U.S. joins in backing Afghan peace accord

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan on Monday directed Secretary of State George P. Shultz to go to Geneva to sign "historic accords" by which the United States and Soviet Union will guarantee a peace agreement dictating the removal of all Red Army troops from Afghanistan.

Reagan called the pact a "triumph" for the U.S.-backed insurgents after a bloody, eight-year war with the Soviet-supported Kabul regime. He said the rebels "can count on our continued support."

The rebels have rejected the peace pact and have vowed to continue fighting. Under a compromise with Moscow, the United States will continue sending weapons to the rebels, while the Kremlin continues providing arms to the Marxist government.

Reagan made the announcement in the sun-splashed Rose Garden before a ceremony to congratulate the men's and women's NCAA basketball champions.

This is the first time in the history of the Soviet Union that they have moved by aggression into another country and then had to withdraw," Shultz said later at a White House press briefing.

The peace settlement, negotiated between Pakistan and Afghanistan under the auspices of the United Nations, is to be signed on Thursday.

Shultz acknowledged that the removal of Soviet troops will not necessarily mean an end to the fighting. Once the Red Army is withdrawn, Shultz said, "then the people of Afghanistan have got to work things out. That's their right, and their problem. ... Perhaps we can get to a period of at least relative stability."

In the Rose Garden, a reporter shouted to Reagan that the rebels feel they are being sold out by the United States and will not be bound by the accord. "We are not," Reagan replied. Beginning May 15, the Soviet Union is to begin withdrawing its 115,000 troops, with 50 percent of the forces removed over a three-month period. All remaining Soviet forces are to be out by Feb. 15, 1989.

Shultz said Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze has promised to complete the withdrawal by the end of the year, ahead of the deadline. He said the United States will "push for that and expect that."

While hailing the agreement, Shultz said, "the withdrawal of Soviet troops is obviously not the end of the matter." Negotiations will continue for the establishment of an interim government. "We know it's not easy, it will be hard," Shultz said.

Hijackers kill Kuwaiti officer, demand fuel

The Associated Press

LARNACA, Cyprus (AP) — Arab hijackers killed a second hostage on Monday, tossed the bloody body from a commandeered Kuwaiti jet and threatened to kill nearly 60 other captives if the plane wasn't released.

The gunmen said the dead man was a Kuwaiti officer. He was the second of three Kuwaiti military men the hijackers have slain during the weeklong ordeal aboard the Kuwait Airways jet.

The hijackers have demanded that Kuwait release 17 pro-Iranian terrorists convicted in 1984 for bombings at the U.S. and French embassies.

Sources close to the negotiations said, however, that the hijackers demanded freedom Monday only for the three men among the 37 who have been sentenced to death. Kuwait has rejected all of the gunmen's demands.

At dusk, the hijackers put one of the passengers, identified as Fadi Marzouk al-Qatibi, on the radio.

Speaking in Arabic, he told the control tower, "The hijackers say that if you don't give us fuel they will kill all the passengers. Please listen to this and greetings to my family."

The hijackers said they wanted about nine hours' worth of fuel so they could fly to an unspecified "neutral country."

In Kuwait, Foreign Minister Sheikh Sabah al-Ahmed al-Sabah said his country is prepared to lose more hostages rather than give in to terrorism.

"We will try our utmost to protect our dear ones, aboard the plane, but we will not surrender to any blackmail, even if we lose more of them," he told a news conference. "This is not the decision of Kuwait's government. It is a decision of the people."

Decrease in rates on shelf

The Associated Press

BOISE — State regulators have revoked Friday's scheduled 1.3 percent decrease in Idaho Power Co. rates, offering the utility some limited financial help in coping with its second straight low-water year.

But while taking that action on Monday, the Public Utilities Commission delayed for several days its decision on whether the company's proposed one-year, 13.1 percent drought surcharge will take effect April 20 as requested.

"Every day that this proceeding is delayed, the financial condition of Idaho Power Co. in 1988 deteriorates further," utility attorney Larry Ripley told commissioners during Monday's conference on the $41.3-million rate-hike proposal.

Commission Chairman Joe Miller said the three-man panel wanted more time to decide whether to allow all or part of the surcharge to take effect next week subject to refund or to suspend any rate relief pending a full-scale investigation into the need.

Commissioner Perry Swisher said, however, that historically the commission has allowed similar rate increases to take effect subject to refund pending review. The full surcharge would raise the average residential customer's monthly bill by about $7.20.

The case was placed on an expedited schedule with three consecutive days of public hearings set to begin May 18.

With the state heading into its second straight drought, Idaho Power filed the surcharge request last month, contending its reduced hydro-generating ability has crippled its tra-

Tax filing reprieve may help

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Friday is the deadline for filing 1987 federal tax returns, but if confusion about the new tax law has caused you to put off the chore this long you might be better off delaying the inevitable for another four months.

"Just filling out a one-page Form 4868 will give you a reprieve until Aug. 15 — but you must estimate what you owe, if anything, and enclose a check with Form 4868. But at least you won't be rushed into making a mistake."

The Internal Revenue Service expects about 6.25 million couples and individuals to ask for the automatic delay, about 1 million more than last year. If you plan to join that number, says IRS spokesman Wilson Fadel, you should get a Form 4868 immediately.

"If you wait until the last day to look at the library or Post Office for the form, you may not find one," Fadel said. The IRS is expecting 107 million individual tax returns this year and estimates that 97 million of them will come pouring in during the 21 days that end on April 22.

Reforms leave teachers' role unsettled

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Ten years of teacher reform have produced "awesome" amounts of legislation but left unsettled whether teachers are full-fledged professionals or merely "semiskilled workers," said a Rand Corp. report released Monday.

More than 1,000 bills were introduced and hundreds enacted in legislatures across the country during the past decade boosting teacher pay and tightening rules governing training and certification.

But that produced more contradiction than direction, concluded the 80-page report, "The Evolution of Teacher Policy," by Linda Darling-Hammond and Barnett Barry of Rand's Center for the Study of the Teaching Profession in Santa Monica, Calif.

They said policymakers have so far failed to resolve the key question: whether teachers are professionals ministering to the individual needs of students, or "semiskilled workers" needing constant supervision and regulation.

"By sheer volume of legislation it is clear that teaching has been reformed," said the report. But it added, "Teaching policy is up for grabs — and there are lots of people grabbing."

National Education Association President Mary Hatwood Futrell called the Rand report "right on target."

The Rand study is being published nearly five years after the Reagan administration issued the report "A Nation at Risk," which blasted mediocrity in U.S. schools.

According to the Rand report: • Average salaries rose 31 percent from 1981 to 1986 to $25,240. More recent figures from the National Education Association estimate average salaries at $28,000 this year.

But Callen has now returned the fire, saying it is Robbins who is out of touch by voting with Democratic Valley Republicans.

"I think that's what he wants — he's power hungry," Callen said. "I think he's climbing, just running over the top of me," he added, referring to rumors — which Robbins has denied — that the certified public accountant will ultimately seek the state auditor's office.

For now, Callen notes that Robbins voted with a House minority of four area lawmakers to raise public education funding, instead of with Callen's majority of eight Magic Valley representatives setting on the $350 million budget that became law.

"Maybe I just talk to more conservative people," said Callen, referring

Callen seeks re-election to floterial House seat

By BART JANSEN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Rep. Jerry Callen broke his silence Monday and dispelled rumors of political death by announcing he would seek re-election for his seat under siege from two fellow Republicans.

"I had considered not running again because of an increased cattle-leeding operation, length of time required to be in Boise each year and the time spent campaigning for re-election," said the two-term Jerome Republican.

"However, because my opponent, Gary Robbins, has thrown down the gauntlet against the good, conservative voters of Magic Valley, I have decided to match my conservative voting record against his liberal record and put it to the test of the voters," he added.

Robbins, a two-term Republican representative from District 1, decided to oppose Callen for his eight-courty district instead of running again for his own seat.

The majority-party contest, in which no Democrats have shown an interest, is expected to be the most controversial in Magic Valley. It pits Callen's strict "hold-the-line" conservatism against moderate voices, including Robbins, calling for increased spending through "the prudent investment of resources."

Robbins calls himself a "middle-of-the-road" Republican interested in education and economic development. Robbins labeled Callen an "ultra-conservative," out of step with Magic Valley residents.

to conversations about education funding at cattle shows, farm sales and coffee shops, "but everybody talked to said enough is enough."

For that money, Callen would suggest lengthening the school year and reorganizing teacher assignments.

"Something has to change," he said. As a former seven-year member of the Jerome school board, Callen said children in wide-ranging special education programs, from gifted-and-talented children to migrants to retarded, should be channeled back into the regular classroom.

While recognizing federal money is dedicated for some of the programs, Callen said class sizes in Jerome could be reduced from 30 to 25 students down to 19 if all the special programs were absorbed back into regular education. • See CALLEN on Page A2

Cher, Douglas win top Oscars; 'Emperor' takes 9 awards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cher won the Oscar as best actress Monday for her role as a widow who discovers love in "Moonstruck," while Bernardo Bertolucci's "The Last Emperor," a tragic epic of modern China, dominated the night with nine awards, including best picture.

"I don't think this means that I am somebody, but I guess I'm on my way," Cher told the cheering crowd as she accepted her prize in a beaded, translucent dress with plunging neckline.

Michael Douglas was named best actor at the 60th Academy Awards for his role as a ruthless insider trader in "Wall Street."

Best supporting performers were

Olympia Dukakis, as Cher's outspoken Italian mother coping with a wayward husband in "Moonstruck," and Sean Connery, the hard-fisted, inimitable Chicago beat cop in "The Untouchables."

"Emperor," the sweeping story of China's last imperial ruler, won in all nine categories for which it had been nominated by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences — including best film, best director honors for Bertolucci, screenplay adaptation, costumes, original score, art direction, cinematography, sound and editing.

That made it the most honored movie since "Ben Hur" took home a record 11 Oscars in 1960.

It was a night of few surprises but some awkwardness, with the shadow of a strike by movie and TV writers falling heavily on the proceedings. There were numerous references, some joking, some serious, to the labor dispute, and on several occasions performers appeared to stumble over their remarks.

Douglas, who also starred in last year's box-office smash "Fatal Attraction," thanked his father, actor Kirk Douglas, "for helping a son step out from his shadow."

Douglas' award was presented by Marlee Matlin, a deaf actress who won last year's Oscar. She has been taking speech lessons, and after signing her opening remarks she haltingly announced the nominees to prolonged cheers.

The actress category had sparked the most interest this year, with Cher drawing strong competition from Glenn Close in "Fatal Attraction" and Sally Kirkland in "Anna." Also nominated were Holly Hunter for "Broadcast News" and two-time winner Marjorie Streep for "Ironweed."

John Patrick Shanley's script for "Moonstruck" won for best original screenplay, while Denmark's "Babette's Feast" was named best foreign film.

As an Italian, a European, the Academy Awards always seemed like a distant ceremony. Distant, remote, something I did not belong to," Bertolucci told the Shrine Auditorium audience. He was introduced by Robin Williams, who jokingly said the academy was offering this year's winner a "green card," a reference to the fact that none of the five director nominees was American.

"OK, Michael, let's go!" a jubilant Miss Dukakis whooped after accepting the gold statuette. The reference was to her cousin, Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for president.

Backstage, she told the assembled media: "It's the year of the Dukakiti" and asked whether she believed her Oscar would help influence her cousin's political fortunes, she replied, "I hope so."

The best original movie song of 1987 was "The Time of My Life" from "Dirty Dancing."

The first prize of the night, for best visual effects, went to "Innerspace," a Steven Spielberg-produced "fantasy about a test pilot reduced to microscopic size and accidentally injected into the body of a grocery clerk."

The award for the most animated short film went to "The Man Who Planted Trees," "Young at Heart" was best documentary short subject and "The Ten-Year Lunch: The Wit and Wisdom of the Algonquin Roundtable" was best documentary feature.

Panamanian teachers demonstrate

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Hundreds of teachers demonstrated Monday against Panamanian strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega as Panama slid further toward chaos in the seventh week of an economic and political crisis.

American business executives tried to figure out how they were affected by new U.S. sanctions that could cost Panama millions of dollars.

The sanctions prohibit U.S. businesses from making payments, including taxes, to the Panamanian government.

Panamá is virtually bankrupt because of a run on its banks; the freezing of Panamanian deposits in U.S. banks and a variety of American sanctions aimed at forcing Noriega to resign.

Protesting teachers, who along with 100,000 other public employees have not been paid fully in more than a month, gathered in front of the Ministry of Education and shouted anti-Noriega slogans for several hours before dispersing without incident.

"Pineapple face, you must go," they cried in a mocking reference to Noriega's jowly, pompadour face.

Commerce and Industries Minister Mario Rognoni said Monday after a meeting with more than 30 representatives of American companies that Panama planned to negotiate with firms affected by the U.S. sanctions.

However, he said if the companies do not pay utility bills because of the U.S. executive order, their services would be cut.

"It is a delicate situation for which we are looking for a way to help the American companies continue operating in Panama," he said.

Fred Denton, executive director of the American Chamber of Commerce in Panama City, said he had received numerous calls from representatives of U.S. firms asking how the tax sanctions would be applied.

"If we take this to the letter of the law, I wouldn't be able to buy a Panamanian postage stamp," Denton said. "We're in a complete state of confusion."

President Reagan on Friday invoked the sweeping economic sanctions law against Panama to force the ouster of Noriega, the commander of the 15,000-member Defense Forces and the power behind the civilian government.

Teachers

sition and lack of funds.

Twenty-seven states enacted tougher teacher training requirements, including testing of academic ability and minimum grade-point averages. States are increasingly stressing liberal arts background over education courses.

By 1986, 46 states mandated teacher competency testing for admission to teacher education or certification or both. But some states have delayed implementation because of lack of funding, or because of concerns about the tests' validity or low pass rates among minority-teaching candidates.

Contradictorily, 46 states have cleared the way for substandard, limited emergency certification. Twenty-seven of those states issue certificates to people lacking even a bachelor's degree to solve teacher shortages.

A first wave of reform starting in the late 1970s was aimed at boosting pay and making teachers more accountable. States feared a looming teacher shortage and worried that poor quality teachers threatened efforts to boost their economies, the report said.

The re-4-2 years have produced new reforms aimed at freeing teachers from unnecessary regulation in the classroom. In effect, reformers wanted higher standards to enter teaching, but fewer rules about what and how to teach.

lational scheme of subsidizing local rates with sales of surplus energy.

Although its current rate schedule was based on annual surplus power sales of $68 million or more, the company said sales last year and those anticipated this year are less than a third of that amount.

To provide this relief, the commission withdrew the 1.3 percent rate increase that was to take effect Friday, allowing rates to remain unchanged until a final decision was made on the drought surcharge.

While some Idaho Power customer groups have objected to the surcharge, there was no opposition to postponing the rate decrease, which would have cut the average customer's bill by about 71 cents a month.

investor dividends this year, a claim Ripley flatly disputed.

But Gilmore also contended that the request for the surcharge ran counter to the company's previously granted request to base rates on average water conditions over a period of years. That was intended to limit the impact on revenues of high-water and low-water years.

Randy Bugde, representing Idaho Power's agricultural irrigation customers, agreed, arguing that shareholders benefit from increased revenues during high-water years and therefore should bear the burden of reduced earnings in drought years.

"We don't recall there was any attempt to make a refund during the good water years when the company was making record profits," Bugde said.

Miller and Swisher both said the surcharge case would result in another investigation into the validity of creating some kind of balancing account that would head off the need for surcharges during low-water periods while giving consumers some consideration during good water years.

Callen

lar classrooms.

"The smart students could help the slow students — that's how they did it when I was in school," Callen said.

Callen mentioned Robbins' personal business success in relation to his ability to govern. Robbins is completing a Chapter 11 reorganization and is now strictly a farmer, after selling off his dairy herd last September under the federal buy-out program.

"He's kind of a failure at a business that is booming," Callen said. "I know that dairy operations in our area, around Jerome, are expanding tooth and nail. I know he can't run his own business and he's trying to run state business."

A third Republican challenger for Callen's seat is Odeen Redman, who is president of the Albion-Telephone Co. Redman grounds his campaign in his business background, while considering his philosophy more similar to Robbins than Callen's.

Redman's entry from the district's eastern portion, Cassia and Minidoka counties that has heavily supported Callen, throws added uncertainty into the race.

Callen observed that Redman could either split the moderate vote, hurting himself and Robbins. Or Redman and Robbins together could pull votes away from Callen.

"It could hurt me," Callen said, "it could split the vote, I just don't know."

Callen added that he considered Redman a Democrat, after having heard he supported Democratic candidates in the past. Redman has said he will seek the seat as a Republican.

As Robbins has a steering-committee chairman from the Mini-Cassia area, Callen also expects to enlist a campaign manager from the eastern portion of the district.

Since no Democrats have yet entered the race, this primary contest is expected to seat the winner in the 1989 Legislature.

"I've told people that if they're going to contribute, now's the time," Callen said.

Deputy Attorney General Michael Gilmore, representing the commission staff, said the staff recommendation in the surcharge case would not be prepared until the end of this month. But he indicated the staff felt that even under drought conditions the utility would still be able to pay its investors dividends this year, a claim Ripley flatly disputed.

But Gilmore also contended that the request for the surcharge ran counter to the company's previously granted request to base rates on average water conditions over a period of years. That was intended to limit the impact on revenues of high-water and low-water years.

PUC approves rate increase

BOISE (AP) — Idaho utility regulators have approved a $385,787 interim increase in the local rates General Telephone Co. of the Northwest Inc. charges its 69,000 northern Idaho customers.

The increase ordered by the state Public Utilities Commission Monday will appear as a 2.6-percent surcharge on local-access and extended-area service charges as soon as the revised rates can be filed with the commission.

The PUC rejected most of the $2 million interim rate increase General Telephone requested on Feb. 29, which would have raised local rates about 15 percent.

The commission also ordered the company by May 8 to implement toll-free extended-area service between Priest River and Oldtown and to use an improved monthly bill format for all its Idaho customers.

The PUC ruled General Telephone had solved some billing problems and inaccuracies in rural mileage charges and allowed it 25 more basis points, raising $163,792 in additional revenue.

The remaining $251,995 stems from changes in the utility's federal taxes and shifts in revenue allocations ordered by the Federal Communications Commission.

a corporate-wide drive to improve output and cut costs. But officials said 22 lower-paying production line jobs are being added.

"As to layoffs, about 31 hourly employees are affected," corporate spokeswoman Kathy Knuth said.

"The Pocatello plant has been going through a productivity study as part of a corporate-wide program ... to determine the most efficient ways to provide quality products," Ms. Knuth said. "They've known about the study for some time. The last day for a full-time employee might be the next week or two."

After labeling reports of the restructuring as "strictly rumor" earlier this month, management officials formed hourly employees last week that 22 maintenance workers, 16 equipment operators and 12 job leaders would be terminated and 22 lower-paying jobs on a production line would be added.

The restructuring will streamline operations and improve communications, flexibility and responsiveness on the line, Ms. Knuth said.

Those full-time employees laid off will have one-year recall rights to whatever full-time slots open or they can choose to work part-time, she said. The plant has had a workforce of about 480 in recent months.

Witness returned to Montana

POCATELLO (AP) — A man arrested last week in Chubbuck on a Montana warrant alleging obstruction of justice has been returned to Great Falls, Mont., where he is considered a key witness to the murder of a deaf woman, Bannock County Sheriff S.R. Gameson said.

Jeffrey Cahill Baldwin, 26, of Great Falls, was arrested without incident on April 6 and later returned to Montana by Cascade County detectives.

He is the fourth person arrested in connection with the beating death of 21-year-old Ethel Woods. Three other defendants were charged March 30 either with deliberate homicide or accountability for deliberate homicide.

Prosecutors contend Baldwin either concealed or helped conceal the victim's body in a starnwell area after she was killed during a party in his basement apartment in Great Falls.

The woman's body was retrieved March 2 from the Missouri River, where officers found it wrapped in a roll of carpet weighted by cinder blocks.

Ms. Woods, a 1986 graduate of the Montana School for the Deaf and Blind, was deaf and had limited speech ability.

Gameson said Baldwin's parents live near American Falls. When it was learned he might be in the area, the sheriff said a number of law enforcement agencies combined to track him down.

U.S. 95 promotion in works

LEWISTON (AP) — U.S. Highway 95 covering the length of Idaho could become the most famous American road since Route 66.

The Scenic U.S. Highway 95 Association, formed in January, has embarked on a program called "Highway 95 Ambassadors."

Anyone willing to give away packets of Idaho brochures while traveling within or out of the state will become official ambassadors, said Barbara Wilson, executive director of the association.

The group also intends to publish a monthly tabloid called "Guide to 95," focusing on the activities along the highway.

The main goal of the organization, comprising all 13 Idaho counties the highway passes through, is to improve the road and the towns along its 550-mile stretch.

Nampa man dies in accident

NAMPA (AP) — A Nampa man has died when his homemade dune buggy rolled down Pickle Butte near the Snake River.

Wade Boston, 28, died instantly of head injuries at about 3:30 p.m. Sunday, Idaho State Police Trooper Norman Corder said.

Boston's passenger, his aunt Carol Gray, also sustained head injuries. She was taken to Mercy Medical Center in Nampa where she was treated and released.

Witnesses said the dune buggy had stopped on the slope after several attempts to scale the butte. Boston tried to back down when the vehicle turned sideways and rolled several times.

Chief justice won't receive work benefits for heart attack

BOISE (AP) — Allan Shepard, chief justice of the Idaho Supreme Court, will not receive worker's compensation benefits for a heart attack he contends was related to "excessive on-the-job stress."

The State Insurance Fund has rejected Shepard's claim, ruling that his Dec. 2, 1987, heart attack was not caused by work-related pressure.

The decision was announced Monday by Gary Arnold, executive director of the Idaho Industrial Commission, which processes claims for state workers. The commission had referred Shepard's claim to the State Insurance Fund for an investigation.

Shepard, 64, filed two claims for worker's compensation with the commission in January, one for his heart attack and another for "burns and abrasions" he suffered at a picnic during a judges' convention in South Dakota last August.

The 19-year veteran of the high court suffered a heart attack on Dec. 2 a few hours after he presided over a Supreme Court hearing on Idaho Power Co.'s appeal of a Public Utilities Commission rate increase ruling. He was hospitalized for a short time, released, and went back to work in his office. Shepard resumed presiding over appeals hearings in February.

Shepard sought medical benefits covering all costs related to the Dec. 2 heart attack. However, Insurance Fund officials who investigated the claim refuse to disclose the amount requested due to privacy provisions in state law.

A letter received by Shepard on Monday from the State Insurance Fund stated, "Following a thorough investigation, it has been determined you are not eligible to receive benefits under Idaho workers' compensation. In our view, the myocardial infarction (heart attack) you suffered does not constitute an injury or occupational disease as those terms are defined in the applicable statutes."

Shepard may appeal the decision to the Industrial Commission. He could not be reached for comment Monday.

Since the state has determined Shepard's heart attack was not connected to his job with the court, the state's medical insurance carrier, Blue Shield of Idaho, considers it an injury that is covered by the company's medical insurance policy with the state, said Wayne Olin of Lewiston, the company president.

Part of Shepard's treatment at St. Luke's Regional Medical Center in Boise was the injection of a costly new drug for heart failure known as TPA. That treatment is not covered by Blue Shield.

The second claim was filed for burns and abrasions suffered by Shepard and his wife Aug. 7 at a picnic in Rapid City, S.D. Shepard and his wife, Donna, were attending a conference for chief justices when a picnic table overturned and both were sprayed with hot liquids.

The state has agreed to pay that claim, said Arnold.

Asbestos removal cost high

POCATELLO (AP) — The problem of asbestos removal is so big that not even the Environmental Protection Agency wants to tackle it, says an Idaho deputy attorney general.

But Mike Jones, legal counsel for the state Department of Administration, told a group of contractors at an asbestos removal workshop in Pocatello that legal liability will force most building owners to remove asbestos even without a federal mandate.

Jones is a member of a special committee of the National Association of Attorneys General set up to look at the asbestos liability problem.

He told contractors at the Idaho State University workshop that over 20,000 lawsuits are pending against the bankrupt Johns-Manville Co., the leading manufacturer of asbestos products.

The state of Idaho has put in a claim for $135 million against Johns-Manville, and that is probably a conservative estimate of what it will cost the state to remove or encase asbestos in state buildings, Jones said.

Asbestos is "deadly dangerous and there is no safe dose," he said of the material widely used for years in insulation in many public and private buildings.

In 1986, Congress mandated that all school systems inspect buildings for exposed asbestos and develop a management plan by October of this year. They must implement those plans by next year.

The EPA was expected to issue a similar mandate for all public buildings, but decided to delay such a plan until it could further study the magnitude of the asbestos problem.

Jones said that has been interpreted as an admission that asbestos is too big for EPA. "But the huge liability problem asbestos poses means most building owners will have to clean up the potential cancer-causing substance anyway, he said.

The General Accounting Office estimates asbestos accounts for 40 percent of the increase in personal injury lawsuits from 1974 to 1985, Jones said. Asbestos litigation has accounted for 14,000 lawsuits since 1976.

Idaho already has spent millions to deal with asbestos problems, Jones said. The Industrial Administration Building in Boise had to be vacated and cleaned up at a cost of $2 million, he said.

Now the state requires all buildings to be tested for asbestos.

Reforms of FAA are presently being examined in Congress

With the number of passengers traveling by air almost doubling since airline deregulation in 1978, and with near-collisions and traffic-controller errors mounting, the American public is rightly concerned about the state of our air transportation system.

Rep. Brock Adams

A growing number of critics believe that the bureaucracy of the Federal Aviation Administration and its umbrella agency, the Department of Transportation, is too cumbersome to keep pace with growth in the aviation industry. A variety of proposals have been put forward. One is to remove the FAA from the Department of Transportation; a second is to create a non-profit, user-owned corporation to run the air traffic system; a third would take the Aviation Trust Fund out of the federal budget process to provide a more secure source of funding for FAA needs.

I believe that shifting responsibility from one bureaucracy to another will not result in a safer or more efficient air traffic control system. Removing the FAA from the Department of Transportation will not result in an agency more responsive to the changing needs of the aviation system. The FAA has always had a bureaucratic culture of its own, separate from the transportation secretary's office and resistant to any outside interference.

A separate agency might more easily make changes in air traffic control operations—by expanding its capacity to handle more planes, for example—but its history before it was a part of the Department of Transportation did not show it to be any more willing to issue safety regulations that burden the industry. I agree with Secretary

James H. Burnley's testimony before the Senate Commerce Committee: "Any time you have regulated interests telling Congress they need less oversight from those charged with regulating them on safety matters, healthy skepticism is in order."

I have an even greater concern about a private corporation running the air traffic control system. We need to recognize that operating control towers, allocating the public airspace and issuing air safety rules are necessary and legitimate governmental functions. For example, the military uses 15 percent of the services of the air traffic control system. Controlling landings at crowded airports must be based on safety, not profits, and certainly no private entity owned by the airlines can be expected to independently regulate compliance with noise-abatement and environmental statutes, or to impose stiff penalties on the airlines for violations of safety rules.

This doesn't mean that reform of the FAA is not needed. Clearly there are areas that need to be addressed. For example:

• The FAA and Department of Transportation system of procurement is too slow and painful. Equipment purchased to modernize the air traffic control system is often obsolete by the time it is delivered and installed. The FAA must be able to purchase new equipment quickly and should keep up with existing technology, often purchasing off-the-shelf items rather than putting off improvements until a new, more perfect technology is completed.

• The FAA is hamstringing civil-service rules that prohibit it from paying cost-of-living differentials to employees who live in high-cost areas. As a result, it is often difficult to obtain qualified controllers for busy airports like O'Hare in Chicago, Logan in Boston and La Guardia in New York. Equally troubling is the insufficient number of fully trained qualified controllers. Ideology and old scores should not prevent the administration from giving serious consideration to rehiring many of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization members fired in 1981.

• As chairman of the House Budget Committee in the 1970s, I used to believe that all federal funds should be in a unified budget. The events of the last seven years have changed my mind. The Aviation Trust Fund, paid for by taxes on airline fuel and airline tickets, was designed to pay for air traffic control and for airport improvements. Unfortunately, we now see the trust fund being used in the budget process as a way to offset the deficit. This has meant that spending from the trust fund is usually delayed and often is less than is needed. We should remove the trust fund from the overall limits on the federal budget so that user fees go for the purposes designated.

The above reforms are being addressed by Congress in the current debate over the future of our air transportation system. The result should be a governmental process that will respond more quickly to changes in the aviation industry and continue to handle the growing amount of traffic in a safe and efficient manner. In reaching that result, we have to identify the specific problems in the system that hinder innovation and develop policies to address them. We also have to recognize that change for change's sake can produce more harm than good.

Rep. Brock Adams, D-Wash., is a member of the Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee. He served as secretary of transportation in the Carter administration.

Letters/ Constituents should straighten out Stallings on SIS

Only waste is permanent

Everyone in this country has an equal voice. By remaining silent, you are giving your consent to the people in power. So it angers me to see my generation, a product of the "me" decade, disregarding our ability to affect a change.

Everyone that I have talked to in Burley has been too caught up in their daily routines to take five minutes to write their congressmen, and straighten out his misconception that most Idahoans are in favor of the SIS. We just received a letter from Congressman Richard Stallings that states such blatant lies as "The SIS... will create 750 permanent jobs" and that he "believes" that the SIS is safe, needed and wanted. I don't consider seven years to be "permanent."

The only permanent thing is the waste that will be left behind after the jobs and money are gone. Also, why does The Times-News report the cost of the facility as $500 million on the front page of last Friday's paper, and as $900 million on page B-3? I realize that it was April Fool's Day, but whatever happened to truth in advertising?

If I was buying a house in Idaho, (which depends on the outcome of these hearings) I would be somewhat more than concerned if the broker told me it was $50,000 on the front of the contract, but $90,000 on page B-3. Read the fine print people, and ask questions before you sign your lives away.

I challenge Stallings to tell us how transporting plutonium and its wastes without an approved container is an approved destination is safe. How does "Tricky Dicky" plan for the "temporary" storage at the site, where it has already contaminated the aquifer? And how is it needed, when we are dismantling more nuclear weapons than the SIS will help to create? Maybe we can transport the waste in Senator Sym's mouth!

I challenge Richard Stallings to provide jobs for Idahoans that we can be proud of, jobs for real people, not just nuclear physicists and Ph.D.'s from out-of-state. Where do they find these guys?

These eggheads are more concerned with their inventions and lasers and other high-tech toys than with what the pentagon plans to do with them once they've perfected them.

The wife of Mr. Lawrence Livermore has been trying for years to have her late husband's name removed from the name of the biggest "death research" factory in the country. She knows that he would have wanted it that way, because she believes that he was a good person; a naive genius, who was taken advantage of. She believes that good people follow the maxim "Thou shalt not kill," and I believe her, more than I believe Congressman Stallings.

State code is on his side

Okay, folks, if you're so proud of that form concerning that car you flied me on, let's air it in public. You've been taking the attitude that there's something I wanted to keep hidden. Nope!

First, the way the car sold at auction: After being already sold the week before. Should have smelled the rat then, but I trusted those good old boys. First, they ran it halfway inside the auction barn with the vacuum modulator, unhooked so it wouldn't smoke so bad. Course, the car wouldn't go over 35 mph, but that wouldn't be known until after the car was sold and paid for.

I didn't see the smoke, and the good old boys said the car was good, so me and another guy bid on it. Half a hundred people could have got stuck with that pile of junk, but that's an auction for you. I got stuck!

Then comes title time. Go pay it off, and they say, "the owner's stepped out." "Well," I says, "I need the car." So I drive it to a job finding out it wasn't good at all. Tell him, the auctioneer, it's bad. No soap. "Come get the title," they say. "See you in court." I says, Here's an interesting kicker, the guy that sold the car was theoretically not the guy whose name was on the title. And when I got a title, maybe the one to the car in question, maybe not, somebody burglarized me, took the car's keys, my wallet, that title, the bill of sale... what a mess.

Then the guy whose name was on the title wouldn't get a duplicate. He claimed that he didn't take the car to the auction, but sold it for junk. First accurate statement in this whole charade.

Well, it ends up that the car gets towed away because the state code says that you need your name on a title to do anything with a car. Couldn't get title, even after a judge tells the guy to, so... but more on the state code.

It's not something that motor vehicles is concerned with. They once told me, in lieu of large fines, that I couldn't sell a car not in my name, but this case, I guess is different. Not according to the state code.

I'll say for freedom of the press. Sometimes when a little guy gets zapped, big interests try to make him feel that he shouldn't do anything about it... that somehow he is in the wrong. And the press is your only recourse. In this case, the state code has been violated, then ignored.

So far as that burglary is concerned, I'm surprised the cop didn't fall asleep while I was telling him about it. Sorry, fell, didn't mean to bore you. The off-shoot of this is that, as I publicly stated before, I've got the state code on my side. That should count for something.

What's best to grow shed?

In your April 7, 1988, lawn and garden "E" section on page 3, you give a list for a garden maintenance chart. This is very helpful information, however, I noticed that in the chart the last section is for structures. It says to check paint stains and repair.

It also says to fertilize every two to five years.

As this seems to be a good way to avoid buying a bigger shed could you please tell me what brand of fertilizer would be the best to get my shed to grow? Or should I just put this section of the paper in it?

Auto crashes rough on all

It is a tragic situation whenever anyone is killed by a vehicle. It's a sad time for the family and friends of the victim. It is also equally hard on the driver and his family and friends.

Sometimes the driver of the auto seems to be treated differently than other times. I remember when a child on a bicycle was hit on his way to school. The driver didn't stop and stated later to the police he didn't know he hit anyone. He said he felt a bump. The child died. As I recall, this man didn't have to go to jail or post bond.

Driver said his windshield was dirty and the sun was in his eyes. Is there a difference between this excuse and one too many beers?

I am wondering if it makes a difference who does the hitting and who is hit.

Letters/ City Council members should be seated from districts

Citizens should choose own

The time is now to have the city council seats be made up of districts. There have been times when the entire city council had homes in an area that could be covered with a fingerprint in the telephone directory.

There have been times when the city council has been ruled by a simple head movement of a council member or city manager.

We have seen the council ignore advisory votes by the public, we have seen actions taken by the council that point directly to their conservative makeup.

If we had a council made up of district representatives we may have had a swimming pool in an operation with simple repairs, we may have had parks that did not need charges to enter, we may not have had inner-city parks surrounded by chain-link fence.

We may have had a much better city whose officials are accountable to their citizens.

Eighty years of domination is long enough to be ruled by the 400. Let the citizens choose some of their own to set the future.

Another useless bill on book

In the last few weeks I have read several good letters asking questions about what good the new right-to-work law has done for Idaho. But so far no one has been able to list all the new jobs that have been created so now we have another useless bill on the books.

Other people have pointed out that in lots of areas of the state workers' wages, hours and benefits have been cut just to keep their job or at least that is what the employers keep saying. So who is going to make up all these lost taxes if the average hourly earnings continue to drop in Idaho?

If workers are to maintain a fair share of the nation's income, their buying power has to rise at least as fast as the nation's productivity growth.

Since 1977, output per worker in manufacturing has gone up 34 percent, but "real compensation per hour" (the buying power of an hour's work of work) has gone down 17 percent. Production workers' real earnings fell seven percent from 1977 to 1987. The lag in buying power was one of the most often overlooked causes of the Great Depression of the 1930s.

The top executive and the boards of directors of corporations have been raising themselves huge salaries and bonuses and giving dividends to their stockholders while regarding workers and their incomes as the enemy of competitiveness. Business leaders too often view their interests narrowly in terms of the bottom line and they overlook the damaging social and economic consequences of the decline in the buying power of so many of Idaho's families.

If Idaho is to move ahead in the coming years, we will have to quit losing our high paying jobs, change our tax laws, do something with our stagnant minimum wage and stop the assault on trade unions. This is an election year, let's elect representation that will start turning our economy around.

Basic issue not addressed

The ongoing debate that has been continued in these columns ever since Stephen Hartgen and his wife raised a concern about instruction in a junior high science class has been often interesting but sometimes also rapid, for the reason that some contributions have not addressed the basic issue at all.

The Hartgens, let it be said, are certainly correct in demanding that no religious indoctrination be permitted in a public school classroom, be it in a science class or any other, based upon the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution. It is probably safe to say, no one in a Magic Valley public school system would want it otherwise.

What has surprised this writer that has only a portion of the First Amendment has been appealed to either directly or by inference, namely the clause, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion... commonly known as the Establishment Clause.

Unless this writer missed it, no one seems to have taken cognizance of the next words of this amendment, "...or abridging the free exercise thereof," often called the Free Exercise Clause.

In the debate in which the local public school board finds itself the question whether so-called "creationism" is scientific or not is quite irrelevant.

For purposes of simplification let us assume that it is religious. No one would take issue with the postulate that "creationism" is based on faith — religious faith if you will.

If in science textbooks the evolutionary model is presented as the only scientific, correct and intellectually acceptable method of accounting for the origin and development of our wonderful world, a student is forced upon the horns of dilemma, namely: If the textbook model is scientific, demonstrated fact and truth, then his or her religious faith must be spurious, unintellectual, demonstrably false.

Furthermore, if the Christian student's faith is necessarily false in this one area, why should his or her religious faith not be fictitious and deceptive in other areas as well?

The state has no business forcing this kind of moral dilemma upon any student. Indeed, the Free Exercise Clause of the Constitution would hardly allow such practice in a public school classroom. The Constitution clearly does not permit the establishment of any particular religious dogma, but at the same time neither does it allow "...prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

Admittedly this is a difficult, knotty problem in the American public educational system.

Some might suggest the solution that churches reinterpret the Bible, particularly the first 11 chapters of the book of Genesis. Some have even added to the Biblical writings. Such solutions are neither new nor satisfactory and would solve exactly nothing.

A viable way of eluding the "Scylla and Charybdis" of our Constitution's "Establishment Clause" and "Free Exercise Clause" might be to allow — or even to encourage — a science teacher in the public school to present the evolutionist model as the currently best known and most widely accepted explanation in the scientific community for the origin and continuation of our world, which, however, has not yet arrived and does not supply some ultimate answers but is as yet an unproven, un-demonstrated theory, which no reputable and honest scholar or scientist would challenge.

Alongside this the instructor might also point out that an alternate, likewise unproven theory may be found in a religious orientation, which, however, must be sought and pursued outside the classroom.

Hereby both the religious belief of any student as well as the non-religious, also atheistic, student's inquiry and belief would be protected.

Drugs, greed corrupt mob, ex-Mafioso tells senators

WASHINGTON (AP) - A former member of the Sicilian Mafia told senators Monday that "money, drugs and greed" have corrupted the mob organization.

Testifying behind a screen in the Senate's most extensive organized-crime hearings in a quarter-century, Tommaso Buscetta said the Mafia has changed so much in Italy due to the drug trade that he no longer feels bound "by the code of omertà—silence."

FBI officials, who also testified before the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, said the drug involvement of U.S. organized crime families is less extensive, although many individual mobsters are linked to narcotics.

"Before, the Mafia would have nothing to do with drugs," Buscetta testified. "Drugs brought too much attention from the authorities, too much heat. Now, drugs were the main part of the Mafia's business, and everyone in the Sicilian Mafia was rich because of it."

The subcommittee, headed by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., held the first of four hearings to assess the state of organized crime in the 25 years since Mafia figure Joseph Valachi gave dramatic testimony before the same panel.

In those 1963 hearings, Valachi introduced the phrase La Cosa Nostra to describe the organized crime families.

At Monday's session, everyone had to pass through a metal detector and enter the hearing room after Buscetta so he could enter without being seen.

"The room was filled with large charts containing lists and pictures of the major Mafia families. Some charts showed the families' leadership at the time of the 1963 hearings; others showed the current leaders."

Nunn said many of the lower level "soldiers" on the old charts "appear today among the highest-ranking powers in the LCN (La Cosa Nostra) families."

FBI Director William S. Sessions and his top aides said new laws and vigorous prosecutions have severely damaged organized crime families, but have not destroyed them.

Many organized-crime enterprises which have existed unfettered for years have been dismantled—and the secrecy of the criminal underworld "has been opened" by the cooperation of organized crime figures with the FBI, Sessions said.

"Most importantly, their ability to influence and intimidate the business and political community is weakened," he said.

But, Sessions added, "The question most often asked is whether we have eradicated the LCN as a national threat. The simple answer is no. They continue to engage in a wide variety of criminal activities..."

FBI executive assistant director Oliver B. Revell III said Mafia families in the United States have not taken over the drug trade, although individual organized-crime members are involved with narcotics.

Federal agency publishes final regulations on drug testing

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Department of Health and Human Services on Monday published the clinical procedures that federal agencies must follow in testing their employees for drug use.

The final technical regulations published in the Federal Register are essentially the same as HHS originally outlined more than a year ago.

Yet to gain final approval are guidelines drawn up by some 40 separate agencies - thousands of pages in all - on the more controversial matter of how each agency will determine will employees to test.

Those plans are under review by HHS to make sure each of the agencies has adopted the underlying clinical testing procedures in their own plans.

Once HHS completes that technical review - expected within a week or two - all of the individual plans passing muster will be forwarded to Congress for review.

Aside from the possibility that members of Congress could object to some of the agency plans, an HHS official noted that several employee unions have indicated they are likely to challenge the agency plans in court once they are issued.

Kenneth Blaylock, president of the 700,000-member American Federation of Government Employees, said the guidelines are an over-reaction "to a situation that barely exists in the federal sector."

"The latest guidelines for conducting random drug tests on government employees not only condemns the entire federal work force as serious drug abusers, but assumes they are cheaters as well," Blaylock said.

Even though they do not address the fundamental controversy of whether to test, the HHS standards themselves have been held up at congressional insistence since February 1987 to allow time for informal review and public comment.

Designed to ensure that any person being tested is submitting his or her own fresh urine, the HHS regulations published Monday call for water in the toilet stalls where the samples are given to contain a blue dye and for the sample's temperature to be taken within four minutes.

FAA says smoking ban covers short flights

WASHINGTON (AP) - The airline smoking ban that goes into effect April 23 on commercial aircraft will apply to any flight scheduled for two hours or less even if it delays the flight to take longer, the Federal Aviation Administration said Monday.

Congress required the smoking ban on short flights in legislation last year. The FAA issued its final rules on the prohibition Monday, although the general outline of the new restrictions has been known for months.

Airlines since the first of the year have complied with a state law in California and banned smoking on flights within the state.

The law enacted by Congress last year prohibits smoking on any flight of two hours or less on jet aircraft, as well as smaller commuter planes. Charter flights and those involving travel clubs are exempt from the rules.

The FAA, clarifying details of the restrictions, said Monday that the length of the flight shall be determined by the elapsed time shown for the flight in the Official Airline Guide. Should a flight be delayed so it takes longer than two hours, the ban still is in effect, the FAA said.

The ban also will apply to each segment of a flight. For example a flight that has three legs of 90 minutes, 90 minutes and 2+ hours would require that smoking be prohibited in the first two segments and allowed in the final segment, according to the FAA.

Poll in Utah favors Bush

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Utahns would vote for Republican Vice President George Bush over the two leading Democrats if the presidential election were held today, a poll shows.

The Salt Lake Tribune on Monday published the results of a poll conducted by the Bardsey research organization.

The poll, based on 339 telephone interviews with registered voters throughout the state, found that Bush would win an election with Michael Dukakis 55 percent to 34 percent with 11 percent undecided.

In a race with Jesse Jackson, Bush would win 70 percent to only 18 percent with 12 percent undecided.

Bardsey said in a Bush-Dukakis race both candidates had the loyalty of about 80 percent of their party's voters.

Meese, Wallach talked about job

WASHINGTON (AP) - Attorney General Edwin Meese III discussed his possible resignation from the Robert Wallach, key Justice Department post a week or so before being notified formally that Wallach was under criminal investigation in the Wedtech scandal, a lawyer for Meese said Monday.

Meese and Wallach conducted job talks concerning the then-vacant post of counselor to the attorney general in limited discussions held in late March or early April 1987, Meese attorney James Rocap said.

"Meese recalls that he was clearly interested in having Bob Wallach at that time come into the department, but that no formal offer was ever advanced to him," Rocap said.

The job of counselor is a position traditionally held by one of the most trusted advisers to an attorney general.

Rocap said he does not know whether Meese or Wallach initiated the job talks or how many there were.

Meese is on a trip to South America this week and was not immediately available for comment.

Around April 8, 1987, the attorney general was notified formally under an administrative mechanism involving the FBI that Wallach had become a subject of the criminal investigation into scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp.

Rocap characterized as "ridiculous, unbelievable" suggestions by columnists Rowland Evans and Robert Novak that Meese had considered the idea of bringing Wallach into the Justice Department "to be a live possibility" until last December when Wallach was indicted in the Wedtech scandal.

Wallach was told that he had become a subject of the investigation in April, that intervening event terminated essentially any substantive discussions of any kind between the two men, Rocap said.

Rocap also said Meese and Wallach considered installing Wallach on an advisory commission of outside experts in 1985 to examine the administration of the Justice Department and suggest possible changes. The commission, apparently the idea of Meese and Wallach, was never created.

The counselor's job was vacant after T. Kenneth Cribb Jr., a member of Meese's inner circle of conservative advisers, went to the White House early in March 1987 to handle the transition of incoming chief of staff, Howard Baker. Cribb is now assistant to the president for domestic affairs.

The Justice Department counselor's post was filled last May 18 by Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, head of the department's civil rights division.

After being notified officially in early April that Wallach, a San Francisco lawyer and longtime friend, was under investigation, Meese removed himself from involvement in the Wedtech inquiry, which was being conducted by U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani of New York.

However, Giuliani's investigation had been under way since the previous fall and was drawing public attention to the fact that Wallach had done work for the company.

Treacherous ghost still haunts Britons

LONDON (AP) — Each of the past four Sundays the ghost of treachery joined Britons at the breakfast table. Harold "Kim" Philby, the gentleman traitor who spied for the Soviet Union, granted his first interview to a Western journalist since defecting to Moscow in 1963 and it appeared in the Sunday Times.

Critics say publication of the four-part interview in the Times, which has a circulation of 1.4 million, was a propaganda gift to the KGB. The Soviet secret police agency still employs Philby, now 76.

For journalist Phillip Knightley the evening of Jan. 19, when he entered Philby's apartment in Moscow, climaxed 20 years in which he secretly corresponded with Philby but the master spy repeatedly refused to see him.

When he did agree to talk, Philby dropped no bombshells. But the myriad details reveal an English gentleman who despised his privileged background, espoused Soviet communism as a Cambridge University student in the 1930s and mastered the highest levels of British intelligence in the Kremlin's service.

Because of his high contacts in Washington, Philby was able to betray the whole Western alliance. He sent many Western agents to their deaths and was even able to head off the defection of a Soviet diplomat who threatened to expose him.

The most controversial point in the interview is Philby's contention that British intelligence let him defect rather than face an embarrassing public trial.

He told Knightley he suffered severe self-doubt after fleeing to Moscow and began drinking heavily. "Doubt is a terrible thing," he said. "Had I done the right thing? You see, I never swallowed everything (about Soviet communism). I never took it ALL in."

Philby said he has found peace and a happy fourth marriage, to a Russian woman, feels at home in the Soviet Union, and believes today's England would be a foreign country to him.

"No faith? Come, come," he said. "Only a fool would deny me my faith." He likes to keep in touch with British gossip, listens to the BBC, does the Times of London crossword and misses English mustard.

Ever the English gentleman, he greeted Knightley at his door with a cheerful: "Come on through, dear chap."

"I don't like deceiving people, especially friends, and contrary to what some people believe I feel very badly about it," he said in the interview. "But then, decent soldiers feel badly about the necessity of killing in wartime."

The unmasking after Philby had been under suspicion for 12 years climaxed a nightmare episode for British intelligence:

It began in 1951 with the defection of top spies Guy Burgess and Donald MacLean and reverberated into 1980s with the revelation that Anthony Blunt, another upper-class Englishman, had been unmasked as a traitor secretly and went unpunished.

Super powers agree on joint high-tech deal

MOSCOW (AP) — Officials of Honeywell Inc., and a Soviet government ministry announced Monday they had agreed on a multimillion-dollar venture to equip Soviet fertilizer plants with high-technology production control equipment.

The deal was announced as a group of 400 Americans led by Commerce Secretary C. William Verity arrived for trade talks with Soviet officials. Prospects for more such joint projects, which the Soviets are promoting to help stimulate their economy, are a main topic for the talks of the U.S.-Soviet Joint Commercial Commission. The Soviets hope to boost their fertilizer production by using the new technology, thereby also improving harvests in the weak farm economy.

Strewn weapons defused

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — U.S. and Pakistani bomb disposal experts Monday began defusing thousands of deadly missiles and grenades strewn around the capital after an explosion at an ammunition dump killed 83 people and injured 1,100.

Security forces and rescue teams also searched flattened buildings for hundreds of people still unaccounted for after Sunday's blast.

President Mohammad Zia Ul-haq, who cut short a visit to Kuwait, called the explosion an "extraordinary accident."

Zia refused to speculate on the cause of the fire which ignited the ammunition dump explosion at Ojert camp between the twin cities of Islamabad and Rawalpindi.

Commenting on reports that some of the ordnance was earmarked for Moslem guerrillas in Afghanistan and that some empty casings bore Chinese labels, Zia said: "It's nothing but speculation — a high measure of speculation."

Witnesses saw burning trucks Sunday near the depot bearing Afghan license plates. Pakistan is a conduit for foreign military supplies and other aid to the Afghan insurgents fighting the communist government in Kabul backed by an estimated 115,000 Soviet troops.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Kent Ober said the embassy had helped the Pakistani government help in finding and clearing the weapons.

Attacks on Tehran resumed

The Washington Post

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq Monday resumed its long-range missile attacks against Iranian cities after a three-day lull prompted by hopes for the election of a moderate parliament in Tehran.

Iraq reported at least 26 civilians killed in three missile strikes on Tehran and the central historic city of Isfahan. It vowed "firm retaliation" against the Iraqi capital of Baghdad, which has been by more than 30 missiles since March.

Iraq listed 320 fighter-bomber and helicopter missions along the 720-mile battle front. It reported an unspecified number of civilians killed in Iranian artillery volleys on the border town of Khanaqin.

Iraq announced Friday a temporary truce in the "war of cities" to enable Iranians to elect what it hoped would be a pro-peace parliament.

But announcements in Tehran Sunday night indicated a landslide victory for hard-liners supporting the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's "war until victory" policy.

Khomeini, meanwhile, said Monday that Iran planned to send 150,000 pilgrims to stage "dissolution demonstrations" during next July's annual Moslem pilgrimage to the holy city of Mecca in Saudi Arabia.

Let the Saudis (Saudi Arabia's ruling Saud family) know that if they oppose this thing then they will be in confrontation with all the world's Moslems, but if they concede then it will be for their own good." Tehran radio quoted Khomeini as telling Hojatoleslam Mehdi Kharroubi, his representative to the pilgrimage.

Saudi Arabia has served notice that it was restricting the number of pilgrims because of last year's bloody riots that resulted in the death of more than 400 persons, mostly Iranian pilgrims and Saudi security men.

The Saudi government has indicated that it will allow no more than 50,000 Iranians at this year's pilgrimage, and that it will forcibly put down any demonstration.

Pact announces air maneuvers

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Forces from this nation will join two-day Warsaw Pact air maneuvers beginning Friday, the state-run press said Monday.

The maneuvers of the eastern European alliance are held annually, according to Hungary's four morning newspapers. Hungary will send air force and anti-aircraft units to take part, and Hungarian airspace will be used for at least some maneuvers.

No other details were reported.

The announcement followed a visit to Hungary last week by Warsaw Pact commander Marshal Viktor Kulikov. He held talks with Communist Party leader Janos Kadar.

8 Palestinians deported; Arab death toll hits 142

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel expelled eight Palestinians from the occupied lands Monday, accusing them of inciting the four-months-of-violence there, and it issued deportation orders against 12 others.

Hospital officials said soldiers shot a 20-year-old Arab to death in the West Bank. That brought to 142 the number of Palestinians killed since riots began Dec. 8 in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel captured Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war.

The eight Arabs were taken to south Lebanon in two helicopters. The United States condemned the deportations.

Six Palestinians from Beit, a West Bank village where an Israeli settler girl and two Arabs were killed in a clash last week, were among the 12 against whom the army issued deportation orders.

Palestinian leaders contended the purpose of the expulsions was to appease right-wing politicians and Jewish settlers angered by an army report that said Tzira Forst, 15, was killed by a bullet from another settler's gun.

Residents of the territories complied with Palestine Liberation Organization orders to close stores Monday and stay home from jobs in Israel. Underground leaflets called for a "day of firebombs" on April 21.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said: "We strongly oppose deportations from the occupied territories," which he described as "counterproductive." They only further inflame passions," Redman said the practice violates international human rights agreements to which Israel is a signatory.

Soviet TV condemns Afghan attack on jet

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet television on Monday condemned Afghan guerrillas for shooting down a Soviet-built passenger jet with 29 people aboard after announcements that a negotiated end to the 10-year-old Afghan war is near.

The national news program "Vremya" showed wreckage strewn over a valley near the Afghan city of Maimanek, about 90 miles aboard the Soviet border.

A Tass news agency commentary blamed the attack on the leaders of the "Peshawar Seven," the main guerrilla organization based in Pakistan. It accused the leaders of prolonging the bloodshed at a time when Afghans were inspired by recent news from Geneva that the fighting will cease and 115,000 Soviet soldiers will go home.

An Afghan air force colonel told Soviet TV that a U.S. Stinger missile had been used to down the plane carrying both government soldiers and civilians.

"This act is especially cynical because it was committed when all Afghan people were united by the joint Soviet-Afghan statement by Mikhail Gorbachev and Najib," said the colonel, identified only as Zahir, referring to Thursday's announcement by the Soviet and Afghan leaders that all obstacles had been removed to the signing of a peace accord.

Idaho gets low marks on economy

By EVAN ROTH
 States News Service

WASHINGTON — Idaho is something of a haven for entrepreneurs, but the state's overall economic climate gets low marks in a new state-by-state report on economic activity.

The report, entitled "Making the Grade: The 1988 Development Report Card for the States," gives Idaho grades ranging from C to F in four broad categories — economic performance, business vitality, economic capacity and government policy.

The report, published for the second year by the Corporation for Enterprise Development (CED), a non-profit research group, generally gives highest marks to states in the Northeast and lowest grades to the Plains and Rocky Mountain states.

Idaho scored an F for its overall government policies covering education, public works, promotion of new business and strengthening existing businesses.

The state scored a D for its economic performance, its score held down by stagnant economic growth and a high poverty rate.

Idaho received another D for its economic capacity. Despite a well-educated workforce, the report says, Idaho has been "lacking" in developing its financial and human resources.

Idaho received its highest grade — a C — for business vitality. The report says the state has "a healthy level of entrepreneurial activity" and its economic base is diversified, but the state "has not fared well in the competitiveness of its businesses."

"For the most part, states in these regions (the Plains and Rocky Mountains) seem at a loss to know how to take control of their own economic destinies," the report says. "Their relative lack of action to establish the policy preconditions for development or to undertake the most basic initiatives suggests that they are simply waiting for the (economic) cycle to turn around again — marking time while their competitors race ahead."

The report measures 100 economic indicators — including such items as increases in per capita earnings, the percentage of residents below the poverty line, the availability of investment capital and state spending on education and public works.

Its conclusions vary significantly from another annual report card on business climates published by the Chicago-based public accounting firm, Grant Thornton. The CED published an attack on the Grant Thornton survey last year, saying the accounting firm's report inaccurately measures economic conditions, giving too much emphasis on low wages and union activities.

Grant Thornton spokesman Michael Hogan said the Twine firm slates plant for Jerome

By The Times-News

JEROME — Bridon Cordage, Inc., a division of an international twine and wire manufacturing firm, will build a 20,000-square-foot facility in Jerome this year to manufacture baling twine, company officials were to announce today.

The plant, to be located on South Lincoln Street in Jerome, will employ approximately 20 people and will mean an estimated $500,000 boost to the area economy in the first year of operation.

Bridon will manufacture its well-known burnt-orange polypropylene baling wire at the site for distribution in the Western states and, potentially, in Canada.

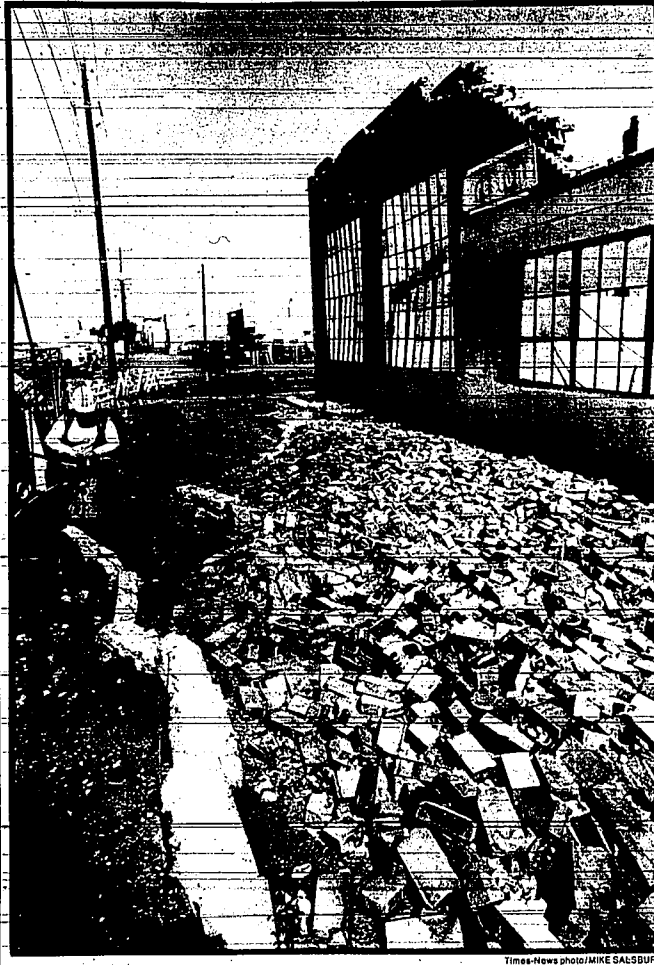

Bridon Cordage is based in Albert Lea, Minn., where its present twine manufacturing is located. The new Jerome facility is an expansion of that operation.

The company has been eyeing the Magic Valley for about seven years, according to president Tony Bower. It decided to open the Western plant because of extensive development of its markets in the region and anticipated further development of the hay industry, for which much of the twine is used.

Other factors in the company's decision included low electric rates, what Bower called a positive work ethic, proximity to markets, and attractive presentations by area business leaders, government officials and economic development officials.

The plant is scheduled to open in September. Bower and several other company officials were to hold a 9 a.m. press conference today in Jerome to announce the facility.

Cause of blaze still unknown

Investigation should continue on Wednesday

By KEN ARMSTRONG
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Investigators on Monday sifted through the rubble left in the wake of Saturday night's searing fire at the Firestone store, but reached no conclusions as to the blaze's cause.

Don Dillard, chief deputy state fire marshal, said investigators had "nothing as of yet. Right now we're just trying to get down to what the point of origin was."

Dillard is in charge of the state's arson and fraud unit. "That doesn't necessarily mean we think it's arson, it just means it's a major fire," he said.

Battalion Chief Wayne Campbell estimated the damage Sunday between $700,000 and $900,000, but added damage totals could go higher.

The building, which was completely destroyed, was bought by Dan Beard approximately two weeks prior to the fire. According to records in the Twin Falls County assessor's office, Beard bought the building March 29 from the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.

The deed of sale was signed March 15, but it was not recorded until two weeks later. Beard said he has owned the business for roughly three years, having rented the building prior to buying it.

The building was insured through Hamilton Insurance, a Twin Falls company, officials said. "I understand it was insured for over $300,000," said Jim Howells, the fire investigator from the Twin Falls County Department of Public Safety's police division.

The fire's investigation is being handled through a joint effort of state and local officials. In addition to two officials from the state fire marshal's office, investigators from both the police and fire divisions of the Twin Falls Department of Public Safety will help conduct the inquiry.

Five officials said flames from the fire, which was reported at approximately 9:45 p.m. Saturday, had already gone through the building's roof before the department's first fire truck arrived.

"Well, you've got quite a fire load in there," said Dillard, speaking while several workers went about clearing the rubble from the gutted building. "You've got lots of tires which burn pretty quickly. There's also lots of oil in there."

Dillard said the structure, built of brick and cinder block, had a wood interior frame which also would have contributed to the rapidity with which the fire mounted.

The building, an L-shaped structure housing both a service area and an office area, was built in 1930, records show. In January, its value was appraised at $52,000.

The Firestone store's inventory included a large number of tires and various automobile supplies. Howells said the fire's point of origin has not been determined, but when firefighters initially arrived it was burning in the bay area of the service station.

He said the bay area is roughly in the center of the service station, which is a large structure located southwest of the office area. The building occupies 9,308 square feet, records show.

Howells said the office area, which was not as badly burned as the service area, "probably ignited from flash-over from the heat."

Flash-over is the point where the temperature gets hot enough to ignite flammable materials in a confined area, Howells said.

Due to the large number of rubber tires in the store, the fire produced heat of unusual intensity, officials said.

Dillard said the official investigation will continue at least through Wednesday. It will be supplemented by at least one other one not affiliated with the law enforcement agencies.

Grant Starley, an agent with Hamilton Insurance, said Monday that "the insurance company has assigned the loss to an experienced adjuster out of Salt Lake (City) who arrived this afternoon and is proceeding with the investigation."

Dillard said an investigation typically starts from the outside of a burned structure to see whether the fire may have ignited from without. After that, investigators go from the least charred areas to the most charred areas, which typically indicate where the fire started.

But while scanning the black skeleton which was once the Firestone building, Dillard added that "when it's as burned as this one, it gets a little tougher."

Contractors to make their pool bids

By MARK PRATTER
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Three contractors will be trying to make a big splash on Wednesday with a city committee looking at the proposed city swimming pool.

The committee will listen to the contractors' proposals for building the pool on Locust Street just east of Twin Falls High School.

The meeting will be at 8 a.m. at the city Fire Department.

The committee will make a recommendation to the Twin Falls City Council, which will then award a contract, said Vince Alberdi, city economic development director.

But first, Bill Baker, a Chicago-based swimming pool consultant, will take a look at the pool site on Tuesday.

Baker will also meet with the swimming pool evaluation committee composed of city officials, including councilman Gale Kleinkopf and a handful of citizens.

Baker will also listen to the contractors Wednesday and write an opinion for the committee.

Another hurdle is "getting enough money" to build the $1.1 million pool.

The city has set aside $770,000 in capital improvement money for the project. First Federal Savings contributed $85,000, and contributions from city water customers and other sources total $42,000, said Rick Thompson, city finance director. The city is still $103,000 short of its goal.

"We will continue to take contributions and run the water donations until we get enough money to build the pool," said Thompson.

The council may make its decision on the pool in the next month or so, said Alberdi.

When earth will be turned for the pool depends on how long it takes to develop working drawings, he said.

"We hope to build it this summer. It will take all summer," Alberdi said.

But the pool won't be open to Twin Falls residents until next summer, he said.

Committee to present creationism findings

By CRAIG LINCOLN

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls School Board of Trustees will take a small step toward facing the age-old controversy between evolution and creationism today.

A school board committee will present the findings of its study on policies surrounding the teaching of creationism to the full board at its 7 p.m. meeting tonight.

The agenda item is for information only. "Clerk-Treasurer Jerry Dougherty said action, if any, will be next month, and the public will have an opportunity to comment sometime during the process."

Superintendent Carl Snow and Assistant Superintendent Keith Tolzin were out of town and unavailable for comment Monday.

The school board decided at its March 8 meeting to form a committee to study the issue.

That move was prompted by a complaint to the board by a Twin Falls couple, Times-News Managing Editor Stephen Hartgen and his wife, Jan, a teacher at Morningside Elementary School.

The Hartgens wrote a letter to the district's policy. The Hartgens' 11-month-old daughter, Tiffany, is enrolled in 7th-grade science class taught by

Union Pacific offers depot to Rupert

By ADELL HARVEY
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — Union Pacific Railroad has offered to donate its depot to the city of Rupert if the city can come up with the money to move it.
Plans are underway to install a double-wide mobile office complex near the site of the old depot.
Mayor Bill Whittom said the Minidoka County Historical Society has expressed an interest in the 1906 depot, and would like to move it to the museum at the Minidoka County Fairgrounds.
"We'll work with the historical society and the county to see if they can come up with the money to move it," Whittom said. "I'm sure there's enough interest in it in the community that we can come up with something."

"We would love to have it," said Sally Taylor of the historical society, but agreed that the society must first decide if enough money can be raised for the project.
The society would like to restore the 110-by-24-foot depot and add it to its display of railroad cars and tracks at the county museum.
Public Works Director Eric Peterson said at last week's council meeting that the railroad had asked for the council's feelings about removal of the old depot and a replacement building before it applies for the necessary permit. He said the railroad has "good working relationships with the city," and wants to make sure the proposed building meets city codes.
In other business:
• The council has rejected a tort claim against the city by Daniel

Ward, who claimed he was improperly arrested in connection with the September water tower bombing. On the advice of Attorney Don Chisholm, the council denied the claim and turned it over to the city insurance carrier.
• An agreement was signed with General Electric Industries Sales and Service for disposal of PCB contaminated electrical capacitors for $6,953.
Chisholm said the cost was low enough that public bidding would not be required, and full an "expert" was needed to dispose of the material in accordance with federal Environmental Protection Agency regulations.
• "The liability is atrocious on this," he said, "and it must be disposed of properly." GE has liability insurance, which would free the city from future responsibility for the materials.
• The council tabled a request from the Rev. Daniel Coto, pastor of the New Life Spanish Assembly Church, to change the sidewalk in front of the building on F Street. The church wants to remove part of the cement sidewalk and replace it with lava rock beds and landscaping.

— The council authorized Peterson to research the area for safety problems and parking.
• Whitton complimented the city police department for what he called "a particularly good job this past month." He said there were seven felonies reported in March, and seven arrests, recovering nearly $16,000 in stolen goods, including three vehicles.
• Due to inclement weather of the past month, the council voted to extend the city cleanup project through May 8, using the same rotation schedule as previously posted.

Briefly

Shoshone levy vote today

SHOSHONE — Registered voters in the Shoshone School District will go to the polls today to vote on a two-year, $165,900 supplemental levy.
The levy would be used for general operating expenses and to chip away at the district's deficit.
The levy would cost voters approximately $32 per $10,000 of taxable assessed property value, but taxes would not increase since voters have approved a levy of the same amount for the last two years.
The polls will be open from noon to 8 p.m. at Shoshone High School.

Salmon project hearing set

HAGERMAN — A public hearing will be held in the conference room of the Tunison Laboratory of Fish Nutrition, Hagerman, from 7 to 10 p.m. on April 19 regarding the environmental effect of bringing spring chinook salmon and other Pacific salmon species to the Hagerman Field Station of the Tunison Laboratory for research purposes.
Oral comment may be made at the hearing, and written comment is also invited. Copies of the draft environmental assessment outlining the proposed procedures may be obtained prior to the hearing by calling the Tunison Laboratory at 837-4457 or writing to Tunison Laboratory, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, 3056F National Fish Hatchery Road, Hagerman 83332.

Reorganized LDS head opens church's world conference

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — President Wallace B. Smith of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints offered hope for reconciliation Sunday night in his address to the 1988 World Conference of the church.
The speech highlighted the opening day of the week-long conference at the RLDS Auditorium. More than 10,000 visitors, including about 2,800 delegates from nearly 40 countries, are expected to attend.
About 6,000 people were present for the opening business session—Sunday afternoon. Independence Mayor Barbara J. Potts noted that the conference is a special one because the world church is preparing to build a $60 million temple in Independence that will be dedicated to peace.
Smith began his address by stating: "I do not think there are very many in the church today who are not aware of the fact that recently we have been going through some turbulent times. In spite of the fact that there are many good things happening in numerous jurisdictions throughout the church, the past few years have been challenging, to say the least."

Smith was referring to fundamentalists' criticism of church policies, especially the ordination of women, which was approved by the 1984 world conference. Since then, the critics have been vocal in their dissent and have refused to support the policy.
Church leaders, unable to come to an agreement with the dissenters, have silenced members of the priesthood and most recently have suspended the administrative procedures of the Blue Valley Stake in eastern Jackson County, which has been a stronghold of opposition to the world church.
Smith reminded his members that there is reconciliation in Jesus Christ.
"Because of the message of universal divine love which Jesus came to proclaim, the barriers and partitions which persons have always erected to protect themselves at all cost, can be taken down and discarded forever," (the Apostle) Paul says," Smith said.
"Instead, a process of building can begin to take place."

30 bison shot by hunters

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — Hunters have killed 30 buffalo that wandered outside Yellowstone National Park this year, five times more than were shot during last year's hunting season.
— Ten bison — four cows and six bulls — were killed Sunday, and eight were shot Thursday and Friday, according to the state Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks.
The 1988 Montana Legislature authorized a hunt for buffalo that leave the park's protection after state livestock officials voiced fears that Yellowstone's buffalo herd would infect cattle with brucellosis, which could cause cattle to abort.
"But at least one woman who lives near the area where the buffalo were killed said the hunt was unfortunate."
"All winter they've been in my backyard," said Suzanne Johnson, who runs a restaurant in West Yellowstone.

The Hartgens said Gerrish's teaching of creationism in his science class was improper. Gerrish said he taught creationism along with other theories on the earth's origins to foster discussion.
The Hartgens say the issue is one of keeping religion out of public schools.

firm's report is a manufacturing study, not a survey of economic conditions.
In the 1987 Grant Thornton report, Idaho ranked 16 out of 48 states (Alaska and Hawaii were not included) in terms of its attractiveness to manufacturers, according to Hogan.
Idaho scored well for having a relatively low level of organized labor, a financially sound unemployment compensation trust fund and a rate of wage growth below the national average. The state scored poorly for having state spending increasing faster than income growth and for having unemployment compensation premiums higher than the national average.

In Cfo's 1988 "Report Card," Idaho scored well, receiving a B in "entrepreneurial energy," a measure of the number of new companies formed each year, the percentage of high growth companies in the state and the percentage of female and minority-owned firms. Idaho also scored well in the diversity of its economy. The report says.
But the Gem State lost points because relatively little of what it produces is exported from the state, the report says.
Idaho received its lowest grades for government policies toward education, infrastructure and economic development. Indeed, the state ranked dead last among states in its support for public education and public works.

Single-Premium Whole Life It Is Currently Paying As Much As 8.5%

The reviews are in — and it's a hit!

Here's what financial critics are saying:

- "The best investment of our time." — Wall Street Journal, June 11, 1987
- "It seems too good to be true: An investment that earns higher tax-free yields than municipal bonds and, as a bonus, throws in 'free' life insurance." — Changing Times, May 1986
- "Best of all is the ability to borrow up to 90% of the cash value ... without paying taxes." — Forbes, November 4, 1985
- "The investor can take the cash that accumulates out in the form of what is termed a loan. In most cases, this loan doesn't have to be repaid." — Tulsa World, August 3, 1986
- "The biggest plus is that you can use the policy as a source of tax-free income... and not worry as you do with the tax-free income from municipal bonds, about losing part of your principal as interest rates fluctuate." — Los Angeles Times, June 20, 1985
- "Single Premium Whole Life is a four-in-one miracle!" — California Broker, December, 1985

SPWL reminds many financial analysts of four different investments. It's like a CD, since interest rates can be guaranteed for one, two or three years and incur penalties only if surrendered prematurely.
It's like a municipal bond since tax-free distributions are available... like an annuity since interest accumulates on a tax-deferred basis... and like universal life, since the death benefit is income tax free.

"When the dust settles after tax reform... insurance will be one of the few ways you can still accumulate savings on a tax-free basis." — Money, September 1986

Testimony begins in polygamist trial

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Attorneys will begin Tuesday to unravel the case of a Bible-toting polygamist clan whose guilt or innocence in the bombing of a Mormon chapel and police "standoff" will be decided by a mostly Mormon jury.

Federal prosecutors plan to call at least 150 witnesses; among them a Mormon bishop, neighbors of the defendants and reporters in a high-profile case that defense attorneys aren't sure can be judged fairly.

"It will be interesting to find out," said Kathryn Collard, representing clan matriarch Vickie Singer.

Defense attorney Fred Metos, asked if the 12 jurors seated Friday to hear the case truly were the defendants' peers, responded: "They have no peers."

trial hearings, it was Swapp who, with two others, planted the bomb at the Kamas Stake Center on Jan. 16 as the Singer women prayed at the family home two miles away.

Swapp, 27, and Mrs. Singer are charged with seven and eight counts, respectively, of a nine-count indictment that was handed up shortly after their arrests. It was reduced last week to eight counts when U.S. District Judge Bruce S. Jenkins dismissed a conspiracy charge.

Charged with four counts each are Jonathan Swapp, 21, Addam Swapp's brother, and John Timothy Singer, the 21-year-old wheelchair-bound son of Mrs. Singer. Singer is state authorities' prime suspect in the slaying of a Utah corrections officer, who was killed when the siege ended in a gun-battle.

The trial will be one of the most closely followed in recent memory in a state with an estimated 30,000 members of polygamist families. Most co-exist peacefully with their Mormon neighbors, who make up nearly 70 percent of the state's population.

The Mormon Church, which renounced polygamy in 1890, excommunicates its advocates and practitioners.

The four defendants include Mrs. Singer, 44, mother of seven and widow of slain polygamist John Singer, who was gunned down in 1979 by law enforcement officers serving a contempt citation at the same Summit County farm where his family held police at bay for 13 days awaiting the dead patriarch's resurrection.

Law enforcement officers believe Mrs. Singer was the "brains" behind the bombing and standoff, while her son-in-law, Addam Swapp, provided the muscle.

According to Mrs. Singer's diary, submitted as evidence during pre-

Felony record haunts sheriff's deputy

BOISE (AP) — For the past two years, Butte County Sheriff's Deputy Cary Van Etten has been involved in a controversial felony case: his own.

It has followed Van Etten even though a judge expunged his felony conviction for destroying and altering a motor vehicle identification number.

So much so that he barely made it into the state's six-week police academy, where he was required to enroll after becoming a full-time deputy in 1987.

Van Etten, 30, who worked part time between 1979 and 1986, will start training April 25. But controversy continues to swirl around his admission.

"I never considered myself a criminal," Van Etten said. "I don't feel I'm a risk to the council or to society."

"It looks like a definite problem for the academy; a big step backward," said Payette Mayor Dick Butcher, a member of the Peace Officers Standards and Training (POST) Council.

Butte County Sheriff Darrell Richards, who supports Van Etten's approval to POST, said he "doesn't have a dishonest bone in his body."

In September, the POST council voted not to admit Van Etten. But in February, the case changed in his favor, as some council members switched their votes in the face of a petition signed by more than 750 Butte County residents.

The controversy began in 1983 when Van Etten bought a 1982 Chevrolet pickup that he planned to repair at his father's body shop near Arco. A year later, deciding against restoring the truck, he sold it to an acquaintance without turning over the bill of sale.

When the buyer rebuilt the truck, Van Etten was charged jointly with 28 counts.

The truck was sold again. The new owner took the pickup to an assessor's office to be registered, but the identification number did not match the number on the bill of sale, signed by Van Etten.

The Van Etten's were charged jointly with 28 counts.

Arizona's Elliott will forgo draft for his senior year

By ARTHUR H. ROSTEIN
The Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — All-American junior Sean Elliott announced Monday he will stay at Arizona, ending speculation that he would pass up his final season of college eligibility and instead make himself available for the NBA draft.

The 6-foot-8 forward who led Arizona to the NCAA Final Four this year said he had been "teetering" and that "there are times where I was certain I wasn't going to stay."

But he said he decided to do so after talking at length with Coach Lute Olson during a trip to Los Angeles last Wednesday and Thursday, and with a close friend, assistant coach Kevin O'Neill.

Since making up his mind Thursday night, "I haven't really thought otherwise," he said. "I just feel great about the decision."

Elliott, who can shoot effectively from 3-point range, score from inside and has the ability to penetrate and dish off, was a first-team All-American this season and was also the Pacific-10 Conference player of the year and averaged 19.6 points, 5.8 rebounds and 3.6 assists as Arizona went 35-3 last season.

Elliott, who turned 20 in February, closed out the year with a 31-point performance as Arizona lost in the NCAA semifinals to Oklahoma, 86-78. He scored 116 points for a 23.2-point average in the Wildcats' five NCAA playoff games and was named to the all-tournament team.

Olson said he had told him from the start that Elliott would have to make the decision himself, and that he would have to live with whatever it was. Olson said he and his staff offered to do whatever possible to help Elliott make the choice.

O'Neill said, "What it came down to was he likes school too much and enjoys being with Coach (Olson) too much and he wants to get an education."

Elliott acknowledged that had Arizona won the national championship, his decision likely would have been different. "It would have been like, 'What more is there to accomplish, at most,'" Elliott said.

Elliott said he had vacillated because "maybe I was looking to move up and to move on. I thought it could be beneficial in some ways. The money was there. There's a lot of money, so it's always hard to pass up an opportunity like that," he said. "I think I had more reservations about leaving than I did about staying in school."

Elliott said he didn't feel like going through the pro season, longer and more difficult than the college schedule, next year, even though he thinks he could have adjusted to it.

Hanks hits game-winner in 10th

CSI outlasts Lassen, 9-8; rematch today

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — Chris Hanks got one good pitch to hit Monday night, and it wasn't the one he drove into right-field for the game-winning RBI in the bottom-of-10th-to-beat-Lassen-College, 9-8.

Hanks, CSI's designated hitter with nine home runs and an eye-popping .785 slugging percentage, saw his reputation precede him again Monday. He got a steady diet of curves, palm balls and sliders from four Lassen pitchers. Only the deep fly ball he hit for an out to center field to lead off the first was thrown in the big right-hander's wheelhouse.

But he hit a bad pitch for an RBI single in the third and was greeted by a slider on the fast from Lassen right-hander Todd Pick in the 10th. Hanks drove it to the wrong field, scoring Errol Shirer from first base and staking the Eagles to their fourth straight victory, a game CSI had ample opportunities to lose.

Lassen roughed up one of CSI's aces, right-hander Jim Tejcek, for five runs on five hits through 2½ innings, then got three more off relievers Mike Bennett and Tom Cheek in the seventh, erasing an 8-3 lead. But after Troy Hymas scored an unearned run in the sixth, Cougar relievers Joey Strough and Pick gave the Eagles next to nothing.

CSI's Troy Hymas is called safe at third to the disbelief of Lassen's Dean Banks Monday evening

CSI in fact, had just two hits after the sixth inning, one of them being Hanks' game-winner.

The Eagles left two on in the seventh, stranded three in the eighth and had their leadoff batter aboard in the ninth — all to no avail.

After leadoff batter Sam Atkins struck out to lead off the 10th, Shirer hit a low line drive to Lassen third baseman Dean Banks, who picked the ball off his shoepats. The umpire ruled that Banks had trapped the ball, but he pegged it first in time to catch Shirer. The ball popped out of first baseman's Strough's glove, however, as Shirer crossed the base.

Shirer didn't have time to get settled in before Hanks hit a line drive over the second baseman's head. Shirer, perhaps CSI's best baserunner, easily beat the right-fielder's throw to the plate.

The Eagles overcame a 2-0 deficit with two runs in the second inning as a single by Lance Leitner, a double by Jeff Warren, a groundout by Todd Webb that scored Leitner and a single by Brad Brooks which drove in Warren.

The Cougars countered with three runs in the top of the inning, but CSI scored four times in the bottom of the frame on Hymas' single, Atkins' double, a single by Shirer, a single by Hanks, a walk by Leitner and a single by Warren.

The Eagles made it 7-5 in the fourth when John NesSmith hit a leadoff double and scored on Hymas' single, and got another run in the sixth when Hymas was hit by a pitch, advanced on Atkins' single and scored on an error.

But Lassen tied the game with three runs in the seventh. After Strough got aboard on an error, Dennis Romero double and Banks and Will Love singled.

CSI ended the game with 14 hits, three by Hymas and two each by Atkins, Hanks and Shirer.

Love, who hit a towering 390-foot home run in the first, ended in the game with two hits for Lassen.

The Eagles will get together with the Cougars again at 1 p.m. at Frontier Field for another nine-inning game, then take on Treasure Valley Community College in a single game here Friday. CSI is scheduled to open its conference season here Saturday at 1 p.m. with a twinbill against Ricks College.

The victory improved CSI's record to 24-8.

Jays halt Yankees' win streak, 17-9

More baseball — C2

TORONTO (AP) — Add another chapter to the rival rivalry between the New York Yankees and Toronto Blue Jays.

Toronto, with a 17-9 victory Monday afternoon, handed the Yankees their first loss of the year after five wins. The game, which lasted four hours, 15 minutes, came within one minute of the American League record for a nine-inning contest.

The two intense AL East rivals treated the opening-day crowd of 45,185 to a smorgasbord of baseball, combining for 32 hits, 10 doubles, seven stolen bases, two home runs, two walks and two wild pitches.

"You don't forget when you lose that way," Yankees manager Billy Martin said.

Kelly Gruber, who hit two homers and drove in five runs, and designated hitter Rick Leach led a 20-hit Toronto attack with four hits apiece.

Leach and Ernie Whitte drove in two runs apiece in a six-run Toronto first inning as the Blue Jays overcame a 3-0 deficit.

"It wasn't that big a deal, golly," said Gruber, who replaced the injured Rance Mulliniks in the first inning. "It was fortunate the way things went but I was happy to get the opportunity and make the best of it."

"I think there was a couple of pitches they might want to take back."

Mulliniks injured a knee while moving to cover third base on a play in the first inning.

Gruber hit a solo homer in the seventh and a three-run shot in the eighth for the Jays' final runs.

"They scored enough runs for three (games) and we scored enough for two," Yankees first baseman Don Mattingly said. "The fans got their money's worth; if time is money."

George Bell, who played in left field and received a warm ovation from the crowd, and Liny Mosby, each had three hits for Toronto.

David Wells, 1-0, got the win with three-hit relief over the final four innings.

The loss spoiled a five-hit, four-stolen base performance by Yankees leadoff hitter Rickey Henderson.

Boehm takes over lead in state singles event

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Teresa Boehm of Twin Falls has taken over the singles handicap lead after the seventh weekend of the Idaho State Women's Bowling Tournament.

Boehm rolled a 696 handicap last weekend, eclipsing Nampa's Tina Clifton and Twin Falls' Marilyn Kepner, who had shared the lead with identical 688 scores since the first week of the tournament.

"Apart from that few leads changed with two weeks to go in the tournament, which is being held at the Bowldome and the Magic Bowl."

Kathy Lehr of Gooding continues to lead the Class A all-events standings with a score of 1,960, which ABC Christian Day Care Center of Twin Falls leads both the handicap and scratch standings in the Class C team races with scores of 3,090 and 2,286, respectively.

TEAM
Class A
Handicap — 1, Conoco-American, Nampa, 2,082. Scratch — 1,778. 2, Kelly Gardner, Idaho Falls, 1,784. 3, Cheryl Hoyer, Pocatello, 1,774.

Honest, insists Kansas' Brown, I'm staying

WASHINGTON (AP) — Coach Larry Brown, who announced Friday that he would stay at the University of Kansas instead of returning to UCLA, insisted Monday there has been no change of heart.

The Los Angeles Times, in a story published Monday, said sources described as close to Brown, whose team to the national basketball championship last week, were making phone calls saying that Brown might be reconsidering a hasty decision against going back to UCLA.

Brown was asked about the report early Monday afternoon after a reception with members of the Kansas congressional delegation, as he and his Jayhawks were about to board a bus for the White House.

"I don't need to say anything, Brown said. "I'm staying at Kansas."

Asked if the report was completely erroneous, Brown repeated, "I'm staying. Talk to Frederick."

Bob Frederick, the Kansas athletic director who works with Brown and the team, said "I don't think there's anything to those reports at this point. In accordance with his contract, he's notified to me that he intends to stay at Kansas next year. So I think the matter is closed."

UCLA Chancellor Charles Young said Sunday that the school obviously had thought Brown was the right man for the job "so I suppose it is possible, under the right circumstances, to consider that again."

"Goodness knows anything can happen given what has happened so far," Young said. "I don't think it is very likely, but I couldn't absolutely rule it out."

NL: Cubs win for fifth time in six games

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Greg Maddux pitched a six-hitter and Dave Martinez tripled home three runs, keeping the Chicago Cubs on a roll with a 6-1 victory Monday night over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Maddux, 21, also singled and doubled and scored twice in a 13-hit Cubs attack off Bob Forsch, 42, and Scott Arnold. He had a shutout until the ninth, when Bob Horner doubled for the 1,000th hit of his career and Terry Pendleton singled him home.

Chicago, off to its best start since winning seven of its first eight games in 1985, improved to 5-1. St. Louis dipped to 1-5.

Maddux's single came after Forsch retired Vance Law and Shawn Dunston to start Chicago's third. Martinez sent a drive to the warning track in right field that Curt Ford dropped for Maddux's score for a 3-0 lead.

Forsch held Chicago until Jody Davis, Law and Dunston each singled to start the seventh.

Maddux forced Davis at home on a grounder to first base, but Martinez grounded Arnold's first pitch over the first-base bag into the right-field corner to clear the bases. The Cubs completed the scoring in the four-run inning when Arnold balked home Martinez, who has 10 RBI in six games.

In the eighth, Rafael Palmeiro singled to left, went to second on a wild pitch; to third on a groundout and scored on another ball.

St. Louis, which started the night with a .200 team batting average, is off to its worst start since losing 12 of its first 13 games in 1973. Maddux had a 3-0 three-hit victory last week against Atlanta.

Soto won his first game in 11 months with a four-hitter and also singled to cap a four-run fourth inning as the

Baseball

Cincinnati Reds beat the San Francisco Giants 4-0 Monday night. Soto, 1-0, walked three and struck out five in his second start of the season, pitching his first complete game and first shutout since April 24, 1986. The Cincinnati right-hander underwent shoulder surgery late in the 1986 season.

Soto started six games last year in an aborted comeback attempt. He was 3-2, with his last victory on May 11 against the New York Mets, and went on the disabled list to stay May 22. He got the Reds' opening-day pitching assignment this year, allowing six hits and four runs in five innings against St. Louis last year.

San Francisco starter Kelly Downs, 0-2, allowed only one hit before the fourth, an infield single. The righthander's troubles in the fourth began when he walked Eric Davis with one out.

Pittsburgh 5 Philadelphia 1

PITTSBURGH—(AP)—Barry Bonds tripled and scored in the first inning, hit a solo home run in the third and Mike LaValliere had a three-run homer as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Philadelphia Phillies 5-1 Monday night before the largest home crowd in Pirates' history.

The paid attendance of 54,089 broke the record of 52,119 set in the Pirates' home opener last year against St. Louis. The total attendance, counting complimentary tickets, was 57,102.

The advance sellout — all tickets sold by late Saturday — was the first for the Pirates since they left Forbes Field and moved into Three Rivers Stadium in 1970.

AL: Red-hot Indians win sixth straight

CLEVELAND (AP) — Sure, it's too early to talk about such things, but the Cleveland Indians owe it to themselves to do some celebrating.

The Indians took over sole possession of first place in the AL East Monday night by beating the Baltimore Orioles 7-2 behind Greg Swindell's second complete game of the year. It's the first time the Indians have opened first place by themselves since April 16, 1983. They shared first briefly in May 1986.

"We're up there all along," Swindell said. "It might not last very long, but we might as well enjoy it while we're there. I just want to have fun while I can."

The Indians have won six straight games since they lost their opener at Texas, giving them their best start since the 1966 team went 10-0. Cleveland moved a half-game ahead of the New York Yankees, who lost Monday at Toronto to fall to 5-1.

"The guys think they can beat anybody," Indians' manager Doc Edwards said. "They're winning and believing in themselves. You have to believe in yourself before anybody else can believe in you."

Swindell, 2-0, allowed two runs on eight hits, struck out eight and didn't walk a batter, giving Cleveland its fourth complete game of the year. The Indians' team ERA crept up slightly to 1.45.

Dave Clark, filling in for injured Joe Carter, drove in the tie-breaking run with a sixth-inning single and Mel Hall had four hits for Cleveland. Baltimore lost its sixth straight game to match the Orioles' 1955 club record for losses at the start of a season. The Orioles have been outscored 43-7 in their six games.

"We're just starting now and we have a long way to go," said Baltimore designated hitter Larry Sheets. "I think we'll show some character, and we'll see what happens."

Mike Morgan, 0-2, took the loss. With the score tied 2-2 in the sixth, Hall hit a two-out double and took third on a wild pitch as Cory Snyder walked.

Clark, playing because Carter was nursing a sore back, grounded a single to center to score Hall. Snyder moved to third on the play and then scored as Clark got hung up in a run-down between first and second on an attempted steal.

The Indians added three more in the seventh on Pat Tabery's two-run triple and an RBI single by Hall.

Cleveland took a 2-0 lead in the fourth on singles by Brook Jacoby and Hall and a two-run double by Snyder, who has hit safety in all seven of the Indians' games.

Rick Schu tied it in the fifth with a two-run homer to left, the Orioles' first of the season; after Sheets led off the inning with a single.

The sweep of Baltimore was the Indians' first four-game sweep at any team since 1984.

Briefly in Sports

Malay, Hamblin share honors

TWIN FALLS — Weiser's Joe Malay posted the low score and Twin Falls Professional Mike Hamblin missed the most money in the annual Twin Falls pro-am golf tournament Monday.

Malay carded a six-under par 62 to win the 0-11 amateur handicap division over Glenn Blakeley of Burley by three shots, Jim Purves of Twin Falls by four and Doyle Corbett of Sun Valley by seven.

Hamblin won the pro sweeps with a four-under 64 and combined with four local amateurs, Eric Hovey, Carl Sklavos, Steve Schult and Greg Lanting, to win the best ball title.

Following Hamblin in the pro division were Tracy Frank of Burley at 66; Don O'Neil of Idaho Falls, 68; and Bob Campbell and John Lewis, Boise, and John Peterson, Armore, all 67.

Mike Corbett, 71 and Al Jones, 76, were the net winners in the 0-11 amateur division, Bob Chatterton, Boise, was the net tie-tist with a 57, followed by Bill Cook and Dell Timpson, Twin Falls, at 62, and Glenn Sparks at 63.

In the upper handicap division, Eric Hovey overcame some genetic deficiencies to post an unlikely even-par 68 to win gross. That left him four ahead of Howard Todd with Mike Coleran at 75, and Rick Carr, Twin Falls, at 76.

Net winner was Allen Brooks of Sun Valley at 68, followed by Dan Webster, Twin Falls, at 70; Lowell Wills and Lynn Lee, both Twin Falls, at 62, and Gary Allen at 62.

Knicks, Bullets keep alive their postseason prospects in NBA East

NEW YORK (AP) — Patrick Ewing scored 36 points, including a go-ahead turnaround jumper with 23 seconds left in overtime, that lifted the New York Knicks to a 114-111 NBA victory over the Detroit Pistons Monday night.

Ewing's basket made it 112-111, and he missed the ensuing free throw, Detroit knocked the ball out of bounds, giving New York possession. Johnny Newman then hit two free throws with 13 seconds left and Detroit's Dennis Rodman missed a 3-point attempt just before time expired.

The outcome kept the Knicks in an eighth-place tie with Washington in the Eastern Conference and maintained Detroit's two-game lead over Atlanta in the Central Division.

The Bullets beat the Hawks 86-85 Monday night.

Indiana 95
New Jersey 93

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — John Long's 18-footer at the buzzer gave the Indiana Pacers a 96-93 victory Monday night and handed the New Jersey Nets their 11th consecutive loss.

Indiana, in a five-way fight for three playoff spots in the Eastern Conference, rallied from a 11-point deficit in the fourth quarter.

Pro basketball

Utah 113
Golden State 102

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Thurl Bailey scored 11 of his 26 points during Utah's decisive 19-8 run late in the game to lead the Jazz to a 113-102 NBA victory over Golden State Warriors Monday night.

The teams were tied at 94 with 4:53 left when Bailey led the Jazz sweep.

Denver 123
Phoenix 119

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Lafayette Lever scored 26 points and Michael Adams had 23, including five 3-point goals to stretch his NBA-record streak to 37 games, as the Denver Nuggets beat the Phoenix Suns 123-119 Monday night.

The win was the Nuggets' 13th in the last 14 games and moved them within one game of idle Dallas for the Midwest Division lead.

Washington 86
Atlanta 85

ATLANTA (AP) — Darrell Walker hit a 20-footer with one second remaining Monday night to give Washington an 86-85 victory over the Atlanta Hawks, keeping the Bullets' NBA playoff chances alive.

The Bullets remained tied with the New York Knicks for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference. The Knicks beat the Detroit Pistons, 114-111 in overtime Monday night.

Philadelphia 115
Milwaukee 102

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Charles Barkley scored 31 points Monday night as the Philadelphia 76ers beat the Milwaukee Bucks 115-102 to break a four-game losing streak and keep their playoff hopes alive.

The 76ers scored 10 straight points after the Bucks rallied to take a 100-99 lead with 3:59 left when Barkley was assessed a technical foul and Jack Sikma made the free throw.

U.S. sweeps past Peruvians Jays in first round of Davis Cup

By The Associated Press

America's highly-rated doubles team of Ken Flach and Robert Seguso defeated Peru's Jaime Izaga and Carlos Di Laura 6-2, 4-6, 6-3 Sunday in Lima to give the U.S. an insurmountable 3-0 lead.

The victory clinched the tournament for the Americans and qualified the squad for the American Zone I finals in June in Buenos Aires against Argentina, which won its weekend series with Ecuador.

Tournament officials said the Americans declined to play the two reverse singles matches in the best-of-five series because it had won the overall event. The defaults made the final score 3-2.

In the first two singles matches, Jerry Berger defeated Pablo Araya of Peru in five sets Friday and Andre Agassi beat Peruvian Jaime Izaga in four sets Saturday.

Despite apparent nervousness in the opening moments, Flach and Seguso showed speed and agility at the net to keep Izaga and Di Laura off balance through most of the match.

The Peruvian duo recovered from a 4-2 deficit in the second set after the

Tennis

In the first White hit a bases-loaded single, Gruber had an RBI double that Yankees right fielder Dave Winfield lost in the sun, and Jesse Barfield drove in the fourth run of the inning with a grounder. After a walk to Fred McGriff, Leach hit a two-out double.

Henderson singled, stole second and scored on Bobby Meacham's double in the Yankees' three-run first. Mattingly drove in a run on a single, and the third run scored when Barfield, fighting the sun, dropped Winfield's fly to the wall for a double.

Toronto made it 9-3 in the third on a sacrifice fly by Nelson Liriano, an RBI single by Lloyd Moseby and a wild pitch from reliever Tommy John. Starter Rick Rhoden, 1-1, allowed eight hits and nine runs, five earned, in 2 1/2 innings.

Toronto starter Mike Flanagan was called for two balks in a two-run Yankees fourth. Don Slaught, who doubled for his seventh consecutive hit, moved to third on a grounder and scored on a balk. Henderson then singled, stole second, was balked to third, and scored on Mattingly's sacrifice fly.

New York closed to 9-7 with single runs in the fifth and sixth. Slaught hit a sacrifice fly in the fifth, and in the sixth, Henderson doubled, stole third, successfully for the 16th consecutive time, and scored on Mattingly's grounder.

Riflemen and women shot thousands of targets to bits at the Snake River Trapshooting Association's annual shoot.

Valley shooters dominate SRTA finals

By The Times-News More than a dozen Magic Valley residents captured top honors at the fourth annual Snake River Trapshooting Association shoot held over the weekend at the Twin Falls Gun Club. Some 200 shooters from throughout the Northwest participated in the event, which climaxed 10 weeks of competition between member clubs throughout southern Idaho. The association consists of 17 clubs, ranging from Idaho Falls to Caldwell. The Magic Valley champions included Ben Hurling of Ketchum, the veteran winner in singles; Ray Hamby of Kimberly, champion of the AA class in five-man trophy; Ron Gray of Twin Falls, winner of the A

Okamoto captures title

POWAY, Calif. (AP) - Japan's Ayako Okamoto likens her strategy in a golf tournament to that of a runner who waits until the end of a race before sprinting to victory. "It's better to chase somebody than be chased," Okamoto said Sunday after winning her second straight San Diego Inamori Classic with a four-day total of 272-12 under par. She had a final-round 69 over the hilly, 6,021-yard StoneRidge Country Club course to beat Colleen Walker by a stroke. "When you're running, it's easier to see somebody in front of you than behind you," Okamoto said, "and it's easier to catch positive (on the golf course) and try to catch somebody than keep from falling behind." Walker, who began the day one stroke behind Okamoto, became the target when she took a one-stroke lead with five holes to play.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

A pessimist is a man who has been compelled to live with an optimist. -Elbert Hubbard-

Give today's hand to any average person and he will probably fail. If he makes the game, you will have found yourself a pessimist.

West leads the heart deuce and South wonders whether to play for a singleton deuce or a fourth-best lead. If he opts for the latter, (optimists usually do), he ducks to East's queen and East returns the nine (suit preference) king. West to South. Back comes a diamond, but South refuses that finesse and wins dummy's ace. Trumps are drawn, South's last diamond goes on one of dummy's hearts and it's all up to the club suit. No plays work here and it's down one for many players.

The "true" pessimists (excellent rubber-bridge declarers) count up to 10 tricks and take no chances. The heart ace wins at trick one, trumps are drawn and South hangs down his king-of-clubs. West wins and shifts to diamonds, the finesse (losing) is made. South's possible mistake takes finessses they can afford.

The diamond return is won in dummy, and a club to South's jack and West's queen sets up dummy's 10 for a heart discard. There is no need for a heart finesse and South wins his 10 tricks.

So which gender spends more?

Married people still pose a mystery, but among the single, investigators say the men

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — When single people go to the clothing store, who spends more money, men or women? The answer, investigators have discovered, is men. But skewing the findings is one group of men — those age 55 to 64 — who apparently are dedicating a good portion of their apparel spending to gifts for women. "Men aged 55 to 64 spent $1,128 a year on apparel and services in 1984-85, compared with the $682 a year spent by the women in that group," reported Stephanie Shipp in the April edition of American Demographics magazine. "While women outspent men on apparel in all other age groups, that one deviation was enough to pull average clothing spending for all single men above that of single women, $735 to $657, she found."

Item by item breakdown — D2

"Much of that difference can be accounted for by men's purchasing of apparel as gifts. Almost 25 percent of the apparel budget of men goes toward gifts, compared with 14 percent of the apparel budget of women," she wrote. "More than half of the men's apparel gift purchases are for jewelry and watches — and women are the likely recipients of many of those gifts," she reported. Shipp heads the analysis branch of the Bureau of Labor Statistics' Division of Consumer Expenditure Surveys. Her report was based on a study of spending by single men and women in 1984 and 1985. American Demographics, published by Dow Jones & Company, concentrates on population and marketing.

While women have made gains in recent years they continue to trail men in income at all age groups, Shipp noted.

Thus, women may spend less than men on some items, but that money could still represent a larger share of their resources than for males. Her study found that single women spent a larger share of their income on food consumed at home, housing, health care, personal care services and reading material. Men spent a larger share of their resources on restaurant food, alcohol, transportation, entertainment, tobacco and retirement plans. Single men are more likely to be younger, under age 35, while single women were more often age 55 and over, she found.

Single women were more likely to own their own home, 41 percent compared to 29 percent of men, likely reflecting their older age.

Single men were found to devote 20 percent of their money to cars, car repairs and other transportation costs, while women spent 17 percent of their income on transport.

After age 55, however, women tended to spend slightly more than men on new cars and trucks, Shipp discovered.

Single women spent twice as much as men on health care, while at every age group, men outspent women on entertainment.

"Perhaps because it is still the custom that men pay for dates," Shipp said.

Why no smoke?

Cigarette ads are deceptive, foes charge.

The Washington Post

For years, you've been looking at, but possibly not seeing, smokeless cigarettes.

They are in hand or mouth, and their ends are lit. But where there's fire, there's no smoke.

These magical cigarettes don't exist in real life, but they do appear in countless advertisements. They hang from the lips of the Marlboro man. Or they help accessorize those handsome young couples who gather for Sunday brunch and Benson & Hedges.

For people who like to smoke, proclaims the Benson & Hedges ad sent to us by R.R. Palmisano of Rehoboth Beach, Del. "But where's the smoke?" he asks.

If you hadn't noticed the omission, you're not the only one. Neither had Mary Taylor, communications director at Philip Morris USA (Marlboro, Benson & Hedges, Merit) nor Sara Ridgway, vice president for public relations at Lorillard Inc. (Kent, Newport).

"Let me get some ads," said Taylor, somewhat surprised, when queried about the smokeless ads. "I hadn't focused on that."

But Palmisano suspects it is more than merely a lack of focus. He calls the smokeless "deceptive advertising." So does Michael Kertchuk, a longtime tobacco foe and former chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, which regulates advertising.

"It fails to disclose a material fact — that there's smoke from smoking," Partschuk said. "The question is whether it rises to the level of an actionable deception. By itself, it verges on a trivial deception. But on the whole, it's one more element of unreality."

Guy L. Smith IV, vice president for corporate affairs of Philip Morris, scorned such allegations.

"It's another occasion of the leading anti-smoking zealot seeing comies under the bed," Smith said.

But are the zealous on to something? Once upon a time, visible smoke seems to have had strong sales appeal. That's why a succession of Camel pufflers painted into the three-at-a-time, neon-lit sign in Times Square, wafted lovely "smoke" rings over millions of people for more than a quarter-century. R.J. Reynolds' Tobacco Co. turned off the smoke — steam, actually — in 1965.

According to Professor Richard W. Pollay, curator of the History of Advertising Archives at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver, the smoke began to drift out of cigarette advertising about 30 years ago.

"The motivation-research results of the 1950s indicated that smokers had ambivalent feelings," Pollay said. They recognized "some negative aspects" of smoking, such as "smells, burning clothes, some minor health hazards."

"Since then, the general trend is to use art which negates these concerns with images with positive health associations, such as pure and pristine environments, and vigorous and robust behavior," he continued.

"These are the very pictures of health." Visible smoke is potentially perceived as a discrepant element in this imagery," Pollay said. "It might well trigger consumer reflection on this inherent discrepancy between image and reality."

Philip Morris' Smith dismissed Pollay's analysis as predictable and silly. See NO-SMOKE on Page D3.

Cowboy running back Herschel Walker at dress rehearsal with dancer Maria Terезia Balogh in Fort Worth, Texas. The two performed 'Weborn Pieces' on Sunday

Just gotta dance

Dallas running back makes ballet debut

The Associated Press

FORT WORTH, Texas — Dallas Cowboys running back Herschel Walker, best known for his blistering speed-and-bruising-bursts-through-defensive-lines, made his ballet debut Sunday to the cheers of a fan-filled crowd.

About 1,300 people attended the season finale of the Fort Worth Ballet's "story series" — well above the usual numbers for a Sunday afternoon performance, officials said.

The Heisman Trophy winner took part in "Weborn Pieces," a modern ballet performed with the Fort Worth company's principal dancers; Maria Terезia Balogh and Joseph Malbrough.

The muscular Walker said tackling the dance moves "was not easy."

"When you play football, you have a helmet to hide behind and nobody can see your eyes, but it's a lot different out there on the stage," Walker said. "In football, you can improvise if you make a mistake, but if you do it here everyone knows it."

The audience broke into laughter and applause when Walker and Malbrough ended their piece in the three-point stance Walker uses while in the Cowboys backfield.

However, most were more impressed with Walker's being on stage than with the dance moves of a running back who took a single college ballet course.

"I kind of wish he would've danced a little more, but I do admire him for making that kind of contribution," D'Lana Anderson of Fort Worth said of Walker's slow-paced moves.

During the 25-minute performance, the 223-pound Walker, appearing shirtless, often stood still or slowly walked through a series of moves with Ms. Balogh, once lifting her 115-pound body above his head and gently passing her over his back.

"The ballet depends upon extraordinary physical beings, but this is even more extraordinary than one should expect," poet and author William Burford of Fort Worth said of Walker's 50-inch chest and 19½-inch neck. "It's certainly not a ballet dancer's physique here everyone knows it."

Chuck the glitz, Hollywood's gone a romantic route

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — What the stars are wearing attracts almost as much attention as what they're wearing at the annual Oscar ceremony, and this year's fashion plates brimmed with glamour and romance.

Glitz, however, took a backseat. Gone are the pounds of weighty sequins and beads. The 60th Annual Academy Awards will be the year of showing off legs and the body in form-fitting silhouettes.

"We're pushing glamour like crazy this year," designer Bob Mackie said. "Clothes are much more romantic now, and the awards will definitely reflect that," said Mackie, who with Ray Aghayan is the official designer of the show to be televised live from the Shrine Auditorium on Monday.

Mackie and other local fashion notables say films in 1987 were loaded with more solid, serious female roles than ever before, and that will be reflected in "low neckline" and "pre-senters outfit themselves."

Those nominated for Best Actress are Cher for "Moonstruck," Glenn Close for "Fatal Attraction," Holly Hunter for "Broadcast News," Sally Kirkland for "Anna" and Meryl Streep for "Ironweed."

Cher, who was overlooked in the 1986 nominating process for her role as a biker mom in "Mask," stunned the Oscar audience that year in a revealing black sequined spider-web dress that once again made her belly button famous.

"I think the novel is definitely out this year," said designer Blackwell, who puts out an annual list of the "worst-dressed women."

"(Cher) wants to give credibility to her acting," Blackwell said. "I think she'll wear something long and boring, though she'll probably wear her hair like Medusa."

Mackie, who is designing Cher's outfit, said it will be anything but dull. "Since she was passed over for a nomination for 'Mask,' she purposely made a statement to be noticed at the awards," he said. "She won't be conservative this year. I can assure you of that."

Torie Steele, a Beverly Hills bastion of haute couture, has increased its stock of designer "entrance and exit" gowns for Oscar night.

Both American and international collections there are showing dresses short in front and long in the back in basic black as well as strong, bright colors such as fuchsia and emerald green, said Barbara Boettigheimer, president of the Rodeo Drive boutique.

"All over glitz is out and real body-hugging dresses are in," she said, adding that generally only one of each item is duplicated at the exclusive store to prevent duplication.

Sometimes customers get upset because they fall in love with a particular dress but we didn't get it in their size," said Boettigheimer, whose outfit fits her between $3,000 and $7,000.

"Avoiding duplication is one thing we can offer our clients. When they're paying that much for a gown, they want to be sure it's theirs and theirs alone."

Dressy pants are on the hit list this season as well and may be something to watch for at the awards, said Los Angeles designer Holly Harp, whose flowing, romantic dresses have graced past Oscar winners Sally Field and Goldie Hawn.

"The people who look best are the ones who dress simple but still look special," Harp said. "It's sometimes hard to believe."

Beverly Hills designer Susanna Chung, who has outfitted Julie Andrews, Liza Minnelli and Faye Dunaway, says long is definitely passé.

"Women want to show off their legs and their bodies, and the form-fitting fabrics this season do so very nicely," she said.

Fashions come and go, but Oscar still shines it all

Cosby flick wins dubious triple Razzie titles

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Bill Cosby's $27 million movie turkey "Leonard Part 6" gobbled up three Golden Raspberry Awards to lead the flock in the eighth-annual Oscar Eve parody poking fun at the year's worst in film.

"Leonard," which was disowned by Cosby, captured the worst trophies in picture, screenplay and actor categories from the Golden Raspberry Award Foundation.

The Razzie award ceremony Sunday night, 22 hours before the Academy Awards show was to start, was held at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel, the site of the first Oscar show 60 years ago.

Pop star Madonna captured her second Razzie crown as Worst Actress, this time for her performance in "Who's That Girl?"

Daryl Hannah's Razzie stock dropped with the 175-member foundation who voted her Worst Supporting Actress for her role in "Wall Street."

Worst New Star and Worst Supporting Actor awards went to David Mendelhall for his role as what the foundation described as the "insufferably whiney son" of muscle-man Sylvester Stallone in the arm-wrestling melodrama "Over the Top."

Elaine May, who directed the $35 million mega-bomb "Ishtar," tied for Worst Director with author-director Norman Maclean for his "Tough Guys Don't Dance" murder mystery.

Bruce the shark splashed to victory in the new Worst Special Visual Effects and Creature Creations category for his gut-wrenching portrayal of the toothy killer in "Jaws: The Revenge."

Bruce, who starred in all four "Jaws" sagas, also got his teeth into this year's "Worst Career Achievement Award."

The foundation termed it's winner in the Worst Song com-

'Eagle' lives up to reputation, stalls out of race on 5th lap

BRANDS HATCH, England (AP) — Driving a seven-ton truck carrying the number 13, Britain's famed Olympic loser Eddie "The Eagle" Edwards lived up to his reputation as he stalled out of a race here on the fifth lap.

The 24-year-old Cheltenham plater ended up watching the remainder of the race Sunday from the sidelines at this well-known circuit south of London.

Edwards was in fifth place and had the crowd of 60,000 roaring with his spirited handling of the Leyland Roadtrain when he ran up on the grass while traveling about 90 miles per hour. He then swung across the track where the engine stalled, jamming in gear.

Later, still sweating, he said: "I hadn't been getting things right on that bend all day. First I couldn't get gears and then I ran wide. But I shall be back to try again."

"Maybe I can try cars next time. They look like fun."

Cold keeps Pavarotti out of performance

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Famed Italian tenor Luciano Pavarotti is down with a cold, so a sold-out audience at La Scala opera house will have to settle for a replacement at Wednesday's performance of "Elisir d'Amore."

Theater sources said that a reported dispute between Pavarotti, who hasn't sung at La Scala for over a year, and conductor Giuseppe Patane during rehearsals last week had no influence on the singer's decision.

A theater spokesman said Monday that Pavarotti, 53, is suffering from a cold and a slight fever and will be replaced by Vincenzo La Scala.

The crowd, however, was filled with many who said they had never attended a ballet, including many young boys who came to see their football hero. Several rushed down darkened aisles toward the stage when Walker first appeared and a crowd of children seeking autographs crowded stage doors after the show.

"This was a wonderful gesture on Mr. Walker's part and he was successful in bringing people out here today who wouldn't have otherwise come to the ballet," Artistic Director Paul Mejia said.

Performing with a football player was not a new experience for Mejia and the two dancers. All three were involved in the same performance at the Chicago City Ballet with Chicago Bears wide receiver Willie Gault.

 in the past, but that hasn't kept them from running for office again, she told a women-in-medicine conference Sunday sponsored by the University of Miami.

Among myths Smeal said she's battling are the beliefs that women are bad fund-raisers and that women don't vote for other women.

Only after more women are elected will issues such as child and health care get the attention they need, she said.

Canadian visit set for Princess Margaret

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret will visit Canada as a guest of the Canadian government from July 8-13, her office announced Monday.

The 57-year-old sister of Queen Elizabeth II will present new colors to her regiment, the Princess Louise Fusiliers, in Halifax and attend the 129th running of the Queen's Plate in Toronto.

Jackson's belongings auctioned at benefit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Jackson's jewelry, paintings, sculptures and furs went to the highest bidder, as Whoopi Goldberg wielded the auctioneer's gavel.

The pop star opened his estate to over 400 people who coughed up "millions of dollars" to benefit the South African Council of Churches.

Jackson was away on tour, but his brother Jermaine and family patriarch Joseph Jackson were hosts Sunday to the guests who toured the property and were served cocktails and treated to a band and magician.

More than 110 items were auctioned, including a $1.2 million pearl sold to a buyer whose name wasn't revealed, and a Pablo Picasso oil painting titled "Buste d'Homme" according to spokeswoman Sabrina Horn.

"It would be safe to say that millions of dollars were raised," Ms. Horn said.

Goldberg bought an oil painting by Grant Wood valued at between $300,000 to $500,000, said Ms. Horn, who wouldn't disclose how much the actress paid.

The dining room was the only portion of the home open to the bidders, reporters and photographers.

Lia Belli, head of the Adelpia Society and wife of attorney Melvin Belli, arranged the auction. The money is slated for emergency housing, clothing and medical supplies for displaced South African families.

 petition — an "over-heated obvious ditty." "I Want Your Sex" written by George Michael, was from "Beverly Hills Cop II."

Winners, if they dare to show up for the ceremony, receive a trophy of a golf-ball size raspberry glued atop a film reel and spray-painted with gold.

The Golden Raspberry Award Foundation consists of film professionals and critics, as well as frequent film-goers in California and nine other states.

"There are three basic theories of what qualifies as a Razzie," explained John Wilson, foundation president. "First, Hollywood's own measure, how much money did it lose? Second, a movie that was not supposed to be a comedy that generated enormous laughs from the audience. 'Jaws' was one of those and so was Norman Mailer's 'Tough Guys Don't Dance,' which was laughed off the screen in Cannes."

"The last is how exorcising it is to actually sit through a film. Does someone have to pay you money or bribe you with popcorn? 'Who's that Girl?' fits into that category," Wilson said.

It's the intent that counts

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A school teacher who was racing a 5 p.m. postmark deadline to qualify for a newspaper contest did what he could do to get his letter through.

Robert Rafail, a sixth-grade teacher at Lafayette School in Uniontown, Fayette County, and sponsor of the seventh- and eighth-grade stock market club, taped three pennies next to a 22-cent stamp to meet the nine 25-cent postal rate.

It worked.

The letter was postmarked April 6 and arrived with the pennies intact, said Denise Humkele, manager of educational services for the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

Rafail was competing in the newspaper's Stock Challenge, a stock-picking contest. He said he left school very late Wednesday and wanted to meet the 5 p.m. postal deadline but didn't want to waste time waiting in line smoking propaganda. "There is no conscious practice of eliminating smoke from ads," he said. He pointed out that a number of recent ads, including some for Benson & Hedges, continue to show smoke.

"The decisions to show smoke or to airbrush it out, he said, often turn on such things as whether the smoking is being done indoors or outdoors, or on the lightness or darkness of the setting.

Lorillard's Ridgway also expressed surprise at the charge of deception. "We have no policy, nor have we ever had, to show the smoke coming from the tip of a cigarette," she said. "We attempt to make our ads as real as possible, and in a normal setting, where action is involved in photography, you don't see the smoke."

In the early 1980s, Ridgway recalled, a campaign for Kent Golden Lights, emphasizing that "You Really Know You're Smoking" showed

But a review of the recent advertising literature indicates a decided preference for the smokeless image. And it is a preference that extends even beyond consumer advertising.

In its latest annual report, for example, the Philip Morris Companies Inc. shows packs and cartons of cigarettes nestled in a array of carrots and mushrooms, and products of the conglomerate's subsidiaries, such as Post Natural Raisin Bran, Ronzoni Thin Spaghetti, and Jell-O Pudding Pops.

But nowhere in the dozens of photos — including those of Hamish Maxwell, the chairman and chief executive; or the directors — is a naked cigarette to be seen.

What's what

TO TAKE THE TOLLS

Sweden's inventors have come up with a new wrinkle to collect road and bridge tolls. A driver mounts an electronic credit-card in the car's rear window. A camera at the toll booth reads the ID number. A microwave transmitter sends it into a computer for automatic collection. Pretty nifty. The driver doesn't even have to slow down.

S.O.S. banner brightens rainy night for stranded motorists

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you printed an address in your column to send for banners that motorists could put on their cars to call police if they needed help on the road. I am so glad I sent for one because it proved to be a lifesaver.

My car broke down on an interstate road at night. It was raining hard and the road was between two hills. We were locked-in our car for several hours when a state trooper spotted the "Please Call Police" banner I had placed on the inside of the rear window. He stopped, summoned a tow truck and stayed with us until help arrived. Needless to say, we were very grateful.

Abby, please urge your readers to send for this banner. Every motorist should have one in the glove compartment. At $4 it was the best bargain I ever got.

— HELEN GALLETTA, ALIQUIP PA, PA.

DEAR HELEN: Write to: WCIL-BANNERS, P.O. Box 66942, Los Angeles, Calif. 90066. The cost is $4 per banner, postage and handling included. Make your tax-deductible check or money order payable to WCIL-BANNERS. The Westside Center for Independent Living exists to help disabled people live independently.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to give the following advice to "Depressed Down South," who was convicted of shoplifting.

By statute, in California a person may expunge a criminal record if she or he meets certain conditions. Expungement is not a pardon or a complete "cleansing" of the criminal record; rather, it is a "cleansing" of the record for limited purposes.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

For example, a person who obtains an expungement in California is not required to disclose the conviction that was expunged on employment applications (usually, after expungement, disclosure is only required for governmental jobs).

Thus, an individual who has obtained an expungement could honestly, and legally, answer no to a conviction-related question on a job application, depending on the type of job being sought.

I suggest that "Depressed Down South" either hire a lawyer or do some legal research to find out whether the state in which she committed the crime permits expungement, or "cleansing" the record through some other method, so that she may exercise her rights and proceed with her career.

— GLORIA M. SANCHEZ, ESQ., SANTA ANA, CALIF.

DEAR MS. SANCHEZ: Thank you for a letter that many will find helpful.

DEAR ABBY: I am a teacher in a small school in Arkansas. We just started a new program, giving "prizes" to the students who have been "good." That means they have never been tardy, and never been absent from school.

Abby, what are our schools coming to? Why are we paying our future adults to come to school? And why are we rewarding them for not being late? Where have the parent and self-motivation gone?

— YOUNG TEACHER
DEAR TEACHER: To reward excellence is a good idea, but to "pay" students for getting to school on time is a little much. In the good old days, it wasn't what you'd get if you did, it was what you'd get if you didn't, that kept the children in line.

Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.
