Dukakis, Bush win Pennsylvania primaries

The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Michael Dukakis certified his status as the Democratic presidential front-runner on Tuesday with a thumping 2-1 triumph over Jesse Jackson in the Pennsylvania primary.

George Bush won a resounding Republican victory and predicted the state would deliver the final delegates needed to clinch the nomination.

By their victories, Bush and Dukakis emerged as almost certain opponents in the fall general election campaign — survivors of a marathon that once featured seven Democratic candidates and six Republicans.

Dukakis was gaining 65 percent of the Democratic vote and said his victory would be "very very helpful" in his quest for the White House.

Jackson was gaining 30 percent of the Democratic vote, and said he intended to compete through the last primary on June 7. "I'm a long-distance runner," he said. "It's too close now to turn around."

Vice President Bush campaigned across Ohio during the day, declaring, "We're almost getting down to the main event. According to the AP, this evening I'll capture enough delegates in the Pennsylvania primary to exceed the 1,139 (Republican) convention delegates needed for the nomination."

Bush was gaining 79 percent of the vote to 12 percent for dropout Sen. Bob Dole and 9 percent for former television evangelist Pat Robertson. President Reagan avenged to drop his studies on Wednesday. and bestow his blessings on his vice president in a White House meeting on Wednesday.

The GOP delegate count was far slower than the popular vote. Bush needed to win 58 of the 78 delegates at stake to clinch his majority in the Associated Press delegate count, and he seemed certain to get them. Bush won all of the first 14 tallied, with the rest of the races still being counted.

Dukakis won a separate landslide in election of delegates, leading for 165 to 12 for Jackson. One was uncommitted. That would bring Dukakis' national delegate total to 1,266, compared to 860 for Jackson. It takes 2,081 to clinch nomination.

With 73 percent of the Pennsylvania vote in, the Democratic vote was:

Dukakis, 745,930, or 65 percent.

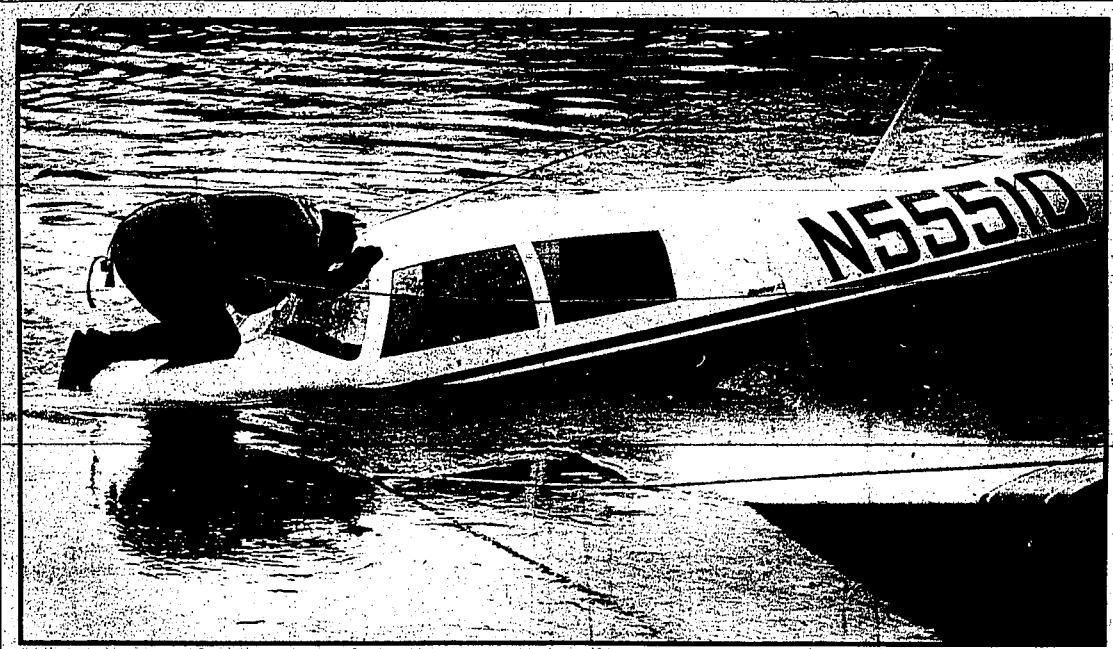

Jackson, 344,284, 30 percent.

On the Republican side, it was:

Bush, 447,504, 79 percent.

Dole, 68,402, 12 percent.

Robertson, 53,166, 9 percent.

Nation's schools 'on mend'

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan said Tuesday that American schools are on the mend thanks to a restoration of discipline, homework and basic skills, but "we still have a long way to go."

At a ceremony marking the fifth anniversary of the landmark "A Nation At Risk" report, Reagan said a new critique from Secretary of Education William J. Bennett "will help us find the way."

But outside the White House, several hundred teachers rallied in Lafayette Park to protest the Reagan administration's policies and heard Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., call Bennett "the secretary of ignorance."

Reagan said the school reforms pushed by his administration have brought "truly revolutionary" changes to American schools.

He said the National Commission on Excellence in Education, whose 1983 report warned of a calamity approaching from "a rising tide of mediocrity" in U.S. schools, "helped heighten and accelerate a wave of education reform in states and communities all around the country."

He said it led many states to install career ladders and merit pay for teachers, and many schools placed "a new emphasis on quality and discipline, more homework, more attention to basic skills."

"This was truly revolutionary after two decades in which money had been the only measure of progress in education and in which while federal spending on education went steadily up, test scores fell steadily downward. Too many schools accepted the fashions of the day, fashions of liberal culture that held traditional standards in scorn," Reagan said.

"The key to what works is not money or being in a prosperous neighborhood, but establishing a direction... setting standards," the president said.

Bennett told Reagan the bottom line of his report, "American Education: Making It Work," is that

Salvage crew shuts sub hatch

The Associated Press

NORFOLK, Va. — Salvage crews briefly boarded a fire-ravaged submarine Tuesday and closed a hatch to keep high waves from washing in and sinking the boat before it can be searched for three missing crewmen.

Nineteen of the 22 sailors injured were discharged from a hospital in Jacksonville, Fla., on Tuesday.

Meanwhile, a civilian submarine expert said the explosions and fire that disabled the diesel-electric submarine USS Bonfish off the Florida coast were typical of such pre-tender subs. "It's the classic way the diesel-electric submarines go down the tubes in peacetime," Norman Friedman, author of "Submarine Design and Development," said in a telephone interview from his New York City home.

The Navy crew that closed the deck hatch on the Bonfish did not enter the vessel, believed filled with toxic fumes, and had no report of conditions inside, said Lt. Fred Hanney, a spokesman for the Atlantic Fleet Command in Norfolk. "The seas are running six to 8." • See SUB on Page A2

Minico Booster Club head faces theft charge

By KEN ARMSTRONG Times-News writer

RUPERT — The president of the Minico Booster Club has been charged with grand theft for allegedly embezzling almost $8,000 from club funds, officials said.

The felony charge, which carries a maximum sentence of 14 years imprisonment and a $5,000 fine, was filed Monday against Debbie Stauffer Bair, a resident of Rupert.

Bair, president of the club since 1986, allegedly forged the signature of one of the club's directors in embezzling the funds, according to court records. She is scheduled to make her initial court appearance today at 8:30 a.m. Minidoka County Prosecutor Charles Creason Jr. said officers with the sheriff's office began investigating allegations against Bair approximately 10 days ago. The investigation was prompted by information received from other Booster Club members.

According to court records, Bair admitted at a March 9 directors' meeting to having taken the missing funds.

Bair allegedly embezzled $7,920 between Oct. 1 and Feb. 9, court records show.

"All the alleged missing funds are now in the hands of my attorney," Bair said Tuesday.

Bair, whose attorney is Mark Ingram, had no further comment.

She and three other officials with the Booster Club were the only people authorized to sign on the club's bank account, records show. The account required dual signatures for payment or withdrawal of funds.

In writing checks on the account, Bair allegedly used her signature and forged that of Carol London, the club's assistant treasurer, records show.

The largest single amount written on a check was for approximately $800, Creason said.

Senators want North diaries to check possible drug links

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted 16-1 Tuesday to subpoena their private working diaries of Lt. Col. Oliver L. North in its continuing investigation of international drug smuggling.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., expressed concern that the originals of the North diaries have never been turned over to government authorities in uncensored form but remain in the hands of North and his attorney, Brendan V. Sullivan.

The subpoena calls for North and Sullivan to produce 2,848 pages of handwritten diary notes in their entirety and with no deletions.

The notes cover the period from September 1984 until November 1986 when North was fired from his position on the National Security Council in the Iran-Contra arms and money furor.

A version of the North diary already has been made available to the congressional Iran-Contra committees, but Kerry said North and Sullivan heavily censored 1,269 pages with black ink.

Speaking of the North diaries, Kerry told the committee: "I'm not asserting that there's a smoking gun or something hidden or that some of the redactions (deletions) are not appropriate. My assertion is that given what has already been declassified, I don't know how we can proceed without to see all of it."

"The issue is one of investigation," Kerry said. "Should we have the right to look at these classified documents, a work product of a government employee?"

Kerry has made clear he believes there was a connection between drug running and efforts to supply and arm the Contras. Some testimony before his subcommittee on narcotics and terrorism has focused on that possibility.

Contra leaders, however, have denied involvement in drug trafficking.

Censored versions of the diaries originally were provided to the congressional Iran-Contra committees under the grant of limited immunity from prosecution given to North in exchange for his testimony before the panel last year.

Kerry said that in order to speed up the process the Iran-Contra panels permitted North and Sullivan to block out sections they deemed

Automatic cash machine declares a bank holiday

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Your bank cash machine has gone berserk, giving out $20 bills as if they were fivers, yet your receipt shows no sign of overpayment.

Do you:

- a.) Use the emergency telephone to alert the bank.
- b.) Take the money and run.
- c.) Call your friends to get down there, too.

If you chose the first option, you are a rare breed of cat, judging from an unintentional ethics experiment staged Sunday at a Manhattan bank branch.

Because some hapless employees loaded a canister of $20 bills into the slot for $5 bills, the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Rochester's branch at First Avenue and 14th Street launched an accidental exercise in income redistribution.

Although the cash machine panel has a 24-hour telephone for reporting problems outside bank hours, the response was not overwhelming — "one or two calls," according to bank spokesman Mark Nolan.

Instead, a line of eager card holders quickly formed at the machine.

"I called everybody I knew," a writer, who asked not to be identified for fear of prosecution, told New York Newswatch.

Not only did the machine apparently set in later, the bank received only one call on Monday reporting Sunday's malfunction.

Saudis cut ties with Tehran

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Arabia accused Iran of "terrorism and subversion" and broke relations Tuesday, ordering all Iranian diplomats to leave the kingdom within a week.

A statement broadcast by state-run television and distributed by the official Saudi Press Agency cited a riot by Iranians during a pilgrimage to Mecca last year in which hundreds of people died; a subsequent attack on the Saudi Embassy in Tehran and attacks on commercial shipping in the Persian Gulf.

On Sunday, Iranian speedboats attacked a Saudi-owned tanker in the Strait of Hormuz hours after President Reagan warned Iran to stay clear of neutral ships.

Saudi Arabia and most other Arab countries support Iraq in its war with Iran, which began in September 1980 when a Moslem nation but its people are Persian, not Arab.

Korean opposition leading

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Opposition candidates took a surprise lead Tuesday over candidates from President Roh Tae-woo's party in parliamentary voting marred by violent protests.

No deaths were reported but newspapers said three policemen were injured as demonstrators protested alleged vote rigging in cities throughout the country.

Based on an unofficial count of nearly 90 percent of the vote, the state-controlled KBS television network listed 121 candidates from three opposition parties as assured of victory.

Land near Chernobyl safe

MOSCOW (AP) — Officials have decided it is safe to cultivate about 74,000 acres of land near the Chernobyl plant two years after the world's worst nuclear power accident, Tass said Tuesday.

The Soviet news agency said in a report from Chernobyl that radiation levels around the power plant in the Soviet Ukraine are well within internationally accepted norms.

In a separate report, Soviet television showed film of a memorial gathering of relatives of those killed in the explosion and fire at the plant's No. 4 reactor on April 26, 1986.

Ski expedition reaches pole

TORONTO (AP) — Nine Soviet and four Canadian skiers arrived Tuesday at the North Pole, their first major objective in an attempt to become the first expedition to cross the Arctic on foot.

"Everybody is in great spirits, all hale and hearty," said expedition radioman Tom Atkins in Toronto. "It's a personal victory. They're more than halfway."

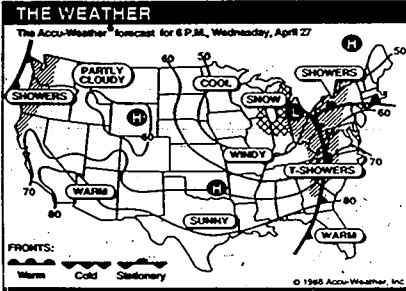

Organizers revealed that wedding bells rather than jungle bells were ringing for one jubilant skier as the group approached the pole again this month. Max Buxton of Calabogie, Ontario, in a radio message relayed by a Soviet air base in Siberia, asked his Earlier, Bennett told a news conference that the educational establishment is criticizing his report because they want a wholesale of the problem and they want a blanket check.

The Bonfish was submerged when the explosions and fire began Sunday during a training exercise. The crew was able to get it to the surface and the skipper ordered it evacuated because of heavy smoke and toxic fumes.

The frigate USS Carr and the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy, both of which were on the exercise with the Bonfish, evacuated 89 of the 92 crew members.

In Washington, Adm. Carlisle A.H. Trost, chief of naval operations and a former submariner, said the missing men may have died at their posts.

"All three of those individuals ... were on watch in the ship's control room and were last seen there," Trost said. "So it may well be that they simply ensured that everyone got clear and they themselves likely made it."

at the protest, "I don't want a blank check. I want him to sign it." She charged Bennett was "whitewashing what the administration is doing by coming out with another report" that basically says they're not doing anything.

Heicker, a liberal Republican who has battled against Reagan efforts to cut education spending, said, "On the basis of the fact that you get what you pay for, Mr. Bennett is not the secretary of education, he's the secretary of ignorance."

The education budget today is $21 billion, compared with $14.8 billion seven years ago. But Weicker said Reagan has sought $19 billion in cuts in the last five years. Futrell and other speakers said Head Start and the Chapter One remedial program are only a fraction of the youngsters eligible for the services.

Futrell, standing beneath a banner reading: "1988 - A Nation - at Risk, 1988 - An Administration Asleep," said, "The time has come for Secretary Bennett and President Reagan to get out of the grandstand and into the game."

Bennett told reporters afterwards the NEA remains "greatest single obstacle to education reform in the country."

"I am not surprised that they were picketing or demonstrating there across the street, because they have been demonstrating against education reform since the very beginning," he said. "I have re-evaluated my view of the NEA, and each time I re-evaluate it, it's worse."

Russ Holland, a director of the Minico Boosters Club, said the organization raises money for scholarships and school activities through fundraisers and donations.

"There are some good things that have come out of it in the past, and I hope there will be some in the future," Holland said. "We just have to wait and see how much damage this causes."

The Navy has refused to speculate on the cause of the explosions and fire but confirmed a newspaper report that the first explosion occurred while the ship was cruising at periscope depth.

The Virginian-Pilot in Norfolk said the boat may have been charging its batteries by using its snorkel to pull in fresh air to run the diesels while running within 50 feet of the surface.

The frigate USS McCloy was on station with the abandoned Bonfish and the USS Petrel arrived Monday with salvage crews from Charleston, S.C., the submarine's home port.

Holland said Bair became club president in late 1986 though there was not an official election.

"She probably did more work in the organization than everybody else put together," he said. "It was just kind of an evolutionary thing that she started to take it over."

"She was just a hard-working gal," Holland said the boosters in Rupert were always loosely organized, and that financial and other responsibilities were not explicitly defined.

"It was never (as) organized as a booster club or any club should be organized," he said.

Cranson said that, to his knowledge, Bair has no prior criminal record. The prosecutor added that he does not anticipate any charges being filed in addition to the grand theft charge.

Storm in gulf halts convoy

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A convoy of U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tankers moved into the Persian Gulf on Tuesday for the first time since last week's clash with Iran, but the vessels turned back, reportedly because of bad weather.

One source, an official close to the Kuwait Oil Tanker Co. which owns the tankers, said another attempt to move the ships might come within 24 hours.

Shipping executives said a sandstorm reduced visibility in the central gulf to less than two miles, thereby limiting the ability of mine-hunting helicopters and Navy vessels to detect mines.

They said that although two "mine danger areas" had been cleared by American and other mine sweepers in recent days.

Compensation finally comes

WASHINGTON (AP) — At a ceremony Wednesday at the White House, President Reagan is expected to quietly and James "Pat" Purvis' 25-year battle to be paid $700,000 for the U.S. Science Pavilion he built at the 1962 Seattle World's Fair.

The years have been marked by hard times, bureaucratic disappointments and legal setbacks for the 70-year-old Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, resident, who was once a successful building contractor and now is a traveling clothing salesman.

The private compensation bill Reagan is scheduled to sign will reimburse Purvis for the personal money he spent on finishing the Science Pavilion, which cost more than expected as the General Services Administration demanded numerous changes and issued a series of stop-work orders.

Purvis, 70, is expected to attend the signing.

Woman denies embezzling

POCATELLO (AP) — Julie M. Chandler, Idaho Falls, pleaded innocent here Tuesday to a federal embezzlement charge and will face trial June 21 at 9:30 a.m.

In an appearance before U.S. Magistrate Craig Jorgensen, Chandler pleaded innocent, and was released under a third-party bond.

Court officials said the embezzlement involved money at the Scenic Falls Credit Union, Idaho Falls.

4 honored for saving girl

POCATELLO (AP) — Four people who helped rescue a 6-year-old Utah girl who fell into a motel swimming pool have been honored here as outstanding citizens.

The four were recognized Tuesday during the annual Volunteer Recognition Breakfast co-sponsored by the Pocatello and Chubbuck police departments.

Shauna Forrest and her parents, Lora and Shane Forrest of West Valley, Utah, were on hand as awards were given to Pocatellans Josee Rodriguez, Chalayne Thornock, Darla Sorenson and Blackfoot school teacher Phil Rohr.

Last July 3 Josee Rodriguez, a maid at the Holiday Inn here, saw the child lying at the bottom of the swimming pool. Rodriguez, a senior at Pocatello High School, dove into the pool and with the assistance of another maid, Thornock, pulled the child out of the water. Sorenson and Rohr then began resuscitation efforts.

Separate fees proposed

MOSCOW (AP) — Letting officials at Idaho's universities and college set their own student fees may be an idea whose time has come, says the Idaho Board of Education's chief fiscal officer.

Edward Cisek said Monday he is working on a proposal for the board to consider in June that would allow each college president to suggest a separate institutional fee yearly to the board, which still would make the final decision.

In addition, Cisek is suggesting doing away with the current system in which all student fees are pooled and then divided among the schools. Instead, he favors letting each institution keep the student fees it collects.

Veterans home gets funds

BOISE (AP) — A federal grant of $1.9 million has been approved, completing funding for a major expansion at the Idaho Veterans Home here.

Gov. Cecil Andrus said Tuesday he was advised by Thomas Turange, administrator of the Veterans Administration, that Idaho's grant of $1,965,222 has been approved.

In addition to the federal grant, the Legislature appropriated about $600,000 and veterans' groups, businesses and individuals contributed another $90,000.

An addition and remodeling will increase capacity of the home from 160 to 186, will provide a 96-bed nursing wing offering special treatment for Alzheimer's disease and will add bathrooms, fire sprinklers, alarm systems and elevators.

Lawsuit filed over Denver airport crash

BOISE (AP) — The parents of Terri Ellen Davis, one of the Idaho residents killed in the Nov. 15, 1987, crash of a Continental Airlines jetliner, have filed a lawsuit here.

Keith L. and Claretta Smith of Boise filed the lawsuit in U.S. District Court, naming Continental Air Lines, Texas Air Corp. and McDonnell-Douglas as defendants.

Continental flight 1713 crashed at the Denver Airport on Nov. 15, as it was taking off. Of the passengers aboard, 28 were killed, including 14 from Idaho.

The lawsuit here was the latest in a series filed over the crash. The latest suit did not ask for specific damages, but said the amount would be set at trial.

It was filed by Boise attorneys Robert J. Koontz and Jim C. Harris. Koontz is one of five attorneys named to a special panel to handle the claims filed over the crash.

As have other lawsuits filed here, the Smith lawsuit alleged that Continental operated the flight in a negligent manner, including trying to take off with inadequate deicing procedures.

Pocatello selected as site for VA clinic

POCATELLO (AP) — Pocatello has been selected as the site for a Veterans Administration outpatient clinic that VA officials say will serve about 20,000 Southeastern Idahoans by 1991.

The announcement was made here Tuesday by Salt Lake City VA medical center representatives, Boise VA Administrator Gary Bermeoso and Les Purce, director of the Idaho State University research park and economic development center.

An initial four-member clinic staff will be housed in the new research park incubator center. It is scheduled for completion in August, and the clinic will open when that facility is completed.

VA officials said they hope to hire clinic workers from the Pocatello area. The clinic, with an estimated $336,200 start-up cost, is expected to treat about 6,000 people the first year, and increase by 6,000 people for the first three years.

Staff size is expected to reach 12 by 1991.

Idaho Falls also was bidding for the clinic, but William Hodson, Salt Lake City VA medical center director, said Pocatello was selected mainly because it is central to an estimated 30,000 southeastern Idaho veterans; facilities at ISU and the fact that a VA nursing home will be built here.

Finding money to build the estimated $4.5 million nursing home is a problem, Bermeoso said, but once that project is completed the clinic will be constructed there.

He said if the Legislature acts quickly with an allocation, federal money should be available to help pay for 65 percent of the home.

That would leave the state with about a $1.4 million bill.

Officials said they hope the home can open in two or three years.

Accessibility to two interstate highways also was a factor that gave Pocatello the edge.

Don Moore, V.A. medical center planning and public affairs director in Salt Lake City, said Pocatello also was endorsed by Idaho VA leaders.

The group spoke of integrating health facilities at ISU, Pocatello Regional Medical Center and Bannock Regional Medical Center with the clinic.

Veterans needing hospital care would still go to the Salt Lake City center, Hodson said, except in emergency situations.

Eventually, the clinic will offer specialty services, but it will start with typical outpatient services, physical assessments and check-ups for those recently hospitalized.

Keep state's water safe, Jones urges

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — It is essential that new federal rights not be established in Idaho through congressional action, Attorney General Jim Jones says.

Jones on Tuesday released letters he has sent to Sen. James McClure and Rep. Richard Stallings, urging them not to allow federal water rights to be established in legislation on the City of Rocks, the Hagerman Fossil Beds and in the Idaho Wilderness bill.

Jones said he wrote McClure to endorse a requirement that any federal water right established under the bills be under state law.

"That is the way Sen. McClure had proposed the bills, but we heard that objections were being made to the provisions by national environmental groups," Jones said.

He said McClure is "willing to stand firm" on that issue, that state control of water rights must be maintained for the projects.

Jones said he sent a similar letter to Stallings this week.

"The creation of federal reserved water rights for the City of Rocks and the Hagerman Fossil Beds would merely serve to exacerbate current efforts of the state to quantify all federal reserved water rights," Jones said.

Wary American voters may be in for a cliffhanger election

WASHINGTON — In the early 1960s, public-relations people came up with a clever promotional slogan designed to save a world-famous but failing newspaper.

"Who says a great newspaper has to be dull?" was the message aired repeatedly in broadcast commercials and print ads for The New York Herald-Tribune.

The answer, of course, was no one, but the clever slogan didn't work. Faced with a serious choice, readers continued to prefer the substance and grayness of the rival New York Times. The Trib died.

Something of the same kind of mentality has been at work throughout this presidential nominating season. "Who wants a dull candidate?" has been a news media refrain for months. The answer, again, naturally, is no one. But when offered a choice, voters in both parties consistently have selected the competent plodders over the more charismatic candidates.

Gov. Michael S. Dukakis' decisive

win in New York a week ago Tuesday brings that election process to a virtual end. He will be denied the Democratic nomination only if he beats himself. Vice President George Bush has the Republican nomination, in fact if not in final ratification. So the president who will lead America into the last decade of this century will be one of the two oft-disparaged "dullest of the dull" running this year.

The surprise, if any, is that anyone should be surprised.

This decade has been characterized by remarkable swings of public emotion. The roller-coaster Reagan years have produced boom and bust. They have engendered a powerfully bracing collective sense of national success and security and an equally troubling feeling of uneasiness and uncertainty about the future as events seemed in danger of slipping out of control.

The result has left voters neither despairing nor euphoric as they approach the 1990s.

To judge from grass-roots interviews that I and Washington Post colleagues have conducted for more than a year, voters are in a cautious, security-seeking mood. To restate what I've written, they're looking for a president with proven competence and ability to manage complex affairs. They also know the nation faces difficult problems that can't be solved by slick campaign promises or just the appeal of personality.

In fact, they seem to be seeking presidential traits exactly opposite those of Ronald Reagan: hands-on management ability; expert knowledge of government; ability to achieve problem-solving consensus; especially with Congress, and practicality over ideology.

Nothing that I can detect suggests that they expect the next cycle of American life to produce a flowering of '60s-style liberalism and permissiveness or of the kinds of pessimism and disillusionment that characterized the '70s. The legacy of the Reagan years has been to prepare the country to expect hard choices and to appreciate tempered values and moderation in private and public life.

With good reason, those kinds of sober, balanced, somewhat wary attitudes are reflected in the political choices this year. They have not been as faithfully reflected in much of the coverage about the campaign.

It has seemed, at times, as if the voters were reflecting one kind of country and the news media another.

Once again, horse-race journalism, abetted by a plethora of tracking polls, has been in vogue. This is probably inevitable for two reasons. The marathon presidential-primary season forces attention on the weekly winner and the next race. Not surprisingly, the news media also focus on personality and drama, on excitement and conflict in the search for presumed or real weaknesses in the candidates.

That tendency has been most notably pronounced this year in two areas of general coverage, both false: in the depiction and dismissal of all Democratic candidates as "dwarfs" and in the portrayal of Bush, the valorous World War II combat pilot, as a "wimp."

Voters have rendered a different judgment. In Bush and Dukakis, they have picked candidates who possess the characteristics of caution and competence that most match the current public mood. I wouldn't be surprised if two other supposedly uncharismatic types are chosen as vice presidential candidates — Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia for the Democrats and White House chief of staff and former Tennessee senator Howard H. Baker Jr. for the Republicans.

However the tickets are balanced, the election promises to be extremely close, perhaps a cliffhanger. Dare we say it? This could be one of the most exciting presidential elections in modern times. To paraphrase an old slogan, who says dull candidates can't produce dramatic presidential elections?

Rumors of conflict in Politburo part of Gorbachev's game

Once again, rumors about a conflict between Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Yegor K. Ligachev are sweeping through Moscow.

The occasion this time was prompted by a large article in a normally liberal Soviet newspaper, Sovietskaya Rossiya, which sharply criticized excesses in efforts to repudiate the past. Three weeks later, the Sovietskaya Rossiya article, supposedly a Ligachev manifesto, was criticized by Pravda and Gorbachev supposedly achieved a victory — at least temporarily — over the much-more conservative

Jerry Hough

No. 2 man in the Kremlin.

To hear Soviet intellectuals tell it, the air is filled with tension and the outcome is hanging in the balance. Gorbachev is leading a heroic struggle against overwhelming conservative opposition; in fact the intellectuals are supporting him.

It is all high drama. But this is the problem: Much of it is drama, not reality.

Rumors about Politburo conflict must be handled with the greatest of care. Since the 1940s, the Soviets have floated stories about embattled general secretaries and their overwhelming conservative opposition in the Politburo. In 1948, even President Truman was taken in, talking about "good old Joe" Stalin being a prisoner of the Politburo.

No doubt, Yegor Ligachev is more conservative than Gorbachev. He is 68, and no one expects him to hold on as second secretary until the next Communist Party congress in 1991. The best bet has always been that he would become chairman of the party's control committee. Probably something like this is now under way.

But if so, it is not because Ligachev has almost defeated Gorbachev. Ligachev's power has been grossly exaggerated. As new men were brought into the Politburo in 1987, Ligachev's independent power steadily shrank. The election in February of Georgy P. Razumovsky, a very close Gorbachev associate, to the Politburo meant that Ligachev had lost any control over personnel selection.

And historically, dramatic incidents of opposition have been the last gasps of a contender on the way out.

What is going on with the rumors? First, the liberal intellectuals are extremely anxious because of past changes in Soviet policy. They are looking for any sign of reversal of policy and then reacting to it.

Indeed, the intellectuals are handling many issues — especially historical ones about the Stalin era — in such a one-sided manner as to produce the criticism they fear. The Sovietskaya Rossiya article, although itself one-sided, also contained many points that were accurate.

Not long ago a leading Soviet intellectual was asked privately whether he didn't think that the Stalin issue was being overplayed (the purges, after all, did take place 50 years ago) and whether Nikita Khrushchev was not being whitewashed (after all, Khrushchev did forbid the publication of such works as "Doctor Zhivago").

The intellectual's answer was direct, and representative of those who desire reform: "I don't care about history. These men are all symbols. Stalin is a symbol of repression. Lenin is a symbol of what the revolution could have been, and Khrushchev is a symbol of the loosening of repression." And although he didn't say it directly, Gorbachev is seen by the reformers as a symbol of hope, Ligachev as a symbol of conservatism.

Not surprisingly, such an approach produces a response, all the more so when today's conservatives are sometimes being lumped together as Stalinist.

Gorbachev himself is playing a complicated and sophisticated political game. Leaders always use their chiefs of staff as their no-men or bad cops. This has been Ligachev's role. Meanwhile, Gorbachev exploits talk about opposition and bureaucratic resistance in order to keep the intellectuals on his side and, paradoxically, supporting his dictatorial consolidation of power.

Gorbachev also is highly capable of using a "power struggle" with Ligachev as a way of keeping the Soviet people distracted as the Red Army begins its retreat from Afghanistan. We know how a skilled president such as Ronald Reagan can control the domestic agenda by putting his own spin on news stories. But we somehow never think of Gorbachev in the same way. We have seen his public-relations skill abroad, however, and should not think it lacking at home.

The problem for us is not to be misled. Gorbachev is not the embodiment of all the intellectuals' hopes. He wants a mild dictatorship like Franco's Spain. But he faces a society that has become largely educated and middle class. It wants more.

If we accept the intellectuals' version that every sign of authoritarianism is a defeat for Gorbachev, we will underestimate his strength as an adversary. It has been a costly foreign-policy mistake in the past, and will continue to be so.

Letters/ Religion, evolution theories and a look into the future

Enlightening a writer

I must respond to Brent Gee's letter of April 24, as he felt he had to respond to mine. Perhaps I can enlighten his misguided soul.

He states, "It is the unreasonable beliefs of those without God, that have created a civilization in turmoil."

The Middle East is in a turmoil and it is the people that believe in God that are causing all the turmoil.

The same is true for Ireland, a very good example, and if anyone studies history, they will find it has always been that way.

The pharisees also had faith and believed in God. Jesus called them hypocrites. It is easy to tell what kind of a God people worship by their deeds.

Jesus stated that God was a spirit which dwelt inside of righteous people. If Jesus were teaching in person today, Brent Gee would probably call him an atheist and denounce him the same as the pharisee religion is very much alive today.

I myself, like Jesus, can only worship a righteous God. Like Jesus told Pilate, in St. John 9:11, "Thou couldst have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above; therefore he that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin."

No, Mr. Gee, the unreasonable beliefs that have created a civilization in turmoil, comes from those that do not know the origin of the God which they worship.

In my former letter I stated "If the Bible is, a true history of man like some claim, it should be brought up to date. Now, if it is not a true history of man, you are right, it does not need updating."

teaching of alternative theories of origins. This is especially so in light of our current knowledge about the theory of evolution.

This theory is so full of holes that it leaks like a sieve. It does not meet the requirements of the scientific method: it is not observable, repeatable or demonstrable. The fossil record is blatantly lacking any intermediate species that would support the theory.

There is no whole skull or skeleton yet discovered that scientists can conclusively say represents a transitional species between ape and man. In view of this, many world-renowned scientists are rejecting the Darwinian version of evolutionary development in favor of a "punctuated equilibrium" hypothesis, which holds that life appeared suddenly on earth, remained relatively stable for long periods of time, and then suddenly mutated or developed over a short time.

Because this newer theory more closely coincides with a majority of the community's religious views, must we then label it "illegal" and forbid our students the opportunity to explore it?

In other words, to continue to teach one viewpoint of origins is intellectually dishonest. It is no more probable than any other theory. To continue to present students with the facts and guesses supporting one view only would be like trying to teach them that the earth is flat, despite all the evidence we possess to the contrary.

Furthermore, we live in a world of incredible design and order. This world sustains a fascinating number and variety of life forms that are magnificent in intricacy, detail and function. Life does not spring up from non-living matter, and explosions have never created order.

Why does the thought of a creator or designer spawn so much fear? Are we so afraid of stepping on some tender little toes and being sued that we will deny our students exposure to cold hard facts that indicate life appeared suddenly, intact, on the earth?

In summary, we are fools if we allow our students to be governed by the narrow-minded views of a few whining individuals who do not nearly represent the majority's views. There are a number of scientifically-supportable theories concerning the origins of man. Let's allow our students to explore the spectrum rather than limit their information base.

In step, but who with?

On Monday, April 18, the KMYT evening news program featured an interview with Wm. K. Chisholm regarding his candidacy for the state senate.

Having read many of Mr. Chisholm's letters appearing in the Times-News, I have become familiar with many of his views on environmental issues and his absolute dedication to this most worthy cause. Therefore, I thought the picturesque, natural setting for the interview was especially well chosen, the photography excellent and that the courteous young man conducting the interview did a good job.

And then, all of a sudden, we were back at the television studio listening to the news staff making small talk about Mr. Chisholm's worldly life style and his several arrests for protesting and demonstrating against nuclear testing, etc. Topping all that, however, was Doug Maughan's condescending appraisal of Mr. Chisholm as a "local character."

To me, that remark was highly unprofessional, totally uncalled for and discourteous to a program guest. (In recent years most of us have come to know that referring to someone as a "character" puts a derogatory connotation on what is otherwise a good word in the highest sense of its meaning.)

Coincidentally, two days later on a major network morning show, present-day celebrity environmentalists were commemorating the 150th anniversary of the birth of a man who was perhaps the greatest, naturalist-conservationist in the history of our nation — a "character" named John Muir.

Remember him? He was the man whose meritorious efforts over Yosemite National Park, Sequoia National Park, the preservation of the California Redwood Forests — one of which bears his name — and much, much more.

Like his predecessor, naturalist Henry David Thoreau, Muir knew that one hundred pesos.

As I have had to remind myself quite frequently, it might be well if we would all remember that whenever we think a contemporary person appears to be marching to the beat of a different drummer, he or she is probably in step with other unique individuals who marched right onto the pages of our history books.

Need anyone be reminded of another man who chose the simple life two thousand years ago? He was so out of step with the money-changers, scribes, politicians, Pharisees and other hypocrites of his time, they crucified him.

Another look at theories

It was the year two billion and seven. A time far in our future. A Dr. Ford has just entered the lecture hall at MIT. A hush falls over the crowd. "Ladies and gentlemen, I have come here tonight to explain to you the ideas contained in my new book, The Evolution of Early Transport Machines." At the rear of the lecture hall a gentleman stands, girding himself for all to hear. "Machines were created by man." Security forces swiftly subdue the gentleman and escort him out of the assembly.

Dr. Ford continues, "I have discovered that all early transport machines shared a common ancestor. I believe that there was a lightning strike on a vein of iron ore, which lay in a tidal pool." Intellectual titillation osculates through the assembly. "A tiny roller skate was formed. From this humble beginning there evolved the skates, boards and the tricycle. Soon afterward came the bicycle and the Harley-Davidson." Undergraduates slide to the very edge of their seats. "The ancient Model T was then born, complete with engine, transmission and head lamps. We now enter into a period of intense commercialization and the first diversification took place. The biplane and the submarine mutated into air and water transportation." Several freshmen faint and are carried out of the hall. "The antique Model T then mutated into a multicolored Lincoln. Following World War II, hanky-panky took place overseen by U.S. Army Jeeps, producing the Japanese Honda, and the Italian Alpha Romeo. I know this sounds crazy, but do I look crazy?"

"Pick up trucks came into the scene next, and quickly raced to the forefront. Under the stress of heavy loads, pickups evolved into eighteen wheelers, complete with CB's and spitoons. On page 400 of my book is a picture of me bending over railroad tracks which lead out of the ancient Peterbilt truck factory. This I feel is irrefutable evidence that these splendid trucks evolved into complete freight trains." The crowd goes wild.

Dr. Ford sets down smiling and waving to the crowd. The president of MIT rises and approaches the microphone. "Ladies and gentlemen, you will be delighted to learn that Dr. Ford's new book, The Evolution of Early Transport Machines, will be the only textbook that will be allowed in the schools for the next year. In fact, it will be against the law, and school policy for your children to be taught anything else in the classroom."

A funny student at the rear of the lecture hall adjusts his glass and reads from his U.S. Government textbook, "We the people hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal..."

Democratic mayors denounce Meese, role in war on drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three Democratic mayors on Tuesday bluntly questioned whether Attorney General Edwin Meese III is doing an adequate job of directing the nation's war on drugs.

"The policy by the federal government isn't a policy," Providence, R.I., Mayor Joseph Paolino complained to Meese.

"We don't see how the federal government is really working in partnership with the communities," said Paolino. "Maybe it is on paper, maybe it is in structure, but it isn't in reality." Paolino's comments came at a meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors. The attorney general is chairman of the National Drug Policy Board, which Meese established to coordinate the Reagan administration's drug-fighting strategy.

Appearing before the conference's police policy board, Meese responded that the Reagan administration is working on drug eradication and interdiction programs with governments in several South American countries in an attempt to cut the supply of cocaine into the United States by up to 50 percent over three years.

Meese said Justice Department officials "will be glad" to meet with mayors and city police chiefs on the mayors conference police policy board "as often as you want" to discuss drug-fighting strategies.

"But the problem just keeps on getting bigger," Paolino responded. "We're going around in circles" in the war on drugs. Paolino said more money is needed to hire additional police and that the federal government should stop giving aid to nations supplying drugs to the United States.

New Orleans Mayor Sidney J. Barthelemy argued to Meese that the federal government should appoint a drug czar whose sole responsibility is to direct the attack on illicit narcotics trafficking and use.

"I have the same power with regard to narcotics and the National Drug Policy Board as the surgeon general has with regard to AIDS," replied Meese. "What we need ... is ... additional press at getting the message down rather than changing the organizational structure or the strategies."

CNO warns some forays may succeed

WASHINGTON (AP) — American warships cannot be expected to counter every Iranian attack on merchant ships in the Persian Gulf despite last week's demonstration of U.S. military prowess, the Navy's top admiral said Tuesday.

"I can offer the observation of a lot of personal pride and satisfaction in the way they did their job," said Adm. Carlisle A.H. Trost, the chief of naval operations, referring to fighting April 18 that saw six Iranian vessels crippled or sunk and no U.S. ships hit.

"But if someone wants to make an iron-clad guarantee that we will counter any (Iranian) attack, I'd say first of all that such a guarantee would be patently impossible because you cannot foreclose the possibility of attack by those large numbers of small craft that are always present over there," Trost said in an interview with The Associated Press.

The 58-year-old Trost, the Navy's uniformed leader for almost two years, displayed animation and pique when discussing recent budget actions by Congress that he said would cut into readiness.

"Readiness is a hard thing to measure," he said. "You don't put a dollar figure on readiness generally because no one can appreciate that."

"What they appreciate is the fact that in last week's engagements, for example, everything went right for our guys and wrong for the other guy."

"Had it been the other way around, you can imagine the hue and cry we'd hear in this town right now," he said. "And the only solution would be to hack off the heads of a few people like me, rather than blaming anybody who had any responsibility for the budget cuts that might have led to such a situation."

Trost was asked about naval capabilities in the gulf following word from sources that the administration is considering an expansion of the Navy's role in the gulf. Under that plan, U.S. warships would be authorized to aid neutral merchant ships as well as those flying the U.S. flag.

Our Goal: Outstanding Customer Satisfaction

So you can imagine how proud we are to be one of a select few dealers out of 10,000 to have been awarded an extremely prestigious honor for a Ford or Lincoln Mercury dealer to receive: the 1987 Ford Motor Company Quality Care Dealer Award for outstanding customer satisfaction. We worked hard for this award by giving top priority to your satisfaction; everything we do is geared to it. And we're even prouder of the fact that our customers made it happen with their responses to ongoing Ford Motor Company satisfaction surveys.

We're happy and proud you recognized our efforts to provide competent, courteous, and convenient sales and service treatment. It was your way of thanking us.

Our way of thanking you is to continue providing satisfaction for you, and all our customers, now and in the future.

Customer Satisfaction is our ultimate goal.

WOODEN NUT BOWL

Do you have any idea how many imperfect wooden nut bowls are stashed away as keepsakes in homes nationwide? Neither do I. But quite a many. The wooden nut bowl is said to be the most popular project of junior high school shop classes.

Did I tell you a spider's blood pressure is just about the same as yours?

RACHMANINOFF

Q. I've read that the great Russian composer Rachmaninoff is partly responsible for modern helicopters. Is that so?

A. He loaned about $5,000 to a fledgling helicopter company which was near bankruptcy. Saved the business. They gave Rachmaninoff the title of honorary vice president.

Q. How does an airplane's flight recorder, the so-called "Little Black Box," register what goes on in the pilot's cabin before starting to write back over itself?

A. 25 hours of flight time.

Most tormented time of day for those withdrawing from nicotine is said to be around 7 p.m.

Q. Where'd we get the word "humdinger"?

A. From the vernacular of yesterday. A kid with a slingshot fired off a rock at a tin can. It was a humdinger if it hummed in the air and dinged when it hit. That simple.

STAMP COLLECTORS

Serious stamp collectors have something else in common — they tend to show up for appointments right on time. Or so says a student of human behavior.

Q. You said no U.S. law ever required a wife to take her husband's name. Wasn't it the law in Hawaii, once?

A. When Hawaii was a monarchy, yes, but not since.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You may have to surmount a variety of confusing problems in order to get through your work this morning. Later in the day, however, you should be more concerned with improving agreements with friends.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Be as precise as you can in handling your daily activities, and give a fine finish to any jobs you perform. Be more tactful with your co-workers.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Don't allow an arrogant co-worker to throw his duties onto your lap. Be very cooperative with a good friend this evening.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): The situation at home is not very good today, so be sure you don't do anything to make it worse. Be sure to drive carefully tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): A socratic remark from a good friend should be ignored. Use great care in the handling of correspondence during the daytime.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Be very cautious where financial matters are concerned, or you could make a costly mistake. Handle property matters carefully in the evening.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Your judgment may not be very good during the daytime, so don't rely too much on your intuition. Don't be overly critical toward anyone.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Don't allow yourself to be flustered by a few small, irritating problems. If you go out on the town tonight, don't spend too much money.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Be cautious about asking delicate questions of a casual acquaintance. Rely on your mate's judgment more often, as this person has good ideas.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Handle your work very carefully today, and avoid criticism. This is a good time to get together with friends you haven't seen for a while.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): This is not a good day to go after a new project, no matter how interesting it may seem to you. Steer clear of strangers tonight.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Before you get into an argument over an account, be sure you have all the correct facts and figures. Retire early, and get plenty of rest.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Postpone a meeting with a fussy associate who could annoy you at this time. Make sure you keep any important promises you have made.

If Your Child Is Born Today...: He or she will work with an unusual amount of patience and precision, and would not only excel in such fields as architecture, research or laboratory work. Make sure the education includes courses in the humanities, as your progeny will have to deal closely with others.

Comedian says politics follows comedy trend downhill

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Arts Johnson, one of the comedians on the 1960s television series "Laugh In," says politics has gone the way of comedy during the past-15 or 20 years — downhill.

Johnson spoke in Omaha Monday at a $100-a-plate fund-raiser for 2nd District congressional candidate Cece Zorinsky, widow of Sen. Edward Zorinsky, a Democrat.

"I find it difficult to relate to much of present-day comedy because I don't think it's funny," Johnson said. "It just doesn't have the content it used to have."

Of politics, Johnson said, "The better-looking person wins." Campaigns have become "media circus" and "beauty pageants," he said.

Johnson recently finished filming a TV special with Barbara Mandrell and Frankie Avalon.

Former movie star is a 'young elder'

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — At age 73, former movie star Alice Faye says she has to be called a senior citizen. "I prefer to think of us as the young elders," she told a daylong conference Monday as part of Older Americans Month, sponsored by the Indiana Department of Human Services.

Faye, who married comedian and band leader Phil Harris 43 years ago, advised elderly Americans to stay active and involved, eat a balanced diet, quit smoking, exercise regularly, and see a doctor when necessary.

"When we were young, we had families and careers to keep us busy," she said. "Now we must look for things to keep us occupied. I try to find something to do every day that interests me. That's the secret of happiness."

"For example, I said to my husband one day, 'You know, I think I'd like to take up painting.'"

"Good," he said, "paint the house." Hollywood, she said, "seems all run down now. It's all so dirty anymore. It didn't used to be like that."

Lawyers halt Beatle record packaging plan

LONDON (AP) — Lawyers for Paul McCartney, George Harrison and John Lennon's widow Yoko Ono temporarily stopped a record company Tuesday from selling an album repackaging early Beatles' recordings.

High Court Judge Sir Peter Millett adjourned the hearing for three weeks to allow lawyers to gather evidence.

Charly Records, a London company that specializes in re-releasing previously recorded songs, produced the disputed album.

The songs were recorded on New Year's Day 1962 by the Silver Beatles, the Beatles' forerunner in which Pete Best, who was replaced by Ringo Starr, played drums.

Crue has been sentenced by a federal judge to serve 180 days in a community treatment center and to set up a non-profit corporation that would stage anti-drug concerts.

Doc McGhee also was fined $15,000 for helping import 19.5 tons of marijuana into Carteret County in 1982. In the sentencing Monday, U.S. District Judge W. Earl Britt required McGhee to serve the active portion of the sentence during the fourth year of a five-year probationary term. A community treatment center would allow work release and would not require McGhee to give up his business, McGhee's lawyers said. They said McGhee did not have a drug or alcohol problem.

McGhee, 37, would face five years in prison for failure to abide by the terms of probation.

Under the arrangement, McGhee must put at least 3,000 hours and $250,000 into the non-profit corporation.

In a plea bargain, McGhee, head of McGhee Entertainment Inc. of Los Angeles, pleaded guilty in January to aiding and abetting the smuggling of a trawler-load of marijuana to Carteret County.

Food for Gandhi plate gets radioactivity test

BOMBAY, India (AP) — Food products for Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi coming from countries affected by the 1986 Chernobyl nuclear disaster are tested for radioactivity by India's top scientists before they reach his plate, an official said Tuesday.

The official, a senior scientist at the Department of Atomic Energy, said food is tested for the radioactive isotope cesium 137 at the Bhabha Atomic Research Center here.

The testing, which has been done for the last two years, uses powerful gamma spectrometers, said the scientist, speaking on condition of anonymity.

When Gandhi travels abroad, a senior scientist leaves two days ahead, equipped with a gamma spectrometer.

Political storm brews over tree-lined road

WARWICK, R.I. (AP) — A political storm involving a U.S. senator, a governor, three city councilmen and assorted bureaucrats is brewing over the state's plan to cut down 60 trees here.

The trees, mostly towering sycamores and oaks, line Ives Road, where Sen. John H. Chafee, R-R.I., owns a house. The state Department of Transportation had planned to cut them down as part of a $1.9 million project to widen and repave the road.

Chafee learned that the trees were marked for extinction when he noticed a big orange "X" on a dozen of them about two weeks ago.

The senator called state Transportation Director Matthew J. Gill Jr., who halted the project and arranged for three councilmen, including Chafee's son Lincoln Chafee, to tour the site.

Later, Gov. Edward D. DiPrete got into the act, promising through a spokeswoman to review the issue after he returns from a trip to the Far East.

Bono a proud father after son's arrival

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Sonny Bono, in the mayor's office less than a month, has another reason to celebrate — a new baby in the house.

The child, his first son, was born Monday and named Cesare Elan, said Bono's spokeswoman Marilyn Baker. Cesare is Italian for Caesar and Elan means spirit, Ms. Baker said.

Mrs. Bono, 26, is the fourth wife of the former mop-haired singer-turned-restauranteur and politician.

Plastic gun bill settled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration and law enforcement groups agreed Tuesday on compromise legislation to ban undetectable plastic handguns, using an approach that has been staunchly opposed by the National Rifle Association and its legislative supporters.

Joseph A. Morris, director of the Justice Department's office of liaison, said the proposed legislation would be sent to Congress this week.

The NRA has supported a bill by Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, which would ban undetectable plastic weapons but would set no minimum standard of metal. This approach would force the government, in effect, to find a magnetometer or other device that would detect guns with just a trace of metal.

After several rounds of high-powered lobbying, full-page advertisements, fund-raising appeals and doomsday rhetoric by all sides, the administration has adopted the minimum metallic standard as the best approach.

NRA officials were not immediately available for comment on whether they would accept the new approach.

Acid rain accord unlikely

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Canada will not reach agreement on a way to reduce acid rain emissions before the Reagan administration leaves office, a senior administration official predicted Tuesday on the eve of a visit by Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney.

The official, who spoke only on the condition of anonymity, denied that President Reagan agreed during a meeting with Mulroney in Ottawa last April to commit the United States to specific targets and timetables for the reduction of emissions.

Mulroney, in a conversation with American reporters in the Canadian capital on Friday, said he was disappointed with the administration's lack of action against U.S. smokestack emissions that he says are killing lakes and damaging forests north of the border.

Scrap counsels, court told

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration urged the Supreme Court on Tuesday to scrap a federal law used to prosecute several former White House aides and to investigate Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

The law gives too much power to people "totally unattached to any politically responsible person," argued Solicitor General Charles Fried, the Justice Department's top courtroom lawyer.

Disputed provisions in the Ethics in Government Act of 1978 allow independent counsels, formerly called special prosecutors, to investigate alleged misconduct by key executive-branch officials.

Demos delay final vote on trade bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic leaders put the brakes on a major trade bill Tuesday, postponing a vote on final passage while they scrambled for enough Republican support to override a threatened presidential veto.

Provisions that would limit export of Alaskan oil became a critical stumbling block as leaders campaigned to line up enough votes to make President Reagan think twice before reaching for his veto pen.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., postponed until Wednesday or possibly even Thursday a vote on the 1,000-page bill Reagan opposes because it would require all but the smallest employers to give notice of plant-closings and major layoffs.

Byrd also sought to counter a report Monday that a milder version of the bill would be enacted later in the year.

"Someone has got the plug in the wrong socket," he told reporters. He said it would be difficult to bring up a second bill this year.

Light plane crashes; occupants walk away

By MARK PRATTER
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Two Twin Falls men walked away from a plane crash Tuesday afternoon northwest of the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport.

Their aircraft landed half under water in the High Line Canal after the pilot was unable to stop on the northwest-southeast runway, authorities said.

"The engine lost power. It wouldn't work. There was not enough room to power back," said passenger Ciaran Patrick Murphy.

Airport crash trucks sped to the scene but there was no fire and the plane was intact.

Injured were Earl Cecil Williamson, 41, of 235 9th Ave. N., the pilot, and his son-in-law, Murphy, 36, of 306 Fillmore St.

The men were being treated for injuries Tuesday night at the Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital, said a nursing supervisor. Williamson suffered cuts and scratches on his face. Medical personnel had fitted Murphy with a cervical collar.

The single engine Mooney 21 aircraft took off from Runway 25, the main east-west runway, at 2:49 p.m., said Steve Storey, Twin Falls air traffic controller. The Twin Falls Flying Club aircraft was bound for Salt Lake City.

It was a half-mile south of the airport when the pilot requested permission to return.

"He didn't specify the difficulties," said Storey.

Controllers cleared the pilot to land on any runway. He touched down on Runway 30, the shorter northwest-southeast runway, but was unable to stop, Storey said.

He was airborne for approximately 10 seconds when he crashed into the canal at 2800 east and three-eighths of a mile south of 3400 north.

The plane drifted down the canal before the men could get out, said Harold Jensen, Twin Falls County Sheriff chief deputy. The water cushioned the impact, he said.

Tuesday evening the plane remained pointed toward the airport with its nose under water. The tail stuck up over the bank and one wing was under the swiftly flowing water.

"He came by below the canal when his engine cut out. It looked like he had trouble and was trying to circle back," said Archie Quenell, a farmer who was irrigating near the crash site.

"I helped one guy with his luggage. The other guy was out," said Quenell.

Weather conditions at the time of the crash were cloudy and winds were light.

The accident is being investigated by the National Transportation Safety Board.

Authorities said the plane would be towed out of the canal and returned to the airport for examination.

The Federal Aviation Administration issued Williamson's license in 1983, said Jensen.

A pool, at last

Council accepts pared-down proposal

By CRAIG LINCOLN
 and MARK PRATTER
 Times-News writers

TWIN FALLS - Tuesday the Twin Falls City Council picked a plan and put up money, bringing to a head five years of often frustrating work to provide local children with a municipal swimming pool.

The plans proposed cost more than the city had planned to spend. And fund-raising efforts have lagged behind goals. But a determined council voted at a special meeting Tuesday to accept a scaled-back version of the most reasonable proposal and proceed with construction while fund raising continues.

Contractors Northwest of Boise proposed a $1.175 million project. But a pool advisory committee comprised of local citizens pared the proposal down to $1.065 million before the council accepted it. Lombard-Conrad, also of Boise, designed the project.

"We're comfortable with that price. It's a high-quality facility and we hope it will last 40 to 50 years," City Manager Tom Courtney said. City officials had originally planned to spend about $1 million on the project.

Three bond proposals to finance a pool have failed since the old pool at Harmon Park crumbled beyond repair. Now, the city plans to finance this pool primarily with $750,000 of budget reserve money set aside over the last three years.

The rest of the money will be raised with private donations. Lance Clow, who served on the pool-selection committee and also is working on donations, said $135,000 has been donated or pledged to the effort. That leaves the city $150,000 short.

Most of the savings in the pared-down plan will come from substituting less costly materials and equipment. Instead of a motorized bulkhead to divide the pool, a manual one will be installed. The pool will have a plaster finish rather than being painted. Acrylic and ceramic gutters will be substituted for stainless steel, different filters will be used and a radiant heat system will be deleted.

Those design changes will save $94,250. Contractors Northwest also won't be installing starting blocks and lane markers for races, for a savings of $12,160. The committee also changed the fence design and locker system, saving $23,100.

The design changes brought the price down to $1.047 million, but then the council started adding to the proposal.

It decided to install underwater lighting. "If we ever cover the pool, we'll need underwater lighting," Courtney said. The lights will cost $3,000.

And members put in a public-address system, changed the sidewalk design and increased the size of the bathroom to the tune of $13,450.

Kimberly levy passes with ease

By ANNETTE CARY
 Times-News writer

KIMBERLY - Turn-out was light, but those who cast ballots Tuesday were overwhelmingly in favor of a one-year, $85,000 override levy for the Kimberly School District.

The measure passed with a 73.1 percent majority, said Superintendent Richard Bauscher. With 223 patrons casting ballots, the vote was 163-60.

Bauscher attributed the low turn-out to a new law that requires district residents to be registered county voters before they can cast ballots.

"The district telephoned residents in a campaign to pass the levy. But most called were just not registered," Bauscher said. "It will take some time for them to be educated to the fact you have to be registered for all elections."

Last year 406 voters cast ballots to pass a levy $27,000 larger than the one the district requested Tuesday. That one passed with a 72 percent majority.

"I feel we have a really strong, supportive community," said Bauscher. "They're well informed and that's why they keep supporting us. We're up front with them and tell them what we're going to do."

Before the vote, Bauscher said the levy was needed because the 1985 Legislature failed to appropriate enough money to preserve the quality of education the district now has.

"The legislative session provided Kimberly with approximately a 3 percent increase in funding. This amount will likely not cover the anticipated 4 to 5 percent rate of inflation expected within the next school year," he said.

This year's levy is the smallest proposed by the district in recent years.

"Top priority for the extra tax money is supplying an additional fourth-grade classroom with student desks, chairs, textbooks and other equipment at a cost of $4,258."

Bicycle path will benefit from grant

By The Times-News
 and the Associated Press

TWIN FALLS - Gov. Cecil Andrus has announced a $73,200 grant to Blaine County to construct the Ketchum-to-Elkhorn Road portion of the Wood River Trails bicycle path.

It is one of eight bike path projects statewide to receive funding from "stripper well" grants, which are distributed by the state. The money comes from a settlement between the U.S. Department of Energy and several oil companies for overcharges between 1973 and 1982. Idaho has received about $3.8 million from that source.

The Blaine County application asked for $148,440 for a three-mile stretch of a bike system that should eventually span from Ketchum to Bellevue. Half of the project was funded, which includes construction of a bridge over the Wood River.

A total of 42 communities applied for 62 different projects. Several other Magic Valley communities submitted bids that were not selected, including Twin Falls, Rupert, Heyburn, Shoshone, Hailey, Sun Valley, Ketchum and Minidoka County.

Twin Falls applied for $100,000 to build bike trails in Rock Creek Canyon Parkway and to structure a bike and pedestrian walkway on Fillmore Street from Grant Street to Falls Avenue, said LaMar Olson, Twin Falls city planner.

In selecting the projects, the Energy Bureau of the Department of Water Resources considered whether

Idahoans oppose attempt to remove authority for the project McClure, Symms seek SIS support

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A Texas congressman is expected to attempt to remove federal authority for the Special Isotope Separation project this week, and Idaho senators Steve Symms and James McClure say they're trying to block the action.

Symms and McClure said Tuesday they have urged Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wisc., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, to oppose the action.

The Department of Defense authorization bill for fiscal year 1989 contains an appropriation of more than $100 million for construction and development of the SIS. It is to produce weapon-grade plutonium at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory in eastern Idaho.

When the bill was before the House Armed Forces Committee earlier this month, a similar amendment from Rep. Albert Bustamante, D-Texas, tried to kill the SIS authorization. It was defeated.

Symms and McClure said Bustamante has said he will offer the amendment again when the bill is debated by the full House of Representatives.

The Idahoans said it is clear the House Armed Forces Committee recognized the need for SIS when it killed the earlier amendment.

"Indeed, your committee has long been a strong supporter of the SIS," they said, in the letter to Aspin.

Cause of crash still eludes FAA officials

By KEN ARMSTRONG
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - An FAA official said Tuesday that investigators can still supply no more than the "who," "what" and "when" of the plane crash that killed two Hailey residents in January.

Answers to the "why" can be expected within a year, but probably no sooner, said Bob Rountree, accident investigator with the Federal Aviation Administration in Boise.

Rountree said the plane's wreckage is currently in a secured hangar at the Pocatello Municipal Airport.

"There's going to be some further investigation on the systems," he said.

Two motorcycle riders on April 17 found wreckage of the plane, which disappeared Jan. 12 while going from Gooding to Hailey. The single-engine plane, a red and white Cessna 180, crashed in the Smoky Mountains roughly 20 miles northwest of Fairfield.

Dr. Robert Miller, 45, and Kathryn Skuce were believed killed on impact in the crash.

Officials initially planned to take the plane's wreckage to the Gooding Municipal Airport, but the company that insured the plane intervened and it was instead taken to Pocatello, said Camas County Sheriff Harold Lee. Miller, who owned and piloted the plane, jumped it with Jordan Associates of Salt Lake City.

Lee said the wreckage was removed to Pocatello on April 20. Officials were thwarted by bad weather in their attempts to recover the wreckage prior to that time.

Rountree said the FAA handled the on-site accident investigation for the National Transportation Safety Board, which is responsible for assigning a cause to the crash. The NTSB "will probably come out with its findings within the next year," he said.

The delay can be attributed to the NTSB's hefty workload, Rountree said.

Lee said local officials, including those from Camas and Blaine counties, will now take something of a backseat to the federal officials. "I doubt we'll take much of a role from here on for assigning a cause to the crash," Lee said.

Lee said local officials still have personal items recovered from the crash site which need to be returned to the victims' family members.

Pool

The project now stands at $1,065,000.

"However, some council members said they are concerned about doing saving measures in the bathhouse's lockers."

Courtney said that replacing 300 coin-operated stainless-steel lockers with 40 two-tier adult sized lockers and 210 wire baskets without lockers would save $20,000.

Councilman Tom Condie asked if not providing lockers to swimmers would make the city liable for thefts.

"Yes, there could be a problem," Courtney said.

"I'm all for cutting costs, but will it be worth the savings?" Condie asked.

Attorney Richard Carr suggested checking out locks to swimmers to avoid potential liability.

Other bidders for the project included Ormond Builders at $1.43 million and William Henderson Construction at $1.39 million.

An advisory committee reviewed the proposals without looking at prices and chose Contractors Northwest, Courtney said.

Clow said Contractors Northwest and Lombard-Conrad were the most flexible and responsive to the committee's concern, and they were also the lowest bidders.

"My personal opinion is they were the most sensitive to the budget and were very well prepared," Clow said.

The city has picked a school-owned site on Locust Street and Stadium Boulevard. The pool will be wrapped around the school's tennis courts, and includes a berm on the north to block noise, a 6-foot, chain-link fence on the east boundary, and a 6-foot high wood fence on the north boundary.

The Twin Falls School District will partially heat the pool with its geothermal well. It has leased the land to the city for 75 years at no cost.

any hazards now exist; if construction could start immediately; if local money, labor or materials would be used to extend grant money; whether the project would reduce vehicle use; and the estimated number of users.

Bob Hoppie, who heads the project for the Energy Bureau said he expects to have more funds available for another cycle of grants soon.

The projects were spread out geographically. Also receiving grant money were:

Ada County, $220,000 grant to purchase land for a right-of-way to extend its Greenbelt bicycle path; Jefferson County, $72,000, to build a bike path from Rigby to Jefferson County Park; Pocatello, $92,700, to expand and improve its trails; Salmon, $11,400, to upgrade an existing bike path along Idaho 28.

Idaho Falls, $50,000, to build a pathway along the Snake River; Moscow, $25,000, to extend its bike path system; and Bonners Ferry, $15,000, to build a section of bike path to complete a route through the city.

Levy

The district also has two big-ticket purchases planned - a $35,000 bus and a $22,000 portable classroom for the extra fourth-grade class. The school board has already opened for bids on the project, but planned to delay any action until seeing if the levy passed.

The school will also spend some money to comply with state building safety requirements by installing alarm systems, fire doors and safety lights in the junior high. Unsafe and worn electrical equipment and tools will also be replaced.

The final $6,900 will be used to seal coat or repair the roofs of the elementary and high school buildings.

The levy will cost taxpayers $1.32 per $1,000 of taxable property value.

Bausher said that new voter registration rules could also affect upcoming trustee elections. Voters must register with the county by May 6.

Seats held by Kent Taylor and James Campbell are up for election. Both men have filed petitions, but this week Campbell withdrew his petition, saying he planned to move outside the zone he had represented. Bausher said two people have already picked up petitions for the post, but neither has been returned yet.

Priest speaks for human rights

BOISE (AP) - Although the influence of white supremacy organizations such as the Aryan Nations is declining, people should not think it is entirely gone, says a northern Idaho human rights leader.

"I'm doing what I like to do best, encouraging people not to be apathetic," said the Rev. Bill Wassmuth. "I want everyone to be energized to saying yes to human rights."

The priest, who has been active in human rights organizations in the Coeur d'Alene area, spoke Tuesday to the annual meeting of the Boise YWCA. He is leaving the state in June to accept a new church assignment.

The Hayden Lake-based white supremacist organization, Aryan Nations or Church of Jesus Christ Christian, is declining, Wassmuth said, with considerable federal and state attention to its activities.

"They have no real voice, no real power, no real influence now," Wassmuth said. But the white supremacy organizations are not gone and will arise again in a new place, in a new way and with new leadership, he said.

A federal court jury in Arkansas recently acquitted white supremacists on sedition charges, including Richard Butler, head of the Aryan Nations.

Wassmuth said he was disappointed at the verdict, but did not setback for the human rights movement.

"I believe in the judicial system," he said.

"It was not wasted," he said, of the long trial, because it exposed to public view the philosophies of white supremacist organizations.

"They were condemned in the public eye, if not in the judicial system," Wassmuth said.

Court defines public roads

BOISE (AP) - The continuing public use of a public road, no matter how slight, is enough to keep it from being declared a nonpublic thoroughfare, the Idaho Supreme Court says.

The court on Tuesday sided with 2nd District Judge Ron Schilling, who ruled Public Road 400 in Latah County, between Moscow and Princeton, had not been abandoned.

But the court overturned Schilling's refusal to award attorney fees to Melvin Tiggart, who brought the suit.

Under the Private attorney general theory first used in a 1984 Idaho reapportionment battle, the Supreme Court held that Tiggart was entitled to attorney fees.

The court said the road was established in 1904, and for many years was the main road between Moscow and Princeton. But a newer road cut traffic on the old road, until eventually it was used only by area farmers for access and to haul produce to market and by hunters and fishermen.

When a neighbor tried to barricade the road, Tiggart sued.

The Supreme Court held that the North Latah County Highway District never formally abandoned the road. Continuing use, no matter how slight, prevents the road from reverting to nonpublic status, the court said.

Justice Stephen Bistline dissented from the awarding of attorney fees to Tiggart.

Explorer denies role in Shippee death

BOISE (AP) — Explorer Ken Warren of Portland contends the Chinese government, the team physician and Boise photographer David Shippee himself were responsible for Shippee's death on a Yangtze River expedition in 1986.

Warren appeared at press conference Monday before presenting a slide show of the China expedition at Boise State University.

About 15 people picketed outside the show, carrying signs with slogans such as "Boycott Warren, remember Shippees."

"We're concerned that people may forget that a life was lost," said Rob Lesser, a world-class kayaker.

Warren also announced Monday the signing of a contract with the Chinese to make another attempt at rafting the 2,172-mile upper Yangtze. He said he expects to set a date for the trip in the next two months.

Shippee's widow, Margit, is suing Warren, his wife Jan, and a television producer for more than $1.1 million in U.S. District Court in Idaho for her husband's death, attributed to altitude sickness. She alleges Warren failed to provide promised radio communication, and that the team was taken to high altitude without proper acclimatization.

The expedition ended about halfway to its goal after rafts were damaged in raging rapids.

Warren is suing four of the 13 other crew members for breach of contract and defamation. The four left the expedition shortly after Shippee's death and blasted Warren's lack of leadership when they returned to the United States.

One of the four, Dr. David Gray of Corpus Christi, Texas, has countersued Warren.

"We feel that we have been convicted by the press," Warren said. "We would just like to present the expedition as it really was."

The government-run China Sports Service broke its commitment for air support, Warren said, while Kevin Cong of the Sports Service claims Warren did not ask for helicopter service until he arrived in China.

Warren said he told 29-year-old Shippee, a photographer for the Idaho Statesman, before they went onto the river there would be no helicopter and chance of rescue was very slim.

Gray earlier had sent Shippee down from the base camp, at 14,500 feet elevation, to the 9,000-foot level after diagnosing him as having pneumonia.

Man charged in video-store murder

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Kenneth Charles Hodges was arraigned Tuesday on a charge of criminal homicide in the Friday shooting of a pregnant West Valley City woman who died minutes after her baby was delivered.

During a hearing before 3rd Circuit Court Judge Eleanor VanSciver, Hodges, 44, also was charged with aggravated robbery and being a fugitive from justice.

VanSciver set bail at $500,000 for the criminal homicide charge in the death of Anna Holmes, 31, and $100,000 on each of the other two charges. Hodges was being held Tuesday in Salt Lake County Jail.

He was arrested without incident Monday night at a Salt Lake County apartment, authorities said.

Holmes was shot in the head during a robbery of a Kearsy video store. She died minutes after giving birth by Caesarian section to a fourth daughter.

ter. The infant remained in serious but stable condition Tuesday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Authorities received a tip Sunday from an anonymous woman who said a man matching the description of the gunman was in Salt Lake City's Liberty Park, said Salt Lake County Sheriff Pete Hayward.

Hayward said police went to the park and took a picture of the man and later showed it to witnesses who identified him as the gunman.

The sheriff said Hodges also is wanted in Eureka, Calif., for burglary and has a long list of arrests in Utah. He said the man also had served time in the Utah State Prison but was not on probation or parole.

Hayward said no weapon had been recovered as of Tuesday.

Holmes, whose husband was on a Scout camping trip at the time, had gone to the Voyager Video store with her three daughters to rent tapes for a pajama party her daughters and neighborhood friends were planning.

A gunman entered the store, drew a handgun and demanded money.

"Mrs. Holmes was standing off to herself and was not being any particular problem for the suspect," the sheriff's report said. "The suspect reached out and grabbed her and held her with the gun against her neck."

Authorities speculate the robber was not satisfied with the $320 he received and, enraged, pulled the trigger.

Sheriff's Capt. Bob Jack said the state crime lab is conducting tests on evidence, including a blood-stained shirt found in a field near the video store.

"There's an awful lot of evidence that's being processed at this time," Jack said, but declined to elaborate.

Chernobyl protesters go free after time in jail

KENNEWICK, Wash. (AP) — Three anti-nuclear activists who took part in a Chernobyl-related protest last year were released from jail Tuesday, the second anniversary of the Soviet reactor disaster that helped spark the closure of Hanford's N Reactor.

The protesters were among 11 people arrested for trespassing on the federal Hanford nuclear reservation on April 26, 1987, as part of demonstrations marking the one-year anniversary of the Chernobyl accident.

They served 20-day jail terms.

"After 20 days we can still walk out," said Lourdes Fuentes-Williams, 33, of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. "But after two years those people (Chernobyl residents) can't go home."

Hanford, located adjacent to the Tri-Cities of Kennewick, Richland and Pasco, has made plutonium for the nation's nuclear weapons arsenal since it was created in 1943 as part of the Manhattan Project.

The Chernobyl accident, which left 31 people dead, prompted detailed investigations of Hanford's N Reactor, which shared some design similarities with the Chernobyl plant.

The N Reactor was initially closed in January 1987 for extensive safety improvements. Its restart became a major political battle before the U.S. Department of Energy decided to mothball the plant earlier this year, saying the nation no longer needed the plutonium. It was the last remaining plutonium producer at Hanford.

The release of the activists on the Chernobyl anniversary was not planned, they said.

The three, including Al Mangan, 65, and Sheila Lynch, 38, both of Spokane, were serving the 20 days in lieu of paying $500 fines for the criminal trespass convictions.

They were among 11 members of Coalition Organizing Hanford Opposition who were convicted in September in Benton County District Court. Three members must still serve time. The others either served time or paid the $500.

The 11 people sealed a fence surrounding the 570-square mile reservation and got 30 yards into the site before being arrested by members of the Hanford Patrol.

"This is the second anniversary of Chernobyl and the first anniversary of the liberation of the N Reactor," Mangan said.

The three still must complete two years on probation, or face an additional 68 days in jail, they said.

They were greeted outside the county jail building by four members of COHO, who brought a fruit basket, a cake and balloons.

Ms. Fuentes-Williams kissed tears as she left the jail building, and said she would resume other protests by the weekend.

World Court rebukes U.S. for closing PLO mission

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) - The International Court of Justice on Tuesday ruled that the United States violated its U.N. treaty by closing the Palestine Liberation Organization mission in New York.

The court, which has no enforcement powers, ruled that the PLO issue must go to independent arbitration.

Thurs. of the United States ordered the mission closed after President Reagan signed new anti-terrorist legislation in December. Under the law, the PLO is classified as a "terrorist organization" and is prevented from operating on U.S. soil.

Court President Jose Maria Ruda, reading from the 22-page opinion, said the closure order violated a 1947 pact between the Truman administration and the U.N. that assured diplomats unhindered access to the international organization.

That agreement, called the Headquarters Agreement, calls for arbitration in such disputes, which the United States has rejected.

The U.S. government maintains that the anti-terrorist law is exempt from "any international legal obligations that the United States may have under the Headquarters Agreement."

The Reagan administration move against the PLO's American presence has been condemned by all U.N. member nations except the United States and Israel.

Carl-August Fleischhauer of West Germany, the U.N. undersecretary-general for legal affairs, told reporters after Tuesday's ruling that he was not optimistic that the United States would submit to arbitration.

"Although we want harmonious relations with our host country, we are satisfied that the court spoke in the same sense as we did," Fleischhauer said.

"We are ready to go to arbitration. It is now basically for the United States government to decide what conclusions it draws from this ruling," he said.

The PLO was granted permanent observer status by the United Nations General Assembly in 1974, and its U.N. mission has been operating since then out of an office in Manhattan.

The PLO's information office in Washington was closed down prior to passage of the legislation.

Early this year, the U.S. government said that arbitration was premature, noting that the anti-terrorist law would go into effect on March 22.

When the PLO refused to comply with U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese's March 22 order to close down its Manhattan office, the U.S. government filed suit in a New York federal court.

The American judge on the court, Stephen M. Schwab, voted against Washington despite backing the majority.

Frustrated Poles strike for 2nd day

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Hundreds of steelworkers in southern Poland went on strike for more as Tuesday as laborers' frustrations over rising inflation boiled over for the second time in two days.

Other workers threatened a walkout at a heavy machinery plant to protest the firing of two leaders of the independent Solidarity trade union for leading a protest rally.

On Monday, a strike by 2,800 transit workers in the western city of Bydgoszcz shut down buses and trams for 11 hours, forcing provincial officials to boost hourly wages by 60 percent.

The strikes appeared to be the biggest labor actions since the 1981 martial-law crackdown suppressed Solidarity, which remains banned although its leadership is still active.

A wave of strikes in 1980 gave rise to Solidarity. Strikes over higher prices have a long tradition in postwar Poland, and caused government shakeups in 1956, 1970 and 1980.

Prices have climbed 42 percent in the first three months of 1988, the government says, mainly the result of an economic reform designed to make prices more realistic and reduce subsidies for consumer staples like bread and milk.

But the planned inflation has resulted in demands for pay increases that are outstripping projections, prompting warnings from leaders of the communist government that managers should grant only raises that are economically justified.

Danes to pick course on arms

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) - Political leaders are telling Danes to choose in upcoming elections between NATO allies and the country's longstanding ban on nuclear weapons.

Prime Minister Poul Schluter, a NATO buckler, called the parliamentary elections for May 10, urging voters to "take a stand" in favor of the Western military alliance.

The sudden storm over Denmark's role in the 16-nation alliance came as a surprise to many voters. The peacetime ban on nuclear weapons has been in effect for three decades, and a shaky coalition government has been struggling with economic, not military issues.

Indeed, some voters say economic troubles remain the chief issue.

"It's not just a question about nuclear weapons but about the way the government runs society," said Susanne Nielsen, a conservative voter who works in a health insurance office. "We have to face these economic problems."

Troops, guerrillas clash along Israel's north border

JERUSALEM (AP) - Israeli troops and Arab guerrillas from Lebanon fought a sunrise battle in rocky terrain and scrub brush just inside Israel's northern border Tuesday. Two soldiers and three guerrillas were killed, the army said.

Two Israeli troops were wounded in the border clash, the bloodiest since Palestinian riots began in Israeli-occupied territories nearly five months ago.

In part of a campaign to control unrest, the army blocked hundreds of residents of the occupied Gaza Strip from reaching jobs in Israel by confiscating their ID cards and requiring them to undergo checks at government offices. U.N. officials said the new measures could affect tens of thousands of residents.

The government also temporarily revoked the press credentials of two foreign journalists, Martin Fletcher of NBC News and Glenn Frankel of The Washington Post, for reporting on the assassination of PLO military commander Khalil Wazir without submitting the reports to military censorship.

An army spokesman said the border clash started when soldiers on a pre-dawn patrol discovered footprints of a guerrilla ring that had penetrated the northern border from Lebanon about 10 miles north-east of the town of Kiriyut Shimona.

For several hours, troops lit the skies with flares and searched for the guerrillas through scrub brush and rocky paths, the spokesman said. They finally encountered them about 200 yards inside the border.

The soldiers opened fire on the guerrillas, who responded by hurling hand grenades and firing a rocket, the spokesman said.

A soldier involved in the clash said the troops and guerrillas faced off with a distance of only two yards between them.

"They were hiding on a deep slope inside a maze of trees," the soldier, who would not give his name, told Israel radio. "It was not possible to see them. From inside the maze the terrorists opened fire."

The army identified the dead soldiers as Lt. Col. Shmuel Adiv, 29, a battalion commander of the elite Givati infantry unit, and Sgt. Ramzi Wahsh, 27, a Bedouin scout. They were the first troops killed in a northern border clash since Feb. 23, when two soldiers died as their tank ran over a mine.

Gen. Yossi Peled, head of northern command, identified the guerrillas in Tuesday's clash as Palestinians and said their target was civilian settlements.

"I don't have to catch them and talk to them. I know what their aim was," Peled said on Israeli radio. "It's civilians, children, Israeli settlements."

Police spokesmen in Beirut said the seven-man guerrilla ring belonged to two pro-Soviet groups.

Party chief loses post to protests

MOSCOW (AP) - The Communist Party chief in Soviet Georgia was fired because of public protests about contaminated water that caused an outbreak of typhoid fever in which 121 people were hospitalized, it was reported Tuesday.

No one died in the outbreak earlier this month in the city of Tskhinvali, about 45 miles northwest of the Georgian capital of Tbilisi, according to the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda.

The first secretary of the regional Communist Party, P.S. Svanidze, was fired at a regional party meeting Saturday, a week after protesters gathered in front of party headquarters to complain about the water, Komsomolskaya Pravda said.

It said that 87 percent of the people who responded to a March 31 survey said the inadequate water supply was the city's main problem.

"In the best circumstances, there is only water in the homes in the mornings and the evenings. Often there is none at all," Komsomolskaya Pravda said.

The representative of the Georgian regional government appointed a commission to propose a plan for improving the city's water supply, but the protesters were not satisfied with the offer.

The Soviet news agency Tass said regional leaders have been negligent in not ensuring that a new water supply long under construction be put into service.

Chemical leak taints water

TOKYO (AP) - Sodium cyanide and other toxic chemicals leaked from a factory into a river near the capital, killing hundreds of fish and threatening drinking water, officials said Tuesday.

The leak from a diesel engine factory 30 miles north of Tokyo included 77 pounds of sodium cyanide, enough to kill about 350,000 people.

An environmental official who spoke on condition of anonymity said his office detected almost nine parts per million of sodium cyanide, eight times the fatal amount, in the Truma River downstream from the leak. There were about 1,000 dead fish in the river, he said.

There were no reports of injuries to residents.

Two water-purifying plants downstream from the spill supply water to Tokyo and Saitama. In addition, water from the river flows into the Arakawa River, a major source of drinking water for Tokyo residents.

UNO changes Floyd's mind; Idaho elevates assistant Davis

MOSCOW (AP) — Idaho assistant coach Kermit Davis was elevated to head coach Tuesday, replacing Tim Floyd and becoming the youngest head basketball coach in NCAA Division I.

Davis, 28, becomes Idaho's 23rd head coach. He is seven months younger than Lehigh's Fran McFery, who turned 29 last Saturday.

Davis takes over for Floyd, who agreed to accept the head coaching position at New Orleans.

TIM FLOYD
Weekend conversion

"Offensively, there might be some similarities, but there also might be some things that we're going to try to do different that I developed over the years in my philosophy of coaching."

UNO President Richard Gibb said New Orleans agreed to pay $25,000 to compensate UI for the year remaining on Floyd's contract.

"We're very sorry to lose Tim Floyd," Gibb said. "When people have done a good job, we don't like to stand in their way."

Davis, who inherits a team that loses only one senior, signed a one-year, $45,000 contract, the school said.

Last season, the Vandals placed second in the Big Sky Conference and finished with an overall 19-11 record. Prior to a 16-14 season in 1986-87, the Vandals had finished last in the Big Sky three straight seasons.

Davis came to Idaho from South-west Mississippi Junior College where he spent two years as the head coach, posting a 39-20 record.

"The continuity from hiring from within is really important," he said.

"The things Tim did here for two years — getting guys to play hard, getting competitive people, getting guys who are coming here to get an education, who want to be at the University of Idaho, is still something we're going to try to keep intact."

Floyd is taking Bret Iba, his other assistant, with him to New Orleans; so Davis will have to hire two new assistants within the next few weeks, Idaho's sports information department said.

UNO officials would not confirm Floyd's hiring but scheduled a 1 p.m. MDT press conference in New Orleans today to make some unspecified announcements.

Asked if Floyd would be at Wednesday's press conference, UNO sports information director Ed Cassiere replied: "We're not saying anything because he hasn't signed anything yet."

Reports from Moscow said Floyd, 33, agreed last weekend to accept the UNO job with the condition that the move was acceptable to UI officials.

Floyd, 35-25 in two seasons at Idaho, had announced last Friday his withdrawal from consideration for the Louisiana post.

The search for a replacement for Art Tolis, who was fired after a 21-11 in his first season at UNO, was thrown into a turmoil earlier Tuesday when the third- and last finalist withdrew his name from consideration.

Auburn assistant Ned Fowler withdrew Monday and Tom Nissalke, general manager of the Rapid City, S.D., Thrillers of the Continental Basketball Association, withdrew Tuesday.

In stepping aside, Nissalke cited business and personal involvement in Salt Lake City, where he was coach of the Utah Jazz of the NBA from 1979 through 1981.

The search committee interviewed nine applicants two weeks ago, then announced three finalists: Nissalke, Floyd and Fowler, head man at Tulane when the school abandoned men's basketball three years ago.

Nissalke cited family considerations as the reason for ending his candidacy, according to Dave Sherman, the chairman of UNO's seven-member search committee.

"Tom has a very successful restaurant operation in Salt Lake City," Sherman said. "His wife is heavily involved in community activities and he has two children still in college. He did not want to relocate at this time."

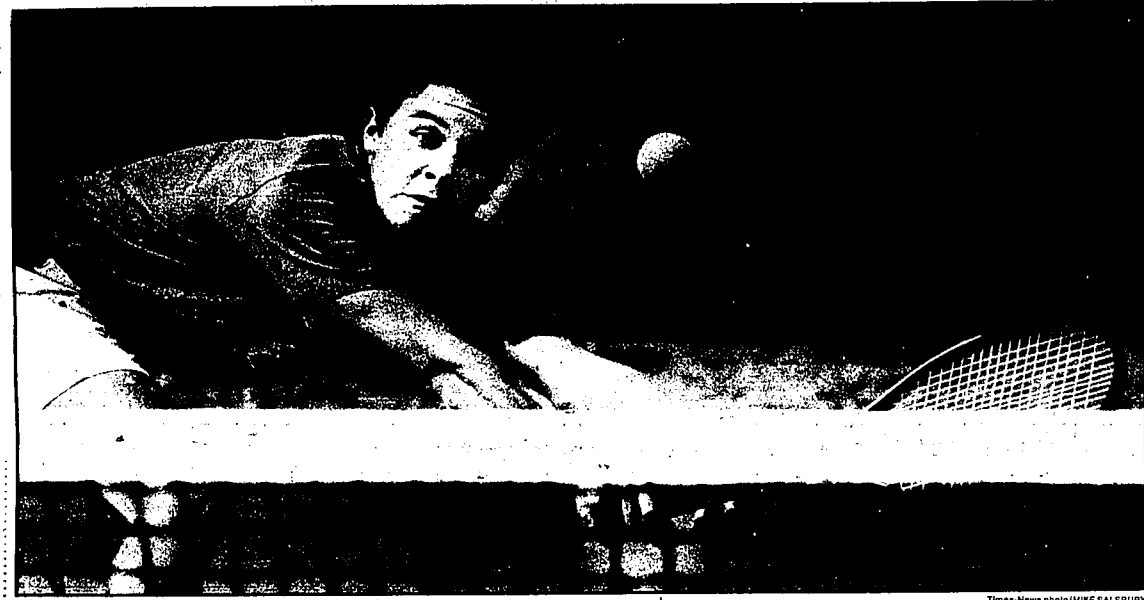

Nissalke said, "I think UNO is a terrific basketball opportunity, especially for a young coach who will give a minimum of 4-5 years to the program. They have a great facility, the campus is attractive and most important, it's a great school."

Nissalke recently completed his first season as general manager of the Thrillers.

Wolverines bury District 4 champ Community School

By COLIN MULDOON
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Tuesday afternoon's District 4 Class B high school tennis clash here at the Woodside Racquet Club pitted the district's two best teams from last year.

But in the end, it was Wood River upending defending district champion Ketchum-Sun Valley Community School, the district's defending champions, 10-2 in a dual meet.

The loss drops the Cutthroats' overall record to 1-1-1. They will host Jerome in a dual meet today beginning at 3 p.m.

The Wolverines, the 1986 district and state champions, remained unbeaten this season.

Although the team score was lopsided, five matches went three games, which signaled to Community School Coach Mike Wade that his team may lack the depth to beat an A-2 size school like Wood River, it certainly does not lack the competitiveness. Still, according to Wade, Wood River presents formidable opposition come district tourney time.

"I think we will be competitive in the district tournament along with Jerome and Wood River," Wade said of the fourth district championship May 6 and 7 in Hailey, "but Wood River is the clear favorite."

"Wood River's No. 1 doubles (Brad Jaques and David Slocum) is apparently unbeatable," Wade said, "so is their No. 1 boys and girls (Florian Enzinger and Bridget Thornton, respectively). They have three events locked up."

"We have no areas where we are unbeatable. Wood River has three No.

1's who no one can beat. We can't be them, Jerome can't and Gooding can't," he said.

Only one of those "three" however, for Wood River, captured easy victories in Tuesday's matchups.

Thornton defeated the Community School's Allison Inch in straight sets 6-2, 6-1, in the No. girls' singles, but Enzinger needed three sets to put away Brian Cronin 6-1, 4-6, 6-4 in the No. 1 boys' contest.

Jaques and Slocum also needed three sets to defeat Clay Pereria and Tomatoa Gillot 5-7, 6-0, 6-1 in the No.

1 doubles matchup.

The Community School did pick up victories from Colby Smith in the No. 2 boys' singles and Karoline Droege and Danielle Crist in the No. 2 girls' doubles.

Smith defeated Scott Starbuck 7-5, 6-4 while Droege and Crist got by Amy Christiansen and Monica Streit 7-6, 6-4.

Boy's singles:
No. 1 Florian Enzinger WR, over Brian Cronin 6-1, 4-6, 6-4;
No. 2 Colby Smith KSC, over Scott Starbuck 7-5, 6-4; No. 3 Brian Jaques WR, over Andy Koene 6-1, 6-3.

Girls' singles:
No. 1 Bridget Thornton WR, over Allison Inch 6-2, 6-1; No. 2

Spartans whip Twin Falls, give Rams top seed in region tourney

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Junior right-hander Danny Poulton kept moving the ball around, varying speeds and finally just going with his strength in pitching the Minico Spartans past the Twin Falls Bruins 10-5 here Tuesday afternoon in a Gem State Conference and Region III high school baseball game.

The victory clinched first placed in the regular-season Region III chase and the top seed in the season-ending tournament for the Highland Rams and left Minico and Twin Falls tied in the loss column for a possible second-place seeding. Key to those seedings is the right to entertain regional tournament games, which will qualify two teams for the state tournament.

Minico, 9-10 overall and 3-3 in the region, remains the integrator in the chase as the Spartans will host Pocatello, currently 14-5 and 3-2, in a critical double-header May 7. The possibilities for second place are several with Twin Falls, 13-7 and 4-3, having a shot if it beats Burley in its last regional game; Minico could get there if it sweeps Pocatello, and Pocatello would have it if the Indians can sweep the Spartans. The combinations for ties for second remain as complicated.

"This sure didn't help us (in the question for the home designation)," said Bruin Coach Bill Ingram after the Tuesday loss. "We still have a chance if Minico beats Pocatello twice but the thing is, to get to state where we want to be, we will have to beat three teams once the regional tournament starts to get there. Being home would have been nice but we still will have the chance."

"I still think that Pocatello, Highland, Minico and Twin Falls are very similar teams in depth and talent and while Highland might have the one best pitcher, we're all headed for an awfully tight regional."

Ingram said his Bruins fell Tuesday because "we didn't come to play the first four innings" when the

Orioles stagger within one loss of AL record

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Everything looked so right for the Baltimore Orioles Tuesday night.

Fred Lynn's leadoff home run. Great defensive plays. Champagne waiting on ice in the clubhouse.

And then, suddenly, they lost.

The Orioles stumbled to 0-19 and staggered within one game of the longest losing streak in American League history, falling to the Minnesota Twins 4-2 on two home runs by Kent Hrbek and another by Randy Bush.

"It's like we're not doing enough to win a ballgame," Orioles Manager Frank Robinson said. "It looks like it will take a shutout."

Mike Morgan, appeared headed that way, taking a three-hitter and 2-0 lead into the sixth inning. But Hrbek hit a two-run homer and Bush a solo shot, and that was enough to bury the Birds.

More baseball — B7

This seemed to be the Orioles' night when Lynn opened the game with a home run. Instead, it suddenly disintegrated into disaster.

"I'm very realistic," Robinson said. "It was nice to get out to that early lead, but I knew we'd need more runs to win."

Not even Monday's encouraging call from President Reagan to Robinson could help the Orioles, who had champagne chilling in their locker room in anticipation of a victory.

Baltimore came to the AL mark of 20 consecutive losses, last done by the Philadelphia Athletics in 1943, with another loss Wednesday night in Minnesota. The all-time major-league record is 23 consecutive losses by the Philadelphia Phillies in 1961.

When all you need is something special for company, a favorite meat, chicken or fish, look to colorful Springtime Wild Rice, a light and fresh accompaniment that adds sparkle to any meal.

HERBED STEAK WITH BROWN AND WILD RICE
1 1/2 to 1 3/4 pounds boneless beef flank or top sirloin steak
2 tablespoons chopped fresh thyme leaves or 2 teaspoons dried
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 bay leaf
1 cup dry red wine
1 package (6-ounces) brown and wild rice commercial mix with mushrooms...
1 1/2 cups water
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 cup julienne zucchini or yellow squash
1 small tomato, chopped
cracked black pepper

Place beef in glass dish. Sprinkle with thyme, garlic and bay leaf; pour wine over all. Let stand at room temperature 20 to 30 minutes, or cover and refrigerate up to 8 hours, turning occasionally. Pour off marinade; place beef on rack in shallow roasting pan. Sprinkle with salt to taste. Place in preheated 425 degree oven. Immediately reduce heat to 325 degrees. Roast until meat thermometer inserted in thickest portion of meat reads 140 degrees for rare, about 80 minutes.

While beef roasts, combine contents of rice and seasoning packets, water and butter in saucepan. Bring to a boil. Cover tightly and simmer 20 minutes. Stir in zucchini. Cover and remove from heat. Let stand 5 minutes, or until desired consistency. Sprinkle with tomato slices, beef across grain into 1/2-inch slices, serve alongside rice. Serve with cracked black pepper. Makes 4 servings.

GINGER-GLAZED HENS WITH CASHIEW WILD RICE
2 Cornish game hens
1/2 cup prepared horseradish
2 teaspoons soy sauce
1 package (6-ounces) long grain and wild rice mix
1/2 cup spinach
1/2 cup cashews
1/2 cup butter
2 cups water
1/2 cup chicken broth
1/2 cup white wine
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 cup soy sauce
1/2 cup ketchup
1/2 cup vinegar
1/2 cup Worcestershire sauce
1/2 cup olive oil
1/2 cup lemon juice

Asparagus is back
— for the picking

As for April, asparagus, artichoke and "antsy-to-get-in-the-garden."
Because I don't trust the weather, I don't start my garden until May (it needs every advantage I can give it, even the neighbors talk to my plants to help them!) So April is free to gather asparagus and buy some artichokes and go for it!

Asparagus is a sacred tradition in the Magic Valley. One of the most startling facts we share with folks in our travels is that we have great asparagus — free, just for the picking. You see we aren't the only ones crazy about this vegetable, the people in Germany are probably more avid than we are. They say they have five seasons, the regular four plus asparagus.

As far as artichokes go, I find it odd that our forefathers would eat these strange, lathal-looking vegetables (actually a member of the thistle family) long before they would try an innocent-looking potato.

Today I'm going to share a couple of creamy soup recipes featuring these A+ vegetables that are available right now.

Here is a creamy stock recipe that I picked up along the way and found it to be a good one to use for creamed vegetable soup. It can be frozen so you have it on hand, but I recommend using it, even if frozen, in six weeks or less.

CREAMY VEGETABLE SOUP BASE
(Makes 8-10 servings)
2 (10 1/2-ounce) cans condensed chicken broth
1/2 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup finely chopped carrot
1/2 cup finely chopped celery
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1/2 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg (important)
4 cups milk
water or milk (optional for thinning after cooking)

In a large saucepan combine the broth, onion, carrots and celery. Bring to a boil and reduce heat, then cover and simmer for about 15 minutes (until vegetables are tender).

Place this mixture in a food processor or blender and blend until smooth. Set aside.

In a saucepan melt the butter or margarine (at this point add the nutmeg as it's better sauteed a bit) then add the flour and stir well. Slowly stir in the pureed mixture plus the milk. Cook and stir until thickened (about the time it gets bubbly). Remove from heat and cool. You should place a sheet of waxed paper over the surface so it doesn't thicken. After it's cooled, you can remove the paper and cover and refrigerate until ready to serve.

When ready to serve, bring the soup base to a boil over medium-high heat and stir in the prepared vegetables. Stir often so it doesn't scorch and lower the heat a bit so the flavors meld.

Serve hot and add grated cheese, croutons or a whisk of cream or red tomato sauce for accent.

ARTICHOKE SOUP
4 medium-sized artichokes, stems trimmed off even with the base
2 large garlic cloves, minced or sliced
1 lemon, sliced
4 tablespoons of olive oil

Place the artichokes in a large saucepan and add 4-5 cups water. I try to find a pan the artichokes will just fit in and add water to 1-inch from the top. Add the garlic, lemon slices and olive oil to the water.

Cover and bring to a boil over high heat. Lower the heat and simmer the artichokes for 40-45 minutes, or until an outer leaf pulls away from the base very easily.

Drain the artichokes and set them aside. Discard the garlic and lemon.

After the artichokes are cool enough to handle, discard the outermost leaves around the base. Begin removing the additional leaves, scraping the flesh from the inside bottom of each, using a teaspoon or grapefruit spoon. Put the flesh in a small bowl. You can cut off the really soft part of the innermost leaves and use it too.

Couple combines on gourmet meals

TWIN FALLS — They say too many cooks spoil the broth, but this has not been the case for Susan and Ken Roy.

He fixes dinner on weekdays. She takes over on weekends. And they collaborate on the creation of delicious dishes for the two gourmet clubs they belong to.

Each has a career: Ken is in real estate and appraisal, and Susan is a lawyer. By taking turns or joining forces, meal preparation is not a problem for the busy pair.

Ken is the first to get off work, so he picks up 5-year-old Eric from day care. After he gets home, he puts together the evening meal.

It is the preparation of gourmet dishes that they enjoy the most. Susan is philosophical about the complications that sometimes arise with unfamiliar recipes.

"Everybody has a miserable failure," she says. "A lot of people get so nervous about trying to fix anything unusual. I think the most important thing we've learned is just to roll with the punches."

Ken is adventuresome in his cooking, adding that he doesn't think men have as much ego involvement in it as women do. "I think maybe they subconsciously feel that's a reflection on their ability as a mother or a homemaker," he says.

The following recipe is one that Ken and Susan used for a main course of a gourmet dinner. It is elegant, but not too difficult.

Susan and Ken Roy, Twin Falls, combine for creative cooking

SOLE EN PAPILLOTE
(Sole in paper, serves 8)
10 small sole filets
24 small mushroom caps
3/4 cup butter, softened
1/2 cup chopped shallots
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon white pepper
12 slices of carrot
one split of dry champagne
1 cup skimmed canned chicken broth
1/2 cup flour
1/4 cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
1 egg white, slightly beaten lemon wedges

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Set butter in a baking pan. Sprinkle that with the shallots, salt and pepper.

Lay the filets in the pan, folded side down. Put the 12 remaining mushroom caps and the carrots in the pan. Pour in the champagne and the chicken broth. Cover the pan with foil. Bring it to a boil on the stove, and then immediately place the pan in the oven and bake for 20 minutes.

Then make a sauce by mixing 1/2 of the butter with the flour, and set that aside. Then take non-waxed butcher paper and cut an oval, about 20-inches long and 14-inches wide. Cut another piece of butcher paper about 1-inch bigger all around. Using the bigger oval as the top, butter the bottom sheet of paper to within 1-inch of the edge, and put it on an ovenproof platter or cookie sheet.

When the fish is baked, slightly lift the filets, mushroom caps and carrot.

Spoon the sauce over the filets, enough to cover and sprinkle with parsley. Brush the edges of both pieces of paper with egg white, and fold them over each other, and crumple them together to get a tight seal on the paper. Then brush the edges and top sheet of the paper with egg white.

Put it back in oven and bake for 10 minutes or until the paper actually gets crisp and puffs up and begins to brown. Cut the paper open at the table. Serve with the lemon wedges. Pass the remaining sauce.

"This is one of our favorite dishes," Susan says, "It's really different, and most people have never had anything like it."

The next recipe, although lengthy, is not very time-consuming, if every thing is set out and handy.

RAY SCALLOPS WITH RED PEPPER AND ZUCCHINI
(Serves 2 or 3)
3 medium garlic cloves, peeled
1 slice fresh ginger, peeled
2 tablespoons dry sherry
2 tablespoons tomato sauce
1 tablespoon oyster sauce
1 tablespoon light soy sauce
2 teaspoons sesame oil
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1/4 teaspoon fresh ground white pepper
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 1/2 tablespoons cold water
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1/2 pound fresh bay scallops
1 sweet red pepper, cored, seeded and cut into 1/4-inch squares
1 small zucchini, trimmed, quartered lengthwise and cut crosswise at 1/4-inch intervals
3 medium scallions, trimmed and sliced diagonally at 1/4-inch intervals

Use the metal blade of a food processor, and with the machine running, drop the garlic and ginger through the feed tube, and process it until finely minced. Set that aside and take a 1 cup measure and stir together the sherry, tomato sauce, oyster sauce, soy sauce, sesame oil, sugar and ground pepper. Set that aside. In a small dish, mix together the cornstarch and water and set that aside.

Strawberry lamb shoulder chops combine the sweet tartness of fruit with lamb's mild flavor

Strawberries make lamb elegant

Strawberry Lamb Shoulder Chops is an elegant, yet easy recipe that's sure to become a grilling favorite. Featuring lamb shoulder chops, this recipe is an unusual blend of flavors combining the tart sweetness of a fruit sauce with the mild flavor of lamb.

STRAWBERRY LAMB SHOULDER CHOPS

4 lamb-shoulder chops, cut 1-inch thick
salt and pepper to taste

1 tablespoon oil
½ cup lamb or chicken stock
• 1 pint (2 cups) fresh strawberries
1 tablespoon sugar
4 teaspoons raspberry vinegar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon strawberry extract (optional)

Oven instructions: Salt and pepper lamb to taste. Sear lamb in hot oil until well browned on both sides. Reduce heat, add lamb stock, cover and simmer 30 minutes. Meanwhile, in a blender or food processor, puree

1 cup strawberries, sugar, raspberry vinegar and cornstarch until smooth. Remove lamb from pan and keep warm. Degrease cooking liquid. Pour pureed strawberry mixture into pan juices. Stir over medium heat until thickened and "smooth." Stir in extract (optional). Return lamb to pan and spoon sauce over lamb.

Serve lamb with sauce and additional strawberries to garnish. Makes 4 servings.
Grilling instructions: Salt and pepper lamb chops to taste. Grill over medium coals about 4-inches from source of heat, 10-12 minutes. Turn chops and grill until done, 10-12 minutes longer, brushing frequently with Fresh Strawberry Sauce.

Serve remaining sauce with lamb. *Fresh Strawberry Sauce for grilling: In food processor or blender, puree 1 cup strawberries, stock and remaining ingredients. Pour into medium saucepan and cook over medium heat until thickened.

Elaine's celebrates a glittery 25 years

Manhattan restaurant is called 'a living People magazine'

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a typical night at Elaine's, that ordinary restaurant with the extraordinary clientele: Woody Allen was at his table. Albert Finney held court at another. Paloma Picasso stopped by.

And owner Elaine Kaufman table hopped, playing the amiable host, the worldly-wise wisecracker, the sound-bored to the stars.

That was Saturday. Monday night was expected to exceed even the starry standards of Elaine's as friends help celebrate the first quarter-century of the cluttered Italian restaurant.

Among those who said they'll be there: actresses Raquel Welch and Mary Tyler Moore, director Sidney Lumet, developer Donald Trump, writer Jackie Collins and model Cheryl Tiegs.

"This place is a living People magazine," said bartender Brian McDonald.

Elaine's, a watering hole for writers, a wellspring for gossip columnists and a favorite target of food critics, remains an anomaly in the fickle world of Manhattan restaurants.

It's a friendly-looking place with a reputation, deserved or not, for rudeness. It has lasted 25 years despite universally bad reviews.

And though it is filled with beautiful people, it may seem a dingy dump to those who know of it only through the gossip columns.

"Just a nice, neighborhood restaurant," is how Elaine describes it. "A good bottle of wine, a nice plate of pasta — I mean, that's life."

Author Gay Talese, a regular from the start, said, "There's no officious maitre d' in black tie, saying, 'Wait at the bar while I see about a table.' Here, you have the bespectacled, stout and smiling Elaine greeting you and saying, 'Of course there's a table for you.'"

Of course — for him. For Talese, that means one of the large round tables along the right-hand side, Elaine's Wall of Fame, so to speak. Though it's not true that tables are hard to come by, it is true that the prominent ones are kept open for the regulars: Others are shunted to the rear.

"I'm afraid you don't get treated very well if you don't have a pencil in your top pocket," said author George Plimpton, whose colleagues at the Paris Review were among the first regulars.

A few weeks ago, it was American Literature 103 along the wall; Talese, Norman Mailer, Kurt Vonnegut, Arthur Miller.

"Writers do tend to get together, somewhat like crackles, and what better telephone wire than the tables at Elaine's?" said Plimpton.

When Elaine plunked down $10,000 for a Hungarian bar in the unfashionable Yorkville section in 1963, she already knew some show folk, writers and artists from her days as a waitress and cafe manager in Greenwich Village.

"Actually, what I did was just bring the Village uptown," she said.

One day, the artist couple Robert Motherwell and Helen Frankenthaler stopped by, and "they kept coming in. And they would bring their friends."

Once primarily a writer's haunt, it has become a requisite stop for celebrities from all walks, from Prince Edward to Prince, Billy D. Williams to Jackie Mason.

Allen, who set the opening scene of "Manhattan" in Elaine's, comes because "he loves to people-watch," Elaine said. "It's comfortable, nobody bothers him, we make him what he wants."

Anyone who wants to spend $3.50 for a bottle of beer can stand at the bar and people-watch, too, and listen to the stories.

Like the time Mailer and a lady friend were asked to leave after arguing with Elaine over whether he could unscrew a light bulb above their table.

"As he got up, he said, 'Put the bill on my tab,'" Plimpton recalled, "and Elaine said, 'You haven't got a tab here, Norman.' He reached into his pocket and threw a handful of change — there was a great clattering of coins on the floor — and by now it was a bit of a melee."

Attack the weeds, dandelions early

As the grass turns green and starts to look like a lawn again, the weeds also start growing vigorously.

Now is the best time to kill these weeds before they have time to flower and produce a new crop of seeds. Dandelions are especially early seeders and should be treated before they begin to bloom if possible. Weed killers are more effective when weeds are young and growing vigorously.

There are several lawn weed killers available which are rather simple and easy to apply. You can also hire a lawn service company or landscape maintenance company to treat the weeds in your lawn.

If you have not fertilized your lawn yet this spring, fertilizer can be combined with the weed killer. This is a very desirable combination, because the fertilizer encourages the lawn to grow thickly, leaving no room for new weeds to grow.

"2,4-D" is still the most common and inexpensive lawn weed killer. It has been proven by many years of use. Most lawn weed killers also contain one or more chemicals which improve their weed killing power. In fact a combination of chemicals is more effective on hard to kill weeds than applying the same chemicals separately.

The two most common chemicals which are combined with 2,4-D are Mecoprop (MCP) and Banvel. The combination of all three is often given the name Trimec. Turflawn and Brominal are two new chemicals which are also found in lawn weed killers.

The most economical way to apply lawn weed killer is with a liquid concentrate. The concentrate is mixed with water and applied with a sprayer. If you only have a few weeds, aerosol or pump sprays which are already diluted are convenient to apply. Granular products known as "Weed and Feed" contain both weed killer and fertilizer. They are applied with an ordinary fertilizer spreader.

When applying weed killers, it is important to avoid contacting other susceptible plants. Lawn weed killers do not damage grass, but they can damage trees, shrubs, flowers and vegetables. If desirable plants are growing next to weed infested lawn, they can be shielded with a piece of cardboard or other protection while spraying.

Proper lawn mowing is another way to reduce future lawn problems. The predominant lawn grasses in our area are Kentucky bluegrass, fine fescues and ryegrass. If they are mowed no shorter than 1½-inches, they will grow thickly and vigorously enough to shade out most weeds.

Herbs come into their own

The Washington Post

Herbs are not for witches only. Ten years ago there was sort of a mystery surrounding herbs," says Sal Gilbertie, author of "Kitchen Herbs: The Art and Enjoyment of Growing Herbs and Cooking With Them." "The people who got the publicity for growing herbs were labeled as kooks, people into witchcraft. Now the emphasis is culinary, which is their primary use."

Gilbertie — who is owner of Gilbertie's Herb Farm in Easton and Westport, Conn., the largest producer of potted herb plants in the United States — has created a book that will take you from dropping the first seed to snipping the first foliage to creating an inspired dish.

Herb growing is an art that people have been increasingly curious about, says Gilbertie. "As people travel more and eat more adventurously, they begin to discover the exciting things you can do by changing the herbs in the recipes."

They are also realizing, he says, how easy it is to grow herbs. "They do not take up as much space or energy that a regular garden does."

So get your trowel out, for now is the time to grow, according to Gilbertie — just when the ground is beginning to warm — Three major things you have to remember when growing your own herbs. They like a lot of light, circulation and room. Don't crowd them, he says. They are soft-stem plants and are very susceptible to fungus, so keep them well ventilated and do not overwater.

GRILLED TUNA WITH PECAN CORIANDER BUTTER
(6 servings)
6 tuna steaks, about 1½-inches thick
1 tablespoon olive oil
2 tablespoons fresh lime juice
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 cup pecans, lightly toasted and coarsely chopped
½ cup fresh coriander leaves
½ cup fresh parsley leaves
1 small onion
1 large garlic clove
1 small fresh jalapeno pepper, stemmed

¼ cup well-chilled unsalted butter, cut into 4 pieces
Brush tuna with olive oil and 1 tablespoon lime juice. Season with salt and pepper, to taste. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate for 2 to 3 hours.
Toast pecans by spreading them evenly on an ungreased baking sheet. Place in a 300-degree oven for 3 to 4 minutes, or until lightly toasted. In a food processor or blender, combine pecans, coriander, parsley, onion, garlic and jalapeno. With on-off turns, make fine.
With machine running, drop in butter pieces and process until smooth, stopping as needed to scrape down the sides of the work bowl or blender. Add remaining lime juice and blend until smooth. Remove coriander butter from processor or blender and cream in pecans.
Grill tuna steaks over hot coals or under a pre-heated broiler for 4 minutes per side or until medium rare. Do not overcook. Top the hot steaks with a tablespoon of the prepared butter.

chemically processed or not real cheese?

Q: A recent article I read about fast-food restaurants stated that one of the establishments pressure-cooked their chicken in oil, thus imparting a fried flavor. Can you advise me about the safety of such a cooking practice in a home? I do use the pressure cooker but only with water.
A: The Chicken Factory of Southern California prepares their breaded chicken in this manner, but they use specially designed equipment. Do not attempt to duplicate this cooking method with a home pressure cooker. With the commercial equipment a buzzer goes off and the oil is sucked out of the machine. This is not possible to do in the home.
We repeat, do not use this method to cook chicken in a home pressure cooker.

Prepared like Process Cheese, except it contains less cheese and more non-fat milk or whey solids and water. It has a slightly higher moisture and lower milk-fat content than Process Cheese.
Pasteurized Process Cheese Spread — Made like Process Cheese Food, but contains slightly higher moisture and has lower milk-fat content.
Unripened, Fresh Cheese — Not cured, so normally quite bland with a mild flavor. Cottage cheese is made from pasteurized skimmed milk, has a mild flavor, moist texture and large or small curds. Cream cheese is a mixture of whole cow's milk and cream that is pasteurized and coagulated by a lactic acid starter, has a mild flavor and buttery texture. Neufchatel cheese is a lower-fat product similar to cream cheese but made from whole cow's milk.

Take those out and set aside. Add the remaining tablespoon of oil to the wok. Add the reserved garlic and ginger, and stir that over high heat for 10 seconds. Add the red pepper, zucchini and scallion, and stir for about 30 seconds, until their color becomes very bright. Then pour the reserved sherry mixture in around the side of the wok. Return the scallions to the wok. Stir in enough of the reserved cornstarch mixture, a teaspoon at a time, to thicken the sauce slightly.
Serve immediately.
"It's delicious," Susan says. "The red peppers are sweet, but you've got the ginger and sesame oil, which is kind of a pungent flavoring. It's a real pretty dish too, because of the bright red peppers."

The next recipe is a refreshing, colorful fruit salad.
FRUIT IN SAUTERNE
½ of a large honeydew melon
5 pounds of watermelon
1 pint of strawberries

½ pound of assorted grapes — red and seedless
2 oranges
1 grapefruit
1 peach
1 apple
1 cup sauternes (sweet)
1 banana
Make balls of the honeydew and watermelon. Rinse strawberries and drain well. Hull them, but don't cut them. Rinse and pick over the blueberries. Rinse the grapes, and remove the stem. Peel the oranges and grapefruits and divide them into sections. Peel and slice the peach. Rinse and core the apple, slice it thinly, and leave the peel on. Combine all the fruits in a large, preferably clear, glass serving bowl. Pour the sauternes over them and stir gently. Be sure to coat all the fruit with the sauternes, to keep it from turning color. Refrigerate for at least two hours.

Just before serving, slice the banana and stir it into the bowl.
"It is real sweet — almost a dessert fruit salad," Susan says. "It's pretty too, because most of the fruit is left in its natural sections."

You should have about 2 cups of scrapings and leaf bottoms. (I know this sounds like a lot of work, but it goes fast.)
Now discard the chokes, the coarse fibrous coverings of the bottom-most heart. Dice the hearts coarsely and keep separate from the scrapings.
Now take 2 cups of the prepared stock mixture and blend with the scrapings to form a puree. Return this to the rest of the mixture and blend with whisk.
Now heat the stock, stirring almost constantly, until bubbly. Add the artichoke hearts and lower heat to simmer for 5 to 10 minutes. I like to add 2-4 teaspoons of fresh lemon juice to this and top with crotons.

PATTIES AU POIVRE AND RED PEPPER RICE
1 package (5-ounces) brown and wild rice mix with mushrooms
1½ cups plus 2 tablespoons water
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 pound lean ground beef
¾ teaspoon salt
1 clove garlic, minced
1 teaspoon freshly cracked black peppercorns
½ cup short, thin red bell pepper strips
2 tablespoons dry red wine
¼ cup sliced green onions
Combine contents of rice and seasoning packets, 1½ cups water and butter in saucepan. Bring to a boil.
Cover tightly and simmer 20 minutes. While rice simmers, combine beef, salt and garlic. Shape to form four oval patties about ¾-inch thick. Press pepper evenly into both sides of patties. Sauté in skillet over medium heat until desired doneness, about 3 minutes per side for medium. Remove to serving dish; keep warm. After rice has simmered 20 minutes, stir in red pepper. Cover and remove from heat.
Let stand 5 minutes, or until desired consistency. Pour off drippings from skillet. Add wine and 2 tablespoons water to skillet. Cook and stir over high heat 1 minute. Pour over beef.
Sprinkle green onions over cooked rice; serve alongside beef. Makes 4 servings.

Combine contents of rice and seasoning packets, 1½ cups water and butter in saucepan. Bring to a boil.
Cover tightly and simmer 20 minutes. While rice simmers, combine beef, salt and garlic. Shape to form four oval patties about ¾-inch thick. Press pepper evenly into both sides of patties. Sauté in skillet over medium heat until desired doneness, about 3 minutes per side for medium. Remove to serving dish; keep warm. After rice has simmered 20 minutes, stir in red pepper. Cover and remove from heat.
Let stand 5 minutes, or until desired consistency. Pour off drippings from skillet. Add wine and 2 tablespoons water to skillet. Cook and stir over high heat 1 minute. Pour over beef.
Sprinkle green onions over cooked rice; serve alongside beef. Makes 4 servings.

ASPARAGUS SOUP

2 pounds fresh asparagus, washed and woody ends broken off and discarded
2 small garlic cloves, minced
4-5 cups water, salted
In a medium-sized saucepan, combine the asparagus spears with the garlic in the water. Bring to boil over high heat, cover and simmer for 4 to 5 minutes. The asparagus tips should be tender. Remove the asparagus from the water with a slotted spoon. Cut the tips off and reserve. Cut the spears into 1-inch pieces and reserve them separately.
Use 3-4 cups of the prepared stock and heat along with the reserved pieces in a saucepan, stirring constantly. Simmer, covered for 10 minutes or until asparagus is tender.
Cool slightly and now blend or process this stock until pureed. Add it to the remaining stock and simmer for 3-4 minutes. Add the asparagus tips, cook for 2-3 minutes more, stirring frequently (don't boil) and then dish up.
These are easy soups if you make the base when you have time and then do the rest later. Actually, I've used other vegetables in this cream sauce and it's worked fine. Just use vegetables that have been pre-cooked.
For the above creamed mixture make these variations. With four cups broccoli add 1 teaspoon dried thyme, a small bay leaf and ¼ teaspoon garlic powder. If you use 2-3 cups carrots, add 2 tablespoons fresh snipped parsley and 1 teaspoon crushed, dried basil. Try 3 cups cut green beans and add 1 teaspoon dried savory.
Take your leftover vegetables and try your own version. Many cookbooks will tell you what spices or herbs go best with each vegetable.
Enjoy!

Most bisexuals still remain safely locked away in closet

DEAR ABBY: I saw you on the Phil Donahue show recently and was delighted when you said "There is far more bisexuality around than anyone suspects."

I am a male, 64, and have been married for more than 40 years. I was a pilot in World War II, had a few flings with women, married shortly after the war and fathered several fine children.

When I was 27, my employer sent me and another male employee, whom I admired, to a one-week training program in another city. We shared a motel room with twin beds. This man had also been in the Air Corps and had a lovely wife and one child, as did I at the time. On the third night, we had no homework, so we went to a tipples bar, had a few drinks and went back to our motel.

Amid a little horseplay and rib-poking, we kind of fell on one of the beds together. That was the beginning of a very long bisexual relationship. He died two years ago and I have grieved ever since.

Not once in all those years was

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

there any indication that there was anything between us either at work or in the presence of our families.

I loved that man and he loved me. Our relationship lasted for 40 years, and neither of us took anything away from our families. It was far more than a sexual attraction — we were best friends, closer than brothers. His children called me "Uncle."

I know that bisexuality is frowned upon by others. But I have no regrets.
— IN THE CLOSET IN CLEVELAND

DEAR IN: Yours is a very large closet. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am surprised that you were surprised by the number of bisexuals who surfaced in your survey. I am a male bisexual. The mental health professionals probably include us in the 10 percent labeled "gays." True, the majority of bisexuals use the gays for same-sex relations.

You are correct to question percentages, Abby. We bisexuals are so closeted we don't even know each other. We are in your heterosexual world — usually "happily" married, helping to rear our children with the same moral, ethical, caring values as you. We may be pillars of the community and part of that lovely family down the street. We cross all ethnic and financial lines. Most of you know one of us and consider us your close heterosexual friend, working buddy or acquaintance. Although this letter has little chance of reaching your readers, in order to protect my job, wife, children, heterosexual and bisexual friends, I must sign myself...

— NO NAME/NO TOWN
DEAR NO NAME: After my survey, I read an illuminating book titled

"The Bisexual Spouse." It contains interviews with bisexual couples, married and divorced.

It also includes enlightening comments by Dr. Judd Marmor, past president of the American Psychiatric Association, and past president of the American Academy of Psychoanalysis. The book is edited by Ivan Hill, published by Barlina Books Inc., P.O. Box 7425, McLean, Va. 22108, and sells for $16.95. It is especially timely in this age of AIDS.

Letters of thanks

American flag inspires patriotic thoughts

Last year when a huge American flag was put up on 2nd Avenue, a lot of people (perhaps including myself) were questioning the motives behind the project.

I have a belated comment: The debate has died down now and we're left with a symbol that still gives me a rush whenever I see or hear it snapping in the breeze. Thank you, Latham Motors, for a great reminder to occasionally stop and think about how fortunate we are to be a part of America.

Thanks to MVRMC staff for their care, concern

I would like to say a very grateful thanks to Dr. Wayne Wright and the radiologists for the wonderful care I received during my six day stay in the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center last week. Also all the nursing staff, thank you so much. God bless you all.

Scout leaders help build future good citizens

In appreciation for their time, commitment, dedication and efforts in providing program to girls, I would like to thank our leaders and adult volunteers. Through their efforts the girls learn about their world, develop leadership skills to become tomorrow's future leader, create new friendships and understandings among people of all cultures.

Consumers fuel expansion of economy

WASHINGTON (AP) - Strong spending by American consumers helped the economy grow at a healthy 2.3 percent annual rate during the first three months of 1988, the government said Tuesday. The report said that after a lag of effects from the October stock market crash...
The Commerce Department, in its first look at overall economic performance this year, said consumer spending, the biggest surge in business investment in more than four years and growing exports kept the gross national product rising despite declines in government spending and housing construction.
"Such recovery for the recession that was supposed to occur in the first quarter," said Commerce Undersecretary Robert Ortner. "Whatever the impact of the crash was, it's pretty much behind us."

spending should help ease inflationary pressures.
As manufacturers in industries running at almost full capacity expand their factories, production, bottlenecks and resulting price increases gradually will become less likely, he said.
The rate of inflation as measured by the GNP rose at an annual rate of 2.4 percent in the January-March quarter, down from a 2.7 percent increase in the fourth quarter.
In other good news, the country's trade deficit, after removing the effects of inflation, narrowed by $9.6 billion in the first quarter, continuing the trend of improvement that began in mid-1986.
However, Alan Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co., said an increase in imports, although slower rate than the rise in exports, was troubling. Exports rose 10.2 percent in the quarter, while imports rose 5.2 percent.
The administration, which is looking for a sixth straight year of economic growth to boost chances for a Republican presidential win in November, has forecast that GNP will grow 2.9 percent for the full year.
The administration is counting on further improvements in the trade deficit to supply almost half of the growth. Much of the rest is expected to come from higher business capital spending as companies expand to

Down scores 4th straight daily advance

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted some modest gains Tuesday, bouncing back in the final hour of trading after the morning's strong advance in the early afternoon.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 20 points on Monday and nearly 17 points in the morning, finished with an 8.79-point gain to close at 2,044.76.

It was the fourth consecutive gain in the market's best-known indicator. Monday's close was revised to 2,035.97.

Advancing issues outnumbered losers by about 3 to 2 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 926 up, 551 down and 491 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 152.50 million shares compared with 156.95 million shares on Monday.

Before trading started, the government reported that the economy grew at a 2.3 percent annual rate in the first three months of 1988.

Texaco was the most actively-traded stock on the NYSE, and it rose 3/4 to 48 1/2 after reporting sharply higher earnings.

Elsewhere in the oil group, Chevron rose 1/2 to 49, Exxon rose 1/4 to 45, Pennzoil was up 7/8 at 75 1/4 and Amoco rose 7/8 to 79.
