Cash for food: Administration will aid Contras

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration, contending that many Contra rebels inside Nicaragua are desperately short of food, will begin sending them cash at the rate of about $1 a day per rebel for food purchases, it was announced Friday.

State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley brushed aside complaints from House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, that the rebels might use the money illegally to buy weapons.

"They already have weapons. What they need at this moment desperately is food, and we're confident that they will naturally use these small funds to provide for their basic survival," she said.

An agreement signed between the Contras and Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government on March 23 permits humanitarian aid for the rebels, but no shipments have been made thus far because of a dispute over how the assistance should be delivered, among other reasons.

Meanwhile, many Contras inside Nicaragua were said to be suffering from an inadequate diet. As an interim measure, the administration about three weeks ago began arranging deliveries by truck and air drop of food to rebel camps in Honduras near the Nicaraguan border.

Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of Contras have fled Nicaragua for Honduras in search of food in recent weeks.

Officials from the Agency for International Development, in a preliminary discussion with reporters of the plan announced Friday, had said Monday that most of the aid will be in the form of Nicaraguan currency delivered by Contra couriers based in Honduras.

Some food also will be delivered, but the emphasis will be on cash transfers because of limits on the amount of food that can be carried.

AID wps designated to manage the $48 million humanitarian aid program approved by Congress in late March, a week after the Contras and the Sandinistas reached a truce agreement that allows for such aid to the rebels.

The secretary general of the Organization of American States, Jose Baena Soares, has criticized both deliveries of food to Contra camps in Honduras and the cash-for-food plan.

Baena Soares, a member of a verification commission assigned to ensure compliance with the Contra-Sandinista agreement, has said that neither plan falls within the limits of what the two sides have approved.

But an administration official said Wednesday that the other member of the commission, Nicaraguan Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, has raised no objections to the cash-for-food plan.

Consultant finds county salaries are inconsistent

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls County has been paying its employees by a hit-and-miss system, giving them an average of 12 percent less than workers make in comparable positions in other Idaho counties, a consultant says.

Andy Fujimoto, human resource consultant for IEC Management Resources Group, Boise, said he found that the county has not been equitable in its payment practices. Like other unorganized systems, the wages are all over the place, Fujimoto said.

In his study commissioned by the county, Fujimoto compared Twin Falls' employee wages with those of 14 other Idaho counties of comparable size.

Commissioner Judy Felton said in many cases employees in higher management positions were being paid wages that were closer to the average salaries in other counties than those in lower level positions.

For example, in the prosecutor's office, the deputy county attorney is making $2058 a month or five percent above the 14-county average. But in the same office, the senior legal secretary is making $1031 a month or 22 percent below the average. Felton declined to offer a reason for the inconsistency. However, she did say that people in upper level management possibly have more to say about their wages than those in lower-level positions.

She said the sheriff's department wages are further below the average than other sections of county government, averaging 17 percent lower than other counties.

In the sheriff's department, the disparity between Twin Falls County wages was equally as great in high positions as it is with the lower ones. For instance, a lieutenant earns $1,568 a month, and a jailer makes $1,056 a month, both 20 percent below the average earnings for their positions.

Chief Deputy Sheriff Harold Jensen said department personnel have known for years that their wages do not compare favorably with those in other counties, or even with police officers in Twin Falls.

A top-scale patrolman in Twin Falls makes $1,711 a month, $100 more a month than Jensen makes.

He said that the sheriff's department has been requesting a comparison study for some time.

The department's low salary and poor retirement benefits have resulted in a high turnover rate and low morale, Jensen said.

"Any time you have officers or workers in any line of work doing a similar job but not getting paid equally, you have to feel put down," he said.

Jensen said the officers often leave early in their careers so they can get to another department in time to qualify for retirement there.

Fujimoto's study did not encompass retirement benefits. "That bothers me because that's an important element," Jensen said. He said retirement benefits in Twin Falls County also fall short of programs in other counties.

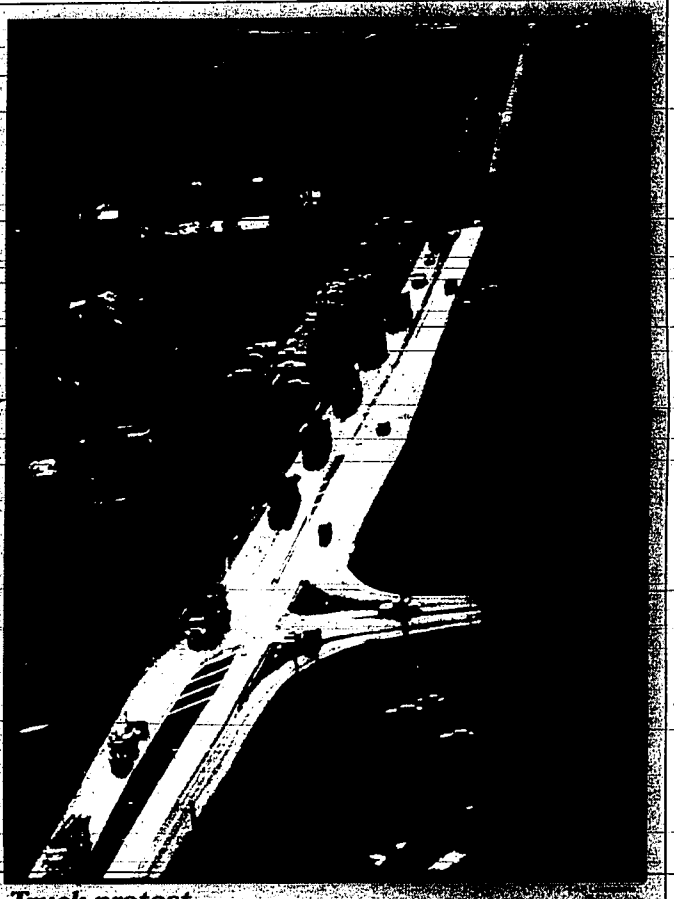

But Felton said the county has a good retirement program that is often ignored by employees for years. She said by the time employees take advantage of the program, they have lost some of its impact.

She said the study would have cost more money if retirement benefits were compared and the commissioners decided not to include them. However, she said some time in the future those studies could be completed.

Felton also said the study did not make a comparison between wages of elected county officials, but did not know why.

"We assumed that it would be done," she said. "When we see Andy (Fujimoto) again we plan to re-

Tupperware plant plans to close June 24

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

JEROME - After a number of false starts or false closings, to be more exact - the Jerome Tupperware plant will now shut down June 24, a company official said Friday.

"Everybody here has been asking, 'When's the date, when's the date, when's the date,'" plant manager John Forbes said. "They've been waiting for it patiently and anxiously."

Between 75 and 100 employees will probably remain on the payroll for an undetermined amount of time after June, cleaning up the plant and doing warehousing chores, Forbes said.

Employees, who were told Friday afternoon of the closing date, met the news with mixed reactions.

"Some want to work here forever, and others want to get laid off right now," Forbes said.

The plant manager explained that many employees, a large number of whom have already secured new jobs, are staying on at the plant in order to receive those benefits which come with being laid off.

"The termination payment is quite good," Forbes said.

The plant, once the Magic Valley's largest manufacturing operation, has been whittling down its work force since June 1987, when its closing plans were originally announced.

Forbes said the plant employed 776 people at its zenith. That number now stands at 340 employees and will continue to dwindle until the

Drought eases throughout state

The Associated Press

BOISE (AP) - Normal to above-normal precipitation throughout much of Idaho last month significantly eased drought conditions across most of the state, and forecasters expect irrigators to have about the same water supply as they did in surviving last year's drought.

The latest information provided the state Water Supply Committee on Friday showed that outside the southeastern corner of the state, drought conditions had improved from extreme and severe a month ago to generally moderate or mild.

The report included nearly all the final water supply information and forecasts that will be available this year, and the committee agreed to suspend its monthly meetings until additional information or an emergency justifies another session.

It's time to use our water and take our lumps and see what happens," said Richard Gardner, economist for the state Division of Financial Management. That decision will have to be ratified by Gov. Cecil Andrus.

The water supply update reported a positive moisture reading at the Grangeville station the first non-drought reading anywhere in the state in months.

Farmers, said Dorrell Larsen of the University of Idaho, "are going ahead on the assumption they'll have about the same amount of water they had last year."

But it took judicious use of that water, less than half of normal allotments for irrigators, to

Senate approves military role in drug war

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The Senate voted overwhelmingly Friday night to give the military a major new role in stopping the flow of illegal drugs across U.S. borders despite a few cries that it was engaged in election-year posturing to cure the drug problem.

Voting 84 to 6, the Senate approved a wide-ranging plan that would substantially increase the military's role in detecting and tracking drug smugglers, allow use of military personnel and equipment to intercept them, and give the Navy limited powers of arrest on the high seas.

Only naval personnel who have had "appropriate training" and specific authorization from the Coast Guard could make arrests, and no arrests could be made on U.S. land or waters.

The plan also would expand use of the National Guard in interdiction and enforcement efforts, earmarking up to $30 million to help support the endeavor. The president would be required to submit a report on "long-term" use of the National Guard and Reserves to help close the country's borders and ports to drugs.

In addition, the president would be required to act within 30 days of enactment to designate a "lead agency" for detection and monitoring the drug flow into the country, to end the interagency squabbling that many lawmakers say has impeded interdiction efforts. Some influential senators have said the Pentagon should have that role.

The administration has accused the Sandinista government of using delaying tactics during negotiations in a bid to starve the Contras into submission.

Nicaraguan Vice President Sergio Ramirez said Thursday his government is willing to allow immediate delivery of humanitarian supplies to rebels in Nicaragua. He denied that the government is trying to starve the Contras.

"We are in full disposition to accept that the Contra forces could receive humanitarian aid inside Nicaragua tomorrow, if possible," Ramirez told reporters after a 1 1/2-hour meeting with Wright and other Democratic congressional leaders.

Ramirez did not discuss his views on the cash-for-food plan. Wright has described the plan as a "last resort" because there are no guarantees the money won't be used to buy weapons. He also expressed concern that the cash might be used to buy weapons in violation of both the Contra-Sandinista agreement and the terms of the $48 million aid package.

The package provides for food, clothing, shelter and medical supplies as well as treatment for children who are war victims. Money also was set aside to finance the work of the verification commission.

quest that he do that."

Fujimoto said the county's system, like others not using a compensation program, has been comparable to a traveler who doesn't use a map to get to his destination. "He doesn't know where he's come from or where he's going," Fujimoto said.

He said if the county chooses to use the program he outlined, which sets a pay scale based on experience at different positions, it will be more logically and fairly set salaries.

He said job titles are grouped into categories that take into account working conditions and skills required including how much physical labor and decision making abilities are needed.

Fujimoto said a legal secretary, whose job description includes extensive experience in gathering legal documents, would be on a higher pay scale than a secretary who doesn't need those skills.

He said the county could set up a program to bring below level wages up to par according to how much money is available in the budget.

Fujimoto said it is unlikely that Twin Falls County will be able to make up all the deficiencies in one year.

He said positions that are more out of line with the salary survey than others would be upgraded at a faster rate. For instance, a sergeant in the sheriff's department making 79 percent of the average could possibly see an increase in salary of 6 percent a year. But a senior dispatcher at 96 percent of the average in the same department may only get a 1 percent increase.

"That way you are spending money where it is needed. It's a cost-saving measure," Fujimoto said. "If you kept all increases at the same level, possibly at 4 percent, the inequities would only be compounded."

Felton said the new system could decrease the possibility of glaring wage differences in departments among workers in comparable positions.

She said in the past it is possible that employees received raises when a superior felt that individual was doing an outstanding job.

Felton said she was unsure how the proposed system would reward employees who excel.

She said once the county decides whether to adopt the new compensation program, it will try to bring salaries up to par as soon as possible.

Felton said the county loses personnel to higher paying competitors.

Rocket fuel manufacturer closes plant

HENDERSON, Nev. (AP) - The only remaining U.S. manufacturer of a crucial space shuttle fuel component announced a halt in production until it can be shown the factory is safe after explosions leveled another plant last week.

Kerr-McGee Corp. made Thursday's announcement in the face of state pressure.

Later in the day, the demolished plant's operator said a leaking natural gas line was responsible for the series of explosions that forced the firm to shut down its plant. The blast, which killed two people, injured 326 and had an estimated $73 million in damage.

The report by Pacific Engineering and Production Co. was challenged by Southwest Gas Corp., which said the line ruptured after the explosions, not before.

Kerr-McGee said it would suspend production of ammonium perchlorate, an oxidizer for solid fuel used in the space shuttle and military rockets, until an independent inspection shows the plant is safe.

Paul Gaines, the company's director of governmental relations, said he hoped production could resume within a few days.

"A prolonged shutdown is not helpful to any of us," Gaines said.

He said the company has already contracted with a safety consultant to study the plant, and the inspection could begin by Monday. Gaines said the plant will continue making other chemicals.

Gov. Richard Bryan announced the shutdown after company officials agreed late Thursday morning to the halt. Bryan said "legal work is being prepared" to force Kerr-McGee to suspend production before it agreed to the shutdown.

plant shuts down.

"We will be laying off another 240 or so between now and then," Forbes said.

The plant's closing date, set by company headquarters in Orlando, Fla., has been set, canceled and reset on several occasions. Company officials announced in November that the plant would cease operations between April and June 1988.

"We've had a couple of different dates and we kept extending them," Forbes said.

While the company plans to phase out its operations gradually, cleaning up the site and packing things away - there are no immediate plans to stop making and shipping its tight-sealing bowls and boxes.

"We're still producing and packing," Tupperware, Forbes said. "We're going to continue doing that until we shut down."

Tupperware officials last year said they were closing the Jerome plant to focus production east of the Mississippi River, where two of the company's three plants are located. The sites are in Halls, Tenn., and Hemingway, S.C.

avoid devastating crop losses, and Larsen said last year was a "dreadful year for this year."

The severe drought problem remained in the southeastern corner of the state, where April precipitation was well below normal. Already-extreme drought conditions worsened slightly over the month with water availability continued to deteriorate in the Bear River and Portneuf river basins. Isolated availability problems also persisted in the Goose Creek, Big Wood River and Weiser River basins.

Still, precipitation statewide during April averaged 100 percent of normal with some areas like Ketchum getting more than twice their normal moisture for the month. In March, precipitation statewide averaged 93 percent of normal.

The cool weather that came with the spring storms also caused the snow melt in the higher elevations, extending the runoff period that will keep river and stream flows up longer into the summer.

"That improved the outlook for river recreation, with flows that were already receding at this time a year ago, not expected to peak this year for another month."

"Concerns are starting to dissipate as far as the water supply issue," said state tourism chief Carl Wilpas. "In another six weeks we'll move to another issue - fire."

Land managers fear the second straight dry winter has created the potential of one of the worst forest and range fire seasons in years.

Officer escapes after being held hostage

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - A police officer held hostage for eight hours during his ordeal. "They indicated this is the last time I can talk on the radio. If anybody rushes the door, I'm dead."

Strayer, 43, a seven-year police department veteran, was unharmed in the incident, police said. At least one of the two suspects was wounded by Strayer as he escaped, but the cause of death of the two men was not immediately determined.

The officer was taken hostage about 8 p.m. Thursday when he went to the Portland Rose Motel to question the men about the robbery of a nearby supermarket earlier in the evening.

sional action to seriously involve the military in the war on drugs as part of the $300-billion defense authorization bill for next year. The Reagan administration has indicated it could go along with the Senate plan and according to Republican senators, leaned on the Pentagon to cooperate in drafting a plan which it could live.

Sens. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., and Alfonse M. D'Amato, D-N.Y., was worked out in two days of what were described as "strenuous and intensive" negotiations involving Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci. Carlucci was described as having been "dragged to the altar" on the issue, and Nunn, even while co-opposing the proposal, indicated strong misgivings and expressed doubt that efforts to seal U.S. borders would dry up the drug supply in light of drug production within the country.

"Let no one believe we can pass a piece of legislation and solve our drug problem," Nunn said. He described the expanded military role in surveillance and coordination efforts as the bill's most useful feature.

Sens. John Glenn, D-Ohio, and Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., were more caustic in their comments, accusing colleagues of making a splashy gesture by mobilizing the military while refusing to allocate the large sums of money needed to attack the problem.

Everyone is saying "no one is going to out-drug me," Glenn complained. "The military is not suited to the role and its deployment against drugs will not achieve a 'hill of beans,' the former Marine colonel and astronaut said.

Weicker warned of potentially serious constitutional problems in "mixing military and civilian missions" and said drugs will not be eliminated without billions of dollars being spent on education.

The House approved an even stronger measure earlier this week as part of its defense bill. It directed the president to "deploy the armed forces to locate, pursue and seize" aircraft and ships carrying drugs and to arrest their crews. He also was told to deploy enough radar aircraft to provide blanket nighttime coverage of the country's southern border and sufficient Customs Service and Coast Guard aircraft to intercept and seize planes carrying drugs. In all, he was given 45 days to substantially halt the unlawful penetration of the United States borders by aircraft and vessels carrying narcotics."

Congress moves toward new welfare policy

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Congress is moving toward a radically new national welfare policy that emphasizes the traditional values of work and family responsibility — a sharp departure from past attempts by both political parties to establish government-guaranteed incomes.

The new approach might require some welfare mothers with infant children to accept federally subsidized child care so that they could receive job training and accept part-time work. If they refused, their benefits would be halted.

Absentee fathers of these children would be identified, pursued by the state and forced to contribute to their family's support through payroll deductions.

To be sure, the proposed changes have drawn strong opposition from advocates of higher welfare benefits. They argue that the new approach is punitive and would perpetuate poverty rather than improve prospects for the aid recipients.

And the Reagan administration, which is critical for different reasons, contends that the legislation moving forward in Congress would cost too much and impose work requirements that are not tough enough.

Especially in an election year, however, both arguments appear to be carrying little weight with lawmakers on Capitol Hill. Most seem to agree with Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., a chief architect of the new approach.

"Welfare mothers need work," Moynihan said in an interview. "Fathers have to support their families. Children need care. Our purpose is to free these women and children from the stigma of dependency."

Moynihan, who was once on the welfare rolls himself as a child growing up during the Great Depression, is a living symbol of the change in attitude.

As a White House adviser to President Nixon, Moynihan did his best to secure congressional passage of a family assistance plan that would have guaranteed a minimum income to everyone, whether employed or not. The novel approach — which horrified conservatives — died a lingering death after President Carter subsequently failed to persuade Congress to go along with the concept.

Now, nearly two decades after his minimum-income proposal, Moynihan is the main author of an opposite approach. Instead of offering guaranteed benefits, Moynihan would use education and job training to try to break welfare mothers' cycle of poverty and lifelong dependency. His plan also takes a get-tough line toward men who father children but then disappear and provide no child-support payments.

With the bulk of liberals and conservatives supporting the new welfare consensus, Moynihan's bill sailed through the Senate Finance Committee, the burial ground of the more ambitious income plans; by a vote of 17-3 last month. The bill, which would cost an estimated $3 billion over the first five years, is expected to pass the Senate by a wide margin when it comes to a vote next month.

The House, by a vote of 230-194, already passed its own welfare bill last December. The bill is about twice as expensive as Moynihan's bill — an estimated $7 billion over the first six years — because it contains incentives for states to raise welfare benefits. But like Moynihan's bill, it also includes provisions that embrace the formerly conservative theme of shifting people from welfare rolls to pay-rolls.

The greatest obstacle to overhauling the welfare system this year may be President Reagan. The administration favors a five-year, $1 billion measure with far more rigorous work requirements than those adopted by either the House or the Senate Finance Committee. Reagan's budget director and three departmental secretaries warned the Finance Committee that they would recommend a veto of its bill.

Regardless of the administration's stance, the congressional mood has undergone a sea-change. Moynihan attributes the turnaround to frustration with the ever-mounting numbers of recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children — 3.7 million beneficiaries last year — and new research from the University of Michigan showing that fully one-quarter of them are on welfare for at least eight years out of 10.

Washington's new approach to welfare also has been inspired by state innovations in California under conservative Republican Gov. George Deukmejian and in Massachusetts under liberal Democratic Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, his party's apparent presidential nominee.

Meese opposes excusing Noriega

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III on Friday presented President Reagan with arguments against dismissing drug indictments against Panamanian ruler Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, according to the prosecutor who obtained one of the indictments.

U.S. Attorney Leon Kellner of Miami told reporters that he presented arguments against dropping the indictments in two meetings with Meese in the past two days, that the attorney general told him that he also opposed any dismissal and that he had assured Kellner "he would convey my thoughts to the president."

"He told me he did that today," Kellner added.

Dropping the indictments "would send the wrong message to the people of this country" because the federal government is currently cracking down on drug traffickers and drug users, Kellner said.

"How do we continue ... going after the little fish when the big fish can walk away? My concern is what message we are sending to the Medellín cartel," Kellner said of the notorious Colombian drug organization.

The federal attorney made his comments after meeting with Meese at the Justice Department.

"As he has since word of a possible deal with Noriega leaked out Wednesday, Meese told reporters he would have no comment on the matter.

Reagan administration officials have said they were "plea bargaining" with the Panamanian military chief and de facto ruler over the possible dropping of the drug-smuggling indictment.

Kellner said dropping indictments against Noriega conveys "a very bad message."

"What it says is that the bigger you are and if you have more threats to give to this country, we'll let you get away with criminality," Kellner said.

In a separate interview with reporters, U.S. Customs Service Chief William von Raab, whose agency's investigative efforts contributed to the drug indictments against Noriega, said the Panamanian ruler "should be prosecuted ... Over the next few days I will be forming my opinion."

Von Raab said: "I pushed the Noriega case very hard in the formative stages" and that "I would be unhappy" if the indictments were dropped.

White House spokesman Roman Papaduk declined comment on Kellner's statement.

Earlier, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater was asked about assertions by Noriega on Friday that negotiations with the United States on his eventual departure from power have collapsed.

"He says that all the time," Fitzwater said. "He said 'fall apart' or something similar before."

"We are still talking. We are still negotiating," the spokesman added.

Fitzwater said Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, met with Reagan on Friday afternoon.

He would not say what the subject of the meeting was or who else, if anyone, attended.

The president left for his weekend at Camp David a half-hour later than originally scheduled, but Fitzwater would not say whether the meeting caused the delay.

Earlier Friday, Panama's foreign minister denied that Noriega was negotiating to have the drug charges dropped.

Panel OKs covert action limiting bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Intelligence Committee has approved a bill that would require the president to notify Congress within 48 hours when he authorizes any covert action by U.S. agencies and officials.

The legislation was prompted by the recommendations of the congressional panels that investigated the Iran-Contra affair when it was revealed that Congress had not been informed until 10 months after President Reagan had approved a secret arms-for-hostages swap.

The committee announced Thursday that it had approved the legislation by an 11-to-6 party-line vote. It is similar to a covert-action measure passed March 15 by the Senate on a vote of 71 to 19.

Under the current bill, a covert action is any U.S. activity, other than traditional military, diplomatic and law enforcement actions, designed to influence political, economic or military conditions abroad — so that the role of the United States government is not intended to be apparent or acknowledged publicly.

The bill, which requires the president to give prior written notice of any but emergency covert action, now goes to the full House for a vote.

Bill challenges Soviets

States News Service

WASHINGTON, May 12. — The Soviet Union could not receive "most favored nation" trade status unless it complies with the human rights provisions of the Helsinki Final Act, under an amendment by Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, approved by the Senate Friday.

Countries granted most favored nation status are exempt from many American tariffs and trade quotas. The Soviet Union has sought most favored nation status to improve its trade balance with the United States.

Several nations, including the United States and the Soviet Union, signed the Helsinki Final Act of 1975, which guarantees human rights, such as freedom of speech and religion, to citizens of the signatory nations.

The McClure amendment, while not mentioning the Soviet Union by name, is primarily aimed at that country, Press Secretary H.D. Palmer said.

The amendment would direct the president to certify that any Helsinki records signatory that does not already receive the American trade preferences is "in complete compliance or in substantially complete compliance" with the accords before being granted most favored nation status.

McClure, in remarks on the Senate floor, said he saw evidence during a recent visit that the Soviet Union "is making progress on the human rights front," but still violates provisions of the Helsinki agreement.

Expert: Covert policy 'seriously flawed'

WASHINGTON — Early in the Reagan administration, then Attorney General William French Smith was blocked from fully considering legal implications of covert foreign policy operations, the Department of Justice's former counsel-for-intelligence policy disclosed this week.

The result, Richard K. Willard said, was a "seriously flawed" process that excluded "adequate legal advice." And he added: "The ultimate result was the Iran-Contra affair."

Smith "regularly complained" to White House staff and leading National Security Council members about being shut out, but "did not have much success" in breaking through the barriers, Willard told the American Bar Association's standing committee on law and national security.

Former CIA Director William J. Casey played a leading role in trying to keep Smith out of the process, Willard said Thursday in a telephone interview from Houston, where he delivered his remarks.

"Casey, in particular, felt these matters should not be excessively legalized," Willard said in his speech, a text of which was made available in Washington. Smith, who has returned to private practice in Los Angeles, did not return a reporter's call about Willard's remarks.

The disclosures provide an extraordinary account of an administration in which officials were able to keep the nation's chief law enforcement officer and longtime adviser of Ronald Reagan in the dark about some of its most sensitive clandestine undertakings.

Moreover, the remarks by Willard, who later became assistant attorney general in charge of the Department of Justice's civil division, lend detailed support for the conclusion of the presidential commission headed by former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, that the administration's process for making national security decisions was seriously flawed, particularly where crucial legal questions should have been addressed.

The Tower commission conducted an inquiry after disclosures that the United States had secretly sold arms to Iran and diverted proceeds to rebels seeking to overthrow Nicaragua's government.

Willard said Smith was not a full member of the Cabinet group — sometimes the National Security Council and other times the wider National Security Planning Group — that considered sensitive foreign policy and intelligence matters, including cover operation proposals, "but was only invited to attend."

Smith's successor, Attorney General Edwin Meese III, did become a member of the group, but "even then some effort was made to insist that he was a member in his personal capacity and not as attorney general," Willard said.

Because of Smith's "uncertain status" in the intelligence process, his Justice Department subordinates "were generally excluded from working groups and sub-Cabinet level deliberations," said Willard, who left the Justice Department in February for private practice.

Smith was not allowed to bring any staff person to the meetings he was invited to attend, on grounds that the sessions were for "principals only," Willard said, though he added that there appeared to be exceptions to this rule for the White House and CIA staff.

Background papers on matters to be discussed at the meeting generally were sent to Smith just before the sessions, "if then, and were often too short and poorly written," Willard said.

"The cumulative effect of these restrictions was to minimize the ability of the attorney general to participate in the deliberations or to render meaningful legal advice," Willard said.

"He was even asked at times to render off-the-cuff advice on complex legal situations. The obvious desire was to be able to claim that the attorney general had given a legal seal of approval to various proposals without permitting them to undergo real legal scrutiny," he added.

"Smith regularly complained about these systemic shortcomings in a series of letters to the White House staff and principal members of the NSC in 1981-82," Willard said, adding that he was fairly forceful on these points in meetings as well, "but without much success."

Willard linked the problem to a widespread fear of leaks, which led efforts to restrict participation in the national security decision-making process.

Senate looks at using military in drug war

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators who want the U.S. military to enter the war against illegal drugs were nearing agreement Friday on a wide-ranging plan that would include having Navy ships stop drug boats on the high seas and make arrests.

"We've still got to pin down some of the details, but we'll have something worked out," said Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska. "The public wants this done."

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., said the plan "substantially increases the military's role in drug interdiction."

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said, "We're making progress, but we still have some differences."

The Pentagon has resisted a larger role in the war against drugs, saying the military is not trained or equipped for the assignment.

The anti-drug provision was the main unresolved issue as the Senate worked toward approval of a bill authorizing defense spending for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

Passage by the Democratic-controlled chamber will send the bill to a House-Senate conference committee to reconcile differences between it and the separate Pentagon bill approved Wednesday by the House. Both measures authorize $299.5 billion for the Pentagon.

One major difference will be the anti-drug provision. The House measure orders President Reagan to have the military "substantially halt" the flow of illegal drugs into the United States.

Two different plans were proposed in the Senate, one by Republicans including Stevens and Wilson, and the other by Nunn.

Both measures would provide more military help in tracking drug boats and planes, using military equipment such as Air Force AWACS radar planes and Navy warships. They also give additional training and authority for National Guard units to enter the anti-drug effort.

The main difference was whether to grant arrest powers. Nunn's proposal doesn't allow arrests by the military, while Wilson's plan would let the military make arrests outside the three-mile territorial limit of U.S. waters.

An 1878 law, the Posse Comitatus Act, prohibits the military from enforcing civilian laws, although it was amended in 1981 to permit the military to provide more help to civilian anti-drug agencies. Military planes and ships now pass along surveillance information on suspected drug traffickers to law enforcement officials.

Loggers protest USFS regulations with 9-mile-long convoy

KALISPELL, Mont. (AP) — Logging trucks from at least four states, carrying timber to a closed sawmill, rolled through western Montana today to protest U.S. Forest Service regulations loggers say are strangling the industry.

The trucks began rolling in tiny Eureka, in Montana's northwest corner, this morning. More joined at highway junctions from other logging towns in this heavily timbered area.

People pulled to the side of the road as the big trucks passed and waved to show support. In Kalispell, hundreds came to the curb and waved as the convoy stopped traffic in the town of 10,000.

By the time the trucks finished rolling through Kalispell this morning, heading south on U.S. 93, they stretched for nine miles. A reporter flying over the convoy counted 62 lumber trucks, interspersed with an estimated 100 to 150 support vehicles.

Bruce Vincent, a logging contractor who helped organize the protest, said the trucks carried roughly a million board-feet of timber worth about $175,000. The lumber would be enough to build 825 houses, he said.

An exact count of the trucks was difficult, since they were spread out over miles and were being joined by new trucks at highway junctions. The Flathead County Sheriff's Department initially said there were more than 200 trucks, but reporters on the scene said that apparently included the support vehicles.

The trucks were rolling at 40 to 45 miles per hour. Organizers said the intent of the convoy was not to needlessly delay traffic, but the Montana Highway Patrol warned motorists that the convoy would be impossible to pass.

Most of the trucks carried slogans painted on their logs with spray paint. "Save our American timber industry," "Jobs not wilderness" and "Donated to save a mill, not a grizzly" were a few.

One logger, Ken Howard of Whitefish, Mont., said this morning that he hopes "environmentalists will back off a little bit after today's event and let us keep working. They're killing us every day."

"This may look like the plight of one mill, but everybody has the problem," said Bill Crasner, resource manager for the Darby, Mont., sawmill that intends to reopen with the protest logs being delivered this afternoon.

Butler plans Aryan expansion into Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Aryan Nations leader Richard Butler says he still plans to open a regional office somewhere in the Salt Lake-Ogden area later this year.

"Everyone here is enthused and ready to work now," Butler said in a telephone interview from his office in Hayden Lake, Idaho.

"We still plan to open a center in Utah later this year. It will be in Salt Lake, Ogden or somewhere in that area," he said.

But Butler said he is more concerned right now about his group's just-announced plans to buy or build a radio station powerful enough to broadcast his white supremacist views throughout the Northwest.

Anti-discrimination groups have already denounced those plans and have vowed to fight him.

"We would like to build our own station somewhere near here, but we're also looking at maybe buying one of two stations that are for sale in Washington," he said.

"That would be a step beyond the 'Aryan Nations Hour' aired in the Salt Lake area last year over KZZI in West Jordan. That show was pulled by the host, Aryan Nations member Dwight McCarthy, after only two weeks. McCarthy cited numerous threats against station employees as his reason for abandoning the show.

Even though Butler insists that his group will build a center in Utah, state officials have made it clear they do not welcome it. The Legislature and Gov. Norm Bangerter signed a concurrent resolution earlier this year saying they do not welcome any racist group.

Fuel poses no rocket snags

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah rocket makers Hercules and Morton Thiokol say they have sufficient supplies of ammonium perchlorate to last at least through the year despite last week's explosion in Henderson, Nev.

Morton Thiokol spokesman Rocky Raab said the company has determined that it has enough of the rocket-fuel component to finish testing its redesigned space shuttle booster and to meet its Department of Defense requirements.

The company has enough of the fuel component to supply four space shuttle flight sets, he said, Thursday.

Hercules spokesman Ted Olsen said his company received most of its ammonium perchlorate from Kerr-McGee and that "we do not believe we will be impacted."

He said some of the company's oxidizer came from the Pacific Engineering plant that exploded, but not of a quantity to disrupt its programs.

The Pacific Engineering plant exploded May 4, killing two men and sending shock waves and air blasts 15 miles into Las Vegas. The plant is one of only two plants that make ammonum perchlorate, an oxidizer used in all of the country's solid-fuel rocket motors.

Rocket fuel is 69 percent ammonium perchlorate. It supplies oxygen to the actual fuel, which is made of aluminum.

Kerr-McGee, which also has a plant at Henderson and is the nation's other supplier of ammonium perchlorate, has said it can boost its production by 2,000 tons annually. That would be enough for eight space shuttle flights, but the excess may be allocated between different programs.

Sun Valley announces $33 tickets

SUN VALLEY (AP) — An adult one-day lift ticket will increase to $33 at Sun Valley this winter, the resort announced, but other prices will fall in an effort to woo locals.

General Manager Wally Huffman said the uptick of the pricing changes will be a rate increase of about 3 percent.

The changes are part of a new pricing strategy designed to encourage multiday lift ticket purchases, attract local skiers and beginners, work with hotels and motels in the area and pay for a $6-million expansion on the mountain. The expansion includes three new high-speed detachable four-seat chairlifts.

"We have created a price structure package that should help amortize the new lifts, remain competitive in the ski industry and is sensitive to community needs and issues," Huffman said.

New prices will be $33 for an adult one-day pass, up from $30 last year, and $85 for an adult three-day pass, up from $80 last year.

A major change intended to please locals is a cut in the season pass price for students at Blaine County schools, from $940 to $185.

Prices unchanged from last year will be $19 for a child's one-day pass; $975 for a season pass; $35 for a weekend-Idaho-Discount-Card and $125 for the season; and $48 for a child's three-day pass.

Huffman said that part of the price structure will "encourage skiing by residents of our community."

The ski resort has decided to begin offering discounted multiday lift tickets to local inns for use in ski packages. Huffman said the new program, a first for Sun Valley, was created after workshops and discussions between the resort and the Sun Valley-

Ketchum Chamber of Commerce.

The new lifts are under construction. One, the Lookout Express, will replace the old Lower Warm Springs lift, and will carry skiers 3,144 vertical feet, from the bottom of Warm Springs to the Lookout Restaurant at the top of the mountain, in 10 minutes. The same trip last year required two lift rides and took more than twice as long.

A new Greyhawk high-speed chair will run from the bottom to the top of the Greyhawk run, while a new high-speed Christmas lift will replace the Christmas and Ridge chairs.

Police seek murder suspect

PENDLETON, Ore. (AP) — A manhunt by police and tracking dogs Thursday night failed to locate a man sought for the murder of an woman who was found dead along Interstate 84, authorities said.

Lt. John Duggan of the Umatilla County sheriff's office said the suspect is considered armed and dangerous.

The body of the woman was found at about 3:30 p.m. Thursday in a car parked near Emigrant Springs State Park east of Pendleton, deputies said.

The woman, whose identity was not released, was shot six times in the head, chest and abdomen, deputies said.

The suspect was described as 25 to 30 years old, about 6-foot-2 with short sandy hair, a moustache and a chipped front tooth, Duggan said. He was believed to be on foot, heading for the mountains near I-84.

Police were alerted by a truck driver who heard a hysterical woman calling for help on a citizens band radio. When officers arrived, they found the woman body's, and tracks leading into the nearby mountains, authorities said.

Stars mark Nelson Mandela's birthday with 10-hour show

LONDON (AP) — Whitney Houston, Paul Collins, Miriam Makeba, Dina Starke and the Eurythmics are among the musicians who will mark jailed black South African leader Nelson Mandela's 70th birthday with a 10-hour rock extravaganza.

The Anti-Apartheid Movement said the June 11 concert will be the high point of five months of birthday celebrations and rallies for Mandela. Proceeds will go to the AAM and South African charities.

The movement said the concert lineup also includes Simple Minds, the Bee Gees, the Fat Boys, Hugh Masekela, Ashford and Simpson, Joe Cocker, Roberta Flack, Natalie Cole, George Michael and Sade.

The hosts will include singer Harry Belafonte and comedian Whoopi Goldberg, said publicist Caroline Turner.

The concert will be broadcast live on British television and screened by satellite to more than a dozen countries, including the United States, she said. Six hours of the concert will be telecast in the United States by Fox Broadcasting.

Spanish King Carlos helps win boat event

VILAMOURA, Portugal (AP) — King Juan Carlos of Spain helped a Spanish navy team win a yachting regatta in southern Portugal during a private visit to the country where he spent much of his youth, the Portuguese news agency Lusa reported Friday.

Lusa said Juan Carlos joined the crew of the Spanish navy yacht Sirius II on Thursday when it won its class in a race in the Algarve Cup88 yachting regatta.

Risque art irks officials

CHICAGO (AP) — One picture may be worth a thousand words, but a student painting of the late Mayor Harold Washington wearing women's lingerie already has generated several lines of text.

One day after a group of black aldermen stormed into the prestigious School of the Art Institute and had police confiscate the picture, the American Civil Liberties Union said it will file a federal lawsuit charging police with violating the civil rights of the painter, student David Nelson.

The painting was returned to Nelson late Thursday.

The painting, "Mirth and Girth," depicts a heavy-set Washington clad in a frilly white bra, panties and stockings.

May queen causes furor

DAYTON, Ore. (AP) — A pregnant 17-year-old senior was crowned May Day queen of her high school, but she and 45 other students were suspended from classes today for protesting limits placed on her royal duties.

"I know there are people out there tonight who feel strongly against me being up here, and I never thought such a big issue would be raised about it," AnnaMaria DeVries said at her coronation Thursday night.

"Some people are saying that I have no morals, but those people don't realize I could have taken an easier way out," she added.

The Dayton Junior-Senior High School's student body elected DeVries queen last month.

Singer-songwriter Prine admits telling white lies

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer-songwriter John Prine says he now keeps his stories close to the truth during concerts, but he still sometimes tells tales longer than his songs. "I used to stand there and make up bald-faced lies. I'd stand there and say, 'Well, here's a song about ...' and I'd just ramble on, making it up as I went," Prine said in an interview published Thursday in the Nashville Banner.

Proposed surrogate mom book raises ire

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — Mary Beth Whitehead-Gould is writing a book about the Baby M case, and the child's father and his wife want to know what the surrogate mother plans to say before the book comes out.

William and Elizabeth Stern filed a motion, released Thursday, asking for the right to final approval and to prohibit the use of any baby pictures of 2-year-old Melissa Stern, who lives with the Sterns.

Mrs. Whitehead-Gould has been working on the book for a year with a Pennsylvania writer, Loretta Schwartz-Nobel. St. Martin's Press has said it will publish it next year.

Attorney Harold J. Cassidy has written Superior Court Judge Birger M. Sween to say his client, the surrogate mother, feels the judge's order of April 6 that the parties cannot publicly discuss the case does not apply to her relationship with Baby M before the date of the order.

But the Sterns said in an April 28 motion that they should be allowed to review the manuscript and if necessary seek restraints on discussion of the child.

Mrs. Whitehead-Gould agreed in 1985 to bear a child for Stern for $10,000. She later sought to keep the baby, setting off a widely-publicized court case. The child lives with the Sterns in Tenafly, and her mother sees her one day a week.

Israeli riot police clash with worshippers at Temple Mount JERUSALEM (AP) — Riot police stormed the sacred Temple Mount complex Friday and fired rubber bullets at protesting Moslems on the final Sabbath of the holy month of Ramadan. Twenty Arabs and three policemen were reported injured.

Soldiers closed off large parts of the occupied territories, and the turnout for Moslem prayer services was drastically reduced. The army, fearing violence, sealed off the Gaza Strip and turned back West Bank Arabs at roadblocks into Jerusalem.

As an army helicopter buzzed overhead and police snipers perched on rooftops, about 1,000 worshippers emerged from prayers and marched around the mosques on the city's Temple Mount, or Haram Al Sharif (Noble Enclosure) in Arabic.

"Jews out!" the marchers chanted. "We don't want to see any Zionists!" Others cried: "No fear! No fear! The stone is better than the Kalashnikov (rifle)!"

The marchers burned Israeli flags and raised the outlawed red, green, black and white Palestinian flag. Israeli radio said a U.S. flag was set afire.

A few hundred youths threw stones at the police station that faces the Al Aqsa mosque, which is at the Temple Mount. Seconds later, about 100 police wearing riot helmets and carrying clubs and assault rifles charged the complex, firing rubber bullets into the crowd.

Some witnesses said they heard brief bursts of automatic gunfire, apparently fired in the air.

Police spokesman Rafi Levy said three policemen were slightly injured by stones during the melee. Doctors at Jerusalem's Mukassed and Augusta Victoria hospitals said they treated 20 Arabs for rubber bullet injuries.

Ten injured worshippers were across the mosque complex on stretchers. One of them, an elderly man, had blood streaming down his face. He shouted "Allahu Akbar!" ("God is Great!") and flashed a victory sign.

Four or five women, their heads covered in white religious scarves, also were carried out on stretchers.

Some witnesses said they saw Arabs throw shoes at police from large piles at the mosque entrance. The wearing of shoes is forbidden in mosques.

As police and demonstrators clashed, many worshippers remained inside the Al Aqsa mosque, afraid to leave. The Moslem prayer leader appealed to police through loudspeakers to withdraw.

"Go away!" prayer leader Mohamed Hussein called out. "Allow the Moslems to leave peacefully."

Last year, an estimated 200,000 worshippers came to the city from the West Bank, Gaza and Arab towns in Israel, said Hashem Aghayer, head of Jerusalem's Islamic Council. Estimates of Friday's crowd ranged from 6,000 to 10,000.

Rescuers search wreckage of building

AGUASCALIENTES, Mexico (AP) — Rescue teams tunneled through tons of concrete today searching for missing victims after four floors of a downtown building collapsed. Police said 10 people were killed and 46 injured.

About 25 people were believed to be trapped.

The rubble buried the ground floor offices of a furniture factory. Authorities said it was not immediately known what caused the building, whose upper floors were under construction, to collapse Thursday.

"Up to now, we have nine bodies of people who died there who were identified and one is still without being identified," said first officer Gilberto Sanchez, the radio officer at police headquarters.

"There are about 25 people still missing, believed to be under the wreckage and debris, but the number is not certain," Sanchez said in a radio interview. He said earlier Red-Cross reports that 18 people were killed and 90 injured were wrong.

Red-Cross duty officer Juan Manuel Diaz acknowledged an error in the Red-Cross count.

Sanchez said troops from the local army garrison had been brought in to help rescue workers remove debris from the collapsed building. He said rubble-moving equipment was brought in from as far away as Salamanca, 78 miles southwest of here.

Diaz and Juan Jose Navarro Rincon, another police duty officer, said the furniture factory was operating while the upper floors were still being built. Both said the building was a reinforced concrete structure.

"From some reports I heard here, they were apparently pouring fresh concrete when it caved in. Apparently the building did not resist the weight," Navarro Rincon said in a telephone interview.

Margarito Rodriguez, a spokesman with the Aguascalientes police department, said construction workers were on each of the floors of the unfinished structure when it collapsed at about 5 p.m. (7 p.m. EDT) on Thursday.

One of the dead was an unidentified boy about 10 years old, said Esperanza Cardenas, a Red Cross spokeswoman.

Rescue workers were using specially trained search dogs and tunneling equipment to locate any missing people, said Commander Marco Cerilla, chief of the Aguascalientes police department.

Aguascalientes, capital of Aguascalientes state, is about 320 miles northwest of Mexico City. Its population is about 500,000.

Legionnaires' disease kills 1

LONDON (AP) — A cleaning supervisor has become the first fatality among 34 known cases of Legionnaires' disease in an outbreak at British Broadcasting Corp. headquarters, the BBC says.

Forty-four other cases are suspected in the outbreak in and around the BBC, and six of the remaining 33 confirmed victims are seriously ill, the borough of Westminster said.

Jim Morgan, who supervised cleaning operations in headquarters buildings in central London, was admitted to a hospital two weeks ago, one of the first cases in the outbreak, and died Thursday. He was 63.

Legionnaires' disease, which produces symptoms similar to pneumonia, is often caused by bacteria from water-cooled air conditioning units.

The BBC said its air systems in the Broadcasting House and a nearby building have been disinfected.

The disease was first diagnosed in 1976 after 221 people contracted it in Philadelphia, and it takes its name from the outbreak at the Pennsylvania American Legion convention there.

Blaine transmission line clears last hurdle

By Barbara Neiwert
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — After six years of planning, negotiations and court battles, it appears a transmission line through southern Blaine County has finally received acceptance by all parties involved.

Idaho Power Co. verbally accepted an amendment to a conditional use permit Thursday for the proposed 138,000 volt transmission line. The amendment dealt with only a small portion of the "Toe-of-the-Hills" route which had been approved earlier by the P&Z.

In December, 1987, the P&Z granted approval on the "Toe-of-the-Hills" route which skirts the hillsides north of Picabo. Idaho Power Co. appealed the decision, preferring their proposed "Valley" route which would have gone along Highway 20 southeast of Picabo to the Gannett Road and then north on Gannett Road to Bellevue and on into Hailey. The route would have crossed the Silver Creek valley floor, drawing opposition from many environmentalists and land owners.

In February, the Blaine County Board of Commissioners upheld the

P&Z's decision, but remanded the issue back to the P&Z for further clarification on a portion of the route which crosses Pat Millington's Suzie Q Ranch southeast of Picabo.

Idaho Power said it would accept putting the line on either the west or east side of Millington's property, but preferred the west side to avoid the additional length and costs as well as rugged terrain to the north.

However, property owners bordering the west side — Larry Stone and Ted Dalzell — objected to routing the line through their property, with Dalzell adamantly refusing to grant an easement.

Dalzell's attorney Ed Lawson said Dalzell would use his "considerable resources" to "insure" his property would not be insured by these power lines.

Under the threat of litigation and the time constraints involved to institute condemnation proceedings and to fight possible appeals, the P&Z moved to reposition the transmission line to the east side of the Suzie Q Ranch, a distance of about one mile.

"We've got an acceptable route, we've got someone willing to give an easement, let's give them (Idaho Power) a positive direction," said P&Z commissioner John McDonald.

Commissioner John Gladics said the P&Z had verified with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission that the Wood River Valley faces a "brown out" situation within the next six to 18 months. "As a result of that, we're concerned with getting the job done," Gladics said.

Idaho Power attorney Pat Harrington said the company was prepared to expedite the project, estimated to take two years.

The amendment allows for the line to run from the new Silver Substation southeast of Picabo east to Highway 20. Following on the south side of the highway the line will then cross the road to cross an eastern portion of Millington's property and proceed north onto BLM land.

The route will not encroach on property owned by Jim West, but is subject to negotiation for easements on land owned by the Tick Tock Corporation (formerly owned by Dave Maenokian).

The motion passed with the unanimous consent of the six members present, out of the 11-member board. The commission has 15 days to file their findings of fact and the public or Idaho Power Co. has another 20 days to file an appeal.

KIMBERLY — "When Christie McGrew first met the tall young man who was to become her assistant, she wasn't sure it would work out.

"I was overwhelmed when the lanky young man of 6-feet, 3-inches or so, came into my classroom. Right away I determined that the difficulty would be keeping him from stumbling over his own feet," she said.

Now McGrew looks back at her first introduction to Jerald Hale and laughs because he has become a capable classroom helper.

Hale is a Kimberly High School junior who is one of 32 students to be a part of the Student To Student Program.

Student to Student — or STS — is a pilot program under the Idaho Individual Transition Plan. The goal of the Transition Plan is to provide a continuum of services for handicapped youth to ensure that these students make a smooth transition from school to the world of work. A handicapped student can be one with minor learning difficulties, which includes some of the students in this program.

"We've taken high-risk, dropout candidates who had learning problems themselves and put them in elementary classrooms," said Ella Hilverda, the program's creator. Under the STS program, high school students come to the elementary school for one period each day to work with the younger students under the supervision of a classroom teacher.

The advantages are two-way, both the older and younger students benefit," said Hilverda.

Hilverda has been Director of Special Services for the Kimberly School District for 40 years. Because of the enthusiasm of both teachers and students, the program is having community-wide effect, she said. Parents appreciate the individual help their children receive. The student assistants are finding a way to contribute in an adult manner. And the teachers appreciate the help they get.

At first, many of the elementary school teachers had

Heyburn hopes to end WPPSS battle

By DONNA SCHORZMAN
Times-News correspondent

HEYBURN — The city of Heyburn has agreed to settle for just over $1 million for its share of the WPPSS litigation, according to Steve Tufts, City Attorney.

Tufts told the city council in its regularly scheduled meeting this week that the agreement is still tentative, but everything should be finalized some time this summer.

"Knock on wood and keep your fingers crossed, but we should be there," Tufts said, indicating the end of the long legal battle.

Twenty-four small utilities in six western states have filed settlements in a security fraud case stemming from a bond default involving two Washington state nuclear power projects which were later abandoned. Burley and the Unity Power and Light and the city of Rupert were also named in the suit.

Heyburn does have insurance to cover the larger part of the settlement, so the cost to the city will be approximately $117,000. This figure is also tentative, according to Tufts, but he indicated the amount should not be more than $120,000 and is already in the contingency budget.

Tufts also presented the city council with a proposed ordinance to vacate a portion of 12th St and P St. in order to allow J.R. Simplot Co. to expand its transportation facilities.

Representatives from Simplot attended the meeting to answer questions from guests or council members.

Councilman John Billetz expressed concern over the street closures, reminding the council of the action taken last February when AIs Auto's request for a street closure had been rejected. "I said then that I didn't want to set a precedent for closing streets," Billetz said.

Mayor Harold Hurst also referred to an action taken last February to vacate certain streets in Heyburn to allow Simplot to construct a new potato cellar. But Hurst noted the situations were different because the streets vacated then for Simplot, and the streets Simplot is requesting closure of now, are not "through" streets.

The Simplot Co. owns property on both sides of the street and traffic would not be obstructed by the closures.

According to Hurst, the street closure requested by AIs Auto and rejected by the council last February, is a through street leading to property in the buffer zone that may be developed at a future date.

In other business, Hurst told the council he has received comments about Heyburn's lack of involvement in the "Idaho is too great to litter" campaign last Saturday. Hurst said the campaign was to be handled by civic organizations, but Heyburn has no civic organizations.

The council decided that next year they would incorporate their own city clean-up days into the statewide campaign and solicit help from the Scout troops and school.

City Superintendent Art McGill reported a large amount of vandalism on city property, citing broken basketball hoops and backstops.

Also, the brackets to hold the tennis nets were broken off and had to be replaced before the nets could be hung, and the toilets in the restrooms had been intentionally plugged, he said.

Speaker weaves provocative web of drugs, intrigue

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The representative of a unique law firm suing the U.S. government spun a web Thursday night lacing drugs, murder and intrigue through the country's foreign policy.

"The Contra policy and drug trafficking have become very closely linked," said Robert Richie, media representative for the Christie Institute. "The evidence is there, and people just need to put it together."

The Christie Institute, a liberal, church-funded law group, is attempting to do just that. The interfaith organization last year filed suit in a Miami federal district court alleging the existence of a criminal conspiracy involving gun-running, drug trafficking and murder.

The lawsuit's 29 defendants include many former U.S. officials, including retired Air Force major general Richard Secord.

Richie spoke in Twin Falls as part of a group touring the Northwest with the avowed purpose of "exposing the secret war in Central America." Bliss Bonpane, director of the Office of the Americas, also spoke during the two-hour presentation at the Guadalupe Center, attended by approximately 50 people.

"Covert actions are plausible deniability," Richie said. "We can do things and then say we didn't do them. That's not a humane way to conduct foreign policy."

Richie said the most sensational aspect of the sensational lawsuit, which has already generated considerable publicity is the allegations of U.S. involvement in drug trafficking.

"I think that's the one that shocks people most and is hardest to believe," Richie said. "The CIA wants to influence other countries and, in many countries, drug traffickers are the most powerful element."

The lawsuit is scheduled to go to trial June 27.

"There's never been a suit like this that's gone this far in the legal process," Richie said.

The lawsuit was filed under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), a statute initially passed as a legal weapon against organized crime.

The Christie Institute is hardly new to such headline-grabbing lawsuits. Founded in 1980, the nonprofit institute sprouted from the investigative and legal team that won the Karen Silkwood case.

The organization also garnered a civil-suit verdict against the Ku Klux Klan, the American Nazi Party and the Greensboro Police Department for the 1979 murders of five anti-Klan demonstrators.

Esqueno, an avuncular man whose impassioned speech was accompanied by non-stop hand movements, directed his talk to the spiritual side of Central America. Drawing parallels between the Spanish Inquisition and current U.S. policy in the region, Bonpane

Campaign '88

Robbins, Callen, Redman show diverse vote-getting styles

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

JEROME — Rep. Gary Robbins, R-Dietrich, campaigns across the Magic Valley federal district one door at a time, greeting voters and getting his message out.

But his organization also boasts a paid Boise consultant and a steering committee of more than a dozen people across the eight-county district. "I'm running to win," Robbins says of his Republican primary race against incumbent Rep. Jerry Callen, R-Jerome, and ODeen Redman, Albion. Callen, on the other hand, leaves his mark by drafting his own ads and speaking at party gatherings.

The two campaign styles vary as widely as the candidates themselves. And their conflict ignores Redman, who is quietly gathering endorsements from area lawmakers.

Callen told a Jerome Republican Women's group Thursday that his modest funds can't begin to rival Robbins' campaign. But Callen said he would let his conservative record speak for itself.

"With me, what you see is what you get," Callen said.

He questioned Robbins' business sense, since the Dietrich farmer is emerging from Chapter 11 reorganization after selling his dairy herd last year. And Callen said Robbins' campaign spending must be coming from the Idaho Education Association, the state teacher's union.

"While we're in here meeting, they're out there marching," Callen said.

Robbins volunteered during an interview that he'd received a $1,500 check from the IEA. He is still considering whether to keep the money, but he said he would not be owned by the teachers' union regardless of his decision.

"I support the educational system because I believe in it, not because of you guys," Robbins said he told TEA representatives.

Robbins advocates a unification of the state's Republican party under moderation, instead of dividing it with Callen's conservatism.

Robbins responds to the stinging attacks only under questioning, when he explains his finances and positions, and which he discussed recently during an interview with The Times-News.

"Jerry Callen doesn't have anything positive to say about Jerry Callen," Robbins said. "You can only take so many falsehoods and lies."

Robbins said he has a phone bank in Twin Falls County asking voters

Head-on collision kills 1; police may arrest driver

RUPERT — One Rupert man died and another is expected to be charged with manslaughter following a head-on collision between two pickup trucks west of here Friday, authorities said. Steve Montoya, 39, was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident, officials with the Minidoka County Sheriff's Office said. A charge of manslaughter is pending against Felix Delgado, driver of the truck in which Montoya was a passenger. Sheriff's officials said Delgado is suspected of driving under the influence of alcohol at the time of the collision. Delgado, 37, was administered a blood test following the accident. The crash occurred at 5:30 p.m. on State Highway 25, just west of Rupert. Sheriff's officials said Delgado, driving eastbound, turned left and collided head-on with a westbound pickup driven by 30-year-old Rynde Harmon of Burley. Both drivers were taken to Minidoka Memorial Hospital where they were treated and released.

Truck injures 11-year-old

TWIN FALLS — An 11-year-old pedestrian was injured Thursday evening when he was struck by a pickup truck on North Washington Street, police said. The young McMurrain was hit by a pickup driven by 16-year-old Calvin Amen of Twin Falls, police said. The accident occurred at roughly 4:45 p.m. in the 500 block of North Washington Street. Amen was heading south in a center lane when McMurrain darted into his path from between two other vehicles, according to police records. Three witnesses told police that Amen could not have avoided hitting the boy. No citations were issued.

Elmer McMurrain, of Twin Falls, was transported by ambulance to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center where he was treated and released, according to police records. The boy is the son of Donald and Wanda McMurrain, 525 North Washington St.

said the only real difference is use of the word "communist" instead of "heretic."
"As we take a better look at 1988, what do we see?" he asked. "We see the same processes of thought, but with just different names."
Bonpane visited Nicaragua in March with singer-actor Kris Kristofferson and S. Brian Willson, the pro-testion who lost his legs under a train while demonstrating against arms shipments to Central America. "Nicaragua is unquestionably the most popular government in Central America, and it's unquestionably the most stable government in Central America," Bonpane said. "Isn't it a shame that we've allowed Nicaragua to be demonized?" Bonpane said that reports of a recent Nicaraguan invasion into Honduras were simply untrue, though their motivation was clear. "Realize that the manipulation of fear is one of the most potent political tools," he said. "Fear can be played upon, and our lack of information can be played upon."

600 geologists to discuss Idaho water

The Times News
SUN VALLEY — Preservation of a pure water supply on the Snake River Plain will be discussed Monday to Wednesday at the annual meeting of the Rocky Mountain section of the Geological Society of America. The meeting expected to attract more than 600 geologists will be held at the Sun Valley Inn. The Snake River groundwater discussion will be held Tuesday from 8 a.m. to noon at the Camas Room of the Sun Valley Inn. The geologists also will discuss hazards to the facilities at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, INEL, emphasizing its Advanced Test Reactor against the possibility of earthquake damage. The imminent danger of a major earthquake on Utah's Wasatch Front will also be a topic.

Geologists from both coasts will discuss the western margin of the ancient North American Continent which is near McCall and Riggins. "This is one of the newer ideas about Idaho geology; that the western part of the state contains exotic terrain that once was islands in the Pacific Ocean," said Link. "The islands became part of North America 250 million years ago," he said. Elaine Aliberti of Harvard and Cathryn Allen Manduce of the California Institute of Technology will examine the Idaho islands concept.

Sperring resigns from board

BOISE (AP) — Richard Sperring, executive director of the state Board of Education for less than a year, has resigned effective June 3, board spokesman Bill Hargrove said Friday. In a letter to board President Charles "Tiny" Grant of Rexburg dated May 10, Sperring cited unspecified "personal reasons" for his decision to step down from the job he took over last July 1. "I appreciate the opportunity given to me to serve this board, for which I have great respect," Sperring wrote. He announced his resignation to the board staff on Friday; then released to the public the text of his letter to Grant.

Idaho geology revealed

TWIN FALLS — A new book that describes much of the roadside geology near Twin Falls, Ketchum, Boise, Idaho Falls, and Riggins is available from Idaho State University. The book is entitled "Guidebook to the Geology of Central and Southern Idaho." It offers a comprehensive review of the geology of central and southern Idaho, according to ISU. For many geographic areas, the articles in the book are the first publications to appear in 20 years. "Books of this kind are standard references in Montana, Utah and Wyoming, but haven't been published before in Idaho," said Dr. Paul Karl Link of ISU's Geology Department. The 310-page book edited by Link and Dr. William R. Hackett contains hundreds of photographs, maps and geologic cross-sections. The book is available through the Idaho Geologic Survey, Moscow, Idaho 83843 for $25.

reservations about the success of the students and the program. "I felt the teachers didn't think we could be trusted; now they do," said Archie Albury, a junior-student assistant. Layton Stephenson, a senior student assistant, said, "Teachers trust us a lot." The high school students are required to sign in when they arrive at the elementary school. Pat Leebetter, Hilverda's secretary and program coordinator, keeps track of attendance and said there is no problem in that department. "There is a very positive atmosphere over here," said Leebetter. "They (the student assistants) feel important and the kids (elementary school) love it." STS assistants learn skills to help them after they leave high school. Some of the students learn computer skills while operating the library check out system or in the school office. Most of the students operate the duplicating machines, and some keep track of grades on the computers. "Hale said he also has learned how to get along better with people." The elementary school children learn from the assistants, too. Duane Uses Arrow is a student assistant, but Betty Ann Morrill said, "My students know him as Duane, who happens to be an Indian, not as an Indian." Arrow explained the Indian concept of tribal rule, land ownership and respect for the earth to Morrill's fourth grade class. Morrill and her class benefited not only from his help as a tutor, but also from his different background. The popularity of the program has led many other high school students to apply and now several honor roll students are also part of the program. "At a time when heroes and good role models have almost vanished from our lives, I feel extremely fortunate to have Bryan Sant and Jenny Kelsey coming to my classroom each day as Student Assistants," said a fourth grade teacher. The program also boasts an open-door policy for group and individual counseling. The students are asked to evaluate the program and their own performance. The teachers evaluate the assistants and discuss their performance individually, which helps the students learn about themselves and prepare for the evaluation process in the workplace. "Our expectations were high," said Hilverda, "and they've lived up to it."

Astrology: A sin, or harmless pastime?

NEW YORK (AP) — Astrology and other strategies presumed to predict the future are sharply denounced in the Bible, but the ancient star-gazing system has evolved somewhat over the centuries.

In its modern popular form, which reportedly has been used by Nancy Reagan, it has little to do with religion, but scholars say it still has ramifications that can turn it at odds with biblical faith.

"A lot of people today regard it as kind of an innocuous pastime," says the Rev. Paga Kelly, an Old Testament scholar of Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky.

"They don't put much store in it. I put it in the same category as reading fortune cookies in a Chinese restaurant. But if people really take it seriously as a scheme for ordering their lives, the old objections become valid arguments.

To rely on it seriously, he added, "borders more on stupidity than sin."

In older times, astrology was closely connected with idolatry, used along with other means both to determine the course of action and ascertain the will of the gods.

"An abomination," Scripture calls it in Deuteronomy—18:9—decreasing death by stoning for any Israelite, man or woman, who "practices divination" or uses soothsaying, augury, sorcery, a charmer, medium, wizard or necromancer.

"Divination" linked to early astrology used various clues to determine the will of the gods, such as positions of celestial bodies, tossed arrows to see how they fell, examining configurations of oil on water or in a sheep's liver.

The prophet Isaiah, assailing the evils of Babylon, says scornfully: "Let your astrologers come forward, those stargazers who make predictions on by their hands, let them bring you from what is coming upon you. Surely they are like stubble. The fire will burn them up." Rabbi David Sperling of Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion said the strong condemnations of divination in astrology, were because of its ties to idolatry, contrary to Judaism.

"What the Bible condemns is considering the stars as kind of heavenly writing, telling you what God has in store for you."

He said astrology had evolved since ancient Babel times, modified in later ancient Greek and Egyptian civilizations to be seen not as revealing the gods, but charting planetary effects on earthly behavior and moods.

"That's not quite what the Bible was dealing with," Sperling said.

However, religious scholars said astrology, claiming the planets partly control human affairs, tends to run counter to biblical teaching of humanity's free will to choose good or evil.

"Fundamentalist theology very clearly condemns astrology," Kelley said, but he noted that contemporary churches generally have shown little, if any, concern with it.

Court to decide on Snake water rights

BOISE (AP) — It would waste millions of dollars and decades of court battles not to include tributary basins in adjudication of Snake River water rights, attorneys advised the Idaho Supreme Court on Friday.

"We do not want to spend $10 million and 30 years and not have jurisdiction over federal water rights," said Twin Falls attorney Terry Uhling.

He was one of seven attorneys arguing before the court on a legal battle over the extent of a massive effort to get court rulings on Snake River water rights.

After a hearing attended by lengthy questioning by four of the five justices of the Supreme Court, Chief Justice Allan Shepard announced the case would be taken under advisement. A decision will be issued later.

District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt ruled earlier that adjudication would include the basins of the Boise and Weiser rivers, which fed into the Snake.

Southwestern Idaho irrigation districts filed legal action to get out of the process, contending it would waste money to adjudicate water rights which already have adjudicated in the Boise and Weiser basins.

Districts filing the action are the Boise-Kuna, Nampa and Meridian, New York Wilder and Big Bend. Together provide irrigation water for thousands of acres of farm land in the southwest part of the state.

Attorneys for the estate, federal government and the Twin Falls Canal Co. and North Side Canal Co., which intervened, told the Supreme Court the entire Snake system must be included.

Uhling, representing the Magic Valley irrigation districts, said the Boise and Weiser systems must be included to sort out federal water rights claims.

"We want to get them (the federal government) into our court, and we want to find out what their water rights are," he said. "The entire Snake River system must be included."

Deputy Attorney General Clive Strong, representing the state Department of Water Resources, which is conducting adjudication, said the earlier adjudication of the Boise-Weiser systems didn't go far enough to be used in the overall Snake River water decisions.

Justice Robert C. Huntley questioned some of the attorneys on what would happen if the Boise-Weiser adjudications produced certain water rights.

New Life Center holds open house

TWIN FALLS — An open house will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday at the New Life Center, a residence providing shelter/retirement facilities for up to nine people.

The house has recently been purchased by Jim and Mary Fitch, Twin Falls, who are licensed to care for nine residents. It is located two miles south of Filer, reached by turning south on Stevens Avenue.

The 20-room home, built only a few years ago by a family with nine children, is on a four and a half acre site and has a large lawn, garden and fruit trees.

Mary Fitch says she understands the people who built the "manion" went bankrupt. The house has a formal dining and living room and an inter-com system in every room. All rooms are on the ground floor.

She has been in home health care for the past eight years and began keeping a few people in her home in Twin Falls this past year.

Styles

Continued from Page B1 about their concerns and who they expected to vote for in the primary. But he said it is strictly informative, to gauge voters' feelings on issues and his race.

Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls, said he is running the seven-phone bank that is styled as a questionnaire, rather than a persuasive pitch. Education is by far the most important topic for people contacted, he said.

Callen argues the phone bank is run by teachers. Black said teachers have volunteered to serve on it.

Robbins has also hired David Ripley and Associates, Boise, to assist his campaign.

The firm was fined by the secretary of state for not filing as a paid lobbyist when it called residents during the 1988 session to promote Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus' education proposal.

To Callen, the company is another facade for the IEA that helps only Democratic candidates.

But Ripley called that charge "ridiculous," saying the company contracts for business and is not owned by the IEA. He added that they promote "progressive" candidates, including a handful of Republicans including Robbins.

Ripley said the company is handling mechanical aspects of Robbins' campaign, such as helping send direct mail.

Because of the size and organization of Robbins' campaign, Callen also questioned Robbins' business sense after the reorganization and taxpayer buyout of his dairy herd.

"If you're a farmer who can afford all this — he must be a lot better off than his creditors think," Callen said. "To me that doesn't show much integrity."

But Robbins said he is spending his own money on the campaign. He characterized himself as a "survivor" of this farming problem.

While Callen and Robbins butt heads, Redman has been gathering support from former classmates Rep. Bruce Newcomb, R-Burley, and Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Deer.

Several other legislators, including Reps. Celia Gould, R-Buhl, and Russ Newcomb, R-Twin Falls, and Sen. Darrel McRoberts, R-Twin Falls, are also supporting him.

McRoberts said he was persuaded to back Redman because of his business background, including running the Albin Telephone Co. for nearly three decades. McRoberts, who is not seeking re-election because of his business commitments, argues that business should receive a stronger voice in the Legislature filled with farmers.

"You get a lot of people up there who don't work from 8 to 5 running a business. He really understands business," said McRoberts, who personally brought the candidate to the Buhl Rotary. "I'm sure he's going to vote the same way I would have up there."

Gould and Bruce Newcomb criticized Robbins for not knowing where he stood. Newcomb said that at least Callen was predictable when he strayed toward extremism, while Robbins was unpredictable.

Robbins has come up short on legislative endorsements. Black, a former Twin Falls County legislator, John Barker, Buhl, have come out for him. So have city mayors, county commissioners and others from around the Magic Valley.

On his steering committee are Gooding County Commissioner Rod Hohnhorst, Rupert Mayor Bill Whitton, Ketchum Mayor Larry Young and Buhl Mayor Claude McKecher.

"I back Gary because he's his own man," said McKecher, who added that Robbins consistently supported city and county legislative proposals.

Callen has been virtually shut out of Magic Valley endorsements. His support has originated from outside the district.

Conservatives such as Reps. Phil Childers, R-Boise, and Boyd Hill, R-Meridian, who both serve on the Revenue and Taxation Committee with Robbins, each supported Callen. And former lawmaker Vernon Ravenscroft favors Callen.

But they also share addresses outside the Magic Valley, so they won't be voting in this primary contest.

Callen said his problem lining up local endorsements was probably his own fault, having decided to run after others already were backing Redman.

Stock market bounces back

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market recouped some of its recent losses with a broad rally Friday, aided by declining interest rates and a steady dollar in foreign exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed 22.55 to 1,990.55, cutting its loss for the week to 16.91 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,076 up, 446 down and 462 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 147.94 million shares, against 143.88 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in alternative exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 166.48 million shares.

As the dollar strengthened against leading foreign currencies, prices of long-term government bonds rose as much as $5 for each $1,000 in face value in the credit market, putting their yields in the 9.1 percent to 9.2 percent range.

Analysts said investors around the world were encouraged by the successful completion late Thursday of the Treasury's three-day auction of $28 billion in bonds and notes.

Brokers also noted that there were no unpleasant surprises in the Labor Department's report Friday morning, that the producer price index of finished goods rose 0.4 percent last month.

In addition, Japan reported a continued narrowing of its international trade surplus. The Commerce Department is due to report next week on the latest monthly U.S. trade balance.

Generally, the news background was thought favorable, analysts said, but the market was still listless. Most of Friday's gains came early in the session, and from midway on prices drifted in a narrow range.

Gainers among the blue chips included Exxon, up 1 1/4 at 45; General Electric, up 1/4 at 39 1/4; International Business Machines, up 1/4 at 110 1/4; and Ford Motor, up 1/4 at 48.

Tobacco issues lost ground, with Philip Morris down 1 3/4 at $4 and RJR Nabisco down 3/4 at 45 1/4. On Monday, Surgen General C. Everett Koop is expected to issue a report describing smoking of tobacco products as a form of drug addiction.

Niagara Mohawk Power led the active list, up 1/4 at 14 1/4 on turnover of more than 25.7 million shares. Most of the activity in the stock was attributed to strategies pegged to the company's impending quarterly dividend.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $25.74 billion, or 1.77 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks added 1.52 to 145.30.

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose 3.52 to 298.23, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 2.93 at 266.78.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market gained 2.25 to 372.48. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 297.94, up 1.33.

Panel may want to expand power of futures commission public disagreements. "You would have a papering over of the essential problem" if the interagency group recommended giving authority over futures margin to the CFTC, said Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., chairman of the House finance subcommittee.

North South

South managed to lose today's slam but he thought he had a good reason for misguessing a key queen. What he overlooked was a way that eliminated any guess at all.

South took his ace of spades and drew the trumps. Dummy's top diamonds were cashed and he discarded one of his spade losers. Next he cashed dummy's club ace and led a club to his 10, losing to West's queen. West's spade queen then took the setting trick.

South maintained that he had played in accordance with the odds. "When West is known to have the king and queen of spades, it's odds on that East has the queen of clubs," was the weak excuse. "After all, there were only five live cards missing."

A much better plan was left begging. Since a 3-2 club break offers a better chance (68 percent) than a finesse based on theoretical distribution of honors, South should have developed clubs.

After cashing the ace and king of trumps, South could cash the top clubs. When the queen doesn't drop, he cashes the diamonds, discarding his last club. Next he ruffs a club high to establish the suit, and dummy's trump 10 provides the crucial entry. He gets 13 tricks instead of 11 and has no need for truces.

ANSWER: One no-trump. With no ruffing values and only four-card support for partner's minor, opt for the more descriptive one-no-trump response.

NBA playoffs:

Celtics go to Atlanta leading 2-0

BOSTON (AP) — For the second consecutive game, Boston coach K.C. Jones was a sore winner.

The Celtics did beat the Atlanta Hawks 108-97 Friday night to take a 2-0 lead in their NBA playoff series.

But he wasn't pleased that Boston wasted a 25-9 lead at the end of the first quarter, led by only six points at halftime and needed a strong final period to win.

"It was not the smooth effort I was looking for," Jones said. "We've been doing it (squandering leads) for most of the year and last year."

Boston also wasted a 38-23 first-period lead Wednesday night and led by six points at halftime before winning the opener 110-101.

The Celtics may not get away with it in the next two games of the best-of-seven series in Atlanta on Sunday afternoon and Monday night.

"We just have to, particularly going down there, get the lead and hold it and build on it," Jones said.

"We have a tendency sometimes to do that, play a great quarter and then go back to sleep," said Boston forward Kevin McHale, who led all scorers with 32 points.

The Hawks wouldn't mind just getting the lead and then never being able to hold it. They never led in the opener or after the first 5:02 of Friday night's game.

"Once again, the first quarter was not the best for us," Atlanta coach Mike Fratello said. "I don't want our guys to be down. They played well both games."

"I can think of better positions to be in than down 0-2, but that's not going to change."

AL: O's, of all people, end Stewart streak at 8

BALTIMORE (AP) — It took the lowly Baltimore Orioles to prove that Dave Stewart is not invincible.

The Orioles broke the 11 consecutive home runs by Eddie Murray and Fred Lynn in the fourth inning and handed the previously unbeaten Stewart his first loss after eight victories by defeating the Oakland Athletics 4-1 Friday night.

"If you keep taking your turn, eventually you're going to lose one," Stewart said. "I just try to go out and give my best effort, 100 percent. If I do, there's nothing to worry about. I feel I did that tonight. I just came out on the losing end."

Stewart, 8-1, pitched his third complete game of the season and yielded nine hits.

"This team is capable of scoring runs," Stewart said of the Orioles, who came into the game with a 4-29 record. "You saw that with the back-to-back home runs. If they get that, you get some decent pitching, which Jay Tibbs gave them, they're going to win some games."

Stewart, who had allowed six runs in 40 innings over his previous five starts, gave up more than three earned runs for the first time since April 14 when he yielded four against Seattle.

The Orioles have won all three games started by Tibbs, 2-0, since he was called up from the minors on May 2.

"That just means I'm doing my job," Tibbs said. "You've got to have some support behind you, and a little luck doesn't hurt."

Tibbs scattered nine hits over 7 1/2 innings, striking out three and walking two. Tom Niedenfuer pitched 1 1/2 innings for his first career win.

"He was outstanding," Manager Frank Robinson said of Tibbs. "And Niedenfuer did an excellent job. It was a fine all-around game — timely hitting, good pitching and good defense."

The Athletics, who have the best record in the American League, have lost three in a row since May 10.

California 5 New-York 4

NEW YORK (AP) — Brian Downing hit a two-out, two-run homer in the ninth inning Friday night that nullified the California Angels over the New York Yankees 5-4.

After reliever Cecilio Guante, 2-2, retired the first two batters in the ninth, he hit pinch hitter George Hendrick with a pitch. Downing followed by hooking a drive just inside the left-field foul pole at the 318-foot mark and just above the outstretched glove of Ricky Henderson.

Downing threw his bat down in disgust when he hit the ball but then watched in delight as it became the game-winner. It was his second home run of the season and first ever at Yankee Stadium.

Willie Fraser, 3-3, got the victory with two innings of scoreless relief and DeWayne Dedmon pitched a perfect ninth inning for his third save.

The Yankees had taken a 4-3 lead in the sixth inning off California starter Kirk McCaskill. Claudell Washington led off with a double and Mike Pagliarulo's RBI single made it 3-3. Pagliarulo continued to second on right fielder Chili Davis' error and Don Slaught, who homered in the second inning, doubled to put the Yankees ahead.

Texas 2 Kansas City 1

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Rookie left-hander Ray Hayward allowed six hits in 7 1/2 innings and Odd

McDowell keyed a two-run second inning with an RBI triple as the Texas Rangers stretched their winning streak to seven games by defeating the Kansas City Royals 2-1 Friday night.

Hayward, 2-0, retired 15 straight batters from the first through the sixth inning in his third start since coming up from the minors. Dale Morhacir relieved Hayward with one out and runners at first and second in the eighth and got Kevin Seitzer to hit into a double play.

George Brett's two-out solo homer in the first inning, his seventh, gave the Royals a 1-0 lead. It was Brett's 26th career homer against the Rangers.

The Rangers scored their runs in the third against Bret Saberhagen, 4-4. Steve Buechele led off with a single and scored the tying run on McDowell's triple. McDowell scored on a single by Scott Fletcher.

After Hayward retired 15 in a row, Seitzer broke the string with a two-out single but was thrown out at the plate on Brett's single. Seitzer was running on the pitch but was cut down on a relay from left fielder Pete Incaviglia to shortstop Scott Fletcher to catcher Mike Stanley.

The Royals threatened in the ninth when Brett led off with a double. Danny Tartabull followed with a sinking line drive to right on which Ruben Sierra made a diving catch.

Boston 14 Seattle 8

BOSTON (AP) — Mike Greenwell drove in four runs with a pair of homers — Sam Rice hit a three-run shot and Rick Cerone added a solo shot as the Boston Red Sox won a nine-homer 14-8 slugfest from the Seattle Mariners on Friday night.

Four-time American League batting champion Wade Boggs broke an 0-for-10 drought with four consecutive hits, his first four-hit game of the season, for the Red Sox, who had hit only 12 homers in their first 30 games.

Cerone and Dwight Evans had three hits each and Greenwell, Marty Barrett and Brady Anderson two in the 18-hit attack against three Seattle pitchers. Every Boston starter scored at least one run and each had at least one hit except Jody Reed, who walked twice.

The Red Sox scored two runs in the second inning on Greenwell's third homer of the season and Cerone's second off Mike Campbell, 2-5. Boston made it 6-0 in the third on an RBI single by Evans and a three-run homer by Greenwell.

The Red Sox built their lead to 12-2 with six runs in the fourth on an RBI double by Anderson, a sacrifice fly by Barrett, an RBI single by Boggs and Horn's first home run of the season.

After allowing two runs in the first inning, Swindell, 7-1, retired 16 batters in a row. However, he needed relief from Doug Jones with two out in the eighth. Jones earned his fifth save.

The Indians scored their first run off Teddy Higuera, 3-2, in the fifth on singles by Snyder, Andy Allanson and Julio Franco.

With two out in the eighth, Brook Jacoby singled and Ron Kittle walked, bringing on Plesac. Snyder hit the left-hander's 2-0 pitch for his seventh home run of the season, scoring pinch runners Jay Bell and Dave Clark and putting Cleveland on top 4-2.

In the Brewers' eighth, Dale Sveum tripled and scored on Jim Gantner's sacrifice fly. One out later, Robin Yount singled and Jones relieved Swindell.

Chicago 4 Toronto 1

CHICAGO (AP) — Unbeaten rookie Melido Perez pitched a three-hitter for the first complete game of his career and Harold Baines broke an 0-for-8 drought with a two-run homer and a single as the Chicago White Sox defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 4-1 Friday night.

Perez, 3-0, won a duel of rookie right-handers from Todd Stottlemyre, 1-4. He lost his shutout bid when Fred McGriff hit his eighth home run with one out in the ninth. Chicago pitchers had allowed 29 runs and 34 hits to the New York Yankees in their previous two games.

Stottlemyre lasted 6 1/2 innings, allowing seven hits and giving way to Mark Eichhorn after walking Ron Karkovice following Fred Manrique's RBI triple in the sixth that gave the White Sox a 4-0 lead.

Stottlemyre lasted 6 1/2 innings, allowing seven hits and giving way to Mark Eichhorn after walking Ron Karkovice following Fred Manrique's RBI triple in the sixth that gave the White Sox a 4-0 lead.

Detroit 7 Minnesota 0

DETROIT (AP) — Luis Salazar, Alan Trammell and Ray Knight homered in support of Doyle Alexander's seven-hit pitching as the Detroit Tigers beat Minnesota 7-0 Friday night, dropping the Twins' road record to 3-11.

Alexander, 3-2, struck out six, walked one and worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the seventh.

Salazar, who was 4-for-4, hit his fourth home run of the season in the first inning, a two-out solo shot over the 400-foot sign in center field off Alan Anderson, 1-2.

Gross lost his shutout with one out in the seventh when Mike Marshall hit a 3-2 pitch deep into the left-field bleachers for his fifth homer of the season. It came moments after Philadelphia right fielder Chris James ran in to make a diving catch on Pedro Guerrero's short fly ball to right-center.

After the ninth-inning double by Gibson, Teague got Guerrero on a groundout to shortstop and Marshall on a fly to center. After walking Danny Heep, Teague got Mike Scioscia on a fly to left field.

Samuel, the first player in major league history to reach double figures in doubles, triples, home runs and stolen bases, in each of his first four seasons, hit Tim Lear's first pitch of the fourth inning for his second homer of the year.

Lear, 2-3, struck out five, walked none and surrendered eight of Philadelphia's nine hits before he was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the sixth.

NL: Bucs' unearned run in ninth beats Reds, 6-5

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Barry Bonds opened his second straight game with a homer, then scored from first base on two Cincinnati errors and Jose Lind's sacrifice bunt in the ninth as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Reds 6-5 Friday night.

Bonds singled for his third hit of the game to greet Rob Murphy, 0-5, the Reds' third pitcher.

First baseman Dave Collins fielded Lind's bunt to the left of the pitchers mound and threw wildly into center field as Bonds raced toward third. The bunt was eluded center fielder Eric Davis, allowing Bonds to score standing up.

Jeff Robinson, 3-1, pitched two scoreless innings for the victory as the Pirates rallied from a 5-2 deficit and improve the major league's best home record to 14-3.

The Reds took a 4-1 lead in the third with the help of two of the Pirates' three errors.

Barry Larkin reached on shortstop Rafael Belliard's error and stole second. Chris Sabo walked and was retired on Kal Daniels' foreplay grounder before Eric Davis lined a two-run double. Larkin went to third when left fielder Barry Bonds misplayed the ball, and Paul O'Neill followed with an RBI single.

Bonds, who has a 10-game hitting streak, doubled and scored on Andy Van Slyke's third-inning single off starter Ron Robinson.

inings. The Cardinals scored three runs in the third on consecutive doubles by Pendleton and Bob Feller after singles by Ozzie Smith and Willie McGee. Homer narrowly missed a home run when his drive hit high on the left-field wall.

DeLeon drove in a run with a single when the Cardinals knocked Smith out in the sixth. With two out, Luis Allicea walked, went to second on a single by Tony Pena and scored on DeLeon's single. Pena scored on a single by Coleman.

The Cardinals got their first run in the second when Pendleton singled, stole second, and came home on a single by Allicea.

Pendleton got his third hit, a single to left, in the seventh to drive in McGee, who had doubled.

San Diego 7 Montreal 1

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Carmelo Martinez had three hits, including a run-scoring double and a two-run homer, leading San Diego to a 7-1 victory Friday night over the Montreal Expos, snapping the Padres' five-game losing streak.

Jimmy Jones pitched a five-hitter, and Shane Mack had a two-run single to cap a three-run Padres sixth.

The seven runs were the most for the Padres in one game this season.

Ryan, 3-2, broke a three-game losing streak with his first complete game since April 25, 1986, against Cincinnati. Ryan walked two and struck out 11, moving past teammate Mike Scott for the National League strikeout lead with 66. Ryan has struck out 10 or more in 176 times in his career.

Davis, meanwhile, raised his league-leading RBI total to 33, the last two coming on his ninth homer after the Cubs had closed within 4-2.

Jamie Moyer, 2-4, gave up three runs on seven hits in six innings for the Chicago Cubs. The loss was Moyer's fourth in his last five decisions.

Dawson drove in both of Chicago's runs with a homer, his 10th, and a double.

The Astros took a 2-1 lead in the fourth when Rafael Ramirez reached on a two-base fielding error by Dave Martinez in center and scored on a Jim Pavlovits single. Houston added a run in the sixth on a single by Bill Doran and an RBI double by Davis.

The Astros increased their lead to 4-1 in the seventh after Alex Trevino walked, moved to second on a balk by Frank DiPino, and scored on Young's double.

Philadelphia 2 Los Angeles 1

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kevin Gross allowed six hits in eight innings, and Juan Samuel snapped a scoreless tie with a solo homer in the fourth inning Friday night as the Philadelphia Phillies edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 2-1.

Gross also singled in a fifth-inning run that put Philadelphia ahead 2-0.

Gross, 3-1, struck out five, walked one and left after allowing a leadoff double to Kirk Gibson in the ninth. Kent Tekulve got the final three outs, stranding Gibson at second, for his second save, the total number for the entire Phillies relief staff.

Orioles demote Thurmond

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles sent left-hander Mark Thurmond to Rochester of the International League Friday. Thurmond, 29, was 0-6 with a 2.26 ERA in seven starts for the Orioles this year. The left-hander was acquired by Baltimore during the first week of spring training from the Detroit Tigers in exchange for third baseman Ray Knight. Thurmond becomes the third pitcher let go by the Orioles in 10 days. Veteran Scott McGregor was released on May 2 and reliever Bill Scherzer was sent to Rochester outright the same day and subsequently released.

Coaches reject one site

BOISE (AP) — Big Sky Conference basketball coaches have proposed that the 1989 tournament not be conducted at one location as it has in recent years. Instead, the coaches recommend that the Big Sky regular-season championship receive a bye to the semifinal round of the playoffs. It also would host the tournament's semifinal and final rounds. Earlier rounds would be played on the campuses of the next four most highly seeded teams by season regular season records, Stephenson said. The decision will be made by the league's presidents when they meet here later this month.

Creshaw tops Nelson Classic

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Former champion Ben Creshaw shot a 5-under par 65 Friday to take the second-round lead at the $750,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic. The round was marked by the on-course withdrawal of Arnold Palmer, who withdrew due to pain in his ribs. Creshaw, who won the 1983 Nelson after he moved to the Tournament Players Club, from Preston Trail, had a six-birdie, one-bogey round in the 90-degree heat for a 38-hole total of 9-under-par 131.

Indy pole to be decided today

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mario Andretti and Rick Mears showed Friday they are ready for an unprecedented battle of speed in Saturday's opening round of qualifications for the May 29 Indianapolis 500. The two former Indy winners turned in identical fast laps of 221.456 mph, both coming during the heat of the afternoon, setting the stage for a dramatic battle on Saturday for the pole position on the first of four days of time trials at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Andretti, hoping to position himself for the second Indy victory that has eluded him for 18 years, still is given a slight edge on the basis of the 214.565 lap he ran on Wednesday, the fastest lap in the history of the 2½-mile Speedway oval.

Chapman to turn pro

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky guard Rex Chapman, who only last month indicated that he would remain in school, said Friday he is passing up his final two years of eligibility to make himself available for the NBA. "It's strictly a business decision," Chapman said from his Owensboro home. "There is only one reason to enter the NBA draft early — because I feel I have the talent and the ability to utilize that talent, and the maturity that is needed." In early April, Chapman said that he would stay at UK at least one more season. But since that time, the basketball program has come under an NCAA probe for alleged recruiting irregularities. Chapman, however, said, "this decision is in no way based on, or influenced by, the current basketball investigation."

Lopez, Ritzman share lead

MIDDLETOWN, N.J. (AP) — Nancy Lopez, looking to regain the No. 1 spot on the LPGA Tour, fired a 4-under-par 68 Friday to share the first-round lead at the $250,000 Chrysler-Plymouth Classic. Lopez had five birdies and a bogey on the 6,232-yard Navesink Country Club course and was tied with Alice Ritzman, who came into the tournament looking for her first victory in 10 years on the LPGA Tour. Ritzman, whose best finish this year was a tie for sixth early in the season, had four birdies and no bogeys in a round that featured three long birdie putts.

Fisk out for 4-6 weeks

NEW YORK (AP) — Chicago catcher Carlton Fisk suffered a fractured right hand Tuesday night when he was struck by a foul tip in the eighth inning of the White Sox' 17-3 loss to the New York Yankees. The injury occurred with two out when Jack Clark fouled a pitch that nicked Fisk between the thumb and index finger. X-rays disclosed fracture of the first metacarpal bone. "It just didn't feel right," said Fisk, whose three-run homer in the fourth inning was the 312th of his career. A club spokesman said the 40-year-old Fisk would be out of action from 4-6 weeks.

In balloting by a national panel of sports writers and broadcasters, Jackson received 77 of 80 votes. Greg Anderson of San Antonio, Winston Garland of Golden State and Kenny Smith of Sacramento each received one vote. Jackson had 868 assists during the regular season, breaking the rookie record of 690 set by Oscar Robertson in 1961. He ranked third in the league with 10.6 assists a game, averaged 13.6 points and was sixth in the league with 2.5 steals a game.

Gwynn placed on DL

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Tony Gwynn was placed on the 21-day disabled list by San Diego because of a severely sprained right thumb. Gwynn suffered the injury on Saturday at Three Rivers Stadium in Pittsburgh. His thumb has been placed in a cast and will be examined Friday in San Diego by Dr. Merlin Hamer, the Padres said. Gwynn, whose .370 batting average and 218 hits led the National League in 1987, underwent surgery on his left hand during spring training. The San Diego right fielder was hitting .275 in 27 games this season. To take Gwynn's place on their roster, the Padres recalled outfielder Shane Mack from Las Vegas of the Pacific Coast League, where Mack was hitting .379. Mack had a 27-game hitting streak stopped Sunday.

Budd shelves running career, returns home to South Africa

By CHRISTINE BRENNEN
The Washington Post

Zola Budd, the barefoot, 21-year-old South African, who could never run away from political controversy, has decided to drop out of international competition, at least for now. The decision left Budd in tears Tuesday, but it also clears the way for a Summer

ZOLA BUDD — Does not support apartheid

Track

Olympics free of the specter of another boycott.

On the verge of a nervous breakdown, according to various reports, Budd pulled herself out of the international sports arena before a final decision could be made on her status for the 1988 Olympics in Seoul.

"I feel angry and bitter," Budd said at a news conference at the family print works in Bloemfontein. "I am angry at the fact that I am seen as a representative of South Africa and its problems."

She said she will go on a "long, long holiday" and will take a full year to decide what to do next. "I think I deserve a rest to recover and recuperate and decide about my future."

Meanwhile, the Olympic world is breathing easier. Budd's decision, which has surprised the track and field community, appears to eliminate a threatened boycott by African nations had Budd been allowed to participate in Seoul. It also eases the position of the British Olympic team, which might have been banned from the Olympics had Budd been put on the team.

Last month, the International Amateur Athletic Federation recommended Budd be suspended for at least a year for attending, but not running in, two track meets in South Africa last year. Budd denied any wrongdoing, but the IAAF said if the British Amateur Athletics Board did not punish Budd, it would consider barring the entire British Olympic team. The board was in the middle of its deliberations when Budd, who gained British citizenship before the 1984 Olympics because her grandfather was from England, made the decision to stop by quitting.

As with everything else Budd has done in her stormy, four-year international career, there was considerable and extreme discussion about this latest turn in the story.

"Her return to South Africa now literally vindicates our position that she is a South African," Sam Ramsamy, head of the South African nonracial Olympic Committee, told the Associated Press. "It shows she merely used her British passport as a flag of convenience."

But Cornelia Buerki, a South African-born Swiss runner, blasted officials who, she said, "managed to destroy a young woman."

"Zola doesn't support apartheid," Buerki said. "What is being done to her doesn't make sense. One might understand it if she were defending South African policy. The only thing I might hold against Zola is that she should spend more time living in England."

Buerki added she hoped track officials "have a lot of sleepless nights."

The intense scrutiny under which Budd has run recently has taken an incredible toll on the diminutive, shy runner.

"I have seen her crumble as a human being," said John Bryant, Budd's coach. "She is suffering from complete mental exhaustion. The doctors tell me she is incapable of rational thought. It is terrible to see someone in that state."

The Times of London quoted Dr. Ken Kingsbury, a sports medicine expert called in Saturday by Budd's family, as saying, "She is a pitiful sight. Bouts of crying and deep depression. All the clinical signs of anxiety."

Budd sidestepped a ban on South African participation in international athletic events when she was declared a British citizen in April 1984, four months before her celebrated meeting with Mary Decker of the United States in the women's 3,000 meters at the Los Angeles Olympics. Decker tripped over Budd's heels and writhed in pain, unable to get up and finish the race. Budd finished seventh to a chorus of boos, although she later was exonerated. Decker, Budd's childhood heroine, at first blamed Budd for the fall, but the two finally made up.

The past four years, Budd's experiences on the track have been sprinkled with political incidents. She was forced of course into a thorn bush by anti-apartheid demonstrators at the British Cross Country Championships in 1985 and required treatment for shock. She considered retiring when her parents separated, but was persuaded to continue running. By July 1985, she had a $125,000 payday for running a match race against Decker, and set her first world record — in the 5,000 meters — later that year. Injuries forced her to consider retirement, but she pressed on, even though she had to run one race in London under the pseudonym "T. Davies" in September 1987.

Ali predicts Spinks will defeat Tyson

Newsday

NEW YORK — Add Muhammad Ali to the list of boxing celebrities — who — give — Michael Spinks more than a fighting chance against Mike Tyson next month.

Ali, in New York Thursday, to donate a boxing robe, given to him by Elvis Presley, to the Hard Rock Cafe, said: Spinks has the style to give Tyson fits when the two meet on June 27 in Atlantic City, N.J.

"I think Spinks will win it," Ali said. "He hits hard enough, he'll stick and move, he's fast on his feet, and he'll keep his distance. Fighters like that give Tyson trouble."

It's not surprising that Ali would favor the boxer in a boxer-sluggo — confrontation. He won a few of them himself, notably taking two out of three from Joe Frazier, a fighter Ali sees as similar to Tyson. "But Tyson's more powerful than Frazier," he said. "He's a fighting champion, the kind people like. He knocks people out."

Ali scored a knockout with the crowd at the Hard Rock, which swarmed the former three-time champion for photos and autographs. Ali's robe, a gauzy affair covered with "baubles, bangles and fabulous doo-dads," in the words of Don King, was worn by the champ in his 1972 rematch with Jerry Quarry. It has hung in Ali's Berrien Springs, Mich., home ever since, and now will occupy a wall of the bar, between guitars and gold records.
