson's name was frequently mentioned as the likely replacement.

"This is a challenge that I am looking forward to and ready to meet with all my energy," Nelson said. "My decision required a lot of thought and advice from the people who are closest to me. I feel the future looks bright for the Golden State Warriors."

"Many of the pieces for success are about to fall into place. We look forward to getting an excellent player in the 1988 draft, bringing Ken Barlow on board and having a healthy Ralph Sampson, Larry Smith and Terry Teague with us next season."

Barlow, 24, a 6-10 forward, has been playing basketball in Italy and Israel, since leaving Notre Dame two years ago.

Super Bowl champs open against Giants

NEW YORK (AP) — Super Bowl champion Washington will open its 1988 season on the road against the New York Giants on Monday night, Sept. 5, and the wild card game will be decided on Christmas weekend, according to the NFL schedule released Tuesday.

The Redskins finished the strike-interrupted regular season 11-4, while the Giants had their first losing season in four years at 6-9.

The Redskins-Giants game will mark only the third time that consecutive Super Bowl champions have met at the start of the next season.

The Chicago Bears defeated the Giants 34-18 on the opening Monday night of the 1987 season. Previously, the Raiders beat the 49ers 23-17, on the first weekend of the 1982 season.

In the Super Bowl last Jan. 31, Washington routed Denver 42-10 at San Diego's Jack Murphy Stadium.

The Broncos, who have won two consecutive AFC championship titles, will open their season Sept. 4 at Mile High Stadium.

In other opening games on Sept. 4 the Atlanta at Detroit; Dallas at Pittsburgh; Los Angeles Rams at Green Bay; Miami at Chicago; Minnesota at Buffalo; Philadelphia at Tampa Bay; Phoenix at Cincinnati;

San Francisco at New Orleans; New York Jets at New England; Houston at Indianapolis; San Diego at Los Angeles Raiders; and Cleveland at Kansas City.

The 224-game regular season ends on the three-day weekend of Dec. 17-19. The postseason playoffs begin with the wild card teams playing in the AFC game on Saturday, Dec. 24 and the NFC on Monday, Dec. 26. The wild-card winners will play the division champions on Saturday and Sunday Dec. 31 and Jan. 1.

The AFC and NFC championship games will be played on Sunday, Jan. 8 and the Super Bowl will be Jan. 22 at Joe Robbie Stadium in Miami.

The AFC-NFC Pro-Bowl will be held Jan. 29 in Honolulu.

The traditional Thanksgiving doubleheader on Thursday, Nov. 24 will feature the Minnesota Vikings playing the Detroit Lions at Pontiac, Mich., and the Houston Oilers visit Dallas.

Forty-six regular season games, including eight Sunday double-headers each on CBS and NBC will be televised nationally. ABC will telecast 16 Monday night games that will start at 9 p.m. EST.

ESPN will televise eight Sunday night games, starting with the Oct. 30 Redskins game with the Oilers in Houston.

Cubs outlast Braves over 13 innings

A (AP) — Manny Trillo's 13th-inning sacrifice fly gave the Chicago Cubs a 10-9 victory over Atlanta Tuesday night in a National League opener that included a controversial interference call on the Braves and a record-tying seven home runs by both clubs.

Trillo's fly to center field off losing reliever Jim Acker, 0-1, scored Vance Law, who had doubled and was sacrificed to third.

Mike Bielecki gained the victory with two scoreless innings of relief. The game included seven home runs — four by the Braves and three by Chicago — to tie the major league mark in an opener. The New York Mets and Montreal also combined for several homers on Monday.

The Braves appeared to have won the game in the bottom of the ninth when Albert Hall bounced a two-out infield single behind second base with Gerald Perry at second.

Perry, who was caught in a rundown between third and home, scored when catcher Jody Davis' throw hit him on the helmet and bounced to shortstop. Home plate umpire Bruce Froemming, however, ruled that Perry interfered with third baseman Law and called him out.

The Cubs tied the score 9-9 in the ninth inning with two runs off reliever Bruce Sutler, who was making his first appearance in a regular-season game since May 27, 1985. The right-hander had undergone shoulder surgery three times.

Astros 6, Padres 3

HOUSTON (AP) — Kevin Bass pinch-hit a two-run single and Billy Hatcher doubled in the winning run in the eighth inning, rallying Houston to a 6-3 victory over San Diego Tuesday night.

Terry Puhl, who was playing because Bass had a pulled right hamstring muscle, started Houston's rally with a single off pitcher Ed Whitson's hand. Rafael Ramirez doubled to right field off reliever Lance McCullers, 0-1, before Bass singled to left, scoring both runners.

They tied the score 3-3, setting the stage for Hatcher's double down the left-field line that scored Chuck Jackson, pinch-running for Bass.

The Astros had tried to trade Bass to the New York Yankees for Dave Winfield on the weekend, but Winfield vetoed the deal as a 10-and-5 player.

The Astros added two more runs in the eighth when pinch-hitter Steve Henderson's single scored Hatcher and Glenn Davis, who was intentionally walked, scored on a wild pitch by Mark Davis.

Dave Smith pitched the ninth for a save.

Yankees 8, Twins 0

NEW YORK (AP) — If managing was this easy, Billy Martin wouldn't have been fired four times by George Steinbrenner.

The New York Yankees made it look simple Tuesday, opening the season by routing the World Series champion Minnesota Twins 8-0 on Rick Rhoden's three-hitter.

The Twins, just 29-52 away from the Metrodome last year, continued their road problems. Frank Viola, the World Series MVP, gave up home runs to Mike Fagliari and Rocky Anderson and allowed six earned runs, more than he gave up in any game last season.

"You couldn't ask for a better opening," Rhoden said. He was 0-3 with a 6.75 earned run average in three previous openers, but shut down the Twins for his first shutout since Aug. 1, 1986, and second in four years.

"It's the first good opener I've had," Rhoden said. "But I expected to pitch a good game."

So did Viola, who left 30 tickets for family and friends in nearby Long Island. Instead, he was tagged for eight hits in five innings.

"I don't like to start the season on this foot. I guess there's a lot of room for improvement," he said.

"It's not really worth worrying about this."

Hawks 121, Bucks 110

ATLANTA (AP) — Dominique Wilkins scored 34 of his 39 points in the first half and Kevin Willis finished with 25 as the Atlanta Hawks won their sixth straight NBA game Tuesday night, 121-110 over the Milwaukee Bucks.

Wilkins, the NBA's second leading scorer, helped Atlanta open leads as large as 19 points in the first half. But John Lucas hit two 3-pointers as Milwaukee came back from a 17-point deficit in the fourth quarter to get within five with 1:18 to go.

Glenn Rivers then sank a 3-pointer, his only field goal of the game, to put the Hawks up by eight, and the Bucks could get no closer the rest of the way.

Early in the second quarter, the Hawks built their lead by going on a 12-2 run. When the Bucks got within nine with 2:40 to go in the period, Wilkins went on a scoring spree, accounting for the Hawks' last 11 points of the half.

With the victory, the Hawks stayed one game behind the Detroit Pistons in the NBA's Central Division.

Pierce led Milwaukee with 21 points and Terry Cummings added 19.

Pacers use late free throws to beat Cavs, end 4-game skid

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Steve Stipanovich sank a pair of free throws with two seconds remaining, giving Indiana a 106-105 victory over Cleveland and snapping the Pacers' four-game losing streak Tuesday night.

Stipanovich fumbled the ball in the lane and then was fouled by Cleveland's Dell Curry to set up the winning shots.

The victory moved Indiana into sixth place in the Eastern Conference, a half game ahead of the Cavaliers. Washington is eighth, a half game behind Cleveland, a half game ahead of New York and a full game ahead of Philadelphia.

Eight teams make the playoffs in each conference.

The Cavaliers led 105-104 with five seconds left, but the Pacers regained possession when Larry Nance failed to inbound the ball within five seconds.

Wayman Tisdale led Indiana with 27 points, Chuck Person had 21 and Stipanovich added 13 points, including all five of his free throws.

Nuggets 110, Rockets 97

HOUSTON (AP) — Guard Lafayette Lever grabbed a career-high 21 rebounds and scored 22 points, leading the Denver Nuggets to their ninth consecutive NBA victory, 110-97 over the Houston Rockets Tuesday night.

The 6-foot-3 Lever was one of six Denver players in double figures as the Nuggets pulled within four percentage points of first-place Dallas in the Midwest Division.

Alex English, Danny Schayes and Michael Adams had 16 points each for Denver, and Jay Vincent scored 18 off the bench. Schayes also had 16 rebounds.

Joe Barry Carroll scored 25 points for Houston, and center Akeem Ojajuwon added 19 points and 16 rebounds for the Rockets.

Houston led 86-83, with 9:30 left of the fourth period. Denver then launched a 25-11 run capped by Schayes' two free throws at the 1:47 mark.

Bullets 105, Bulls 94

CHICAGO (AP) — John Williams scored 23 points Tuesday night, leading the Washington Bullets to a 105-94 NBA victory over the Chicago Bulls, snapping their three-game winning streak.

Center Moses Malone added 21 points for the Bullets, whose front-line players outsized the Bulls' 70-30 forward Bernard King scored 15 points.

The victory was the third straight for the Bullets.

Michael Jordan led all scorers with 29 points for Chicago, which clinched a playoff spot earlier in the night when New York beat Philadelphia.

Sam Vincent added a career-high 23 points and nine assists.

The victory moved Washington into eighth place in the Eastern Conference, a half game behind seventh-place Cleveland, a half game ahead of New York and a full game ahead of Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Johnny Newman scored a season-high 29 points and Gerald Wilkins added 27 as the New York Knicks scored 45 points in the second quarter and went on to defeat the Philadelphia 76ers 136-119 Tuesday night.

The victory pushed the Knicks into eighth place in the Eastern Conference. Five teams are battling for three playoff spots in the conference.

Newman scored 21 points in the first half as the Knicks, who have lost 30 of 36 road games this year, but have won their last two, matched their longest winning streak of the season with their third straight victory.

New York's 45 points in the second quarter was a season high, along with its 76 points in the first half and 136 in the game.

Pistons 107, Nets 95

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Adrian Dantley scored 27 points and its last 10, closed the gap to 68-60 behind the Nets.

New York's 27-7 run erased a 36-31 deficit in the first half of the Eastern Conference. The loss was the seventh straight for Walker, came off the bench to score 10 points during the run, including a 20-point jumper that gave New York the lead for good at 46-36 with 55 seconds to play in the period.

Detroit continued to extend its margin in the third period as Joe Dumars scored six points in a 12-4 burst that gave the Pistons a 60-47 lead.

New Jersey, which has lost nine of 12 games since its last win, closed the gap to 68-60 behind the Nets.

Adrian Dantley scored 27 points and its last 10, closed the gap to 68-60 behind the Nets.

NHL playoffs begin tonight

By The Associated Press

The Calgary Flames are expecting a shootout at the Saddledome with the Los Angeles Kings when the NHL playoffs start tonight.

The Flames finished with 105 points this season, tops in the league. They also were first in goals scored with 397. The Kings scored 318 goals, fifth in the league.

"I've said ever since February that I'd rather not play L.A. because of their scoring punch," Calgary goaltender Mike Vernon said.

The Kings finished 30-42-6 with 68 points, fourth in the Smythe Division.

While Los Angeles has one of the best offenses, their defense ranked last, allowing 359 goals — a 4.4 goals a game.

The Flames were 13th, allowing 305 goals and 3.77 goals a game.

The playoffs will begin tonight with the Winnipeg vs. Edmonton series.

After finishing a disappointing second and failing to win the division title for the first time in seven years, the Edmonton Oilers hope to redeem themselves against Winnipeg. The Oilers, led on offense by Wayne Gretzky, Mark Messier and Glenn Anderson, have beaten Winnipeg in 14 straight playoff games. During the regular season, the Oilers won the series 4-1-3.

Patrick Division

New Jersey vs. New York Islanders
The Islanders hold a 35-13 record over the Devils at Nassau Coliseum and will have four potential home games.

The Devils nailed down the last playoff spot on the final day of the season for their first postseason berth since moving to New Jersey in 1982.

The Islanders won their first Patrick championship since 1983-84 over the weekend in a division that separated the first-place team from the last by just seven points, with all six teams finishing over 500.

Philadelphia vs. Washington
The Capitals took the season series from the Flyers 4-2-1, winning three out of four at home.

The Flyers, Stanley Cup finalists last year against Edmonton, had a weak finish due to an unusual amount of injuries. Both teams were inconsistent in the late stages of the Patrick race, when the Islanders took charge.

The teams finished with identical 38-33-9 records, but the Flyers had to win second because the Capitals won the season series, 4-2-1.

Adams Division
Hartford vs. Montreal
At one point near the end of the season, the Canadiens had a 15-game unbeaten streak and finished with the second-best record in the league.

The defensive-minded Canadiens are big, fast and talented and have many players back from their Stanley Cup championship team of two years ago, including 50-goal scorer Stephane Richer.

Sabres vs. Bruins
The Bruins had a midseason streak that put them in first until the Canadiens ripped off a 15-game unbeaten streak. The Bruins slumped at the end but still finished with the fourth-best record in the NHL.

The Sabres, one of the league's youngest clubs, overcame a slow start to finish a strong third. In the regular season series, the edge went to Boston 5-3, but Buffalo won three of the last four.

Norris Division
Toronto vs. Detroit
Detroit lost superstar Steve Yzerman to injury late in the season, still finished strong, becoming the first division title-winner this season. The Red Wings won their division by the biggest spread, 17 points over St. Louis.

Although Toronto (21-49-15, 52 points) enters the playoffs with the worst record among the 16 teams and the worst for a playoff team since the 80-game schedule was adopted.

McCumber hitting peak in time for Masters

By Thomas Boswell
The Washington Post

Golf, for all its caprice and cruelty, does admit one form of mercy. You can keep improving longer, and more dramatically, than in almost any other major sport. As a consequence, a player approaching 40 may, on a few rare occasions, also be reaching his prime. We've seen it happen to Raymond Floyd and Calvin Peete. Now, the fate of becoming great late may befall one of the sport's nicest and most infectiously joyful people — Mark McCumber, the human quote machine.

In his 15th season as a pro and his 11th on the PGA Tour, McCumber is finally emerging from journeyman to man of distinction. At the moment, the cheerful 5-foot-8 bundle of muscle and mouth is the tour's leading money winner with more than $363,000 this season; he was also champion of last month's prestigious The Players Championship, played in his hometown of Jacksonville.

By the way, McCumber is also going to win the Masters, which starts Thursday at some little town down in Georgia.

A decade ago, McCumber was the epitome of a potential golf failure. At 26, he had spent nearly 20 years at the game and had nothing to show for it. Once, in fact, from age 18 to 22, he got so frustrated that he stopped playing entirely. Finally, his older brother, Jim, ordered him out from behind a desk in the family landscape-architecture business, saying, "Stop wasting your time selling palm trees and get out on the tour. You're as good as those guys."

McCumber told himself, "At least I can say, 'I was there.'"

But not until he had flunked the tour-qualifying school six times. Not until after he won barely $13,000 in two years as a town-to-town rabbit playing qualifying tournaments. Back then, McCumber was the wildest of self-taught public-course players. He had a thundering hook that he could drill-and-roll as far as any player on earth, despite his smallish build. "You can't (goad) me into swinging any harder than I do. I'm at 98 percent all the time," said McCumber, a Richard Dreyfus lookalike. "If I swing any harder, I'd fall over."

Once, head to head, McCumber out-

drove titanic Jim Dent so badly that Dent conceded defeat. "That man can flat hit the golf ball. He's longer than me with every club in the bag," said Dent after watching McCumber hit drives of 350' and 365 yards through cross winds in Florida. "I used to be the longest."

McCumber's breakthrough victory, at the 1979 Doral Open, gave birth to Tom Weiskopf's worst and best-known moment of hurtful humor. Weiskopf said McCumber's win was the worst thing that could happen to hundreds of other young players because they would, mistakenly, think that if McCumber could make a living on "tour, then absolutely anybody could."

Back then, McCumber said that on an intensity meter with a scale of 1 to 10, "I'd have been an 11. Now, I'm an eight." After that first victory, McCumber was hyperintellectualizing so badly at the awards ceremony that his wife told him, "Darling, just breathe through your nose. Compose yourself."

McCumber has endured to prove Weiskopf and many others wrong. By 1983, he had rebuilt his swing, developing a controllable fade, and was No. 8 on the money list, including two wins. By last season, when he won almost $400,000, McCumber had transformed himself into one of golf's most accurate players; he ranked higher in hitting fairways (31st) and greens (seventh) than in length (36th).

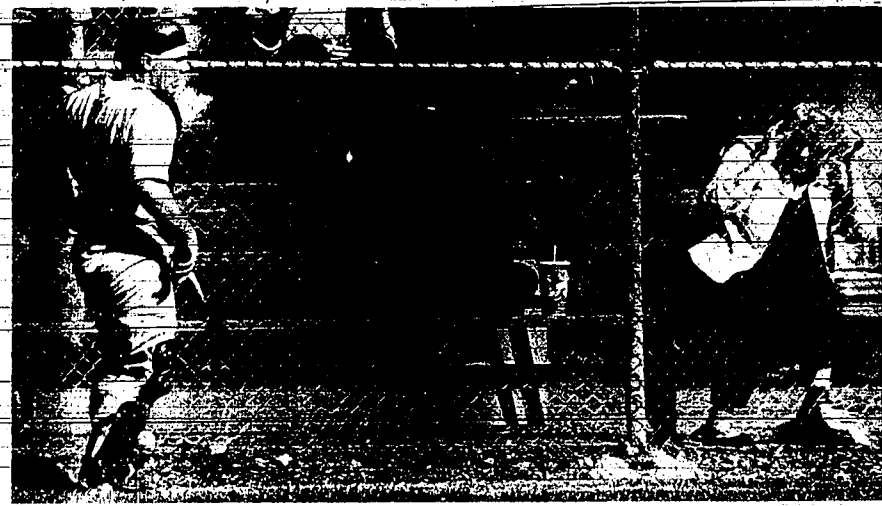

And when the little man got hot, he could beat almost anybody anywhere.

At least for a few weeks. He finished fifth, first- and third- in consecutive starts. In one streak, he had 19 straight rounds of par or better, the best of the year on tour.

Despite his success, McCumber has Everyman written all over him, from the way he races to kiss his two daughters in victory to the way he admits how much the game can unnerve him. When the crowd grows quiet over a crucial shot, McCumber will say, "Not that quiet, folks." When he won by a shot in a wild finish at Doral in 1986, he said, "What was the last hole like? It was like driving with your wife and kids in the car, falling asleep at the wheel and suddenly waking up finding yourself skidding sideways into a ditch. ... It's total panic, then incredible relief."

Twin Falls runs record to 8-2

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Bruins ran their record to 8-2 Tuesday by downing the young Burley Bobcats 12-2 behind a nine-hit attack.

The Bruins broke the game open in the third inning with five runs and added three each in the fourth and fifth to bring the run-rule into effect.

John Bryant again sparked the Twin Falls offense with extra-base hitting, collecting a run-scoring triple in the third and a double in the fourth.

After scoring a single run in the second, Twin Falls started the onslaught when Barry Smith opened the third with a double and Boomer Walker singled him in. Bryant then unloaded his triple. A walk and an outfield error kept the runs crossing the plate and John Hayes wound it up with a double.

The highlights of the last two innings included a triple by Joel Kund and the fact that Torrey Bollinger, making his first appearance in a varsity game, collected a pair of singles.

"It's very hard to assess the team and this win because Burley is so young and inexperienced this year," said Twin Falls Coach Bill Ingram. "I know we're ready for a conference game now. I would suspect the competition is going to get better and some of the flossy batting averages we have right now are going to start going down a little. We need to get into conference competition and find out just where we stand."

Burley scored its two runs in the top of the fifth inning when Mike Dudley and pinch-hitting Rudy Rameriz came up with singles. Twin Falls tossed in an error to help the Bobcats.

The Bobcats had four hits for the day — all singles.

Twin Falls will entertain the Bonneville Bees to open its Gem State Conference schedule at 11 a.m. Saturday at Joyce's Field in Harmon Park.

UCLA receives permission to talk with Coach Brown

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Kansas Athletic Director Bob Frederick said Tuesday he has given permission for UCLA to talk to Larry Brown about its vacant basketball coaching position.

Brown, completing his fifth season as head basketball coach at the University of Kansas, has recently been rumored to be heading back to UCLA, where he coached previously for two seasons.

Brown refused to talk about it Monday night after Kansas won the NCAA title in an 83-79 upset of Oklahoma.

Asked about efforts to keep Brown in Lawrence, Frederick said: "We haven't had a chance to talk yet. Larry is going to be very busy the next couple of days. I would hope we would talk this weekend or early next week."

Sports Information Director Marc

Dellins of UCLA said late Tuesday: "UCLA has asked for and received permission to discuss the position of head basketball coach with Larry Brown."

A crowd of 30,000 people welcomed the Jayhawks back to the campus Tuesday afternoon and chanted Brown's name repeatedly when Chancellor Gene Budig asked if they wanted Brown to stay.

"I think he got the message," said Budig, who introduced his basketball coach as "that maker of miracles."

Brown had little to say about the matter after the rally. "I have got to talk to Bob (Frederick). I've got to talk to my family. Brown said at a news conference after the rally. "I think it got ridiculous with all the speculation at the Final Four about which coach is going where," Brown said.

Horford goes hardship

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — University of Miami sophomore center Tito Horford said Tuesday he'll decline himself eligible for this year's NBA draft.

"I just want to play in the NBA," said the 7-foot-1, 245-pound Horford. "I believe in myself a lot. I think I can be a good one."

The 22-year-old Dominican, averaged 14.2 points and 9.0 rebounds last season for the Hurricanes. Coach Bill Foster said he was surprised by Horford's decision.

"There hadn't been any dialogue about it, and it was the furthest thing from my mind," Foster said. "On paper, 99 out of 100 guys that follow basketball at all would say it's not a good decision."

The inconsistent Horford played well in some of Miami's big games. He also was held to two points against Marquette and four against Marist.

"He has a lot of potential," Foster said.

Horford said he's had no contact with agents or anyone connected with the NBA. He said finances weren't a major reason for the decision.

Horford said he might become an NBA regular right away.

"You don't know whether I'm going to sit on the bench," he said. "That's the way life is sometimes. There are a lot of surprises."

BSU seeks pay raise for coach

POCATELLO, Idaho (AP) — Bobby Dye, the Big Sky Conference basketball coach of the year, is leading Boise State to the league title this year, will be up for a raise and a contract extension when the Board of Education meets here next week.

The board will consider a four-year contract and a raise from $50,136 to $59,000, while George Barrios' pay will increase from $26,092 to $27,832.

Boise State also reserves the right to increase Dye's salary each year in the agreement, said board spokesman Bill Hargrove. State policy says a school may offer a contract up to five years to a coach or athletic director after that person has been employed at the school for at least a year. Long-term contracts are subject to board approval.

In addition to Dye's contract, BSU is also asking for approval for raises for Dye's assistant coaches. Rich Rider's salary will go from $36,282 to $39,000, while George Barrios' pay will increase from $26,092 to $27,832.

Idaho State University coaches also are up for raises, but their pay scale is far below that of the Broncos. Head Coach Jim Boutin's salary would increase from $43,492 to $46,238.

Winfield nixes Houston trade

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees attempted to trade outfielder Dave Winfield to the Houston Astros for outfielder Kevin Bass but Winfield rejected the deal, Winfield's agent said Tuesday.

Yankees general manager Lou Pinella called agent Jeff Klein Sunday and proposed the trade, which was sparked by critical statements about Yankees owner George Steinbrenner in Winfield's new book.

"Lou called and asked me about how Dave would feel going to Houston," Klein said. "I checked with Dave and on Monday I told Lou that he wouldn't go."

Since Winfield has been in the major leagues for 10 years, five of them with New York, he has a right to refuse any trade. Steinbrenner, however, has maintained there is a clause in Winfield's contract which waives his right of refusal.

Klein insisted that Winfield has the right to veto any trade. "Dave is a ten and five man and can't be traded anywhere without his consent."

The agent said Winfield intends to remain in New York but he refused to say that Winfield would rule out any deal.

"I would never say never," Klein said.

Houston general manager Bill Wood said the possibility of a trade between the two teams could still be worked out.

The Astros and Yankees agreed to the deal and needed only Winfield's approval to complete the transaction. "We talked about it," Winfield said after the Yankees beat the Minnesota Twins 8-0 in their season opener.

The Baltimore Orioles and Yankees reportedly also discussed a deal that would send Fred Lynn to New York for Winfield.

In the deal with Houston, the Yankees reportedly had agreed to pay a part of Winfield's 1988 salary, estimated at $1.85 million and also agreed to pay a hefty portion of a $1.9 million buyout clause that would have relieved the Astros of the final two years of Winfield's contract, which runs through 1990.

Nelson returns to coaching

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A reluctant Don Nelson, the club's general manager, will try to bring his winning touch to one of the worst teams in the NBA when he takes over as head coach of the Golden State Warriors at the end of the season.

Nelson, a two-time NBA coach of the year and a 10 percent owner of the Warriors, bowed to the wishes of partners Jim Fitzgerald and Dan Finnane and announced Tuesday he will take over a team which has the second-worst record in the NBA this season at 17-63.

"I'm excited about our prospects and my fire has been rekindled by the character and enthusiasm of our players," the 47-year-old Nelson said.

1986-1987 season to become executive vice president of the Warriors when Fitzgerald and Finnane bought the team.

He was named general manager after Fitzgerald spent a second-round draft choice to buy out a clause in his Milwaukee contract which forbade him from becoming involved in basketball operations with another team for two years after leaving the Bucks.

The coaching job opened when George Karl, who took the team to a 42-40 record and a trip to the playoffs last season, resigned on March 23 with the team mired near the bottom of the Pacific Division.

Assistant Coach Ed Gregory, 1-5 since taking over the Warriors on an interim basis, will continue to coach the team until the end of the season. Nelson frequently has said he had little interest in returning as coach, but after Karl resigned, Nelson's name was frequently mentioned as the likely replacement.

"This is a challenge that I am looking forward to and ready to meet with all my energy," Nelson said. "My decision required a lot of thought and advice from the people who are closest to me. I feel the future looks bright for the Golden State Warriors."

"Many of the pieces for success are about to fall into place. We look forward to getting an excellent player in the 1988 draft, bringing Ken Barlow on board and having a healthy Ralph Sampson, Larry Smith and Terry Teague with us next season."

Barlow, 24, a 6-10 forward, has been playing basketball in Italy and Israel since leaving Notre Dame two years ago.

Super Bowl champs open against Giants

NEW YORK (AP) — Super Bowl champion Washington will open the 1988 season on the road against the New York Giants on Monday night, Sept. 5, and the wild card game will be decided on Christmas weekend, according to the NFL schedule released Tuesday.

The Redskins finished the strike-interrupted regular season 11-4, while the Giants had their first losing season in four years at 6-9.

The Redskins-Giants game will mark only the third time that consecutive Super Bowl champions have met at the start of the next season.

The Chicago Bears defeated the Giants 34-19 on the opening Monday night of the 1987 season. Previously, the Raiders beat the 49ers, 23-17, on the first weekend of the 1982 season.

In the Super Bowl last Jan. 31, Washington routed Denver 42-10 at San Diego's Jack Murphy Stadium.

The Broncos, who have won two consecutive AFC championships, will open their season Sept. 4 against the Seattle Seahawks at Mile High Stadium.

In other opening games on Sept. 4 it's Atlanta at Detroit; Dallas at Pittsburgh; Los Angeles Rams at Green Bay; Miami at Chicago; Minnesota at Buffalo; Philadelphia at Tampa Bay; Phoenix at Cincinnati;

San Francisco at New Orleans; New York Jets at New England; Houston at Indianapolis; San Diego at Los Angeles; Raiders and Cleveland at Kansas City.

The 224-game regular season ends on the three-day weekend of Dec. 17-19. The postseason playoffs begin with the wild card teams playing in the AFC game on Saturday, Dec. 24 and the NFC on Monday, Dec. 26. The wild-card winners will play the division champions on Saturday and Sunday Dec. 31 and Jan. 1.

The AFC and NFC championship games will be played on Sunday, Jan. 8 and the Super Bowl will be Jan. 22 at Joe Robbie Stadium in Miami.

The AFC-NFC Pro Bowl will be held Jan. 29 in Honolulu.

The traditional Thanksgiving doubleheader on Thursday, Nov. 24 will feature the Minnesota Vikings playing the Detroit Lions at Pontiac, Mich., and the Houston Oilers visit Dallas.

Forty-six regular season games, including eight Sunday doubleheaders each on CBS and NBC will be televised nationally. ABC will telecast 16 Monday night games that will start at 9 p.m. EST.

ESPN will televise eight Sunday night games, starting with the Oct. 30 Redskins game with the Oilers in Houston.

Cubs outlast Braves over 13 innings

A (AP) — Manny Trillo's 13th-inning sacrifice fly gave the Chicago Cubs a 10-9 victory over Atlanta Tuesday night in a National League opener that included a controversial interference call on the Braves and a record-tying seven home runs by both clubs.

Trillo's fly to center field off losing pitcher Jim Acker, 0-1, scored Vance Law, who had doubled and was sacrificed to third.

Mike Bielecki gained the victory with two scoreless innings of relief.

The game included seven home runs — four by the Braves and three by Chicago — to tie the major league mark in an opener. The New York Mets and Montreal also combined for seven homers on Monday.

The Braves appeared to have won the game in the bottom of the ninth when Albert Hall bounced a two-out infield single behind second base with Gerald Perry at second.

Perry, who was caught in a run-down between third and home, scored when catcher Jody Davis threw him on the helmet and bounced the ball shortstop. Home plate umpire Bruce Froemming, however, ruled that Perry interfered with third baseman Law and called him out.

The Cubs tied the score 9-9 in the ninth inning with two runs off reliever Bruce Sutter, who was making his first appearance in a regular-season game since May 27, 1986. The right-hander had undergone shoulder surgery three times.

Astros 6, Padres 3

HOUSTON (AP) — Kevin Bass pinch-hit a two-run single and Billy Hatcher doubled in the winning run in a 6-3 victory over San Diego Tuesday night.

That tied the score 3-3, setting the stage for Hatcher's double down the left-field line that scored Chuck Jackson, pinch-running for Bass.

The Astros had tried to trade Bass to the New York Yankees for Dave Winfield on the weekend, but Winfield vetoed the deal as a 10-and-5 player.

The Astros added two more runs in the eighth when pinch-hitter Steve Henderson's single scored Hatcher and Glenn Davis, who was intentionally walked, scored on a wild pitch by Mark Davis.

Dave Smith pitched the ninth for a save.

Yankees 8, Twins 0

NEW YORK (AP) — If managing was this easy, Billy Martin wouldn't have been fired four times by George Steinbrenner.

The New York Yankees made it look simple Tuesday, opening the season by routing the World Series champion Minnesota Twins 8-0 on Rick Rhoden's three-hitter.

The Twins, just 29-52 away from the Metrodome last year, continued their road problems. Frank Viola, the World Series MVP, gave up home runs to Mike Pagliarulo and Rickey Henderson and allowed six earned runs, more than he gave up in any game last season.

"You couldn't ask for a better opening day," Rhoden said. He was 0-3 with a 6.75 earned run average in three previous openers, but shut down the Twins for his first shutout since Aug. 1, 1986, and second in four years.

"It's the first good opener I've had," Rhoden said. "But I expected to pitch a good game."

So did Viola, who left 30 tickets for family and friends in nearby Long Island. Instead, he was tagged for eight hits in five innings.

"You don't like to start the season on this foot. I guess there's a lot of room for improvement," he said.

"It's not really worth worrying about this."

Coles' three-run homer highlighted a four-run third inning that carried the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 6-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies in their National League opener Tuesday night.

The Pirates erased a 2-0 deficit in the third as Mike Schmidt's error at third base set off three unearned runs.

Prior to Coles' homer, Barry Bonds homered with one out to cut the Phillies' lead to 2-1. One out later, Andy Van Slyke singled and reached third when Schmidt's lefty, Bobby Donila's grounder got through his legs for an error.

Coles then hit Shane Rawley's first pitch into the left-field seats to give the Pirates a 4-2 lead. Coles tripled home another Pirate run in the eighth.

Mike Dunne, 13-6 in his rookie season last year, pitched 5 2/3 innings and earned his first victory with relief help from Jeff Robinson.

Robinson held on for the save despite giving up a homer to Schmidt, his 531st that put him three behind eighth-place Jimmie Fox on the all-time list.

Rawley, who lost five times and compiled a 9.87 ERA in spring training, worked seven innings, allowing six hits and one earned run in absorbing his first loss.

The Pirates snapped a string of four straight opening-game losses, while the Phillies lost for the 11th time in their last 13 openers.

Hawks 121, Bucks 110

ATLANTA (AP) — Dominique Wilkins scored 34 of his 39 points in the first half and Kevin Willis finished with 25 as the Atlanta Hawks won their sixth straight NBA game Tuesday night, 121-110 over the Milwaukee Bucks.

Wilkins, the NBA's second leading scorer, helped Atlanta open leads as large as 19 points in the first half. But John Lucas hit two 3-pointers as Milwaukee came back from a 17-point deficit in the fourth quarter to get within five with 1:34 left.

Clayton Rivers then sank a 3-pointer; his only field goal of the game, to put the Hawks up by eight, and the Bucks could get no closer the rest of the way.

Early in the second quarter, the Hawks built their lead by going on a 12-2 run. When the Bucks got within nine with 2:40 to go in the period, Wilkins went on a scoring spree, accounting for the Hawks' last 14 points of the half.

With the victory, the Hawks stayed one game behind the Detroit Pistons in the NBA's Central Division.

Pierce led Milwaukee with 21 points and Terry Cummings added 19.

Randy Wittman scored 18 points and Cliff Levingston had 17 for the

Pacers use late free throws to beat Cavs, end 4-game skid

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Steve Stipanovich sank a pair of free throws with two seconds remaining, giving Indiana a 106-105 victory over Cleveland and snapping the Pacers' four-game losing streak Tuesday night.

Stipanovich fumbled the ball in the lane and then was fouled by Cleveland's Dell Curry to set up the winning shots.

The victory moved Indiana into sixth place in the Eastern Conference, a half game ahead of the Cavaliers. Washington is eighth, a half game behind Cleveland, a half game ahead of Philadelphia.

Eight teams make the playoffs in each conference.

The Cavaliers led 105-104 with five seconds left, but the Pacers regained possession when Larry Nance failed to inbound the ball within five seconds.

Wayman Tisdale led Indiana with 27 points. Chuck Person had 21 and Stipanovich added 13 points, including all five of his free throws.

Nuggets 110, Rockets 97

HOUSTON (AP) — Guard Lafayette Lever grabbed a career-high 21 rebounds and scored 22 points, leading the Denver Nuggets to their ninth consecutive NBA victory, 110-97 over the Houston Rockets Tuesday night.

The 6-foot-3 Lever was one of six Denver players in double figures, as the Nuggets pulled within four percentage points of first-place Dallas in the Midwest Division.

Alex English, Danny Schayes and Michael Adams had 16 points each in Denver and Jay Vincent scored 16 off the bench. Schayes also had 16 rebounds.

Joe Barry Carroll scored 25 points for Houston and center Akeem Olatunju added 19 points and 16 rebounds for the Rockets.

Houston led 86-83 with 9:30 left after Olatunju scored the first six points of the fourth period. Denver then launched a 25-11 run capped by Schayes' two free throws at the 1:47 mark.

Bullets 105, Bulls 94

CHICAGO (AP) — John Williams scored 23 points Tuesday night, leading the Washington Bullets to a 105-94 NBA victory over the Chicago Bulls, snapping their three-game winning streak.

Center Moses Malone added 21 points for the Bullets, whose front line players outscored the Bulls' 70-30. Forward Bernard King scored 15 points.

The victory was the third straight for the Bullets.

Michael Jordan led all scorers with 29 points for Chicago, which clinched a playoff spot earlier in the night when New York beat Philadelphia. Sam Vincent added a career-high 23 points and nine assists.

The victory moved Washington into eighth place in the Eastern Conference.

With the victory, the Hawks stayed one game behind the Detroit Pistons in the NBA's Central Division.

Pierce led Milwaukee with 21 points and Terry Cummings added 19.

Randy Wittman scored 18 points and Cliff Levingston had 17 for the Hawks, while Rivers had 16 assists.

Knicks 136, Sixers 119

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Johnny Newman scored a season-high 29 points and Gerald Wilkins added 27 as the New York Knicks scored 45 points in the second quarter and went on to defeat the Philadelphia 76ers 136-119 Tuesday night.

The victory pushed the Knicks into eighth place in the Eastern Conference. Five teams are battling for three playoff spots in the conference.

Newman scored 21 points in the first half as the Knicks, who have lost 30 of 36 road games this year, but have won their last two, matched their longest winning streak of the season with their third straight victory.

New York's 45 points in the second quarter was a season high, along with its 76 points in the first half and 136 in the game.

Charles Barkley had 13 of his 31 NBA victory over the New Jersey Nets in the first quarter for the Nets.

76ers, who were playing without point guard Maurice Cheeks. Cheeks, who had 16 points in the first quarter, was benched with a recurrence of the problems he experienced after suffering a concussion in the Sixers' game against the Knicks on March 16.

New York's 27-7 run erased a 36-31 deficit and opened a 62-45 advantage by 5:39 to go in the half. Kenny Neter-Walker came off the bench to score 10-4-17-8 second-quarter spurt, with points during the run, including a 20-foot jumper that gave New York the lead for good at 40-39 with 9:21 to go in the period.

Detroit continued to extend its margin in the third period as Joe Dumars scored six points in a 12-4 clutch that gave the Pistons a 60-47 lead.

New Jersey, which has lost nine of its last 10, closed the gap to 68-60.

Ishia Thomas had 26 points and 12 later in the period on a three-point assist Tuesday night as Detroit scored the last 10 points of the period game losing streak with a 107-95 to take a commanding 78-60 lead.

Pistons 107, Nets 95

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Adrian Dantley scored 27 points and Isiah Thomas had 26 points and 12 assists Tuesday night as Detroit scored the last 10 points of the period to take a commanding 78-60 lead.

NHL playoffs begin tonight

By The Associated Press

The Calgary Flames are expecting a shootout at the Saddledome with the Los Angeles Kings when the NHL playoffs start tonight.

The Flames finished with 105 points this season, tops in the league. They also were first in goals scored with 397. The Kings scored 318 goals, fifth in the league.

"I've said ever since February that I'd rather not play L.A. because of their scoring punch," Calgary goaltender Mike Vernon said.

The Kings finished 30-42-8 with 68 points, fourth in the Smythe Division.

While Los Angeles has one of the best defenses, their defense ranked last allowing 259 goals — a 4.4 goals a game average.

The Flames were 13th, allowing 305 goals and 3.77 goals a game.

Smythe Division

Winnipeg vs. Edmonton

After finishing a disappointing second and failing to win the division title for the first time in seven years, the Edmonton Oilers hope to redeem themselves against Winnipeg. The Oilers, led off on offense by Wayne Gretzky, Mark Messier and Glenn Anderson, have beaten Winnipeg in 14 straight playoff games. During the regular season, the Oilers won the series 4-1-3.

Patrick Division

New Jersey vs. New York Islanders

The Islanders hold a 35-1-3 record over the Devils at Nassau Coliseum and will have four potential home games.

The Devils nailed down the last playoff spot on the final day of the season for their first postseason berth since moving to New Jersey in 1982.

The Islanders won their first Patrick championship since 1983-84 over the weekend in a division that separated the first-place team from the last by just seven points, with all six teams finishing over 500.

The Capitals took the season series from the Flyers 4-2-1, winning three out of four at home.

The Flyers, Stanley Cup finalists last year against Edmonton, had a weak finish due to an unusual amount of injuries. Both teams were inconsistent in the late stages of the Patrick race, when the Islanders took charge.

The teams finished with identical 38-33-9 records, but the Flyers had to win second because the Capitals won the season series, 4-2-1.

Adams Division

Hartford vs. Montreal

At one point near the end of the season, the Canadiens had a 16-game unbeaten streak and finished with the second-best record in the league.

The defensive-minded Canadiens are big, fast and talented and have many players back from their Stanley Cup championship team of two years ago, including 50-goal scorer Stephane Riether.

Sabres vs. Bruins

The Bruins had a midseason streak that put them in the lead over the Canadiens ripped off a 15-game unbeaten streak. The Bruins slumped at the end but still finished with the fourth-best record in the NHL.

The Sabres, one of the league's youngest clubs, overcame a slow start to finish a strong third. In the regular season series, the edge went to Boston, 5-1, but Buffalo won three of the last four.

Norris Division

Toronto vs. Detroit

Detroit lost superstar Steve Yzerman to injury late in the season, still finished strong, becoming the first divisional title-winner this season. The Red Wings won their division by the highest margin, 17 points over St. Louis.

Although Toronto (21-19-10, 52 points) enters the playoffs with the worst record among the 16 teams and the worst for a playoff team since the 80-game schedule was adopted.

Microwaving: That's entertainment

Enjoy your own party

Try these microwave treats at your next special party

It's Monday night. The Academy Awards broadcast is on television. Your guests are ogling the stars as they accept their Oscars. You're in the kitchen fussing over a plate of hot hors d'oeuvres and the pot on the stove is boiling over. What's wrong with this picture?

Too often, entertaining means staying in the kitchen preparing and cooking while guests enjoy themselves in the living room. This Monday night, or the next time you plan to entertain, why not try the following recipes that take advantage of the ease and speed of microwave cooking?

A take-off on the popular Buffalo wings, Oriental Chicken Wings start with frozen fried chicken nibbles. After preparing the chicken in a microwave oven, simply brush with a delicate glaze featuring teriyaki sauce, honey and ginger, and sprinkle with sesame seeds. Garnish with green onion.

Chicken gravy is the surprise ingredient in Hot Curry Dip. Soften cream cheese in the microwave and add the gravy, chutney and curry powder and garnish with toasted coconut to give this versatile dip the flavor of the East. Hot Curry Dip may be served in a hollowed bread loaf with bread cubes and colorful crudite for dipping.

Shish kabobs aren't just for barbecues. Zesty Vegetable Kabobs are a fun, nutritious addition to the party. Cut your favorite vegetables into cubes or bite-size pieces (we suggest carrot, curls, whole mushrooms and zucchini chunks) and thread them on wooden skewers. Cover and heat in the microwave oven. Condensed zesty tomato soup/sauce, combined with olive oil, garlic, red wine, hot pepper sauce and water, makes a spicy dipping sauce for the kabobs.

To satisfy everyone's sweet tooth, don't forget to make Chocolate Pretzel Clusters part of the menu. These easy-to-prepare dessert mixes pretzels and slivered almonds with apricots plumped in orange-flavored liqueur in the microwave oven. Then everything is stirred into semisweet chocolate melted with shortening, spooned onto waxed paper and refrigerated.

For a delightfully different hot beverage, serve Savory Apple Juice. This golden beverage is made from apple ready to serve chicken broth, clear juice and cinnamon sticks. Garnish with orange wheels or cinnamon sticks. Savory Apple Juice is a delicious alternative to alcoholic beverages and is suitable as a hearty snack.

SAVORY APPLE JUICE

- 2 cans (1 1/2-ounces each) clear ready to serve chicken broth
 - 1 cup apple juice
 - 2 cinnamon sticks
- In 2 quart microwave-safe pitcher, combine all ingredients. Cover with vented plastic wrap; microwave on high 5 minutes or until hot. Makes about 4 1/2 cups or 6 servings.

HOT CURRY DIP

- 1 package (8-ounces) cream cheese, cut up
 - 1 can (10 1/2-ounces) chicken gravy
 - 2 tablespoons chutney
 - 1 teaspoon curry powder
 - 2 tablespoons toasted coconut for garnish
- Place cream cheese in 1 1/2 quart microwave-safe casserole. Microwave, • See ENJOY on Page C2

Try a theme party

With a little ingenuity, you can turn a good party into a splendid occasion. Below are a few tips for party planning that don't require a lot of time or fuss:

- Send themed invitations for your next get-together. Request that guests dress formally (or casually) to suit the theme — for example, guests could wear black and white for a Hollywood-style party celebrating the Academy Awards. By sending invitations, you've already made the party special.
- Decorate according to the theme. If guests are all wearing black and white, use black and white plates, napkins and utensils. Put up Hollywood posters or set out any art deco knickknacks you may have.
- Instead of relying on the radio, play tapes or records of your favorite music. The extra few minutes necessary to change sides is worth the trouble, and you won't have to settle for music that doesn't fit the theme.
- Relax. If you are enjoying yourself, chances are your guests are too.

Homemade dips offer delicious and nutritious alternative

Mock sour cream gets the fat out, but be careful of sodium

Shape Magazine

Most people think a chip is naked without dip. But how do you dress up your snacks without saturated fat and all those calories?

Ready-made dips in your grocery dairy case often contain coconut or palm oil rather than sour cream. Once for ounce, these fats contain the same amount of calories, but the non-dairy substitutes are more highly saturated and can raise blood cholesterol.

Supermarket bean dips are a good choice if you find one without coconut oil, palm oil or lard. The fiber in beans helps lower cholesterol and stabilize blood sugar.

Corn chip and tortilla lovers may have discovered some of the jarred salsas at the supermarket. These tomato-based dips are the lowest-calorie choice, with only 13 percent calories from fat.

Overall, homemade dips are your best bet, but think about ingredients. With the right choices, you can make dips more than just a taste treat by mixing in a nutritional bargain as well.

First, skip the sour cream and make your own mock sour cream, a low-fat substitute that has the same great taste and texture. It consists simply of low-fat cottage cheese with a bit of yogurt or lemon juice to give it that sour kick.

Use this versatile recipe as the base for dips, salad dressings, potato toppings and other recipes that call for sour cream. Mock sour cream even makes a great dessert topping if you add honey or fruit.

One nutritional drawback in using cottage cheese is its high sodium content — 115 milligrams per ounce. If you're watching your sodium intake, rinse the cottage cheese or get the dry-curd variety. Tofu is another low-sodium substitute. Use seasoning and fancy ingredients to add variety to the basic dip recipe. Below are several mock-sour cream dips and one fat-free bean dip, which is low in sodium and high in fiber.

There is no doubt, homemade dips win out over ready-made versions as nutrition-wise choices on all counts. So take a dip — it's a treat that's good for you!

MOCK SOUR CREAM

- (25 calories per 2 tablespoons)
- 2 cups low-fat cottage cheese
- 1/2 cup plain nonfat yogurt
- Puree ingredients in food processor or blender until smooth like sour cream. Recipe makes 2 1/2 cups.

GARLIC DILL DIP

- (26 calories per 2 tablespoons)
- 1 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 teaspoon onion powder
- 2 teaspoon dill weed
- Stir ingredients into 2 1/2 cups of mock sour cream to use as a dip. For fish sauce, add 2 teaspoons Dijon mustard and thin with lemon juice. Warm sauce just before serving.

GARLIC-ROASTED POTATOES

- (3 to 4 new potatoes per person, peeled)
- Olive oil
- 1 clove garlic per person, peeled
- 1/2 teaspoon rosemary per person
- Salt and pepper to taste
- Boil potatoes about 6 minutes. Drain and pat dry. In a pan large enough to hold the potatoes in one layer, add enough olive oil to coat the bottom generously. Add potatoes and garlic and toss to coat. Add rosemary.
- Bake in 350-degree oven about 25 to 30 minutes, turning occasionally, until golden brown.

CLAM DIP

- (25 calories per 2 tablespoons)
- 6-ounces chopped clams, canned or fresh-steamed
- 2 tablespoons lime juice
- Stir ingredients into 2 1/2 cups of mock sour cream.

BEAN DIP

- (32 calories per 2 tablespoons)
- 2 cups red kidney or pinto beans, canned or fresh-cooked
- 1/4 cup chili salsa
- Mash beans and salsa, or puree in blender or food processor.

TACO-SEASONED DIP

- (30 calories per 2 tablespoons)
- 2 teaspoons chili powder
- 1 teaspoon cumin
- 1 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 teaspoon onion powder
- Add ingredients to 2 1/2 cups mock sour cream. Allow flavors to mix for at least 30 minutes in refrigerator before serving.

SMOKED SALMON DIP

- (32 calories per 2 tablespoons)
- 8-ounces smoked salmon
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- Dash hot red pepper sauce
- A Northwest favorite — finely mince or puree all ingredients in blender or food processor. Add to 2 1/2 cups mock sour cream. To reduce sodium use salt-free smoked salmon, rinse cottage cheese or use dry-curd cottage cheese.

Add zeal to your next veal meal

By PEGGY KATALINICH
Newsday

Just lucky, I guess, but lately in restaurants I've been having some of the best veal ever. I'd sworn off for a while, having tired of saltimbocca or veal marsala or veal piccata. They're still delicious dishes, but I hungered for something new. And I got it. These two renditions are my interpretations of some of the still-simple but utterly scrumptious approaches I've enjoyed lately. The potatoes, happily, go with either dish.

oregano and thyme, and simmer, covered, over low heat about 20 minutes or until pepper is very tender. Puree in food processor or blender. Stir in vinegar.

Slices remaining pepper into slender slices and steam 5 minutes or until tender but still firm.

Saute cutlets briefly on both sides in butter, about 3 to 5 minutes per side. Remove to heated plate. Saute steamed peppers 1 minute, then stir in sauce and heat through. Pour any juices from the veal into sauce. Serve over veal. Makes 4 servings.

and rosemary and pour over chops. Let marinate about 2 hours, turning occasionally.

Heat a cast-iron pan with a grill surface. Brush lightly with olive oil. Cook chops over high heat about 4 to 5 minutes per side for medium. Remove to a heated plate. Take onion rings from marinade and cook a minute or two or until wilted. Serve with or on top of chops. Makes 4 servings.

VEAL AND PEPPERS

- 1 1/4 pounds veal cutlets
- 2 red peppers
- 1 (8-ounce) can tomato sauce
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 2 cloves garlic, cut in half
- Pinch oregano and thyme
- 1 to 2 teaspoons balsamic vinegar
- Cut one pepper in half and chop one of the halves. Combine chopped pepper with tomato sauce, butter, garlic,

GRILLED VEAL CHOPS

- 4 veal chops, about 1/4 pound each
- 1 medium onion, thinly sliced in rings
- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 1-3 cup balsamic vinegar
- 1 sprig rosemary or 1 teaspoon dried
- Salt and pepper
- Place chops in a shallow pan, cover with onion rings. Combine oil, vinegar

Spuds show up in Japan

It wasn't April in Paris, but we did get to Tokyo in March. This year on our annual trek west to get to the far, far East, there were two couples from the Magic Valley representing the Idaho Potato Commission at FOOD EX, a food convention in Japan. Don and Geo. and Wolverton of Murtaugh (he's presently chairman of the commission) met friend-husband and myself on a Saturday morning, in early March for the first leg of our journey. It was a journey that would eventually have more legs than we could then imagine. That first day had three separate plane rides, a long bus ride and finally a taxi to the door of our hotel, just as it was getting really dark on Sunday night.

The next day we all attended the information meeting for all the U.S. exhibitors by the American Foreign Agriculture service in Japan. FO-

Use your Easter eggs in gourmet broccoli dish

The beauty of your decorated eggs doesn't have to end when the holiday is over. You can use Easter eggs to create an edible attraction for a special occasion — Gougere with Cheesy Broccoli-Egg Sauce.

GOUGERE WITH CHEESY BROCCOLI-EGG SAUCE

(Serves 6)

- 1 cup water
 - 1/2 cup butter
 - 1 cup all-purpose flour
 - 2 teaspoons tarragon leaves, crushed and divided
 - 3/4 teaspoon salt, divided
 - 4 eggs
 - 2 packages (10-ounce each) frozen cut broccoli, with cheese sauce in a pouch
 - 1/2 cup milk
 - 1 tablespoon lemon juice
 - 4 hard-cooked eggs,* chopped
- *Additional hard-cooked egg wedges, optional

In medium saucepan over medium heat, bring water and butter to rolling boil. Add flour, 1 teaspoon of the tarragon and 1/4 teaspoon of the salt, stirring vigorously until mixture forms a ball, 1 to 2 minutes. Remove from heat. Beat in 4 uncooked eggs, 1 at a time. Continue beating until smooth and small quantity of dough mounds when scooped on end of spoon.

Drop 12 slightly rounded 1/4 cupful of dough, lightly touching each other, in 8-inch diameter ring, onto ungreased baking sheet. Bake in preheated 400 degree oven until golden brown, about 40 minutes. Place on serving platter and keep warm.

Meanwhile, cook broccoli according to package directions. Transfer mixture from pouches into medium saucepan or bowl. Blend in milk, lemon juice and remaining tarragon and salt. Add chopped hard-cooked eggs and toss until well combined. Heat to serving temperature. Spoon into serving bowl, garnish with additional hard-cooked egg wedges, if desired and serve with gougere.

uncovered, on high 1 minute or until very soft.

Stir in gravy, chutney and curry until smooth. Cover with lid; microwave on HIGH 4 minutes or until hot and bubbling, stirring once during cooking.

Garnish with coconut. Serve with crackers and fresh vegetables for dipping. Makes about 2 cups.

TIP: To serve in bread basket, slice top off 1-pound round loaf bread. Scoop out center; reserve center to make bread cubes for dipping. Fill center with cream cheese mixture. Microwave, uncovered, on high 30 seconds or until bread is warm.

ZESTY VEGETABLE KABOBS

- 1 medium carrot
- 12 fresh mushrooms (about 8-ounces)
- 1 medium zucchini, cut into 12 chunks

1 tablespoon olive oil
1 large clove garlic, minced
1 can (11-ounces) condensed zesty tomato soup/sauce
1/4 cup water
2 tablespoons Burgundy or other dry red wine
Generous dash hot pepper sauce
With vegetable peeler, make 12 thin carrot strips. On 12 wooden skewers, thread carrot, mushrooms and zucchini.
Arrange skewers in microwave-safe baking dish. Cover with vented plastic wrap; microwave on high 3 minutes. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes.
Meanwhile, in medium microwave-safe bowl, combine oil and garlic. Cover with vented plastic wrap; microwave on high 1 minute.
Stir in soup, water, wine and hot pepper sauce. Cover; microwave on high 5 minutes, stirring once during heating. Serve with kabobs. Makes about 1 1/2 cups sauce.

ORIENTAL CHICKEN WINGS

- 1 package (28-ounces) frozen fried chicken nibbles (wing sections)
 - 1/2 cup teriyaki sauce
 - 2 tablespoons honey
 - 2 teaspoons vinegar
 - 1 teaspoon cornstarch
 - 1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
 - 1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper
 - 2 tablespoons sesame seeds
- Microwave chicken according to package directions. Let stand, uncovered, 10 minutes to cool.
- Meanwhile, prepare glaze: In small microwave-safe bowl, combine remaining ingredients except sesame seeds. Cover with vented plastic wrap; microwave on high 2 minutes, stirring once during cooking.
- Brush chicken with glaze; sprinkle with sesame seeds. Makes about 22 appetizers.

CHOCOLATE PRETZEL CLUSTERS

- 1/2 cup chopped dried apricots
 - 1 tablespoon orange-flavored liqueur or water
 - 1 package (12-ounces) semisweet chocolate pieces
 - 1 tablespoon shortening
 - 1 bag (5 1/2-ounces) mini pretzel
 - 1/2 cup toasted slivered almonds
- In glass measure, combine apricots and liqueur. Cover with vented plastic wrap; microwave on high 1 minute. Let stand, covered, 2 minutes.
- In large microwave-safe bowl, combine chocolate and shortening. Microwave, uncovered, on high 2 minutes or until melted. Stir until smooth.
- Add pretzels, apricots and almonds; stir to coat well. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto cookie sheet lined with waxed paper. Refrigerate 30 minutes or until firm. Makes about 45 pieces.
- TIP: To toast almonds in the microwave: Spread 1/2 cup slivered almonds in microwave-safe pie plate. Microwave, uncovered, on high 3 minutes, stirring twice.

DEX is the largest Asian food show. It is attended by every country that wants to sell food to Japan, and these days in the land of the many yen, that's just about everybody.

There were more than 2,600 different booths. Many of the different countries formed unified pavilions with a theme.

The USA pavilion was the best yet with an American supermarket theme. There was a wagon at the entrance piled with the various products that were being shown within.

As veterans of four of these shows, we felt this one was the best yet, with (finally) a large enough space to sit and talk with prospective customers and enough sinks and kitchen preparation area.

Why go to such lengths to sell our famous potatoes?

Because in Japan, the second generation of "french fry" fans is already present. These housewives of Tokyo, supplies will purchase this product without a second thought at one of the 600 McDonalds in Tokyo, or buy a microwave-size portion for home cooking.

This market is growing. The potato/french fry market in the USA is fairly flat, there isn't much growth in the number or amount the average citizen will consume in a year and there are more and more competitive potato growing areas vying for these customers. And a lot of these competitors have a definite freight advantage by living closer to some of the largest markets.

I realize that most of the areas in Asia (except Hong Kong and Singapore) do not allow fresh produce, especially potatoes, to be shipped into their countries. Yes, this is a protectionist measure, but it also protects our industries in Idaho. Most will allow the processed potato products whether frozen or dehydrated to enter their areas. This means the value added to the potato is contributed here in Idaho, using our products and people.

Idaho is known very well for its potatoes in Japan. It's gratifying to have such an "in" and who knows, this may be the coalition of excellence for other Idaho products to get introduced into this vast market.

Shows are often a fascinating study into human behavior.

This year booths were more open to each other with half walls allowing us to view into the neighbor's unit. This almost caused a small skirmish though, as those in the next booth were handing out samples of fried and smoked salmon. After a day or so, our fellows and their commission jackets definitely acquired a "fishy" aroma.

These other folk also encroached on the space in front of our booth to talk to their customers. We finally resorted to a sort of guerrilla warfare by subtly pushing our counter further out into the aisle and stationing ourselves in front to hand out potato pins and slowly backing them into their own space.

I remember fondly the times in Japan when we got 270 yen to each U.S. dollar. This year it was somewhere around 127 yen to the dollar which made most things there ridiculously expensive. Things have always been expensive in Japan, but $4.50 for a cup of tea out of a pot is beyond comprehension.

I noticed that they really haven't raised their prices from comparing menus to a few years ago, but boy what a difference in cost. Japan really hasn't been known as a shoppers mecca as the cameras and electronic gear made there, which one would expect to be a bargain, definitely are not. In fact one story in a Tokyo newspaper reported that now that the common Japanese are becoming veteran globe-trotters, they are starting to question why a television that costs them $985 equivalent in Japan, sells in New York City for $535.

Georgina and I toured the show while our guys were busy in the booth and these were some of our observations.

Each booth is manned by Japanese interpreters and promoters. A lot of the time the Japanese girls were dressed in the authentic clothes of the respective country, so it wasn't a surprise to see them in full Holland gear handing out samples of cheese or Heineken beer or dressed as a Grecian maid between displays of olive oil.

"Domo, Domo" is the insistent plea as you go up and down the aisles. This means please, please try a sample of crackers or candy or throat lozenge or.

smoked fish or wine or tea or liquor or pizza or ice cream or sausages or cookies or french fries or chocolates or nuts or spices or beer or even steaming food!

No, you don't see fresh produce, but that's about all that's not shown. There are two stories to the international exhibits and for the first time Russia had a booth. Other Eastern European countries like Romania and Czechoslovakia had been present before, but the flag with the hammer and sickle was a first.

Traversing the show is tough. One must remember the Japanese drive on the left side of the road and walk on the left side of the walk or aisle. They are never rude, but persistent and relentless in their pursuit of a goal. If you're in the way, somehow you get out or get run over. After a couple of hours, I long for the wide open spaces of home!

Changes in cooking appliances make keeping up harder

By MINNIE BERNARDINO
The Los Angeles Times

It is hard to keep up with what's new in cooking appliances these days. By the time a consumer makes a final decision in picking the best equipment for his or her needs and to tie in with the kitchen decor, a new model appears with improved features. For most cooktops and range-ovens, three factors seem to affect style changes: speed, cleanability and color.

If you like the instant-on and no-preheating qualities of gas and the cleaning convenience and safety of electric, consider the new halogen method of cooking. Used in street and home lighting as well as car lamps, halogen light bulbs that give off instantaneous heat are installed in this system. As soon as they are switched on, rows of heat rays flash a bright red glow on the black glass surface of the cooktop. "It's like magic and really fabulous... quite an improvement on the typical electric stove," says Ron Martinez, an appliance consultant at California Kitchens in Burbank, Calif. "It's about time we got away from the archaic."

Martinez says that although the appliance has been available in Europe for several years, it is still quite new in America. In this short period, his company has received a lot of positive response to it.

At this time, the only brand of halogen cooktop approved for use in the United States is Gaggenau, which is available in two- and four-burner models ($785 and $1026, respectively). Each cooktop is equipped with just one halogen burner; the rest have regular electric-coil elements.

Another great feature of the unit is its wonderfully easy-to-clean surface. Gone are the days of scrubbing and digging your fingers into grease-laden crevices. Made of Schott Ceran black glass, the heavy, tempered smooth surface can simply be cleaned with a cooktop cleaner that protects it from scratches.

With the Gaggenau, you do not need a double boiler for all-low-heat cooking; however, the heat also can rise to the equivalent of 10,000 BTU in gas. Unlike the induction cooktop, which requires magnetic cookware, the halogen system will work with any type of cookware.

The influx of European products has been influencing all sectors of the market, including culinary goods. Every new thing seems to come from Europe. "We seem to be really behind but we're really not," Martinez says.

"Not all European appliances are good. Just like in antiquities, there's junk. What is really odd is that European ladies love American products."

The new Thermador Convection Micro-Thermal built-in oven ($2,700) is a perfect example of an American product that, Martinez says, "... if you put it in a European kitchen, the German people would ooh and aah. It's a state-of-the-art, ultimate cooking machine."

The Thermador appliance was unveiled recently in Los Angeles. The Convection Micro-Thermal is a built-in double oven that has an upper convection micro-thermal function and a lower thermal unit. Thermador revolutionized the micro-thermal concept 12 years ago, combining traditional baking with the speed of microwaving simultaneously. The latest addition has added the convection system, circulating hot air around the food to enhance the appearance, flavor and texture. When programmed to a convection microbake mode, the oven will actually cook lasagne in just 15 minutes. At the same time, you can also bake cookies and several pies in the same oven.

Older, newer gingers need special care

By JOAN DRAKE
The Los Angeles Times

Q: I have a lot of fresh ginger and want to preserve it. Can you tell me how to make crystallized ginger?

A: Helen Witty gives the following information and instructions for making crystallized ginger in her book "Fancy Fruits" (Workman-Publishing, 1986, $11.95).

"For candying try to get the tender young ginger, called 'stem ginger,' which comes to Asian markets around July. It is much juicier and milder than the mature rhizomes; it can be identified by its white, smooth, translucent skin and the pink stubs of leaf sheaths left when the above-ground stems were trimmed away. Mature ginger can be satisfactory when candied, too, but it is much more fibrous and several times as fiery as stem ginger. In shopping for mature ginger, look for silky-skinned, unwithered rhizomes.

"The two kinds of ginger require different treatment, as outlined in the following recipe. Older ginger must be repeatedly blanched before it is crystallized.

CRYSTALLIZED GINGER

1 pound ginger root

Sugar

2 tablespoons light corn syrup

Preparing stem ginger: Break rhizomes apart at joints and scrape off thin skin, using small sharp knife. Trim off leafy stem bases and any bruised or discolored ends. Slice sections slightly on bias into pieces about 1/4 inch thick.

Place ginger in large saucepan, add cold water to cover pieces by 2 inches and bring to boil over medium heat. Lower heat, cover pan and simmer 2 1/2 hours. If liquid level drops below ginger at any point, add boiling water. Drain ginger; add fresh water to cover and simmer another hour or until slices are very tender. Drain ginger.

Preparing mature ginger: Scrape, trim and slice rhizomes as described for stem ginger. Place slices in bowl, add cold water to cover pieces by 2 inches and let stand overnight. Drain ginger and place slices in large saucepan. Add water to cover pieces by 1 inch and bring to boil over medium heat. Lower heat, cover pan and simmer ginger 10 minutes. Drain ginger, cover with fresh water and repeat simmering and draining at least 3 times. After 4th simmering, taste ginger scrap for hotness. If flavor is still too strong, change water and repeat simmering once or twice more.

Continue cooking ginger in final water until pieces are very tender, 2 to 3 hours, adding boiling water as necessary to keep ginger covered with liquid. Drain ginger.

Combine 3 cups sugar, 3 cups water and corn syrup in large saucepan. Bring mixture to boil over medium-high heat and boil 2 minutes. Add ginger slices. Heat syrup again to boiling, shaking pan often, and boil hard 1 minute. Remove pan from heat and let stand until ginger and syrup are completely cool, or as long as overnight.

Return pan to heat and again bring syrup to boil. Adjust heat and simmer ginger, covered, until pieces are translucent and very tender (1 to 3 hours, stirring occasionally). If syrup becomes too thick before ginger is translucent, add small amount of hot water to restore consistency.

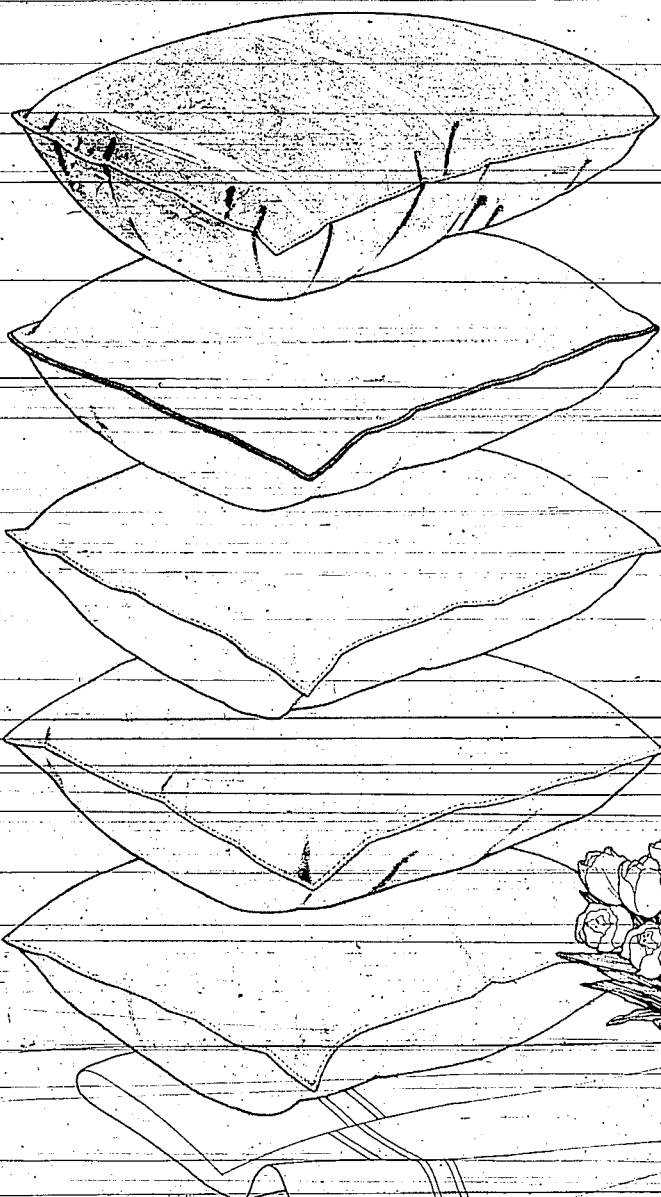

"Finally," cook ginger, uncovered, shaking pan often, until syrup is reduced to 1 to 2 spoonfuls. Remove pan from heat and let stand several minutes. Using fork, transfer ginger pieces to wire rack and allow to dry at room temperature 1 to 2 hours. When no longer sticky, roll pieces in granulated sugar to coat well. Store ginger in covered container at room temperature.

CSI seminar proves helpful to many

On March 20-21 at CSI, a unique seminar "Unlocking the Mysteries of Creation" was presented by Dennis Petersen of Placerville, CA. This timely series uncovered some shocking facts about the real world around us. The seminar was well attended and was designed to inspire and equip people with answers to perplexing questions about the world in which they live.

So many people were instrumental in the success of this seminar: KAWZ 89.5 FM, Mike Kestler and Calvary Chapel, many churches, in the valley for their support, KCLR and Duane Luchsing, Tom Harney and Jack Muldoon, Glenn Baum, also all those who prayerfully supported and cooperated in helping it all come together.

Accident victims offer appreciation

I wish to publicly commend two wonderful Magic Valley residents. My wife and I were involved in a one car, rollover accident on March 23. Our accident occurred two miles out of Rogerson, Idaho.

We were in need of assistance and it was there. Homer and Nancy Hatch stopped immediately. They were helpful, comforting and did not leave until the ambulance arrived. Many other residents stopped to leave blankets, coats and offers of help.

If there can be a positive side to a car accident, your community, your hospital and its caring people provided that positive note.

Central Elementary likes new equipment

A special thanks to all of you for the great support given our boys and girls at Central Elementary in our recent fund-raising activities.

We are having physical education classes on a new piece of playground equipment purchased as a result of our candy sales in November. Students will be using this equipment during recess by April 14. This equipment is located in the northwest corner of our playground.

Soon after spring break we will have eight new sets of World Book Encyclopedias, two sets of World Book Dictionaries and two World Book Atlases. These materials will be placed in the classrooms participating in the project.

Spell-a-thon-funds, have been invested to improve the sound system in Central Elementary auditorium. This project will be completed for approximately $1,000 and labor by our maintenance staff. You will have an opportunity to see your support at work when we have spring concerts late in April and early in May.

A fine assembly was scheduled by a professional group from Texas for April 1, 1988. They provided an outstanding cultural activity for our elementary students as they saw "Robin Hood" presented by live actors. This and several other enrichment experiences are possible due to your generous support.

Growing aids help spring vegetables get started

In the Intermountain area, vegetable gardeners have to make the most of a limited growing season. Frosts can occur quite late in the spring and early in the fall.

In recent years, several new growing aids have come along which have made it possible to plant earlier in the spring, thus effectively lengthening the growing season. These aids are particularly helpful for vegetables.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening with long growing seasons such as tomatoes, peppers and melons.

The most basic growing aid for large size vegetables is black plastic mulch. Sheets of black plastic placed over the soil before planting warms the soil underneath, which speeds seed germination and growth rates of vegetables. Holes are made in the plastic so seeds or plants can be planted in the soil underneath. The black plastic also shades out the weeds, which greatly reduces the amount of weeding necessary.

The Wall-O-Water is a series of interconnected plastic tubes which are filled with water. When placed around a single tomato, pepper, or other vegetable plant, it absorbs the heat of the sun and radiates it to the plant inside. It continues to radiate the heat at night, giving 10 degrees or more of frost protection. I have seen tomatoes planted as much as six weeks before normal planting time inside a Wall-O-Water.

I will be testing a new experimental product this spring called a thermal growing tube. It uses the same principle of water inside a tube to absorb and re-radiate heat. However, it can be used on a whole row of plants, rather than single plants, like Wall-O-Water. This product will not be available to home gardeners for at least another year.

Both plastic and fiber row covers can be used to create a mini-greenhouse effect over plants. Sunlight radiates through the row covers and is trapped inside, raising the temperatures for the plants growing underneath. Row covers give a minimum amount of frost protection, but they do increase the growth rate early in the spring. You usually need to stand by with a blanket if frost is predicted. I have planted as much as four weeks earlier than normal using both clear plastic and fiber row covers. My preference is the fiber covers, often referred to as "floating row covers," because no wire or other support is needed. They are simply laid loosely over the plants and are held up by the plants. Of course all row covers must be carefully anchored by placing soil around the edges.

I have a booklet which includes information on how to use some of these growing aids for vegetable gardening. It also contains planting and growing information for specific vegetables. If you would like a copy, send $1 and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Allen Wilson, P.O. Box 40, Rexburg, Idaho 83440. Ask for Vegetable Guide.

Lunchroom garbage search shows waste in face of want

DEAR ABBY: I am a third-grader at Marion Street School in Lynbrook, N.Y. Our teacher, Mr. Freifeld, took the class down to the lunchroom to find out how many students threw out their lunches, because we talked about that letter in your column about how much they wasted in Arizona lunchrooms.

First we found out how many kids ate in the lunchroom every day. There were 252. Then we looked in the garbage cans and counted the whole sandwiches that were thrown out. There were 39 untouched sandwiches, still in their wrappers. There were 30 half-sandwiches still wrapped. Peanut butter and jelly was thrown out the most!

We figured that almost one out of every four people threw away all or half their lunch. With people starving all over the world, that is a lot of food to waste. It was enough to make you sick.

We counted the drinks, too. We found 22 whole cartons of drink thrown out. Some were milk, but most were juice.

There was a whole pile of fruit, apples, oranges and bananas — that was thrown into the garbage. Good grapes, too.

Our class decided that maybe the parents should ask their kids what they want for lunch, then maybe the kids wouldn't throw out so much.

Thank you.

CLAYTON COHN, LYNBROOK, N.Y.
DEAR CLAYTON: Thanks for reporting the results of your lunchroom investigation. And how lucky you are to have a teacher like Mr. Freifeld, who makes learning fun and memorable.

DEAR ABBY: I could have written the letter from the lady in Arizona who was appalled at the waste of food at the schools. My husband is also a custodian at an elementary school, and he sees good food thrown away every day.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

 Once the food is served, if it's not eaten, it cannot be given away or served again — it must be thrown into the garbage can. Untouched trays of lasagna, potato salad, fruit salad and jello molds are thrown away. Even unopened cartons of chocolate milk and orange juice that could be used the next day are thrown out. By the way, it's the children who get free lunches who throw out most of the food, so it's our tax dollars that go into the garbage cans!

— FROM OHIO I DON'T SAY WHICH TOWN!

DEAR FROM OHIO: I regret to say that your letter was one of many that carried the same message. A pity that all edible food and unopened cartons can't be sent to the city mission to feed the hungry and homeless.

DEAR ABBY: An Arizona reader was appalled at the waste of good food by the children in the school lunchroom where she and her husband work.

I feel exactly the same way about what's happening in our area. My son has laughed about the frequent "food fights" in the school cafeteria. The kids see nothing wrong in throwing food at each other. What a terrible waste!

Philippine opposition to U.S. base use growing

The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines—Opposition to U.S. military bases is growing as the United States and the Philippines begin talks over the future of the last American military base in the Far Pacific.

"I think sooner or later the bases will have to go," said Sen. Leticia Ramos-Shahani, chairwoman of the Philippines Senate Foreign Relations Committee. "The only question is when and how. We will have to cut the umbilical cord at some point."

The United States views the naval and air bases as crucial to Western defense, including that of the Philippines, in the Pacific and Indian oceans as well as the Persian Gulf. At the same time, the installations provide the Philippines with more than $2 billion a year in rental income, guarantee U.S. military and economic aid and pump millions more dollars into the local economy.

The talks, expected to begin in early April, are part of a periodic review of the 1947 Military Bases Agreement under which the United States maintains facilities at Clark Air Base, Subic Bay naval base and four smaller installations.

About 40,000 U.S. military personnel, Defense Department officials and dependents are stationed at the bases, America's last major garrison in Southeast Asia.

Philippine sources say President Corason Aquino's government will demand a substantial increase in the $180 million annual rent, as well as an end to "unhindered military operations" allowed under the current agreement.

Some Philippine legislators have suggested the rent be increased to more than $2 billion a year. Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus, the chief Philippine negotiator in the talks, says $1.2 billion a year would be "realistic."

The talks will also determine whether the Philippines will allow the U.S. to use the bases for nuclear weapons, which are officially on the U.S. ship, to remain after the agreement expires in 1991. Any extension must be approved by two-thirds of the Philippines' 23-member Senate.

Sen. Ernesto Maceda, chairman of the Senate Defense Committee, said that unless the United States agrees to a substantial increase in financial compensation, "it would be a waste of time to consider extending the agreement after 1991."

The review will also profoundly affect the relationship between the United States and its former colony. It takes place amid a wave of nationalist sentiment unleashed by the 1986 uprising that toppled President Ferdinand Marcos and propelled Mrs. Aquino to power.

That sentiment has sharpened the "love-hate" relationship of 58 million Filipinos with the country that crushed their aspirations for freedom nearly a century ago and which, in the minds of many people here, still orchestrates events in its former colony.

"The review will show how far the Aquino leadership can assert Philippine sovereignty and protect the country's interest," said The Manila Chronicle.

Apart from compensation, the issue of nuclear weapons is also expected to complicate the talks. A provision in the new constitution states that the Philippines "consistent with the national interest, adopts and pursues a policy of freedom from nuclear weapons in its territory."

These bills have been submitted in the Senate to ban not only nuclear weapons but nuclear-powered warships. The United States refuses to confirm or deny that it stores such weapons here. But U.S. sources say 40 percent of the warships calling at Subic Bay are nuclear-powered. New Zealand, a U.S. ally, and some island nations in the South Pacific already have banned nuclear ships from their waters or ports.

American officials maintain that the bases are a linchpin in the worldwide U.S. network of installations protecting U.S. interests in East and South Asia.

Subic Bay, a deep-water harbor protected by the Zambales mountains about 50 miles west of Manila, controls access to the South China Sea, through which 90 percent of Japan's oil imports pass. It is a major U.S. Pacific Fleet base and recreation station for U.S. military and civilian employees in the Philippines.

SAN MIGUEL AIR STATION COMMUNICATIONS STATION—This facility in Zamboanga province is part of the U.S. Navy's worldwide communications network. It serves as a major link in U.S. naval operations monitoring Soviet satellite launches and naval activity.

WALLACE AIR STATION—In Luzon province of Luzon island, the air station operates surveillance, defense and radar surveillance networks protecting the Philippines and U.S. garrisons from attack. It also includes a Voice of America transmitter that relays broadcasts in East Asia.

CAMP O'DONNELL—The small post is in Ilocos province near the site of a World War II Japanese prison camp for Filipino and American soldiers taken prisoner on Batuan and Corregidor. It performs electronic warfare and communications missions in support of air and naval units here.

The Philippines

Population: 51.57 million (1982 estimate); including 91.5 percent Christian Malay; 4 percent Moslem Malay; 1.5 percent Chinese

Area: 115,831 square miles, slightly larger than Nevada, in a string of more than 7,000 islands

Capitals: Quezon City (Manila is de facto capital)

Languages: Filipino (based on Tagalog), Spanish, English

Religions: 83 percent Roman Catholic; 10 percent Protestant; 4 percent Moslem, 3 percent Buddhist and other

Main exports: Coconut products, sugar, logs and lumber, copper concentrates, bananas, garments

Main imports: Petroleum, industrial equipment, wheat

Background: Ferdinand Magellan claimed the Philippines for Spain in 1521, and the islands remained under Spanish control until the U.S. occupied them during the Spanish-American war in 1898. The country was granted independence from the U.S. in 1946. Ferdinand E. Marcos was elected president in 1965 and declared martial law in 1972. Although martial law was lifted in 1981, Marcos has retained the power to make laws by decree and to arrest and jail indefinitely anyone he considers a threat to national security. For years, the Roman Catholic church and other human rights groups have accused Marcos and the military of making arbitrary arrests and torturing prisoners. The U.S. and the Philippines signed an agreement in May calling for $900 million in military aid for 1985-89 in exchange for U.S. use of military bases.

Here are facts, figures on U.S. installations

MANILA, Philippines (AP)—Here are some facts and figures on U.S. military bases in the Philippines:

CLARK AIR BASE—Headquarters of the U.S. 13th Air Force, about 50 miles north of Manila. About 8,000 U.S. military personnel, 1,529 U.S. Defense Dept. civilian employees and about 16,500 dependents work and live on the base. It is officially under Philippines command.

The U.S. facility comprises about 9,200 of the garrison's 129,000 acres. Clark is the largest single U.S. Air Force base and transport point for American forces in the Pacific and Indian Oceans.

SUBIC BAY NAVAL BASE—This base about 50 miles west of Manila is the largest American naval installation outside the continental United States. The United States maintains nine major commands, including a naval air station, ship repair, communications and other services.

The U.S. portion comprises 14,826 acres of the 37,065-acre garrison, which is shared with the Philippine Navy. The United States supports U.S. naval operations in Japan, the Indian Ocean and throughout the Pacific. An average of 10 U.S. ships call at the port each month.

About 6,000 U.S. military personnel and 6,200 dependents are stationed there permanently.

CAMP JOHN HAY—Situated in Bugio City, 130 miles north of Manila, this garrison is a rest and recreation station for U.S. military and civilian employees in the Philippines.

SAN MIGUEL AIR STATION COMMUNICATIONS STATION—This facility in Zamboanga province is part of the U.S. Navy's worldwide communications network. It serves as a major link in U.S. naval operations monitoring Soviet satellite launches and naval activity.

WALLACE AIR STATION—In Luzon province of Luzon island, the air station operates surveillance, defense and radar surveillance networks protecting the Philippines and U.S. garrisons from attack. It also includes a Voice of America transmitter that relays broadcasts in East Asia.

threat as was perceived in the height of the Cold War when the bases agreement was signed.

In the eyes of Filipino opponents, the bases provide the United States with considerable political and economic leverage over them.

According to a widely held view, the United States supported Marcos to protect the bases and then turned against him only when it appeared the country was headed for a bloody upheaval that would have threatened U.S. interests.

"If we get the Americans out, they won't have as much opportunity to interfere," said Sen. Wigberto Tanada, a leading bases opponent. He proposes closing the bases when the current agreement runs out in three years and conducting studies in the interim to find alternate uses for the bases.

Supporters of the bases maintain that the Philippines, already languishing under a $29 billion foreign debt, can ill afford to do without the money it receives from the bases.

In addition to military and economic benefits, the bases pay their 68,000 Filipino employees and concessionaires more than $96 million a year. That makes the installations the country's second largest government employer.

"We believe that if they (Americans) would pull out, it would cause economic chaos in our city," said Antonio Abad Santos, mayor of Angeles City, the home of Clark Air Base. "It would become a ghost town. About 55 to 60 percent of our income comes from the base."

Despite the economic advantages, U.S. authorities acknowledge that public support for the bases has declined, although a majority still support the bases.

A survey of about 2,000 Manila residents, taken in December by the respected Ateneo Social Weather Station, indicated that 36 percent of the respondents believed the bases should be reduced or closed altogether.

That represented an increase of 11 percent in anti-bases sentiment over the previous six months, the survey said.

This past October, Communist rebels killed three Americans in a "sister" of unprecedented attacks outside Clark. The rebels have recently stepped up operations on the Bataan peninsula, which borders the Subic compound.

"I think anti-American sentiment has been part of the U.S.-Philippine relationship from the very beginning," said U.S. Ambassador Nicholas Platt. "It's there, and I don't regard the current situation as anything particularly threatening. It's a function of the relationship."
