Gulf duty for patrol craft may be next

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration is considering assigning Coast Guard patrol boats to help U.S. naval forces protect shipping in the Persian Gulf, Adm. William J. Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said Sunday.

Crowe told an interviewer that the Pentagon may use the boats to guard against future aggression in the gulf by the badly damaged Iranian fleet, which he said is now reduced to carrying out speedboat attacks, such as one it launched against a Saudi Arabian-owned tanker earlier Sunday. That attack slightly damaged the 37,011-ton Sea Trader but caused no injuries to the crew, the tanker's skipper reported.

"The Coast Guard has a patrol boat that is particularly appropriate for (defending against) those types of operations," Crowe said during an appearance on the CBS television program "Face the Nation."

Secretary of Defense Frank C. Carlucci, appearing on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," said that use of Coast Guard vessels would free the Navy's larger ships for other missions, but he confirmed Crowe's statement that no decision had yet been made on their use.

Both the admiral and Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, a Senate Armed Services Committee member interviewed separately on the Brinkley program, agreed that the purpose of the U.S. military presence in the Persian Gulf was to protect that region's oil reserves, estimated by Crowe at 60 percent and by Glenn at 70 percent of the world's total.

President Reagan warned Iran Saturday that further violence by the Tehran regime and refusal to make peace in its 7½-year war with Iraq would prove "very costly." Reagan nevertheless emphasized U.S. neutrality in the Persian Gulf War.

The United States does not want to see the region's oil reserves "come un-

Slow gains for schools in nation

Bennett report critical

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Education Secretary William J. Bennett says the American education system has made little progress in the five years since a searing report called "A Nation At Risk" warned that the system was sinking below "a rising tide of mediocrity."

The school system, Bennett says in a report to be formally delivered to President Reagan on Tuesday, "is still at risk."

Bennett acknowledged that "American education has made some undeniable progress in the last few years. ... We are doing better than we were in 1983."

"But," he wrote, "we are certainly not doing well enough, and we are not doing well enough fast enough. We are still at risk. The absolute level at which our improvements are taking place is unacceptably low."

Bennett decried the dropout rate, poor education of those who do graduate from high school, the widely varying quality of school curricula, the rarity of good schools for disadvantaged and minority children, and the manner of promoting teachers and principals "that make excellence a matter of chance, not design."

He cited a recent Gallup Poll that found a wide majority of Americans favoring school reforms, but said "future reforms face serious obstacles."

"Above all, sound education reforms are threatened by the determined opposition they elicit," Bennett said, pointing to "what might be called opposition by extortion, the false claim that to fix our schools will first require a fortune in new funding."

In addition, Bennett said, "More and more, the opposition to school reform is now manifested in the narrow, self-interested exercise of political power in statehouse corridors and local school board meetings. Almost without

Mitterrand wins first round vote

The Associated Press

PARIS — Socialist President Francois Mitterrand won the first round of the presidential election Sunday setting up a May 8 runoff with conservative Premier Jacques Chirac who finished a distant second.

With 85 percent of the ballots counted, Mitterrand had 34.5 percent of the vote in his quest for a second seven-year term. Chirac, 55, had 19.5 percent.

Former center-right Premier Raymond Barre, 64, finished third with 16.9 percent. He conceded defeat and called on his supporters to back fellow conservative Chirac and oust Mitterrand.

Making a strong showing in the field of nine candidates was Jean-Marie Le Pen, 59, leader of the extreme right National Front, with 14.1 percent. Le Pen campaigned on a tough anti-immigration platform.

The big loser was Communist Party candidate Andre Lajoine, whose 6.7 percent showing was the lowest in the history of the party that has been on a steady decline since 1981.

Turnout in the election was estimated at 82 percent, compared to 81 percent in the first round of the 1981 elections.

The 71-year-old Mitterrand, whose popularity sank to unprecedented lows at mid-term only to soar in the last two years, in two weeks will face the hard-driving premier who has run the government since conservatives won the 1986 legislative elections.

"Now, the choice is simple," Mitterrand said in a brief statement. "To all of you who serve France, we have before us great tasks. Frenchwomen and Frenchmen, let us rally together, neglecting no effort to win May 8."

Chirac, in a joint appearance with Barre at the Senate building, called on unity among conservatives to unseat Mitterrand.

"Now, against the Socialist candidate, we must rally together," he said.

Mitterrand organizers were jubilant as the returns rolled in.

Curing nation's air travel ailments a matter for Congress once again

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A presidential commission has handed the festering ailments of the nation's air travel system back to Congress, which tried but failed to address the problem last year.

With public complaints peaking about safety, chronically delayed and canceled flights, lost baggage and confusing fares, a showpiece bill to protect passengers was pieced together but got bogged down in the 1987 session.

Prospects for a new legislative effort are uncertain, even in light of last week's urgent call by the president's Aviation Safety Commission for "decisive" action.

The commission's report urged lawmakers to create a new "safety czar" within the Federal Aviation Administration, and to give the FAA more clout by removing it from the Department of Transportation.

The commission also suggested that the FAA be freed from cumbersome government rules "that hinder its ability to efficiently purchase, modernize and deploy its air traffic controllers and other employees. In addition, the agency should beef up its 2,000-strong force of inspectors, and become more aggressive in examining the nation's airlines and smaller carriers, the report said.

"Now is the time for decisive action by Congress and the executive branch," the commission said, noting that air traffic is expected to continue its rapid growth.

A bill introduced last year would make the FAA an independent agency and give it more authority to marshal its own forces. That legislation is likely to be modified to accommodate some of the commission's recommendations.

Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., one of the bill's chief sponsors and chairman of the Senate aviation subcommittee, had lined up a total of 50 other cosponsors by late last week. He hopes his panel can write the measure's final version next month.

Complaining in a recent interview of "political regulation" of the FAA by the Transportation Department, Ford said "The FAA people need some independence so they can go out and do the things they think should be done."

But opponents question whether altering the relationship between two federal agencies on a bureaucratic flow chart will have much effect on how safely and quickly airline passengers can get from one city to another.

Carlucci defends Star Wars system

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci on Sunday defended the Star Wars missile defense system, saying a panel of non-government experts believes the system is "fundamentally sound."

He disputed a report in Sunday's edition of The Washington Post that quoted an unpublished congressional study as saying the system would "suffer a catastrophic failure" if it were used against a multiple missile attack from the Soviet Union.

"That's about like saying 10 years before we had helicopters that helicopters were doomed to failure," Carlucci said in an interview on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley."

Carlucci said he had a panel of non-government technicians and engineers evaluate Star Wars, and it concluded that "the program is fundamentally sound and that we can build a militarily effective SDI (strategic defense initiative) program, and that is the goal."

Pravda blasts sloppy repairs, drunkenness at Chernobyl

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Sloppy repairs, drunkenness and nepotism are rampant at the Chernobyl nuclear plant two years after the world's worst nuclear disaster, Pravda said Sunday.

The Communist Party daily said engineering jobs at the plant were handed out to medical, teachers, veterinarians and people without any higher education. It also accused Chernobyl's managers of trying to "resolve at any cost" obstacles to full electricity production at the plant "to the detriment of the quality of repair and maintenance of extremely intricate equipment."

The scathing attack was a departure from the numerous articles appearing in the Soviet press before Tuesday's anniversary of the April 26, 1986, explosion and fire at the power plant 80 miles north of the Ukrainian capital of Kiev.

The explosion killed 31 people, spewed radiation around the world and forced the evacuation of 135,000 Soviets living near the plant.

The previous stories have stressed the extensive safety equipment installed at the plant, improved worker training, the decrease to safe levels of radiation and the return of people to surrounding areas.

Pravda began by reporting safe radiation levels at the plant and the production of 21 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity there since the accident.

But then the focus turned to criticism by the Kiev region's Communist Party committee of "Kombinat," the organization supervising the plant and cleanup around it.

Plant equipment was repaired without technical supervisors and was not tested before being put into service despite serious defects, the newspaper said. It said other problems caused "the grossest violations of sanitary standards."

Some safety measures planned on the reactor No. 4 at the plant were not carried out because of Kombinat's negligence, Pravda said. That reactor, in which the explosion occurred, has been sealed in concrete laden with radiation sensors. Other official reports have stressed the danger from the No. 4 reactor has been neutralized.

"Leadership posts were given to people who had criminal records, who had been excluded from the party or had received strict party penalties," Pravda said.

Fire breaks out aboard sub

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Fire broke out aboard the diesel-powered submarine USS Bonfish off Florida on Sunday, said a spokesman for the Norfolk-based Atlantic Fleet. There was no immediate word on any injuries.

The submarine surfaced 160 miles east of Cape Canaveral, Fla., and was being assisted by the guided missile frigate USS Carr, said Cmdr. Fred Leader. He said the submarine crew of about 100 was being transferred to the frigate.

The Bonfish joined the fleet in 1959 and is one of the last diesel submarines still in service, Leader said.

Attack jet crashes at show

EL TORO, Calif. (AP) — An attack jet doing a loop maneuver crashed in front of an estimated 150,000 spectators Sunday during an air show at the Marine Corps Air Station here, critically injuring the pilot, base officials said.

The F-18 Hornet flown by Col. Jerry Cadick, 45, of Evansville, Ind., went down in a grassy area about 1,000 yards from the stands, between a taxiway and a runway, officials said. It did not explode, said Lt. Shawn Cooper, a base spokesman.

Warhol auction packs 'em in

NEW YORK (AP) — People lined up around the block Sunday to get into the second day of a 10-day auction of Andy Warhol's collection of fine art, trinkets and kitch, with many items selling for far more than expected.

Among the items on block are the late artist's jewelry, furniture, decorations and paintings. More than 1,000 people packed the auction room at Sotheby's.

Gasoline prices up sharply

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The average price of a gallon of gasoline across the nation jumped 2.67 cents to 98.84 cents in the past two weeks, and prices could continue rising as summer nears, an oil industry analyst said Sunday.

"The greatest increases were found in the Midwest; the smallest in the Rocky Mountains region," said Tribby Lundberg, whose Lundberg Survey checks prices at 12,000 gasoline stations in every state. The latest two-week survey ended April 22.

Outcome of talks uncertain

DETROIT (AP) — The pause in hostilities between the United Auto Workers and Chrysler Corp. lasted just long enough for the two sides to open early contract talks.

UAW Vice President Marc Stepp said Friday he will decide early this week whether to keep trying for a settlement in the face of strong underlying problems or to give up the talks begun last week and try again in August.

Judge criticizes age law

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — A judge said he does not agree with trying a 16-year-old as a juvenile for the ax slayings of his parents and two siblings but insisted the law gives him no choice.

District Judge Gerard Ring said Friday he hopes the case will prompt the Legislature to review the law on juvenile crime.

"Under the present law, I can give the same disposition to a juvenile for stealing a Baby Ruth candy bar as for murdering baby Ruth," he said. "I have never agreed with that."

Pennsylvania This week at CSI

moves into final stretch

By The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Jesse Jackson said Sunday he would be willing to talk with those holding U.S. hostages in Lebanon, and suggested that he would be more effective in winning their freedom than would his Democratic presidential rival, Michael Dukakis.

The Reagan administration has refused as a matter of policy to negotiate with hostage takers. Jackson said he would be willing to talk to anyone — including the kidnappers.

"In this world, in this ambiguous world, you must not set up preconditions that stop effectiveness," Jackson said at a rally in Washington. "I would meet with anyone I could meet with to get the hostages out of Beirut."

Jackson's remarks came in the final weekend of the Pennsylvania primary campaign, as he and Dukakis set aside their best-friends campaign style.

Today's weather

Mostly cloudy skies again today

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding:
Today mostly cloudy with a slight chance of a shower. Winds west to 10 to 20 mph. Highs in the upper 50s to the low 60s. Tonight and Tuesday partly cloudy. Lows 30 to 35. Highs 60 to 65.

Camas Prairie and Wood River Valley:
Today mostly cloudy with a slight chance of a shower. Winds west to 10 to 20 mph. Highs upper 40s to low 60s. Tonight and Tuesday partly cloudy. Lows in the mid 20s high in the low to mid 50s.

Northern Utah and Nevada:
Uth — Variable clouds with scattered showers and thunderstorms continuing today. Mostly fair tonight and Tuesday with widely scattered showers, mainly during the afternoon and evening hours. Lows from the mid 30s to low 40s. Highs in the upper 50s and low 60s.

Nevada — Partly cloudy today and Tuesday. Highs in the mid 50s to mid 60s. Lows in the upper 20s east and low 30s elsewhere.

Summary:
A weak storm system was moving through central Idaho Sunday, creating cloudy skies and kicking off a few isolated showers.

As the system drifts through the state, clouds and showers can be expected through today.

Cloudy skies with scattered rain showers in the valleys and snow over the higher terrain were reported at several locations in central and northern Idaho.

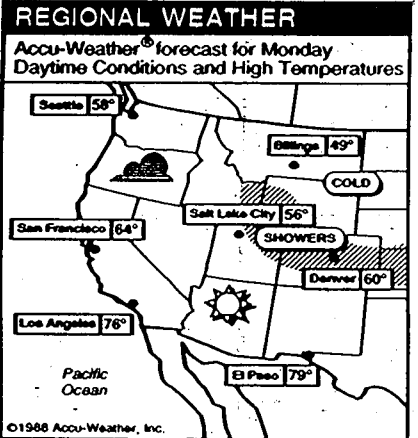

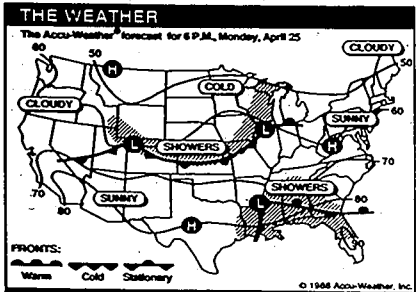

In southern Idaho, showers were beginning to develop as towering cumulus and rain showers were within sight of most reporting stations.

Scattered rain and snow showers were reported earlier from a weather disturbance that went through Idaho on Saturday.

Even though partly cloudy to cloudy skies covered the state, temperatures were inching up to near normal with most afternoon highs in the mid 50s.

Extended forecast — Wednesday through Friday, scattered showers and isolated thunderstorms, mainly Wednesday and again Friday. Highs in the 50s. Lows upper 30s to mid 40s.

The warmest temperature in the state Sunday was 70 degrees at Hagerman. Deadwood reported the coldest at 27 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Sunday, the highest temperature was 102 degrees at Laredo, Texas. The lowest was 19 degrees at Gunnison, Colo.

Schools

fail, wherever a worthwhile school proposal or legislative initiative is under consideration, those with a vested interest in the educational status quo will use political muscle to block reform. And too often the anti-reformers succeed. ... If our schools are to improve, that power must be over-come.

Many experts agree that the U.S. school system needs upgrading, but some say the federal government is part of the problem.

National Education Association President Mary Hatwood Foltz has charged that school reform is "withering on the vine" due to lack of federal funds. The union will mark the fifth anniversary of the release of the "Nation At Risk" report with a protest Tuesday in Lafayette Park across the street from the White House.

Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, said, "There's no evidence that reform is working for any of our kids, except maybe the 20 percent who have always made it in the traditional school system."

The Education Commission of the States has found that 45 states and the District of Columbia have raised graduation standards since 1980. The average high school student in 1987 had to take nearly 20 units of credit to graduate, up from 17 in 1980.

However, the Committee for Economic Development, led by top business executives, and the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching have concluded that school reforms have had little or no impact on urban schools.

The "Nation At Risk" report was prepared by the National Commission on Excellence in Education, a panel of 18 citizens appointed by then-Secretary of Education T.H. Bell in August 1981 to address "the widespread public perception that something our educational system."

"The educational foundations of our society are presently being eroded by a rising tide of mediocrity that threatens our very future as a nation and a people," the report said.

der the domination of either an ayatollah or a commissar," Glenn declared, adding, "We can talk freedom of the seas, but we're not keeping freedom of the seas for Iran, so obviously, we're tilting toward Iraq."

This was emphatically the view of Iran's ambassador to the United States, Mohammed Mahallati, who asserted on the Brinkley panel that the United States was "trying to save the Iraqi regime" through its presence in the gulf. He denied that Iran placed the mines that heavily damaged the U.S. frigate Samuel B. Roberts April 14 and he also disclaimed responsibility for Sunday's attack on the Sea Trader.

"But we have said, very candidly, that either the Persian Gulf should be safe for all or for none," Mahallati declared.

Carlucci dismissed the ambassador's denial as "absurd." He said that U.S. forces photographed mines retrieved from the gulf last week and that the devices had serial numbers that sequentially follow those removed from the Iran, Iraq, an Iranian naval vessel captured in the act of laying mines in the gulf late last year.

"We know Iran is laying mines," the defense secretary said. "None of the participants in the Sunday talk shows provided exact definitions of what all of them accepted as an expanded mission for American forces in protecting Persian Gulf shipping."

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., appearing with Glenn, said that the policy was "not a finished policy." Carlucci and Crowe have assured congressional leaders that there will be further consultation on the matter.

"We should afford some protection, particularly to U.S.-owned, but foreign-flagged vessels, those vessels that actually bring the petroleum to the shores of the United States," Warner, a former secretary of the Navy, said. But he cautioned that "we cannot provide blanket protection to everybody" and said that naval escorting services should be offered "on a selective basis — and don't announce where and when we may do it."

Glenn agreed with the need for expanded protection, calling it, "ludicrous" from its start last July to have restricted naval escort to 11 Kuwaiti-owned tankers that were re-registered under the American flag. Glenn called on the administration to pursue parallel measures, with emphasis on enlisting U.S. allies in moves to cut off arms supplies to Iran.

Glenn dismissed fears that getting together with Iran could involve the United States in a shooting war.

"If we really wanted to get tough with this thing," he said, "all you'd have to do is send a battleship up there, take out the 14 oil-loading platforms on Kharg Island. That's where all their (exported) oil comes through."

Glenn said he did not advocate such measures at this point, but if there should be "all-out war ... that would cut off the economic lifeline of Iran."

Safety

Some say the plan would leave the FAA without the needed oversight, allowing the agency to develop too cozy a relationship with the industry it is supposed to regulate.

"I think the FAA sees the world through aviators' goggles," said Jim Burnett, chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, the agency that investigates transportation accidents. "I think the effect of this legislation is an industry-relied bill."

Industry groups support an independent FAA, but deny that it will be an agency they can easily influence.

"It remains part of the executive branch, it remains part of government," said Edward Stimpson, president of the General Aviation Manufacturers Association, which represents private plane builders.

But important members of Congress involved in aviation matters remain unconvinced.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., chairman of the Commerce Committee, which oversees the aviation subcommittee, said that when it comes to an agency's clout, "It's smarter to have that voice at the cabinet level."

Added Rep. Norman Mineta, D-Calif., chairman of the House aviation subcommittee, "I don't see the independence of the FAA as the solution to their major problems."

The commission's suggestion that a powerful "safety czar" be established at the FAA — along with a new committee to oversee safety regulations — was met with raised eyebrows in Congress and seems unlikely to be approved.

"That's discommodation, that's not fixing things up," said Hollings.

In addition to opposition the proposals face, Congress has a shortened schedule this year, with time off for campaigning. That makes action even less likely.

Some of the commission's recommendations can be implemented by the FAA and Transportation Department without congressional action, such as stepping up inspections of airlines.

The Senate and House each passed bills last year that would force the airlines to issue detailed monthly reports on late and delayed flights and other problems. The legislation has gone nowhere, however, because negotiators from the two chambers cannot agree on whether the bill should also contain new drug-testing requirements.

John M. Albertine, the business executive who headed the safety commission, remains optimistic that Congress will act this year.

"There is a sense in the public's mind that there are problems in the system that have to be fixed," said Albertine, a one-time congressional staff aide. "When there is that strong a sense in the public's mind, around here people begin to pay attention."

Officials target of suit

SANDPOINT (AP) — A North Idaho couple has filed suit in federal court against Bonner County, its sheriff and deputies, the city of Sandpoint and its police chief alleging slander and civil rights violations stemming from a traffic stop last summer that escalated into a roadside scuffle.

Ed and Donna McDonald allege they were exposed to unnecessary roughness and slander during the July 18 stop.

They were convicted Jan. 29 on charges of obstructing a deputy. In their trial in criminal court in Sandpoint, Ed McDonald also was convicted of inattentive driving.

Deputies said the McDonalds resisted arrest during the traffic stop north of Sandpoint.

Coeur d'Alene lawyer Harvey Richman said he hasn't determined the amount of damages he will seek for the McDonalds in the federal suit.

Gypsy moth eggs discovered

SANDPOINT (AP) — Gypsy moths have invaded Sandpoint.

Ladd Livingston, a supervisor for the Idaho Department of Lands, said Friday that the state plans to spray pesticide on trees within a 28-block area where 31 productive gypsy moth egg masses were found.

"It's definitely a problem," Ladd said. "We did not expect to find so many."

A similar search nearly complete in Coeur d'Alene has turned up only one productive egg mass.

Craig seeks water task force

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Larry Craig of Idaho and other congressmen want President Reagan to set up a special task force to deal with water shortages in the West.

Craig and 38 other House Republicans sent a letter to Reagan Friday, stressing that the West is experiencing drought for the second straight year.

"This year will be as dry as the preceding year, according to the experts," the letter to the president said. Craig said water shortages are most severe in Idaho, California, Washington, Oregon and Nevada.

The congressmen called for development of a multi-year contingency plan and close cooperation between federal, state and local government and water users.

Students oppose use of fees

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — North Idaho College student fees should only be used for laboratory and special services, not repaving and lighting parking lots or any purpose for which tuition is charged, a student leader says.

The Associated Students of NIC have issued a demand to the board of trustees to repeal an outdoor facilities fee and refund students more than $279,000 which has accumulated.

The $11 per semester fee was established in 1982 to accumulate funds to build a parking lot and sports facility.

Victi Cade, a student senator, said the fee was appropriate when it was imposed and is inappropriate now.

She said state law lists specific items for which tuition may be used to provide instruction. It is to be a separate item and may not exceed $350 for junior colleges. Specific fees may be imposed for instruction, classroom improvement, interest on general obligation bonds, maintenance and operation and other necessary expenses.

Ms. Cade said the outdoor facilities fee and any other fee used for those purposes is not appropriate.

Ada County radon levels off

BOISE (AP) — Further testing of radon gas levels in more than 1,000 Idaho homes shows that 12 of 43 counties had average readings that exceeded federal standards, but that Ada County's average was no longer unacceptable.

According to the latest study, Ada County had an average radon gas level of 4 picocuries per litre of air. A state survey released in 1986 showed an Ada County average of 5.1 pCi/l.

State officials said a higher sampling of Ada County homes accounted for the decrease in average radon readings, but that the number of Ada homes still exceed the standard.

The state Department of Environment and the federal Environmental Protection Agency consider any radon over 4 pCi/l as being potentially harmful. Radon can cause cancer.

Plant promoters look around

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — International Mill Service, the Philadelphia-based corporation which has announced plans to build a $10 million aluminum-casting plant in Kootenai County, apparently also is looking in Latah County.

Nancy Johansen, Latah County commissioner, said Friday IMS officials met with commissioners Wednesday on the project. Among them were Joe Wociejchowski, manager of the North Idaho plant, and James Daley, IMS executive in Phoenix, Ariz.

"They implied they are still looking for a site and they are interested in Latah County," said Johansen. IMS has signed a contract to provide molten aluminum to Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corp. and has purchased 33 acres of land near Heuser Lake.

Andrus won't choose a side in N. Idaho Demo primary LEWISTON (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus will not pick sides in the Democratic primary election contest between state Sen. Ron Beitel-spacher, D-Grangeville, and his challenger, former Nez Perce County commissioner Darrell Kerby of Cherry Lane.

"I'm not going to get involved in a Democratic primary where you have two legitimate Democratic office holders running against each other," Andrus said in an interview Friday. "I'll support the winner. I'd certainly recognize Ron Beitel-spacher. He's been a strong supporter of mine. Darrell Kerby has been a supporter of mine."

"They'll resolve that between themselves as gentlemen and I'll support the winner. If one of them was a Johnny-come-lately, that would be a different thing. I can't say that against any man."

The Beitel-spacher-Kerby race is the only Democratic Senate primary contest in Idaho that could produce a final result. Of nine incumbent Senate Democrats not facing a Republican challenger, only Beitel-spacher faces a primary election opponent. Monday is the deadline for nomination of candidates to fill vacancies on the ballot.

The nominees then have another week to file nominating petitions and qualify for the ballot.

Nor was Andrus swayed by Beitel-spacher's support for repeal of the investment tax credit and defeat of an industry-backed stream water quality measure. Those votes helped lead Potlatch Corp. to endorse Kerby, who has not taken a position on the two issues. "I have an obligation to support Ron Beitel-spacher in the general election," Andrus said. "Sen. Beitel-spacher did what he thought was right and what I think was right and Potlatch is no threat to Ron Beitel-spacher."

Both men joined Andrus at a Nez Perce County Democratic banquet honoring former Sen. Norma Dobler, D-Moscow; Rep. Harold Reid, D-Craigmont; the late Billie Barnes Anderson, who served as county chairwoman, and the late Fred Hanson, also a former county chairman. Vern Williams was named Democrat of the Year.

Combined, the individuals accounted for more than 125 years of public service, Andrus said.

"They were never hesitant to reach out and help somebody else," he said. "They've given of themselves, with very little regard for themselves, in representing other people." Addressing about 300 people, the governor praised Democrat legislators for standing behind his education budgets, which ultimately were rejected by Republicans. And he again blasted House Speaker Tom Boyd, R-Genesee, for voting for what the governor contends are inadequate education budgets.

Speaking to reporters earlier in the day, Andrus said he was not singling Boyd out and that he would campaign against any legislator who opposed spending more for education.

"Tom Boyd didn't vote right. I would say the people of Latah County, the school districts, the University of Idaho supporters will not support Tom Boyd," Andrus said. "In politics, you're judged not by whether you're a nice guy or a bad guy. You're judged on how you produce and how you vote."

Utah officers hunt suspect in store death

KEARNS, Utah (AP) — Neighbors mourned a tragic death on Sunday as police continued the search for the man who fatally shot a pregnant customer during the robbery of a video store as her three daughters stood nearby.

Anna Holmes, West Valley City, 31, was shot in the head by a gunman who apparently was displeased with the amount of money he had gotten. She would have turned 32 on Monday.

Her infant, delivered by caesarean delivery minutes before the mother's death at the University of Utah Health Sciences Center Friday night, had improved from critical to serious-but-stable condition on Sunday.

The girl, several weeks premature, was named Michelle Anna, after both her mother and her father, Michael H. Holmes.

"Anna will be greatly missed. I don't know one person who didn't like her," neighbor Janice Harmon, who spoke to Mrs. Holmes on the telephone about 90 minutes before the shooting.

Police say the gunman entered the store and demanded money. Unhappy with the contents of the cash register, he demanded more, only to be told by the clerk that was all there was.

"The suspect became agitated and irritated," a police report said. He then took his gun, placed it at the base of Mrs. Holmes' head and pulled the trigger. "That'll take care of her."

Andrus gambles losing moderates

BOISE - Gov. Cecil Andrus is taking a big gamble opposing moderate Republicans such as House Speaker Tom Boyd in the upcoming legislative elections. Andrus hopes to elect more Democrats to the Idaho Legislature and reduce the massive GOP advantage that he kept the Democrats out of the majority for nearly 30 years. But he runs a major risk that if the Democrats don't make the gains, he may have alienated moderate Republicans to the point where his only support in the Legislature will be from his own party. A lot of eyebrows were raised last week when Andrus journeyed to Moscow on another matter and wound up in an interview attacking Boyd for his votes on education budgets in the last session. Boyd has a strong record. Elizabeth Sullivan, the only Democrat who's been brave enough to take on Boyd in recent elections.

Quane Kenyon

closed-door party meetings that picked the speaker, all are not running again. Other moderates face stiff election challenges this year, either from their own party or from Democrats. But many GOP conservatives may be re-elected without opposition, serving in areas where Democrats seldom have a chance to win. That hints there's a strong probability the next Legislature will be even more conservative. The Senate's GOP leader, President Pro Tem James Risch, faces a determined Democratic newcomer, Mike Burkett. But most political observers consider Risch a huge favorite to win. Democrats earlier had hopes of gaining several seats in the Senate, particularly in Ada County. But they haven't been able to come up with the candidates and will lose some of the seats by default. In District 18, where the Republican incumbent, Sen. Jerry Hanson, isn't running, the Democrats thought they had a good chance. But Ada County Democratic Chairman Betty Richardson said the demographics of that district indicate no Democrat has much of a chance. Even Andrus didn't do well in the last election. The Democrats probably will wind up giving up that seat without a fight.

Andrus might remember what happened a decade or so ago, when he embarked on a similar venture. He was at the height of his power in the middle 1970s, after landslide re-election to his second term. He made a personal point to campaign against an ultra-conservative Senate Republican, the late Reed Budge of Soda Springs. But the candidate Andrus backed didn't even come close against Budge - and the governor had to contend with staunch opposition from Budge over everything he proposed after that.

Needed trade bill may be doomed

Instead of boosting U.S. trade through new long-needed laws, Congress and President Reagan are just trading blows. A small army of congressmen, senators, staff, administration officials and lobbyists spent three years thrashing out a comprehensive trade bill, which is expected to pass Congress this week only to be vetoed by Reagan.

Larry Swisher

Stripped of protectionism in a House-Senate conference during the past three months, the bill has the basic support of most Northwest members. The region's trade-heavy economy stands to benefit, and members have won specific provisions to help Northwest industries. But most Republicans and businesses agree with Reagan's opposition to the bill because of its plant closure-notification requirements, which were retained at the insistence of organized labor and Democratic leaders. Any company with more than 100 employees must give 60 days notice of a closure or major layoff, under the requirement.

Democrats charged they intend to ignore Reagan's objection, when the House last week passed the bill, 312-107. Northwest members voted along party lines, with Democrats in support and Republicans opposed, except for Rep. John Miller, R-Wash., who voted yes. The Senate is expected to pass the bill early this week. Reagan likely will hit the veto by setting the bill and probably can get the votes to sustain the veto.

That means the U.S. trade deficit could stay high and perhaps even trigger another stock market crash, warned Rep. Don Bonker, D-Wash., who worked closely on the trade bill. The Black Monday crash occurred in October after a poor monthly trade figure was reported. The issue also could become a political football in the presidential race and upset chances for approval of the U.S.-Canada free trade agreement, he said. Bonker, who heads a House trade subcommittee, defended plant closure notification as a relatively minor concession to labor, most of whose trade proposals were dropped. "Reagan got almost everything he wanted, so who's the culprit? I say it's the White House," he said. Critics object to a new government intrusion and say the extra burden will hurt U.S. businesses, contradicting the bill's goal. "I wanted to vote for the trade bill," said Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, who voted against it because of plant closing. He accused Democratic leaders of "playing political games" to make it appear that Republicans oppose efforts to improve trade.

Three Northwest corporations that are major exporters opposed the bill even though it benefits them. The Boeing Co., whose overseas airliner sales made up about half of its $15 billion in 1987 revenues, "does want to see a trade bill" but supports Reagan's stand on plant closing, a spokesman said. The bill would help the Seattle-based company combat European subsidies to its competitor Airbus, under a technical provision sponsored by Sen. Brock Adams, D-Wash. If plant closing notification were dropped, Weyerhaeuser Co. also "could live with" the trade bill because recent changes mean it no longer threatens to start a trade war, said a lobbyist for the wood products company. "A lot of provisions that could have led to retaliation have been softened," he said. The bill would make wood product exports eligible for government loan guarantees, under a measure sponsored by Bonker and supported by industry. Also, the bill would renew a $1 billion export enhancement program to counter foreign subsidies of grain, including wheat, a major Northwest export. Electronics companies also opposed plant notification as well as certain sanctions imposed on Japan's Toshiba for selling high-tech equipment to the Soviet Union. Heaverton, Ore.-based Tektronix, which makes scientific equipment and sells heavily in Japan, uses Toshiba components and faced being barred from selling to the U.S. government for three years. But last week, the bill was modified to exempt U.S. products from the ban.

Other parts of the bill relax controls on exports of hi-tech equipment to friendly countries, but will be lost if the trade bill fails. "We're sorry to see this kind of outcome," said Tektronix lobbyist Roger Majak. "Hopefully we'll still be able to salvage it with plant closing removed."

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., who worked on the trade bill, gained a provision sought by Tektronix that requires the government, in settling unfair trading complaints, to listen to the concerns of companies that use imported components and might be affected. Even with the plant closing measure, the revised trade bill is popular. Last week, it won the votes of 22 House members who opposed the original, anti-protectionist bill a year ago, including Miller, Les Aspin, D-Ore., and Mike Lowry, D-Wash.

Many members and lobbyists are frustrated at the prospect of Congress and the president being unable to produce a unified U.S. trade policy in the face of huge trade deficits and after three years of effort. Said one lobbyist, such a failure sends a signal to the world that we're absolute enclaves.

Letters/SIS, welfare department draw comment

Welfare mandate harmful

The welfare rat: climb out, or dig deeper. You make the calls. In April '87 I decided to go back to school because work in the construction field was real slow, plus old injuries are and were affecting my work. I applied for and received a Pell grant to go to school at CSI. In August '87, right before I started school, I was put on workman's comp, due to an injury I received in 1983, and been getting worse, even now. At the same time I was put on workman's comp, the same day, my wife was laid off from her temporary job, plus two weeks later she was told by our doctor that she had asthma. Medicine costs us far over around $50 a month. We have received food stamps for a few years before, this and even now. We are not proud of it, but we are also not ashamed of it. We are married and have four kids, all in school. We need the food stamps because my wife's comp was about $1,000 a month. But worse now on workman's comp, I get $798 a month but I get less food stamps. Here is why I am writing this letter.

need it. But after I got the loan, the welfare department took it away by taking it out of my food stamps. Why should I even try to get out of welfare now when the welfare pushes me back in by treating people like me this way. I wrote Rep. Stallings' office here in Twin Falls and they investigated my case and sent my case to Governor Andrus' office - found it was a U.S. government mandate but agreed it didn't seem right. I sent a letter to College Scholarship Service. They also agreed that this should (GSI) be treated as income. If you are going to school now or thinking about it and are on welfare, and if you don't agree with the welfare (treating your grant under GSI as income, please write or phone Rep. Stallings. Even the fair hearing agent that handled my hearing at the welfare department agreed with me but couldn't help because of the U.S. mandate. I do not blame anyone in the welfare departments everywhere, but the congressmen and senators that passed this mandate without really looking at it.

SIS doesn't make sense

My name is George Anthony. I live on Route 2, Filer, the town in which I was born and raised. I derive from a pioneering family dating back to when New York was known as New Amsterdam. I carry on the tradition of my family in exploring new areas, which will become apparent as I relate my background. I was going to wear my "Gordie" suit" but was concerned that my friends wouldn't recognize me in a dark suit and "power" tie. I have just recently been to the Soviet Union where it was expressed to me that the Chernobyl accident had a "blinding" effect on associated scientists and engineers, and central planners. I hope this new born disease of humanity spreads and becomes international. I have a degree in physics, writing my master's thesis on criticality of graphite-neutronic nuclear reactors in several configurations. At the Hanford Reservation among other activities I had the experience of being the area physicist for the F Reactor complex which produced plutonium and tritium for nuclear weapons. Another physicist and I wrote the critical paper on the incidental production of Neptunium 238-Plutonium 238 which led to the only truly successful thermal source for generating electrical power in a space satellite.

By drawing upon neutron transport theory, as specialized from the radiative transfer mathematics of the astrophysicists, I also performed a series of calculations on the criticality of moderated plutonium masses of a simple shape. I will be referring to the results of these still valid investigations in my discussion.

Later in my professional career, this time with Aerojet General I developed the system preliminary design for the Power Conservation Unit of the SNAP-8 nuclear space power supply. The nuclear reactor design was a hydrided tritium metal matrix containing the plutonium fissionable material. The active core in volume was no more than several cubic feet. Its moderating influence of the hydrogen that permits such a small core volume and, most significantly, implies a minimal amount of plutonium required to sustain a critical mass.

In this connection, the major collection process for the lesser enhanced plutonium from its feed material requires hydriding (adding hydrogen) to the collected product in a recovery tub. The submitted information of the Environmental Impact Statement is too vague for a detailed understanding of this procedure. Even so, the following considerations apply to this potentially hazardous design.

My earlier calculations showed, in keeping with experimental measurements, that only 746 grams of weapons grade plutonium is needed for criticality. In the case of the SIS plutonium processing building the operating design calls for an average three kilograms of plutonium to be "at risk" in any given single process area. It is apparent that the peril of a momentary, accidental concentration of hydrided plutonium in the form of hydrogenous shielding, excursions would require evacuation of the process building and environs, and cause an indefinite halt to its operation.

The 746 grams of plutonium stated previously was for an untempered critical mass. This is jargon expressing that a neutron passing through a surface in a sphere in this case would never return. If there is a possibility for the neutron to be scattered back from whence it came, then the required amount of plutonium is reduced accordingly.

An examination of the design of the process line shows that hydrogen, the most efficient scatterer of neutrons, is present in the form of hydrogenous shielding, condensate from glove-box process steam, water loops for cooling, and automatic sprinkler systems. Mentioned in passing was a "criticality drain" in the glove boxes for "abnormal situations."

Since the fuel grade plutonium to be upgraded spontaneously supports neutron emission, one may expect that neutron fluxes will wax and wane according to the concentration of the product while passing through the process lines. It is quite possible that the accumulation in pockets of product and neutron induced radioactivity will shorten the accessible lifetime of the building to only a few years.

I conclude that this attempt to go in one fell swoop, from laboratory research conducted by experienced and knowledgeable scientists and engineers, to an industrial SIS production facility, is unwarranted, unwise, and potentially unsafe. A sparsely populated desert area for employment and a hungry work force clamoring for jobs are a dubious impetus for going ahead with this installation. The unproven need, for additional weapons grade plutonium, should close the books on this project.

Perhaps it would be better if developmental technology for heavy element isotopic separation must be continued, that experience be gained on a small scale prototype basis by using uranium metal instead. At least a case can be made for stockpiling enriched uranium for possible use in next century's generation of nuclear power reactors. What is true that still another set of environmental concerns would be introduced, they could be controlled to be minor compared with the proposed Special Isotope Separation project using plutonium.

Idaho right place for SIS

"Special Isotope Separation" project - testimony and comments for the record in Idaho Falls.

This country ushered in the atomic age and we owe the world good husbandry of our brain child. It can provide great benefits - add the possibility of tremendous destruction to mankind as high explosives have.

Without explosives we could not build, without atomic power for future generations the lights could go out and interplanetary travel would founder. Let us not throw out the baby with the bath water.

We can tame and control the great forces of nature if we use common sense, goodwill, and conscientious determination. The dollars and cents importance of Idaho National Engineering Laboratory (INEL) and Special Isotope Separation project are very important to the economic well-being of Idaho and the people of the Pacific Northwest. But much more than that the cleaning up of atomic waste, the saving of defense dollars and most of all the advancement of laser science for health and the contributions to more productive applications in industry will far outweigh all other considerations.

Idaho is the right place and the right time for SIS. There will be interaction between Mountain Home Air Force Base, Special Isotope Separation project, the Idaho National Guard and Idaho industries. Let's go for SIS.

Economist says small cars cost economy, deny pleasure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy would lose $4.80 for every gallon of gas saved in steering car buyers away from the "convenience and pleasure" of bigger cars, according to a government economist.

The economist, Andrew N. Kleit, a member of the Federal Trade Commission staff, argues that car buyers should not be induced to give up big cars and says just as much fuel would be saved by an additional tax on gasoline of 2 or 3 cents a gallon.

"People clearly get pleasure from buying large cars and I don't see anything illicit in that at all," Kleit said in an interview about his report, "The Impact of Automobile Fuel Economy Standards." He said the report represents his own views and not those of the FTC Bureau of Economics which published it as Working Paper No. 160.

At the urging of General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co., the Transportation Department lowered the standard manufacturers must meet from an average of 27.5 miles per gallon for all their cars to 26 mpg for 1986 and 1987 cars. It was kept at 26 mpg for 1988, but will revert to 27.5 mpg for the 1989 model year unless the department acts again.

Kleit's study of 1986 and 1987 models, which he says represents his own views and not those of the commission, is being used by people who are trying to abolish these Corporate Average Fuel Economy, or CAFE, standards.

Congress imposed the standards in 1975 because it was spooked by the 1973 Arab oil embargo and long gasoline lines. The standards were meant as a fuel-saving alternative to higher taxes on fuel or imported crude oil.

Higher standards are supported by environmentalists who want to see less fossil fuel burned.

Opponents of the higher standards include auto safety proponents who estimate that a 1 mpg increase in the standard for 1989 cars could mean an extra 220 to 390 deaths a year for a decade. Large cars are generally considered safer than small ones.

To have met the higher standard in 1986 and 1987, Kleit said in an interview, about a million buyers would have had to switch from large to small cars. The only way to do this, he said, would have been to raise the price of the average domestic large car by about $1,200 and lower the price of the average domestic small car by about $800.

He said buyers would not have spent the $3.3 billion they were willing to put up for the satisfaction of owning and driving larger cars — "that many dollars worth of convenience and pleasure," as shown by the difference in the prices of large cars people bought and small ones they would have bought.

Profits to U.S. manufacturers would have been $111 million less — declines at GM and Ford partially offset by increases at Chrysler — so the loss to the economy would have been the sum of the two numbers, more than $3.4 billion, Kleit said.

About 712 million gallons of gasoline would be saved over the lives of the cars, Kleit calculated. So the cost per gallon saved would have been simply $3.4 billion divided by this number of gallons — $4.80 in round figures. Different assumptions could make it anywhere from $3.71 to $6.21, he said.

"While CAFE policy can save gasoline, it does so at a prohibitive cost to the economy," Kleit wrote.

Judge's ruling spotlights dilemma of security, fair Iran-Contra trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — A judge's decision to give defendant Albert Hakim access to classified documents in the Iran-Contra case spotlights the dilemma of ensuring a fair trial while protecting the nation's secrets.

Since Hakim has never been granted a security clearance, U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell's recent decision made clear that fairness takes precedence over normal security rules in a criminal trial.

The judge gave all four defendants access to 300,000 classified documents to prepare for trial, although anyone in the case faces stiff penalties for unauthorized disclosure of material in the documents.

But Hakim's case is the best example of the problem, because his background is so different from those of the other defendants.

Oliver L. North, John M. Poindexter, and Richard V. Secord all are former military men with wide experience in handling secret documents and covert operations.

But Hakim is a businessman of Iranian heritage who told the Iran-Contra congressional committees, "As a businessman, I never pretended to undertake these activities for philanthropic purposes."

Jerry Rubino, director of security for the Justice Department, said, "It does present a problem whenever we can't do traditional background checks" for security clearances.

Rubino said he can't recall any previous case where such broad access to classified information was granted to someone without a clearance. Normally, he said, "The indictment makes it inappropriate to say this person is trustworthy."

The Iran-Contra indictment alleges a broad conspiracy to misuse a lawful presidential order allowing the secret sales of arms to Iran.

The conspirators are accused of using money from the sales to aid the Nicaraguan Contra rebels when such assistance was banned, to generate illegal profits for private gain, and to cover up their activities.

North was a National Security Council staff member; his boss was former national security adviser Poindecker; Secord is a former Air Force major general turned private businessman and Hakim was Secord's business partner.

As an NSC staffer, North generated many of the classified Iran-Contra documents that he will see in the case; so did Poindexter, who routinely briefed the president on national security matters and therefore had vast knowledge of the nation's secrets.

Secord, who became North's key private sector operative, had held sensitive Pentagon jobs. He once was in charge of international security matters and reportedly helped plan an unexecuted Pentagon mission to Iran in 1980, when 82 Americans were held hostage at the U.S. embassy there.

E. Lawrence Barcella Jr., a former assistant U.S. attorney in Washington who specialized in anti-terrorism prosecutions, said Reagan administration officials "probably are very edgy about letting Hakim see it (the classified information)."

But he added, "The problem is, that was the choice (the independent counsel) knew about before he indicted him."

The government has decided on occasion against bringing charges in some espionage or anti-terrorism cases so it wouldn't risk disclosure of classified information, Barcella said.

But far worse for the government was "graymail," a form of blackmail used by those threatening to expose classified information if indicted.

Congress' answer was passage in 1980 of the Classified Information Procedures Act, which sets up rules for handling classified information in criminal trials.

The law allows the judge to take swift retribution against unauthorized disclosures by finding a violator in contempt and jailing him or her immediately.

In return for the swift contempt penalty that protects the government's information, the defense is assured the access it needs to present its side.

"The act was structured to equalize the status of a defendant regardless of whether he has a security clearance," said Allan Adler, a legislative counsel of the American Civil Liberties Union.

VETERANS' UNIFORMS

It's said military veterans can be divided almost equally into two categories: those who keep parts of their old uniforms as mementos and those who purposely don't. Under which category does the veteran in your family belong?

Maybe you already heard that a chameleon's tongue is hollow.

thermometer in a chicken to get an accurate reading?
A. When cooking same? In the breast.

Remarkable how many mothers of presidents lived longer than ordinary people. George Washington's mother, Mary, 81. John Adams' mother, Susanna, 98. James Madison's mother, Eleanor, 98. Franklin D. Roosevelt's mother, Sara, 86. Harry Truman's mother, Martha, 94. And on and on. Curious.

When your granddad was a lad, lighting of 28 Christmas trees cost the equivalent of a week's wages:

The sun zaps out more energy in one second than mankind has used so far.

Best-selling bathroom tissue in the Republic of Ireland is green.

Q. How much heroin is a "key"?
A. That's short for kilogram. Or 2,204.6 pounds.

Q. Do frogs and toads have teeth?
A. Frogs, yes. Toads, no.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A tendency to be argumentative or scheming should be controlled this morning, since you will later require the assistance of friends and co-workers. Don't put off making any important decisions.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't become involved in any arguments where finances are concerned. If you need advice, listen only to qualified persons.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): If you try to rectify a troublesome situation at this time, you will only make it worse. Be honest and forthright today, and make much progress.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Avoid a person who purposely tries to annoy you, and get busy at constructive matters. Sit down with your mate and plan your future.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Although you may get off to a slow start this morning, you can get a great deal accomplished this afternoon if you apply yourself.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): If you try to force others to accept your way of doing things, you will only alienate these individuals. Be sure to drive with great care.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): If you avoid an argument this morning, you can make real progress today. Take it easy at home tonight, and get plenty of rest.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Take care of any pressing responsibilities early today, then work on building up your financial security. Show more affection for your mate.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): A big opportunity to advance could be present today, so keep your eyes and ears open. Try to be more cooperative with your co-workers.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Fellow workers will help you to finish up a difficult project if you ask pleasantly. Don't let anyone draw you into a silly argument.

If Your Child Is Born Today... He or she will have an unusually powerful intellect, and can be quite successful if a calm and poised attitude is always maintained in the face of tense situations. Your progeny could do very well in government or corporate work, so be sure a fine education is provided.

Rivals Dukakis, Jackson become friends on campaign trail

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — They are an odd couple — the cool technician from Massachusetts and the fiery preacher from the civil rights movement.

Rivals they still are, but Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson have become friends as they have survived to the endgame of the Democratic nomination wars of 1988.

"We like each other and we respect each other," Dukakis tells crowds. "We may differ on some issues, but if we do, it is in the spirit of friendship."

Politicians often say they like each other or are friends when there is little there but political necessity and practical relationships. But aides to both candidates say the Dukakis-Jackson relationship is getting stronger and more personal day by day.

It is a relationship nurtured in private talks and public positions. The two meet on the campaign trail, most often at debates.

This past weekend, in debates in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, there was much laughter and smiling and banter as they talked of their agreement on the issues and little about their disagreements.

"It's been growing and it is very positive," said Ann Lewis, a Jackson adviser, of the developing relationship between the two candidates. Lewis said the two-week New York battle was a key to the friendship, as both men avoided negative campaigning.

The two also talk by phone at least once a week — the loser calling to congratulate the winner Wednesday morning after each primary.

"They've been through the same grueling experience together — this campaign," added Dukakis aide Leslie Dach. "That's gives them a lot in common."

In the next few weeks and months, their relationship may be the single most important one for the party and

Gov. Michael Dukakis, Rev. Jesse Jackson exchange greetings prior to debate its hopes for winning back the White House in November.

Dukakis is the front-runner with a growing lead; Jackson, the black leader who excites crowds like no other politician today.

How Dukakis deals with Jackson and his supporters will determine in large part their commitment to the Democratic ticket in the fall.

"How do we channel the enthusiasm in that community?" Rep. Jim Florio, D-N.J., asked Dukakis at one Philadelphia campaign stop as they talked of the fall campaign.

Thus, the Dukakis aversion to negative campaigns and his need for Jackson's help dovetail nicely.

"Yes, I want to win, but this is going to be a positive campaign," Dukakis said in Aliquippa, Pa.

"We both happen to be very positive people," Dukakis told a labor rally Saturday morning in Philadelphia.

"We both understand that there is one overriding goal in this campaign and that is to win in November."

Dukakis' dealings with Jackson will shape many voters' perception of what kind of a leader this Massachusetts governor really is.

In 1984, Democratic nominee Walter Mondale's failure to deal effectively with Jackson in his first bid for the nomination helped create the perception that Mondale was a weak leader who pandered ineffectively to the key black voting bloc in the party.

"This year, there were reports that Dukakis and Jackson did not get along particularly well, reports that both camps say were exaggerated or wrong."

The relationship improved after Super Tuesday, as Jackson was gracious in his victory in Michigan and finishing ahead of Dukakis in Illinois. Dukakis, in turn, was gracious in accepting defeat and pushing on to the next state.

Dukakis resisted all pressure to be sharply critical of Jackson, even after Sen. Albert Gore Jr. went dramatically negative against Jackson in a desperate effort to revive his candidacy in the two weeks before the New York primary.

And New York Mayor Ed Koch joined in, adding a racial and religious overnote to the debate that brought Koch strong rebukes from some.

Dukakis and Jackson both refused to trade charges on that level, tactics that they repeatedly praised each other for.

Now the relationship will be truly tested, as the two go head-to-head for the rest of the primary season and perhaps into the convention.

Dukakis is treading very, very carefully in his theme of government experience as the reason to win voters' support. While at times his stance of "I'm a doer, not a talker" seemed aimed directly at Jackson, he is careful not to praise Jackson even as he draws the distinctions. "Jesse has his own strengths and his own message and it's an important one," Dukakis said. "What I offer is a record of helping to create jobs, to save jobs... of building housing, and providing health care."

Asked if that meant Jackson doesn't have a record, Dukakis insisted he didn't mean that.

"He doesn't have a record in government. I do. He has his other strengths. I respect them and I admire them," he said.

Campaign puts Kirkpatrick forth as No. 2 on GOP ticket

WASHINGTON (AP) — An unauthorized Jeane Kirkpatrick for Vice President campaign has garnered $100,000 and 1,400 volunteers in less than four months, but is unlikely to win a blessing from the former U.N. ambassador herself.

The independent draft movement was the brainchild of Curt Clements, founder of a controversial senior citizens lobbying group, owner of a direct mail firm and director of the Kirkpatrick effort.

Since January he and other Kirkpatrick aficionados have been testing the grass roots through direct mailings and petitions circulated at state Republican conventions.

"We have found that she is enormously popular. It's just been incredible," Clements said. "This will show the vice president (George Bush) that the ideal selection is Jeane Kirkpatrick."

Kirkpatrick, a Georgetown University professor and a fellow at the American Enterprise Institute, declined to be interviewed on the subject. But she said through a spokesman that she has no connection with the Clements effort and does not want one.

"She believes the decision on the vice president should be solely that of Vice President Bush," the expected GOP nominee, said Mark Salter, the spokesman.

Clements, a direct mail expert and former member of the executive committee of the National Conservative Political Action Committee, doesn't disagree with that. But he says he's hoping to create such a groundswell for Kirkpatrick that Bush won't dare choose anyone else.

"Frankly, without this effort, I don't think Dr. Kirkpatrick would be given serious consideration for the nomination," he said. "With it, I think she will get it."

Bush spokesman Pete Teeley predicted that the Clements initiative would not be the first lobbying effort on behalf of one vice presidential possibility or another.

"Mrs. Kirkpatrick is wise in not becoming involved in this operation and she is correct in her statement that it is the vice president's choice. He will make that after a lot of consideration," Teeley said.

"There's just something really unseemly about trying to force somebody onto a ticket... to throw them forward in an effort they haven't sanctioned themselves."

Last body dug from elevator rubble

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — Investigators searching for the cause of two explosions that destroyed a grain elevator examined the rubble Sunday after recovering the last body of five workers killed in the blasts.

"There's a strong possibility that ignited grain dust sparked the explosions that flattened the ADM Growmark granary but 'it could be days' before the exact cause and origin of the blasts are pinpointed, Joliet Fire Chief George Plese said Sunday. Airborne grain dust can be highly explosive.

After working non-stop for about 29 hours, about 100 volunteers and professionals using cranes and bulldozers uncovered the bodies of three workers Saturday who had been missing since Friday's explosion, Plese said.

The last of the five victims was found in the basement of the granary, crushed by the wave of corn and soybeans that had swept them there, the chief said.

The bodies were discovered within half an hour of each other at the complex on the Des Plaines River about 40 miles southwest of Chicago, said police detective Alan Horvath.

"As far as I can tell from the preliminary examinations at the scene there was no burning on these bodies," Will County Deputy Coroner William Ferguson said Saturday night.

"Indications are that they would have died instantly from the injuries."

Officials finally ruled out a witness' report that the blasts had blown a worker off a barge and into the river, and a search of the river was called off, Plese said.

Authorities believe that airborne grain dust was ignited in the first explosion, which apparently ruptured a natural gas main and touched off a second blast moments later, Plese said.

The blasts turned the 100-foot silos at the site into 30-foot-high mounds of twisted steel, reinforced concrete and 70,000 bushels of corn and soybeans, Plese said.

"We had to dig through all of that to get at these people who were buried," he said by phone Sunday from Joliet.

About 60 volunteers joined the estimated 40 workers at the scene who sifted through rubble "non-stop from the time it blew up until we dug them out," he said.

The victims found Saturday were identified as Donald E. Zack of Joliet, Daniel McLaughlin, 18, of Manhattan, and Michael Dupuis, 23, of Bourbonnais, said the deputy coroner.

The bodies of Mark Stewart, 20, of Princeton, and Dale Brent Slatton, 28, of Newark, were found Friday.

Donors also need next of kin OK

DEAR ABBY: This year, April 24-30 has been designated as National Organ Donor Awareness Week. Many people will sign donor cards stating their intentions to donate. However, many do not realize that just by signing the card, they do not automatically become a donor — they must get consent from next of kin.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

Last November, due to the critical need for organs for transplant, required request became federal law — meaning that any time a death occurs, the next of kin must be asked for consent to remove organs suitable for transplant.

Organ donation is a very personal decision and should be discussed by all family members now — not later. When we ask the nearest of kin for permission, we present that beautiful piece clipped from the Dear Abby column, and permission is promptly given.

Thank you for all the good you do. — PAM MAYES, ADMINISTRATIVE SECRETARY, ALABAMA REGIONAL ORGAN AND TISSUE CENTER, BIRMINGHAM, ALA. DEAR PAM MAYES: What better time to again publish "that beautiful piece."

"When that happens, do not attempt to instill artificial life into my body by the use of a machine. And don't call this my 'deathbed.' Call it my 'bed of life,' and let my body be taken from it to help others lead fuller lives.

"Give my sight to a man who has never seen a sunrise, a baby's face or love in the eyes of a woman."

'Pool party' gives boost to community spirit

Successful fundraiser moves city facility one big step closer to reality

By MARTA CLEAVELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The jail was full of desperadoes trying to make their $10 bail by playing the sympathy routine to amused passersby.

Capacity crowds were belling up to the bingo tables. Painted faces, pot painted ladies, paraded from booth to booth.

The crowds that came to the Magic Valley Mall on Saturday were offered more than 30 flavors of fun in exchange for a donation to the fund for the future municipal outdoor swimming pool.

The "pool party" was coordinated by the Citizens for a Better Community, and a large number of local service organizations and businesses contributed an event to the carnival-like atmosphere.

'I've had a lot worse things thrown at me.'
— Lee Wagner, KMTV manager

All that commotion combined stood a pretty good chance of achieving the $10,000 fundraising goal set for the day, said Art Frantz, a Twin Falls city councilman and pool volunteer.

The crowds were constant and highly entertained, he said.

The Musical Feet booth, operated by Andrew's Hallmark, was raking in dough hand over foot, two quarters at a time.

Founded on the timeless principle of musical chairs, a person paid 50 cents for four chances to win a prize by walking in a wide circle of brightly colored footprints marked on the floor while music played. When the music stopped, the walkers stopped, and a number was drawn. Anyone standing on the footprint with the corresponding number would win a prize.

This was considered high entertainment by the younger set.

A boy known only as Josh — he had his name printed on his new swimming pool promotion T-shirt — approached the prize table to scrutinize the potential value of spending his money there. Suddenly he spied something that excited him very much — a plastic baby dinosaur hatching from a plastic egg.

He wanted that and badly. Sure, he wanted to swim in that pool next summer as much as the next kid, but that wasn't as important as getting that dinosaur.

He laid his money down.

The music started. Seven kids walked the circle of feet. Josh walked with style. He felt the music. It was speaking to him.

The music stopped. The number 27 was called. Josh looked down at the feet he was standing on.

Number 27. He had won. His first try.

"All right!" he said, making a beeline for the prize table.

He picked up that dinosaur — his dinosaur — and held it against his chest. "Ges."

Then he went to walk beside his sister, who was still traipsing off ring, and offered the encouraging words of a boy accustomed to winning.

A lot of repeat customers there.

The Twin Falls Lionesses Club next door was having trouble competing with the action and excitement at the Musical Feet. Their booth offered raffle chances for Mother's Day-oriented prizes including a handmade afghan, golf lessons and dinner for two. They even priced the tickets low — three chances for $1 — to attract the abundant kiddie dollars.

Apparently the kids were more interested in winning prizes for themselves than for their moms.

Meanwhile, at the other end of the mall, the stakes were a lot higher but the prizes were every bit as rewarding.

For $10 a crack, people could take out their civic frustrations on a local powerbroker by heaving a whipped cream pie between his eyes.

Gerald Meyerhoffer, president of the College of Southern Idaho, was the most popular target.

City Manager Tom Courtney explained the various techniques of taking a pie in the face.

"There's the open eyes technique," he said. "I tried it. I won't try it again."

Vince Alberdi, former Twin Falls economic development director, tried the goggles technique.

"It's not much better," he said.

The worst part is when the stuff goes up your nose, Courtney said.

No, the worst is when it gets in your ears, Alberdi said.

Getting it in your mouth isn't so bad, though, if Lee Wagner, general manager of KMTV-TV, is any judge.

"It's quite good. You should taste it," he said, licking the SodaBuster pie from his lips. "I've had a lot worse things thrown at me."

Souvenirs were available from the Jaycees selling T-shirts and visors with a pool logo on them that reads, "Pool with a porpoise." Those items may still be purchased from Jaycee members and T-Shirts Plus.

A pie barely misses KMTV general manager Lee Wagner during Saturday's 'pool party'

Ketchum City Council tables conditional use permit request

By TERESA TAMURA
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Plans for a 24-hour, automated gas and diesel station were put on hold last week when the Ketchum City Council tabled a request for a conditional use permit in the city's light industrial area between Highway 75 and Saddle Road.

Phil Conger, Sun Valley realtor, said he was concerned about this "appropriateness" of allowing this type of business in an area near homes in the $500,000 price range. "I think the issue here is not that these gentlemen come with a good idea but rather a zoning problem that really needs attention," he said.

Brian Thomas, owner and president of BriCo Inc., showed council members preliminary plans for the project, which includes three pumps for diesel, regular and unleaded fuels on a 30-foot by 60-foot concrete island. All flammable liquids would be stored underground and an attendant would work on the premises from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Thomas described the operation as a "low-key service station on a credit card basis." He said it would be geared towards locals and businesses and he anticipates approximately 500 card holders.

The Northwood Business Park, where the proposed site is located, is one of several light industrial areas the City Planning and Zoning Commission is presently discussing.

Because of the changing needs and demands of the area, the commission is considering the addition of various conditional uses, gas stations being among them. Thomas plans on attending the commission's meeting to find out if his proposed business could be located on that site.

According to Garth McClure, city planner, the current zoning ordinance addresses fuel sales in the Business 1 zone as a retail service station or in the Light Industrial 2 zone for bulk fuel sales.

Because Thomas's operation is automated, it does not fit into the traditional service station description. Nor does it qualify as a bulk fuel operation. He would sell fuel to all card holders regardless of how much fuel they purchased.

Ron Sharp, a developer in the Northwood industrial area, said, "Northwood's really confused right now. We're told we shouldn't be too commercial, too officey. Now, we're being told we shouldn't be too light industrial. We should be able to come up with a plan that everybody feels is appropriate."

Besides the question of appropriateness came the question of aesthetics.

"If planning and zoning says gas stations are allowed down in light industrial, I would say fine," Councilman Tom Held said. "I hope they would make them attractive enough that it isn't all asphalt. I'd rather see it seagrubsh."

Councilman Bill Vanderbilt said he supported allowing Thomas the conditional use permit. "I would much rather see those people with the trucks, like yard maintenance and landscaping people, come to a place like this and fill up. In the business zone it creates congestion on streets that are a lot busier than these in light industrial," he said.

Thomas owns a similar operation in Elko, Nev., where he sells approximately 90,000 gallons of fuel a month. Besides his plans for Ketchum, in the next few months he will be opening an automated fuel station in Twin Falls.

All customers must be card holders to access the pumps. The card, similar to a credit card, is inserted into a data entry terminal located outside on the island, said Steve Leonard, owner and president of Leonard Petroleum Equipment Inc. in Twin Falls. After entering a personal identification number, the "card reader" can determine who the customer is and authorize a fuel purchase. The time, date and quantity of the purchase is recorded and a monthly computerized statement is mailed out.

"It provides a nice service for the people who are in the light industrial area," said Leonard. "They can fuel their trucks at different times of the day and as far as traffic problems, a system like this fuels and gets people moving quickly."

"You don't have a big congestion problem where they're in buying pop, chips or whatever, and their car is sitting out on the island and people are backed up. They get their gas and go," he said.

Thomas may have to wait as long as two-and-a-half months before receiving a decision on the permit for the Ketchum station. The planning and zoning commission has to discuss exactly what changes will be made in the zoning ordinances and hold public hearings. The commission then makes its recommendations to the City Council and another public hearing will be held.

"I'm disappointed but not going to give up," Thomas said.

Wendell schools may redistrict for parity

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — A study of Wendell School District zones showing a difference of 40 percent between the population of the smallest and the largest may lead to redistricting before the election of May 1989.

A petition asking for adjustment of school voting zones was presented to the Wendell School Board last month by patron Darwin Yoder.

Yoder said the boundaries may need to be adjusted because, by law, the zones are supposed to be equal in population. Due to uneven growth in the district, the zones are not equal, he said.

At the school board meeting last week, Superintendent George Crawford said a population census taken by a committee headed by Yoder and patron George Benson "did show a disparity" in the size of voting zones. Zone 3 has the least population with 530 residents and Zone 4 has the most with 898.

Crawford said 671 patrons per zone would make the five zones equal.

To rezone, he said, new boundaries need to be drawn and sent in a proposal to the state Board of Education no later than 60 days after the petition was filed.

If the state approves the proposed new boundaries, then an election will be held in Wendell to get voter approval.

If approved, trustees will appoint a representative for each zone. Crawford predicted current trustees would be appointed unless two trustees end up in the McNees, Wilkes seek school board post.

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two Twin Falls women filed petitions last week seeking the Twin Falls School Board seat soon to be vacated by Gary Fay.

Lenore McNees, 52, and 37-year-old Lorrie Wilkes submitted candidate petitions early last week, said Jenny Dougherty, clerk-treasurer of the school board.

Fay announced at this month's school board meeting that he would not run for re-election.

Dougherty said one other person has picked up a petition, but has not yet turned it in with the necessary five signatures. The election is for the school board seat representing Zone 1, made up primarily of the downtown area.

"I just feel a need to be more involved in my community," said Wilkes, who is director of nursing at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Wilkes added that she has a daughter in Twin Falls High School, "so I'm very interested from that perspective."

McNees also said she is running largely because of an interest garnered from her children's experiences in the local school system. She has four children, the youngest of whom graduates this year from the high school.

Jack McNees, her ex-husband, was a school board member for several years until 1985, she said.

"I don't have any major complaints about the school system or the school board or the school administration," she said.

When asked about the creation-ism-evolution-debate currently facing the school board, Wilkes said she would "rather reserve comment

Sports, academics collide again

GLENN'S FERRY — "... I don't think it's fair ... they have their announcements ready ..."

"... I have always considered athletics and school work about 50-50 — for the kids that go out for athletics ..."

These comments by parents showed both sides of the issue when the subject of athletics versus academics again became the topic among parents, students and administration at a recent Glenns Ferry School Board meeting that led to graduation being rescheduled.

The Region IV Idaho High School Activities Association announced on March 16 that the district track meet would be held the second week in May, including the evening of May 13.

The announcement created an immediate problem for the Glenns Ferry High School, which has 10 seniors in the event, six the evening of the 13.

High School Graduation had been set the previous spring, for the evening of May 13. Announcements had been prepared, families of students had been making plans for the past year so out-of-town parents and other relatives could attend, vacations and work schedules had been planned around this major event in the students' academic careers.

But the track meet is also a major event for the students involved, not only as a culmination of the seniors' high school athletic careers, but perhaps for some, a chance to obtain college scholarships. In addition, team events include students from other grades.

"It's a matter of a no-win situation," said Superintendent Bob Fontaine, indicating light laughter from those gathered to try to settle the dilemma.

The conflict around the graduation date and state and regional track meets has been a problem many years, said Fontaine.

When the problem surfaced this year, a decision was made to change the graduation date to Saturday, to accommodate the track team, but a petition circulated among the seniors showed 24 of the 37 graduating students preferred to stay with the original date. Students also discussed the problem with school board members.

A meeting was called with seniors, Principal Len

Bellevue waste plan to air

By ANNE MARIE JEHLE
Times-News correspondent

BELLEVUE — Six-month engineering will present a feasibility study of the bio-lac wastewater treatment facility proposed for City Lot A along Glendale Road on Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Bellevue Elementary School.

Since the bio-lac treatment requires less surface area than the previously considered aerated lagoon facility, it will cost less. Even though operation and maintenance of the bio-lac facility will cost more than the aerated lagoon facility, the 20-year study shows that the bio-lac will still be less expensive over the next 20 years.

Bruce Truxel of Sawtooth Engineering called the bio-lac system "a modified conventional/mechanical plant" which stores waste in two small, closed basins where it is treated by induced air. Truxel said that if the system is maintained properly, there should be no odor.

In other Bellevue news, the City Council bid Mayor Mike Ivey a fond farewell at its April meeting. Ivey did not run for re-election, citing health reasons.

Ivey said that he will miss the installment of new officers on May 2, and requested that Alderman Dale Ewerson act as mayor in his absence.

In departing, Ivey said, "I've tried to keep Bellevue at its best."

Ewerson thanked Ivey, saying, "Your aggressive attitude helped the council move along."

Bellevue's mayor-elect Wayne Douthit, newly elected aldermen Mary Boller, and Gary Peak, and re-elected alderman Ron Reese, will be installed, as Bellevue's charter stipulates, on the first Monday in May.

Design works well

BOISE (AP) — Letting the sunshine in is the goal of a new Boise committee.

The goal is called solar access. It involves designing subdivisions in such a way that one house doesn't block another's sunlight — leaving residents of all the houses free to install solar energy systems, realize "passive solar" energy savings, or just enjoy the sun.

The hopes of changing the Friday track events to a different time had been shattered when consideration from the region showed that more problems would be created for other districts than would be solved for Glens Ferry.

At the board meeting, students and parents, in a sometimes emotional fashion, shared the problems they were facing, some if the date was changed, some if it remained the same.

Toward the end of the discussion,

Susie Pember, mother of an athlete, asked if any times other than Friday or Saturday nights been considered.

Was the possibility of Friday afternoon explored? she asked.

Fontaine shot the question around the room — would there be conflict for an afternoon graduation? As each person examined the question, the atmosphere began to change.

Cindy Wilde, owner of Corner Market Grocery and mother of one of the students, said, "This is a small community that has supported this school. I am so proud to be a part of this community. I can't believe this community wouldn't close down so they could attend graduation." The meeting was adjourned, with plans to make a definite decision in three days after discussion with the other students, but the feeling in the room was that a solution had been found that would work for everyone.

Discussions over the next few days met with continued agreement and the final decision was made to hold the Glens Ferry Graduation at 12:30 p.m. on May 28.

Students will be required to attend classes until 11 a.m. They will have time after the commencement exercises to attend the track meet that will begin at 4:30 p.m.

McNeess said she "has never gone to visit Mr. Gerrish's classroom, but from the things I've read, it doesn't sound like he's just offering it as an alternative to evolution."

"I do not object to him doing what I think he's been doing," she said.

The issue created controversy in the Twin Falls School District after parents Stephen and Jan Hartgen protested the teaching of creationism by O'Leary Junior High School biology teacher Phil Gerrish.

Wilkes said she is concerned about education funding, noting that some of her daughters' textbooks are dated.

McNeess said she moved to Idaho from California 27 years ago. She attended Fullerton College in California where she studied engineering.

Wilkes received her bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Northern Florida in Jacksonville, Fla. She studied nursing and health sciences.

same zone.

At the next election, which would be in May of 1989, all appointed trustees would be up for election on staggered terms.

Trustees said they will work with Crawford and school patrons to adjust zone boundaries and send a proposal to the state by May 20.

In other business:

Eleven full-time employees of the Wendell School District have asked for health insurance benefits, estimated to cost the district about $13,000.

Janet Yerby, representing cooks and teacher aides, asked trustees for the insurance coverage.

"We are hoping that we can achieve the same benefits as other full-time non-certified personnel in this district," she said. "Please consider our reasonable request for equitable treatment."

Other school districts around Wendell provide this benefit to all of their non-certified personnel, Yerby said.

Chairman Clayton Pope said the board will consider the request in making the next school budget.

Crawford said the first of four public meetings, held April 4, was attended by about 25 patrons and a panel discussion was held about communications and textbooks.

The second meeting a week later was attended by only eight patrons, he said. Topics were curriculum and district goals.

The superintendent, using a projector, gave a summary of the meetings and said he was pleased with the public input.

Trustees, although concerned about public attendance being low, decided to hold the third and fourth meetings as scheduled. The third meeting was held last week and the fourth meeting will be held tonight to discuss budget and finance.

The board approved officials for the May 17 trustee election. Valoy Eaton will be clerk and judges will be Selecta Gibson and LaRue Stockham.

The Wendell district has received 19 applications for the elementary principal position, being vacated by Jerry Hope since his contract was not renewed. Pope said the board should begin screening the applications next week.

Patron Mike Roland asked the trustees to consider offering an industrial arts class in Wendell.

He said; would greatly benefit students of this rural area, especially those not going to college.

"I'd be willing to do anything to help work toward getting it established," he said.

Wendell is the only school district in the area without this vocational program, he said.

High School Principal Doug Skinner said he, too, would "dearly love" to have an industrial arts program, but the cost of it likely would require a voter levy. "I feel we're at a bare-bone structure right now..." he said.

Pope said this kind of program is going to have to come from patrons who are willing to help fund it.

Roland said he and other patrons would be willing to contribute to the program.

After an executive session, the trustees voted to renew all continuing contracts for teachers.

Miami defensive back Bennie Blades gets the word he's been drafted by the Lions

Unremarkable draft provides some surprise

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Michael Irvin and Keith Jackson, two game-breaking receivers, lasted until the 11th and 13th picks. A kicker was chosen before the first quarterback, who was really a punter.

The first day of the 1988 NFL draft on Sunday was definitely one in which teams went for needs rather than sheer athletic skill.

Day 2 of the draft will begin this morning at 8 a.m. MDT.

Complete draft lists — B4

With few exceptions in the five rounds, which took 9 hours, 28 minutes, teams examined their holes, then went after players to fill them. That was particularly true of the stronger teams — the Cleveland Browns, Denver Broncos, San Francisco 49ers, New Orleans Saints, New York Giants and even the Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins.

Typical was Miami's choice of Ohio State's Eric Kumerow with the 16th pick in the draft. Kumerow, a 257-pound defensive end-linebacker, was generally rated a second-rounder or lower but he fit one of the Dolphins' desperate needs.

"We had 17 sacks last year and the Bears had 70 so we had to do something," said Chuck Studley, Miami's linebacker coach. "I think he's going to be great pass-rusher."

While a record six wide receivers and five running backs went in the first round, no quarterbacks were chosen and the first quarterback went lower than ever before. In all, one pure quarterback was taken in Sunday's 137 picks even though six teams desperately need players at that position.

Big Sky goes 0-for-Sunday in NFL draft

By The Times-News

The first day of the NFL draft was a bust for the Big Sky Conference.

No Big Sky player was drafted through the first five rounds before the draft suspended operations until 8 a.m. MDT this morning. That was about as expected by Big Sky observers, who said this year's crop of seniors isn't a strong one.

Most expected Boise State running back Chris Jackson to be the first Big Sky player selected. He was projected by scouting services as been taken between the third and seventh rounds.

In fact the first quarterback taken was actually a punter, Tom Tupa of Ohio State by Phoenix. He was chosen with the 69th pick primarily to kick — he was the NFL scouting combine's 11th-rated quarterback and would probably be used as an emergency backup.

When Indianapolis took Washington's Chris Chandler seven picks later, the quarterback drought was finally over and a new record had been set. The lowest the first quarterback was taken previously was in 1974, when the Cowboys used the 53rd pick on Danny White, who is still their quarterback.

The first round was typical of the search for drafts.

Conover wins marathon trial

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — Mark Conover, competing in only his second marathon, scored a stunning victory in the U.S. Olympic Men's Marathon Trials Sunday and earned $50,000 and a ticket to the Seoul Games.

Conover, 27, a native of Orinda, Calif., and now living in San Luis Obispo, Calif., beat a field of 107 of the nation's other top distance runners over a windy, hilly course.

He was timed in two hours, 12 minutes, 26 seconds. But he was among the leaders from the outset, and at the 18-mile point of the 26-mile, 385-yard test, he and Ed Eyestone were in front of the pack.

Eyestone, the 1985 NCAA 5,000-meter and 10,000-meter cross-country champion while at Brigham Young University, finished second in 2:12:49.

Beck wins big in New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Chip Beck's fast start in Sunday's final round slammed the door on any would-be challengers and enabled him to cruise to a record-setting, seven-stroke victory in the USF&G Classic.

Beck, three shots in front at the start of play, birdied four of his first six holes and made it look easy with a front-running, 8-under-par 64 over the final 18 holes at the Lakewood Country Club.

Beck, who scored the first victory of his 10-year PGA Tour career in Los Angeles earlier this season, won this one with a 262 total — a whopping 26 under par.

He broke the course and tournament record of 267 set by Lee Trevino in 1974, and even approached a 43-year-old mark set by Ben Hogan.

Jones takes USX in playoff

GULFPORT, Fla. (AP) — Rosie Jones birdied the 72nd hole to pull into a tie for the lead with Kathy Postlewait, then birdied the first playoff hole to win the $225,000 USX Golf Classic at the Pasadena Yacht and Country Club.

Jones and Postlewait were tied at the end of regulation at 276, 13 under par for four trips around the 6,013-yard course.

Jones, the leader after 54 holes, birdied the first hole Sunday, but lost her lead with a double bogey on the second.

Barbara Bunkowsky took advantage of Jones' lapse to move into the lead with a front-nine 32. But Bunkowsky had bogies on the 15th and 16th holes to finish with a 69 for a 277.

BLCC pads its series lead

BUHL — Blue Lakes Country Club clung to its lead after the second meeting of the Magic Valley Intercity Golf Series stop at Buhl Country Club.

Blue Lakes leads with 24 points, followed by Buhl at 22½, Twin Falls 22, Jerome 20, Burley 19, Gooding 16, Canyon Springs 14½ and Rupert 6.

Twin Falls Municipal set a series record by scoring 16½ points at Buhl.

Medalist was Jackie Gasser, Twin Falls, at 76 while Oleta Roberts, Buhl, had 78, Kanhthy Hanchett, Canyon Springs, 85, and Norma Hensen, Jerome, and Sergene Sorenson, Burley, both 86.

In net, Kay Hughes of Gooding and Lois Maddy, Twin Falls, had 69 with Kathy Borchard and Ailene Johnston, Gooding, tied at 70. The next competition is set for May 10 at Burley.

British postpone decision on Budd

By JULIE CART
Los Angeles Times

Showing it can match the International Amateur Athletic Federation blow for political blow, the British Amateur Athletic Board deferred a decision on runner Zola Budd's eligibility, but got a surprise reprieve when the threat to suspend all British athletes dissolved.

The British board announced Sunday that it would appoint a three-person panel to review Budd's case, but little else was settled in a three-hour meeting of board officials in London.

Last week, the board was ordered by the IAAF to rule on Budd's eligibility, which was under question because she had watched a cross-country race in Brakpan, South Africa. As the IAAF had done, the British board chose not to decide.

It was also disclosed Sunday that the IAAF, in an abrupt reversal, maintained that it had never threatened to suspend the entire British federation if the British board did not take strong action against Budd.

IAAF officials, in Lausanne, Switzerland, for International Olympic Committee meetings, said that the section in its April 16 resolution that British officials called a "veiled threat" was included because of "administrative error."

The part of the IAAF resolution under question stated, "If ... the BAAB has failed to take such action as is necessary, the Council will have to consider exercising its suspensive powers against the BAAB."

The threat of suspension included preventing British track and field athletes from competing in the Summer Olympics at Seoul, South Korea.

"We have never mentioned the idea of the suspension of the British board," international federation President Primo Nebiolo said. "We will wait for the report of the committee and we will reflect. We have taken into consideration the eligibility of Zola Budd, not the eligibility of the British board."

The British three-member panel, which has yet to be appointed, will hear new evidence and report to the board May 21. In the meantime, the board has requested that Budd not compete in any foreign or domestic meets.

Driscoll-Purves team rules Oasis

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — David Driscoll and Jim Purves, Twin Falls, collected their second two-man best-ball title of the yet-young season Sunday, winning the Oasis-sponsored tournament at Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course.

The duo carded a two-day gross total of 130 to defeat the Burley tandem of Terry Spackman and Glenn Blakeley by three shots.

Purves and Driscoll won the Buhl two-man earlier this year and reappearance of Driscoll in Sunday's tournament gave him three straight, having teamed with Hansen's Barry Espil to win at Burley.

"The key," intoned Driscoll with a smile, "is picking the right partners."

The women's championship flight was won by Shauna Robinson and Virginia Underjelm, Twin Falls, at 147 with Doris Ellingham, Burley, and Jackie Gasser, Twin Falls, second at 154 in the gross division.

All other prizes in the two-day tournament went net.

In the men's title flights, LeRoy Ingalls and John Cramer, Boise, won at 121 with Bill Cook and Jim Ochsner, Twin Falls, second at 122.

In the women's championship flight, Roberta Robertson and Lois Maddy ran away with net at 131 with Oleta Roberts and Peggy LemOyne second.

In women's first flight, Janet Cummings and Betsy Hanson, Twin Falls, had a 155, followed by Margaret Struthers and Jean Sutherland and Lois Hansen and Grace Bennett, all Twin Falls, at 160.

Second flight honors went to Sonja Willie and Sheri Roghaar at 178, three ahead of Mary Freley and Mary McNulty, Twin Falls.

In men's competition, first flight was won by Nick Hansen and Ray Dey at 129, one ahead of Bob Slater and Gary Burkett. Ken Anderson and Doyle Monson posted a 140 to win the second flight with Gale Keimkopf and Leonard Kerbs and Jim Brennan and Dean Cross right behind at 141.

Wall Hess and Jeff Scott shared the third flight title with Steve Fischer and Bob Grant at 148 with Steve Fahrwald and Ed Mason and Car Anderson and Arvil McBride a step behind.

Newlan, Robbins take TFTA tourney honors

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Top seeds Terry Newlan and Mary Ann Robbins of Twin Falls won straight-set victories and the championships of the A singles divisions at the Twin Falls Tennis Association Membership Tournament here Sunday.

Newlan defeated second-seeded David Little of Twin Falls 7-6, 6-2 in the men's A singles title match, while Robbins held off No. 2 seed Carolyn Matsuko of Twin Falls, 6-3, 7-6 in their women's A singles final.

See completed results in Scores and Stats on Page B4.

Sunday's biggest upsets came in the women's and mixed A doubles championship matches. In the women's A doubles final, second-seeded Matsuko and Susan Jensen of Twin Falls upended top-seeded Robbins and Susan Whitney, 6-3, 6-3 for the championship, while in A mixed, the unseeded tandem of Robbins and Pink Robbins beat the top-seeded team of Smith and Mittleider of Twin Falls, 6-2, 6-3.

In men's A doubles, which was not seeded, Little and Dick Roemer won the title, defeating Pink Robbins and Sean Timoney 6-1, 3-6, 6-4 for the title.

This year's TFTA tourney — traditionally the season opener in the Magic Valley — drew 130 entrants, among the largest fields in its 10-year history.

Burley goes 0-2, Buhl 1-1 in X-State tourney

BURLEY — The Caldwell Cougars toppled the Mountain Home Tigers 4-1 Saturday to claim the Cross State Conference baseball championship.

Magic Valley league member Buhl split its two outings, beating Shelby 12-3 and bowing to South Fremont 12-3, while Burley extended Caldwell to extra innings before bowing 14-10 and then lost a 5-3 decision to Shelby.

Burley came up with five runs in the bottom of the seventh inning to erase a 10-5 Burley lead and cause the extra inning. Chris Mai, Brandon Priest, Peter Rodriguez and Rudy Ramirez had run-scoring singles in the rally.

But Caldwell came up with four runs in the top of the eighth and then blanked Burley to claim the decision.

In the second game, Shelby came up with three hits and Burley contributed three errors in the first inning as the Russetts took a 4-0 lead and then held off the Bobcats.

"After the first inning we played well," said Burley Coach Gordon Kerbs. "overall it was a lot better day for us. For the first time this year the guys kept charging and played with some guts to get the first game into extra innings against a good ball team. And we had the best contact of the year today."

Jerome goes Cross State golf tourney

BURLEY — Jerome won its second major high school golf tournament in a week here Wednesday, dominating the Cross State Conference championships by 18 strokes.

Jerome's Luke Rowland took the medalist honors with a 72, while Buhl's Bob Sauer and Caldwell's Mike Sweeney tied at 75. Jerome's Jeff Van Orman and Buhl's Kade Wilson with four strokes buck at 76.

An Israeli soldier attempts to keep order in Gaza as Palestinians line up to pay municipal taxes Sunday

Israeli forces lift ban on travel

The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — The army lifted a four-day ban Sunday to let Palestinians travel from the occupied territories into Israel, but Arab said soldiers wrecked homes and shops in another bid to control unrest.

Israeli soldiers have killed 173 Palestinian protesters in the nearly five-month-old uprising against 21 years of Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza, according to U.N. figures. An Israeli soldier and civilian also have been killed.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin told the Cabinet that 165 Palestinians have died in the uprising, including 147 killed by soldiers, Israel radio said Sunday. Rabin said 4,900 Palestinians have been detained since Dec. 8, including 1,700 held in administrative detention for up to six months without trial.

Police ordered Arab merchants in Jerusalem to open their stores at normal hours in a tug-of-war with protest leaders, who are also trying to dictate when shops may do business.

"I am afraid for my life," 43-year-old Saleh Sagari said, explaining why he opened his tiny grocery shop at hours dictated by the uprising's leaders. "If I open (during army-ordered hours), they will burn me down."

Police in riot gear delivered the new orders to shopkeepers along the Street of the Prophets just outside the walled Old City. Officers on horses kept back curious tourists and passers-by.

Shopkeepers could be jailed for two years if they defy the army's instructions, said police spokesman Rafi Levy.

In the West Bank village of Bet Roch near Hebron, Arab witnesses said Ahmad Hassan Salim Amar, 23, was killed Saturday when he defied the army order to halt. The army said it was investigating.

The army had reported Saturday that another Palestinian was killed during a protest in the West Bank village of Qabatiya.

In addition to lifting the four-day ban Sunday, Israel also permitted deliveries of gasoline to the occupied areas for the first time in more than a month.

It ended a six-day curfew in more than a dozen towns and refugee camps, also helping thousands of Arab workers reach jobs in Israel, an army spokesman said. But curfews were extended a seventh day on three towns on the West Bank and a refugee camp in Gaza.

The spokesman said the curfew in the Bourjei refugee camp was intended to allow soldiers to destroy buildings which were put up without permits. Arab reports said the army destroyed eight houses and four shops and took down stone barricades protesters had erected on roads.

The army spokesman would not say what buildings were torn down. An Associated Press photographer saw a garage, part of a gas station on the outskirts of Bourjei, reduced to rubble. The owner said he didn't know why his property was razed.

The army has destroyed Arab shops and homes during the uprising in an effort to make life difficult for organizers of the protests on land that Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East War.

In Arab east Jerusalem, about 30 police, some in riot helmets and carrying clubs and automatic rifles, issued orders to shopkeepers opposite Damascus Gate to stop following instructions of uprising leaders to open their shops only in the late afternoon.

Police had ordered about 25 merchants on the street to open all day Sunday, but merchants defied the order and threw open their doors only at the hours set by the underground leaders.

Police spokesman Levy said police orders issued Sunday said that stores must be closed from late afternoon through early-evening beginning Monday.

Several shopkeepers said they were confused by the conflicting orders and uncertain about what to do.

"We don't want to open. We don't know what we want to do," said Mohammed Aldi, 25, who runs a coffee shop.

Aldi said he did not know who was issuing the uprising orders. "They call you on the telephone and tell you what to do. You don't know who called," he said.

Also Sunday, a military court gave an Israeli soldier, Saguy Harpaz, a suspended prison term of five months for taking part in beating two Arab protesters. Saguy was also reduced in rank from private first class to private.

The Feb. 25 incident was filmed by CBS television and showed four soldiers, including Harpaz, beat the Arabs with rocks and rifle butts for more than half an hour.

Arafat visits Syria amid reports of healing split

The Associated Press

DAMASCUS, Syria — Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat came to Damascus Sunday for the first time since he was expelled five years ago.

PLO officials said Arafat and Syria would end their split.

Arafat, his leadership beset by the April 16 assassination of his deputy, Khalil Wazir, flew in from Libya and visited Wazir's grave.

Arafat's arrival in the Syrian capital capped a week-long mediation effort by Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi and Algerian President Chadli Benjedid to heal the rift between the onetime allies. PLO sources said on condition of anonymity.

Arafat's key political aide, Farouk Kaddoumi, also been working on the reconciliation, conducting negotiations in Damascus since Tuesday.

Arafat was accompanied by Salah Khalaf, who with Arafat and Wazir founded the guerrilla's mainstream faction, Fatah. Lt. Col. Mustafa Kharroubi, a chief aide to Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi, also was on the plane.

Asked if he would meet with President Hafez Assad, Arafat said, "God willing."

Arafat and Khalaf drove to the Martyrs' Cemetery in Damascus' Yarmouk Palestinian refugee camp to pay tribute to Wazir.

Thousands of the camp's 220,000 refugees took to the streets to welcome the Palestinian leader. "Blood and souls we sacrifice for you, Abu Ammar," they chanted, invoking Arafat's nom de guerre.

The refugees surrounded Arafat's car and then lifted it off the ground in an emotional demonstration of support.

Arafat was expelled from Syria five years ago during a bloody feud with Assad. He had been expected to surmount his disagreements with Assad last week so he could fly to Damascus for Wazir's burial last Wednesday, but that plan failed.

Lebanon car bombing death toll climbs to 69

The Associated Press

TRIPOLI, Lebanon — The death toll from Lebanon's worst car bombing in three years climbed to 69 Sunday after 15 of the wounded died in hospitals.

One man was dragged injured but alive from a wrecked building.

Tripoli's eight hospitals were filled to capacity with casualties and morgues were "packed with corpses," police said.

Local officials in the northern port city declared two days of public mourning for the victims of Saturday's explosion in a crowded vegetable market that knocked down buildings and set dozens of cars ablaze.

Police said 111 people were wounded from the blast in the low-income Tabbaneh district of Tripoli, the country's second-largest city. Radio stations broadcast urgent appeals for blood.

Civil defense rescue teams who clawed through the rubble during the night called off their search early Sunday after dragging the 33-year-old survivor, a grocer, to safety at about midnight, police reported.

The man, who was not identified, had been buried for more than 16 hours. He was taken to Batroun hospital, 15 miles south of Tripoli, because the city's hospitals were already overflowing with casualties.

Tripoli, whose 850,000 population is predominantly Sunni Moslem, is 50 miles north of the capital, Beirut.

Tripoli's coordination committee, senior civil servants and local notables who run the day-to-day affairs of the city, on Sunday drew up funeral plans for the victims while shops and businesses closed in mourning.

The committee was formed to handle municipal affairs because the central government's authority has been eroded by the country's 13-year-old civil war between Moslems and Christians.

Iranian craft attacks tanker plying strait

The Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain — An Iranian speedboat shot up a Saudi Arabian-owned tanker in the Strait of Hormuz on Sunday after President Reagan said the U.S. Navy will no longer ignore attacks on noncombatants in the Persian Gulf region.

The speedboat fired rocket-propelled grenades and machine guns at the 37,011-ton Sea Trader in the strait, the southern entrance to the gulf.

An unexploded rocket dangled from the Sea Trader's hull after the attack but fell into the sea before the tanker reached the port of Dubai in the United Arab Emirates.

The Indian master, Capt. B.R. Pagarakar, reported his vessel sustained slight damage and no casualties among the Indian crew.

It was not known whether any U.S. warships were near the Sea Trader during the attack. Navy officials do not disclose warships' movements, but several U.S. frigates and destroyers have been in the southern gulf since last week, when U.S. and Iranian ships skirmished in the area.

Reagan warned Iran in his weekly radio broadcast Saturday that continued attacks on neutral parties, including gulf shipping, "will be very costly to Iran and its people."

On Friday, U.S. officials disclosed in Washington that the Reagan administration was planning to expand the U.S. naval role in the gulf by giving American commanders the right to intervene in Iranian attacks on non-U.S. flag vessels.

Previously, U.S. warships have only been permitted to provide "humanitarian aid" to non-American ships in distress and requesting aid, but not to intervene in armed conflict involving those ships.

Gulf-based shipping executives, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Sea Trader encountered a flotilla of six armed speedboats as it sailed into the gulf through the strait about 7:30 a.m. (11:30 p.m. EDT Saturday).

Sea Trader crewman points to damage from gunfire

The tanker, owned by a Saudi firm but flying the Liberian flag, was bound for the Saudi oil port of Ras Tanura.

Pagarakar said five of the speedboats "went in one direction while one appeared to be heading for another tanker, and I thought we'd escaped an attack. But suddenly it veered toward my ship, asking for the master."

The executives quoted him as saying the speedboat opened fire after the Iranians demanded the ship's destination and indicated they intended to board it.

Extremists threaten to execute Americans

The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Pro-Iranian extremists said Sunday they will kill two American hostages and may attack inside the United States if U.S. warships in the Persian Gulf launch new attacks on Iran.

The statement came hours after an Iranian unboated attacked a Saudi Arabian tanker in the gulf, despite a warning by President Reagan that Iran faced "very costly" consequences if it continued hitting neutral ships and other targets.

The extremists made their latest threat in a handwritten statement signed by the Revolutionary Justice Organization, a Shiite Moslem group, and delivered to The Associated Press and the French news agency Agence France-Presse.

The group holds Joseph Cicippio, 57, of Valley Forge, Pa., and Edward Tracy, 57, of Burlington, Vt.

"Any new (U.S.) aggression under any pretext or excuse will lead to the execution of spy Edward Tracy first and Cicippio secondly," the statement announced.

Tracy, a writer of children's books, was kidnapped Oct. 21, 1986. Cicippio, acting controller at the American University of Beirut, was kidnapped from campus earlier that year on Sept. 12.

Cicippio and Tracy are among nine Americans and 13 other foreigners held hostage by various groups in Lebanon. The longest held is 40-year-old Terry A. Anderson, of Lorain, Ohio, the chief Middle East correspondent for the Associated Press who was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

Both copies of Sunday's statement were accompanied by photocopies of a Lebanese group's membership card bearing Tracy's photograph. However, the organization is not named on the card, and it was not clear if it was authentic.

Last Monday, U.S. warships disabled two Iranian frigates and sank or disabled four other armed Iranian vessels in the gulf. Tehran said 44 Iranians were killed.

"The attacks occurring in the gulf will not go unpunished and will not be as easy as America assumes," the statement said. "Our logical answer to the invasion of the region ... brings us to the option of moving the battle arena to inside America, after which things will get out of control."

In another development, Beirut's conservative Ad-Diyar daily newspaper reported Sunday that a deal to free three French hostages held by another Shiite faction fell apart because of developments in the hijacking of a Kuwaiti airliner.

Graham tells Chinese religion can help modernize nation

The Associated Press

SHANGHAI, China (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham preached to nearly 5,000 Christians who packed three churches in this sprawling port city Sunday and said religion can help the communist government's modernization policy.

"It seems that China's leaders are talking about moral and spiritual renewal," Graham told about 100 Shanghai pastors and church leaders, speaking through a translator at All Saint's Church.

"Even secular leaders are asking the question, 'Where are we to find the moral renewal we need to be successful in China's modernization program?'" said the Southern Baptist minister. "Could they turn to us?"

The 69-year-old Southern Baptist minister, who seemed somewhat guarded when he preached in Beijing last week for the first time in China, held nothing back in his sermon to the pastors of all 23 Shanghai Protestant churches. Several Catholic priests and nuns also attended.

"Be a spirit-filled minister," he thundered. "Know something about the (Holy) Spirit in your life."

Speaking of a spiritual renewal in China, he told them: "God may be doing things in your country you're not even aware of. I see evidence of it everywhere, and it gladdens my heart."

Shanghai, China's biggest city with more than 6.3 million people, has about 60,000 Protestants. About 4 million people nationwide belong to the non-denominational Protestant church sanctioned by the government.

China has about 3 million Catholics who belong to the official China Catholic Patriotic Association, which does not recognize the authority of the Vatican.

Millions more Protestants and Catholics are believed to pray privately in their homes.

Earlier Sunday, Graham urged more than 3,000 Christians at the city's largest Protestant church to let their faith show in their daily lives.

"Let people see that you're different," said Graham, speaking through a translator at Mu-en Church, more than 100 years old. The mostly elderly congregation listened attentively, some nodding at times in agreement. One elderly man sitting in the balcony held up a sign with a bright red cross and "God loves the world" written in Chinese.

"You are known and prayed for throughout the world," said Graham, who has preached in nearly 70 countries. He arrived in China on April 12 for a 16-day tour.

The Pure Heart Church also was filled to overflowing with about 1,600 people when Graham spoke there Sunday evening.

About 50 people sat on stone benches in the church courtyard and listened to loudspeakers that broadcast Graham's sermon, which discussed the ways Jesus Christ described himself to his followers.

The Mu-en Church was built by Methodists in 1887.

Gulf

 There was nothing to directly link the raid on the Sea Trader to Reagan's comments or to an earlier report that the United States was preparing to adopt a new get-tough policy following last week's skirmishes between Iran and the U.S. Navy.
 But the attack, the first since two ships were hit Tuesday in the aftermath of a major U.S.-Iranian clash the day before, suggested Iran was determined to show its ability to carry out shipping raids despite its losses. In the skirmishes April 18, U.S. Navy forces sank or damaged a half-dozen of Iran's armed craft, including two frigates that have regularly operated in the strait and nearby waters.

 There have been no reports since April 8 of Iraqi air strikes on Iranian oil tankers, the type of attacks for which Iran customarily retaliates by striking at neutral vessels.
 Iraq's last reported action in the gulf was Friday, when the official

Iraqi news agency said Baghdad's forces sunk a small Iranian naval craft. That claim was not confirmed by independent sources or Iran, which is fighting a 7½-year-old war with Iraq.

NOTICE OF RULES HEARING
 NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Department of the Idaho Real Estate Commission to conduct hearings pursuant to Section 57-5205, Idaho Code, on the following dates and locations:

May 16, 1988, at 1:30 p.m. in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, in the downstairs meeting room of the Kootenai County Extension Office Building located at 100 East 155th Pocatello Creek Road, in the Washington Room; and on May 20, 1988, at 10:00 a.m. in Boise, Idaho, at the Idaho Real Estate Commission, 633 North Fourth Street, Boise, Idaho.

Testimony will be accepted in person or by mail, to determine the rules and regulations for the licensure and regulation of real estate brokers, salespersons, brokers, and sales persons should be revised. Each of the revisions proposed is to either clarify existing rules, to consider the adoption of agency disclosure rules to be effective between licensees and clients, and also to establish rules specifically required by the enactment of House Bill 646 to increase license fee limits and Senate Bill 1291 to provide for 12 hours of continuing education for active and inactive licenses every two years, and increase salesman's professional education to 45 hours, which were passed during the 49th Idaho Legislature, Session, Regular Session, and signed by the Governor. The proposed revisions are provided by amendments to Chapter 20, Title 54, Idaho Code, and specifically to Sections 54-2027, Idaho Code.

Any person wishing to submit oral or written testimony may do so at any of the above noticed hearings. Alternatively, testimony may be submitted in writing prior to May 20, 1988 by mailing to the Idaho Real Estate Commission, Statehouse Mail, Boise, Idaho, 83726.
 PUBLISH: Monday, April 25, May 02 and 09, 1988.

LEGAL NOTICE

NOTICE OF INTENDED RULE-MAKING
 SUBJECT: Rules and Regulations Governing Refugee Resettlement.
 ACTION: The proposed action, under Docket No. 0306-8801, involves the amendment, adoption, repeal and renumbering of rules governing Refugee Resettlement, Title 3, Chapter 6, Rules and Regulations of the Department of Health and Welfare.

AUTHORITY: In compliance with Section 67-5203(j)(1), Idaho Code, notice is hereby given that the Director of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, through the Division of Welfare, has initiated rule-making. The proposed action is authorized pursuant to Sections 39-100(1), 56-202(a) and 58-203, Idaho Code, for the purpose of implementing the provisions of 45 CFR 406.82(c) and U.S. Public Law 100-202, effective as soon as possible.

PUBLIC HEARING SCHEDULE: Rule-making hearing(s) will be held if signed, written requests for a hearing are submitted personally or are addressed to the undersigned and postmarked on or before May 11, 1988, from twenty-five (25) or more interested persons, or from an association presenting a petition with signatures of not less than twenty-five (25) members of the organization, or from one or more of the physically disabled, interpreters for persons with hearing impairments and brailled or taped information for persons with visual impairments, be provided upon five (5) days' notice. For arrangements, contact the undersigned at (208) 334-5584.

DESCRIPTIVE SUMMARY: The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the intended action and of the principal issues involved:
 1. The references to the time limits for federal reimbursement of 100 percent of benefit costs for Refugee Cash Assistance and Refugee Medical Assistance are being removed. These time limits have no effect on a refugee's eligibility for public assistance or on the amount of benefits.
 Policy is added to specify direct payments to a refugee from a sponsor or voluntary agency (VOLAG) are treated as income.
 The following is a summary of the proposed changes to sections within Title 3, Chapter 6, Rules and Regulations Governing Refugee Resettlement:
 - 03.6200, Adopted, amended, repealed and renumbered section entitled "FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE TO REFUGEES"; and
 - 03.6400, Repealed and restructured section entitled "MEDICAL ASSISTANCE PROGRAM FOR REFUGEES".

AVAILABILITY OF PROPOSED RULES FOR PUBLIC REVIEW: Within the time limits specified below, any person can review the proposed rules in the DRHW Administrative Procedure Act or in any of the regional administrative offices of the Department. Copies of the proposed rules will be made available, free of charge, upon written request specifying the docket number cited above.

SUBMISSION OF WRITTEN COMMENTS, ASSISTANCE ON TECHNICAL QUESTIONS: Anyone can submit written comments regarding the proposed rules, and any individual or industry who may be affected by the proposed rules is encouraged to submit information concerning the anticipated economic impact of the proposed action. For assistance on technical questions concerning the proposed rules, contact Jerry Quick, Department of Health and Welfare, Division of Welfare (208) 334-5584. All written comments and data concerning the proposed rules must be directed to the undersigned, and must be postmarked or delivered on or before May 4, 1988.

 There was nothing to directly link the raid on the Sea Trader to Reagan's comments or to an earlier report that the United States was preparing to adopt a new get-tough policy following last week's skirmishes between Iran and the U.S. Navy.
 But the attack, the first since two ships were hit Tuesday in the aftermath of a major U.S.-Iranian clash the day before, suggested Iran was determined to show its ability to carry out shipping raids despite its losses.

 In the skirmishes April 18, U.S. Navy forces sank or damaged a half-dozen of Iran's armed craft, including two frigates that have regularly operated in the strait and nearby waters.
 There have been no reports since April 8 of Iraqi air strikes on Iranian oil tankers, the type of attacks for which Iran customarily retaliates by striking at neutral vessels.
 Iraq's last reported action in the gulf was Friday, when the official

Iraqi news agency said Baghdad's forces sunk a small Iranian naval craft. That claim was not confirmed by independent sources or Iran, which is fighting a 7½-year-old war with Iraq.

Did you suffer through another winter with a Luke?

(Luke warm heat pump)

Dump your Pump. Heat with Gas!

A heat pump delivers lukewarm 90 degree air. That's less than your body temperature. A gas furnace will heat your home the way it was meant to be with 120 degree air. Thirty degrees makes the difference between being warm and comfortable or cool and uncomfortable. You don't have to put up with that. Change to gas heat.
 Gas heat is your best long term investment. Most new gas furnaces are guaranteed for 20 years. Heat pumps are guaranteed for no more than 10 years.

NO-MONEY-DOWN-FINANCING.
 Intermountain Gas offers 10-year, low interest financing on high efficiency gas furnaces with no money down and payments as low as $20.00 a month.
$200 CASH REBATE. If you choose not to use our finance plan to buy your new gas furnace, you'll get a $200 cash rebate. (Certain conditions apply)

NOTICE OF EMERGENCY RULE-MAKING AND NOTICE OF INTENDED REGULAR RULE-MAKING
SUBJECT: Rules and regulations Governing Food Stamp Eligibility.
ACTION: The proposed actions, under Docket Nos. 0304-8708 and 0304-8708(E), involves the amendment and renumbering of rules governing Food Stamps, Title 3, Chapter 4, Rules and Regulations of the Department of Health and Welfare.
AUTHORITY: In compliance with Section 67-5203(a)(1), Idaho Code, notice is hereby given that the Director of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, through the Division of Welfare, has initiated regular rule-making procedures under Docket No. 0304-8708.
 In addition, notice is also given, in compliance with Section 67-5203(b) and 67-5204(b)(2), Idaho Code, that the Director of the Department of Health and Welfare, State of Idaho, has undertaken emergency rule-making procedures for rule-making under Docket No. 0304-8708(E), effective April 1, 1988.
 This proposed action is authorized pursuant to Sections 56-202(b) and 56-202(c) of the Idaho Code, for the purposes of implementing the provisions of Public Law 100-175.
PUBLIC HEARING SCHEDULE: Rule-making hearing (s) will be held, signed, written request for the undersigned and postmarked on or before May 4, 1988, from twenty-five (25) or more interested persons, or from an association presenting a petition with signatures of not less than twenty five (25) members of the organization, or from a governmental subdivision or agency. Hearing requests should include a statement of the direct interests of the petitioner(s) in the subject matter of the proposed rule-making. Any hearing site(s) will be accessible to the physically disabled, interpreters for persons with hearing impairments and brailled or taped information for persons with visual impairments can be provided upon five days' notice. For arrangements, contact the undersigned at (208) 334-5564.
EMERGENCY JUSTIFICATION: Emergency rule-making is necessary because this change is a major change to the rules governing Food Stamps, effective November 29, 1987. Income which is currently being considered will be excluded when the change is implemented.
 The rules, which were adopted by emergency procedures the 29th day of March, 1988, are to become effective on the 1st day of April, 1988, and expire at the end of one hundred twenty (120) days on the 30th day of July, 1988.
DESCRIPTIVE SUMMARY: The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the intended action and of the principal issues involved:
 This proposal is mandated by U.S. Public Law 100-175, the Older American Act. The retroactively income received under the Community Service Employment Program shall be excluded income for Food Stamp purposes.
 The following is a summary of the proposed changes to sections within Title 3, Chapter 4, Rules and Regulations governing Food Stamps. (Note: The proposed renumbering of unaffected sections is not shown.)
 3-4263.04(e) Amended section entitled "INCOME EXCLUSION."
AVAILABILITY OF PROPOSED RULES FOR PUBLIC REVIEW: Within the time limits specified below, anyone can review the proposed rules in the DHW Administrative Procedure Section or in any of the Kootenai County Extension of the Department, Division Office Building located at 106 Dalton Avenue, on May 18, 1988, at 1:30 p.m. in Pocatello, Idaho, at the Quality Inn, 555 Pocatello Creek Road, in the Washington Room; and on May 20, 1988, at 10:00 a.m. in Bonanza at the Idaho Real Estate Commission, 633 North Fourth Street.
 Testimony will be accepted in person or by mail to determine if the Rules and Regulations for the licensure and regulation of real estate brokers, associate brokers, and sales persons should be revised. Each of the revisions proposed is to either clarify existing rules, to consider the adoption of agency disclosure rules to be effective between licensees and clients, and also to establish rules specifically required by the enactment of House Bill 646 to increase license fee limits and Senate Bill 1291 for 12 hours of continuing education for active and reactivating licensees every two years, and increase salesman's prolicense education 45 hours, which were passed during the 49th Idaho Legislature. Second Regular Session and signed by the Governor. The proposed revisions are provided by amendments to Chapter 20, Title 54, Idaho Code, and specifically authorized in Section 54-2027, Idaho Code.
 Any person wishing to submit oral or written testimony may do so at hearings. Alternatively, testimony may be submitted in writing prior to May 20, 1988 by mailing c/o The Idaho Real Estate Commission, Statehouse Mall, Boise, Idaho, 83720.
 PUBLISHED: Monday, April 25, May 02 and 09, 1988.

Chiropractor Ronald Corbin, here adjusting a patient's spinal column, says the profession has evolved in the past two decades

Chiropractic comes out of closet

By KRISTIN TUCKER
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — When she was eight months pregnant, Deborah woke up one morning with a headache so severe that she couldn't stand up straight. She made an appointment with a chiropractor; two sessions later the pain disappeared. "It was just gone," she says. "I wish now I would have had a chiropractor when I was growing up."

Linda's headaches have been getting worse. Her physician gave her a complete exam, then sent her to a neurologist. The headaches continued. Last week she visited a chiropractor, who has worked with her, twice since. Linda says she is starting to feel relief.

Word-of-mouth advertising is a chiropractor's best friend. Chiropractors have thousands of advocates: persons who have experienced relief through the hands of a chiropractor.

Yet medical doctors for years have been reluctant to recognize the value of chiropractic treatment, and many chiropractors are convinced that the persuasive and powerful medical profession has overstepped its legal and ethical bounds by working to thwart the chiropractic profession.

Chiropractic is a health care alternative, explains Twin Falls chiropractor Ronald Corbin. Chiropractic is concerned with structural, muscular and skeletal problems, he says, using a "holistic approach" instead of drugs and surgery.

"People really don't understand what chiropractic is," adds Spencer Williams, another Twin Falls chiropractor. "Most people equate chiropractic with backaches. Chiropractic goes much deeper than that."

Williams explains that the spine plays a central role in the health of the entire body. Using a colorful, back-lit chart, Williams shows how all organs are directly connected to the spine through the nervous system. Nerve routes can be traced through the vertebrae to each organ and each area of the body.

The spine is made of small bones (vertebrae) which are stacked upon one another, joined by flexible, fluid-filled disks which give the spine its flexibility. That delicate arrangement can be upset by accidents, bad posture, stress and other factors — and the resulting symptoms may include aches and pains in the back, muscle spasms, headaches, even digestive troubles.

Chiropractors refer to vertebral subluxation, or off-centerings of the vertebrae, which interfere with nerve function. Since the spine is the main thoroughfare for nerve messages traveling throughout the body, damage to the spine may mean head-to-toe troubles.

Using hands-on techniques, chiropractors manipulate the joints of the body and adjust them to function properly. Most of those adjustments focus on the spinal column.

"You can't have good function without good structure," explains Corbin.

Headaches are probably the most common reason people visit their chiropractor, says Williams, who says he is likely to begin treatment by consulting with the patient. Taking a case history will help him better understand the problem as he begins to look for underlying trauma or stress.

Preliminary examinations may include orthopedic tests, evaluating the patient's range of motion, and doing neurological and muscular testing. Most patients also receive X-rays.

Patient education may include use of diagrams, dis-

Instant intimacy? It works!

By CHERYL SIMON
Psychology Today

Most people view familiar gestures and intimate remarks as the private realm of close friends and couples.

Although we're taught that such closeness develops gradually, a recent study suggests that the behavior that distinguishes established couples and friends emerges early in relationships — perhaps in the first 10 minutes.

University of Mississippi psychologists Kelly E. Piner and John H. Berg wanted to learn whether those destined for close rather than casual relationships behave differently from the start. Their behavior, the researchers thought, depends on whether each individual in a pair believes that the other is both available and similar.

Piner and Berg took 30 steadily dating couples, paired some people with their own partners, some with others, and had them talk for 10 minutes about selected topics. They also paired 60 strangers, telling them that their conversational partner was very similar or dissimilar to them.

Unacquainted pairs who believe themselves to be similar communicate remarkably like steadily dating couples, Piner and Berg reported. Conversely, pairs who believe themselves to be dissimilar communicate like unavailable people — those involved in steady dating relationships but conversing with another unavailable person.

The findings refute the notion that opposites attract and the view that "slow and steady" does it. Rather, says Berg, when it comes to coupling, the perception of similarity leads to more intimacy and familiarity. If that person is also available, the basis for closeness develops almost instantly.

Acne drug, birth defect link

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration is considering removing from the market one of the most popular drugs to fight acne in the wake of a new report that the medication may have caused severe deformities and other birth defects in hundreds of babies, government officials said Friday.

An advisory panel of leading dermatologists from around the country is scheduled to meet Tuesday at FDA headquarters in Rockville to consider options for ensuring that pregnant women do not continue taking Accutane despite explicit and long-standing warnings against the practice.

In addition to removing the drug from the market, the committee will also consider less stringent possibilities, including restricting distribution of Accutane and stiffening the warning language, the FDA said. The agency will not make a final decision until receiving the panel's recommendation.

An FDA staff study released Friday estimated that 16,000 to 24,000 pregnant women were exposed to the drug between 1982 and 1986. Although only 62 cases of birth defects have formally been reported to the agency since the drug was first put on the market in 1982, the report estimates that there are in fact 500 to 1,500 such cases.

"All efforts to date have been unsuccessful at protecting against pregnancy exposure and the sequelae of birth de-

Prom time arrives

Brace yourself. It's the spring hunting season — that time of year when teen-age girls venture into the deepest, darkest recesses of the department stores in search of the perfect, the most glamorous, the most seductive (within reason, dad) and certainly the most expensive dress they've ever convinced mom to buy: The Prom Dress.

Here's what's new this spring in formal wear:

- Look for shoulders. The strapless look that mom may have worn, makes a comeback in 1988, with bustier bodices enhancing bared shoulders.

- Watch details. Sequined tops, asymmetrically-draped sashes, front, back and torso-level bows create some of this year's new looks.

Spouses share health habits and risks

Whether or not it's true that married couples grow to look alike after years of wedded bliss, it appears as if spouses do come to act alike, at least in terms of their health habits.

Researchers at the University of Michigan Fitness Research Center (FRC) found significant similarities between husbands and wives in life style habits and projected health risks. FRC researchers Louis Yen and D.W. Edington, Ph.D., drew a sample of 438 married couples from 5,000 Health Risk Appraisals completed by employees of a Michigan corporation and their spouses. Fifty-three percent of the couples matched one another's behavior in exercise, 46 percent reported the same smoking habits and 66-67 percent matched in drinking and seat belt usage.

Yen and Edington found that seven life style-related variables in particular appear to predict health risks in four ways: the husband's responses predicted their own and their wives' health risks; and the wives' responses predicted their own and their husbands' health risks. The variables were smoking, drinking, exercise, seat belt usage, blood pressure, cholesterol and life satisfaction.

"These correlations suggest that a person's controlled health risk can be significantly predicted by his or her spouse's health-related measures," they report. "In sum, this study confirms that the family environment and culture is an important factor affecting a person's health."

Avoid middle-aged spread by exercising

Middle-aged spread is inevitable because as you get older, your metabolism slows down and you gain weight.

Right?

Wrong, says a new study. Researchers from the USDA Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging at Tufts University studied the diets, exercise habits and fitness levels of 12 very active men, half of whom were in their 20s and half in their 50s. Although the middle-aged men did have 77 percent more body fat than their younger counterparts, the older men exercised for only 7 1/2 hours a week, compared with the younger group's 12 1/2 hours.

"The fat level had nothing to do with age," says researcher Carol N. Meredith, "only with the amount of exercise the men did."

Check pacifier safety points right away

If you (and your baby) decide to use a pacifier, make sure it has the following safety features:

- A shield large and stiff enough to prevent the baby from sucking the entire pacifier into her mouth.

- Holes in the shield.

- A handle that does not protrude more than 63/100 of an inch from the shield (this is to prevent the pacifier from being forced into the baby's mouth should he roll over).

- Sturdy construction, so the pacifier doesn't come apart when you pull hard on it.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission strictly enforces these standards in any pacifiers currently being manufactured.

New study clarifies AIDS risk

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The best protection for heterosexuals against becoming infected with the virus that causes AIDS — more effective than condoms, blood tests or limiting the number of sexual partners — is to avoid sex with anyone in a high-risk group, according to a new medical report.

The chance of becoming infected from a single incident of intercourse without a condom, is about one in 5,000,000 if the partner does not belong to a high-risk group, but about one in 500 if the partner has tested positive for infection with the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), according to the article, which appears in Friday's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Previous advice about avoiding infection has not adequately emphasized the importance of knowing about the past behavior of one's sexual partners, said the study's principal author, Dr. Norman Hearst, an assistant clinical professor of family medicine and epidemiology at the University of California at San Francisco.

Hearst said that before having intercourse, heterosexuals should get to know their partners well enough to get reliable information about their sexual history. "Most of the people who've gotten AIDS (through heterosexual transmission) so far, got it from a person who they knew was in a fects and abortion, scientists with the FDA's Division of Epidemiology and Biostatistics wrote in a memorandum dated February 11. "We believe the data presented in this document warrant active consideration of removal of Accutane from the market."

The study, reported in Friday's editions of The New York Times, was based on projections taken from a study of Medicaid patients in Michigan — a survey that the drug's manufacturer, Hoffman-La Roche Inc. of Nutley, N.J., denounced Friday as a "grossly defective statistical extrapolation" because of the small data base involved.

There absolutely are not 1,300 cases, said Dr. Howard E. Rofsky, director of clinical marketing for Roche Laboratories, the company subsidiary that sells the drug. "There may be a few more than 62, but the numbers would be very small ... We absolutely do not believe (Accutane) should be withdrawn from the market," he said.

However, one dermatologist who used to work for Hoffman-La Roche and was involved in the first human tests of the drug in the United States in the 1970s said Friday the company should be held responsible for many of the birth defects that have been reported.

Dr. Frank W. Yoder, now chief of dermatology at Children's Hospital of Columbus, Ohio, said the company was "negligent and wrong" for over-promoting the drug, which resulted in its being put in the hands of doctors who were not dermatologists. The drug, used by an estimated 250,000 Americans annually, is only available by prescription.

Yoder said that while testing Accutane before it received FDA approval, Hoffman-La Roche placed severe restrictions on researchers to ensure that pregnant women did not get the drug. The restrictions included the requirement that women not be included in the study, or that they submit to a pregnancy test to prove they were not pregnant before being given the drug.

But when the drug was sold to the public, the company did not require such pregnancy tests. "This was very, very wrong," Yoder said. "It is incredible to require that in a study, but not in a mass market situation."

It was only later, after reports of birth defects began trickling into the FDA and as pressure increased from consumer groups, that the company began to recommend that doctors give women pregnancy tests before prescribing the drug, he said.

Hoffman-La Roche officials angrily dismissed Yoder's charges, and a spokesman said that anyone familiar with the company's intensive efforts to educate doctors and patients about the potential side effects of Accutane would conclude "that the company has been nothing but highly responsible."

The spokesman, Carolyn Glynn, said the company's efforts to promote Accutane have been restricted almost completely to the dermatological community. Rofsky said that Yoder's criticisms of the company's guidelines on pregnancy testing were unwarranted.

He said drug companies often take extra precautions during clinical trials of drugs, and there was "no reason" to require pregnancy tests once Accutane was approved by the FDA. "We felt our warnings were as strong as we could make them," he said.

Nonetheless, the FDA study has renewed scrutiny of Accutane, a drug with a wide reputation for effectiveness in treating severe cystic acne, a form of acne which leaves disfiguring scars on the face, chest and back.

The drug has been found to have a number of adverse side effects in fetuses, the most severe being its tendency to damage the central nervous and cardiovascular systems and cause facial abnormalities.

Study skirts. Multi-tiered, bubbled and asymmetrically-draped skirts make a fun fashion statement.

Consider length options. Both long and short are in. It's up to the young lady to decide what's best for her.

Don't forget accessories

"Accessories can't be emphasized too much," says Margale Briggs, fashion director at Spiegel, the catalog retailer. "They play a prominent role in turning a simple outfit into a powerful and pulled-together fashion statement."

She offers some necessary "picks" for spring:

— Beaded foot-covers, bags and belts.

— Sculptured headbands.

— Woven sandals and slippers in brown. "Brown is essential for spring," she says, "because it works beautifully with neutrals and with white."

— Watches. "Look for bold tank faces, floating rhinestones or sandals."

— Banded toques.

— Waist-length hats, 2 1/2 to 5 inches.

— Sternum cover or matte-pink powder.

— Earrings with movement. Look for hoops that swing from bottom posts or drop earrings.

— Sheer hosiery. "I'm really with shorter skirts' focus on the leg, the move is definitely towards tonal dressing for career," she says. "Save your opaque hosiery for fall and winter."

Organ, Tissue Donor Awareness Week

TWIN FALLS — This week is National Organ and Tissue Donor Awareness Week.

The American Council on Transplantation and its organizational members are urging potential donors not only to sign and carry a donor card, but to discuss their wishes with their family.

In recent years doctors and medical researchers have developed successful techniques for giving people a new lease on life through transplants of kidneys, livers, hearts, skin, corneas and other organs and tissues. According to the council, most Americans applaud these scientific advances and 69 percent have indicated in surveys that they would be willing to become organ and tissue donors. Yet, when next-of-kin are requested to donate organs and tissues, only 15 percent agree. As a result, thousands suffer — even die — as a result of the severe shortage of donated organs and tissues.

For more information about organ donation contact Edd Bossard, trustee, Idaho-Oregon Lions Sight & Hearing Conservation Foundation, Inc., 733-6262, or call the Idaho Lions Eye Bank at 378-2400.

Shirking blame leads nowhere

You probably feel frustrated when you hear your kids say "It's your fault," "You made me do it," "I'm not to blame."

You know they're responsible for their actions. You try to tell them so but it goes in one ear and out the other. It's like spitting in the wind. Often they don't feel responsible and that's that!

Jo Ann Larsen

Not taking responsibility for one's self is a typical kid's response that comes with being young and immature and unable to see the big picture. As children progressively go through various stages of development, they can reach at some time in adulthood a full sense of responsibility for self.

But not all adults do that. As a matter of fact, most of us haven't completely shed the feeling that others are to blame when things go wrong. At times it's almost as though we are little kids in adult bodies when it comes to assuming responsibility for ourselves.

If you're interested in testing your own responses, listen closely to yourself for a time. You may hear yourself saying the same things you cringe over when they come out of a child's mouth: "It's your fault," "You made me do it," "I'm not responsible."

So how do you, as an adult, take appropriate responsibility for yourself in this life? Check yourself out in relation to these pointers.

Emotional collisions take two people. We sometimes have difficulty in taking responsibility because of the way we process transactions with other people in our heads. We tend to artificially punctuate negative exchanges with others by thinking linearly: "A causes B or "He caused my problem". We identify what the other person did to us and shrug off our own response, justifying our reaction because we had to protect ourselves.

Essentially, we may believe: "You caused this (action) (fight) (problem) by (fill in the blank) and therefore I am not responsible for anything I did. I am off the hook because I can 'prove' you started the problem."

Transactions between people are actually reciprocal or mutually reinforcing. As each person responds, he or she has impact on the other. A fight, for example, needs to be interpreted as: "You did this to me, so I did this to you, so you did this to me, so I did this to you..." instead of "You did this to me so it's your fault."

Just like kids, adults tend to forget (or not recognize) the impact of their own loud voices or cutting words — or the verbal damage they did a few minutes or hours ago. And, just like kids, adults tend to feel, in their heart of hearts, that they are innocent. They've had no part in creating the problems of which they are a part and about which they bitterly complain.

You may be able to improve your own relationships by actively taking the stance that no one is to blame for problems but that each person has full responsibility for all of his or her own responses.

The next time you have an emotional collision with someone else, try applying this principle by talking about what you did or didn't do that may have contributed to the problem. Let the other person be responsible for his own responses and do his own finger-pointing. Apologize if it's appropriate. And then let go of the problem.

Watch your language. The English language is replete with phrases that assign responsibility for actions or feelings to others: You hurt me. You make me sick. You make me angry. You gave me a headache. You depressed me. You made me feel guilty.

You are responsible for your feelings or actions. There are no shared brains nor switches on you that others can flip to make you feel or do anything. So consider changing your language (and the way you think) to take responsibility for yourself. I hurt myself. I gave myself this headache. I made myself feel guilty, etc.

Identify any blaming patterns. Are there any people in your life whom you chronically blame? "If it weren't for (fill in the blank), I'd be (happier) (more loving) (more independent) (in more control of my life) (etc.)." Are there those you hold responsible for your present or past situation who won't let you take charge of your life? Do you blame your mother or father? Your children? Your boss? Your spouse or ex-spouse?

Or, do you blame things for your unhappiness? Your past? Your job? Your lack of self-confidence?

Anytime you blame another person or a condition in your life for your lack of happiness, or growth, or movement, you are putting the focus outside of yourself. To move, you need to focus inward on your own thoughts, feelings, choices and possibilities and realize you are in charge. Your life will change when you decide to change and not let any person or situation become an excuse for becoming inert.

Jo Ann Larsen is a Salt Lake City family therapist and the daughter of Dr. Ivin M. and Alice Jackson of Kimberly.

Spine

Continued from Page D1 plays, video programs and hands-on models of the vertebrae. Then the patient and chiropractor decide on the course of treatment. "I can help a person only as much as they want to be helped," says Williams.

That course of treatment may involve numerous corrective adjustments. Some chiropractors also involve nutrition therapy, kinesiology and massage. Occasionally a chiropractor may decide that the problem is beyond his capabilities, and refer the patient to a physician.

Although chiropractic care may not cure cancer, heart disease, diabetes or other systemic problems, it is often part of the care for those who suffer from such chronic conditions, says Twin Falls chiropractor Alan Fox. "With chiropractic, people with systemic conditions feel better."

The emphasis on chiropractic is away from allopathic medicine, which exchanges one symptom for another," explains Fox. "Chiropractic asks, why are you having this tendency?"

Chiropractors don't prescribe medications or do surgery. Few chiropractors have hospital privileges. Most look forward to improving the historically stormy relationships with medical doctors.

"We really have an image problem," admits Corbin, and says chiropractors and medical doctors share the blame for those problems.

Like medical doctors or any other health care providers, the chiropractic profession includes some who are less than reputable, Corbin says. Last week he learned of a chiropractor in northern Idaho who delivered a baby in a non-emergency situation. "That is just wasn't appropriate," says Corbin, but in-office procedures are difficult to monitor or regulate. And all chiropractors suffer the consequences.

"What one does, all are accountable for," he says. The chiropractic profession has evolved in the past two decades, says Corbin. Thirty years ago, a chiropractor may have just "cranked them around," he says. Today, chiropractic involves "good, proper diagnostic procedure."

Why the change? Education requirements became more stringent in the early 1970s. And Idaho's licensing requirements have been strict for 30 years. Chiropractic colleges now require 11 semesters of training and graduates must be licensed by the state board of chiropractic examiners. Yet much of the medical community has been reluctant to acknowledge the value of chiropractic treatments. Until 1979, the American Medical Association prohibited its members from associating with chiropractors, and a recent decision by U.S. District Court Judge Susan Getzendanner found the AMA and several of its affiliates guilty of conspiring to destroy the chiropractic profession in the United States.

An anti-trust suit was filed in 1976 by five chiropractors against the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons, American Academy of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation, American College of Surgeons, American Hospital Association, American Medical Association, American Osteopathic Association, Chicago Medical Society, Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals and three individual medical doctors.

The suit was settled last September, when a permanent injunction was issued against the American Medical Association, the American College of Surgeons and the American College of Radiology. Five of the defendants settled prior to that decision.

Fox says that ruling has improved relations with the medical community. "Chiropractic has gotten a bad rap," he says. "The American Medical Association is the most powerful union in the world. It saw us as a threat."

Local chiropractors say that AMA influence has also affected insurance coverage of chiropractic care. Insurance companies fall short of universal acceptance of chiropractic care, and reimbursement for treatments varies. Some insurance companies limit reimbursement to $400; others cover up to 80 percent of the cost, Corbin says. Insurance companies also persuade employers to dissuade their workers from seeking chiropractic treatment.

It's a problem of education, says Williams. "Insurance adjusters who understand what we are doing are no problem at all."

Other local chiropractors phrase it differently. Physicians are defending their turf, and insurance companies are caught in the middle. "It's going to take a political solution," Corbin predicts.

In the meantime, local chiropractors say public advertising is essential. Physicians benefit from universal free promotion, explains Corbin, including the ubiquitous admonition to "see your doctor." And since chiropractors don't prescribe medications, they don't benefit from the generous advertising and promotional efforts of pharmaceutical companies. Instead, chiropractors rely on advertising, word-of-mouth endorsements and — increasingly — referrals from local physicians.

In some regions across the country, chiropractors and physicians share office space and cross-refer patients. That isn't happening in the Magic Valley.

"But the climate is improving," Corbin says, adding that the number of new patients who visit chiropractors for the first time increases each year.

More than a dozen chiropractors advertise in each edition of local telephone books, but Corbin says there is still a need for more chiropractors. Increasing the availability of chiropractic care would increase the word-of-mouth credibility, he says.

"If doctors were getting everyone well we would not be here," Corbin adds. "They wouldn't be worried if we weren't successful."

Hears and Dr. Stephen B. Hulley, also of UCSF, used published data on the prevalence of HIV infection in different groups and on frequency of transmission during intercourse to calculate the odds of becoming infected during a single sexual encounter, with and without a condom, depending on the partner's risk status. They also calculated the chances of becoming infected after 500 sexual encounters with the same partner.

High-risk groups included homosexual or bisexual men, intravenous drug abusers, hemophiliacs, prostitutes, heterosexuals from Haiti and some central African countries where heterosexual spread of the virus occurs frequently, and people who received many blood transfusions between 1983 and 1985, when routine testing of blood for HIV began. Anyone who had been a regular sexual partner of someone in a high-risk group was also considered to be at high risk of infection.

Emergency workshop set

JEROME — A six-hour workshop on emergency room procedures will be held at St. Benedict's Hospital on May 19.

Offered jointly by Idaho State University and Boise State University, the workshop is partly funded by the Rural Health Education Consortium.

The course is designed for rural health care professionals to provide current information on emergency care procedures with emphasis on assessment skills, life saving interventions and specific problem procedures.

Instructor Peggy Teske of the ISU Department of Nursing holds an M.S. degree from Northern Illinois University and received her trauma nurse specialist certificate in May, 1985. She has had 13 years experience in the emergency department.

The fee is $35 for nursing and allied health professionals and $17.50 for students and retirees.

Couple discuss 'Life Balance'

The Times-News

RUPERT — Balancing our time between work and play is sometimes like walking a tightrope, too much of either one could cause disastrous results.

To help you perform at your peak, Linda and Richard Eyre, Salt Lake City, have written a new book entitled "Life Balance." The husband and wife team will be in Rupert on Saturday to present a seminar based on their book. The workshop will take place at East Minico Junior High School, 1800 E. Street.

The seminar begins at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $10 per person, or $18 per couple. The authors will also be autographing copies of their new book at The Book Store in Rupert, from 3 to 5 p.m. on Saturday.

The Eyres, who have eight children, still have had time to publish two other books entitled, "Teaching Children Joy" and "Teaching Children Responsibility."

She was Utah's 1981 Mother of the Year. He is president of a Washington D.C. and Salt Lake City-based management consulting firm and was the national chairman of the 1981 White House Conference of Parents and Children.

RICHARD and LINDA EYRE Will speak in Rupert
