High court to reconsider 1976 rights ruling

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A deeply split Supreme Court said Monday it will consider throwing out a key civil rights decision used to fight racial discrimination.

By a 5-4 vote, the justices took the unusual step of expanding the scope of a North Carolina racial-harassment case to consider limiting the ability of minorities to sue private citizens for monetary damages.

Critics said the announcement could have a major psychological impact on minorities, raising fears that a newly solidified conservative majority on the court is willing to consider dismantling other civil rights victories.

In other action, the court:

- Turned away the first "dial-a-porn" case ever to reach it, letting stand a ban on sexually explicit telephone message services in Arizona.
- Agreed to decide whether wardens of federal prisons should have sweeping power to say what publications inmates may read.

erol prisons should have sweeping power to say what publications inmates may read.

The court said it will use the racial-harassment case as a vehicle to weigh overturning a 1976 ruling that expanded the right of minorities to sue over alleged discrimination.

Justice John Paul Stevens, in a sharply worded dissent, said minority groups may feel betrayed by the court's willingness to consider discarding an important civil rights precedent.

He said the action is unwise activism and will "have a detrimental and enduring impact on the public's perception of the court as an impartial adjudicator."

"If the court decides to cast itself adrift from the constraints imposed by the adversary process and to fashion its own agenda, the consequences for the nation — and for the future of this court as an institution — will be even more serious than any temporary encouragement of previously rejected forms of racial discrimination," Stevens said.

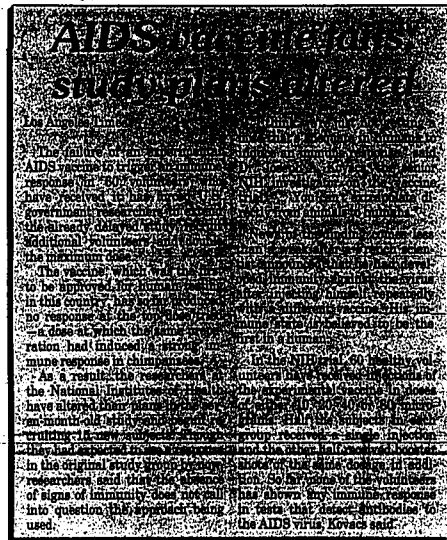

He was joined by Justices William J. Brennan, Harry A. Blackmun and Thurgood Marshall.

said, "I am at a loss to understand the motivation of five members of this court to reconsider an interpretation of a civil rights statute that so clearly reflects our society's earnest commitment to ending racial discrimination and in which Congress so evidently has acquiesced."

The court's majority said the dissenters were making it sound like the court was overturning the 1976 decision.

"We have, of course, done no such thing," the unsigned order issued by the majority

Fire, explosions cripple sub

Navy reports 22 men hurt, 3 missing

The Associated Press

NORFOLK, Va. — One of the Navy's last diesel-electric submarines lay on the ocean's surface tied to a rescue vessel Monday after underwater explosions and a toxic fire injured 22 sailors and left three missing.

The 30-year-old USS Bonefish, its remaining crew evacuated to shore bases, floated alongside the submarine rescue ship USS Petrel about 160 miles off Florida, said Lt. Cmdr. Aaron Long, a spokesman at Atlantic Fleet headquarters in Norfolk.

There was no apparent danger that the submarine, which carries only conventional weapons, would sink, said Chief Petty Officer Terry D. Borton, a fleet spokesman.

It was not known if the missing men were aboard the sub or in the water. None of the missing or injured men were from Idaho.

Long said preliminary indications pointed toward a series of explosions, including one in the battery compartment, but he said he was unable to say precisely where the other explosions occurred on the ship. The fire broke out in the forward battery compartment, he said.

The Charleston, S.C.-based USS Petrel arrived on the scene Monday afternoon, but Navy officials said any decision to board the submarine was being delayed until Tuesday.

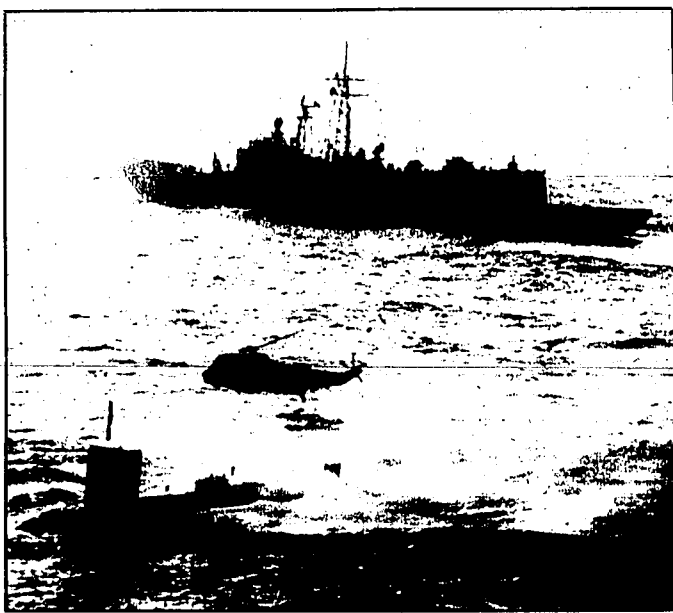

"The decision made was that no one goes aboard" until the Petrel's experts declare the ship free of dangerous fumes Tuesday morning, Long said.

The Petrel, based in Charleston, S.C., was alongside the submarine with a line attached to keep the submarine from drifting, Long said.

"They are waiting until daybreak to commence any operation. No one has boarded the vessel at this point," Long said.

Also steaming to the scene was the salvage ship USS Hoist from the Little Creek Amphibious Base in Norfolk.

The explosion occurred Sunday afternoon in the boat's battery compartment while the Bonefish was submerged on a routine training mission, said Borton.

The explosion triggered a fire that filled the 219-foot vessel with smoke and toxic fumes. The sub surfaced and Cmdr. Mike Wilson, the captain, ordered it evacuated.

The frigate USS Carr, which also was in the training exercise, took aboard 89 of the Bonefish's 92 crewmen. The McCloy, which also was training nearby, reached the Bonefish before nightfall, the Navy said.

The Bonefish was launched in 1958 from New York Shipbuilding in Camden, N.J. It is powered on the surface by three 1,500-horsepower diesel engines that drive a single propeller and charge batteries. While submerged, the batteries power two electric motors.

The Bonefish and its two sister ships, the Barbel and Blueback, are among the last of the Navy's diesel-electric submarines and are used principally to mimic Soviet submarines in training exercises. The Soviets still operate about 100 diesel-electric boats.

The Bonefish is the second Navy vessel to bear that name. The first, a World War II submarine, disappeared in the Sea of Japan in June 1945 while on combat patrol.

The 22 injured were transferred to the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy, which steamed to Mayport, Fla. From there they were flown to the Naval Hospital in Jacksonville. The other crewmen were taken to Mayport by the Carr and flown to the Charleston Air Force Base, where they arrived Monday afternoon.

Atlantic Fleet headquarters said two sailors were seriously injured, but the nature and extent of their injuries was not immediately available.

The majority of the sailors disembarked from the Carr in Mayport wearing blue overalls and sneakers, though many were shoeless.

The Navy identified the missing men as Lt. Ray Everts of Naoma, W.Va., Petty Officer 1st Class Robert W. Borden Jr. of Willis, Texas, and Petty Officer 3rd Class Marshall T. Lindgren of Pisgah Forest, N.C.

Prosecutor withdraws from Iran-Contra case

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An Iran-Contra prosecutor withdrew from the case partly because he felt he had been impermissibly exposed to the defendants' congressional testimony, independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh testified Monday.

During a lengthy grilling by a lawyer for Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, Walsh revealed that associate independent counsel Christopher Todd had withdrawn from participation in the case.

Walsh said Todd withdrew partly because he believed he might be tainted by congressional testimony given by three of the four defendants under grants of limited immunity from prosecution.

"I don't know whether he was tainted or not," Walsh told defense attorney Brendan V. Sullivan Jr. "All I know about Mr. Todd, he chose to follow a certain course."

Todd, who remains on the independent counsel's staff doing unrelated work, didn't explain the possible exposure because "he didn't want to taint me," Walsh said.

Walsh did not say when Todd withdrew, but he was seen last month in U.S. District Court when former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges of withholding information from Congress about covert Reagan administration aid to the Contras.

The defense contends that forcing North, former National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter and businessman Albert Hakim to go to trial on conspiracy charges would violate their Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination because they were forced to testify to Congress last summer.

Arguing there was "enormous taint" of Walsh's staff as a result of unprecedented publicity of the three

Connie Hansen files report for '86

The Associated Press

BOISE — Twenty-three months late and under a court order, former Idaho congressional candidate Connie Hansen finally has filed a personal financial disclosure report for the 1986 election.

It was incomplete, as Mrs. Hansen said her husband, George Hansen, refuses to provide information on his finances.

Connie Hansen, former Pocatello City Council member, ran for Congress in 1986, seeking the seat her husband held for seven terms before losing to Democrat Richard Stallings in 1984.

Despite a late start, Mrs. Hansen finished second in a five-person field. Broadcaster Mel Richardson won the GOP nomination but lost to Stallings in the general election.

Her February financial report from that race showed she paid off $15,768 in debts in 1987 but still owed $6,576. The largest unpaid bill was $3,216 to Tee Pee Advertising, Pocatello.

All candidates for national office, cabinet members, judges and certain high federal employees are required to file personal disclosure reports.

Mrs. Hansen's report was due May 15, 1988, just before the Idaho primary election. In a letter to the clerk of the House, Mrs. Hansen said she was unable to file the financial disclosure report because of "my husband's unwillingness to supply me with information necessary to the spousal disclosures in the reports."

But last month, the Justice Department won a court order requiring Mrs. Hansen to file the report within 30 days.

"Although my husband still refuses to cooperate with me, I have no choice now but to provide you with the best possible information that I can manage in the circumstances," Mrs. Hansen notified House officials.

The report covered 1985 and 1986. Mrs. Hansen had a position with the Department of Housing and Urban Development in Washington, and earned $44,370 in 1985 and $11,357

Stallings, Craig far ahead of foes

States News Service

WASHINGTON — With a month to go before the primary elections, Idaho's U.S. House members have far outstripped their challengers in campaign funding and spending.

Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Second District, who is seeking a third term in Washington, had $87,540 in cash in his campaign war chest, according to his report to the Federal Election Commission.

Stallings, expecting a tough re-election battle, raised $60,653 in the first quarter of the year. A spokesman said the congressman expects to raise about $400,000. The Rexburg Democrat spent $470,363 in 1986 to defeat

Republican Mel Richardson.

PACs donated $35,798 to the Stallings campaign, although only one Idaho-based PAC made a contribution in the reporting period. All but one individual contribution were from Idahoans. Those donations amounted to $23,067.

Major contributors to Stallings' campaign include the Association of Trial Lawyers, $2,000; Citicorp, $2,000; Association of Milk Producers, $2,000; Idaho Power Co., $2,000; and the National Association of Retired Federal Employees, $3,000.

The two biggest donations came from the American Medical PAC, which contributed $4,269, and the Realtors' PAC, which pumped $4,750 into the campaign.

Between January and the end of March, Stallings' committee spent $28,000 on salaries, postage, telephones, food, and travel expenses, and other campaign expenses.

Two Republicans looking to defeat Stallings, former state Sen. Dene H. Watkins and Janet Reid, a homemaker and poet, have yet to file campaign finance reports.

A candidate doesn't have to file with the FEC until the campaign has raised or spent at least $5,000.

Rep. Larry Craig, R-First District, who is seeking his fifth term, reported a campaign treasury of $43,362 to the FEC. He raised $23,626 in the first

Pennsylvania voters go to polls today with Dukakis favored

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson differed Monday over whether any concessions should be made to terrorists holding Americans hostage, while a new survey said Dukakis appeared headed for another big-state presidential primary victory in Pennsylvania.

"You never make concessions to terrorists," Dukakis told reporters during a final campaign swing across the state before Tuesday's primary.

Jackson rejected what he called "material concessions" to terrorists but did not rule out political accommodation. He also said he could concede of situations where he would grant safe passage to hostage-takers and added, "I choose negotiation over blind bloody confrontation."

"If we are going to deter terrorism, we must address the underlying causes of terrorism," he said after an appearance at a high school in Pittsburgh. "Terrorism does not emerge out of the blue."

The candidates agreed that in hostage situations, the government ought to talk to people who could bring about the release of persons being held.

U.S. policy holds that American officials "will talk to any official or group about the safety and release of hostages but we will not make concessions," according to the State Department.

But Jackson insisted, "The fact is that our government has talked with terrorists and has negotiated, in some instances successfully. It is good as a policy, but there must be always flexibility in the policy. ... We ought to take every initiative we can to gain the freedom of the American hostages in Beirut."

Eight-Americans are held hostage by Moslem extremists in Beirut.

The discussion of tactics for dealing with terrorists was an abrupt shift in a campaign debate which had been focused on economic issues, particularly how to assist Pennsylvania's ailing steel industry.

Dukakis was aiming for his fourth straight primary victory in a contest with 178 delegates at stake.

Vice President George Bush, who could clinch a convention majority with a victory in Pennsylvania, compared his campaign rebirth after an Iowa caucus defeat to the revival of Pittsburgh, a once-strapped steel town.

"I know what it's like to be knocked to the canvas," he said, adding that his political comeback was "a parallel to what you demonstrated here."

The latest Associated Press delegate count gave Bush 1,081 — 68 short of the 1,139 needed for the nomination at the GOP convention next August. His only remaining rival, former television evangelist Pat Robertson, has 31 delegates.

Court

said, "It is surely no affront to settled jurisprudence to request argument on whether a particular precedent should be modified or overruled."

The North Carolina case, argued last Feb. 29, now will be held over until the court's next term beginning in October. A ruling is likely in 1989.

Voting to rehear the case were Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justice Byron R. White, Sandra Day O'Connor, Antonin Scalia and Anthony M. Kennedy.

O'Connor, Scalia and Kennedy were appointed by President Reagan, a critic of some high-court rulings he considers too liberal.

Brenda Patterson, a black woman, wants to use a post-Civil War Credit Union, to pay actual and punitive damages for alleged harassment.

Lower federal courts said the law, the Civil Rights Act of 1866, is designed only to ban racial discrimination in hiring, firing and promotion — not racial harassment.

Ms. Patterson still could charge racial harassment under a 1964 civil rights law. But the more recent law provides that those who win their cases in court may collect back pay, not potentially big awards as compensation for emotional and mental suffering.

Civil rights groups say the more limited 1964 law may not be a sufficient deterrent to harassment.

Arthur Spitzer, legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union here, said the court's action will have "enormous psychological impact."

"Basic civil rights decisions now may be considered open to attack," he said. Monday's action suggests there are five solid votes to reconsider key precedents, he added.

Spitzer also said that if the court limits the scope of the 1866 law, it may encourage defendants in bias cases "to take a harder line, to say 'sue me,' instead of settling out of court."

The court agreed to use Ms. Patterson's appeal to reconsider a 1976 ruling, called Runyon vs. McCrary, that held that racially segregated private schools violate the 1866 law. The statute was enacted to ensure that recently freed slaves would enjoy all the rights of citizenship.

The 1976 decision has given civil rights groups an important legal weapon to fight racial bias by permitting them to use the law as a basis for lawsuits against private individuals.

defendants' immunized testimony, Sullivan said. "This case can't proceed if I have any understanding of the Fifth Amendment."

No date has been set for the trial of the three men, who along with retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord, are accused of conspiring to illegally divert U.S.-Iran arms-sale profits to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Secord testified on Capitol Hill without an immunity grant.

At the outset of Monday's hearing, U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell barred any defense testimony on the ground that lawyers for the defendants had disobeyed his order that they give Walsh timely notice of the witness they intended to produce.

"The orders of the court are going to be complied with," Gesell told the defendants.

"We are going to proceed whether the atmosphere is one of confrontation or not," Gesell replied.

"I don't believe you abided either with the letter or the spirit of the court order," Gesell replied.

"During more than four hours of testimony, Walsh described elaborate procedures he used to prevent investigators, prosecutors and grand jurors from exposure to the testimony that North, Poindexter, Hakim and other immunized witnesses gave Congress.

and name-calling or not," the judge told the defendants and their lawyers, who had accused the judge in court papers of establishing a procedure that "makes a mockery" of their clients' rights.

Late in the day, the defense filed a notice that it intended to appeal Gesell's April 13 order to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here.

"I have a great sense of unfairness for my client when you rebuke defense counsel," Sullivan, who denied he had violated the order, told the judge after the midday recess.

"I don't believe you abided either with the letter or the spirit of the court order," Gesell replied.

"During more than four hours of testimony, Walsh described elaborate procedures he used to prevent investigators, prosecutors and grand jurors from exposure to the testimony that North, Poindexter, Hakim and other immunized witnesses gave Congress.

The biggest single contribution came from the National Rifle Association Political Victory Fund in Washington, which poured $4,700 into Craig's campaign. A PAC may contribute up to $5,000 per election.

Individual contributions accounted for $11,024.

Craig's committee spent $28,889 in the three-month period. More than $3,800 was spent on office supplies and computer equipment; $12,998 on the campaign office rent, payroll, and telephone charges; and $7,259 on food, advertising, printing and postage.

The Boise Republican will probably raise about $350,000 for his reelection effort, according to campaign manager Chris Rich. Craig spent $310,000 against a seriously underfunded opponent in 1986 and pulled in 65 percent of the First Congressional District vote.

Senate extends benefits for 'atomic vets'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted 48-30 approval Monday of a bill granting new benefits to an estimated 250,000 "atomic veterans" who were exposed to radiation during the U.S. nuclear attacks on Japan in 1945 and in post-war nuclear tests.

The bill requires House approval, but the measure faces a veto threat from President Reagan if it reaches his desk.

"It is time to be fair to these men," said Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., chairman of the Senate Veterans Committee and chief sponsor of the bill.

The measure would cost an estimated $36 million in its first year to pay for medical treatments.

The atomic veterans are service personnel who either took part in the occupation of Hiroshima and Nagasaki after U.S. atomic bombs were dropped on those Japanese cities in August 1945, or who took part in open-air tests of American atomic weapons in the Pacific or Nevada during the two decades after the war.

Many of those veterans have developed cancer and have urged the Veterans Administration to make a presumptive finding that their cancers are related to their exposure to radiation during the tests. Many of the servicemen were exposed to radiation during the tests with little or no protective clothing.

The bill would include 13 specific types of cancer.

Under existing law, veterans with cancer can receive compensation, but in each case, they must show that the illness is service-related.

Only 28 of the nearly 5,000 veterans who have filed radiation-related claims, with the VA have been approved for disability benefits.

Originally, the bill passed Monday was part of a larger health and compensation bill for the nation's 27.4 million veterans.

in 1986 before she resigned to campaign in Idaho.

The report said she received $7,448 in income from Copycat Printing, Pocatello, in 1985 and $1,269 prorated in 1986.

Under spousal income, Mrs. Hansen noted that her husband operated Hansen Associates, Washington, and had pension income from the House, but listed no figures.

"Other income of spouse not known, owing to spouse's refusal to reveal," the report said.

Under assets, Mrs. Hansen listed equity in the Pocatello printing company at between $50,001 and $100,000.

Under liabilities, she listed a promissory note to Nelson Bunker Hunt, Dallas millionaire, for between $50,001 and $100,000, and a business mortgage escrow for Paul Hoekstra between $15,001 and $50,000.

It was dealings with the Hunt brothers that got George Hansen into trouble with the Justice Department, which eventually led to him serving a year in a federal prison.

The federal government charged Hansen with failing to list certain commodities transactions on his personal financial disclosure report. Hansen was convicted on four counts and sentenced to prison, despite his claims that the transactions involved his wife and did not have to be listed on his report.

He lost the 1984 election to Stallings by just 170 votes despite the legal problems.

Hansen's last campaign finance report in February showed he still owed $32,423 of a debt that was more than $110,000 after the 1984 campaign.

A potential Democratic opponent in November, attorney Bruce Robinson of Bonanza Ferry, has started his campaign committee $20,636 since January although campaign expenses have eaten up most of his warchest. At the close of the three-month reporting period, Robinson had $450 in his campaign treasury.

Other possible Democratic contenders for the First Congressional District seat, state Rep. Jeane Givens and apartment manager David Shepherd, have not yet filed campaign reports, indicating that their fundraising to date has been below the level which must be reported.

More than half of Craig's campaign money came from political action committees. The largest PAC contributions came from Amoc, the Chicago-based oil company, which donated $750; AT&T in Colorado, $575; and the Mortgage Bankers Association of America in Washington, D.C., $500.

In addition, the Union Pacific Fund for Effective Government, which is headed by former Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, donated $500, and the American Medical PAC contributed $802 worth of services, according to Craig's FEC report.

Grant helps weatherizing

BOISE (AP) — Some 2,400 Idaho residents will be eligible to weatherize their homes through a $1.5 million grant from the U.S. Department of Energy.

The governor's office announced receipt of the federal funds on Monday, and Gov. Cecil Andrus said it would help finance "a full range of energy conservation measures for low-income families."

The money can be used for such things as home energy analysis, repairs, insulation, heat preservation and moisture control.

The Department of Health and Welfare will administer the grants, taking applications from community action agencies.

Applicants must meet federal income guidelines which cover a family of four with gross income up to $14,563. Officials said the average grant would provide about $1,350 worth of services and materials.

Interested families should contact the community action agency in their area or John Chamberlin in the state Economic Opportunity Office.

Panel fills Batt's seat

BOISE (AP) — Wilder farmer George Vance was appointed Monday to the Idaho Senate to replace former senator Phil Batt, also of Wilder.

The Legislative District 13 Committee nominated Vance to succeed Batt, who resigned to accept appointment to the Idaho Transportation Board. Batt recommended Vance as his replacement, saying he offered voters "a lifetime of support and concern for traditional American values."

District 13 is a "floating" district that covers much of southwestern Idaho except for Ada County.

Vance, 62, and Myron Severson of Nampa are running for the GOP nomination in the May 24 primary election.

Chamber opposes tax move

POCAATELLO (AP) — The Greater Pocatello Chamber of Commerce has announced its opposition to an initiative petition that would repeal the state's investment tax credit.

Chamber leaders said Monday that the initiative is not the proper procedure to use in determining tax policy, but stressed that the chamber is taking no stand on the issue of whether the tax credit should be repealed.

"The chamber's membership, in a survey conducted last year, was evenly split on the question of whether the state should repeal or retain the tax credit," said chamber spokeswoman Dawn Hatch.

"Based on that information, the board determined it could not take a position on the ITC."

The decision followed an earlier announcement by the Boise Chamber of Commerce that it opposed the initiative. The Boise chamber, however, supports repeal of the 5-percent tax credit for businesses.

Alice Hennessy said for the Boise chamber that the organization favors the Legislature taking action on the repealer.

Cycle accident kills teen

ST. ANTHONY (AP) — A Terreton teen-ager was killed Saturday in a motorcycle accident at the end of dunes west of St. Anthony, a Fremont County sheriff's spokeswoman said.

Ryan Miskin, 17, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kent Miskin of Terreton, was pronounced dead at the scene by Fremont County Coroner Paul Romrell.

The motorcycle he was riding had fallen on him after he drove over a dune and fell several feet, officials said.

Miskin had been riding alone and apparently was on his way to his car to escape a sudden heavy rain storm when the accident occurred.

Trott takes oath for Court of Appeals

BOISE (AP) — Becoming a judge is "taking care of the law," says Stephen S. Trott, installed here Monday as the latest judge of the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals.

Trott, 48, was installed by Chief Judge James R. Browning in ceremonies attended by California and Idaho judges, state officials and lawyers.

Trott, former associate attorney general in Washington, D.C., was confirmed last month by the U.S. Senate to a judicial position dating back to the 1930s.

Browning said Trott will cover an area from the Arctic Circle to the U.S.-Mexican border and from the Rocky Mountains to Pacific Ocean islands. He will sit in five areas, Seattle, Portland, Los Angeles, Hawaii and Alaska, Browning said.

Trott is the 27th judge in the district, and could have opened his office in any city in the judicial district with a district court office.

Trott said he picked Boise because he has been visiting the state for more than 20 years and has vacation property at McCall.

In addition, his wife, Sally, has Idaho roots. Her grandfather, Edwin Snow, opened a Boise law practice at the turn of the century and practiced until the 1950s.

Malcolm Lucas, former chief justice of the California Supreme Court, called Trott "a good lawyer and a good man."

Lucas presided over trials where Trott was prosecutor for the Los Angeles County prosecutor's office. He said Trott was "an inspiring leader" in federal positions.

"Steve's career to date provides us with a model of what to expect as a judge," Lucas said.

STEPHEN S. TROTT
Newest circuit judge

Browning said the appeals court is "the court nobody knows. You will not have to face a lot of attention and notoriety," he told Trott.

The appointment is lifetime, and Browning told Trott that if he wants, he can spend the rest of his life solving people's problems.

He can expect to take part in 250 to 300 of the 6,000 appeals filed in the circuit per year, Browning said.

Eugene Thomas, Boise lawyer who is past president of the American Bar Association, praised Trott as "a man of many dimensions." He was one of several speakers to refer to Trott's past as a singer with the group, "The Highwaymen," which included an appearance on the Ed Sullivan Show; the fact that he is a zero handicap golfer; is proficient in Spanish, French and Italian; is an accomplished magician and a dedicated fly fisherman.

"Thanks for the compliment you have paid to the state of Idaho," Thomas said, referring to the fact Trott could have had his offices anywhere in nine Western states.

U.S. District Court Judge Harold Ryan welcomed Trott to Idaho, but suggested he immediately trade his California auto-license plates for Idaho plates, since Californians aren't always welcome in the state.

Trott said he felt a good judge must have "respect and patience and grant dignity to all in the courtroom," no matter what the occasion.

"It's our privilege to live in the state," he said.

Trott said one of the reasons he decided to locate in Idaho was J. Blaine Anderson, another 9th Circuit judge. Anderson was to take part in the installation ceremonies Monday but died earlier this month.

Letters/ Seat belt law could be mandatory sentence to death, injury

Decision not up to state

Has it ever occurred to you that the mandatory seat belt law could very well be a state sponsored mandatory sentence to a horrible death or serious injury?

Just think of being strapped into a submerged automobile and unable, for whatever reason, to release your seat belt or your mate's seat belt fastener, and you both must perish horribly because of a state mandated law — same for another occupant or even a child.

Just change the scenario a little bit to a burning car and repeat the details.

Pretty horrible, isn't it?

I am claustrophobic as is my husband, and when I think about wearing a seat belt, I can see, in my mind's eye, these same details and more.

When I think of being forced against my will to "buckle up" I immediately panic and become frantic at the thought.

I am quite sure that a great many of you have never given this fenshish law all due consideration.

Let the seat belt decision be made by the individual and not by the state.

If you feel comfortable with seat belts, by all means, wear them. If you do not, you should, and must be left free to choose.

Tell our legislators this by phone or letter — but please, tell them. It could save your life! I am the wife of E.L. Hays. We have been married for 54 years, and I don't want to lose him.

Due process being ignored

This letter is in response to the article that you ran on April 9, 1988. I would like to know just when the Twin Falls County attorney was given the power to enact law? I was under the assumption that the state legislature was where the statutes were enacted. (See the Constitution of the United States and that of the state of Idaho.)

Is the county attorney, sheriff's office, and the city police in a "conspiracy" to inflict pain and penalties upon the citizens of this county for not having insurance. If there is a problem with people not having insurance, these agencies should be making recommendations to the state legislature for a maximum that could be charged for coverage, being that insurance is mandatory by state statute.

What has happened to due process that is secured by law. The right for one to have a court judgment before property can be taken. To take someone's property without this process is criminal, theft. (In this case grand theft auto.)

I am not an attorney (God forbid) but I do know a little about justice and this act is not. The statute is all ready on the book for the punishment for not having any insurance. To me this seems just a little petty and small on the part of inflicting more pain and penalty.

Could there be another reason for doing this? Does the department get a kick back on the premiums that are made? I think that the attorney general should make an investigation into the matter, for this is the only county in the state to impose such an action.

What will be the next step? Will they take and evict you from your house for not having fire insurance on it. Will they move your home to an impound yard and you must pay the mover? More could be written on this subject than space will allow. We as citizens (or sheep) deserve the government that we will tolerate. Whatever happened to the Golden Rule. "Do unto others as you would have done unto you!"

There are many who care

I read with much interest the letter from Bernice Walker of Shoshone. Let me say, "Yes, Bernice, there are people out here who care."

Although it may seem like there are a small number of us, there are a good many more than one might think. I'm sure you and I don't agree on all of the issues, but there are a lot of issues that are common ground for all of us. Such as that "Mickey Mouse" law about seat belts and elected officials spending money on junk that the funds were not allotted for. They come back and say "this fund is running amuck" and the indigent fund is one such case. The problem is, Bernice, not enough people will speak out.

One such case and point is the city council public hearings on a proposed change in the method of how we elect our city council members.

When these hearings took place, I was out of town and could not attend. Upon returning and finding no one had attended the meeting, I immediately called some people to find out why they didn't attend when they had said they would. The response I got was as follows:

"Don, I could see no point in taking the time to prepare a statement and going before the city council to speak when they are not going to listen to the public. Their past track record proves this. The police consolidation and the annexation of the city limits is just two cases in point."

So you can see, Bernice, more people such as you have to speak out more often. You speak of changes; you have a good opportunity in the upcoming elections to do such, and yes, Bernice, it is time for a change.

Watson stories one-sided

I feel as the many Hazelton residents (4-13-88) that the public is being given a one-sided look at Clinton Watson.

It seems evident from his articles, that Ken Armstrong feels his opinion is right. I always thought the good of a journalist and of a productive newspaper was to print an informative, unbiased article. The articles so far are not, by those standards, well written reports. Only Watson's setbacks, his recent job loss and the accident involving Elvin Cory, are mentioned. Nothing has been said of Watson's accomplishments. The recent job loss has absolutely no impact or relevancy on the accident, as Mr. Armstrong seems to feel it does.

Mr. Guerry's thoughts, (4-12-88), that the public's opinion changes so severely with automobile/pedestrian accidents, seem true. It does seem to make a difference who was driving, and who was on foot. I feel that where you live also has an effect on public opinion.

Mr. Cory's long-time residency in Twin Falls, seemed to be a factor, as did his developmental disability.

Citizens of society must adhere to its rules, such as looking before crossing the street, and know the dangers that may result from disobedience.

The repetitious statement that Watson was "allegedly intoxicated at the time of the accident," seems unjust as he wasn't charged with DUI. The fact that the accident occurred at dusk also was not mentioned. Do we all not have a problem seeing clearly at that time of evening?

Overall, I feel the situation deserves an unbiased report. All the articles to date involving Watson, both his employment status and the accident, have been written by Ken Armstrong. Is it too much to ask for someone else's opinion, or better yet, an unbiased report of the facts?

Being a Democrat a worry

I've been waiting tongue in cheek for several weeks for someone to comment on Ron and Nancy's nice new "double wide" awaiting them in Bol Airz when his ribs "retars" from public office. Come on now folks, we're talking about $2 million worth of bunkhouse, you can't expect old Ted to let that slip without takin' a crack at it can you?

After a great deal of exhausting research, I've found that it's nothing new for ex-presidents to settle down in comfort, for instance: Washington had Mt. Vernon, Jefferson had Monticello, Jackson had the Hermitage, Teddy had Sagamore Hill and the mean little Missouri-ian had a hundred year old, two bedroom clapboard house on a side street in Independence. So it only seems fair that our two Hollywood stalwarts should in some measure find happiness out there in the land of the fruits and nuts where you have smog, traffic, dope-heads, gang wars, earth quakes, Johnny Carson and enough medical clinics to keep a hypo-chondriac going for 20 years.

Now, none other than Paul Harvey told me that the former occupant of this new presidential retreat was a 90-year-old lady who was terminated two years ago as the commandant of Kemper Military Academy because she had a mean mouth.

Why pshaw, Ron ought to fit in that abode like a zipper in a J.C. Penney suit cause for some time now most of us can't figure out what he means when he opens his mouth.

Now to set matters straight, I do wish them well and would like to offer some tips on how to live on a fixed income: First, make sure there's room for a chopper pad for a chopper is essential for those little trips to the 7-11 for a loaf of bread or a six pack; secondly, for goodness sake find a good veterinarian cause that dog that Nancy is always packin' really should learn how to walk; and thirdly, someone should ascertain that there is a good gravel road straight through to Walt's dinky little compound in Palm Springs.

Guess it isn't any secret that I'm stuck with that five acre parcel of choice pasture land frontin' on Murtaugh Lake that I was gonna offer his ribs. Some years being a Democrat can sure be a pain in the ass.

Idahoans will vote Republican until poorhouse doors slam

As Idaho state legislators go, Bruce Newcomb of Burley is several cuts above average. Bruce is intelligent, properly educated, genuinely interested in public service and even presents the proper personal appearance.

He is also a Republican which in Southern Idaho translates to electability, even if he had opposition.

Newcomb would be the first to concede that he was no less qualified to hold office during the many years he waged unsuccessful campaigns as a Democrat, and that changing labels made all the difference.

There is virtually no reason to suspect that 1988 will prove to be any different from previous election years. George Bush can count on Idaho as a foregone conclusion, like money in the bank, and in all likelihood will not see a need to expend a dime's worth of time or money campaigning in this area.

The Idaho electorate can be relied upon, however masculinistically, to continue to vote Republican, right up to the moment the poorhouse doors slam shut.

Consider: When Franklin Roosevelt took of

R.G. Chrisman

Since in 1933, the wealthiest one percent of the population owned about 35 percent of the nation's assets — cash, real estate, stocks and bonds — anything of financial value.

Through a half century of progressive legislation, and encompassing the administrations of Roosevelt, Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon and Carter, that percentage had diminished to the point that by 1976, that same "power elite" controlled only about 20 percent of the nation's total wealth. Then came the Reagan years, and the trend reversed. By 1983, the one percent at the top of the heap was back in control of 35 percent of the national wealth.

In 1988, thanks to the current administration, the top percent to the population — around 2.5 million people, less than a million families — owns more net wealth than the bottom 90 percent. This was accomplished by "tax reforms" in 1981 and 1986, reforms which rhetorically at least offered something for everyone. As it turns out, the super rich got a lot richer while the majority of us faceless nonentities got the shaft.

The average taxpayer got at best a $10-$20 a week break, which was quickly and quietly gobbled up by increased Social Security and excise taxes; on the other hand, the fat cat with a taxable income of too grand or better got a $30,000 gift.

The biggest beneficiaries were such corporations as Dow Chemicals, C.E., PepsiCo, ITT, Boeing, Tenneco and others who used the Reagan reforms to avoid federal taxes completely — even in years when they showed profits in the $3 billion range.

In 1960, corporations paid 22 percent of the federal tax bill. Today the corporate share is less than seven percent.

In the Reagan mentality, tax breaks for the bloated aristocracy would be invested in an expanding economy — everyone would ultimately benefit. In reality, the tax giveaway was squandered in foreign investment, corporate takeovers, salary and bonus for "top dogs" and spending that produced nothing of value — lots of paper shuffling and very little production. In short, the "trickle-down" theory turned out to be pure fantasy. It would appear that national prosperity is dependent upon "percolate up" rather than "trickle down" economics.

If national statistics can be applied to the Idaho population, some 10,000 of us should have emerged as beneficiaries of the Reagan economic "boom." It may be recalled that during the middle '70s, Idaho achieved distinction as the state with more millionaires per capita than anywhere.

Many of those "millionaires" were raggedy old farmers and ranchers who found themselves suddenly "rich" by virtue of highly inflated real estate values. In 1988 there are a lot less of those "millionaires" around, and we would be hard pressed to round up as many as 1,000 Idahoans who could honestly say they have personally benefitted from Reaganomics.

George Bush was smart enough to go out after the important support money early on, and thereby assured his nomination. If elected, you can bet he's going to "dance with the guy that brings him," and we peons can look for someone of the same.

Ever there was a body of voters whose logical move would be to support a political agenda decided to "sharing the wealth," it is the state of Idaho in 1988.

All logic dictates that Idaho should go Democratic in '88, even if, God forbid, the ticket includes a nincompoop like Jesse Jackson. However, logic rarely prevails in these parts — we tend to rant and rave about the Rockefeller and Duponts back East and then proceed to vote against our own best interests, for people and policies in diametric opposition.

On the plus side, the past 1 1/2 years have provided a mother lode for at least one segment of society — the psychiatric community. A head-strinker could fill several notebooks attempting to analyze the voting habits of Gem State residents.

Letters/ SIS project continues to produce readers' comments

Questions go unanswered

I was just getting ready to write Senator Symms another letter, (this time I wanted to know why his letter to me hadn't addressed questions I had raised about the SIS), when lo and behold, I spied a letter from Symms himself, in The Times-News.

What a disappointment to find he had written the same (form) letter to you. Word for word.

Well, if he didn't have time to personally address the news media — I wonder if he had time to actually read the SIS Draft Environmental Impact Statement?

I love the way he starts out saying how "Idahoans need to learn more about the project (SIS) to differentiate between fact and fiction," and then neglects to say why the National Academy of Sciences shows that three of the reactors we have are operating at 50 percent or less power, and the N-reactor at Hanford is shut down completely.

Why has our production capacity been reduced to a level that could seriously affect our ability to maintain a nuclear deterrent?

It's because of problems with safety and waste contamination! As for Hanford's N-reactor, the "political environment" is not good. I guess people in Hanford have found out that it really isn't worth it to do anything for a buck.

I'll let you in on a few other facts that the senator forgot to reveal. He forgot to tell you that the so-called minute amounts of plutonium that are released into the air from reactor sites fall back to earth (that darn gravity!) and accumulate.

Jon Hagar from the INEL told the Burley Chamber of Commerce not to worry about it because the prevailing winds at the INEL blow towards Mud Lake — maybe that doesn't bother you, but I'm sure that the life at Mud Lake is not thrilled about it.

Senator Symms forgot to mention that in the DEIS it states that during construction of the SIS facility, the Bald Eagle and Peregrine Falcon (both endangered species) will be lost or displaced. As far as I know, endangered species that are lost become extinct. (DEIS pp 4-3 and 3-19)

I have so many questions that either go unanswered or else are answered with a smoke screen such as "this information pertains to national defense and must be kept secret."

This kind of smoke screen is being put up by those who belong to the "economic growth (mine) at any cost" club because they really cannot justify a pork barrel project, which is what the SIS is.

I hear people say, "Let's leave it to our elected officials to decide this issue."

If my elected officials were convinced to be in favor of the SIS by the same kind of 30-minute lecture (it was a lecture, not a discussion as reported) that our Burley Chamber of Commerce heard — I am sincerely fearful. Thirty minutes? Thirty minutes would not even scratch the surface. But maybe the INEL and the DOE et al. do not want the surface scratched.

Jon Hagar and Steve Symms do have one thing in common, they both spend most of their time letting you know how much money will come from the SIS project. They both forget to mention how much it will cost to get rid of the waste, if it ever can be gotten rid of.

So here we go, like sacrificial lambs for another military science project. Or do we speak up? The addresses and phone numbers of all elected officials are in the front of your Southern Idaho regional phone book.

In closing, I'd like you to know that as my sister and I were handing out SIS information last weekend, a lady refused a handout saying, "We don't do that in Idaho Falls." They don't read information about the SIS in Idaho Falls? Like I said, anything for a buck.

CAROLYN HONDO

For children, oppose SIS

We have before us an issue that I feel makes all other issues of today seem small by comparison. I am referring to the proposed SIS facility at INEL. I am aware of the boost that it would provide to the state's economy and am sympathetic with the people of Idaho Falls that are concerned with their jobs but we must analyze the ramifications of this project much more carefully.

I have read in various scientific publications that weapons grade plutonium remains deadly poisonous for from 20,000 to 244,000 years.

Suppose that the ancient Egyptians had had nuclear technology and had built an SIS type facility in 5,000 B.C. Now in 1988, the ancient Egyptian civilization has long since crumbled and any jobs or boost to their economy it would have provided are utterly meaningless to us.

Yet we would still be charged with the deadly verbius business of caretaking their nuclear wastes as would our children's, children's, children's children to the year 15,000 A.D. — some 13,000 years from now.

For the sake of our children, born and unborn for thousands of generations to come, please oppose SIS.

Gulf forces may again have to operate with limited rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's spokesman suggested Monday that the administration wants to return U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf to the limited rules of engagement that existed before last week's shooting with Iran.

While emphasizing that no decisions have been made on how American naval power will be used in the wake of last Monday's exchanges with Iran, spokesman Martin Fitzwater said, "Everybody acknowledges that we need to move back to some more limited set of rules."

Fitzwater's statement buttressed remarks that Secretary of State George P. Shultz made in Brussels, Belgium, where American officials were consulting with NATO allies on Persian Gulf strategy and other issues.

"We will not get tied up in any serious shooting war with the Iranians," Shultz said in an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" show. He said the question of what rules should govern U.S. military activities in the gulf remained unresolved, saying "that's the kind of decision that the president makes."

The tone of the comments by Fitzwater and Shultz differed with assessments provided late last week by other administration officials. Those officials, who spoke on condition they not be named, had said the administration decided to expand its policy to allow U.S. warships to aid neutral merchant ships under attack.

But those officials said the rules of engagement would not be expanded far enough to allow a broad-based U.S. escort for non-American-flagged vessels in the gulf.

The talk of a change in policy came as a direct result of the mining of a U.S. frigate and last Monday's extensive fighting between Iranian and U.S. forces. At the same time, Adm. William Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, confirmed over the weekend that U.S. officials were considering using Coast Guard vessels in the gulf.

But on Monday, Fitzwater talked of the possibility of returning U.S. forces to the limited rules of engagement that applied before last Monday's clash: rules which provide for measured responses to the laying of mines or other Iranian provocations.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, had voiced fear about an increasing Americanization of the Iran-Iraq war, and there has been a move in Congress to revise provisions of the War Powers Act that limit the ability of lawmakers to act.

Reagan consulted with congressional leaders in advance of the military strikes he ordered a week ago, and he wrote a letter calling "the matter closed" in the aftermath of the exchanges. But the administration has taken the position that elements of the War Powers Act are unconstitutional, and has refused to invoke a provision that would give lawmakers a chance to vote within 60 days on whether to keep U.S. troops in the region.

The administration also is consulting members of Congress in connection with a reassessment of the rules of engagement in the gulf.

Coast Guard plan gets flak

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consideration by the Pentagon to give the financially strapped Coast Guard a role in Persian Gulf patrols ran into heavy sailing Monday on Capitol Hill.

"Ridiculous, hare-brained, absolute utter nonsense," was the reaction of Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., who has criticized the Reagan administration for not devoting more resources to battle against drugs, including seizures of imports.

"I've never heard of anything so stupid," D'Amato told a reporter. "Do they think the war on drugs is over?"

Sen. Mark Hatfield of Oregon, ranking Republican on the Senate Appropriations Committee, said, "I don't know what the rationale is for that. We've put a lot of additional burdens on the Coast Guard in the last few years and I'd think they have a full plate."

The committee will meet later this week to consider shifting money to the Coast Guard because the service has responded to a $100 million budget shortfall by suspending routine search and rescue patrols and cutting anti-drug missions by 55 percent.

"They don't have to go to the Persian Gulf to get money," said Hatfield.

Family, officials bestow belated honors on dead

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eight U.S. servicemen who died in a failed attempt to rescue 52 American hostages in Iran eight years ago were honored Monday at a ceremony attended by relatives, friends and military officials.

"Time is a great healer of pain," said Air Force Capt. Richard Holmes, the brother of Cpl. George Holmes Jr. of Pine Bluff, Ark., one of the eight men who died during the abortive rescue mission in the Iranian desert on April 25, 1980.

"Those feelings of sorrow have been replaced with feelings of pride," he said.

The men — five from the Air Force and three from the Marine Corps — died when a helicopter collided with a transport plane after officials decided to abandon the mission before entering Tehran where 52 Americans were held inside the U.S. Embassy. The hostages were freed in January 1981 after 444 days in captivity.

Army Secretary John O. Marsh Jr., former hostages Bruce Laing and Air Force Col. David Roeder were among those attending the 30-minute ceremony, held at Arlington National Cemetery across the Potomac River from the nation's capital.

Roeder said when he first learned of the rescue attempt while he was in captivity in Tehran he cried. He has great pride, he said, in remembering those who were willing to die for freedom.

After a presentation of colors by the U.S. Marine Corps Color Guard, participants placed yellow roses on the headstone where three of the eight are buried: Maj. Richard Bakke of Long Beach, Calif.; Joel C. Mayo of Harrisville, Mich.; and Harold Lewis of Fort Walton Beach, Fla.

A wreath was then put near the plaque commemorating the eight. The others were Sgt. John Harvey of Roanoke, Va.; Staff Sgt. Dawey L. Johnson of Dublin, Ga.; Capt. Lyn D. McIntosh of Valdosta, Ga.; and Capt. Charles McMillan of Corryton, Tenn.

Pentagon officials said in weekend that consideration was being given to send up to a half-dozen 110-foot Coast Guard patrol boats to the Persian Gulf. They would be part of the U.S. policy of protecting 11 reflagged Kuwaiti tankers against attacks by Iran.

The lightly armed "Island" class patrol boats would be pulled off anti-drug patrols in the Caribbean, Coast Guard officials said Monday. The boats would be replaced by new Coast Guard cutters now under construction.

Nicholas Sandifer, a Coast Guard spokesman, said "any effect on drug interdiction would be minimal and temporary."

Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci said Sunday that moving the patrol boats to the gulf "would free our larger (Navy) ships for other missions."

Adm. William Crowe Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the Coast Guard ships could help escort merchant ships, watch sea lanes, prevent mine-laying, and guard offshore installations from small-boat attacks. Crowe admitted that if the boats are needed for anti-drug patrols, that need "would severely complicate the calculus."

Adm. Paul A. Yost, commandant of the Coast Guard, said Monday the service could be ready to send patrol boats to the gulf region in 60 days.

"If the president, chairman of the Joint Chiefs, think those boats would be a help over there, I'm more than delighted to send them and my Coast Guard personnel are ready to go," Yost told reporters. "Really raring and ready to go."

Administratively, the Coast Guard is part of the Transportation Department, but by law, the agency also falls under Defense Department jurisdiction for national security purposes.

Congressional sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Navy has offered to pay the Coast Guard's expenses in mounting the gulf patrols.

Dear Friends,

This is the most difficult letter we've ever had to write because its purpose is to say "goodbye" on behalf of the Sterling Jewelry Company.

Our family and the Sterling Jewelry Company have both been intimately involved in the history of Twin Falls. The store itself was started in 1910. Dad took it over in 1926 and mother operated the store during our years in the service; we've spent part of our childhood and all of our adult lives working here. During these many years, you've given us the opportunity to share in the joy of your birthdays, weddings, anniversaries, and holidays, and you've become members of our extended family.

That's what makes our decision to go out of business so very difficult. However, we have reached retirement age and none of our children are available to carry on a tradition spanning more than three-quarters of a century. We considered selling Twin Falls' oldest jewelry store to an outsider, but we were unwilling to put the Sterling reputation in the hands of owners whose standards might not reflect the old-fashioned virtues of honesty, quality, and value which have been so important to us.

The other alternative was to close the store with dignity by conducting a brief going-out-of-business sale which will begin on Monday, April 25, with discounts of 30% to 60%.

We offer our deep thanks to all of you whose friendship and patronage have made our many years in business so rewarding. We both look forward to the pleasure of seeing you and serving you in our remaining days here at Sterling Jewelry.

Sincerely,
Charles & Howard

High-tech hand-me-downs heading for Third World

WASHINGTON (AP) - Few high-tech products are as unwanted as used computers, and thousands are junked each year in the United States.

But now more than $1 million worth of these high-tech hand-me-downs are headed from America to the Third World.

Since setting up formally in March, the Global Technology Foundation has received pledges of computer donations worth that much, and drawn requests for equipment from as far as Bangladesh and Zimbabwe, said one of the founders, Philip Friedman.

With the accelerated pace of innovations in research and technology, a computer generation can last as little as two or three years in the United States. After that, obsolescence sets in.

Thousands of outdated computers are stacked in warehouses, gathering dust. Thousands more are crushed or melted down. Still others are cannibalized for spare parts.

Upset with the waste, Friedman and two friends in Boulder, Colo., decided to set up a clearinghouse for diverting the U.S. computer glut to developing countries in the Third World.

Computer experts, American businessmen and Third World specialists laud the idea.

"For users in the Third World, this could leapfrog them into the 80s," said Robert Curley, chairman of PC Distributing Inc.

"I have never been able to bring myself to throw out perfectly good equipment. This concept is very exciting to us," said

Curley, whose Illinois-based company is one of the largest computer distributors in the Midwest.

He estimated that his company's donations could amount to about $100,000 annually in used computer hardware.

For computer businesses, the donations are financially beneficial: they are a tax deduction and can save thousands of dollars in storage costs, said Friedman.

Global Technology is asking donors to include manuals with the computers and hopes to put together training packages including literature and experts for the Third World users.

"We're not just going to dump the stuff and leave them to figure it out," said Friedman.

Global Technology has received the tax-exempt status of a charitable foundation and has applied to several foundations for grants to fund transportation for the donations and management of its projects, he said.

Gary Gaile, a geographer who serves on the foundation's advisory board, has worked on a separate project to introduce computers to government service in Kenya. Gaile, who teaches at the University of Colorado in Boulder, said Kenyans were "thrilled with the computers. It gave them a rare skill in that society."

He said the Kenyan government used to compile its budget manually, and was almost through the budget year before the document was completed. With computers, the budget is on time, Gaile said.

"Here, it's difficult to dump old computers. There, where they're 10 or 15 years behind, these machines are more than adequate," he said.

The YMCA is one of the first in line to receive Global Technology's free computers. Michael Diamond, assistant director of the organization's International Division, said most of the YMCAs in 92 countries run themselves without computers.

"This would give them a tremendous chance to improve their management," he said.

Computers would also be useful for the YMCAs' vocational training and remedial programs in African and South American countries, he said.

Computer corporations do contribute some surplus equipment overseas.

Judge sentences Demjanjuk to death for Nazi war crimes

JERUSALEM (AP) — A judge sentenced John Demjanjuk on Monday to die for Nazi war crimes and said the retired Ohio autoworker personally killed tens of thousands of people as the sadistic death camp guard "Ivan the Terrible."

Hundreds of spectators jumped to their feet and applauded. Some shouted "Bravo!" and others "Death! Death!" Survivors of the Holocaust, in which 6 million Jews were killed, cried and embraced each other. Judge Zvi Tal said Demjanjuk's crimes at the Treblinka death camp in Nazi-occupied Poland could "never be forgiven by the hearts of men or be obliterated from memory. ... The blood of the victims still cries out to us."

"Ivan the Terrible" operated the gas chambers at Treblinka, where 850,000 Jews were killed in 1942-43. Demjanjuk was convicted last week.

The judge, who was born in Poland and lost his parents in the Holocaust, said Demjanjuk "served as an arch henchman who with his own hands killed tens of thousands of human beings. He humiliated and degraded his victims."

Minutes before the sentence was read, Demjanjuk shouted in Hebrew: "I'm an innocent man!"

Demjanjuk, 68, was in a wheelchair because of back problems. He is a Ukrainian Orthodox Christian and crossed himself repeatedly and muttered, apparently in prayer.

The 14-month trial in a converted movie theater was only the second in Israel of someone charged with Nazi crimes. More than 250,000 people attended and sessions were broadcast live on radio and television.

Adolf Eichmann, who directed Adolf Hitler's program for exterminating Jews, was tried in Israel and hanged in 1962. He is the only person to have been executed in Israel since it became a nation in 1948.

Court spokesman Yossi Hassin said Demjanjuk also probably would be executed by hanging "if the sentence is upheld on appeal."

John Demjanjuk Jr., the defendant's 22-year-old son, sobbed silently. He said the family had expected a death sentence and would appeal within days.

"This amounts to nothing more than the judicial murder of an innocent man," he said.

"It will bring shame to the state of Israel, the Israeli Justice Department and most unfortunately the 6 million victims of the Nazi Holocaust," he said. The United States extradited Demjanjuk to Israel.

In Lorain, Ohio, the Rev. John Bruchok of St. Mary's Ukrainian Orthodox Church said: "It's a travesty of justice." Bruchok met the defendant when the family asked for a priest shortly before Demjanjuk was sent to Israel.

"I saw his face," Bruchok said. "I saw the face of a gentle man who was scared. An innocent man is being executed. I believe this with all my heart. It is very unfortunate."

Jerusalem police arrest wholesalers

JERUSALEM (AP) — Police arrested Jerusalem wholesalers Monday who were said to be helping the Palestinian rebellion in the occupied lands, and soldiers confiscated identity cards of several dozen Arabs accused of inciting violence.

Military spokesmen said a navy patrol craft sank a rubber boat off the Lebanese coast before dawn, killing an undetermined number of Palestinian guerrillas. Israel radio said two guerrillas were in the boat.

Israel radio said loss of their documents would prevent the Gaza Strip Palestinians from entering Israel. It said the Arabs also were ordered to check in with Gaza police twice a day.

At least 173 Palestinians have been killed since riots began Dec. 8 among the 1.5 million Arabs of the occupied West Bank and Gaza, which Israel captured from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 war. An Israeli soldier and Jewish settler also have been killed.

Violence has declined in the past few days and Palestinians are expressing frustration with the failure of underground leaders to provide enough financial aid to offset economic sanctions imposed by the Israelis.

"The Palestinians are asking where is all the support money the underground leadership said it would provide," said Mubarak Awad, an Arab-American who promotes non-violent resistance to Israeli rule.

He added, however: "The people are frustrated, but they aren't giving up." Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir was quoted as calling for action against two American journalists who did not submit to the military censor stories about Israeli involvement in the assassination of PLO military commander Khalil Wazir.

Foreign journalists are required to give the censor any material involving security matters.

Israeli newspapers quoted defense sources as saying authorities were considering expelling Martin Fletcher of NBC and Glenn Frankel of the Washington Post, but Israel radio quoted Shamir as indicating lighter measures.

"Maybe they should not be expelled from the country, but they should be punished," the radio quoted Shamir as saying.

Fletcher made the first reports of Israeli involvement in Wazir's killing April 16 in Tunis, and Frankel reported details of the operation. Israeli sources have said Wazir was killed by Israeli commandos, but the government has not confirmed it.

Soldiers ordered shops in Bethlehem and Jerusalem to stay closed Monday afternoon. Underground leaders of the Palestine Liberation Organization told them to open.

Soldiers in Bethlehem welded shut the doors of six shops that followed PLO instructions. In Jerusalem, police arrested 14 merchants who opened their shops.

"Whoever is given an order must follow it," said Avi Cohen, a senior Jerusalem police official who watched riot police and officers on horseback close the stores on the Street of the Prophets near the walled Old City.

The 14 shop owners could face up to two years in jail. They opened their stores across from the Damascus Gate at 2 p.m., abiding by the PLO order, and police closed them three minutes later.

Israeli authorities want Arab merchants to open all day, but leaders of the rebellion have ordered stores opened only in the afternoon. Army instructions Monday were that shops on the Street of the Prophets remain closed.

Cohen said: "Indictments will be handed up in a few days, and the matter will be brought before the court."

A merchant who locked his shop while watched by police said: "There's no law which says when you must open or close."

When asked why the Street of the Prophets was singled out, Cohen replied: "You have to start somewhere."

Pullback by Afghans proposed

KABUL, Afghanistan - President Najib on Monday offered to withdraw Afghan troops from their posts near the Pakistani border if anti-communist guerrillas and Pakistan agree to do the same.

"We are ready to create a non-military line" between Afghanistan and Pakistan, Najib said at the opening of celebrations marking the 10th anniversary of the Afghan revolution that installed a Soviet-backed government.

Najib told an assembly of three small parties loyal to his government that such a withdrawal would allow the estimated 3 million Afghan refugees in Pakistan to return home.

However, the proposal appeared to be little more than a face-saving acknowledgment of the difficulties the Afghan army is having against onslaughts by anti-communist guerrillas, based in Pakistan and supplied with U.S. and Chinese weapons.

Soviet troops entered Afghanistan in 1979 to help quell an uprising by a guerrilla front.

The Soviet Union has agreed to start withdrawing its estimated 115,000 troops from Afghanistan on May 15 under a U.N.-mediated agreement signed April 14 in Geneva by the United States, the Soviet Union, Afghanistan and Pakistan.

The United States, China and several other countries have been aiding the Afghan guerrillas via Pakistan. The Soviet Union arms the Afghan military forces. Each superpower has reserved the right to continue its assistance as long as the other one does.

The guerrillas, who were not direct party to the Geneva accord, have vowed to continue fighting until Najib's government is overthrown.

On Sunday, Najib confirmed a guerrilla claim that the Afghan army had been pushed out of Barikot, a key post on the Pakistani frontier.

Oxford professor certain poem was Shakespeare's

LONDON (AP) - By thee or not by thee? That was the question which swirled around a poem that an Oxford University professor said is by William Shakespeare but other scholars rejected as false.

"I'm convinced it is by Shakespeare," said Oxford's professor of poetry, Peter Levi, as he held up a photocopy of the untitled poem at the center of the tempest.

Levi called a news conference Monday - four days after his claim emerged in a London newspaper - to introduce a 28-page book he has written to prove the poem was written by The Bard.

Countess Professor Stanley Wolla, director of the Shakespeare Institute at Birmingham University: "I do not think for one moment it is by him."

The controversy had spread to the Huntington Library in San Marino, Calif., which has the disputed poem. Some experts claim the issue is not new - that the poem has been known of since 1801 - and some say it's not up to Shakespearean standards.

Levi has support from a manuscript scholar, Eric Sams, who says the poem may even be in Shakespeare's handwriting.

"I don't terribly mind what happens to my reputation," said Levi. "It would be a terrible act of cowardice not to have printed as a poem of Shakespeare what other people were too idle or too silly to notice."

He said he first read the untitled poem when he asked the Huntington Library for photocopies of several manuscripts for his Shakespeare biography.

The poem is pasted in the back of a manuscript volume containing a play by John Marston, a dramatist contemporary of Shakespeare, and bears initials that could be "W.S." or "W.S.H."

"I think it is 'W. Sh.' Otherwise why would Marston have written it?" Levi said.

"Without that signature I would not have been absolutely certain, but no one disputes that the writing is Marston's and I believe he was appending the initials of the poem's author."

Asked why the poem had been neglected since Shakespeare died in 1616, Levi commented, "I can't imagine. The verses have moved like the end of 'The Tempest.' They recall 'A Ye Like It' and 'Antony and Cleopatra.'"

"They are exactly what Shakespeare might have turned out," said Levi, 66, who has published 12 books of his own poems and written or edited 25 others.

The poem consists of tributes to be spoken by 14 identified ladies presenting gifts to Anne Chondos at her betrothal party in 1607.

Levi cited this verse to prove the poem was worthy of England's greatest poet:

"Witty, prety, virtuous and fair,
Comounded all of fire and air,
Sweet, measure not my thought and me
By golden fruit from fruitless tree."

"That's beautiful. It could be Shakespeare and I think the whole thing is by him," the professor said.

Levi said he worked from photocopies of the poem "because I can't afford to jump on a plane to California. I am poorly paid."

Lord Stockton, chairman of Macmillan publishers, handed reporters copies of Levi's book about the poem, "A Private Commission: New Verses by Shakespeare."

"I regard this as the literary event of the decade and perhaps of the whole period since World War II," Stockton said.

Denmark may cause NATO woe

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) - Secretary of State George P. Shultz told said NATO faces a problem if Denmark attempts to forbid U.S. warships with nuclear arms from docking at its ports.

"It's up to all of us to measure up to our responsibilities," Shultz said after briefing the North Atlantic Council on his talks last week in Moscow.

He acknowledged prospects were dim that the United States and the Soviet Union would conclude a treaty to halve their strategic nuclear arsenals in time for the May 29-June 2 summit meeting in Moscow.

"It's extremely difficult to get there," Shultz said at a news conference before flying home.

Shultz said if a strategic arms reduction treaty (START) is not signed by the Moscow summit, the Reagan administration would keep pushing in its twilight months for an accord. "We'll keep at it, we're not going to stop," he said.

But he disputed suggestions that superpower relations had slumped since December's signing of a treaty last year to ban intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

Citing the Soviet decision to withdraw an estimated 115,000 troops from Afghanistan, Shultz said of East-West relations, "I think the picture is one in which we see general progress."

After the session with the NATO allies, Shultz met privately with Uffe Elleman-Jensen, the Danish foreign minister, to register his concerns over a Danish Parliament resolution that could bar U.S. warships with nuclear arms from Danish ports.

pushed a measure in Parliament that required the government to tell visiting ships that nuclear arms are barred from Danish ports in peacetime.

For 30 years, Denmark has barred such ships from its ports, but the government avoided the provision by not asking ships if they were carrying nuclear arms.

UN council condemns PLO slaying

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - The Security Council voted 14-0 on Monday to condemn the assassination of PLO deputy commander Khalil al-Wazir.

The United States abstained from voting. It could have vetoed the resolution.

Tunisian officials and Israeli sources say Israeli commandos gunned down Wazir, the Palestine Liberation Organization's 52-year-old military commander, at his home in suburban Tunis on April 16. Israel has neither confirmed nor denied the allegations.

The Security Council resolution condemns the slaying but does not explicitly criticize Israel. However, the resolution approved today does refer to a 1985 resolution passed after Israel bombed PLO headquarters in Tunis. The 1985 measure condemned Israel and demanded that it refrain from further acts of aggression.

Raid by rebels leaves 7 dead

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) - Members of a rebel tribe raided a sleeping village, burned down eight bamboo huts and killed seven Moslem settlers, officials said Monday.

Another 12 villagers were hurt in the attack around midnight Sunday near the town of Kharachar in southeastern Bangladesh, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

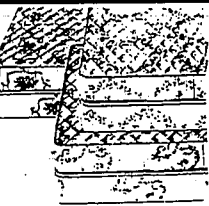

The Buddhist tribe, known as Chakmas, has been campaigning for more autonomy for over a decade. They claim their religion, customs and historic homeland are threatened by an influx of Moslem settlers.

Hailey airport accord dissolves in confusion

By BARBARA NEWERT
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — As planes flew in and out of Friedman Memorial Monday, words flew fast and furiously between co-owners of the airport.

An abrupt stalemate in negotiations on restructuring the Blaine County Airport Commission has developed between Blaine County and the city of Hailey just when the months-old issue appeared to be near resolve.

"I guess we're back to the drawing board," County Commissioner Robert Gardner said Monday after he and Commission Chairman Rupert House moved to withdraw the county's most recent proposal for restructuring the airport commission. Commissioner Alan Reynolds was absent from the meeting, but in a letter to the commissioners, Reynolds made clear that his views coincided with the motion.

Both the county and city have agreed in principle to the proposed joint operating agreement that would establish a nine-member board with four representatives from Hailey, four from the county and one additional, neutral member.

But the county withdrew its proposal after Hailey's city council objected to the proposal, citing three minor points and one more substantial point of concern.

The city recommended to the county the airport commission meet every month rather than every other month, the agenda be published two weeks prior to the meetings, and rather than have joint legal representation from the city attorney and the county prosecuting attorney, an independent attorney be appointed to advise the commission.

The county commissioners appeared to be somewhat agreeable to these changes, but it was the city's adamant stance on the fourth point, which brought negotiations back to square one.

The major obstacle the city found was a clause in the contract which made provisions for the airport commission to later revert to the seven-member structure it has been operating under since the 1985 Joint Operating Agreement. This would happen if the county and the city are not satisfied with the new composition of the airport commission at the end of a two-year trial period.

"Surely you must know reverting back to an agreement we didn't accept is not acceptable now," said Hailey Councilwoman Mary Ann Mix.

The Hailey City Council requested the airport commission be restructured six months ago and has remained steadfast in its demand to have equal representation on the board. The 1985 agreement calls for the airport board to be comprised of two Hailey City Council members, two county commissioners and one representative each from Bellevue, Sun Valley and Ketchum.

Hailey City Council President Joe Macarrillo said the majority of the board could align themselves against the city of Hailey if the 1985 agree-

Sterling shines once more before the end

By MARTA CLEAVELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Charles Allen wears two watches, one on each arm.

"So I'll always have time on my hands," said the co-owner of Sterling Jewelry.

He and his brother Howard, his partner for more than 40 years, will have plenty of time after they close the doors forever on the oldest jewelry store in Twin Falls.

Through the many years of changes from pink neon signs in the 1930s and 1940s, to presenting sterling silver teaspoons as souvenirs to all the graduating high school senior girls in the '50s and '60s, to the current inventory closeout sale of the present, the store has been an institution in town.

John Hepworth, a neighboring attorney, seemed to sum up the feelings of many customers when he pretended to try to force the door open Friday after hours crying in mock anguish, "You can't do this. You can't close. What will we do?"

But since none of their children wanted to take over the business they had acquired from their father, they are closing.

Charles is 72. Howard is 62.

"People used to come in and call Charles my father, and I'd start singing 'Oh, My Papa,'" Howard said.

They decided it was time to retire and enjoy life the way they have enjoyed the jewelry business.

The brothers considered selling the store to an outsider, but they were "unwilling to put the Sterling reputation in the hands of owners whose standards might not reflect the old-fashioned virtues of honesty, quality, and value which have been so important to us," they said in a letter of farewell to their regular customers last week.

'We spent plenty of time scrubbing that ceramic floor when we were kids.'
— Allen brothers

Sterling Jewelry began when Howard and Charles's father, Clarence, took over Priebe's Jewelry store in 1926, and changed the name. Priebe's was the first jewelry store in Twin Falls. It opened 1910 and was located in the Twin Falls Bank & Trust building on Shoshone Street.

The name Sterling Jewelers was chosen because Clarence Allen and his partner, Fred Carson, couldn't decide whether Allen & Carson or Carson & Allen had a better ring. There was a Sterling Jewelers in the Missouri town Clarence had come from. And beside, sterling is a word that represents quality, Charles said.

During the Depression, their father had the only license for miles around to buy raw gold to sell to the U.S. Mint. During the Depression, miners would come up out of the Snake River canyon every Saturday night and sell their gold to Sterling Jewelers, then spend their money in town. The business might have failed without that gold trade, Howard said.

'Every gift should carry two names — yours and Sterling's.'
— Company slogan

Although the two brothers worked in the store — "we spent plenty of time scrubbing that ceramic floor when we were kids" — they never thought much about going into the jewelry business themselves until they got out of the service after World War II. Their father died in 1944, and their mother had run the store until the boys decided to take over together in 1946.

Integrity has been one of the long-standing policies of the family business. For years a pocket watch that had been left for repair remained unclaimed. One day a man came for that watch. When quizzed about why he left it so long, he replied that he had been in Alaska for seven years and this was the first chance he had had to claim it. The Sterling's had been waiting faithfully.

The Allens have been life-long boosters of downtown.

After working to get the downtown mall built in 1970, they decided to move onto the Main Street mall themselves.

Howard had even done his own unscientific pedestrian traffic research on the old and new locations. He sat on a couch in the lobby of the Rogerston Hotel at the corner of Main and 2nd Avenue East. The new location had a lobby entrance. He counted the number of people who walked past in an hour. He counted more than 100. Then he stood outside the old location on Shoshone Street and counted. He only got to 11.

But doesn't that argue the case for a business to locate at the new Magic Valley Mall now instead of downtown?

Absolutely not, Howard said. They don't want anyone to think they are closing because business was poor at their downtown location.

The businesses that are downtown now are doing very well, and more and more new ones will come because the rent is much cheaper downtown than at the mall. Downtown is the perfect place for small shops that give personalized service, he said. Charles was all agreement.

The only real changes in merchandise in the last 60 years has been the elimination of china dinnerware and sterling silver flatware, and the addition of custom trophies and awards.

China and sterling flatware, which used to be common household items and frequent wedding and anniversary gifts, have grown too expensive. The volume isn't there anymore.

"The bridal business has probably changed more than anything else in the jewelry industry," Howard said.

They have often been kidded about their old slogan over the years, "Every gift should carry two names — yours and Sterling's."

But for the last 12 years they have concentrated their business on jewelry and less on giftware.

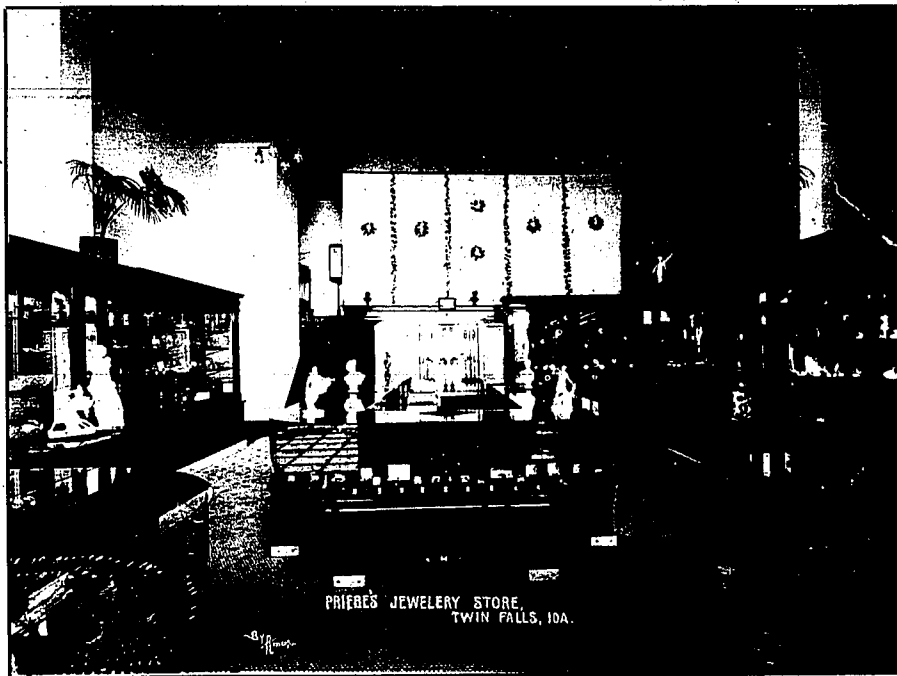

Jewelry is just like clothing. It follows fads and fashions. And Sterling was always up with both.

The brothers said they have never

Candidates speak

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Incumbent Idaho Rep. Jerry Callen of Jerome told Republican winners Monday that unlike opponent Gary Robbins of Dietrich, he is the team Republican in a three-way Republican primary race for his floterial seat.

"I'm accused of not being a team player, of being a right-wing conservative," Callen said. "I think he played on the governor's team in the waning hours" of last winter's legislative session.

Callen, a floterial representative for all of Magic Valley, is running against Robbins and ODeen-Redman of Albion in the May 24 primary.

Robbins, who left a relatively safe seat as District 22 representative, said the Republican party in Idaho is marked by extremists, like Callen, and needs to moderate its views to represent the wishes of Idahoans.

Callen, known for his conservative views, said Robbins supported repealing investment tax credits, a state tax break given to business and used mostly by large corporations. Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus has led a campaign for two years to repeal the credit.

Callen said the investment tax credit is one of the few tools Idaho has to encourage economic expansion.

Callen, Robbins and Redman spoke Monday at a lunch sponsored by the Twin Falls County Republican Women at the Canyon Springs Inn, held to give all Republican legislative and Twin Falls County candidates a

SIS waste storage poses risk

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The state Department of Health and Welfare is worried about a threat to the Snake River Plain Aquifer from long-term storage of radioactive waste produced by a proposed plutonium plant.

The Special Isotope Separation project at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory will produce 440,000 pounds per year — the equivalent of 11 tractor-trailer loads — of a type of radioactive waste known as transuranic.

Some 128,000 55-gallon drums of transuranic waste are in storage at INEL west of Idaho Falls in addition to what would be added by the plutonium plant. Much of it came from the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant in Colorado.

This plutonium contaminated material doesn't give off a lot of radiation but the radioactivity decays over a long period of time. Only half of it would be gone in 24,000 years, according to the U.S. Department of Energy.

The energy department plans dispose of the transuranics in salt caves in New Mexico, and the first waste will travel from Idaho to the Southwest later this year.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare says the energy department has no experience with this form of disposal.

The National Academy of Science investigated problems at the New Mexico site that could lead to the radioactive waste coming into contact with the environment.

But the problems are not severe enough to stop the facility from opening, according to Westinghouse, the contractor that will run the disposal site.

The energy department is supposed to be able to retrieve the wastes from the salt caves for a period of five years. If the waste were retrieved in the event of storage problems, it would be sent back to INEL, Idaho health officials said.

Idaho could be faced with long-term storage of 220 tons of transuranic waste per year and five tons of low-level waste per year generated by the SIS, said Richard H. Schultz, administrator, Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

"It does not appear that the geological characteristics at the INEL/SIS site would make it acceptable for long term storage of such waste; thus, the potential for long-term storage of waste over the Snake River Plain. Aquifer is concern," he said.

The aquifer is the lifeblood that southern Idaho depends on for its drinking and irrigation water. It is already contaminated with radioactive elements from past INEL operations, but the material is decaying rapidly and is not thought to pose a health hazard, according to INEL.

Schultz commented as part of the state response to a federal environmental impact statement on the plutonium plant.

The proposed plant would begin operation about 1995 at INEL west of Idaho Falls. The plutonium from SIS would be used to make nuclear weapons in Colorado.

Agencies ranging from the U.S. Agriculture Department to the state Department of Transportation offered opinions on the environmental report.

Many agencies pressed the energy department for more details, saying the impact statement was sketchy.

The state's response comes after statewide public hearings last month during which the project was roundly criticized.

Speakers voiced fears about contamination of the aquifer, radioactive air pollution, truck and rail accidents involving nuclear materials, and what would be done with the nuclear and hazardous waste from plant operations.

Many labeled the impact statement as false, incomplete and misleading.

Much of the hazardous or mixed (radioactive and hazardous) wastes from the plant will be indefinitely stored or disposed of at an INEL facility, according to Health and Welfare.

"Internal transportation is not covered under federal or state regulations in this case," said Steve R. Hill of the state's hazardous materials bureau. Explain in detail the transportation, record keeping and reporting of all on-site and off-site shipments, Hill told the energy department.

Another concern of state officials is earthquake activity.

Some 40 miles northeast of Arco, there was a major earthquake in 1983. Arco is located just west of the southwest corner of the INEL reservation.

The environmental statement needs more discussion of the earthquake potential at the plant, said Frank Sherman, state Department of Water Resources.

The environmental statement says an earthquake of a certain magnitude would spark fires at the plant.

Sherman urged a better explanation of how that earthquake was selected in the energy department's accident calculations.

Michael Mays of the state Hazardous Materials Bureau asked how much additional risk a worst-case accident would impose on those living within 50 miles of the plant. He wondered how this would compare to the risk if there were no SIS plant.

Gov. Cecil Andrus ordered the state agencies to review the energy department's environmental statement.

Andrus said, "I look forward to the economic boost the project represents, but I am not interested — and I don't think any Idahoan is — in a project that will pose a health or environmental threat."

Andrus' comments came in a letter to Clay Nichols, head of the plutonium plant project.

 special prosecutor would be improper and "muddy the waters."

However, in her written request to Meek, she said that "the Twin Falls prosecuting attorney might have a conflict of interest."

Kistler was charged last week with driving under the influence after he wrecked a Mercury Lynx near the Snake River Canyon northwest of Filer.

He has pleaded innocent to the charges and retained Jerome attorney Greg Fuller to represent him.

The one-car accident happened April 16 at 2 a.m.

The Idaho State Patrol filed driving under the influence charges, saying Kistler had a blood-alcohol level of between 0.16 and 0.17. A blood-alcohol level of 0.10 is required before a driver can be prosecuted for drunken driving.

A staff member under Peter Erbland, deputy attorney general and chief of the criminal law division, will be handling the case.

"It is, in our opinion, a very wise decision to make, because it removes from the case any question that the defendant is receiving a special treatment one way or other," Erbland said.

Erbland said his office, which is handling about 20 cases or investigations on request of county prosecutors, charges only expenses such as hotel rooms and mileage.

BOISE (AP) — Who should pay the income tax on a developer's contribution to install or upgrade a utility's connections to customers — the contributor, the utility or the ratepayer? Under a proposal from the majority of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission, the ratepayers would end up paying the tax on contributions to aid construction, such as line extensions to new buildings. But PUC President Dean Joe Miller contends the developer, or owner of the new building, should bear most of the tax burden. "In my opinion, it is unfair to impose a tax caused by developers upon ratepayers, many of whom cannot afford new homes and many of whom live below the poverty level," Miller said. Such contributions were exempt until the federal Tax Reform Act of 1986 began treating them as taxable income.

The PUC urges all utilities to follow the lead of Pacific Power & Light, which will continue to tax its shareholders, as it historically has in Idaho. The commission has proposed that, for small water and telephone companies, the developer should pay the full tax for the contribution. That applies to phone companies with less than 3,000 customers.

Continued from Page B1 really felt they were in competition with the other jewelry stores in town. "Our biggest competition these days might be the car companies," Charles said. "There are only so many luxury dollars to spend." A strong emphasis on service helped Sterling's remain popular for so many years. One day the Allens' Aunt Myrtle was given a watch by a customer to take to the store for repair. She put it in her purse and forgot it. When she remembered to turn in the watch several days later, she had forgotten who had given it to her. She only recalled that it was a woman in a green coat. The Allens went in search of the Cinderella of the watch, and after trying three or four women in green coats, they found the missing customer. Two long-time employees, Ruby Wyatt and Dorothy Thompson, are also retiring. But Richard Machamer, who has been with the store since 1951, will be taking over the trophies and awards department and will do watch repairs in his own new business in the same building. "We've had a lot of fun with it," Howard said. "But now it is time to play — with golfclubs and grandchildren."

Erosion study put on hold

POCATELLO (AP) — A study of pollution and erosion in the Portneuf River has been put on hold for the time being. The U.S. Soil Conservation Service has denied a funding request to study the entire drainage from the Fort Hall Indian Reservation to American Falls Reservoir, at least until 1990.

the river's second-leading sediment source. Somerville said the request was valid, but funds are not available because the Soil Conservation Service hopes to secure money for three other major river basin projects next year. They include evaluations of the Mud Lake, Teton River and Arbon Valley drainages.

Board settles dispute

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Land Board has approved a settlement that will allow dismissal of a lawsuit aimed at blocking developer Duane Hagadone's resort expansion and golf course project at Coeur d'Alene. But although there was no opposition to the settlement at a special Land Board meeting here Monday afternoon, board members indicated they weren't entirely happy with the process.

Hagadone has been working for months to win state approval for his resort expansion and golf course. Included in the golf course will be a unique floating golf course green and tee in Lake Coeur d'Alene. The Kootenai Environmental Alliance filed suit against the Land Board to block the project. The suit contended the state wasn't getting enough for the state property involved.

Gunshot proves fatal to Buhl man

BUHL — A Buhl man died early Monday morning after suffering a single gunshot wound to the head, officials said. Brent Ring, 35, was found shot in his home east of Buhl at around 5 a.m., said Twin Falls Deputy Coroner Jim Milden. He died after being transported to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. Milden said the shooting is still under investigation by the Twin Falls Sheriff's Office.

"What we told them was there is no way we are going to be able to fund this in 1988. Realistically, your proposal will probably not receive funding until 1990," said Mike Somerville, assistant state conservator for the federal agency.

In February, the Portneuf Soil and Water Conservation District and the Caribou Soil Conservation District received funds to develop a comprehensive plan for reducing streambank erosion, which has been identified as

He said officials should know by September whether appropriations for those projects will come through. Idaho typically receives about $200,000 annually for river basin studies. Gordon Hopson, source control field officer for the state Division of Environmental Quality, has said there have been enough studies done on Portneuf River. What is needed, he said, is funding to take corrective action.

Jerry Evans, state superintendent of public instruction, said he felt the agreement was "much ado about nothing" because it merely says that Lands Department Director Stan Hamilton is to take some actions, without specifying them. "I have some reservations about this," he said, although he voted for the settlement.

The board agreed earlier to sell about three acres of land reclaimed from the lake bed for $65,000. The KEA argued the property was worth up to $250,000. Monday, Hagadone Hospitality agreed to pay $130,000 for all the reclaimed land above the lake level of 2,128 feet in the golf course area. "Maybe we voted a little quick the first time," said state Auditor Joe Williams, referring to the doubled price the state's getting for the land. "I don't have any problems agreeing that they got a lot better deal than we had," said Andrus.

phone company, said the Legislature needs a good businessman like him to manage its budget.

Robbins said he decided to run against Callen because the Republican party needs to "create primaries" get the extremists out of the party.

The three-way race for Callen's seat is the most competitive in the Magic Valley, although no Democrat has filed for the seat.

"It's a way we in the party can get rid of the extremists and get to the middle and represent the people," Robbins said.

One Republican, Rep. Russ Newcomb of Twin Falls, said he regretted resigning his seat, but financial strains, including having three children in private colleges, forced him to go back to work full time.

Callen responded to Robbins' statements by saying he's a mainstream Republican.

"Someday, when I get it all straightened out, I'll probably do it again when an opening becomes available," Newcomb said.

"I'm no more conservative than I was 40 years ago," he said.

Gov. Cecil Andrus said he wanted it clear that in approving the settlement, the Land Board was not endorsing or giving approval for a related Hagadone project, construction of a 25-acre marina not far from his Coeur d'Alene Resort.

Airport

Referring to reverting to the 1985 agreement, Mix said, "That hammer is being held over the head of Hailey and that hammer should not be held over anybody — that is not good faith."

Hailey's new city attorney, Stephen Crabtree, offered a compromise solution to the stalemate.

Gardner disagreed with the city's concept of good faith. "When you talk about good faith, I thought the county conceded way too much to get this thing off center," he said.

He suggested extending the time period of the contract beyond the two years, plus including a means to review the acceptance of the restructuring three months before the contract ends. Crabtree said this would give time to fine-tune any problem areas and avoid going back to the 1985 agreement.

With Williamson's recommendation to withdraw the county's offer, Gardner moved to do so.

"I think the county would be selling the farm if we accept this recent offer," said the county's prosecuting attorney Ned Williamson, who drew up the written proposal for presentation to Hailey. "We have compromised ... we need some finality. We need to move on to the important affairs of the airport."

It is the county's position the airport commission is still a viable entity under the 1985 agreement and it plans to schedule an airport commission meeting in the near future. However, Hailey contends the airport commission is no longer valid since both parties in the joint operating agreement must agree to the terms of the contract and Hailey does not, said Councilwoman Dorothy Moore.

Mix asked the county commissioners why the proposal included a reference to reverting to the 1985 agreement when Reynolds' motion in March regarding the proposal did not include any mention of these terms.

The makeup of the board became an issue more than six months ago when Horizon began using a flight path directly over the city of Hailey to land its Dash-8 ski flights with a new microwave landing system. Hailey demanded half the votes on the airport board, but the other cities in the county were reluctant to give up their seats.

Williamson said he included the provision believing the contract was to be for a trial period on an experimental basis and there should be some means of control of the airport if the airport commission failed to work.

The county chose to divvy up its representation under the proposed agreement by having one county commissioner sit on the board along with one representative each from Bellevue, Sun Valley and Ketchum.

Mix argued that in addition to not having suitable representation, the 1985 agreement did not include a duration clause, leaving the question of how to void the contract.

Kids should learn time-tested values

DEAR ABBY: Your recent column piece on the top 10 problems of 1940 compared to those of today really struck a nerve. When I was in high school, our biggest problems were similar to those in Charles Osteen's letter — talking in the halls, chewing gum, etc. Today's teens have to cope with drug abuse, pregnancy, rape, robbery, etc.

There are seldom simple solutions to pervasive problems, but I have one I'd sure like to see tried. It is for parents to once again teach their children the time-tested values of respect for the law, their teachers, their elders, other people's rights and, most of all, for themselves as the future of this country. It is painfully obvious to me that many of today's youngsters are almost totally lacking in moral and ethical guidance; hence it is not surprising that they are in such deep trouble so often.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

Right here in my own neighborhood we are daily faced with school children who run amok, sass their elders, trespass on private property, trash the streets — all with their parents' approval, even encouragement. One father even had the gall to tell me that his kids had a "right" to play in the street in front of my home and if I didn't like it, I could move! Perhaps it's time once again for your "Ten Nays for Good Neighbors." Can do?

— R.L.A. (OLD COOT IN OXNARD)

DEAR R.L.A.: Can do. Here they are:

1. Thou shalt love thy neighbor, but not his wife, nor shalt thou covet thy

- neighbor's house, or his car, or any other thing he owneth.
2. Thou shalt keep thy dog, thy steers, and thy lawn mower quiet while thy neighbor sleepeth.
3. Thou shalt borrow from thy neighbor rarely, and when thou dost, return undamaged and without delay that which thou hast borrowed.
4. Thou shalt not allow thy pets or thy children to run amok, despoiling thy neighbor's lawn, flower beds and fence.
5. Thou shalt keepeth thy lawn green, thy fence painted and thy driveway uncluttered, even as ye shall also keepeth thy vehicles in thy garage where they belong.
6. Thou shalt watcheth always for criminals and fires in thy neighborhood and guardeth thy neighbor's home and property even as thine own.
7. Thou shalt not use thy home for any unsightly or illegal activity.

8. Thou shalt always stand ready to help thy neighbor in his hour of true need even as he doth for thee.
9. Thou shalt not parketh thy camper, thy RV or thy van in the street where it blocketh thy neighbor's view and creteth a safety hazard to all.
10. Thou shalt not hold wild parties or orgies that last until wee hours unless thou dost invite thy neighbor, too.

Atlanta's Ken Oberkfell reacts after striking out on a high two-strike pitch with two runners on base

High... and inside

Forget the balks; the high strike is changing the face of baseball

By BEN WALKER
The Associated Press

The problem is clear. Hitters are getting too far ahead of pitchers.

The solution is strange. Shrink the strike zone in the rulebook, call higher strikes in the games.

It sounds confusing, it is. No one is sure what the effect will be, not even the umpires, who are trying to enforce the change.

"It's second nature to us what a strike is," said Joe Brinkman, an American League umpire for 16 seasons. "Now, we'll have to constantly think about it."

Raising the actual strike zone by a few inches could be the biggest bat-pitch adjustment in baseball since the mound was lowered after 1968.

Here's what's happening:

The old rule defined the strike zone as between the batter's armpits and the top of his knees. But in reality, anything above the belt was a ball, particularly in the low-ball National League.

The new rule brings back the letter-high strike. The upper limit will be the midpoint between the top of the shoulders and the top of the uniform pants; the lower limit remains at the knees.

Technically, that is smaller than before. But the idea is that umpires will call those high strikes.

Hitters, who have seen home run totals go up to record rates, are not thrilled at seeing the strike zone go up, too.

"All our lives we've been taught to lay off that high pitch. It's a ball," Wade Boggs carped. "Now, do we have to swing at it?"

This season, Boggs and other batters do.

The players' union and owners have agreed to the change — along with tighter ball rules — for a one-year test period. After the season, both sides will review the results. Yet even if players don't want to continue the alterations, management can implement them in 1989.

Pitchers are excited about the strike zone becoming a twilight zone up top. Their strikeouts are at an all-time high, but they are giving up runs at an alarming pace.

Last year, 62 pitchers in the AL had earned run averages of over 6.00. Baltimore and Cleveland became the first AL teams with ERAs over 5.00 since 1956.

The NL, where scoring is about a half-run less because there is no designated hitter, is equally porous.

With higher strikes, those imbalanced numbers could come down.

"I heard about it in the off-season and I liked it," said Dwight Gooden, who has always enjoyed success with rising, chest-high fastballs. "So I thought this spring that if I got ahead in the count, I'd go up there but I haven't noticed any difference."

That's because sometimes there isn't any.

"I have not changed my strike zone at all," said Bruce Froemming, an NL umpire for 18 years. "I've always been accused of having a high strike zone, but the league felt, as a group, we weren't calling the higher strike."

Brinkman's zone has expanded.

"I'm calling it about a ball higher," he said. "It doesn't sound like much, but it is. This will be a major adjustment."

"The first game I had behind the plate this spring, I called about seven or eight strikes that I would've called balls last year," Brinkman said. "There were about nine or 10 the next time."

Few batters have argued about high strikes, in contrast to the protests pitchers and managers have lodged about increased balks.

No one is sure, and no one knows whether the change will more closely align the strike zones in the two leagues.

AL umpires have a reputation as high-ballers; NL umpires like low strikes.

The umpires, however, say there is little discrepancy.

"I don't think you can differentiate between the two leagues anymore," Froemming said. "A lot of that is because of the inside chest protector."

AL umpires used to employ bulky outside protectors, which prevented them from tucking behind catchers. The leagues now use the same form-fitting inside protectors and all umpires get the same view.

That doesn't mean everyone has the same view of the new strike zone.

Terry Kennedy, an All-Star catcher in both leagues, is caught in the middle. He wants more strikes for his pitchers, fewer strikes as a hitter.

"Why don't they just leave it alone?" Kennedy said. "Maybe they think pitching is too thin. But this is very unrealistic and not worth doing."

"Don't they have more important things in baseball to worry about instead of stupid rule changes?" he said. "Why don't they worry about the state of owner-player relations instead of trying to change the strike zone?"

T.F.'s Sellers agrees to deal with Minnesota

By The Times-News

MINNEAPOLIS — Twin Falls Lance Sellers Monday signed a free agent contract with the Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League.

Sellers, an inside linebacker who played during last season's NFL strike with the Cincinnati Bengals, underwent arthroscopic knee surgery in October for an injury he received during a game against the Cleveland Browns. He had been in-

NFL passes up Idaho in draft

By The Times-News

Boise State, Idaho State and Idaho were shut out in Sunday and Monday's NFL draft, the first time that's happened since 1978.

No players from the three Idaho schools were selected and only three from the Big Sky Conference as a whole were taken, the second-lowest total in history.

Boise State running back Chris Jackson, who had been widely expected to be selected in the draft, was reported en route from Boise to Dallas Monday night to discuss a free agent contract with the Dallas Cowboys.

BSU wide receiver Eric Andrade and defensive tackle Peter Kwiatkowski, Idaho State wide receiver Shawn Beals and tailback Butch Caston and Idaho wide receivers Nessia Morris and Eric Jorgensen all have had preliminary contacts with NFL teams and could be candidates for free agent contracts.

The three Big Sky players drafted Monday were Northern Arizona wide receiver Michael Haynes, the first player taken in the seventh round by the Atlanta Falcons; Montana offensive tackle Larry Clarkston, selected in the eighth round by the San Francisco 49ers, and Montana defensive end Pat Foster, chosen in the ninth round by the Los Angeles Rams.

There were seven graduates of the three Idaho schools on NFL rosters at the end of last season: Pittsburgh running back Merril Hoge (Idaho State), Tampa Bay strong safety Rick Woods (Idaho State), Seattle inside linebacker Sam Merriman (Idaho), Washington defensive end Markus Koch (Boise State), Washington kick returner Eric Yarber (Idaho), Atlanta inside linebacker John Rade (Boise State) and Atlanta tight end Donny Cox (Boise State).

Twin Falls, Minico get together for another must-win game

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — The string of must-win games stretches into a third week for Twin Falls and Minico's baseball teams.

The two ballclubs collide at 4 p.m. today at Frontier Field in a high school game the Bruins must win to stay in the hunt for the No. 1 seed and the host designation in the postseason Region III tournament.

Minico, just a game behind Twin Falls, Pocatello and Highland in the loss column, will be looking to change its luck after tough losses to the Bruins and the Rams.

"They're all important games from here on out," says Minico Coach Cory Bridges, whose Spartans have the most remaining opportunities — three games — to transform the five-team region. "We've just got to play better defense and not give up any (ungarned) runs."

The Spartans went into the seventh inning of last Tuesday's 9-6 loss to Twin Falls with a 4-4 lead before committing two errors and four walks to ignite the Bruins' five-run rally.

"It will be a tough game," predicted Bruin Coach Bill Ingram. "They were within a couple of outs of beating us in Rupert and they played Highland even except for one inning in their second game Saturday (which the Rams won 5-2)."

Bridges will send junior right-hander Dan Poulton (4-0) to face Bruin right-hander Barry Smith (1-0), the starter in last week's Twin Falls victory over Minico.

"I haven't seen Poulton pitch, but from from what I heard he looked good at the (Mini-Cassia Easter) tournament," said Ingram. "Basically, I think the team that makes the fewest mistakes will win the game."

The Bruins, 13-6 overall and 4-2 in Region III, will need some help from the Spartans to have a chance to get the No. 1 seed and a home-field berth at regionals. If Twin Falls wins its remaining regional games against Minico and Burley, it will end up the No. 3 seed in the region unless Minico beats Pocatello in Rupert May 7 or the Indians lose to Burley this week.

That's because Gem State Conference records would be the tiebreaker if three teams end up deadlocked with two losses apiece. As of now, the Rams are 10-2 in GSC games, Pocatello is 9-3 and Twin Falls is 5-5.

Region III

Team	W	L	Pct.
Twin Falls (13-6)	6	2	.750
Pocatello (11-6)	4	2	.667
Minico (8-10)	2	2	.500
Burley (10-10)	2	5	.400
Idaho Falls (10-10)	0	6	.000

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

A bad workman never gets a good tool.

— Thomas Fuller.

Play today's slam after West's accurate and embarrassing trump lead. Which way should you go to collect 12 tricks?

South wins the pesky trump lead and recognizes that his best chance is to plan on a crossruff. It he can score eight trump winners, the slam comes home with his top cards in the side-suits.

What happens if he ducks a diamond in his preparations to crossruff? West wins the second diamond to lead another trump, and the slam is doomed.

South knows he cannot afford to lose West lead a second trump, so he should duck a trick to East, and since he can't do this in diamonds, he does it in spades.

At trick two, South leads a spade to dummy and inserts the 10 when West plays low. East wins but has no trump to lead, so the slam is safe. South later discards one dummy's diamonds on his spade ace and can now crossruff safely for 12 tricks.

Can West foil this plan by playing his spade Jack at trick two? Not if South rises to the occasion. Dummy's king wins, and on the next round of spades, South leads the spade 10. South ducks. And what if East doesn't cover? South must let it go bravely and instead of 12 tricks, he makes a surprising 13.

This anthropologist believes 'Bigfoot' lives

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Sasquatch lives — at least in the heart and soul of Grover Krantz, whose search for the mysterious and elusive creature has brought him public notoriety and professional frustration.

The Washington State anthropology professor says there's been more than 1,000 reported sightings of Sasquatch, and "I've talked personally with 61 people. In 34 of them, I can't find anything wrong with their story."

Nevertheless, the tall, hairy and manlike creature said to inhabit the forests of the Pacific Northwest remains a myth in the minds of most.

Krantz, author of 16 publications on Sasquatch, said he is frustrated continually by members of his own profession who refuse to accept what evidence he and others have discovered, and thereby prevent him from obtaining research funds. He spoke recently at North Idaho College. Because of the size of footprints the creature reportedly leaves, it is also called "Bigfoot."

As evidence of his research, Krantz displays plaster casts of two sets of footprints taken within two hours of the time the Sasquatch allegedly made them.

In high resolution photographs of the casts, whorls similar to those found on human fingers, palms and feet were described as "too perfect to be man-made."

"If they are fake," Krantz said, "they had to be made by an extremely brilliant scientist, and I haven't known one capable of doing it since Leonardo da Vinci."

"When individuals start with pre-suppositions — if they believe the Sasquatch is a fake — then seeing evidence of it is obviously a fake."

Despite sightings worldwide of what Krantz described as a "possible cousin" of modern man, testimony by fingerprint experts that the whorls found in footprint casts are not faked, and a film made 20 years ago that shows the giant creature walking past and away from the camera, Krantz said his colleagues refuse to accept its existence.

Krantz said he has been told that to convince his peers that Sasquatch exists, he'd have to provide a body, and his remarks on that subject have been "distorted and in fact have been opposite of the truth."

However, Krantz does not deny he'd like to have a corpse or skeleton or any physical evidence of the Sasquatch to quiet his critics, and to open the door to research funds. His scheme now is to locate a Sasquatch "who has gone off to die," retrieve the corpse or skeleton, and prove to his critics that the Sasquatch exists.

"(The Sasquatch) would probably go for low territory, a place where there's water," he said. "He'll be ill going to this place to get better."

When the snow comes, the then-dead Sasquatch will be covered and invisible to human sight, but not to the infra-red device, he said.

Krantz is constructing an ultralight helicopter in which he plans to cover the selected territories. "I may end up finding a dead deer, a dead elk, or four campers piled on top of each other," he said, "but at least I'm trying."

Confusion reins in academia

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — A University of Washington business student whose dismissal and subsequent reinstatement in a women's studies class has sparked a controversy says he was intimidated by what he called "male-bashing" in the course.

"I felt about as welcome in the class as a black at a Klan meeting," Peter Schaub told a meeting of the state Senate Law and Justice Committee on Friday.

Schaub became the focus of a controversy after a dean, James Nason, banned him from an introductory women studies course during the winter quarter for alleged disruptive and threatening behavior.

The dean later reinstated him, and Schaub was given credit for the course although he had missed nearly half of the classes. The class is ungraded; one either passes or fails.

The controversy has sparked several emotional campus demonstrations, and Schaub has even been approached by television producers seeking rights to his story.

Class instructors and some students had alleged that Schaub's reinstatement was an attack on feminism and a violation of their academic freedom.

"I believe it was a violation of the rights of women in the classroom, not to know why he was reinstated," said Elizabeth Daugherty, who was a fellow student. She also claimed that she was verbally attacked by the 6-foot-2 inch, 220-pound Schaub.

Schaub and his supporters said they believe the instructors and their assistants were hostile and vehemently anti-male.

"There was male bashing during which all white males were described as child rapists and women abusers," said Schaub. "I had the feeling that if I were black or homosexual I wouldn't have been discriminated against."

Schaub, an amateur bodybuilder who likes to refer to himself as Peter Schwarzenegger after the bodybuilder-turned-actor, denied allegations he is anti-feminist, anti-homosexual or racist.

"I just think that this particular class hurts everyone. They say that everything is racist and sexist," he said. "They twist it so far out of proportion that someone will not even listen to them."

Committee Chairman Kent Pullen said the meeting was a fact-finding hearing and that he didn't believe it was the committee's job to delve into course content.

"I am confident the University of Washington administration can resolve this issue, but I have a personal interest in freedom of speech, the state's Equal Rights Amendment and the use of public funds for political purposes," said Pullen.

Boise keeps Mom and Pop

IDAHO CITY (AP) — As soon as you grab one of the time-worn brass handles and open one of the double doors, the aroma of Lee Hillyard's homemade cinnamon rolls overtakes your consciousness.

Before you get over the first impression, something else in the Idaho City Boise Basin Mercantile, est. 1868, distracts you — its brick-walled arches, floor-to-ceiling shelves, an antique coffee bin, colorful foodlines and printed wooden produce boxes tucked away on the top shelves.

Pointing to those brick walls, a former owner of the Merc, Don Campbell says: "They took the clay to make the bricks right out of the creek. It's possible there's quite a bit of gold in these bricks."

Every small Idaho town used to have a store like this. They were a larder for supplies — both food and farm and an early central communication point where folks swapped stories about friends, kin, the weather, crops, joys, pain.

The Mom and Pop stores — landmarks in design and function — are just about gone.

'The general store was a social center...It served a social function as a main gathering place in the community.'

John Bertram, photographer

Both for store owners and customers the roots of friendship and service run deep.

Susan and John Bertram have traveled around the state photographing and interviewing operators of general stores. They put together a photo exhibit that can be seen at the Idaho Historical Museum in Boise.

The Bertrams' research, with the help of a $2,000 grant from the Idaho Humanities Council, told them what they probably already suspected.

"The general store was a social center. Customers sat around the pot-bellied stove and talked. It served a social function as a main gathering place in the community," John said. "They also carried a lot of people. They played a banker's role."

The store owners exhibited a willingness to serve and a friendly character that is rapidly disappearing.

In Boise, two of these stores cling to a fading tradition: the Roosevelt Market and the Hollywood Market.

Gary and Candace Turner moved to Boise from Los Angeles six years ago and bought the Roosevelt Market, built more than 75 years ago.

"We came up here to change our lifestyle," Candace said. "And to raise our kids."

Margaret Lawrence, who is co-owner of the Hollywood Market, also believes she's doing her part in service to people when she delivers groceries. And she maintains charge accounts for long-time customers, knowing she may get burned by non-payment of accounts on occasion.

"I think that we all have to feel that we are doing something worthwhile and we all have to be useful," she said.

'Pride' returns

Pride of Baltimore sails into San Diego Harbor in February, 1983. When the Pride of Baltimore II is launched April 30, nearly 2 years will have passed since its namesake and 4 crewmembers disappeared when the ship capsized in a squall 240 miles north of Puerto Rico.

Chicagooan defends starlings

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Mark Spreyer doesn't mind when people say his job is for the birds. Even his business cards read: "Mark Spreyer, the naturalist nobody likes, defending the species nobody wants. Starlings my specialty."

Spreyer never meant to become an advocate for one of the nation's least-liked birds, but the 31-year-old ornithologist for the Chicago Academy of Sciences thinks they're getting a bad rap as messy invaders who take over other birds' turf.

He recently delivered a lecture titled "In Defense of Starlings" before the National Wildlife Rehabilitators Association in Denver, and he has also spoken on the birds' behalf in New York and Orlando, Fla.

He even has one for a pet. Rod Starling shares Spreyer's suburban Barrington apartment, has learned to talk and has been known to fly to the telephone when it rings and get the receiver off the hook.

Some of Spreyer's enthusiasm has caught on, according to a local veterinarian, Peregrine Wolff, interviewed by the Chicago Sun-Times recently after encountering Spreyer's pet.

"My opinion of starlings was not very high before I met this bird," said Wolff, who said Rod imitated Spreyer's telephone bell and answering-machine beep, and then in a Hitchcockian twist, said clearly, "This is Mark Spreyer."

Starlings are related to talking myna birds, and Spreyer said Sunday their talent as mimics helped them wing their way into his heart. "I'm embarrassed to admit it now, but eight years ago, I used to consider them as owl food," said Spreyer. Spreyer became better acquainted with starlings two years ago while preparing for a lecture on urban wildlife, which includes other European imports such as house sparrows and pigeons.

"People are trained to think all introduced things are bad and all native things are good," Spreyer said Sunday. "I've come to realize that we have to deal with the environment as it is today."

Starlings, which often gather in large, noisy flocks, have gotten an undeserved bad reputation as mess-makers and nuisances, while their good points are overlooked, he said.

While most birds have strong squeezing muscles in their beaks to enable them to crack nuts, for example, starlings have mighty muscles for prying things open, adapting them perfectly for digging up cutworms and other pests.

Finances jeopardize unique native-American radio

Laura Wittstock, producer of 'First Person Radio,' and Dale Means, adviser.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A radio program which bills itself as the "voice of Indian America" is fighting to survive as the only nationally broadcast native American news program, its founder says.

"First Person Radio" is heard on 32 stations in 13 states, down from 59 stations in 26 states, said Laura Waterman Wittstock. And financial troubles for public radio have clouded the program's future, she said.

"We're sort of passengers in a sinking ship, so to speak, because the Indian-owned radio stations are in equally distressed situations," Wittstock said recently.

The half-hour weekly news and commentary program is produced by Migiz Communications, an 11-year-old, non-profit organization based in Minneapolis. Migiz is Ojibwe for eagle.

"The eagle symbolizes messages, and also it's a symbol of high standard," Wittstock said. "We wanted to have the highest standards of Indian journalism, to train more Indians into journalism and to develop a national news service."

And the show enables Indians around the country to feel part of a community. In southern Alabama, it serves 1,859 members of the Porch band of Creek Indians. "We're the only reservation in Alabama. The cultural exchange is really important," said Dale Gehman, a Creek Indian who is general manager of WAG-AM in Atmore, Ala. "I don't know what we'd do without it."

Alaska Public Radio offers separate stories about Indians which are distributed by National Public Radio, but not in the format of a regular broadcast program, according to NPR.

Correspondents in New-Mexico and Idaho regularly file stories to give "First Person Radio" a national flavor, Wittstock said. But affiliated stations have been unable to offer many stories because they are also struggling and have little time left over to make contributions, she said.

"The '80s have been disastrous for radio — not just Indian radio," she said, adding that interest in sponsoring minority radio programs has lost favor to shows with mass appeal.

So why do Wittstock and Dale Means, the show's program adviser, struggle to keep "First Person Radio" on the air?

"I feel there is a market for Indian programming, but nobody is doing it," said Means, brother of former American Indian Movement leader Russell Means. Dale Means helped start KILI-FM on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota that went on the air in 1983 to mark the 10th anniversary of the Wounded Knee occupation.

Early on, KILI and Migiz, which received promotional support from the American Indian Movement, were criticized within the Indian community because of that association, Means said. "It wasn't an AIM podium, so to speak. That's one of the good things about the radio station," he said. "On occasion, it had some critical comments about AIM itself."

Mick Fleetwood weds long-time girlfriend

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — It's not a rumor. Mick Fleetwood, patriarch of Fleetwood Mac, is married.

The 200 guests Sunday afternoon included Stevie Nicks and other band members, past and present, as well as Malibu neighbors Dick Clark and Ali MacGraw, singer Dave Mason and Jeff Lynne of the Electric Light Orchestra.

Fleetwood, 40, and his longtime girlfriend Sara Recor, 32, recited their vows at Fleetwood's home on a bluff overlooking the Pacific, said publicist Mitchell Schneider.

The rock bandleader wore a white tux with tails and the bride wore a white gown. Friend and fellow band member John McVie was best man.

The couple will return from a brief honeymoon later this week for the band's scheduled trip to England, Schneider said.

The venerable band was formed in 1967 and has gone through many personnel changes while producing such hit albums as "Rumours" and singles like "Over My Head,"

Mary Hart fulfills dream performing on the stage

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — From television host to Vegas showgirl — not the usual route to stardom. But Mary Hart has the legs for the job.

MARY HART
She's living her dream

In a show that ranged from torrid dance numbers to Gershwin ballads, the "Entertainment Tonight" host made her Vegas debut at the Golden Nugget as the opening act for comedian David Brenner.

"It's been a dream of mine for years to be singing and dancing on stage," she told her audience in a weekend show.

Hart said she decided to give song-and-dance a try after appearing last year on a television special marking 75 years of entertainment in Las Vegas.

She is commuting nightly from her "Entertainment Tonight" post to Las Vegas for the show, which runs through May 3.

She opened the 45-minute show with a dance number entitled "Hot Legs."

"I certainly hope you're a leg man," she told a man sitting near the stage.

"I not, I'll change," he responded.

Julio Iglesias performs for Chinese television

BEIJING (AP) — Same time next year if you want to hear Spanish crooner Julio Iglesias take a shot at Chinese.

Iglesias crooned love songs in Spanish, French and English to an enthralled studio audience as he recorded a program for China Central Television on Monday, the official Xinhua News Agency reported.

With hostess Wei Hua, Iglesias performed a duet of his hit song, "To All the Girls I've Loved Before," which he has recorded with country star Willie Nelson.

Iglesias sang 19 songs during the concert, to be aired nationwide in two 50-minute segments in late May. Xinhua quoted Iglesias as promising to return next year and "bring my band with me and sing Chinese songs in Chinese."

Baby Doc to stand trial for his Haitian finances

AIX-EN-PROVENCE, France (AP) — Former dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier must stand trial in France on a civil suit brought by the Haitian government over the diversion of $120 million in public funds, a court ruled Monday.

The appeals court ruled France has jurisdiction to hear Haiti's demand for money it claims Duvalier, known as "Baby Doc," took during his 15 years in power. Trial was set for June 27.

The Haitian government has accused Duvalier and members of his entourage of diverting $120 million to personal use. Haiti says Duvalier used the money to buy jewelry, luxury cars, a castle near Paris and other property.

"It is very satisfying for us," Yann Colin, representing the Haitian government, said of the ruling.

Corbin Bensen barely resembles his character

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Corbin Bensen, the sleazy divorce lawyer on television's "L.A. Law," says his real-life persona only vaguely resembles the image he projects on screen.

"I'm like him in that we are both ambitious and career-minded. I'm unlike him in that I just won't step on people the way he will," the 33-year-old Bensen said in a recent interview.

Bensen does lift weights and he sweats over his rowing machine at his Malibu home, just as Arnie Becker does on his Pacific coast estate.

But Becker's womanizing doesn't carry over in Bensen's private life. Once married, Bensen says he is now single and in love.

Convicted rapist Lawrence Singleton, 60, takes a lie detector test in San Rafael, Ca.

Singleton begins parole soon

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The rapist who savagely mutilated a teen-age girl nine years ago is free from parole today, but friends of Larry Singleton worry about his safety wherever he tries to settle.

When Singleton was paroled from prison a year ago, furious protests followed him from town to town as state officials tried to find a place for him to live.

Protesters were outraged that the 60-year-old former merchant marine served only eight years for his crime, a six-year reduction because of good behavior and work credits.

After Gov. George Deukmejian intervened, Singleton wound up in a mobile home on the grounds of San Quentin prison. Last week officials moved him to an undisclosed location.

As of midnight Sunday, Singleton was under no obligation to tell prison officials his whereabouts. He has told Thomas Clyde Smith Jr., leader of the Bride of Christ Church in Azalea, Ore., he would like to live there after first visiting his sister in Florida.

But his safety is uncertain, say some of Singleton's supporters.

After news reports Singleton might live at the Oregon church farm, several shots were fired at his buildings, said Bob Plath, an attorney and member of Teachers Network Foundation, a religious group that befriended Singleton during his parole.

"This is a country of laws," Plath said in a recent interview. "He served his time. He has a right to be left alone and left in peace."

Singleton's victim, Mary Vincent, lives in seclusion in the Pacific Northwest, and said in published interviews recently that her fear has been revived by Singleton's impending freedom.

"I'll never get over this," said Vincent.

Singleton hacked off her forearms with an ax on Sept. 25, 1978, and left her for dead in Stanislaus County, 45 miles east of San Francisco.

She recently had Singleton served with a $2.4 million judgment won in a civil lawsuit against him last year in Nevada. She filed the Nevada order in Orange County Superior Court earlier this month after Singleton wrote to county prosecutors asking that they investigate his claim that it was Vincent who attacked him.

Public outrage has continued almost unabated since Singleton's release.

"Here's a girl who lost her arms and will never get them back, and here's the guy who did it. He got 14 years and he's out in eight," said Stanislaus County District Attorney Donald Stahl, who prosecuted Singleton.

"There ain't no justice — it's the thing I hear over and over and over from everyone."

Prisoner may pay jailers rent

CHICAGO (AP) — An inmate who claims he inherited $2.5 million may not have to wait for freedom to start spending it, state officials said Friday, because if he really has the money they want him to fork over room and board.

"It seems only fair ... for inmates who have the resources to repay their debt to society, while they're paying their debt to society," said Department of Corrections spokesman Brian Fairchild.

"We're going to go after the money if it's there."

Tony Fieldman, convicted of robbing a Chicago cab driver of $60 at knifepoint on Dec. 27, 1986, told authorities at Joliet Correctional Center his mother died and left him the money, officials said.

But "we're not sure that he has in fact inherited $2.5 million," Fairchild said. "He has supplied nothing to us other than a death certificate for his mother, which is a year old."

If Fieldman's claim is true, corrections officials plan to seek a court order to make him pay for the estimated $16,000-a-year cost of housing, Fairchild said.

Fieldman, who began serving an eight-year sentence March 25, could be eligible for early release for good behavior in four years, Fairchild said.

He would run up a tab of about $64,000 for a four-year stay, about the amount he would receive in interest on the inheritance in that period, the spokesman said.

Fieldman, 36, of Chicago, apparently fears greedy inmates who got word of the purported windfall, and was moved to protective custody earlier this week at his own request, Fairchild said.

East prices corporations out

The Associated Press

STAMFORD, Conn. — Two decades ago, affordable housing and a good highway system lured dozens of major companies to Connecticut's suburbs of New York City. Today, highways are clogged, $600,000 homes are considered pedestrian, and a corporate exodus may be on the horizon.

The waves of growth from New York's global market, which once brought treasures to Connecticut's "Gold Coast," now threaten to erode some of its most precious economic gains.

Over the past year, at least a half dozen big companies have announced plans to close or relocate their Fairfield County operations—and many more are said to be considering such moves. A recent survey of 300 local manufacturers found a third considering partial or total relocations.

The main gripe: The suburbs, which used to have the location without the cost of the Big Apple, have grown so clogged with people and cars that life here is no longer a bargain.

"Most people who make a move do a lot of looking and if they're after big cost differences, there's no longer a big cost difference between New York and Fairfield County," said Peter Helle, chief operating officer of the William Pitt real estate company, which has 16 offices in Connecticut.

"So, if they're looking for a lower-cost area, they're bound to move off the East Coast."

Housing prices have soared so that many homes are out of the reach of even some two-income families. In Greenwich, the average price of a home has risen from $86,730 in 1970 to $706,150 last year, said Stanley

Klein, publisher of the Greenwich Record of Real Estate Sales.

He said the "American Dream" — a four-bedroom home on one acre of land in Greenwich — costs a family about $540,000 today.

Howard T. Owens, a state senator from Bridgeport and chairman of the General Assembly's Transportation Committee, describes the situation on Interstate 95 and the Merritt Parkway — the region's major highways — as "absolutely horrendous."

"It's gridlock from 6:30 a.m. to after 8:30. A ride from Bridgeport to Stamford should take 25 minutes but takes more than one hour, and if you're stuck in mass transit it's even worse by the year 2000, we'd still have hopeless gridlock," Owens said.

William S. Woodside, former chairman of Primerica Corp., said if some of these trends aren't stemmed, Fairfield County could become a pasture for top executives with little company because people who work in the trades, restaurants and other businesses won't be able to afford to live here.

Woodside, who moved Primerica's headquarters to Greenwich in 1970 when it was "American Can Co.," is chairman of the Regional Plan Association, an economic planning organization for the tri-state region of Connecticut, New Jersey and New York.

He said that when companies moved to Connecticut in the 1970s, housing was affordable, land was plentiful and an ample labor pool was available.

"The county has changed dramatically already," he said. "Greenwich has closed schools in the last 10 years and they do that because they no longer have enough kids to use the schools. No young people can afford to live in these cities."

Evidence of a possible corporate exodus cropped up in 1987, when at least six companies pulled out of the area.

Georgia-Pacific Corp. announced it would move most of its regional operations from Darien to its corporate headquarters in Atlanta. The Fortune 500 forest products company employed 320 people in Darien, making it the town's single largest employer.

Revere Copper and Brass Inc., which had moved from New York to Stamford about two years ago, said it planned to relocate its headquarters in the Midwest.

Penn Central Corp. said it would move its headquarters from Greenwich to Cincinnati.

Stauffer Chemical Co. announced it would close its headquarters in Westport. Its three main businesses were split up and the headquarters are moving to Shelton, Conn., Wilmington, Del., and Chicago.

Electrolux Inc. said it would shift its headquarters from Stamford to Atlanta.

Omega Corp. returned to Utah only a year after moving its headquarters to Stamford.

Most cited the need for "consolidation" as the reason for leaving, but one knowledgeable observer said the high cost of staying in the area was a contributing factor.

"Essentially those who can break away and have no need to be in the command center of the global market are finding other locations and being in a sense pushed out or at least costed out by those who have to have that location," said John Keith, president of the Regional Plan Association.

Gregg Oehler holds copies of Vietnam magazine

Vietnam magazine tries to explain war

The Associated Press

BOSTON — An old generation is remembering the Vietnam war and a new generation is curious, stirring a revival of the controversial era in books and movies. Now comes a new publication, a slick magazine simply named Vietnam, whose premiere issue went on sale recently.

"Our timing could not have been better because right now, look at all the Vietnam movies that have come out," said publisher Gregg R. Oehler in a telephone interview from Leesburg, Va., where the magazine is published by Empire Press. "Look at all the major emphasis now on video, on books. It's Vietnam. Everyone now is talking about Vietnam."

Oehler said 150,000 copies of the first issue were printed, including 50,000 for subscribers and 100,000 for newsstand sales across the United States and in 16 other countries. The magazine, a quarterly, sells for $2.95 a copy on newsstands and for $9.95 for the four issues by subscription.

Oehler said the response has been so overwhelming from wholesalers, subscribers and the media that the magazine will probably go to six issues a year in 1989. Many of the subscribers are Vietnam veterans, a large number of them in prison.

"I've gotten hundreds of letters from Vietnam veterans in prison," said Oehler. "They're so happy to hear that a magazine is coming out."

Each issue will run 68 pages with a regular format of four feature stories and six departments, including editorial, fighting forces, bases and installations, arsenal and book reviews.

The initial issue includes an interview with Gen. Fred C. Weyand, America's last military commander in Vietnam, and a story on Tan Son Nhut Air Base, the command center for America's forces in Vietnam which was called the "Pentagon East." It also includes 32 pages of color photographs and maps. The cover shows two soldiers defending their post with a machine gun.

Chosin survivor recalls

KAYSVILLE, Utah (AP) — The senior general of the Chinese Army wanted the Marines killed "as you would snakes in your homes," recalls Jerry Eitner, a sergeant in the First Marine Division fighting in North Korea in late 1950.

"He'd never been so cold, or so hungry — and the carnage of the battle of Chosin Reservoir is etched permanently on his memories."

Eitner and 15,000 other United Nations troops were outnumbered nearly 10-to-one by more than 120,000 soldiers from the People's Republic of China.

"We were totally surrounded. Of course we didn't know it then, but we were told later that the Chinese had been given orders to totally annihilate the allied forces — to the man," he said.

It had only been three years since Eitner had graduated from West High School in Salt Lake City. It hadn't been that long since he had double-dated and eaten hamburgers and fries at the local soda shop.

In mountainous North Korea, Eitner was huddled in sub-zero temperatures, scraping rock-hard food out of a can with a bayonet. It destroyed in his mouth.

"I'd get down to 40 below zero. I can't describe that kind of cold. I'd never been that cold in my life and am never going to get that cold again," he said.

On this day in February 1988, it is warm in the office of Clover Club Foods in Kaysville, where Eitner sits behind a desk. Eitner, now a South Ogden resident, is director of sales for the food company, where he's worked for 35 years. He paused, taking a sip of coffee, and then folded his hands together.

"It's hard to convey what a dramatic thing we were involved in over there," he said. "By the time I got there, everyone thought the worst part of the war was over, that we'd be home for Christmas. I figured I'd be able to go home and tell everyone what it was like. I didn't think I'd be able to go home and say I'd seen that kind of suffering, the kinds of death."

$500,000 spent fighting slander nets $2 return

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — After 6½ years and an expense of $500,000, Barbara and Frederick Hughes have a jury finding that they were slandered — and a buck apiece in their pockets.

"I got my name cleared," Hughes said Wednesday after jurors ruled that Greater Palm Beach Symphony Chairman Ethel Stone, 73, slandered the Hugheses during a disagreement over funds that was aired at a symphony board meeting in August 1981.

All three were involved in fund-raising and operations of the symphony, a central part of the social scene in socially conscious Palm Beach.

Barbara Hughes, 59, worked as treasurer for the symphony in 1981. Frederick, 72, was on the board of directors.

So it caused something of an uproar in the posh resort community when Mrs. Hughes and Ms. Stone, both of Palm Beach, accused each other of misappropriating symphony property and money. Ms. Stone sued the Hugheses for defamation. The Hugheses countersued Ms. Stone.

Ms. Stone agreed to settle her lawsuit against the Hugheses out of court in December last year when Hughes' insurance company offered $150,000. The Hugheses plan to appeal that settlement.

"We spent over a half-million dollars," Mrs. Hughes said, referring to their own lawsuit. In return for their time and expense, a jury awarded the couple $2 in damages.

At that 1981 meeting, Ms. Stone told the board — in view of television cameras — that the Hugheses had improperly handled symphony money. During the two-week trial, jurors watched tape of the statements, which Brown said Ms. Stone made after consulting with an attorney.

After Palm Beach Circuit Judge Daniel Hurley read the verdict Wednesday, Ms. Stone said she thought she had been advised before the meeting by the best law firm in town.

Despite the victory in principle for the Hugheses, trial analyst Ken Nell, who assisted attorney Thomas O'Grady in representing the Hugheses, thought the six jurors ignored the damage done to the Hugheses when they determined the $2 award.

"I'm stunned how $1 will compensate Mr. Hughes," Nell said, noting how much more Ms. Stone reaped in December from the out-of-court settlement by the insurance company.

"She never went to trial, she never proved a thing, and she got $150,000," Nell said. "We went to court for two weeks and got this."

The trial attracted attention for the years of bitterness and thick volumes of court documents it has generated. After the charges and countercharges were made in 1981, the Hugheses told the state attorney's office that symphony records and $100,000 in cash and donations were missing.

SHAPE OF YOUR FACE

How would you describe the shape of your face? Seven face shapes are generally recognized: oval, round, square, pear, oblong, diamond and heart.

Long-distance running in competition will be called "pedestrianism." One such runner of renown - in the 1860s - was an American Indian named Deerfoot. It was he who fixed the long-held conviction that Indians could outrun whites anywhere anytime.

Sorry, can't vouch for the claim that parsley, rubbed into the armpits, makes an effective deodorant. You'll have to try yourself.

FEMALE FANS

Which professional sport has the most female fans?
 A. Hockey. That's per capita. Almost half the hockey spectators are female. Sometime back, a female client wrote: "I love hockey. I fantasize that I'm the puck and all those men are fighting over me."

"Give me the luxuries of life," said Frank Lloyd Wright, "and I'll willingly go without the necessities."

Q. Who invented buttons?
 A. The Chinese, name unknown. About 2000 B.C. First buttons were carved seashells. Decorations, not fasteners.

BRIGHT IDEA

Sir, you say you're still looking for that one bright idea to make your fortune? Nothing to it. Dream up something for people to do during TV commercials. Seventy percent of the groupings watch TV in the evening. But only one in every eight of those does nothing else.

Q. I know the rate of drug addiction among physicians is higher than that of the general population - but by how much?
 A. Five times higher. That's one informed estimate.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You will have to use a considerable amount of tact in order to keep a difficult situation from mushrooming into a major problem. Be sure to keep any agreements you have made, and pay attention to details.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Work on finding a way to improve your efficiency this morning, and don't let a minor delay keep you from handling more important matters.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Some plans you have made for fun with your friends may be disrupted by a monetary problem. Avoid a greedy associate tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): If you decide to get involved in a new recreation, make sure it isn't too expensive. Make time for a chat with a favorite family member.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Take care of important telephone calls and correspondence early today. Don't do anything to upset your mate this evening.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): If you let a silly acquaintance get under your skin, you could miss out on a great opportunity. Don't be forceful in trying to achieve your goals.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): This is not a good day to ask any favors of your superiors. Your mood will improve if you seek out the company of your good friends.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Before you start on a new project, make sure you won't become bored halfway through it. It is important that you drive with care.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): If a good friend of yours is feeling somewhat disparaged, encourage this person to rely more on his or her own fine abilities.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Don't dispute the directives of a person in a position of power. Pay particular attention to credit and other financial matters.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Don't allow a self-serving co-worker to annoy you or break your concentration. A trip may be coming up soon, so be ready for this.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): You have made several promises to friends, so be sure you are filled in on the details. Make sure you don't spend too much money tonight.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You should be particularly gentle with your family and friends this evening, or you could find yourself involved in a big argument.

If Your Child Is Born Today... He or she will be very precise in all undertakings, and will have a talent for forming long-lasting relationships. Teach your progeny not to sacrifice the opportunity to achieve great success by hard work for a little pleasure. Sports are a must for this energetic child.
